

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

008.1
JM114
a

1

ΗΡΟΔΟΤΟΥ ΙΣΤΟΡΙΩΝ

Η, Θ, Ι

ΠΟΛΥΜΝΙΑ ΟΥΡΑΝΙΑ ΚΑΛΛΙΟΠΗ

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED
LONDON · BOMBAY · CALCUTTA
MELBOURNE

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY
NEW YORK · BOSTON · CHICAGO
ATLANTA · SAN FRANCISCO

THE MACMILLAN CO. OF CANADA, LTD.
TORONTO

HERODOTUS

THE SEVENTH, EIGHTH, & NINTH BOOKS

WITH

INTRODUCTION, TEXT, APPARATUS, COMMENTARY, APPENDICES, INDICES, MAPS

BY

REGINALD WALTER MACAN, D.LITT.

UNIVERSITY READER IN ANCIENT HISTORY MASTER (SOMETIME FELLOW AND TUTOR, FORMERLY SCHOLAR) OF UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, OXFORD

VOL. I.—PART II

BOOKS VIII. AND IX. (TEXT AND COMMENTARIES)

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED
ST. MARTIN'S STREET, LONDON

1908

107190

YRÁSELI
ROMUL. ORFOMATE CIA. S.
YTEREIVRU

TRIBUS VIRIS ILLUSTRIBUS

HENRICO STEIN
HENRICO VAN HERWERDEN
ALUREDO HOLDER

HOC VOLUMEN
D.D.D.
EDITORIBUS EDITOR

CONTENTS

	PAGE
BOOK VIII. OURANIA . . . . .	357
BOOK IX. KALLIOPE . . . . .	595

ΗΡΟΔΟΤΟΥ

ΟΥΡΑΝΙΑ

Οἱ δὲ Ἑλλήνων ἐς τὸν ναυτικὸν στρατὸν ταχθέντες ἦσαν 1
οἶδε, Ἀθηναῖοι μὲν νέας παρεχόμενοι ἑκατὸν καὶ εἴκοσι καὶ

ΟΥΡΑΝΙΑ H AB: οὐρανία | ἡροδότου ἱστοριῶν ὀγδόη d 1. 1
οἱ δὲ: ταῦτα μὲν δὴ οὕτω λέγεται γενέσθαι· οἱ δὲ codd. z (nisi quod R om.
δὴ, V pro ταῦτα exhib. αὐτα) || ἑλλήνων ἐς α: ἑλληνες BC || τὸ B 2
ἐπτά καὶ εἴκοσι καὶ ἑκατὸν B, Holder

1. 1. οἱ δὲ Ἑλλήνων ἐς τ. ν. στ. ταχθέντες refers (a) to the colon immediately preceding, ταῦτα μὲν δὴ οὕτω λέγεται γενέσθαι, and now forming the close of the seventh Book (cp. App. Crit.). But (b) if 7. 239 is a late insertion (cp. notes ad l.), the grammatical correspondence may have been originally, and more happily, with the closing words of 7. 238 αὐτὰ μὲν δὴ ταῦτα ἐποίησαν τοῖσι ἐπετέτακτο ποιεῖν. Yet perhaps (c) the original correspondence lay with the first sentence of 7. 234 οἱ μὲν δὴ περὶ Θερμοπύλας Ἕλληνας οὕτω ἠγωνίσαντο, both Demaratos episodes, as well as 7. 238, which now intervene, being of the second or third redaction. The true contrast and correspondence lies between 'the Hellenes comprised in the naval forces' and 'the Hellenes brigaded at Thermopylai,' and the navy-list which here follows (d) really carries back to the army-list given above 7. 202. The transition between Bks. 7 and 8 is, indeed, abrupt, but the better inference from the abruptness of the transition is not (with Stein<sup>5</sup>) to a lacuna (Ausfall im Texte) but to an insertion, or to insertions, in the text by author and by interpolator to boot, destructive of the original continuity. The abruptness has been at once emphasized and obliterated by the division into books, made (by some anonymous Alexandrian), naturally enough, just at this point. The result has been still further to divorce the synchronous and inter-related operations on land and sea, the stories of Thermopylai and of Artemision as narrated by Hdt., on which point see further, Introduction, § 11, Appendix V. Ἑλλήνων is, of course, a partitive genitive. ἐς, not 'against' but 'into'; cp. 7. 21 οἱ δὲ ἐς πρὸς ἐτεράχματο.

ἦσαν οἶδε. The sources of the Greek navy-lists for Artemision (here) and Salamis (cc. 43-48 infra) cannot be exactly determined; but if Hdt.'s figures are ever to be trusted, it is in these two cases, the rather in view of his omission of all details for the fleet in the following year (c. 131 infra). See further, Introduction, § 10, and the notes on the details below.

2. Ἀθηναῖοι. The order here is determined by the size of the respective contingents, or perhaps by the (Athenian) provenience of the list (in contrast with the list of Salamis, cc. 43-48 infra). To the 127 ships here specified are to be added the 53 supplied in c. 14 infra, besides the 20 manned from Chalkis, just below, making a total of 200 bottoms from Athens, on which figure cp. 7. 144. With the use of the middle (παρεχόμενοι) for the war-ships (νέας), manned by the Athenians themselves, cp. the active (παρεχόντων) just below for the ships furnished to the men of Chalkis.

ἐπτά· ὑπὸ δὲ ἀρετῆς τε καὶ προθυμίας Πλαταιέες, ἄπειροι
τῆς ναυτικῆς ἔοντες, συνεπλήρουν τοῖσι Ἀθηναίοισι τὰς νέας.
5 Κορίνθιοι δὲ τεσσαράκοντα νέας παρείχοντο, Μεγαρές δὲ εἴκοσι.
καὶ Χαλκιδέες ἐπλήρουν εἴκοσι, Ἀθηναίων σφι παρεχόντων τὰς νέας, Αἰγινῆται δὲ ὀκτωκαίδεκα, Σικυνῶνιοι δὲ δυοκαίδεκα, Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ δέκα, Ἐπιδαύριοι δὲ ὀκτώ, Ἐρετριέες δὲ ἐπτά, Τροιζήνιοι δὲ πέντε, Στυρέες δὲ δύο, καὶ Κήιοι δύο τε

5 τεσσαράκοντα δ 6 καλχιδές B || παρεχόντων σφι BPz
7 δωδέκα B 9 στυριέες B: τυρέες δ || Κήιοι Stein: κείοι α: κίοι B

3. ὑπὸ δὲ ἀρετῆς τε καὶ προθυμίας: causal, and of psychological causality; cp. 1. 85 ὑπὸ δέους τε καὶ κακοῦ ἔρρηξε φωνήν (where the κακόν is external). The notice of Plataean valour and zeal is remarkable, and more generous than the recognition of their service at Marathon, 6. 108, 9. 27.

Πλαταιέες . . . συνεπλήρουν. Blakesley argues that the verb implies more than merely service as ἐπιβάται. His contention is borne out by the remark ἄπειροι τῆς ναυτικῆς (sc. τέχνης) ἔοντες, which would be almost pointless if referred to ἐπιβάται alone. Cp. also ἐπλήρουν just below.

5. Κορίνθιοι supply but 40 ships, but are also represented by 400 hoplites at Thermopylai, 7. 202. Cp. also c. 43 infra.

Μεγαρές supplying 20 ships still rank apparently as the fourth naval power in the confederacy.

6. Χαλκιδέες. Are these Athenian 'Kleruchs' (5. 77, 6. 100)? or natives of Chalkis? or both combined? Blakesley acutely remarks that 4000 men represent just the complement for 20 triremes; and it is possible that there is a relation between the 20 here and the 4000 there (ll.c.). But if so, the 4000 is probably an inference from the 20, and this passage is the older of the two (whether Hdt. himself or his authorities made the combination and drew the inference). This observation further strengthens the suspicion with which the figure 4000 is to be viewed (cp. my note to 5. 77), seeing that here the crews of these triremes may well have been natives of Chalkis and the Athenian Kleruchs serving merely, or mainly, as ἐπιβάται (=600. If the real number of Kleruchs was only 600, the story in 6. 100 would be more intelligible).

7. Αἰγινῆται. That Aigina sends only 18 ships to Artemision is curious: does the item include the ship of Asonides captured off Skiathos (7. 181)? The Aiginetan figure for Salamis is also perplexing; cp. c. 46 infra.

Σικυνῶνιοι are below their full strength with 12 ships; cp. c. 43.

8. Λακεδαιμόνιοι means, of course, the Spartan state. Doubtless the crews were composed of Helots, or at best Perioikoi; and perhaps there were few, if any, Spartiatai on board, except the Epibatai and officers. The Lakedaimonian contingent looks miserably small for the hegemonic power; but the service at Thermopylai is concomitant. Even at Salamis the Lakedaimonians muster only 16 ships, if c. 43 is to be trusted.

Ἐπιδαύριοι, unrepresented at Thermopylai, raise their contingent from 8 to 10 for Salamis (c. 43), and send only 800 Hoplites to Plataiai, 9. 28. Their best days were past (cp. 7. 99), or in the future, when the λεπὸν of Asklepios was to rise into oecumenical significance (cp. R. Caton, The Temples and Ritual of Asklepios, Cambridge, 1900).

Ἐρετριέες. After their experiences in 490 B.C. (cp. 6. 101, 119) it is surprising to find men of Eretria in a position to supply even 7 ships in 480 B.C. Either the destruction had not been so complete as Hdt. asserts, or the place had been reoccupied and reinforced.

9. Τροιζήνιοι. Troizen was a small place, supplying but 5 ships (cp. c. 43); it ranked as the metropolis of Halikarnassos (7. 99), and appears to have been at this time on especially good terms with Athens; cp. c. 41 infra.

Στυρές. The men of Styra in Euboea supply 2 triremes. In the Athenian tribute-lists Styra is assessed at 100 drachmai.

νεας καὶ πεντηκοντέρους δύο· Λοκροὶ δὲ σφι οἱ Ὀπούντιοι 10
ἐπεβόηθον πεντηκοντέρους ἔχοντες ἐπτά.

Ἦσαν μὲν ὧν οὗτοι οἱ στρατευόμενοι ἐπ' Ἀρτεμίσιον, 2 εἴρηται δὲ μοι καὶ ὥς τὸ πλῆθος ἕκαστοι τῶν νεῶν παρεί-χοντο. ἀριθμὸς δὲ τῶν συλλεχθεισῶν νεῶν ἐπ' Ἀρτεμίσιον ἦν, πᾶρεξ τῶν πεντηκοντέρων, διηκόσiai καὶ ἑβδομήκοντα καὶ 271
μία. τὸν δὲ στρατηγὸν τὸν τὸ μέγιστον κράτος ἔχοντα 5

10 νῆας B 11 ἐπεβόηθον B, van H. 2. 1 οὖν B: om. α
2 ὥς τὸ: ὅσον τὸ Reiske: ὅσον τι Schaefer: quot (ὅσας) Valla || verba εἴρηται . . . παρείχοντο suspecta habet van H. 2, 3 νηῶν (bis) B
4 μία καὶ ἑβδομήκοντα καὶ διηκόσiai B, Holder 5 τὸ om. B ||
κάρτος αἰε

Κῆροι. The island of Keos appears in the tribute-lists as assessed for 400 drachmai, though in 480 B.C. it furnishes but 2 pentekonters beyond the Styrean contingent. The assessment probably represents the resources of Keos better than the contingent: the island was the birth-place of Simonides, the poet-laureate of the war. Cp. 7. 228.

10. Λοκροὶ . . . οἱ Ὀπούντιοι: cp. 7. 203. As they were serving πανστρατιῇ at Thermopylai it is a wonder to find them represented at Artemision even by 7 pentekonters.

σφι might naturally be referred to Κῆροι just before, as σφι up above certainly refer to Χαλκιδῆες immediately preceding; but the general sense of the passage suggests a reference here to the fleet as a whole, all the contingents enumerated above, or more vaguely still τοῖς Ἕλλησι. The verb (ἐπεβόηθον) is varied from the ἐπλήρουν and παρείχοντο preceding, and requires the personal object expressed or understood.

2. εἴρηται δὲ μοι καὶ ὥς. As the reference is to the immediate context, and as ὥς appears to be used in a doubtful sense, this whole sentence is naturally suspect. The verb παρείχοντο, too, is unfortunate, repeated, as it is, just below. Yet the μοι makes for authenticity, and there is a sufficient reason for the introduction of the sentence, the purpose of which is evidently to justify the order in which the ethnic names have been given, as corresponding to the relative strength of the respective contingents. A. G. Laird in Class. Rev. xviii. 1904, 97 ff. suggests, on the analogy of an Ionic inscription circa 400 B.C., that Hdt. might have intended εἴρηται (= εἰρέεται) as a plural; a corruptela might seem the simpler alternative. The difficulty in the sentence appears to arise less from the use of ὥς to signify the order of the list than from the presence of καὶ and τό (πλῆθος). The sentence would certainly be easier if it ran εἰρέεται δὲ μοι ὥς καὶ (τὸ) πλῆθος ἕκαστοι (τῶν) νεῶν παρείχοντο. The article, however, may be referred in the first place to the particular contingents, taken severally, and in the second place to the total fleet; but the words καὶ ὥς, especially in that order, appear suspicious.

3. ἀριθμός. The total 271 agrees with the items. Diodoros 11. 12 gives 280 as the total, including, apparently, the 9 pentekonters.

4. πᾶρεξ τῶν πεντηκοντέρων. It is apparently to be understood that the only pentekonters were the two from Keos and the seven from Opuntian Lokris enumerated above. There were some still smaller and lighter boats in commission (cp. c. 21 infra), though not included in the navy-list.

5. τὸν δὲ στρατηγόν. Each of the distinct contingents enumerated above was presumably under an enchorial strategos: the process, by which the Spartan navarch (ὁ Δάκων) came to be commander-in-chief of the whole fleet, is not quite clearly exhibited by Hdt. The aorist (ἔφασαν) may here have temporally the force of a pluperfect, and the next chapter, not to say the very necessities of the case, will show that the question of the hegemony by sea and by land had been raised and determined before any operations at all were undertaken, probably at the Isthmus

παρείχοντο Σπαρτιῆται Εὐρυβιάδην Εὐρυκλείδew· οἱ γὰρ σύμμαχοι οὐκ ἔφασαν, ἦν μὴ ὁ Λάκων ἡγεμονεύῃ, Ἀθηναίοισι ἔνδεσθαι ἡγεομένοισι, ἀλλὰ λύσειν τὸ μέλλον ἔσσεσθαι στρα-
3 τευμα. ἐγένετο γὰρ κατ' ἀρχὰς λόγος, πρὶν ἢ καὶ ἐς Σικελίην πέμπειν ἐπὶ συμμαχίην, ὡς τὸ ναυτικὸν Ἀθηναίοισι χρεὼν εἶη ἐπιτράπειν. ἀντιβάντων δὲ τῶν συμμάχων εἶκον οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι μέγα πεποιημένοι περιεῖναι τὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ γνόντες, εἰ

6 εὐρυβιάδεα SV: εὐρυάδεα R || τὸν Εὐρυκλείδew z, edd. plures || γὰρ: δὲ R 7 Ἀθηναίοισι: ἄλλοισι Naber 3. 1 καταρχὰς Pz
 2 ἐπὶ τὴν B: τὴν ἐπὶ συμμαχίῃ? Kallenberg 3 ἐπιτρέπειν codd.
 4 μέγα τε ποιεύμενοι coni. Stein, adm. van H.

in the previous year. Cp. further Appendix III. § 5, and c. 3 infra.

6. Σπαρτιῆται: the navarch was probably elected in the Spartan Apella to hold office for a year, beginning about the autumnal equinox (cp. Thuc. 5. 36. 1). Though 'Eurybiades son of Eurykleides' is the first Spartan navarch whose name has reached us, we are not justified in assuming that the office itself came into existence for and with him. It may have been of long standing, though of little importance, before the Persian war (cp. 3. 39). Eurybiades was not (perhaps) elected in view of the Persian war, but in the ordinary course of business; he is credited, by tradition, with little aptitude for the post, and in the two ensuing naval campaigns the command is entrusted to men of royal standing, Leotychidas, Pausanias.

7. ἦν μὴ ὁ Λάκων ἡγεμονεύῃ: this sentence, or else the words 'Ἀθηναίοισι ἡγεομένοισι', may be regarded as superfluous; the two conjoined are, indeed, logically inconsistent. What the allies declared was that (a) they would abandon the whole undertaking if the Athenians were to have the leading, (b) that they would join in the undertaking if the Spartans had the lead. Two further points may be remarked. (i.) The question of leading is not necessarily confined to the naval operations; τὸ μέλλον ἔσσεσθαι στρατευμα has a more extended reference, actual or potential. (ii.) That being so ὁ Λάκων need not be referred specifically to Eurybiades, or even to the Spartan navarch (whoever he was, or was to be), but should be taken to refer generally to 'the Lakonian,' the man of Lakedaimon.

8. λύσειν τὸ μέλλον ἔσσεσθαι στρατευμα: the two-fold, if not triple, future

must place the declaration of the Symmachoi well before the despatch of the forces to Thermopylai-Artemision. στρατευμα is used by Hdt. both for 'expedition' (e.g. 3. 49=στρατεία) and 'forces' (=στρατός 7. 48). Whichever sense be here preferred, the application need not, and indeed cannot, be restricted to the navy, for the defence of Thermopylai and Artemision is a single undertaking, a single plan.

3. 1. κατ' ἀρχὰς: the dating is not quite precise, even with the additional indication πρὶν ἢ καὶ ἐς Σικελίην πέμπειν. The question of the Hegemonia was doubtless one of the first to be decided, but it can hardly have been intercalated between the mission to Argos, 7. 148 (where, by the way, the Argives demand ἡγεσθαι κατὰ τὸ ἥμισυ), and the mission to Sicily, 7. 153 ff. The dispute with the Athenian must have preceded both the other disputes, the stories of which imply that the hegemony is vested in Sparta. The λόγος here recorded, whether speech, demand, or argument, must have taken place (ἐγένετο) at the first meeting of the allies at the Isthmus, in the autumn or early winter of 481 B.C. The Athenians themselves (Themistokles?), or some state friendly to Athens (Plataia?), must have been its authors. The opposition of the allies here recorded must be identical with the opposition of the allies just above recorded in c. 2.

4. μέγα πεποιημένοι: the whole passage, down to the second εἶκον infra, introduces some obscurity into the argument or narrative, but is in itself clear enough, the subject of Ἀθηναῖοι being carried over or resumed apparently, at least as far as the second εἶκον.

The passive form πεποιημένοι is remarkable as the perfect or pluperfect στασιάζουσιν περὶ τῆς ἡγεμονίας, ὡς ἀπολέεται ἡ Ἑλλάς, ὀρθὰ 5 νοεῦντες· στάσις γὰρ ἔμφυλος πολέμου ὁμοφρονέοντος τοσούτω κάκιον ἐστὶ ὅσῳ πόλεμος εἰρήνης. ἐπιστάμενοι ὦν αὐτὸ τοῦτο οὐκ ἀντέτεινον ἀλλ' εἶκον, μέχρι ὅσου κάρτα ἐδέοντο αὐτῶν, ὡς διέδεξαν· ὡς γὰρ δὴ ὡσάμενοι τὸν Πέρσην περὶ τῆς ἐκεῖνου

5 στασιάζουσιν B 6 νοεῦντες B || στάσις . . εἰρήνης damn. Blakesley
 || τοσούτω B 8 μέχρις οὐδ B P : μέχρι οὐδ = 9 δὴ ὡσάμενοι :
 διωσάμενοι Bekker, van H. || πέρσῃ Bz

of ποιέσθαι. The tense does not appear to have a merely temporal force. Stein's emendation would spoil this aspect of the word.

5. ὀρθὰ νοεῦντες. Hdt. apparently applauds the patriotic modesty of the Athenians, and adds a stock gnome of but doubtful application to the case in question, unless, indeed, the Athenians had been contemplating actually coming to blows over the question. The gnome was hardly meant in the first instance to be applied to the case of an alliance or confederacy. 'Civil war (στάσις ἔμφυλος) is to war conducted by a state at unity with itself (πόλεμος ὁμοφρονέων) as war is to peace (εἰρήνη).' The gnome does not cover the still darker evil of στάσις and πόλεμος combined (cp. Thuc. 3. 82). The neuter κάκιον is observable.

8. μέχρι ὅσου: sc. χρόνου: but the phrase might still mean either dum (while, so long as) or donec (until the point when). The exact rendering must depend upon the sense in which the words immediately succeeding are taken.

κάρτα ἐδέοντο αὐτῶν. What is the subject of ἐδέοντο, and to whom does the word αὐτῶν refer? The exact meaning of ἐδέοντο may also be in question. If there is no change of subject, if the subject of all the final verbs (εἶκον, ἐδέοντο, διέδεξαν, ἐποιεῖντο, ἀπέλιντο) is 'the Athenians,' then the passage contains a distinctly unfavourable judgement upon the conduct of Athens, thereby conflicting not merely with the general Atticism of Hdt., but with the immediate context, wherein their patriotism, their pan-Hellenism, has been commended. The Athenians, however, made these concessions only so long as they were badly in need of them (the allies? or the Lakedaimonians? in preference the latter); for as soon as they had repulsed the Persian, and were carrying the war into the enemy's country, they deprived the Lakedaimonians of the lead on pretext of the violence of Pausanias.' But there is something to be said for a change of subject. The repulse of the Persian, and the war in Ionia or Thrace, were not simply the doing of the Athenians: ὡσάμενοι, ἐποιεῖντο, ἀπέλιντο should hardly be referred exclusively to the Athenians, but rather to 'the allies,' or 'the Hellenes'; in which case αὐτῶν will refer to 'the Athenians,' and the meaning will be: 'the Athenians gave way and yielded, until such time as they (the allies, the Greeks) had sore need of them (or possibly 'petitioned them'), as they showed: for the Greeks, after repulsing the Persian, etc.' The words ὡς διέδεξαν are in any case against the alternative rendering of ἐδέοντο, for it would be intolerably harsh to take 'the Greeks' as the subject of ἐδέοντο and ἐποιεῖντο, but resume 'the Athenians' as the subject of the intercalary διέδεξαν. If, however, the subject of ἐδέοντο is οἱ σύμμαχοι, there is some confusion of thought in the passage, as the allies, or Hellenes, who deprived the Lakedaimonians of the naval hegemony at Byzantium in 477 B.C., were quite different persons and states from the allies who refused naval hegemony to the Athenians in 481 B.C. The story of the transfer is told, from an Attic point of view, Thucyd. 1. 95, Diodor. 11. 44, Plutarch, Aristeid. 23, etc. (Cp. G. F. Hill, Sources, i. 18 ff.)

This passage has a bearing on the question of the composition, plan, and completion of the work of Herodotus. He could hardly have expressed himself as here, or concluded this prospective episode with the summary ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ὕστερον ἐγένετο, had he been intending to carry his narrative below the point where it now terminates, viz. the siege of Sestos in 479-8 B.C. In other words, this passage supports the view that the work of Hdt., as we have it, is finished and complete, according to

- 10 ἤδη τὸν ἀγῶνα ἐποιεῦντο, πρόφασιν τὴν Πανσανίῳ ὕβριν
 προῖσχύμενοι ἀπέιλοντο τὴν ἡγεμονίην τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους.
 ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ὕστερον ἐγένετο,
 4 Τότε δὲ οὗτοι οἱ καὶ ἐπ' Ἀρτεμίσιον Ἑλλήνων ἀπικόμενοι
 ὥς εἶδον νέας τε πολλὰς καταχθείσας ἐς τὰς Ἀφείτας καὶ

10 ἐποιεῖντο B

12 ἐγένοντο C

4. 2 νῆας B || ἐς τοὺς B

the author's own idea. Cp. Introduction, § 6.

10. τὴν Πανσανίῳ ὕβριν is a remarkable expression, which might point to this passage being an insertion, cp. 9. 10 infra; but the phrase may be a current one, descriptive of the proceedings recorded more fully by Thuc. 1. 94, 95, and touched by Hdt. himself 5. 32.

4. 1. τότε: in contradistinction to the ὕστερον just above, or to the κατ' ἀρχάς, c. 3 ad init.; but the precise date is still in question, and is to be inferred, or extracted, from the words immediately following. The term οὗτοι . . ἀπικόμενοι denotes undoubtedly the same object as οἱ στρατευόμενοι ἐπ' Ἀρτεμίσιον of c. 2, or again οἱ ἐς τὸν ναυτικὸν στρατὸν ταχθέντες of c. 1; but the τάξις, the στρατεία, the ἀπικεῖν ἐπ' Ἀρτεμίσιον, are successive epochs in the operations of the fleet, the last of which is here more precisely defined by the sight of the enemy's fleet already in position at Aphetai, albeit whether the occupation of Artemision by the Greeks here involved precedes or succeeds the occupation of Aphetai by the Persians is not quite clearly indicated in this context. A problem at once arises as to the relation of this narrative to the narrative in Bk. 7. There the occupation, or first occupation, of Artemision by the Greeks precedes by some time the appearance of the Persian ships at Aphetai (cp. 7. 177, 183, 195). The Greek fleet, in fact, apparently occupies Artemision before the Persian fleet has quitted Therme, and actually retreats from Artemision to Chalkis upon news of the Persian advance signalled from Skiathos (7. 183). But the three days' storm detains the Persian fleet en voyage, and not until the fourth and last day of the storm (7. 191), that is, the fifth day after leaving Therme, at earliest, could the Persian fleet have steered into Aphetai (7. 193). The Greeks have already resumed their station at Artemision on the third (or fourth) day of the storm (7. 192), and consequently it is the Persians on their way to Aphetai who lose fifteen ships to the Greeks already stationed, for the second time, at Artemision (7. 194). To harmonize this passage with that it must be inferred that the ἀπικεῖν ἐπ' Ἀρτεμίσιον here in question is the second occupation of Artemision by the Greek fleet which in Bk. 7 precedes, not merely the arrival of the Persian ships at Aphetai, but apparently even their departure from the Magnesian strand. This harmony, indeed, Hdt. himself has apparently attempted. Stein finds a proof of this in the otherwise superfluous καὶ in this passage: a still clearer proof lies in the sentence ἐπεὶ αὐτοῖσι παρὰ δόξαν κτλ., which clearly resumes the statement in 7. 192, ἐλπίσαντες ὀλίγας νῆας σφί ἀντιξέουσιν ἐσεσθαι νέας. The attempt is clear; not so the harmony itself. For (1) the Greeks here on arriving at Artemision (for the second time) apparently discover the Persians before them at Aphetai; (2) the Greeks at once project a second retreat. But such a retreat at this point is out of the question, as inconsistent with the whole plan of defence for Thermopylai-Artemision, and also inconsistent with the brilliant success they have just achieved (according to 7. 194) in the capture of fifteen of the king's vessels. The conclusions are forced upon us that the two passages are in the main from different sources (the one here probably of European, the other, that in Bk. 7, of Asianic origin), and that Hdt. has been ill-advised in his attempt to harmonize them, especially in his duplication of the retirement, or supposed retirement, of the Greek fleet from Artemision. The doubling of his sources has also apparently doubled the storms, and complicated other episodes in the naval operations, for the reduction of which to the simpler issues see further, Appendix V.

2. καταχθείσας: κατέγεσθαι is the proper word for putting into land; cp. 6. 107 καταγομένας ἐς τὸν Μαραθῶνα τὰς νέας ὁρμίζε οὗτος.

στρατιῆς ἅπαντα πλέα, ἐπεὶ αὐτοῖσι παρὰ δόξαν τὰ πρήγματα τῶν βαρβάρων ἀπέβαινε ἢ ὥς αὐτοὶ κατεδόκειον, καταρρωδῆσαντες δρησμὸν ἐβουλεύοντο ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀρτεμισίου ἔσω ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα. γνόντες δὲ σφέας οἱ Εὐβοεῖς ταῦτα βουλευομένους ἐδέοντο Εὐρυβιάδew προσμεῖναι χρόνον ὀλίγον, ἔστ' ἂν αὐτοὶ τέκνα τε καὶ τοὺς οἰκέτας ὑπεκθέωνται. ὥς δ' οὐκ ἔπειθον, μεταβάντες τὸν Ἀθηναίων στρατηγὸν πείθουσι Θεμιστοκλέα ἐπὶ μισθῷ τριήκοντα ταλάντοις, ἐπ' ᾧ τε καταμείναντες πρὸ τῆς Εὐβοίης ποιήσονται τὴν ναυμαχίην. ὁ δὲ Θεμιστοκλῆς τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἐπισχεῖν ὧδε ποιέει· Εὐρυβιάδῃ τούτων τῶν χρημάτων μεταδιδοῖ πέντε τάλαντα ὥς παρ' ἐωυτοῦ δῆθεν

3 πάντα B
Kallenberg

5 ἐβούλευον B, Holder: ἐβούλευον τὸν vel τὸ?
8 <τὰ> τέκνα van H. || τε om. B

3. στρατιῆς ἅπαντα πλέα: a reference to the king's encampment in Melis (7. 198-200) can hardly be excluded from these words.

αὐτοῖσι: the 'ethical' dative; the words ἢ ὥς αὐτοὶ κατεδόκειον are somewhat redundant, for they cannot be referred to τῶν βαρβάρων as subject.

τὰ πρήγματα: cp. 7. 10 (ll. 34 ff.).

4. ἀπέβαινε has the full imperfect sense; and likewise ἐβουλεύοντο just below.

5. δρησμὸν . . ἔσω ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα: apparently a further and still more craven flight than their supposed first move to Chalkis, 7. 182 supra; the change of phrase may be intended by Hdt. to mark the difference of the two occasions; but in reality the two were probably only one and the same, and the goal was neither the Isthmus, nor even Chalkis, but probably at most the bay of Aigaeos; cp. Appendix V. § 4.

6. οἱ Εὐβοεῖς: the term might seem to ascribe a solidarity to the peoples and cities of the island, which they certainly did not possess. Rationalistically the word might be interpreted of the Euboians in loco, chiefly those of Histiaia (c. 23 infra): critically viewed, it rather betrays the bad conscience of the narrator, or his source, by its vagueness.

7. ἐδέοντο, 'petitioned,' 'besought'; cp. cc. 3 supra, 132 infra.

8. τέκνα τε καὶ τοὺς οἰκέτας ὑπεκθάνονται: the women doubtless come in somewhere by implication, either with τέκνα, or with the οἰκέται (οἱ κατὰ τὸν οἶκον πάντες, Hesychius); cp. cc. 36, 41

infra, ὑπεκθέσθαι c. 41 infra, ὑπεκτιθέμενοι 5. 65, ὑπέκκειται c. 60 infra, ὑπεξεκομίσαντο 9. 6. The prepositions suggest the ideas of secrecy and safety, the subjunctive their design and intention.

9. μεταβάντες: here perhaps of psychological, as in 7. 73 of local movement.

τὸν Ἀθ. στρατηγὸν incidentally implies a chief commander, although he must constitutionally have had nine colleagues. The form of expression πείθουσι . . ἐπ' ᾧ τε recurs verbatim 5. 65. πρὸ here is not merely causal, but locative. The story of the bribing of Themistokles on this occasion is a transparent scandal; cp. Appendix V. § 2.

A delightful inconsequence in this passage lies in the Euboians wanting Eurybiades to remain 'a little while,' just till they have cleared their families out of the island, while Themistokles gets the Greeks to hold on and fight three battles (τὴν ναυμαχίην!) on three successive days.

11. ποιήσονται: the voice, the mood, the tense, not to say the change of subject, are all observable, and point rather to the actual result than to any implied condition.

5. 2. ἐπισχεῖν, 'to hold on': a stronger term than προσμεῖναι or even καταμείναι, connoting a longer time, a larger purpose.

τούτων τῶν χρημάτων: partitive genitive, emphasized by μεταδιδοῖ.

3. ὥς παρ' ἐωυτοῦ δῆθεν: so on a subsequent occasion he presents to Eurybiades arguments which are not of his διδούς. ὥς δέ οἱ οὗτος ἀνεπέπειστο, Ἀδεΐμαντος γὰρ ὁ Ὠκύτου

 5 ὁ Κορίνθιος στρατηγὸς τῶν λοιπῶν ἤσπαιρε μούνος, φάμενος ἀποπλέυσεσθαί τε ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀρτεμισίου καὶ οὐ παραμενέειν, πρὸς δὲ τοῦτον εἶπε ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς ἐπομόσας "οὐ σύ γε ἡμέας ἀπολείψεις, ἐπεὶ τοι ἐγὼ μέζω δῶρα δώσω ἢ βασιλεὺς ἂν τοι ὁ Μήδων πέμψει ἀπολιπόντι τοὺς συμμάχους." ταῦτά 10 τε ἅμα ἠγόρευε καὶ πέμπει ἐπὶ τὴν νέα τὴν Ἀδεϊμάντου τάλαντα ἄργυρίου τρία. οὗτοί τε δὲ πληγέντες δώροισι ἀνα-

5. ὁ Κορίνθιος Suidas (sub v. ἤσπαιρεν) cum v.l. Κορινθίων: κόρινθος
 C: κορίνθιος ceteri: Κορινθίων Schaefer, van H. || τῶν λοιπῶν om. B:
 'fortasse est glossema' van H. 6 ἀποπλέυσεσθαί B, van H. 10
 νῆα B || τὴν alterum: τοῦ dz 11 πληγέντες Bz, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>:
 πάντες α, Stein<sup>1 2</sup>

own devising, as though they were his own, c. 58 infra.

4. ἀνεπέπειστο: the pluperfect here has its full temporal force; but a shade of difference enters below, in ἀναπεπεισμένοι ἦσαν and ἐκεχάριστο.

Ἀδεΐμαντος . . . ὁ Ὠκύτου: cp.

7. 137 ad f., a passage which in part might explain the hostility of Athens to the memory of Adeimantos, were it not that the stories to the discredit of Adeimantos are surely far older than the exploits of Aristeas his son. The account of the bribery of Adeimantos by Themistokles at Artemision is, indeed, not merely absurd in view of the strategic necessities of the position, and obviously 'pragmatic'—to the discredit of Themistokles too; but it is flagrantly inconsistent with the stories of the relations between Themistokles and the Korinthian admiral just before the battle of Salamis. It is thus doubly significant that the version of the story followed by Plutarch, Themist. 7, omits Adeimantos altogether. If there is any truth in the tradition of the employment of money by Themistokles to procure a halt, to promote a battle, the scene must be laid at Salamis, not at Artemision, where the Peloponnesians could no more have thought of retreating than the Athenians themselves, as long as Leonidas was holding Thermopylai. The name and patronymic of the Korinthian strategos are here genuine, as the γὰρ would show; cp. c. 59 infra. Aineas, son of Okytos, a Korinthian, appears among the signatories of the truce of Laches in 423 B.C., Thuc. 4. 119. 2. This second Okytos might well be a son of Adeimantos; the name is presumably connected with ὠκύς.

5. ἤσπαιρε: like a fish out of water, cp. 9. 120, or a babe new-born, cp. 1. 111, or (as Stein suggests, but without a reference) a bird in the hand of the fowler.

9. Μήδων. Did Themistokles, and the Athenians of his generation, speak of the 'Mede' rather than of the 'Persian'? cp. Aristoph., Thuc. The general colour of the stories of Artemision is decidedly Attic; Hdt. and the Ionians for at least a generation before him could clearly distinguish between Mede and Persian.

ταῦτά τε ἅμα ἠγόρευε καὶ πέμπει: the emphatic parataxis and the historic tenses are observable: 'the words were hardly out of his mouth before he sends to the Korinthian admiral's flag-ship three talents of silver.'

11. πληγέντες. The reading of the second class for πάντες (cp. App. Crit.), adopted by Blakesley and Baehr, from Wesseling, and now by Stein, on the ground that πάντες is inadmissible for δύο. Baehr compares Plutarch, Demosth. 25 πληγῆς ὑπὸ τῆς δωροδοκίας, and other Plutarchisms more remote; Stein still thinks of bird-snaring, and cps. Horace, Od. 3. 16 munera navium Saevos illaqueant duces. It is easier to understand πάντες as a corruption of πληγέντες ex librariorum quibus vulgatum durius visum ingenio (Wesseling) than vice versa, or one might be tempted to see in πάντες a hint of a story of still more far-reaching corruption than that just related; at any rate, the corruptela was intended to cover 'all three.'

πεπεισμένοι ἦσαν καὶ τοῖσι Εὐβοεῦσι ἐκεχάριστο, αὐτὸς τε ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς ἐκέρδην, ἐλάνθανε δὲ τὰ λοιπὰ ἔχων, ἀλλ' ἠπιστάτο οἱ μεταλαβόντες τούτων τῶν χρημάτων ἐκ τῶν Ἀθηνέων ἐλθεῖν ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ τὰ χρήματα. 15

Οὕτω δὲ κατέμεινάν τε ἐν τῇ Εὐβοίῃ καὶ ἐναυμάχησαν, 6 ἐγένετο δὲ ὥδε. ἐπεῖτε δὴ ἐς τὰς Ἀφέτας περὶ δεῖλῃν πρῶτῃν γινομένην ἀπύκατο οἱ βάρβαροι, πυθόμενοι μὲν ἔτι καὶ πρότερον περὶ τὸ Ἀρτεμίσιον ναυλοχέειν νέας Ἑλληνίδας ὀλίγας, τότε

13 ἐκέρδανεν B: ἐκέρδῃσε d 15 Ἀθηνέων Bekker, Stein<sup>23</sup>:
ἀθηναίων codd., Stein<sup>1</sup> || τὰ χρήματα om. B 6. 1 δὴ om. B 2
τὰς: τοὺς R 3 γινομένην Bz || ἀπύκατο Pz 4 τὸ om. α ||
νῆας B || τότε . . ἰδόντες om. B

13. ἄλλ': as though a negative had preceded, ἐλάνθανε having indeed a sort of negative force.

14. ἐκ τῶν Ἀθηνέων: if we transfer the scene to Salamis we shall be convinced that the recipients were right in their opinion; and the purpose (λόγος, ratio) was to keep them at Salamis.

6. 1. ἐν τῇ Εὐβοίῃ: the officers and men were mostly ashore, even if the ships were not actually beached.

2. ἐπεῖτε δὴ ἐς τὰς Ἀφέτας: referring back (δὴ) not so much to c. 4 supra, as to 7, 195, or 193.

πρὶ: here of time, as just below of place.

δεῖλῃν πρῶτῃν γινομένην. 'the early afternoon'; cp. δεῖλῃν ὀψίῃν γινομένην τῆς ἡμέρης c. 9 infra. The present participle is more curious with the πρῶτῃν than with the ὀψίῃν, as δεῖλῃ itself (whatever its derivation) means afternoon, in distinction from ἡώς and μέσον ἡμέρας. Cp. Iliad 21.111. At what o'clock exactly we are to place the arrival (ἀπύκατο 7.193) is unfortunately not clear: before 3 p.m.?

3. πυθόμενοι μὲν ἔτι καὶ πρότερον: cp. 7. 203. The Persian advance has been conducted with all due foresight and circumspection: the number of the Greek fleet does not apparently exceed their anticipations.

The construction (and sense) of the words ἔτι καὶ πρότερον, especially of ἔτι, is disputable. Are they to be taken together? Do they, if so taken, qualify πυθόμενοι or ναυλοχέειν? Or are they to be taken separately, and, if so, do καὶ πρότερον cohere, or are ἔτι and πρότερον co-ordinate? Finally, what is the exact sense of ἔτι? Stein takes ἔτι=ἤδη (schon);

cp. 5. 62 ἰόντες ἄνδρες δόκιμοι ἀνέκαθεν ἔτι, 1. 65 τὸ δὲ ἔτι πρότερον τούτων καὶ κακονομῶνται ἦσαν, 1. 92 τὴν δὲ οὐσίην αὐτοῦ ἔτι πρότερον κατιρώσας κτλ., 1. 190 ἐξεπιστάμενοι ἔτι πρότερον τὸν Κύρον οὐκ ἀτρεμίζοντα, 3. 64 τῷ δὲ ἔτι πρότερον ἐκέχρηστο, 6. 33 αὐτοὶ γὰρ Κεῦκηνοὶ ἔτι πρότερον τοῦ Φοινίκων ἐσπλῶου τούτου ἐγγέγονεσαν ὑπὸ βασιλεί. So also c. 69 infra νομίζων ἔτι πρότερον σποιδάην εἶναι τότε πολλῷ μᾶλλον αἰεε. But in no instance does ἔτι appear used with a verb simply as=ἤδη, but always as reinforcing a temporal adverb, generally πρότερον, and so in its normal (comparative) force of 'still'—the point of departure being the latest date, and the point of arrival not 'already' but 'still' and 'still' earlier. In c. 62 infra ἐκ παλαιού ἔτι, where there is no comparison, the ἔτι may have its true (temporal) force. In none of these cases does a καὶ separate, or connect, the ἔτι πρότερον. The very peculiar case in 9. 102 ἔτι καὶ δὴ is now abandoned by Stein (cp. note ad l. infra). The καὶ here therefore remains a problem, most simply resolved by understanding it as intensive 'still even' (or 'even still') earlier, and taking the phrase as qualifying πυθόμενοι (c. 69 infra, quoted above, favouring this, as well as the τότε δὲ αὐτοὶ ἰδόντες). But if ἔτι καὶ πρότερον might be taken with ναυλοχέειν, then καὶ is disjunctive ('still as before,' referring to the reoccupation of the position); but the τότε δὲ αὐτοὶ ἰδόντες seems to forbid this.

4. τότε δέ: on their arrival at Aphetai, or on the way thither; in either case it appears here that the Greek fleet is already in position at Artemision (for

5 δὲ αὐτοὶ ἰδόντες, πρόθυμοι ἦσαν ἐπιχειρεῖν, εἰ κως ἔλοιεν αὐτάς. ἐκ μὲν δὴ τῆς ἀντίης προσπλέειν οὐ κώ σφι ἐδόκεε τῶνδε εἵνεκα, μή κως ἰδόντες οἱ Ἕλληες προσπλέοντας ἐς φυγὴν ὀρμήσειαν φεύγοντάς τε εὐφρόνη καταλαμβάνη· καὶ ἔμελλον δῆθεν φεύξεσθαι, ἔδει δὲ μηδὲ πυρφόρον τῷ ἐκείνων
7 λόγῳ ἐκφυγόντα περιγενέσθαι. πρὸς ταῦτα ὧν τάδε ἐμη-

6 προσπλώειν Bz, van H. 7 εἵνεκε R || κως α: πως α: om. B || προσπλώνοντας Bz, van H. 8 καταλάβη B: καταλάβοι Pz: καταλαμβάνει d 9 φεύξεσθαι Stein<sup>(2)</sup>3, van H.: ἐκφεύξεσθαι 10
λόγῳ B 7. 1 ἐμηχανῶντο Stein<sup>2</sup>3, Holder: ἐμηχανέωντο d: ἐμη-
χανέοντο ceteri, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.

the second time), before the arrival of the Persians at Aphetai; but if so, why did not the Greeks advance upon the Persians (especially if Aphetai should be placed within the entrance of the gulf of Pagasai)? The Persians do not advance at once for a frontal attack upon the Greeks (ἐκ τῆς ἀντίης προσπλέειν) for fear the Greeks should sail away and escape, through the Euripos, under cover of night; a squadron of 200 sail is detached to circumnavigate the island and take the Greeks in the rear, while the fleet from Aphetai will attack ἐξ ἐναντίας when the time arrives. The exposition of the plan ignores the bearing of the naval manoeuvres upon the situation at Thermopylai: had the Greek fleet desired, and been allowed, to 'fly' from Artemision, Leonidas and his men were at the mercy of the Persians. The squadron detached to circumnavigate Euboea may have been directed rather against Thermopylai than against Artemision.

8. εὐφρόνη καταλαμβάνη. The noun is a poetic word for 'night,' cp. 7. 12. The verb is used in a favourable, or at least a neutral sense, here; cp. 3. 139.

9. ἔμελλον δῆθεν φεύξεσθαι seems to be not the writer's own opinion, but an idea spread among the Persians; the tone of the passage, therefore, hardly accords with the account of the Greek panic in c. 4 supra. (ἐκφεύξεσθαι is of course barely sense, but would accord better with referring the utterance wholly to the author.)

ἔδει δὲ μηδὲ πυρφόρον τῷ ἐκείνων λόγῳ ἐκφυγόντα περιγενέσθαι: ἐκείνων must refer to the Persians, but τῷ ἐκείνων λόγῳ cannot be intended to ascribe to Persian origin the obviously Greek, or Lakonic, proverb. The Fire-bearer was a Spartan official, but not perhaps to be found only at Sparta; cp. Xenophon, Laced. res. 13. 2 θύει μὲν γὰρ πρῶτον οἶκοι ὧν (sc. ὁ βασιλεὺς) καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ· ἦν δὲ ἐνταῦθα καλλιερῆση, λαβὼν ὁ πυρφόρος πῦρ ἀπὸ τοῦ βωμοῦ προηγείται ἐπὶ τὰ θρία τῆς χώρας· ὁ δὲ βασιλεὺς ἐκεῖ αὖ θύεται Διὶ καὶ Ἀθηνᾷ. ὅταν δὲ ἄμφοιν τοῖτον τοῖν θεοῖν καλλιερῆσῃ, τότε διαβαίνει τὰ θρία τῆς χώρας· καὶ τὸ πῦρ μὲν ἀπὸ τούτων τῶν ἱερῶν προηγείται ὅποτε ἀποσβεννύμενον, σφάγια δὲ παντοῖα ἔπειται. Cp. Suidas sub v. who says, ἐν τοῖς οὖν πολέμοις εἰώθασιν τῶν ἱερῶν οἱ νενικηκότες φεῖδεσθαι. This might be true of Greeks, but would not hold good for 'barbarians.' Canon Blakesley, however, denies the sacrosanctity of the πυρφόρος, and supposes only that he would be more likely than the fighting men to escape.

7. 1. πρὸς ταῦτα ὧν: pleonastic. The subject of ἐμηχανῶντο is understood, sc. οἱ στρατηγοὶ τοῦ ναυτικοῦ στρατοῦ: cp. the (subsequent) conversation previously reported 7. 236. This device (μηχανή), of detaching a squadron (200 strong) to circumnavigate Euboea, and take the Greeks at Artemision (or Thermopylai?) in the rear, is here apparently dated after the arrival of the Persians at Aphetai. But (1) the direction to sail ἐξωθεν Σκιάθου; (2) the previous knowledge of the Persians concerning the positions occupied by the Greeks; (3) the curious introduction of the word ἀπασέων—i.e. 'while the ships were still in full force'; (4) the improbability of the Persians dividing their fleet, if they had just suffered the colossal losses recorded off Magnesia; (5) the probability that the storm has been duplicated in Hdt.'s narrative, and the Persian losses thereby enhanced; (6) and last, not least, the whole strategic development of the

χανῶντο· τῶν νεῶν ἀπασέων ἀποκρίναντες διηκοσίας περιέ-πεμπον ἔξωθεν Σκιάθου, ὥς ἂν μὴ ὀφθείησαν ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων περιπλέουσai Εὐβοίαν κατὰ τε Καφηρέα καὶ περὶ Γεραιστὸν ἐς τὸν Εὐρίπον, ἵνα δὴ περιλάβοιεν οἱ μὲν ταύτῃ ἀπικόμενοι 5
καὶ φράξαντες αὐτῶν τὴν ὀπίσω φέρουσai ὁδόν, σφεῖς δὲ ἐπισπόμενοι ἐξ ἐναντίας. ταῦτα βουλευσάμενοι ἀπέπεμπον τῶν νεῶν τὰς ταχθείσας, αὐτοὶ οὐκ ἐν νόῳ ἔχοντες ταύτης
τῆς ἡμέρης τοῖσι Ἕλλησι ἐπιθήσεσθαι, οὐδὲ πρότερον ἢ τὸ

2 νηῶν B || ἀπασέων R: πασέων αV: πασῶν S || περιέπεμψαν ἔξω
3 ὀφθέωσι(ν) V) B, van H. 4 περιπλώουσai B, van H. || περὶ om. B, van H. || γεραιστὸν B 5 μὲν δὲ B 7 ἐξ ἐναντίας B: ἐξ ἀντίας
malit van H. 8 νηῶν B 9 ἐπιθέσθαι d operations, itself so superficially conceived by Hdt., make it probable that the squadron commissioned to circumnavigate Euboea was detached from the Persian fleet not at Aphetai, as Hdt. here seems to imply, but off the Magnesian coast, if not already, still earlier, at the start from Therme.

3. ἔξωθεν Σκιάθου: the island formed a channel with the Magnesian main, cp. 7. 176, 183, and was the objective of the Persian navy from Therme, 7. 179, and likewise the station of the three Hellenic cruisers on the outlook, ibid., c. 92 infra, and a telegraph station, 7. 182. But from Aphetai, or from Artemision, to sail 'outside Skiathos' would be to sail northward between Skiathos and Peparethos, a mysterious, not to say senseless manœuvre, which would be fully in view of the Greeks at Artemision.

ὥς ἂν μὴ ὀφθείησαν. There is no need to prefer (with Blakesley, van H., and others) the v.l. ὀφθέωσι, as Hdt. uses the optative, with ἂν, after final ὥς, δως, rather freely (cp. Heiligenstaedt, de causis. finalium usu, i. 39).

4. κατὰ τε Καφηρέα καὶ περὶ Γεραιστὸν. Kaphereus and Geraistos are the two headlands at the south-east end of Euboea, Kaphereus being the northern one, Geraistos the southern. Geraistos is mentioned again, 9. 105, as the burial-place of the Athenian pankratiast, Hermolykos, son of Euthoinos, the hero of Mykale, who fell subsequently in the war with the Karystians. The variation of the prepositions is observable: you might sail περὶ Καφηρέα and even κατὰ Γεραιστὸν without getting round Euboea into the Euripos; but cp. App. Crit. The narrative here treats all these places as notorious, perhaps with a touch of Atticism. 7. 182, 5. 77 suggest that the term Euripos is restricted to the straits at Chalkia, though the other passages where the term occurs in Hdt. admit of a more extended reference.

5. ταύτῃ: sc. ἐς τὸν Εὐρίπον.

6. αὐτῶν: the Greeks, that is, the Greek fleet; for Hdt. treats the contrivance throughout as directed against Artemision.

τὴν ὀπίσω φέρουσai ὁδόν: by sea, not by land. τῆς ὀπίσω ὁδοῦ in quite a different connexion, 2. 87.

7. ἐπισπόμενοι ἐξ ἐναντίας: the Greek fleet being assumed to have taken to flight, ἐξ ἐναντίας signifies not so much a 'frontal attack' on the Greeks as an 'advance to meet' their own squadron.

8. τὰς ταχθείσας: i.e. the two hundred. αὐτοί: i.e. the remainder, or rather the main fleet; if Hdt.'s figures were to be trusted, it would still have numbered upwards of 600 vessels.

ταύτης τῆς ἡμέρης: the day of their arrival at Aphetai, and, as afterwards appears, c. 15 infra, the day upon which the frontal attack upon Thermopylai had begun, 7. 210, the first of the great Triduum; cp. c. 15 infra, Appendix V. § 4.

9. οὐδὲ πρότερον ἢ τὸ σύνθημά σφιν: they might have some time to wait for the signal that the circumnavigating squadron had arrived (in the Euripos? or where?). But where was such a signal to come from? No part or point of Euboea was as yet in Persian hands. The signal was to be given from the mainland—an unconscious indication that the circumnavigating squadron was directed rather against Thermopylai than

10 σύνθημά σφι ἔμελλε φανήσεσθαι παρὰ τῶν περιπλεόντων ὡς ἡκόντων. ταύτας μὲν δὴ περιέπεμπον, τῶν δὲ λοιπέων νεῶν ἐν τῇσι Ἀφέτησι ἐποιεῦντο ἀριθμόν.

8 Ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ ἐν ᾧ οὗτοι ἀριθμόν ἐποιεῦντο τῶν νεῶν, ἦν γὰρ ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ τούτῳ Σκυλλίης Σκιωναῖος δῦτης τῶν τότε ἀνθρώπων ἄριστος, ὃς καὶ ἐν τῇ ναυηγίᾳ τῇ κατὰ Πήλιον γενομένη πολλὰ μὲν ἔσωσε τῶν χρημάτων
5 τοῖσι Πέρσησι, πολλὰ δὲ καὶ αὐτὸς περιεβάλετο, οὗτος ὁ Σκυλλίης ἐν νόῳ μὲν εἶχε ἄρα καὶ πρότερον αὐτομολήσειν ἐς τοὺς Ἕλληνας, ἀλλ' οὐ γάρ οἱ παρέσχε ἕως τότε. ὅτε μὲν δὴ τρόπῳ τὸ ἐνθεῦτεν ἔτι ἀπίκετο ἐς τοὺς Ἕλληνας, οὐκ ἔχω

10 περιπλεόντων B, van H. 11 λοιπῶν B || νηῶν ἐπὶ τῇσι(ν V) ἀφετῇσιν B 12 ἐποιεῦντο B || τὸν ἀριθμόν ε 8. 1 τούτῳ om. C || ἐν ᾧ: ἐν τῷ edd. nonnulli: ἐν ᾧ . . νεῶν secl. van H. || ἐποιεῦντο B 2 νηῶν B 3 ναυαγίᾳ d 4 κατὰ τὸ dε 5 τῇσι Bε || περιεβάλετο AR: περιεβάλλετο BSV 6 αὐτομολήσειν . . οἱ om. B 7 ἕως Cobet, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ὡς against Artemision. This conclusion supports the theory that 200 ships were detached from the Persian fleet off the Magnesian coast—or earlier. The voyage from Skiathos to the Euripos, round Kaphereus and Geraistos, could not be less than 200 (E.) miles; sailing night and day, under favourable circumstances, the squadron could hardly arrive at Chalkis, not to say at Thermopylai, in less than thirty-six hours (cp. 4. 86, where a ship is supposed to perform 1300 stades in a νυχθήμερον; but we have here 200 ships to move together, and a difficult channel to negotiate). It was, perhaps, hoped that the flying squadron would arrive in the rear of Thermopylai in the course of the third day (assuming it to have been despatched on the afternoon or evening of the first day).

10. ἔμελλε φανήσεσθαι is rather curious, for they must have been intending to await a definite signal, not merely to wait until a signal was about to be displayed. The futurity seems to be purely relative to their intentions at the moment of despatch, not on the eve of arrival.

12. ἐν τῇσι Ἀφέτησι ἐποιεῦντο ἀριθμόν. As had been done at Doriskos, 7. 59, 89, 100. Their losses by the storm were to be computed (cp. 7. 190). It is possible that some reorganization of the fleet was now attempted. Documents may have resulted from this numbering, but there is little to suggest that Hdt. or his authorities made use of them.

8. 2. Σκυλλίης Σκιωναῖος: Skyllias (cp. Σκύλλα, Σκύλλη) of Skione, the city on Pallene, 7. 123.

3. δῦτης τῶν τότε ἀνθρώπων ἄριστος. Had Hdt. believed the anecdote which he proceeds to relate he would perhaps have employed the formula πάντων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν ἄριστος. The term ἀνθρώπων is introduced perhaps because the water is not man's native element.

τῇ ναυηγίᾳ τῇ κατὰ Πήλιον γενομένη: cp. 7. 188-91, and the luck of Ameinokles, 7. 190. περιεβάλετο, ibid. ἦν γὰρ . . οὗτος shows a slight anacoluthon; the whole anecdote rings with the vox viva: so ἄρα ('as he afterwards explained'), ἀλλ' οὐ γάρ οἱ κτλ.

6. καὶ πρότερον, 'even before this'; cp. c. 6 supra.

7. παρέσχε is neuter. ἀνέσχε, just below, is of course personal, but intransitive; cp. Od. 5. 320 οὐδ' ἐδυνάσθη Αἴψα μάλ' ἀνσχεθεῖν μεγάλου ὑπὸ κύματος ὀρμῆς.

8. τὸ ἐνθεῦτεν, coming just after τότε, might appear to be spatial rather than temporal; but if taken with ἔτι must be vaguely opposed to καὶ πρότερον just before. ἔτι may be referred (with Stein) to the man's previous unsuccessful attempts (not that any are recorded), or more generally (with Sitzler) to his period of

εἶπεῖν ἀτρεκέως, θαμάζω δὲ εἰ τὰ λεγόμενα ἐστὶ ἀληθέα· λέγεται γὰρ ὡς ἐξ Ἀφετέων δὺς ἐς τὴν θάλασσαν οὐ πρότερον 10 ἀνέσχε πρὶν ἢ ἀπῖκετο ἐπὶ τὸ Ἀρτεμίσιον, σταδίους μάλιστα κη τούτους ἐς ὀγδώκοντα διὰ τῆς θαλάσσης διεξελθών. λέγεται μὲν νυν καὶ ἄλλα ψευδέσι εἴκελα περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς τούτου, τὰ δὲ μετεξέτερα ἀληθέα· περὶ μέντοι τούτου γνώμη μοι ἀποδε- δέχθω πλοῖφ μιν ἀπικέσθαι ἐπὶ τὸ Ἀρτεμίσιον. ὡς δὲ ἀπῖκετο, 15 αὐτίκα ἐσήμηνε τοῖσι στρατηγοῖσι τὴν τε ναυηγίην ὡς γένοιτο, καὶ τὰς περιπεμφθείσας τῶν νεῶν περὶ Εὐβοίαν. τοῦτο δὲ 9 ἀκούσαντες οἱ Ἕλληνες λόγον σφίσι αὐτοῖσι ἐδίδοσαν. πολλῶν

9 εἶπαι Bz, van H. || θαυμάζω B, Stein<sup>1</sup> 10 ὡς om. B 11
ἀνέχεν B 12 τούτους ἐς om. B 13 ἱκελλα RV: ἱκελα S, Bekker, van H. 15 ἀπικέσθαι R 16 ἐσήμαινε B, Holder
17 περιπεμφθείσας A<sup>1</sup>B<sup>1</sup> || νηῶν B

suspense and waiting for a favourable opportunity.

9. θαμάζω δὲ εἰ τὰ λεγόμενα ἐστὶ ἀληθέα, 'I wonder if the story is true'—a wonder which, if Hdt. had given more way to it, might have flooded his work with shallow rationalism. His critique of the story of Skyllias is poor, for he seems to see no alternative between Skyllias having dived all the way from Aphetai to Artemision and having come all the way in a boat.

11. σταδίους μάλιστα κη τούτους ἐς ὀγδώκοντα. 80 stades would not cover the whole distance from Aphetai (wherever it be placed) to Artemision, assuming that Artemision is east of Aphetai. But from shore to shore the channel is in places barely 50 stades, and many a swimmer nowadays would make little of it. τούτους (omitted by B) is rightly taken by Stein as "appositive"; cp. 3. 5 ἐν τούτῳ οὐκ ὀλίγον χωρίον.

13. ἄλλα ψευδέσι εἴκελα, as perhaps the story told by Pausanias l.c. infra of his (and his daughter's) diving down, in the storm off Pelion, and cutting the cables, etc., of the Persian ships. τὰ δὲ μετεξέτερα ἀληθέα may be a concession to Delphi, where was a statue, dedicated by the Amphiktyones, of Σκυλλίης and of his daughter, Τόνα by name, which Hdt. may have seen (Pausan. 10. 19. 1). If so, this story would not be of the original draft; cp. Introduction, § 9. The dedication attests the reality and importance of the services of Skyllias, whatever they were. μετεξέτερα = énia.

16. αὐτίκα ἐσήμηνε τοῖσι στρατη-

γοῖσι: according to Hdt. Skyllias reported to the Greek admirals (1) the storm, its origin and effects; (2) the despatch of the 200 ships round Euboea. The Greeks knew all about the storm already, πάντα τὰ γενόμενα περὶ τὴν ναυηγίην, from their scouts, 7. 192, and they had also, apparently before the arrival of Skyllias, captured fifteen of the enemy's vessels, and closely questioned their prisoners, 7. 194 f. It is possible (with Stein) to emphasize the construction ὡς γένοιτο as referring not to the fact, the bare fact of a storm having occurred, but to the course, circumstances, and results of the storm, the extent of the Persian losses, etc. The change or incompleteness of the construction is observable, a limb co-ordinate with ὡς γένοιτο to follow τὰς περιπεμφθείσας τῶν νεῶν being conspicuous by its absence, though not grammatically indispensable. Hdt. seems to make the report on the storm (off Pelion) the chief point of Skyllias's communication; while, upon the face of it, his report on the flying squadron was newer and more startling and important tidings for the Greeks. But what did he report of the 200 ships? Simply that they had been despatched? Or that they too had been, must have been, wrecked? (ὡς νεναυγήκασιν).

9. 2. οἱ Ἕλληνες: sc. οἱ στρατηγοὶ τῶν Ἑλλήνων. On learning the despatch of a squadron round Euboea the Greek admirals held a council of war (λόγον σφίσι αὐτοῖσι ἐδίδοσαν). So far the statement may be historical; what follows is δὲ λεχθέντων ἐνίκα τὴν ἡμέρην ἐκείνην αὐτοῦ μέιναντάς τε καὶ αὐλισθέντας, μετέπειτα νύκτα μέσσην παρέντας πορεύεσθαι 5 καὶ ἀπαντᾶν τῇσι περιπλεύουσι τῶν νεῶν. μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο, ὥς οὐδεὶς σφι ἐπέπλεε, δέλῃν ὀψίην γινομένην τῆς ἡμέρης

9. 5 περιπλωοῖσιν B || τοῦτο del. van H. 6 ἐπέπλεε Bz, van H.
|| τῆς ἡμέρης γινομένην S

inconsistent with itself, and unintelligible. The Greeks debate various alternatives (not stated); they decide upon one, and that one an absurdity, a strategic inconceivability; and they proceed to act in defiance of their decision. For obvious reasons the Greeks at Artemision could not abandon that position, so long as Thermopylai was held by Leonidas; they cannot have determined at this point to retreat. Nor was any such move demanded by the Persian periplous of Euboea; a few ships would be sufficient to hold the narrow channel at Chalkis, and, if that were held, the fleet at Artemision, the army at Thermopylai, had little to fear from the periplous. But a real source of anxiety may have lain in a doubt as to the true objective of the Persian flying squadron. What if the 200 vessels were making, not for Chalkis, but for Oropos, for Phaleron, for the Isthmos? The storm may have reassured the Greeks, convinced that a squadron on the high sea could not weather it, even if Skyllias had reported only the despatch of the Persian vessels. The actual resolution taken by the Greeks is to be inferred from their action; they must have decided to remain, and to attack the Persian fleet, or perhaps the rear-guard thereof. Possibly the account here of the fighting on the 'first' day, resulting in the capture of thirty ships, is an unconscious doublet of the account given in 7. 194 of the capture of the fifteen ships, that being from an Asianic, this from a European source; Kypristes are concerned in both stories, and it is extremely hard to find room otherwise, in the narrative here, for the episode there recorded; cp. Appendix V. § 4.

3. ἐνίκα: of a deliberative decision, 6. 101. This decision might be identical with the one reported in c. 4 supra; cp. next note.

τὴν ἡμέρην ἐκείνην: prima facie this day witnesses (1) the arrival of the Persian fleet at Aphetai, (2) the arrival of Skyllias at Artemision, (3) the council of war, (4) the first engagement at sea, whether this be, or be not, identical with (5) the capture of the fifteen ships described in 7. 194; to these items must apparently be added (6) the first day's fighting at Thermopylai, and, as Hdt. would have us believe, (7) the despatch of the squadron to circumnavigate Euboea. It is, however, possible that these events are unduly accumulated. The despatch of the squadron to circumnavigate Euboea is, as above shown, to be dated before the Persian fleet passed Skiathos and the myrmex, that is, before the storm. The interval (ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ c. 8 supra) between the despatch of the squadron and the arrival of Skyllias at Artemision may have comprised not hours, but days; or again, his arrival at Artemision may have anticipated the Persian arrival at Aphetai by some days, and not, as apparently implied by Hdt. here, have succeeded it by some hours. Again, the further chronological indication just below (μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο) is of little or no value, the interval being entirely vague. If Skyllias arrived in the Greek camp before the storm, before the Persians had passed Skiathos, in fact days before the capture of the fifteen Persian vessels, or the first engagements at Artemision and Thermopylai, then, indeed, the Greek admirals may have decided, on the strength of his information, to detach a portion of their own fleet (cp. c. 14 infra) to guard, or to reinforce the ships guarding, the Euripos channel, while themselves remaining on the spot (αὐτοῦ), as a matter of course, with the larger part, to cover Thermopylai and the northern channel (of Oreos) from the advance of the Persian navy.

6. δέλῃν ὀψίην γινομένην τῆς ἡμέρης: prima facie this chronological reference carries back not merely to τὴν ἡμέρην ἐκείνην just above, but to the δέλῃν πρῶτην γινομένην of c. 6 supra, the hour of the arrival of the Persians at Aphetai. It is, however, possible that these early and late afternoons are not on the same day. The arrival of the Persian fleet at

φυλάξαντες αὐτοὶ ἐπανεπλεον ἐπὶ τοὺς βαρβάρους, ἀπόπειραν αὐτῶν ποιήσασθαι βουλόμενοι τῆς τε μάχης καὶ τοῦ διεκπλόου. ὁρῶντες δὲ σφέας οἳ τε ἄλλοι στρατιῶται οἱ Ξέρξεω καὶ οἱ 10 στρατηγοὶ ἐπιπλέοντας νηυσὶ ὀλίγησι, πάγχυ σφί μανίην ἐπενείκαντες ἀνήγον καὶ αὐτοὶ τὰς νέας, ἐλπίσαντες σφέας εὐπετέως αἰρήσειν, οἰκότα κάρτα ἐλπίσαντες, τὰς μὲν γε τῶν Ἑλλήνων ὁρῶντες ὀλίγας νέας, τὰς δὲ ἑωυτῶν πλήθει τε 5 πολλαπλησίας καὶ ἄμεινον πλεούσας· καταφρονήσαντες ταῦτα ἐκυκλοῦντο αὐτοὺς ἐς μέσον. ὅσοι μὲν νυν τῶν Ἰώνων ἦσαν

7 ἐπανεπλεον Bz, van H. 8 διεκπλόου B 10. 1 ὁρέοντες C: ὁρέοντες R, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ὁρέοντος V 2 ἐπιπλώνοντας Bz, van H. 3 ἀνήγαγον B || ἐλπίσαντες σφέας Stein<sup>1</sup> 5 ὁρέοντες C: ὁρέοντες B, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. 6 πολλαπλησίας BCPz || πλωούσας B, van H.

Aphetai, to say nothing of the subsequent numbering, was not to be accomplished in the twinkling of an eye; the only synchronism to which we may cling with desperate tenacity is the coincidence of the three days' fightings at Artemision and at Thermopylai, this being grounded, though not absolutely, in the strategic and tactical necessities of the case. The use of φυλάξαντες is made clear in c. 14 infra.

Blakesley suggests that the Greeks timed their attack so as to have the sinking sun full in the eyes of the enemy's steersmen; if so, Hdt.'s account will require further revision, for Aphetai is, if anything, west of Artemision.

7. ἀπόπειραν αὐτῶν ποιήσασθαι βουλόμενοι: verily a laudable curiosity! That Hdt. should solemnly record a decision to retreat (and this the third, cp. c. 4 supra, 7. 182) and immediately thereupon an assumption of the offensive by the would-be fugitives, and that out of experimental curiosity, is fatally symptomatic of his military motivation, and must be taken to set the modern reader free to enforce the Sach-Kritik, or standard of physical and psychological probability, with considerable boldness.

8. τῆς τε μάχης καὶ τοῦ διεκπλόου: with μάχη, manner of fighting, cp. 5. 49, 7. 9. The διεκπλοος was, perhaps, an Ionian device; cp. my note to 6. 12, and c. 11 infra.

10. 1. ὁρῶντες δὲ κτλ. There is a remarkable coincidence between the language (the sentiment also) of this passage and the description of the Persian mind at Marathon, 6. 112 οἱ δὲ Πέρσαι ὁρῶντες (sic) . . . ὁρῶν ἐπίοντας

. . . μανίην τε τοῖσι Ἀθηναίοις ἐπέφερον καὶ πάγχυ ὀλεθρίην, ὁρέοντες αὐτοὺς ὀλίγους καὶ τοῦτον δρόμῳ ἐπειγομένους. If Stein's readings are correct the Atticism of this passage—the earlier in order of composition, if my theory (Introduction, §§ 7, 8) holds—is the more pronounced: as is natural, on that theory.

4. οἰκότα κάρτα ἐλπίσαντες: for two reasons, their ships being more numerous, and better sailers (ἀμεινον πλεούσας): a notable admission, perhaps not free from exaggeration, especially under the circumstances, the Persian ships having been so long in the water, even if the storm had not already occurred to damage them. They had, however, perhaps been carefully overhauled at Doriskos, and at Therme.

6. καταφρονήσαντες ταῦτα: the verb has not yet acquired its dyslogistic force; cp. 1. 59, 66.

7. ἐκυκλοῦντο αὐτοὺς ἐς μέσον, 'they attempted to surround them in a circle' (cp. c. 85 infra), and were apparently in the first instance successful. This was a περίπλοος of another sort to that conducted by τῇσι περιπλοούσῃσι τῶν νεῶν above: could it be that there is some confusion up above in the report of the resolution of the Greeks ἀπαντᾶν τῇσι περιπλοούσῃσι to front, or attack, the ships which were surrounding them?

ὅσοι μὲν νυν τῶν Ἰώνων: there were, then, some of the Ionians in the Persian ranks well-disposed, loyal (εὐνοοί), to the 'Hellenic' cause: an important admission, and indicating a weakness, with which the Persian admirals just before have failed to reckon; cp. 7. 51.

εὐνοοι τοῖσι Ἑλλησι ἀέκοντές τε ἐστρατεύοντο, συμφορὴν τε ἐποיעύντο μεγάλην ὀρώντες περιεχομένους αὐτοὺς καὶ ἐπιστά-10 μνοι ὡς οὐδεὶς αὐτῶν ἀπονοστήσει· οὕτω ἀσθενέα σφι ἐφαίνετο εἶναι τὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων πρήγματα. ὅσοισι δὲ καὶ ἡδομένοισι ἦν τὸ γινόμενον, ἄμιλλαν ἐποיעύντο ὅπως αὐτὸς ἕκαστος πρῶτος νέα Ἀττικὴν ἐλὼν παρὰ βασιλέως δῶρα
 λάμψεται· Ἀθηναίων γὰρ αὐτοῖσι λόγος ἦν πλεῖστος ἀνὰ τὰ
 11 στρατόπεδα. τοῖσι δὲ Ἑλλησι ὡς ἐσήμνηε, πρῶτα μὲν ἀντί-

8 τοῖσι Ἑλλησι, ἀέκοντές Stein<sup>12</sup>, edd. plerique: virgulam del. van H.,
 Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἐστρατεύοντο, συμφορὴν: virgulam exhib. Gaisford, Holder, van
 H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || τε alterum del. van H. 9 ὀρώντες C: ὀρέοντες B:
 ὀρέοντές <τε> van H. 10 οὐδεὶς σφιν ἀπονοστήσειν RS: (ἀπονοστήcum σ litt. ult. superscr. V) || σφιν ἀσθενέα S 11 τῶν om. S
 12 ἐποיעύντο B || ἕκαστος αὐτὸς B 13 νῆα B || βασιλέως Cd 14
 λάμψεται Sz 11. 1 ἀντίπρφοι van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: volgo sine i subscr.

9. περιεχομένους: imperfect, 'in course of being surrounded': so τὸ γινόμενον just below.

ἐπιστάμενοι: the word seems used by Hdt. in reference to the strength rather than the truth of their certitude, not without a touch of irony herein.

11. πρήγματα: c. 4 supra.

ὅσοισι δέ: sc. τῶν Ἰώνων: or was it rather the Dorians, and that set? Artemisia par exemple and the Halikarnassians? Or is the reference wider still, covering all the components of the fleet, who were pleased with what was going on, and ambitious, every man of them, to capture an Attic ship and to receive rewards from the king therefor? With the construction cp. ἀσμένοις c. 14 infra, ἡδομένοις 9. 46. Blakesley cps. Tacitus Agric. 18, quibus . . . bellum volentibus erat.

14. Ἀθηναίων γάρ: the unblushing Atticism of the passage suggests the ultimate source, if not the channel, of these reports. There is some slight inconsequence in the rewards offered for the capture of a Greek, or at least an Attic ship, and the sure and certain confidence of victory; but the rewards are likely to be historical. The Athenians had been victors at Marathon; the Athenians had supported the Ionic revolt; Athenian exiles were on the Persian fleet, or in the king's camp.

ἀνὰ τὰ στρατόπεδα. Stein refers to the navy, and to the Persian navy alone, which was of a composite character. στρατόπεδον can certainly denote a naval force, perhaps especially when brought to land (cp. 5. 36), but the mention of the king in the immediate context, and the considerations urged in the previous note, justify the extension of the term here to cover the forces in front of Thermopylai. The phrase thus becomes a homage to the solidarity of the parallel operations.

11. 1. ἐσήμνηε: sc. ὁ σαλπικτής: cp. Aischyl. Pers. 395. The Greek manoeuvres are proceeding with the utmost coolness and precision; their ships are conglobated, and with their sterns centred on one point (ἐς τὸ μέσον τὰς πρύμνας συνήγαγον): this position is assumed at the first signal, for previously they were rowing forward (ἐπ' ἀνέπλεον ἐπὶ τοὺς βαρβάρους c. 9 supra); at the second signal (δεύτερα δὲ σημήναντος) they shot forwards, although by that time they were surrounded, the περίπλοος, the κύκλωσις of the enemy's more numerous fleet having now developed itself: the Greek ships charged the enemy bow to bow (κατὰ στόμα). This account looks at first sight plausible; reflexion shows it to be deficient. Was the κύκλωσις indeed complete? Was the Greek fleet completely surrounded, and the individual vessels radiating from a centre, like spokes from a wheel, all round? Could 271 galleys really be arranged for practical or tactical purposes on such a plan? Or was the formation, perhaps, but in a crescent or arc? And again, were the Persian ships advancing κατὰ στόμα, or πρῶροι τοῖσι βαρβάροισι γενόμενοι ἐς τὸ μέσον τὰς πρύμνας συνήγαγον, δεύτερα δὲ σημήναντος ἔργου εἶχοντο ἐν ὀλίγῳ περ' ἀπολαμφθέντες καὶ κατὰ στόμα. ἐνθαῦτα τριήκοντα νέας αἰρέουσι τῶν βαρβάρων καὶ τὸν Γόργον τοῦ Σαλαμινίων 5 βασιλέως ἀδελφεὸν Φιλάονα τὸν Χέρσιος, λόγιμον εὐόντα ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ ἄνδρα. πρῶτος δὲ Ἑλλήνων νέα τῶν πολεμίων εἶλε ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος Λυκομήδης Αἰσχροῦ, καὶ τὸ ἀριστήιον

2 γινόμενοι BPz 3 εἰσήγαγον C 4 νῆας B 5 τῶν
βαρβάρων om. B, Holder 6 βασιλέως C || ἐν om. C 7 ἄνδρα
om. B, Holder || νῆα B: μετὰ C 8 αἰσχροῦ αSV: αἰσχρέον R et reliqui: Αἰσχρέω Bredow, Holder, van H.

were they rowing round and round the Greeks in the attempt to compress them into a small space? In the first of the two engagements, afterwards so celebrated, between Phormion and the Peloponnesians, anno 429 B.C., the Athenian admiral, with but twenty ships, succeeded in rowing all round a fleet of 47 sail, which the incompetent Knemos had drawn up in a hollow circle, their prows outwards, round their tenders and convoys. If the Peloponnesian ships on that occasion ἔργον εἶχοντο ἐν ὀλίγῳ περ' ἀπολαμφθέντες, they might have struck Phormion's ships, but not κατὰ στόμα, bow to bow, but much more advantageously, amidships or broadside. As it was, the result of Phormion's manœuvre was to compress the fleet of Knemos into an ever-narrowing space, and finally to throw it into complete confusion (Thucyd. 2. 83 f.). But the case here is different. A vastly superior force is encircling an inferior number: possibly in this case the ships advanced κατὰ στόμα, prow to prow, albeit ramming on that system was not likely to result in a Greek victory. Hence the suspicion arises that there is something confused and inaccurate in Hdt.'s description of this engagement: the capture of the thirty ships by the Greeks certainly ensues with surprising rapidity. If these thirty ships were cut off in some way from the main fleet, the result would be more intelligible. And again, if the story (in 7. 194) of the capture of fifteen ships, owing to a misunderstanding, be the Asianic version of this first engagement, we have to seek for a tertium quid, between that account, which reduces the engagement to a mere contretemps, and this account, which magnifies it into a pitched battle and a glorious victory, as the real event.

4. κατὰ στόμα: ex adverso, a fronte, Baehr; Bug gegen Bug, Stein, which seems better than his first idea, und zwar nur von vorn.

τριήκοντα: just twice as many as the Asianic tradition (7. 194) allows.

6. Φιλάονα: on Philaon and his family cp. note to 7. 98. In the fifteen ships was captured the Paphian Penthylos (7. 195), as well as Sandokes and Aridolis.

7. στρατοπέδῳ: doubtless the fleet, or naval force; cp. c. 10 supra.

8. Λυκομήδης Αἰσχροῦ: Plutarch, Themist. 15, transfers the exploit to Salamis, which contradicts c. 84 infra, but at any rate suggests other possible transferences: πρῶτος μὲν οὖν λαμβάνει ναὺν Λυκομήδης ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος τριηραρχῶν, ἧς τὰ παράσημα περικύψας, ἀνέβηκεν Ἀπόλλωνι δαφνηφόρῳ Φλυήσιν. The last word may be a gloss (cp. Bauer, Plutarchs Themistokles, 1884, p. 56); but was not Lykomedes a member of the clan (γένος) of the Lykomidai, to which Themistokles certainly belonged (cp. Plutarch, op. cit. 1)? The names Αἰσχροῦς, Αἰσχροῦ, Αἰσχροῦ are all epigraphically attested for Athens (cp. Pauly-Wissowa, i. 1063 f.), while Αἰσχροῦνι appears 3. 26 as the name of a φυλή in Samos. A Lykomedes of Phlye appears on an inscription of 418-17 B.C. Dittenberger, Sylloge<sup>1</sup>, 38; Hicks, Manual<sup>2</sup>, 70 [53]. He might be grandson of the one here in the text.

τὸ ἀριστήιον ἔλαβε οὗτος. The Aristeion is a definite award (cp. c. 93, 9. 71, 105), and this notice may be historical; yet in view of Plutarch's statement, touching τὰ παράσημα, a sus-

ἔλαβε οὗτος. τοὺς δ' ἐν τῇ ναυμαχίῃ ταύτῃ ἑτεραλκίως 10 ἀγωνιζομένους νύξ ἐπελθοῦσα διέλυσε. οἱ μὲν δὴ Ἑλληνες ἐπὶ τὸ Ἀρτεμίσιον ἀπέπλεον, οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι ἐς τὰς Ἀφέτας, πολλὸν παρὰ δόξαν ἀγωνισάμενοι. ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ ναυμαχίῃ Ἀντίδωρος Λήμιος μόνος τῶν σὺν βασιλείῃ Ἑλλήνων ἐόντων αὐτομολεῖ ἐς τοὺς Ἑλληνας, καὶ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι διὰ τοῦτο τὸ 15 ἔργον ἔδωσαν αὐτῷ χῶρον ἐν Σαλαμῖνι.
 12 Ὡς δὲ εὐφρόνῃ ἐγεγόνεε, ἦν μὲν τῆς ὥρης μέσον θέρος, ἐγίνετο δὲ ὕδωρ τε ἄπλετον διὰ πάσης τῆς νυκτὸς καὶ σκληραὶ βρονταὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ Πηλίου· οἱ δὲ νεκροὶ καὶ τὰ ναυήγια ἐξεφέροντο

9 τοὺς δὲ CR || ἐν om. C 10 διέλυε C 11 ἀπέπλεων RS, van H. 15 αὐτῷ om. B, Holder, van H. || χῶραν B 12. 2
 ἄπλετόν τε B || βρονταὶ σκληραὶ Pd 3 ναυήγια B || ἐξεφερέοντο
 Holder, van H.

picion suggests itself of some possible confusion.

9. ἑτεραλκίως ἀγωνιζομένους: cp. 9. 103 ὡς εἶδον αὐτίκα κατ' ἀρχὰς γινομένην ἑτεραλκίᾳ τὴν μάχην. The word is taken to mean in Hdt. 'doubtful,' ancipiti Marte, though it is an Homeric word, and the Homeric meaning is 'decisive.' An engagement in which one side loses thirty triremes to the other is hardly indecisive, or of doubtful issue; and the barbarians return to Aphetai πολλὸν παρὰ δόξαν ἀγωνισάμενοι.

10. νύξ: simply prosaic and depersonified. The movements resulting in the engagement had started late in the afternoon; cp. c. 10 supra.

13. Ἀντίδωρος Λήμιος. The name Antidoros is epigraphically attested for Athens in the fourth century B.C. (Pauly-Wissowa, i. 2397, where this Lemnian does not appear at all). The island of Lemnos was claimed for Athens in virtue of the act of Miltiades (cp. 6. 137-140), and as the Athenians recovered possession within a few years (cp. Busolt, Gr. Gesch. III. i. 414 f.), it is, perhaps, doubly remarkable that they settled this 'Lemnian' in Salamis rather than in his native place. His exact status in Lemnos, in Salamis, and in Athens, is not quite clear. Was he an Athenian citizen? Had he been so all along? Had he been a citizen and forfeited his rights? Salamis was not a 'deme,' and never appears as such: the Athenian settlers were technically 'Kleruchs'; but there were doubtless natives also, and the possession of a χῶρος ἐν Σαλαμῖνι probably did not carry with it full citizenship. The word κλήρος here would have been less embarrassing.

12. 1. εὐφρόνῃ: cp. c. 6 supra; the word appears to be used without any eulogistic intention. The pluperfect, ἐγεγόνεε, is used perhaps to avoid clashing with ἐγίνετο just below. ἦν μὲν, 'though the season (ὥρη) was midsummer, yet' (δέ). With the date cp. 7. 206. ἀπλετος, as in 1. 14 (χρυσός), 4. 53 (ἄλγες), 6. 58 (οἰμωγῇ), etc., 'boundless,' 'no end of,' 'galore.' σκληραὶ (bis) of the βρονταὶ denotes perhaps the sharp rattle of thunder in close proximity; L. & S. cp. Vergil's aridus fragor, G. i. 357 f.

3. ἀπὸ τοῦ Πηλίου: i.e. from the north, behind them, the scene of the great storm in Bk. 7. 188 ff., if, indeed, the two storms be not all one. But is the phrase here purely locative or quite void of a suggestion of causality and generation? (Cp. τὸ ἀπὸ Ζέφου c. 15 infra.)

τὰ ναυήγια: are these wrecks, with the corpses, the product of the storm itself or of the antecedent battle?

ἐξεφέροντο ἐς τὰς Ἀφέτας. The wreckage and corpses were thrown ashore on the strand at Aphetai: how was that, if the storm was from Pelion? Was it the result of the tide and the current, or were they carried by a wind moving against the thunderstorm? In any case it is hardly safe to press this statement into a proof that there was a great storm from the south immediately in succession to the three days' storm from the north, or north-east (in Bk. 7), ἐς τὰς Ἀφῆτας, καὶ περὶ τε τὰς πρόρας τῶν νεῶν εἰλέοντο καὶ ἐτάρασσον τοὺς ταρσοὺς τῶν κωπέων. οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται οἱ 5 ταύτῃ ἀκούοντες ταῦτα ἐς φόβον κατιστέατο, ἐλπίζοντες πάγχυ ἀπολέσθαι ἐς οἷα κακὰ ἦκον· πρὶν γὰρ ἢ καὶ ἀναπνεύσαι σφέας ἔκ τε τῆς ναυηγίης καὶ τοῦ χειμῶνος τοῦ γενομένου κατὰ Πήλιον, ὑπέλαβε ναυμαχίῃ καρτερή, ἐκ δὲ τῆς ναυμαχίης ὄμβρος τε λάβρος καὶ ῥεύματα ἰσχυρὰ ἐς θάλασσαν ὀρμημένα 10 βρονταὶ τε σκληραί. καὶ τοῦτοις μὲν τοιαύτῃ ἢ νύξ ἐγένετο, 13 τοῖσι δὲ ταχθεῖσι αὐτῶν περιπλέειν Εὐβοίαν ἢ αὐτὴ περ ἑοῦσα νύξ πολλὸν ἦν ἔτι ἀγριωτέρῃ, τοσούτῳ ὅσῳ ἐν πελάγει φερο-

4 πρόρας van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: volgo sine ι subscr. || καὶ τῶν B || εἰλέοντο van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: εἰλέοντο 5 ἀπάρασσον Emperius, van H. 7 ἀπολέσθαι B: ἀπολείσθαι van H. || ἐς om. C || ἢ om. R 8 γινομένου B 9 καρτερῇ SPdz: κρατερῇ ceteri 10 τε om. B || λάβρος α: λάμβρος C: καρτερὸς B || ἐς: κατὰ CPz || ὀρμημένα CPdz 13. 1 <ἢ> νύξ Schaefer, Stein<sup>3</sup>: νύξ 2 αὐτῶν α || περιπλέειν Bz, van H.

a somewhat improbable sequence. Hdt. says nothing here about the wind, which first makes its appearance on the 'high sea,' in the next chapter, as though the men at Aphetai had not been exposed to it. In this chapter what the Persians suffer from is rain, thunders (and lightnings), and all that at night. The ships apparently were not beached but in the water, otherwise the corpses could hardly have been rolling over round the prows (which slowly move through the mass of wreckage and dead bodies), much less have been interfering with the blades of the oars (τοὺς ταρσοὺς τῶν κωπέων). This description, indeed, suggests rather the position off the Magnesian coast, where the ships spent the night at sea, than the situation at Aphetai, to which the Persians have retired in the previous chapter.

5. οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται οἱ ταύτῃ: a rather mysterious designation: who are 'the soldiers, or fighting men, in the place'? Are they the epibatai of the fleet? Are they the Persians in Malis? Are they a corps of Persians still in Thessaly, and in more immediate touch with the fleet? Whoever they are, they seem to be ashore, while the ships and the oarsmen are still afloat.

6. ἀκούοντες ταῦτα: hearing what? news of the disaster? Or, more directly, the thunder and the rain? the wreckage and the corpses? Or is ἀκούοντες used (like ταῦτα) in a vaguer and more extended reference = perceiving? The disappointment of the day (πολλὸν παρὰ δόξαν ἀγωνισάμενοι c. 11) is followed by a scare, a panic, at night, when they expect (ἐλπίζοντες) to be destroyed utterly, οἱ ἐς τοιαῦτα κακὰ ἦκον, such was the evil plight which had befallen them.

7. ἀναπνεύσαι, to recover breath. ἔκ, out of, after. The attitude here indicated is hardly consistent with the ideas and expectations ascribed to them in c. 10 supra.

9. ὑπέλαβε ναυμαχίῃ καρτερή: so much for the Greek experiment of c. 9. The ἀπόπειρα has become a ν. καρτερή. ὑπολαβεῖν, to succeed, to come on, to overtake; generally of disasters; cp. 6. 27 (bis: λοιμός· ναυμαχίῃ).

10. ὀρμημένα is noticeable, the verb being seldom used in a really passive sense, or of merely inanimate objects.

13. 1. τοῦτοις μὲν: rather vague; hardly to be referred strictly to οἱ στρατιῶται οἱ ταύτῃ above; rather more generally to the whole στρατόπεδον at Aphetai; still more general is the αὐτῶν immediately following (cp. Index).

2. τοῖσι δὲ ταχθεῖσι: cp. c. 7 supra.

ἢ αὐτὴ περ ἑοῦσα νύξ πολλὸν ἦν ἔτι ἀγριωτέρῃ: a somewhat quaint and helpless turn, especially followed by ἐπέπιπτε, all the more as νύξ does not appear to be personified. For ἀχαρίς cp. 7. 190, etc. πῆλαγος is here of great significance; cp. next two notes.

μένοιισι ἐπέπιπτε, καὶ τὸ τέλος σφί ἐγίνετο ἄχαρι. ὥς γὰρ
 5 δὴ πλέουσι αὐτοῖσι χειμῶν τε καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ ἐπεγίνετο εὐοῦσι κατὰ τὰ Κοῖλα τῆς Εὐβοίης, φερόμενοι τῷ πνεύματι καὶ οὐκ εἰδότες τῇ ἐφέροντο ἐξέπιπτον πρὸς τὰς πέτρας· ἐποιέτό τε
 πᾶν ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ὅκως ἂν ἐξισωθῇ τῷ Ἑλληνικῷ τὸ

4 τὸ om. B || ἐγένετο B, Holder

<ὁ> χειμῶν van H. || τὸ om. d

τοῦ om. z || ἐξισωθῇ C || τὸ περιεὶν B, Valla

5 πλώουσι(ν V) B, van H. ||

7 ἐξεφέροντο B || ἐς τὰς S(V)

8

5. χειμῶν τε καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ: 'the rain' is that already described in c. 12; the thunder is apparently not within hearing, but a 'storm' (χειμῶν, πνεῦμα) is blowing on the high seas.

6. κατὰ τὰ Κοῖλα τῆς Εὐβοίης, 'off the Hollows of Euboea'; cp. περί next chapter, when the ships are dashed ashore, and cp. c. 7 supra. As Rawlinson remarks, it is not perfectly certain what exact reach of Euboean coast is denoted by 'the Hollows.' Strabo, 445, makes it the tract between Geraistos and the Euripos: τῆς Εὐβοίας τὰ Κοῖλα λέγουσι τὰ μεταξὺ Αὔλιδος καὶ τῶν περὶ Γεραιστὸν τόπων· κολποῦται γὰρ ἡ παραλία. The statement would have been more convincing if the reason had not been added, for the outer coast of Euboea, facing the high sea, is also hollowed (in contrast, for example, with the Magnesian coast), even if not sculptured into such a remarkable series of bays as the Paralia from Geraistos to Chalkis. The Epitomator of Strabo places the Hollows between Geraistos and Kaphereus, a location preferred by Leake (Demi 247); but the absence of the requisite physical features to justify such a nomenclature is fatal to this identification. Not so the extension of the term to the Paralia between Kaphereus and the promontory Chersonesos—a coast the general trend of which is more truly concave than the line of coast west of Geraistos, which is, in fact, a convex, broken by a series of superficial recesses or cavities. Possibly the term 'Hollows' was applied to the whole of the southern scimitar-shaped section of Euboea, and so ships wrecked on either side might be said to have come to grief on or off the Hollows. But if Strabo is right in restricting the term as above explained, and that not merely for his own day, in that case Hdt. is almost certainly wrong in making the Persian ships pass

Geraistos. They would hardly then have been ἐν πελάγῃ, and to wreck them there we must conjure up an improbable storm from the south or west in the teeth of the Hellespontias and Boreas which have been raging (at most a day or two before) off Pelion. The ships in Hdt. (pace Strabo) must have been wrecked long before they rounded Geraistos, or even Kaphereus, for they are wrecked during the night following the day upon which they have been despatched. As above shown the squadron of 200 sail, detached to circumnavigate Euboea, was really detached from the main fleet off the Magnesian coast on the day or evening before the great storm, and passing 'outside Skiathos' rowed south a whole quiet midsummer's night (7. 188) before being overtaken by the great storm. Hdt. has apparently duplicated the storm, the more easily as the stories there and here are from different sources: his chronology, as well as the causal sequence, being dislocated thereby.

7. ἐποιέτό τε πᾶν ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ, 'everything was being done by the god'—of thunder, rain, and wind; probably Zeus, rather than Boreas, to whom the Athenians had prayed (7. 189), or the Anemoi, or Anemos, invoked by the Hellenes (7. 178).

8. ὅκως ἂν . . εἴη. For the construction cp. ὥς ἂν μὴ ὀφθελήσαν c. 7 supra. The intention of the god was not, however, effected, if we are to credit Hdt. himself, c. 66 infra; in other words, Hdt., at different moments, in different contexts, following different sources, thinks nothing of such self-contradictions or inconsequences. The further question emerges: were the numbers of the Persian fleet at Artemision, at Salamis, after all, very much in excess of the Greek? Perhaps not! as seems hinted, admitted, in this curious passage, even though Herodotus

Περσικὸν μὴδὲ πολλῶ πλέον εἶη. οὗτοι μὲν νυν περὶ τὰ 14
 Κοῖλα τῆς Εὐβοίης διεφθείροντο· οἱ δ' ἐν Ἀφέτῃσι βάρβαροι, ὥς σφι ἀσμένοισι ἡμέρη ἐπέλαμψε, ἀτρέμας τε εἶχον τὰς νέας καὶ σφι ἀπεχρᾶτο κακῶς πρήσσουσι ἡσυχίην ἄγειν ἐν τῷ παρεόντι. τοῖσι δὲ Ἑλλήσι ἐπεβοήθειον νέες πεντήκοντα 5 καὶ τρεῖς Ἀττικάι. αὐταὶ τε δὴ σφεας ἐπέρρωσαν ἀπικό-μεναι καὶ ἅμα ἀγγελίῃ ἐλθοῦσα, ὥς τῶν βαρβάρων οἱ περι-πλέοντες τὴν Εὐβοίαν πάντες εἶσαν διεφθαρμένοι ὑπὸ τοῦ γενομένου χειμῶνος. φυλάξαντες δὲ τὴν αὐτὴν ὥρην, πλέοντες ἐπέπεσον νηυσὶ Κιλίσσησι· ταύτας δὲ διαφθείραντες, ὥς εὐφρόνη 10
 ἐγίνετο, ἀπέπλεον ὀπίσω ἐπὶ τὸ Ἀρτεμίσιον.

14. 2 οἱ δὲ B, Holder 3 ἀτρέμας Bz: ἀτρέμα || τὰς νέας abesse velim 4 ἀπεχρᾶτο Bz: ἀπεχρῆτο ceteri 5 ἐπεβώθειον B, van H.
 || νῆες B || τρεῖς καὶ πεντήκοντα B, Holder, Stein<sup>1</sup> 2, van H. 7 περι-
 πλώοντες B, van H. 9 δὲ α || πλώοντες Bz, van H. 10 ἔπεσον R
 11 ἐγένετο B, Stein<sup>1</sup> || ἀπέπλων Bz, van H.

himself retracts the admission in c. 66. The Deus ex machina, here something of a sporting character, is for making it a fair match twixt Greek and Persian! Verily, a trivial Providence. Hdt. lacks logic, whether that of piety or that of philosophy, and is neither very devout nor rational. Cato, the Stoic, went as far as any man in another direction when he excused his opposition to the motion for a supplicatio in Cicero's honour: such a solemnity would seem to imply (said he) that Mark's victory was more Heaven's doing than his own: a simple vote of thanks puts the human hero in his proper place; Cicero, Epp. ad F. 15. 5.

14. 3. ἀσμένοισι ἡμέρη ἐπέλαμψε: on the construction cp. c. 10 supra. This day is the 'second' of the triduum—say Monday. The present in κακῶς πρήσσουσι is a little remarkable, but may denote the effects of the defeat on the previous day, and the inconveniences and terrors of the past night.

5. ἐπεβοήθειον νέες . . Ἀττικάι. With these 53 ships the Attic squadron is raised to 180, or even 200 sail. It is natural to surmise that this detachment had been holding the Euripos, whether left there by the main fleet on its way north or sent back to bar the channel, as the result of deliberations at Artemision (cp. c. 4 supra). Nor need we suppose that Chalkis was left entirely without guardships; perhaps the twenty vessels manned by the Chalkidians (c. 1 supra) were there all the time.

7. ἅμα ἀγγελίῃ ἐλθοῦσα: the adverb qualifies ἐπέρρωσαν rather than ἐλθοῦσα: Hdt. plainly does not suspect that just the Attic reinforcement brought the good news from Chalkis, or Geraistos, to Artemision. Nor could it have done so, if the Persian ships had been wrecked on the south-west coast of Euboea the night before; the news could hardly have travelled so far and fast. Hdt. marks a coincidence—the arrival of this message so early confirms the view that the Persian squadron of 200 had been wrecked off the east coast of Euboea. But is the message correctly dated? Was it on the second day of the fighting that the Greeks learnt of this fresh disaster to the Persians? Had not the wreck occurred three days ago? Had Skyllias already brought the news? Cp. c. 8 supra.

8. ὑπὸ τοῦ γενομένου χειμῶνος. Though Hdt. speaks, or seems to speak, in 7. 192 of the storm off the Magnesian coast as ὁ χειμῶν ὁ πρῶτος, he nowhere speaks of the storm off Euboea as ὁ χειμῶν ὁ δεύτερος. But cp. note ad l.c.

9. φυλάξαντες δὲ τὴν αὐτὴν ὥρην: cp. c. 9 supra δέλην ὀψίην γενομένην τῆς ἡμέρης φυλάξαντες. The use of the word ὥρη here comes very near to our 'hour'; not as τῆς ὥρης c. 12 supra. But why the Greeks, reinforced and encouraged, after a victory too the previous day,

- 15 Τρίτῃ δὲ ἡμέρῃ δεινὸν τι ποιησάμενοι οἱ στρατηγοὶ τῶν βαρβάρων νέας οὕτω σφι ὀλίγας λυμáινεσθαι, καὶ τὸ ἀπὸ Ξέρῳ δειμαίνοντες, οὐκ ἀνέμειναν ἔτι τοὺς Ἕλληνας μάχης ἄρξαι, ἀλλὰ παρακελευσάμενοι κατὰ μέσον ἡμέρης ἀνήγον τὰς νέας. συνέπιπτε δὲ ὥστε τὰς αὐτὰς ἡμέρας τὰς τε ναυμαχίας γίνεσθαι ταύτας καὶ τὰς πεζομαχίας τὰς ἐν Θερμοπύλῃσι. ἦν δὲ πᾶς ὁ ἀγὼν τοῖσι κατὰ θάλασσαν περὶ τοῦ Εὐρίπου, ὥσπερ τοῖσι ἀμφὶ Λεωνίδα τὴν ἐσβολὴν φυλάσσειν. οἱ μὲν δὴ παρεκελεύοντο ὅπως μὴ παρήσουσι ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα τοὺς

15. 1 τι: τε? Kallenberg 2 νῆας B || σφέας B 4 παρασκευσάμενοι B || ἀνήγαγον τὰς νῆας B 5 τὰς αὐτὰς ταύτας ἡμέρας (R, Stein!) B: (τὰς αὐτὰς ἡμέρας R, Stein<sup>2</sup>): ταῖς αὐταῖς ἡμέραις α etc. probante
Cobet || τε om. α 8 λεωνίδα Bp 9 παρήσωσι(ν V) B

should have waited again until late afternoon before delivering an attack, is not clear. Possibly the 'Kilikian' vessels (100 strong originally, 7. 91), on which they 'fell,' were only now coming to Aphetai for the first time.

15. 1. τρίτῃ δὲ ἡμέρῃ, 'on the third day' (say Tuesday); the article omitted with the ordinal. δεινὸν ποιέσθαι: cp. 7. 1. τι, if correct, aggravates δεινόν.

οἱ στρατηγοί: Achaimenes, Aria-bignes, Prexaspes, Megabazos; cp. 7. 97, 236. But who was in command of the flying squadron?

2. τὸ ἀπὸ Ξέρῳ: an admirable vagueness invests the phrase with all the more serious possibilities. But they were probably acting under the king's orders.

3. ἔτι: any further, as on the two days previous, when the Greeks had been left to take the initiative; a fact which supports the view that the real assault on Thermopylai was postponed till 'the third day'; and that the two engagements at sea, on the first and on the second afternoons, were little more than manoeuvres, by which the Greeks cut off straggling or belated squadrons of the Persian fleet. With the news of the wreck of the 200 vessels off Euboia the Persian admirals were driven to attempt a frontal attack. They opened, about the time when Hydarnes was descending the mountain, upon 'the Middle Gate' at Thermopylai; cp. 7. 225.

4. On μέσον ἡμέρης cp. c. 23 infra.

5. συνέπιπτε δὲ ὥστε κτλ. Hdt. apparently treats this essential synchronism as purely fortuitous. He follows up this oversight by the misconception that the whole and sole object of the Greek fleet was to defend the Euripos, as that of Leonidas was making it possible, yea, necessary, for the fleet to remain at Artemision. On which of the two correlated points the Greeks desired the more stress to be laid is a further question, less easy of solution; perhaps they were not quite at one on this matter. So much is clear, that a really decisive victory off Artemision might have saved Thermopylai and Athens to boot. On the first two days, according to their own account, the Greek sea-dogs assumed the offensive (though late in the afternoon!), and won two victories; but on the third day, when the Persian admirals are earlier on the move, it is the turn of the Greeks ἀπρέμας εἶχειν. The manoeuvres of this day reproduce to a great extent the manoeuvres reported c. 11 supra of the first engagement (ναυμαχίῃ καρτέρῃ), or, more probably, the really severe engagement on the third day has been discounted and transferred, in maiorem gloriam Atheniensium, to the first.

9. παρεκελεύοντο: there is a παρακλήσις on each side, marking this day's engagement as the climax and the chief battle. Is a set speech (παράλυσις) or mere casual exhortation to be understood?

ὅπως μὴ παρήσουσι seems rather to introduce the purpose or result of the appeals than their actual contents or substance, which the infinitive (with-

βαρβάρους, οἳ δ' ὅκως τὸ Ἑλληνικὸν στράτευμα διαφθείραντες 10 τοῦ πόρου κρατήσουσι. ὥς δὲ ταξάμενοι οἱ Ξέρξεω ἐπέπλεον, 16 οἱ Ἕλληνες ἀτρέμας εἶχον πρὸς τῷ Ἀρτεμισίῳ. οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι μνησιδὲς ποιήσαντες τῶν νεῶν ἐκυκλοῦντο, ὥς περιλάβοιεν αὐτούς. ἐνθεύτεν οἱ Ἕλληνες ἐπανεπλεόν τε καὶ συνέμισγον. ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ ναυμαχίῃ παραπλήσιοι ἀλλήλοισι 5 ἐγίνοντο. ὁ γὰρ Ξέρξεω στρατὸς ὑπὸ μεγάλῃς τε καὶ πλήθους αὐτὸς ὑπ' ἑωυτοῦ ἐπιπτε, ταρασσομένῃν τε τῶν νεῶν καὶ περιπιπτουσέων περὶ ἀλλήλας· ὅμως μέντοι ἀντείχε καὶ οὐκ εἶκε· δεινὸν γὰρ χρήμα ἐποιοῦντο ὑπὸ νεῶν ὀλίγων ἐς φυγὴν τράπεσθαι. πολλοὶ μὲν δὴ τῶν Ἑλλήνων νέες διεφθείροντο 10 πολλοὶ δὲ ἄνδρες, πολλῶ δ' ἔτι πλεῦνες νέες τε τῶν βαρβάρων καὶ ἄνδρες. οὕτω δὲ ἀγωνιζόμενοι διέστησαν χωρὶς ἑκάτεροι. ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ ναυμαχίῃ Αἰγύπτιοι μὲν τῶν Ξέρξεω στρατιωτέων 17

10 δὲ β 11 κρατήσουσι P: κρατήσωσι(ν S) reliqui 16. 1 ἐπέ-
πλων β 3 νηῶν β || ἐκυκλοῦντο Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: ἐκυκλεύοντο Reiske, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder: ἐκυκλέοντο β: ἐκυκλεύοντο α etc. 5 συνέμισγον Α
6 ἐγίνοντο β 7 ταρασσομένων Ad: παρατασσομένων β || νηῶν β
9 χρήμα del. van H. || ἐποιοῦντο β P 2 || ὀλίγων codd. z, Holder, van H. ||
φυγεῖν β 10 τράπεσθαι codd. z || νέες om. A<sup>1</sup>: νῆες β 11
δὲ: τε β 12 ἀγωνιζόμενοι Schweighaeuser, van H.

out the final conjunction) might express; cp. App. Crit. Most mss. have κρατήσωσι infra.

11. τοῦ πόρου here clearly means the actual waterway; cp. 7. 36.

16. 1. ταξάμενοι, 'having put themselves in battle-array.' οἱ Ξέρξεω (unconsciously) suggests the presence of his majesty, who thus preserves in this, as in the previous chapter, the sovran power and command.

3. μνησιδὲς . . ἐκυκλοῦντο: cp. c. 10 supra ἐκυκλοῦντο αὐτοὺς ἐς μέσον. The manœuvres are apparently identical.

4. ἐπανεπλεόν: just as on the first day (c. 9 supra), after all, without waiting to be actually attacked; cp. c. 11 supra.

5. παραπλήσιοι ἀλλήλοισι ἐγίνοντο. This phrase cannot mean that the Greeks and Persians had equal forces engaged (as a result of the efforts of the Deus ex machina of c. 13 supra), for Hdt. goes on at once to admit that μέγας and πλῆθος were both conspicuous on the side of the king's fleet (στρατός). But if the forces were still unequal, 'they came to be on an equality,' because the μέγας and the πλῆθος turned rather to the disadvantage of the barbarians, as Hdt. explains. The obvious tendency of the passage is apologetic, and apologetic in the Greek interest, for in view of their derring deeds of the two previous days (and, it might be added, in view of the sequel at Salamis), surely a crowning victory was now to have been expected. No such victory could be claimed for Artemision; but with great subtilty the argument is converted into an explanation of the failure of the larger and more numerous force to effect the complete discomfiture of the smaller! (This view seems better than to see in this passage the intention of an Asiatic source to explain the failure of the king's fleet.)

7. αὐτὸς ὑπ' ἑωυτοῦ ἐπιπτε: a formula afterwards enlarged and converted into the chief rationale of the Persian failure in the whole war; cp. Thucyd. 1. 69. 5.

8. ἀντείχε καὶ οὐκ εἶκε: an unfortunate jingle. δεινὸν χρήμα ἐποιοῦντο: cp. c. 15 supra. The plain truth is that the Persian fleet did not give way, notwithstanding its cumbrous size and numbers, but inflicted very heavy losses upon the Greek. The tense in ἀγωνιζόμενοι is remarkable; cp. πρήσσονσι in c. 14, and App. Crit. χωρὶς is pleonastic.

17. 1. Αἰγύπτιοι. It is curious that

- ἤριστευσαν, οἱ ἄλλα τε μεγάλα ἔργα ἀπεδέξαντο καὶ νέας αὐτοῖσι ἀνδράσι εἶλον Ἑλληνίδας πέντε. τῶν δὲ Ἑλλήνων κατὰ ταύτην τὴν ἡμέρην ἤριστευσαν Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ Ἀθηναίων
 5 Κλεινίης ὁ Ἀλκιβιάδew, ὃς δαπάνην οἰκίην παρεχόμενος ἐστρατεύετο ἀνδράσι τε διηκοσίοισι καὶ οἰκίῃ νηί.
 18 Ὡς δὲ διέστησαν, ἄσμενοι ἐκάτεροι ἐς ὄρμον ἠπείγοντο.

17. 2 ἔργα μεγάλα B, Holder, van H. || νῆας B
 οἰκίην C 18. 1 οἱ δὲ ὡς διέσταναν B

5 κλεινίας α ||

the 'Egyptians' of all peoples should most have distinguished themselves in a sea-fight: perhaps the Egyptian Aristeia was a compliment to their Persian admiral Achaimenes (cp. 7. 236), or that special account was taken of their prejudices and inexperience! Diodoros 11. 13. 2 awards the prize (with more probability) to the Sidonians (perhaps from Hdt. 7. 44).

στρατιωτῶν: cp. c. 12 supra. The five ships taken, men and all (αὐτοῖσι ἀνδράσι), were presumably not Athenian, notwithstanding c. 10 supra, or the Athenians could hardly have obtained the ἀριστεία on this day among the Greeks. Cp. Plutarch de malig. Hdti. 34 = Mor. 867 ὁ μὲν Πινδαρος, οὐκ ὦν συμμαχῶν πόλεως, ἀλλὰ μῆδιζεν αἰτίαν ἐχούσης, δμως τοῦ Ἀρτεμισίου μνησθεὶς ἐπιπεφώνηκεν, ὅθι παῖδες Ἀθηναίων ἐβάλλοντο φαεννὰν κρηπῖδ' ἑλευθερίας. There are three other citations of the same Pindaric laud in Plutarch's works, viz. Themist. 8; de glor. Ath. 7 = Mor. 350; de s. num. v. 6 = Mor. 552 c.

5. Κλεινίης ὁ Ἀλκιβιάδew. This Kleinias, son of Alkibiades, is, of course, the father of that better known Alkibiades, the pupil of Sokrates, and the author of so much woe to Athens from 421 B.C. onwards. The name 'Alkibiades' is probably rather a Spartan than an Athenian favourite (cp. Thuc. 8. 6. 3), and the elder Alkibiades, a member of the great clan of the Eurysakidai (Petersen, Hist. Gent. Att. 1880, p. 126), or rather of the Εὐπατρίδαι (cp. Toepffer, Attische Genealogie, 1889, pp. 175 ff.), had been at one time Spartan πρόξενος in Athens, but had renounced the office (Thuc. 5. 43. 2), perhaps in consequence of his relations with Kleisthenes and the Alkmaionidai, a daughter of which house, Deinarete by name, he espoused, Alkibiades the younger, their offspring, being thus related to Perikles the son of Agariste (6. 131) on the spindle side. The elder Alkibiades had probably (with Aristides, Xanthippos, and others) opposed the naval policy of Themistokles, and had suffered ostracism (see Appendix III. § 4), but, if still alive, would have returned with Aristides (cp. c. 79 infra): that his son Kleinias here defrays the expenses, and more than all the expenses of a τριηραρχία, seems to show that the father was no longer alive in 480 B.C. (or that the son had an independent fortune!). A further question arises whether the said Kleinias was alive or dead when this passage was written by Hdt. But alas! this passage is consistent with either alternative, and cannot be used as conclusive of the date of composition. Kleinias fell in the disastrous battle of Koroneia in 447 B.C. (Plutarch, Alkib. 1), and the fact that his death is not here mentioned might be taken to prove that this passage was originally written during his lifetime (cp. per contra the case of Sophanes 9. 75); but, on the other hand, (i.) this record might well have been taken from a sepulchral monument; (ii.) the disaster at Koroneia might better be passed over in silence; (iii.) Hdt. might easily have inserted a reference, had he wished to do so, in the final revision of his work; (iv.) he has not always recorded the deaths of eminent men, his dramatis personae, e.g. Aristides, Themistokles, Xanthippos, and others.

δαπάνην οἰκίην: οἰκίῃ νηί: cp. 5. 47 for a parallel instance. At Athens, in Hdt.'s time, the state provided the 'trierarch' with the hull, mast, pay and rations for the men. On the trierarchy cp. Appendix III. § 4.

18. 1. διέστησαν: without the superfluous χωρίς of c. 17 supra. This day had begun, as it ends, with joy, on both sides! cp. c. 14 supra. Stein cps.

οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες ὡς διακριθέντες ἐκ τῆς ναυμαχίης ἀπηλάχθησαν, τῶν μὲν νεκρῶν καὶ τῶν ναυηγίων ἐπεκράτεον, τρηχέως δὲ περιεφθίντες, καὶ οὐκ ἤκιστα Ἀθηναῖοι τῶν αἰήμίσειαι τῶν νεῶν τετρωμέναι ἦσαν, δρησμὸν δὲ ἐβούλευον ἔσω εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα. νόφ δὲ λαβὼν ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς ὡς εἰ 19

2 ἀπαλλάχθησαν? van H. 3 ναυγίων R: ναυηγίων S: ναυηγίων V 4 τρηχέως R: τρήχεως V 5 αἰήμειαι z: αἰήμειαι αPd: αἰήμειαι C: αἰήμειαι B || νηῶν RS(V) || ἐβουλεύοντο Cdz, van H.
19. 1 ὁ om. B, Holder

Od. 9. 62 f. ἐνθεν δὲ προτέρω πλέομεν ἀκαχήμενοι ἦτορ, ἄσμενοι ἐκ θανάτοιο, φίλους δόσαντες ἐταίρους.

2. διακριθέντες. The verb διακρίνειν is used of the physical separation of combatants in all three voices (Homer); cp. also Thuc. 1. 105. 5 μάχης γενομένης ἰσορροπῶν . . . διεκρίθησαν ἀπ' ἀλλήλων. (So in 3. 11. 2 of voluntary separation, secession, of allies.)

3. τῶν μὲν νεκρῶν καὶ τῶν ναυηγίων ἐπεκράτεον has a suggestion of victory about it, but probably is to be explained by the turn of the tide; cp. c. 12 supra. (May it be assumed that they buried the dead?)

4. τρηχέως δὲ περιεφθίντες: cp. 5. 1. It is admitted that the Greeks had been very roughly handled in this naumachy; and perhaps the Athenians, to whom the Aristeia were awarded, had borne the brunt of the fray; but that "the half of their ships" (nigh one hundred) were damaged must surely be an exaggeration, in view of their subsequent condition at Salamis. True, they may have had further vessels in reserve, and they had some time to refit before Salamis; but most probably the τραύματα were of every variety, and the half of the ships were only 'more or less' damaged. τετρωμέναι ἦσαν seems to give a somewhat different meaning to ἐτέρωοντο, the ἦσαν not being a mere auxiliary; the ships were there still, though in a damaged condition (τετρωσκειν of ships, Thuc. 4. 14. 1).

5. δρησμὸν δὲ ἐβούλευον: this would be for the third time, if we could trust c. 4 supra and 7. 182. Placed here the statement amounts to a confession of defeat; but it is even yet hardly credible, before the arrival of the bad news from Thermopylai, after which, indeed, there was no further room for debate or delay; cp. c. 21 infra.

19. 1. νόφ δὲ λαβὼν: the dative may be 'instrumental' or even 'locative'; the verb, which denotes physical action (9. 22, 119 etc.), may also denote a psychological act; cp. 9. 10 (6. 137, 4. 79).

ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς. The article may be taken to refer back to the occurrence of the name in c. 4 supra; cp. also c. 5. This fresh anecdote is less discreditable but hardly more credible, at least in its details and surroundings, than the other. Themistokles here assumes an initiative which belongs to Eurybiades (cp. c. 2 supra). Moreover, he summons the Strategoi to a council, when a council is already sitting (ἐβούλευον just above, cp. c. 21 infra). Further, he treats the question of retreat as settled, though that is just the question at issue—or rather, we may say, though Themistokles cannot have dreamt of retreat, so long as Leonidas held out; nor is it likely that Eurybiades and the Peloponnesian admirals committed themselves blindly to Themistokles. In the speech put into the Athenian's mouth two or three different devices with different objects are confusedly combined, and there is a suggestion of deceit and unscrupulousness imparted to the words and acts of Themistokles, quite in the style of the partisan legend. But that there is something historical at the back of this anecdote is likely enough. After retreat became inevitable, Themistokles and the Athenians perhaps volunteered, or were detailed, to cover the retreat (cp. c. 21). All along Themistokles (and the Athenians) will have been hoping and planning to detach the Ionians from the king's forces, perhaps to foment a new Ionian 'Revolt'; and Themistokles may have made or left appeals, addressed to the Ionians, behind him at Artemision (cp. c. 22 infra). The treatment of the Euboeians and their flocks requires no justification; but the fires were not, we may suppose, merely sacrificial or ἀπορραγείη ἀπὸ τοῦ βαρβάρου τό τε Ἴωνικὸν [φῦλον] καὶ τὸ Καρικόν, οἳ τε εἶσαν <ἀν> τῶν λοιπῶν κατύπερθε γενέσθαι, ἐλαυνόντων τῶν Εὐβοέων πρόβατα ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν ταύτην,

5 συλλέξας τοὺς στρατηγούς ἔλεγέ σφι ὥς δοκέει ἔχειν τινὰ παλάμην, τῇ ἐλπίζου τῶν βασιλέως συμμάχων ἀποστήσειν τοὺς ἀρίστους. ταῦτα μὲν νυν ἐς τοσοῦτο παρεγύμνου, ἐπὶ

2 βαρβαρικοῦ z || φῦλον secl. Stein<sup>3</sup>: post Καρικὸν transt. z 3
ἦσαν C || ἀν add. Werfer, Stein<sup>2</sup> || γίνεσθαι α, Stein<sup>1</sup> 4 cf. comment.
infra || θάλασσαν, ταύτη B, Valla, Holder, edd. plerique: ταύτην del. van H.
6 ἐλπίζει Pdz || βασιλέως C: βασιλῆος z 7 τοσοῦτον B culinary, but intended to deceive the Persians into the belief that the Greeks were still encamped at Artemision long after they had cleared out: a common stratagem (cp. Livy 22. 43. 6).

2. τοῦ βαρβάρου Baehr takes as masculine, and refers to the king; Stein, more subtly, as neuter, while admitting that the Attic form would be βαρβαρικοῦ, which is actually read; cp. App. Crit.

τό τε Ἴωνικὸν [φῦλον] καὶ τὸ Καρικόν: including doubtless the Dorians in Karia, and the neighbouring islands, whom, however, Hdt. does not specify. When Themistokles is represented as calling the Ionio-Karian contingent τῶν βασιλέως συμμάχων τοὺς ἀρίστους, he is made to use language which represents neither the Persian nor the Herodotean view; cp. below.

3. τῶν λοιπῶν κατύπερθε γενέσθαι: the two latter words = κρατῆσαι, cp. cc. 60, 75, 136 etc. The Greek contingents in the Persian fleet amounted all told to some 400 (407) vessels, according to the navy-list in Bk. 7. 89 ff.; the Ionio-Karian (+Dorian) in the stricter sense to exactly 200. Ariabignes was admiral of this squadron, but whether the Ionio-Karian division strictly corresponded to its title may be questioned. In either case the detachment of these contingents, especially after the losses of the king's fleet in the storm, or storms, would be a very serious blow. Baehr maintains that ἀν is not necessary in this apodosis.

4. ἐλαυνόντων τῶν Εὐβοέων πρόβατα, as usual; but what the practice, or the phrase, has to say to the context here is anything but obvious. The fate of the sheep has nothing to do with the Ionian question, or the device for detaching the Ionians from the king's fleet. Is it possible that the whole line is a mere gloss, which has made its way into the text, and at an absurd point? It would come in more logically after ἐλεγέ σφι ὥς below, or after ἐλεγε in l. 8.

5. συλλέξας τοὺς στρατηγούς: Themistokles could not do that; and they were already collected in council. Hdt. has apparently 'contaminated' two or three different anecdotes: (1) the appeal to the Ionians; (2) the provisioning of the fleet at the expense of the Euboians; (3) the ruse by which the Persians were led to believe that the Greek fleet was still at its moorings, and the soldiers still ashore at Artemision.

6. παλάμην = τέχνην, Suidas sub v. The word is Homeric, but not in that meaning, which is, however, frequent in Pindar; e.g. Ol. 13. 52 Σίσυφον μὲν πυκνότατον παλάμης ὥς θεόν. Cp. Aristophanes, Wasps 644 f. δεῖ δὲ σε παντοίας πλέκειν εἰς ἀπόφυξιν παλάμας. The word is especially appropriate on the lips of Themistokles, a veritable Palamedes.

συμμάχων . . τοὺς ἀρίστους: they are involuntary σύμμαχοι, but the word is used, perhaps, less in the derivative sense, of allies, than in the literal sense, of co-fighters; 'the most valiant' they could scarce be truly called among the king's fighting men (have not the Egyptians just gained the Aristeia? c. 17 supra); perhaps there is a slight Herodotean irony in the use of the term here.

7. ἐς τοσοῦτο παρεγύμνου, 'so much, and no more, he revealed' of his plan; cp. 5. 50, 7. 99. With παρεγύμνου cp. 1. 126 ὁ Κύρος παρεγύμνου τὸν πάντα λόγον.

ἐπὶ τοῖσι κατήκουσι πρήγμασι: pro praesenti rerum statu, Baehr. Cp. 5. 49.

δὲ τοῖσι κατήκουσι πρήγμασι τάδε ποιητέα σφί εἶναι ἔλεγε, τῶν τε προβάτων τῶν Εὐβοϊκῶν καταθύνει ὅσα τις ἐθέλοι· κρέσσον γὰρ εἶναι τὴν <σφετέρην> στρατιὴν ἔχειν ἢ τοὺς 10 πολεμίους· παραίνεε τε προειπεῖν τοῖσι ἐωυτῶν ἐκάστους πυρὰ ἀνακαίειν· κομιδῆς δὲ περί τὴν ὥρην αὐτῷ μελήσειν, ὥστε ἄσινεας ἀπικέσθαι ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα. ταῦτα ἤρεσέ σφι ποιέειν, καὶ αὐτίκα πυρὰ ἀνακαυσάμενοι ἐτράποντο πρὸς τὰ πρόβατα. οἱ γὰρ Εὐβοέες, παραχρησάμενοι τὸν Βάκιδος 20 χρησμὸν ὡς οὐδὲν λέγοντα, οὔτε τι ἐξεκομίσαντο οὐδὲν οὔτε προσεσάξαντο ὡς παρεσομένου σφί πολέμου, περιπετέα τε

8 τῇσι B || εἶναι σφί(ν V) B: 'an σφί delendum?' Kallenberg 9
εὐβοικῶν CPz || καταθύνει post ἐθέλοι z || θέλοι B 10 <σφετέρην>
Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 3 11 ἐωυτοῦ ἔκαστον Cobet, van H. || ἐκάστους C 12
πυρὰ Cobet, Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 3: πῦρ codd., Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H.: πυρὴν z || αὐτῶν C
13 ἐς: ἐπὶ z 14 πυρὰ Cobet, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: πῦρ || καυσόμενοι B || ἐτράποντο a 20. totum caput suspectum habeo 2 οὔτ'
ἐξεκομίσαντο Bz, Holder: οὔτε ἐξεκομίσαντο P, van H. || οὐδὲν alterum delendum vid. nisi τι potius omiseris, aut saltem post προσεσάξαντο transposueris 3 προσάξαντο Bz, Holder, van H.: προεφυλάξαντο Naber

9. καταθύνει: no doubt the sacrifice was to be followed by a feast; the animals were to be eaten by the fleet. Themistokles did not expect his men to fight on an empty stomach.

11. παραίνεε τε . . πυρὰ ἀνακαίειν: there seems to be some confusion between the fires for burning, or roasting, the meat, and fires left burning, after the retreat of the Greeks, in order to deceive the enemy. It is not likely that the Greeks postponed seizing the sheep until the moment of their departure.

12. κομιδῆς δὲ περί: this sentence treats the resolution to retreat as already taken, at least by Themistokles. It could not have been so, before the disaster at Thermopylai was known.

τὴν ὥρην: cp. c. 14 supra.

20. 1. οἱ γὰρ Εὐβοέες: Blakesley endorses Schweighauser's observation that the proper place for c. 20 is immediately after c. 4 supra; but the displacement may be as old as Hdt.'s own composition. In which case, or otherwise, the connexion seems to be that, à propos des montons, the question arises: how did it happen that the sheep were there to be looted after that fashion? Why, because the Euboians had made no preparations for the war, and that although there was an oracle of Bakis to warn them. But the authenticity of this chapter is not above suspicion.

παραχρησάμενοι τὸν Βάκιδος χρησμὸν: παραχρᾶσθαι as in 4. 159, 1. 108; cp. 2. 141 τὸν ἐν ἀλογίῃσι ἔχειν παραχρησάμενον τῶν μαχίμων, and 4. 150 ἀλογίην εἶχον τοῦ χρησμηρίου. The word as used in 7. 223 has a further application. Bákis may be connected with βάζειν, βακ- to say, speak, though the verb βακίζειν in Aristophanes Peace 1072 is no doubt formed from the proper name. The word Βάκιδες is associated with Σιβύλλαι by Aristotle, Probl. 30. 1 = 954 A, in such a way as to suggest that the ancients themselves regarded the name rather as a generic term than as a proper name; but there were two or three Βάκιδες of especial fame, to whom the title was successively appropriated, a Boiotian, an Attic, an Arkadian. (Cp. Pauly-Wissowa ii. 2802.) It is probably the Boiotian of Eleon (cp. 5. 43) that Hdt. believes himself to be quoting here, and in cc. 77, 96 infra, and 9. 43. Special collections of oracles of Bakis, of Músaioi (cp. 7. 6), and others, had come much into fashion in the seventh and sixth centuries B.C. with the development, or revival, of mysteries, orgies, and other religious consolations; cp. E. Rhode, Psyche (1894), pp. 351 ff.; J. B. Bury, Hist. of Greece, i. (1902) 335.

3. προσεσάξαντο: cp. 5. 34, 1. 190. The v.l. προεσάξαντο, from προσάπτειν, is preferred also by Baehr and Sitzler.

ἐποιήσαντο σφίσι αὐτοὶ τὰ πρήγματα. Βάκιδι γὰρ ὧδε ἔχει 5 περὶ τούτων ὁ χρησμός.

φράζω, βαρβαρόφωνος ὅταν ζυγὸν εἰς ἄλλα βάλλῃ βύβλινον, Εὐβοίης ἀπέχειν πολυμηκάδας αἶγας.

τούτοις οὐδὲν τοῖσι ἔπεισι χρησαμένοις ἐν τοῖσι τότε παροῦσι τε καὶ προσδοκίμοις κακοῖσι παρὴν σφί συμφορῇ χρᾶσθαι 10 πρὸς τὰ μέγιστα.

21 Οἱ μὲν δὴ ταῦτα ἔπρησσαν, παρὴν δὲ ὁ ἐκ Τρηχίνος κατάσκοπος. ἦν μὲν γὰρ ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ κατάσκοπος Πολύας, γένος Ἀντικυρεὺς, τῷ προστετάκτο, καὶ εἶχε πλοῖον κατῆρες ἔτοιμον, εἰ παλήσειε ὁ ναυτικὸς στρατός, σημαίνειν τοῖσι ἐν

4 αὐτοὶ Stein<sup>3</sup>: αὐτοῖσι 6 βαρβαρόφωνος Valla (barbaricus):
βαρβαρόφωνον || ὅτ' ἂν A: ἐστὼν B || ἄλλα B 7 βύβλινον B || πολὺ μηκάδας SV, van H. 8 τούτοις δὲ B, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder: 'an τούτοις δὴ!' van H. 9 χρῆσθαι α 10 πρὸς: ἐς van H. 21. 4
ἔτοιμον CPd<sup>2</sup>, van H.: del. Bekker || παλήσειεν B: παλαίσειεν C: ἀπελάσειεν Valla (discessisset): τι πταίσει Valckenaer

περιπετία τε ἐποιήσαντο . . τὰ πρήγματα: sed res suas ipsi in summum discrimen adduxerunt, Schweig. followed by Baehr. περιπετία is used literally of 'falling round' or upon an object (cp.
Soph. Ant. 907, Ant. 1223); metaphorically, of 'falling in with' evil or misfortune. It may be used here with the further suggestion of a sudden change or reverse of fortune; but that seems unnecessary. Rather the word here appears to come short of its fuller force, inasmuch as danger rather than actual disaster appears indicated. At any rate (as Stein observes), except for the sack of Histiaeotis c. 23 infra, the Euboians are not recorded to have suffered; the Persian fleet made straight from Histiaia to Phaleron, c. 66 infra. The Euboians, indeed, appear to have suffered almost as much from their friends as from their enemies.

6. ὅταν ζυγὸν εἰς ἄλλα βάλλῃ βύβλινον appears to be a clear reference to the bridging of the sea (Hellespont); cp. 7.
25, 34, 36; though it might conceivably refer merely to the employment of byblos-hawsers for ordinary marine or naval purposes. Cp. c. 77 infra.

7. πολυμηκάς appears to be an ἀπαξ
λέγ.

8. τούτοις οὐδὲν τοῖσι ἔπεισι χρησαμένοις, οὐδὲν χρησαμένοις means
'after utterly neglecting, disregarding';
cp. 5. 72 τῇ κληθδονὶ οὐδὲν χρεώμενος.
The personal subject is supplied by σφί.

This short sentence is a clumsy and inelegant one; there are ten words in the dative in four different constructions:
τούτοις might be masculine, but for the belated σφί; χρησαμένοις followed by χρᾶσθαι and παροῦσι followed by παρὴν, and παρὴν again by παρὴν in the next line (c. 21), are stylistic abortions; in short, with the wry setting of the chapter, and other peculiarities, doubts
as to its authenticity are legitimate.

21. 1. ἔπρησσαν Stein takes = ἐπόλεον
(cp. 4. 145), Sitzler as = ἐπαθον (sic). It refers back to ταῦτα ἤρεσέ σφί ποιεῖν
c. 19 supra. The μὲν and δὲ here almost constitute a parataxis.

ὁ ἐκ Τρηχίνος κατάσκοπος: the article is explained by what follows.
That the scout, or aide-de-camp, is described as ἐκ Τρηχίνος, a place apparently in the hands of Xerxes, is observable, but may be explained by 7. 176, where ἡ διὰ Τρηχίνος ἑσόδος is apparently used for the pass of Thermo-pylai, though it probably should have denoted a different one; cp. note ad l.c.

2. Πολύας γένος Ἀντικυρεὺς. The man's name seems to be unique. On Antikyra cp. 7. 198, 213. Polyas was presumably from the Malian city.

3. πλοῖον κατῆρες, a boat fitted, or well-fitted with oars; κατῆρες perhaps = ἐτήρης. The same stem is seen in τριήρης etc. Cp. note to 7. 36.

4. παλήσειε: apparently from a verb
παλέω, the Ionic form of παλαίω (πάλη),

Θερμοπύλῃσι ἐοῦσι· ὥς δ' αὐτως ἦν Ἀβρώνυχος ὁ Λυσικλέος 5 Ἀθηναῖος καὶ παρὰ Λεωνίδῃ ἔτοιμος τοῖσι ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ ἐοῦσι ἀγγέλλειν τριηκοντέρῳ, ἦν τι καταλαμβάνη νεώτερον τὸν πεζόν. οὗτος ὦν ὁ Ἀβρώνυχος ἀπικόμενός σφι ἐσήμαινε τὰ γεγονότα περὶ Λεωνίδην καὶ τὸν στρατὸν αὐτοῦ. οἱ δὲ ὥς ἐπύθοντο ταῦτα, οὐκέτι ἐς ἀναβολὰς ἐποιεῦντο τὴν ἀποχώρησιν, 10 ἐκομίζοντο δὲ ὥς ἕκαστοι ἐτάχθησαν, Κορίνθιοι πρῶτοι, ὕστατοι δὲ Ἀθηναῖοι. Ἀθηναίων δὲ νέας τὰς ἄριστα πλεούσας ἐπῆλε- 22
 ξάμενος Θεμιστοκλῆς ἐπορεύετο περὶ τὰ πότιμα ὕδατα,

5 ὡς AB: ὥς Pdz || ἀβρόνυχος B: ἀβρόνυχος d: Αβρώνυχος z
 6 λεωνίδην S || ἐτοῖμος CPdz, van H. 8 ἀβρόνυχος d: Αβρώνυχος z
 || ἐσήμηνε B 9 λεωνίδεα Bz || <τε> καὶ? Kallenberg 10 οὐκ
 ἐς ἀμβολὰς Cobet || ἐποιεῦντο BPz 11 Κορίνθιοι <μέν>? Stein<sup>2</sup>
 22. 1 νῆας B || πλωούσας Bz

to wrestle, to engage; here obviously a euphemism for 'succumb' or 'encounter a fall.' Hesychius has the gloss παλήσειε· διαφθείρει (διαφθαρείη Valckenaer). The emendation of the Herodotean text (cp. App. Crit.) is hardly necessary, but Baehr's note is worth consulting.

5. ὥς δ' αὐτως: as in 9. 81 et al.

Ἀβρώνυχος ὁ Λυσικλέος: the same man, doubtless, who reappears in the winter of 479-8 B.C. as colleague of Themistokles and Aristides in the embassy to Sparta about the fortification of Athens; Thuc. 1. 91. 3. Lysikles was a not uncommon name at Athens; the man here mentioned might be conceivably the grandfather of the well-known Lysikles, who belonged apparently to the entourage of Perikles; cp. Thuc. 3. 19. 1; Aristoph. Knights 765; Plutarch, Perikl. 24.

7. τριηκοντέρῳ: a galley with thirty oars; probably a distinction, without a difference, from πλοῖον κατῆρες supra.

ἦν τι καταλαμβάνη νεώτερον: νεώτερον is a familiar euphemism; καταλ., cp. c. 6 supra; but here with a suggestion of evil. Cp. ei palḗσειe supra, and for an inverse change of construction cp. 9. 48.

8. τὰ γεγονότα: a strict temporal pluperfect; περὶ, 'in the case of.'

10. οὐκέτι ἐς ἀναβολὰς ἐποιεῦντο τὴν ἀποχώρησιν, 'considered the retreat no longer a matter for delay.' That they could not strategically have retreated before the fall of Leonidas, nor reasonably have delayed afterwards, is not apparent to Hdt. Plutarch de malig. Hdti. 34 = Mor. 867 puts the connexion more clearly: οὐδὲ γὰρ ἦν δόλος ἐνταῦθα καθημένους φρουρεῖν τὴν θάλασσαν, ἐντὸς Πυλῶν τοῦ πολέμου γεγονότος, καὶ Ξέρξου τῶν παρόδων κρατούντος.

11. ὥς ἕκαστοι ἐτάχθησαν, 'each contingent in order, as previously posted': these words, perhaps purposely introduced by Hdt., rob the record of the sneer at the expense of the Corinthians, which it must otherwise have conveyed, and may have conveyed in its original Attic form. The Herodotean version is clearly acceptable: the retreat was a perfectly orderly proceeding; the Corinthians had apparently occupied the left wing of the fleet; the Athenians, probably at the suggestion of Themistokles, cp. c. 19 supra, remained somewhat in the rear to cover the retreat and to inscribe an appeal to their kinsmen and quondam allies now in the ranks of the Persian. On ὥς cp. c. 2 supra.

22. 2. Θεμιστοκλῆς here puts into operation the παλάμη announced in c. 19 supra. The employment of ἐπιλέξμενος followed by ἐτελέξαντο in a different sense (ἐπιλέγεσθαι eligere 6. 73, 7. 10, etc., legere c. 136 infra, etc.) is not quite happy: an 'unconscious iteration.'

ἐπορεύετο περὶ τὰ πότιμα ὕδατα: he would, of course, have to land in order to do this: what time of day was it? The battle had begun at mid-day, or somewhat later, c. 15 supra; the hour at which it ended has not been specified; but it had been a long and heavy engagement, in which half the Athenian vessels had been damaged (c.

ἐντάμνων ἐν τοῖσι λίθοισι γράμματα, τὰ Ἴωνες ἐπελθόντες τῇ ὑστεραίῃ [ἡμέρῃ] ἐπὶ τὸ Ἀρτεμίσιον ἐπελέξαντο. τὰ δὲ
 5 γράμματα τάδε ἔλεγε. “ἄνδρες Ἴωνες, οὐ ποιεῖτε δίκαια ἐπὶ τοὺς πατέρας στρατευόμενοι καὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα καταδουλοῦμενοι. ἀλλὰ μάλιστα μὲν πρὸς ἡμέων γίνεσθε· εἰ δὲ ὑμῖν ἐστὶ τοῦτο μὴ δυνατόν ποιῆσαι, ὑμεῖς δὲ ἔτι καὶ νῦν ἐκ τοῦ μέσου ἡμῖν ἔξεσθε καὶ αὐτοὶ καὶ τῶν Καρῶν δέεσθε τὰ αὐτὰ ὑμῖν ποιεῖν.
 10 εἰ δὲ μηδέτερον τούτων οἶόν τε γίνεσθαι, ἀλλ’ ὑπ’ ἀναγκῆς μέζονος κατέξευχε ἢ ὥστε ἀπίστασθαι, ὑμεῖς δὲ ἐν τῷ ἔργῳ, ἐπεὰν συμμίσγωμεν, ἐθελοκακέετε, μεμνημένοι ὅτι ἀπ’ ἡμέων

3-5 τὰ . . γράμματα om. B 4 ἡμέρῃ damn. van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>
 5 τάδε ἔλεγε: λέγοντα τάδε B 7 γίνεσθαι α, ‘forsan recte’ van H.
 8 ὑμέες BPz 9 ἔξεσθε malit van H.: ἔσεσθε Bz || δέεσθαι B || ταῦτα R:
 (ταυτὰ SV) 10 ἀνάγκης μέζονος α 11 ὥστε μὴ ἀπίστασθαι B ||
 δὲ: γε BPz, Holder 12 συμμίσγωμεν d

18 supra): then, according to Hdt., a council was held—the account of which is obscure. Then, the news of the disaster at Thermopylai is brought by Abronichos, and retreat becomes at once inevitable; but Themistokles now proceeds to carry out his projected παλάμη. How many the springs, or fountains, to which the device was applied Hdt. does not say.

3. ἐντάμνων ἐν τοῖσι λίθοισι γράμματα. We are to understand that these inscriptions were incised (and coloured ?) in the living rocks, or in some cases in the stones (marble) with which the springs, or cisterns, were fenced and builded. These inscriptions were read by the Ionians on the very next day; cp. c. 23 infra: were they ever read by any other mortals thereafter? How many times the inscription was reproduced by Themistokles Hdt. does not specify, but he gives the ipsissima verba, which ‘cut the record,’ for argument and rhetoric in inscriptions, a veritable ‘sermon in stones’; had Hdt. copied the same? Did ‘Ionians’ remember and report them at home? Is the anecdote an Attic invention? The appeal reads in any case more like a letter or an oral address than like a hastily cut inscription, and that in duplicate. There was no need to cut these inscriptions; they might as well have been simply written or painted up.

4. τὰ δὲ γράμματα τάδε ἔλεγε: a conclusive proof of the use of λέγειν, λόγοι, et sim. for script. The order of the words τάδε ἔλεγε is unusual, but occurs also 2. 136 in a less abrupt form.

5. ἐπὶ τοὺς πατέρας: cp. 7. 51, where the same point and the same moral are urged by Artabanos.

7. μάλιστα μὲν . . εἰ δὲ . . μὴ: perhaps the earliest instance of the employment of this rhetorical formula; cp. Thuc. 1. 40. 4, Plato Rep. 590 D, etc.

8. ὑμεῖς δέ: a genuine δέ in apodosis; the construction is repeated immediately below; cp. 7. 50, and Index.

ἐκ τοῦ μέσου ἡμῖν ἔξεσθε, ‘assume a neutral position’; cp. 4. 118 ὑμεῖς ὡν μηδενὶ τρόπῳ ἐκ τοῦ μέσου κατήμενοι περιύδητε ἡμέας διαφθαρέντας. Also 3. 83 and c. 73 infra. ἡμῖν dat. ethicus, ‘we pray you’—

9. τῶν Καρῶν δέεσθε: cp. c. 19 supra; and for δέεσθαι cc. 3, 4 supra.

10. εἰ δὲ μηδέτερον τούτων: three courses are open to the Ionians, more or less consistent with their duty to their fathers: (i.) μάλιστα μὲν, to desert the Persian and join the Greeks (πρὸς Ἑλλήνων γίνεσθαι); (ii.) εἰ δὲ μὴ, to leave the Persian and assume a neutral position (ἐκ τοῦ μέσου ἔξεσθαι, κατήσθαι); (iii.) to play the Persian false in the hour of battle (ἐν τῷ ἔργῳ ἐθελοκακεῖν).

11. μέζονος . . ἢ ὥστε ἀπίστασθαι. The conjunction ὥστε is not de rigueur in this construction of the infinitive after a comparative, but is certainly in place; cp. Madvig, G.S. 150 c.

γεγόνετε καὶ ὅτι ἀρχῆθην ἡ ἔχθρη πρὸς τὸν βάρβαρον ἀπ' ὑμέων ἡμῖν γέγονε." Θεμιστοκλῆς δὲ ταῦτα ἔγραφε, δοκέειν ἐμοί, ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα νοέων, ἵνα ἡ λαθόντα τὰ γράμματα βασιλέα 15 Ἴωνας ποιήσῃ μεταβαλεῖν καὶ γενέσθαι πρὸς ἑωυτῶν, ἡ ἐπεῖτε ἀνενοιχθῇ καὶ διαβληθῇ πρὸς Ξέρξην, ἀπίστους ποιήσῃ τοὺς Ἴωνας καὶ τῶν ναυμαχιῶν αὐτοὺς ἀπόσχη.

Θεμιστοκλῆς μὲν ταῦτα ἐνέγραφε, τοῖσι δὲ βαρβάροισι 23 αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα πλοῖω ἦλθε ἀνὴρ Ἰστιαεὺς ἀγγέλλων τὸν ὄρησμον τὸν ἀπ' Ἀρτεμισίου τῶν Ἑλλήνων. οὐ δ' ὑπ' ἀπιστίας τὸν μὲν ἀγγέλλοντα εἶχον ἐν φυλακῇ, νέας δὲ ταχείας ἀπέστειλαν προκατοφρομένας. ἀπαγγειλάντων δὲ τούτων τὰ ἦν, 5 οὕτω δὴ ἅμα ἡλίω σκιδναμένῳ πᾶσα ἡ στρατιὴ ἐπέπλεε ἀλῆς ἐπὶ τὸ Ἀρτεμισιον. ἐπισχόντες δὲ ἐν τούτῳ τῷ χώρῳ μέχρι

13 ἀρχῆθην post ἔχθρη d || ἡ om. B Holder, van H. : ἐνέγραφε? hic idem 14 δὲ om. B || ἔγραψε B, 16, 17 ποιήσει (bis) B || μεταβαλεῖν B || ἐπεῖτε : ἐπεὶ Krueger, van H. || ἀνενοιχθῇ AB || ξέρξεα BPs 18 συμμαχιῶν z 23. 2 ἰστιεὺς Pd : ἰστιεὺς C : Ἰστιεὺς z 3 δὲ B 4 νῆας Bz || ταχείας codd. z 5 τούτων a 6 οὕτω B || ἀμ' CPdz || ἐπλεε P, Holder : ἐπλωε(v) Bz, van H. || ἀλῆς a : ἀλλῆς B

13. ἀρχῆθην ἡ ἔχθρη : a parallel argument is addressed to the Athenians by the Spartans c. 142 infra. The reference here is, of course, to the Ionian revolt and the part taken by Athens therein; but, as Hdt. 5. 73, 96, 97 clearly shows, the casus belli between Athens and Persia was already in existence before Athens espoused the cause of the Ionians, and the participation in the Ionian revolt was the effect and not the cause of the Athenian enmity with Sardes and with Susa.

14. δοκέειν ἐμοί, ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα νοέων : was this very obvious design really a discovery of Hdt.'s, or was the double-mindedness of Themistokles other than commendable?

16. μεταβαλεῖν, intransitive; 7. 52.

17. καὶ διαβληθῇ : sc. τὰ γράμματα; a curious phrase, though the meaning of διαβάλλειν cannot be doubtful; cp. 5. 50, 97 etc. But the sentence is rather clumsy, τὰ γράμματα as the subject of ποιήσῃ and of ἀπόσχη being harsh.

ἀπίστους, passive; 9. 98.

23. 2. αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα : still at night?

πλοῖω : the size of this boat is not specified; was the man of Histiaia alone in it? And why is not his proper name given? The retreat is a δρησμός—is that the man's word, or Hdt.'s?

3. ὑπ' ἀπιστίας : the man evidently went to Aphetai; if the Persian admirals actually disbelieved his report, they can hardly have heard as yet of the capture of Thermopylai. εἶχον ἐν φυλακῇ, 'kept under arrest.'

5. τούτων, masculine, of the men on the ships; cp. 7. 179. 4 supra. τὰ ἦν : the true state of the case, the facts.

6. ἅμα ἡλίῳ σκιδναμένῳ : dawn of the fourth day (say Wednesday); the phrase is peculiar : σκιδναμαι (σκιδνημι), cp. 7. 141 (σκιδναμένης Δημήτερος), here seems to refer to the dispersion of light, the diffusion of rays by the sun. Blakesley cps. Milton's "Morn sowing the earth with orient pearl." Cp. also Aischyl. Pers. 502 πρὶν σκεδασθῆναι θεοῦ Ἀκτῖνας. Also Psalm 97. 11 (R.V. "Light is sown for the righteous").

πᾶσα ἡ στρατιή : sc. ἡ ναυτική.

ἀλῆς, without stragglers, and without detaching any scouts, etc., en masse.

7. ἐπισχόντες . . μέχρι μέσου ἡμέρης : the hour at which they had moved out to battle on the previous day (c. 15 supra, which also shows that μέσον here is neuter). The double omission of

μέσου ἡμέρης, τὸ ἀπὸ τούτου ἔπλεον ἐς Ἰστιαίην· ἀπικόμενοι δὲ τὴν πόλιν ἔσχον τῶν Ἰστιαίων, καὶ τῆς Ἑλλοπίης μοίρης
 10 γῆς δὲ τῆς Ἰστιαϊώτιδος τὰς παραθαλασσίας κώμας πάσας ἐπέδραμον.

24 Ἐνθαῦτα δὲ τούτων ἐόντων, Ξέρξης ἐτοιμασάμενος τὰ περὶ τοὺς νεκροὺς ἔπεμπε ἐς τὸν ναυτικὸν στρατὸν κήρυκα, προετοιμάσατο δὲ τάδε· ὅσοι τοῦ στρατοῦ τοῦ ἐώντου ἦσαν νεκροὶ ἐν Θερμοπύλῃσι (ἦσαν δὲ καὶ δύο μυριάδες), ὑπολοιπόμενος

8 ἐπλων B, van H. || ἰστιαίην Cd 9 ἰστιαίων S: ἰστιαίων || ἐλλογίμης B 10 ἰστιαϊώτιδος Cd: ἰστιαιητίδος B || τὰς om. B
 24. 1 τὰ om. B 2 στρατὸν om. B || προητοιμάσατο α 3 τοῦ post στρατοῦ om. C 4 καὶ: ὡς Naber || ὑπολειπόμενος C(superscr.) d: ὑπολοιπόμενος z

the article may be easily understood in a colloquialism. There is no eagerness to pursue the Greek fleet; cp. c. 10 supra. τὸ ἀπὸ τούτου appears to be temporal.

9. τὴν πόλιν ἔσχον: cp. 7. 164 for the strong ἔχω. They seem to have had no resistance to encounter. Ἰστιαία (ἡ) suffered afterwards a worse fate from the Athenians in 446 B.C., Ἐστιαῖς δὲ ἐξοκίσαντες αὐτοὶ τὴν γῆν ἔσχον, Thuc. 1. 114. 3; cp. Hicks, Manual,<sup>2</sup> p. 65, though there is no reference to that catastrophe here. It hardly seems likely that Histiaia was no more and its place taken by Oreos (the name which yet prevails) when Hdt. wrote this passage; in other words, the first draft of his history is appreciably older than the thirty years' truce; cp. Introduction, § 9.

τῆς Ἑλλοπίης μοίρης γῆς δὲ τῆς Ἰστιαϊώτιδος: commentators (so Rawlinson, Baehr) have misunderstood the relation of these terms, and made ἡ Ἑλλοπίη μοῖρη a part of Histiaiotis; as Stein rightly points out, γῆς δὲ is a "second closer definition," according to a regular use of δέ, cp. 1. 114. The Persians did not over-run Euboea, but only Ellopia, or Hellopia, nor all Hellopia, but only Histiaiotis, nor yet quite all Histiaiotis, but only τὰς παραθαλασσίας κώμας—though not one of those they spared (πάσας). The Persians did not venture far from their ships. Hellopia is no doubt the land of the Ἑλλοπες, an interesting and surely primitive folk, in view of their congeners Δρόσες, Δόλοpes, Κέκροτες (Κεκροτίδαι), Κύκλοpes (Κύκλωpes), Πέλοpes (Πελοπίδαι) and others like. Perhaps Ἑλλοπες is not far removed from Ἑλλες itself; Strabo 445 gives Ἑλλοπία as a name for Euboea, ἀπὸ Ἑλλοπος τοῦ Ἴωνος. Elsewhere (328) he quotes Philochoros as saying τὸν περὶ Δωδώνην τόπον, ὥσπερ τὴν Εὐβοίαν, Ἑλλοπίαν κληθῆναι (on the authority of Hesiod); and connects Ἑλλοί (Σελλοί) and Ἑλλοπες.

24. 1. τὰ περὶ τοὺς νεκρούς, the title of this anecdote, which seems quite independent of the record in 7. 238.

4. καὶ δύο μυριάδες, 'about (even) twenty thousand': of these the king buried 19,000 and left 1000 unburied, as a preparation for the ensuing comedy. The figures and the farce are alike incredible: 20,000 men cannot have fallen at Thermopylai, still less could 19,000 have been so speedily interred; nor is it by any means certain that the Persian king would have caused them to be interred at all—exposure being perhaps the Persian custom; cp. 7. 117—though doubtless he would have permitted the various nations concerned each to follow its own rite. Nor, had the king attempted such a fraud, could he have hoped to silence men's tongues, or befool their eyes. It is likely enough that a good many of the slain had been interred before the visitors from the fleet made their appearance at Thermopylai; for the rest, the anecdote seems to be part of the comic Nemesis which Greek anecdote-mongers inflicted upon Xerxes (cp. Introduction, § 11). It forms in any case a contrast to the Spartan review of the Persian dead at Marathon, 6. 120—a truly dignified proceeding. Perhaps ὡς χιλίους represents about the numbers of the Persian slain in the third engagement.

τούτων ὡς χιλίους, τοὺς λοιποὺς τάφρους ὀρυζάμενος ἔθαψε, 5
 φυλλάδα τε ἐπιβαλὼν καὶ γῆν ἐπαμυσάμενος, ἵνα μὴ ὀφθῇσαν ὑπὸ τοῦ ναυτικοῦ στρατοῦ. ὡς δὲ διέβη ἐς τὴν Ἰστιάην ὁ κῆρυξ, σύλλογον ποιησάμενος παντὸς τοῦ στρατοπέδου ἔλεγε τάδε. "ἄνδρες σύμμαχοι, βασιλεὺς Ξέρξης τῷ βουλομένῳ ὑμῶν παραδίδωσι ἐκλιπόντα τὴν τάξιν καὶ ἐλθόντα θεήσασθαι ὅκως 10
 μάχεται πρὸς τοὺς ἀνοήτους τῶν ἀνθρώπων, οἱ ἥλπισαν τὴν βασιλείας δύναμιν ὑπερβαλέεσθαι." ταῦτα ἐπαγγεिलाμένου, 25
 μετὰ ταῦτα οὐδὲν ἐγένετο πλοίων σπανιώτερον· οὕτω πολλοὶ ἤθελον θεήσασθαι. διαπεραιωθέντες δὲ ἐθνεύντο διεξιόντες τοὺς νεκρούς· πάντες δὲ ἠπιστέατο τοὺς κειμένους εἶναι πάντας Λακεδαιμονίους καὶ Θεσπίας, ὀρώντες καὶ τοὺς εἴλωτας. οὐ 5

6 φυλλάδα A<sup>1</sup>: φυλλάδας S || ἐπιβάλλον B 7 ἰστιάην Cd
 9 ξύμμαχοι z 10 καὶ om. B, Holder || θεήσασθαι Ask. 12
 βασιλείας C: βασιλῆος z || ὑπερβαλέεσθαι B: ὑπερβαλείσθαι van H.
 25. 2 ἐγένετο CP 3 θεήσασθαι z || ἐθνεύντο SV: ἐθνεύντο . . δὲ om.
 R 4 πάντες: πάντας Cobet || πάντας del. idem 5 καὶ Θεσπίας
 suspecta mihi || ὀρώντες a: ὀρέοντες C: ὀρέοντες B, etc., Stein<sup>1</sup>

5. τάφρους ὀρυζάμενος: cp. τάφρον μεγάλην ὀρύξαντες a. 28 infra. The king did not work with his own hands, ἐπιβαλὼν notwithstanding.

6. φυλλάδα τε ἐπιβαλὼν καὶ γῆν ἐπαμυσάμενος. Stein takes φ. ἐπιβ. as a hysteron proteron with γ. ἐπαμ. The earth would first be filled in, heaped up (ἐπαμύσσειν), and the leaves then strawed over to conceal the diggings. φυλλάς, collective, like λιβάς, νιφάς, ἱππάς.

ἵνα μὴ ὀφθῇσαν: sc. αἱ τάφροι rather than οἱ νεκροί. With the construction cp. c. 7 supra.

8. σύλλογον ποιησάμενος: cp. c. 83
infra.

παντὸς τοῦ στρατοπέδου: sc. τοῦ ναυτικοῦ. He would need an interpreter, or rather a number of interpreters, to address the motley array.

9. σύμμαχοι is polite; cp. c. 19 supra.

10. παραδίδωσι, 'permits, gives leave';
 in 6. 103, with a slightly different suggestion, the victor Miltiades παραδίδωσι Πεισιστράτῳ ἀνακηρυχθῆναι.

12. ὑπερβαλέεσθαι: superare, 7. 39,
 163.

25. 1. ἐπαγγεिलाμένου: the king,
 through his herald. On the word cp.
 7. 1.

2. οὐδὲν ἐγένετο πλοίων σπανιώτερον:
 they went across in small boats, and the supply was soon exhausted. Their own πλοῖα were still perhaps at Aphetai, and only the local stock available.

 Some of these might make the passage more than once; it must have been a busy scene, the straits alive with small craft; but there is a suspicion of persi-flage about Hdt.'s expression.

3. διεξιόντες, between the Greek on the one hand and the Persian on the other; or perhaps, more generally, passing right through the Greek dead;
 cp. 7. 39. (It is not clear that the 1000 were lying about, scattered where,
ex hypothesi, they had fallen.)

4. ἠπιστέατο, 'were firmly convinced'
 —though utterly mistaken. The word with Hdt. carries no implication of scientific or accurate knowledge, but can scarcely be a mere synonym for νομίζειν.
 If καὶ Θεσπίας (cp. 7. 222) be not a gloss, it is explained by the next words.
 Or should it follow ὀρώντες?

5. ὀρώντες καὶ τοὺς εἴλωτας. The argument is not clear, for Helots were in a sense 'Lakedaimonians'; did the sight-seers mistake Helots for Thespians? But cp. previous note. Except for 7. 229, this is the only express indication of the presence of Helots at Thermopylai. Though the sight-seers fell into this error about the Greek dead (a strange error, with the Greeks from the king's navy among them!), they μὲν οὐδ' ἐλάνθανε τοὺς διαβεβηκότας Ξέρξης ταῦτα πρήξας περὶ τοὺς νεκροὺς τοὺς ἑωυτοῦ· καὶ γὰρ δὴ καὶ γελοῖον ἦν·

τῶν μὲν χίλιοι ἐφαίνοντο [νεκροὶ] κείμενοι, οἱ δὲ πάντες ἐκάτο 10 αὐτὴν μὲν τὴν ἡμέρην πρὸς θένν ἐτράποντο, τῇ δ' ὑστεραίῃ οἱ μὲν ἀπέπλεον ἐς Ἰστιαίην ἐπὶ τὰς νέας, οἱ δὲ ἀμφὶ Ξέρξην ἐς ὁδὸν ὀρμέατο.

26 Ἦκον δέ σφι αὐτόμολοι ἄνδρες ἀπ' Ἀρκαδίας ὀλίγοι τινές,

6 ξέρξης δὲ B 8 νεκροὶ secl. Stein<sup>2</sup> 9 τέσσαρες Cd: τέσσερες χιλιάδες del. Heraeus, Holder: (χειλιάδες van H. constanter) 10 δὲ B
11 ἀπέπλεων B || ἰστιαίην d || νῆας Bz || ξέρξεα B 12 ὀρμέατο Pd were not taken in by the (supposed) trick devised by the king, as above described, in relation to the dead bodies of his own warriors.

7. καὶ γὰρ δὴ καὶ γελοῖον ἦν: the comic Nemesis proceeds.

8. τῶν μὲν . . κείμενοι: of the Persian side a thousand were to be seen lying (about on the field, just where they had fallen?); meantime 19,000 had been collected and buried!

οἱ δὲ . . τέσσαρες χιλιάδες. Hdt. apparently means that the king had caused all the Greek bodies to be collected in one place. It is possible that something of the kind had been done; in any case the χωρίον, the spot where the Greek dead would be thickest piled, was no doubt the hill on which the last stand had been made; 7. 225ff. Around the hill might well be lying the corpses of the king's men, where they had fought and fallen. Stein thinks the object (of the king—or the story-teller?) was to make it appear that 4000 Greeks had been slain by 1000 Persians, 4 Greeks by each Persian (je vier von einem); but, really, neither Hdt., nor in the last resort Xerxes, can well have expected any one to believe that the 4000 dead Greeks had been slain wholly and solely by the dead Persians! The trick was devised, or supposed to have been devised, to exhibit the proportional losses on each side. The figure 4000 for the Greek dead comes no doubt from a misapplication of the epigram in 7. 228, which gives 4000 as the number of Peloponnesians who fought, not the number of Greeks who fell, at Thermopylai. Stein here seems to overlook ἐκ Πελοποννήσου there and makes the 4000 include Thebans and Thespians. 3100 Peloponnesian Hoplitae are accounted for in 7. 202; but there were probably 1000 'Lakedaimonians' to boot, even not including the Helots; or the 4000 might less probably be made up of 3100 + 900 Helots, 3 for each Spartiate. The actual number of Greek fighting men at Thermopylai, first and last, far exceeded 4000: albeit they may not all have been posted at Thermopylai proper; cp. l.c.

10. ταύτην μὲν τὴν ἡμέρην: there has been no clear indication of a change of day since the dawn of the ὑστεραίῃ (cp. cc. 22, 23 supra) of the battle; but it seems more natural, considering all that has taken place in the interval, to reckon 'this day' here as a different one, i.e. at least the 'fifth' day of the memorable week: τῇ ὑστεραίῃ would then be the sixth. The story and journal of the fleet is here dropped, not to be renewed till c. 66 infra.

26. 1. ἦκον: i.e. before the Persians left Thermopylai. These Arkadian medizers, or mercenaries, were long ago traced to Karyai (vide Schweighauser in loco) on the strength of Vitruvius 1. 1, who, in explaining the origin of Caryatides (in architecture), mentioned that Caryai had joined the Persians against Greece. A medizing movement in Arkadia might help, with the attitude of Argos, to explain a good deal in the policy of the Peloponnesians during the war; but does this anecdote go beyond a mercenary adventure? Even so, it is significant of the miserable lack of pan-Hellenic sentiment or loyalty in the peninsula; albeit these very men have a word to say concerning the Olympiad, a celebration which existed to emphasize the 'Unity of Hellas'; cp.

βίου τε δεόμενοι καὶ ἐνεργοὶ βουλόμενοι εἶναι. ἄγοντες δὲ
τούτους ἐς ὄψιν τὴν βασιλέως ἐπυνθάνοντο οἱ Πέρσαι περὶ τῶν Ἑλλήνων τί ποιοῖεν· εἰς δὲ τις πρὸ πάντων ἦν ὁ εἰρωτῶν αὐτοὺς ταῦτα. οἱ δὲ σφί ἐλεγον ὡς Ὀλύμπια ἄγουσι
καὶ θεωροῖεν ἀγῶνα γυμνικὸν καὶ ἵππικόν. ὁ δὲ ἐπείρετο ὅ

26. 2 ἀγαγόντες CPd<sup>2</sup>, van H. 3 τὴν βασιλέως C: τὴν βασιλῆος z: τῷ βασιλεῖ d Paris. 1634: τῷ βασιλεῖ ἐς ὄψιν Paris. 2933 4 τί:
τὰ (B), van H. 5 εἰρωτῶν αἰ, Stein<sup>2</sup>: εἰρωτῶν B, Stein<sup>1</sup>: ἡρωτῶν
C: ἐρωτῶν P: ἐρωτῶν z || ἄγοιεν B, Holder, van H.: διάγοιεν z 6
θεωροῖεν α || καὶ alt.: τε καὶ frag. cod. Paris. || ἐπήρουν ibid.

5. 22. But this whole anecdote is open to suspicion; it is 'gnomic,' it is told for the sake of an ἔπος εἰς εἰρημὸν, such as Hdt. loves to close a section of his narrative withal (cp. my notes to 4. 143 f.), as here, the story of Thermopylai - Artemision; and the chronological implication, strictly interpreted, is neither in itself quite acceptable nor quite consistent with 7. 206 supra.

2. βίου τε δεόμενοι, victus egentes: the word ἐνεργός may mean simply 'employed,' not necessarily 'employed for hire,' though the word ἐνεργάζεσθαι in 1. 93 certainly connotes filthy lucre, and the 'hire' here may be taken for granted. The use of the word in Thuc. 3. 17 does not help us, as the passage is in every way doubtful; but the use ap. Xenoph. Platon. et al. shows that the word does not necessarily connote wages. Was this Arkadian embassy a political move (ὀλίγοι τιμές) or simply a mercenary adventure?

4. εἰς δὲ τις πρὸ πάντων: this circumstantiality would hardly belong to Hdt.'s own method at this stage of the story if he had not found it in his source; natural to the isolated anecdote, it is hardly called for in the body of a work, which has narrated many interviews with the Persian king already. The 'one' in question was presumably 'the son of Artabanos,' named below: πρό, 'on behalf of'; cp. Index.

5. Ὀλύμπια ἄγουσι: the general synchronism of the invasion with an Olympiad is indubitable, and a cornerstone for the chronology of the war; but the exact coincidence of the festival, or any of its five (!) days (Pindar, Ol. 5. 6), with the defence of Thermopylai (7. 206), or with the Arkadian application to the king, is very doubtful, all the more as these two supposed synchronisms conflict with each other! Stein's note, however, on this passage still remains as written under the exploded hypothesis that the Olympiad coincided with the first full moon after the summer solstice, the last day of the festival in 480 B.C. being June 25. He therefore transfers the scene of the Arkadian reception to Therme, maintaining its synchronism with the Olympiad, while rightly dating the defence of Thermopylai to the end of August or beginning of September. But if the synchronism of the Olympiad with the defence of Thermopylai is to be abandoned as an anachronism, why is the Olympiad in this anecdote to be maintained as good chronology? It is surely much more probable that the Arkadian application (assuming the anecdote to have any truth in it) is correctly located at Thermopylai, and correctly dated after the Spartan fiasco there, than that the very substance of the conversation, including the Olympiad synchronism, is precisely and exactly reproduced. However that may be, and not to press the distance from Arkadia to Macedon, the revised calculation for the Olympiad celebrations (Unger, Philol. 30, 1874, 227 ff.; A. Mommsen, Ueber die Zeit der Olympien, 1891; cp. Busolt, ii.<sup>2</sup> 708) makes the approximate synchronism of Ol. 75, with the scenes laid at Thermopylai, a sufficiently reasonable yet elastic date to cover both cases. Cp. Appendix V. § 4.

6. καὶ θεωροῖεν ἀγῶνα γ. καὶ ἰ.: a similar change of moods (ἀγοῦσι· θεωροῖεν) in a question is exemplified 5. 13 τίς . . . εἰσὶ . . . καὶ τί . . . ἐθέλοντες εἰλθεῖν, with somewhat less abruptness than in the answer here. The Olympian festival was purely athletic and 'hippic'—not including a 'musical' element (as did the Pythian).

τι [τὸ ἄεθλον] εἶη σφι κείμενον, περὶ ὅτευ ἀγωνίζονται· οἱ δ' εἶπον τῆς ἐλαίης τὸν διδόμενον στέφανον. ἐνθαῦτα εἶπας γνώμην γενναιοτάτην Τιγράνης ὁ Ἀρταβάνου δειλίην ὥφλε
 10 πρὸς βασιλέως. πυνθανόμενος γὰρ τὸ ἄεθλον ἐὼν στέφανον ἄλλ' οὐ χρήματα, οὔτε ἠνέσχετο σιγῶν εἶπέ τε ἐς πάντας τάδε. “παπαὶ Μαρδόνιε, κοίους ἐπ' ἄνδρας ἡγαγες μαχησομένους ἡμέας, οἱ οὐ περὶ χρημάτων τὸν ἀγῶνα ποιεῦνται ἀλλὰ περὶ ἀρετῆς.” τούτῳ μὲν δὴ ταῦτα εἶρητο,

7 τὸ ἄεθλον secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>: ‘saltem articulus vitiosus est’ van H. || προ-
 κείμενον z || ὅτεο R: ὅτεω SV (sc. ὅτεω, cf. Gaisford et 7. 57 supra) 8
 δὲ B || εἶπον: εἶπαν van H. || διδόμενον: ῥιζόμενον Valckenaer: αἰοίδιμον
 Naber 9 τριτανταίχμης B, Holder, van H. || ὥφλεε B 10
 βασιλέως C: βασιλῆος z || πυνθόμενος BPz || τὸν ἄεθλον ἐόντα B 11
 τε: δὲ B 12 τόδε B 13 τὸν om. B || ἀλλ' ἀρετῆς B, Holder
 14 ἤρετο C: εἶρετο d

8. τῆς ἐλαίης τὸν διδόμενον στέφανον: sc. κείσθαι, or εἶναι; the article (his) and the present participle mark the notoriety and the periodicity of this proud yet paltry prize; but the Arkadians presumably did not use exactly this phrase, but simply ἐλαίης or κοτίνου στέφανον. Cp. Pausanias 5. 15. 3 κατὰ δὲ τὸν ὀπισθόδομον μάλιστα ἐστὶν ἐν δεξιᾷ πεφυκὼς κότνιος· καλεῖται δὲ ἐλαία καλλιστέφανος, καὶ τοῖς νικῶσι τὰ Ὀλύμπια καθέστηκεν ἀπ' αὐτῆς δίδοσθαι τοὺς στεφάνους.

The value of a win is very much under-stated and under-estimated by this anecdote, in the interests of the moral; an Olympian victor obtained substantial rewards and advantages from his own city; cp. K. F. Hermann, gottesdienst. Alterth. iii. 50, with reff. (e.g. Plutarch, Solon 23; Plato, Ap. 36 D, Rep. 465 D; Thuc. 4. 121, etc.).

9. γνώμην γενναιοτάτην: herein no doubt the key to the fable, which exists for the sake of the moral, as fables always do. These poor men of Arkadia are come to read the proud Persians a lesson on the connexion between πεινὴ and ἀρετή; cp. 7. 102. The moralist has, however, nothing to say on the amazing spectacle of a nation's amusing itself at Olympia with the enemy at its very gates; the religious associations prohibit that (but cp. 9. 11); nor, again, of the uselessness of such spectacles and athleticisms for purposes of war; it was left to the Makedonian age to discover the inferiority of athletes to soldiers; cp. Plutarch, Alex. 4, Philopoem. 3.

Τιγράνης ὁ Ἀρταβάνου. The

variant Τριτανταίχμης many have preferred on the ground, given by Wesseling, that Tigranes, though well known, is nowhere (else) described as a son of Artabanos. But he is described as an Achaemenid, 7. 62, cp. 9. 95, which is enough. Hdt. follows his sources without fully co-ordinating, harmonizing, and relating them. The patronymic here for Tigranes is in itself a valuable evidence for the independence of this anecdote, and of the gnomic source to which it must be referred; cp. Introduction, § 10.

δειλίην ὥφλε: cp. αἰσχρόνην ὀφλεῖν Thuc. 5. 101. This well-known Atticism does not occur elsewhere in Hdt. (nor indeed in Thucydides either).

11. οὔτε ἠνέσχετο σιγῶν: the participial construction is noticeable, cp. 5. 19 ἀνέχεν ὁρῶν τὰ ποιούμενα, and the parallel in 1. 206. On the other hand, 7. 139 καταμεινάντες ἀνέσχοτο τὸν ἐπιδόντα ἐπὶ τὴν χώραν δέξασθαι is obviously a different construction.

ἐς πάντας: coram omnibus (Baehr) = ἐς μέσον.

13. οὐ περὶ χρημάτων . . ἀλλὰ περὶ ἀρετῆς. χρήματα and ἀρετή are not quite co-ordinate in this passage; the slight inconsequence only sharpens the gnome. περὶ ἀρετῆς = τοῦ καλοῦ ἔνεκα. Baehr observes that the speaker utters a thoroughly Greek sentiment; Stein adds, one worthy of his sire! (“spricht ganz im Geiste seines Vaters”). Such observations, however, go to illustrate not so much the spread of Hellenic culture and ethos among the Asiatics as the literary

Ἐν δὲ τῷ διὰ μέσου χρόνῳ, ἐπεῖτε τὸ ἐν Θερμοπύλῃσι 27
 τρώμα ἐγγεγόνεε, αὐτίκα Θεσσαλοὶ πέμπουσι κήρυκα ἐς Φωκίας, αἵτε σφί ἔχοντες αἰεὶ χόλον, ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ ὑστάτου τρώματος
 καὶ τὸ κάρτα. ἐσβαλόντες γὰρ πανστρατιῇ αὐτοὶ τε οἱ

27. 1 ἐπεῖτε: ἐπεὶ τάχιστα B      2 κήρυκας B      3 ἔχοντες αR:
 ἐνέχοντες SV, van H.

mechanism of Hellenic logography. 'The distinguished foreigner' as a vehicle for national sentiment, whether praise or blame be the object in view, seems to have been a Greek invention; cp. 4. 77, 142; 7. 9, 236, etc.

27. 1. ἐν δὲ τῷ . . αὐτίκα, 'meanwhile, immediately after the occurrence of the disaster in Thermopylai'; i.e. before the transactions narrated in cc. 23-26.

2. Θεσσαλοὶ . . ἐς Φωκίας. The χάλος between Thessalians and Phokians was even more deadly than the ἐχθρη between Athens and Aigina; cp. 7. 145, where nothing is said of any attempt to compose this quarrel at the Isthmus. (Hdt. does not co-ordinate his materials fully.) The word χάλος has a more physical and concrete ring in it than ἐχθρη. The antiquity of the feud between Thessalian and Phokian is exhibited in 7. 176 supra. That it is less in evidence during the fifth century is perhaps rather an accident of our sources than a proof of mutual goodwill, save that Phokians and Thessalians may have had, to some extent, a common friend in Athens. (In the fourth century the short-lived supremacy of Phokis was in great part maintained by the division of Thessaly against itself; cp. Bury, Hist. of Greece, ii. 281 ff.)

3. τρώματος: an awkward iteration after τρώμα just above. καὶ τὸ κάρτα, 'very specially,' 7. 16, 4. 181, etc.

4. γὰρ explains and introduces an account of τὸ ὑστάτον τρώμα. The exact date of this affair is not to be extracted from the phrase οὐ πολλοῖσι ἔτεσι πρότερον ταύτης τῆς βασιλέως στρατηλασίης. It would be interesting to know who the σύμμαχοι were, or whether that word points to anything more than τὸ κοινὸν τῶν Θεσσαλῶν. The account in Hdt. is neither quite complete nor perhaps quite accurate. He records two victories of the Phokians over the Thessalians, the more recent one apparently on Parnassos, a περὶομαχία, a νυκτομαχία, and apparently a sortie of a besieged force, resulting in a great victory, due to a ruse or stratagem devised by their Eleian diviner Tellias. This great victory is commemorated, according to Hdt., by splendid offerings at Delphi and at Abai. The other victory, in the pass by Hyampolis, and at a previous date, where they discomfit the Thessalian cavalry, also by a stratagem or ruse, the authorship of which is not specified (c. 28 infra), appears of less moment, and is not especially commemorated at Delphi, or even at Abai, in the immediate neighbourhood; otherwise, despite Hdt.'s assertion, we might have been tempted to conjecture that the anathema at Abai was in reality a commemoration of the victory at Hyampolis.

Polyainos 6. 18 narrates the two Phokian stratagems against the Thessalians in the same order as Hdt., without adding any point, and even omitting the Eleian mantis. Pausanias in the Phokika (10. 1) gives a much fuller account of these transactions. According to the Periegete there were four battles, the second and third of which are not represented by anything in Hdt., while the first and fourth correspond to the two engagements in Hdt., restored to their proper order. Pausanias records first (i.) the battle by Hyampolis, and the disaster to the Thessalian cavalry caused by the concealed jars (c. 28 infra). It appears, however, to be an indecisive affair, for (ii.) the Thessalians at once prepare to invade Phokis on a far larger scale (συνελέχθησαν ἀπὸ τῶν πόλεων πασῶν), a project which strikes terror into the Phokians, especially as the cavalry is chiefly in evidence. After consulting the Delphic oracle they despatch, under cover of night, 300 picked men, led by Gelon, to reconnoitre; but this force is trampled and cut to pieces by the Thessalian cavalry. (iii.) This disaster leads to a desperate resolve: the Phokians determine to conquer or to die, after devoting withal their wives, children, and all their properties to the flames. ἀντὶ τούτου μὲν ἅπαντα τὰ

5 Θεσσαλοὶ καὶ οἱ σύμμαχοι αὐτῶν ἐς τοὺς Φωκέας, οὐ πολλοῖσι ἔτεσι πρότερον ταύτης τῆς βασιλείας στρατηλασίης, ἐσώθησαν

6 βασιλείως C: βασιλῆος α || ἐσώθησαν B

ἀνάληπτα βουλευματα ἀπόνοια ὑπὸ Ἑλλήνων ὀνομάζεται Φωκική. The Phokians march out under two generals, an Ambrosian named Rhoios and Daiphantes of Hyampolis, the former in command of the infantry, the latter of the horse. This expedition is accompanied by Tellias of Elis, on whom the hopes of the Phokians were fixed. The result of their desperate courage was a brilliant victory, and the oracle was justified; but where exactly the battle took place, and what service on the occasion Tellias performed, is not specified. The same story is told, with some important additions, by Plutarch, Mor. 244; see notes to c. 29 infra. (iv.) Subsequently, when the two armies were lagged opposite each other, περὶ τὴν ἐς τὴν Φωκίδα ἐσβολήν, the stratagem of Tellias came off. Taking advantage of a full moon, 500 picked men, their arms and persons whitened with chalk, surprised the Thessalians, and slew an immense number. Pausanias describes two monuments at Delphi as records of these events. One he connects with the great but anonymous Phokian victory, (iii.) supra. ἀπὸ τοῦτου δὲ τοῦ ἔργου καὶ ἀναθήματα οἱ Φωκεῖς ἀπέστειλαν ἐς Δελφοὺς Ἀπόλλωνι Τελλίαν τε τὸν μάντιν καὶ ὅσοι μαχομένοις ἄλλοι σφίσιν ἐστρατήγησαν, σὺν δὲ αὐτοῖς καὶ ἥρωας τῶν ἐπιχωρίων· ἔργα δὲ αἱ εἰκόνες Ἀριστομέδοντος εἰσιν Ἀργεῖου (10. 1. 10). Another notice of Phokian anathemata occurs in a different connexion, not free from ambiguity. εἰσὶ καὶ εἰκόνες χαλκαὶ Φωκίων ἀναθέντων, ἥνικα δευτέρᾳ συμβολῇ τὸ ἱππικὸν ἐτρέψαντο τὸ ἐκ Θεσσαλίας. . Ἡρακλῆς δὲ καὶ Ἀπόλλων ἔχονται τοῦ τρίποδος καὶ ἐς μάχην περὶ αὐτοῦ καθίστανται. Λητῶ μὲν δὴ καὶ Ἀρτεμὺς Ἀπόλλωνα, Ἀθηνᾶ δὲ Ἡρακλέα ἐπέχουσι τοῦ θυμοῦ. Φωκίων καὶ τοῦτό ἐστιν ἀνάθημα, ὅτε σφίσιν ἐπὶ τοὺς Θεσσαλοὺς Τελλίας ἡγήσατο Ἡλείος. τὰ μὲν δὴ ἄλλα ἀγάλματα Διὶ καὶ Ἀπόλλωνι καὶ Ἀμυκλαίῳ, τὴν δὲ Ἀθηνᾶν καὶ Ἀρτεμὶν Χιονίς ἐστὶ εἰργασμένος. Κορινθίους δὲ εἶναι φασιν αὐτοὺς (10. 13. 7).

Assuming that the first group here mentioned was identical with the anathema previously described, there were, according to Pausanias, at Delphi only two groups commemorating Phokian victories over Thessalians. (α) There was the work of Aristomedon of Argos, which represented Tellias, Rhoios, Daiphantes, and possibly other στρατηγοί (Gelon, for example?), together with certain local Phokian heroes. This commemorated the great victory over the Thessalian cavaliers, numbered (iii.) above, but not recorded by Hdt. at all: these figures were apparently of bronze. (β) There was the group, various figures in which had been wrought by Diyllos, Amyklaos, and Chionis, all Corinthians, to commemorate apparently the success enumerated as (iv.) above, and identical with the πεξομαχία of Hdt. in which the ruse of Tellias the Eleian was brilliantly successful. This anathema represented a contest between Herakles and Apollon for possession of the divining stool or tripod, Leto and Artemis supporting Apollon, and Athena backing Herakles. To this group Hdt. apparently refers.

Though Pausanias is more explicit than Hdt., it by no means follows that we are to adopt his account of the war simpliciter; nor is a partial harmony between the two out of compass. Hdt. records two Phokian victories over the Thessalians and but one Delphian monument, the work apparently of the Korinthian school, and commemorating the night battle, which, though he describes it first, he has previously introduced as τὸ ὕστατον τῷμα. On this point, then, Hdt. and Pausanias are at one. For the victory which he records over the Thessalian cavalry Hdt. mentions no monument. Pausanias, however, also, on his own showing, is a monument short, for he records three Phokian victories over the Thessalians, two of them victories over the cavalry, and has but two monuments to describe, the one commemorating a victory over the Thessalian cavalry 'in a second engagement'—plainly the one numbered (iii.) above—a victory, the story of which is, on the face of it, as above indicated, full of improbabilities. The solution lies near, that Pausanias (or his source) has duplicated the victory over the Thessalian cavalry. There was only one victory over the cavalry, as ὑπὸ τῶν Φωκέων καὶ περιέφθησαν τρηχέως. ἐπεῖτε γὰρ κατελήθησαν ἐς τὸν Παρνησὸν οἱ Φωκέες ἔχοντες μάντιν Τελλίην τὸν Ἥλειον, ἐνθαῦτα ὁ Τελλίης οὗτος σοφίζεται αὐτοῖσι τοῖονδε. γυνώσας ἄνδρας ἑξακοσίους τῶν Φωκέων 10 τοὺς ἀρίστους, αὐτοὺς τε τούτους καὶ τὰ ὄπλα αὐτῶν, νυκτὸς ἐπεθήκατο τοῖσι Θεσσαλοῖσι, προείπας αὐτοῖσι, τὸν ἂν μὴ λευκανθίζοντα ἴδωνται, τοῦτον κτείνειν. τούτους ὦν αἱ τε φυλακαὶ τῶν Θεσσαλῶν πρῶται ἰδοῦσαι ἐφοβήθησαν, δόξασαι ἄλλο τι εἶναι τέρας, καὶ μετὰ τὰς φυλακὰς αὐτῇ ἡ στρατιῇ 15 οὕτω ὥστε τετρακισχιλίων κρατῆσαι νεκρῶν καὶ ἀσπίδων

8 παρνησὸν B<sup>Pz</sup>
(λευκανθέντα malit van H.)
om. R

13 λευκανθίζοντα A<sup>2</sup>Pdz: λευκαθίζοντα
14 πρῶται τῶν Θεσσαλῶν S || ἰδοῦσαι
15 τέρας mihi suspectum 16 ὥστε καὶ τρισχιλίων B

described by Hdt. and by Pausanias himself, (i.) supra; it was in honour of this victory that the group by Aristomedon of Argos was dedicated, and we may fairly conjecture that the stratagem by which the cavalry was discomfited was due to the ingenuity of Tellias. The error in Pausanias can even be explained. As Hdt. had recorded this engagement without assigning a monument to it, a victory had to be invented in order to account for the presence of a second monument at Delphi. The omission by Hdt. of any mention of the monument is no doubt a difficulty; but a monument there was.

The only crux remaining is the occurrence in Pausanias of the disaster to the Phokians under Gelon, omitted by Hdt. This episode has an air of verisimilitude, and need not be dismissed as merely a set-off to the victory of the 'Six Hundred.' Its omission by Hdt. is easily accounted for by the consideration that he is merely describing the grievances of the Thessalians against the Phokians, a list from which Thessalian victories might fairly be omitted. A combination, then, gives a more complete and a more correct view of the war than either source taken alone. The war comprised three great episodes: (i.) A Phokian victory over the Thessalian cavalry, commemorated at Delphi by the group above described as the work of the Argive, Aristomedon. (ii.) A Thessalian victory over the Phokians, under Gelon; probably a much more extensive affair than the record suggests. (iii.) A second Phokian victory, due, like the first, chiefly to a stratagem devised by Tellias, and commemorated at Delphi in the group wrought by the Korinthian school.

7. περιέφθησαν τρηχέως: c. 18 supra.

8. κατελήθησαν ἐς τὸν Παρνησόν: cp. 9. 31 περὶ τὸν Παρνησόν (sic) κατελημένοι. Parnassos appears below, c. 32, as the natural refuge of the Phokians (from the east and north sides); its position is further defined in c. 35 infra, and in c. 36 it appears as the natural refuge for the Delphians (from the south and west sides), rising indeed immediately over the Holy Place (cp. c. 39).

μάντιν Τελλίην τὸν Ἥλειον. Eleans are in great demand as seers and diviners; cp. 9. 37, where a member of the same clan appears. This divine is a 'sophist' in a way; with σοφίζεται cp. σοφίζεσθαι 3. 111.

10. γυνώσας: a treatment accorded in Aithiopia to corpses and warriors, 3. 24; cp. 7. 69.

ἑξακοσίους: Pausanias l.c. cuts them down to 500.

11. νυκτός. Pausanias l.c. supplies the moon, which is necessary for the due effect. The whitening of the hoplites had a double purpose: it enabled them to discriminate friend and foe (often a difficult matter in night-attacks, cp. Thucyd. 7. 43); and it struck terror into the Thessalians, who mistook them for ghosts.

15. τέρας is either exegetical, as though we read καὶ δὴ καὶ τέρας (cp. 4. 179 ἄλλην τε ἐκατόμβην καὶ δὴ καὶ τρίποδα), or else spurious.

16. τετρακισχιλίων: this item is probably authentic, but suggests that the

Φωκέας, τῶν τὰς μὲν ἡμισέας ἐς Ἀβας ἀνέθεσαν τὰς δὲ ἐς Δελφούς· ἡ δὲ δεκάτη ἐγένετο τῶν χρημάτων ἐκ ταύτης τῆς μάχης οἱ μεγάλοι ἀνδριάντες οἱ περὶ τὸν τρίποδα συνεστῶτες 20 ἔμπροσθε τοῦ νηοῦ τοῦ ἐν Δελφοῖσι, καὶ ἕτεροι τοιοῦτοι ἐν 28 Ἀβησι ἀνακέαται. ταῦτα μὲν νυν τὸν πεζὸν ἐργάσαντο τῶν Θεσσαλῶν οἱ Φωκέες πολιορκέοντας ἑωυτούς· ἐσβαλοῦσαν δὲ ἐς τὴν χώραν τὴν ἵππον αὐτῶν ἐλυμήναντο ἀνηκέστως. ἐν γὰρ τῇ ἐσβολῇ ἥ ἐστὶ κατὰ Ἰάμπολιν, ἐν ταύτῃ τάφρον 5 μεγάλῃν ὀρύξαντες ἀμφορέας κενεοὺς ἐς αὐτὴν κατέθηκαν, χοῦν

17 ἡμισέας ἀσπίδας B 19 τοῦ τρίποδος B 20 ἔμπροσθεν B:
21 ἀνακέαται B: num genuina sunt verba καὶ . . ἀνακέαται? 28. 1
εἰργάσαντο CPSz 2 πολιορκέοντες π: 'fortasse πολιορκέοντα' Stein<sup>1</sup> 4 ἰάμπολιν α 5 κεινοὺς B, Holder, van H.

attack was not confined to the 500-600 λευκανθίζοντες, but supplemented by the Phokians en masse. Perhaps there were many more shields than corpses; it is not likely that the numbers were identical: τῶν, indeed, refers only to ἀσπίδων.

18. ἡ δὲ δεκάτη: a tithe of the spoil to Delphi, or the gods, was a matter of course—hence the article; cp. 7. 132 δεκατεύσαι.

τῶν χρημάτων: the shields not included apparently.

19. οἱ μεγάλοι ἀνδριάντες οἱ περὶ τὸν τρίποδα συνεστῶτες: these words are translated by Rawlinson (iv.<sup>3</sup> 280) "the gigantic figures which stand round the tripod"—and so the older commentators, and L. & S. The accusative with περὶ favours this rendering, but on the other hand the meaning given to συνεστῶτες is highly objectionable: συνεστάναι, συστῆναι meaning with Hdt. constantly stare cum aliquo, sed non ab eadem parte verum a parte opposita, pugnare, contendere cum aliquo (Schweighauser, Lexicon). So c. 79 infra, 6. 108; cp. 7. 142; and with more metaphorical sense, 7. 142, 170, c. 74 infra, 9. 89. Further, the description of the work here in question makes it clear that the subject of this group of statuary was a contest between Herakles and Apollon for 'the tripod,' which further proves that the tripod here mentioned is not, for example, the tripod which stood on the τρικάρητος βῆσις 9. 81 (cp. c. 82 infra), but the Delphian divining stool, represented in the bronze. This mention of the monument suggests the probable source of Hdt.'s digression on the

Thessalo-Phokian war, which is apparently an addition to the first draft of his history, made after his visit to Delphi; cp. Introduction, § 9.

20. ἕτεροι τοιοῦτοι ἐν Ἀβησι ἀνακέαται. If this statement is correct, they must have been restorations, or dedications later than the Persian war, for Abai was sacked and destroyed by fire, c. 33 infra.

28. 1. τὸν πεζὸν . . πολιορκέοντας ἑωυτούς: the construction is paralleled 7. 40 στρατὸς . . οὐ διακεκριμένοι, 7. 196 ὁ ναυτικός στρατὸς . . ἀπίκοντο ἐς Ἀφῆτας. Thuc. 6. 61. 2 στρατιὰ Λακεδαιμονίων . . πρὸς Βοιωτοῦς τι πράσσοντες (Stein). Yet none of these passages is quite so harsh as the present. Was the plural a correction to avoid the hiatus? The reading is found in both families of mss. ἑωυτούς of course refers to Φωκέες, but is barely correct.

3. ἐλυμήναντο ἀνηκέστως. λυμᾶνεσθαι is found c. 15 supra, and both words in 6. 12 λυμᾶνεται λύμῃσι ἀνηκέστοισι.

4. τῇ ἐσβολῇ ἥ ἐστὶ κατὰ Ἰάμπολιν: Hyampolis appears again c. 33 in close connexion with Elateia, Parapotamioi, Abai; see note ad l. The pass here named is undoubtedly the main route from the valley of the Kephisos into Opús, and so on through Thermopylai. The Persians must have come down through this pass into Phokis and Boiotia, as well as by the pass indicated c. 31 infra.

τάφρον μεγάλῃν: the author of this device must have been Tellias the Eleian diviner; cp. c. 27 supra.

δὲ ἐπιφορήσαντες καὶ ὁμοιώσαντες τῷ ἄλλῳ χώρῳ ἐδέκοντο τοὺς Θεσσαλοὺς ἐσβάλλοντας. οἱ δὲ ὡς ἀναρπασόμενοι τοὺς Φωκέας φερόμενοι ἐσέπεσον ἐς τοὺς ἀμφορέας. ἐνθαῦτα οἱ ἵπποι τὰ σκέλεα διεφθάρησαν. τούτων δὴ σφί ἀμφοτέρων 29 ἔχοντες ἔγκοτον οἱ Θεσσαλοὶ πέμψαντες κήρυκα ἡγόρευον τάδε. "ὦ Φωκέες, ἤδη τι μᾶλλον γνωσιμαχέετε μὴ εἶναι ὅμοιοι ἡμῖν. πρόσθε τε γὰρ ἐν τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι, ὅσον χρόνον ἐκεῖνα ἡμῖν ἦνδανε, πλεόν αἰεὶ κοτε ὑμέων ἐφερόμεθα· νῦν τε 5 παρὰ τῷ βαρβάρῳ τοσοῦτο δυνάμεθα ὥστε ἐπ' ἡμῖν ἐστὶ τῆς γῆς ἐστερηθῆναι καὶ πρὸς ἡνδραποδίσθαι ὑμέας. ἡμεῖς μέντοι

7 ἐσβάλλοντας A: ἐσβαλόντας B: ἐσβαλέοντας B 8 ἐνέπεσον B
29. 4 ὁμοῖοι CPz || πρόσθεν α 5 αἰεὶ: εἰ B 6 τοσοῦτω B ||
ὥστε α: ἐστὲ B (Holder) || ἐστι: ἐστὲ S (Gaisf.) 7 γῆς τε B, Holder, van H. || προσηνδραποδίσθαι CPz || ἡμεῖς: ἡμέες B

6. ἐδέκοντο: a decided imperfect.

7. ὡς ἀναρπασόμενοι: ibidem 9. 60.

8. οἱ ἵπποι τὰ σκέλεα διεφθάρησαν: with the construction (accusative of 'reference,' or limitation) cp. 1. 38 τὸν γὰρ δὴ ἕτερον διεφθαρμένον τὴν ἀκοὴν οὐκ εἶναι μοι λογιζομαι, and Index. But in this case the breaking of the horses' legs must have meant total destruction of horse and man. On this battle see notes to previous chapter.

29. 2. ἔγκοτον: 9. 110, 6. 133. The word is properly an adjective. The substantive κότος is used by Homer and Aeschylus, and this word as adj. by the latter.

οἱ Θεσσαλοὶ πέμψαντες κήρυκα resumes the thread of the story from c. 27, for the year 480 B.C.

3. γνωσιμαχέετε μὴ εἶναι ὅμοιοι ἡμῖν, 'recognize your inferiority to us.' The Thessalians themselves appear as γνωσιμαχέοντες (in the king's opinion) 7. 130; see note ad l. ὅμοιοι prima facie here in war; but as there had been a political subordination of the Phokians, for a time at least, to the Thessalians, the connotation of the word may be extended. Plutarch, de mulier. v. 2=Mor. 244, records a rising of the Lokrians against the ἄρχοντες and τύραννοι in their cities who were apparently dependents of the Thessalians, while the Thessalians retorted with the butchery of 250 Phokian hostages, and the invasion of Phokis, which resulted in the Phokian victory at Kleonai, just above Hyampolis, as described by Hdt. in the previous c. and by Pausanias, as above quoted, c. 27 (i.) and (iii.).

5. ἐκεῖνα=τὰ ἐκείνων: cp. 2. 39 κεφαλῇ κείνῃ=τῇ κείνου, 2. 40 κοιλίῃν μὲν κείνῃν πᾶσαν ἐξ ὧν εἶλον, 5. 82 ἱρωτάτας δὴ κείνας νομίζοντες εἶναι (sc. τὰς ἑλίας τὰς ἐκείνων). With the neuter article cp. τὰ Ἑλλήνων c. 30, τὰ Μήδων c. 34 infra (Stein).

πλεόν αἰεὶ κοτε ὑμέων ἐφερόμεθα: cp. πλεόν ἔχειν τινός 7. 168, 211, 9. 70. Stein sees in this phrase a possible reference to the first Sacred War (595-4 to 586-5 B.C.) in which the Thessalians, under Eurylochos the Aleuad, played a prominent part; the reference would be absolutely unique, for nowhere else in the work of Hdt., not even in the passages on Kleisthenes of Sikyon, the Alkmaionidai, Solon, is there the slightest hint of the great subject. One must ruefully acquiesce in the alternative that the reference is, at most, to the general superiority of the Thessalians to the Phokians in the Delphic or Pylian Amphiktyony—albeit that would unconsciously cover the case of the Sacred War. On Eurylochos the Thessalian cp. Strabo 418.

6. ἐπ' ἡμῖν ἐστὶ: cp. 7. 10 ἐπ' ἀνδρὶ γε ἐνὶ πάντα τὰ βασιλέος πρήγματα γεγενῆσθαι. ὥστε with the indicative 'expresses the actual (or potential?) result with emphasis' (L. & S.). Cp. 3. 12 αἱ μὲν τῶν Περσέων κεφαλὰί εἰσι ἀσθενέες οὕτω ὥστε εἰ θέλεις ψήφῳ μόνῃ βαλεῖν, διατετρανέει. The passive construction (ἐστερηθῆναι ἡνδραποδίσθαι) is τὸ πᾶν ἔχοντες οὐ μνησικακέομεν, ἀλλ' ἡμῖν γενέσθω ἀντ' αὐτῶν πεντήκοντα τάλαντα ἀργυρίου, καὶ ὑμῖν ὑποδεκόμεθα τὰ 30 ἐπιόντα ἐπὶ τὴν χώραν ἀποτρέψειν." ταῦτά σφι ἐπαγγέλλοντο οἱ Θεσσαλοί. οἱ γὰρ Φωκέες μῦνοι τῶν ταύτῃ ἀνθρώπων οὐκ ἐμήδιζον, κατ' ἄλλο μὲν οὐδέν, ὥς ἐγὼ συμβαλλόμενος εὐρίσκω, κατὰ δὲ τὸ ἔχθος τὸ Θεσσαλῶν· εἰ δὲ Θεσσαλοί

9 αὐτέων R || ἐπιδεκόμεθα B
ἐπαγγέλλοντο α 3 ἄλλον R
ἔχθος τῶν Sz

10 ἐπιόντα om. B 30. 1
4 κατὰ: μετὰ C || ἔχθος τὸ:

remarkable, as well as the highly rhetorical perfect tense.

8. τὸ πᾶν ἔχοντες οὐ μνησικακέομεν is curious, if not ambiguous. Baehr takes τὸ πᾶν ἔχοντες together, omnem potestatem habentes. Cp. 7. 162 οὐδὲν ὑπιέντες ἔχειν τὸ πᾶν ἐθέλετε. But Stein's exegesis, τὸ πᾶν ἔχοντες sc. μνησικακῆσαι, suits the present context better, albeit Demosthenes de cor. 96 (τῶν τότε Ἀθηναίων πᾶν ἂν ἔχόντων μνησικακῆσαι Κορινθίοις), being perfectly simple and lucid, is not an exact parallel. It is τὸ πᾶν, rather than the suppression of the infinitive, which causes the ambiguity here; there πολλά is simpler than τὸ πᾶν and the infinitive after ἔχειν is expressed.

ἀντ' αὐτῶν, 'in return for what you have done'; or perhaps, 'instead of what you deserve.' For this vague αὐτὰ cp. 7. 8, 14 etc.

9. τὰ ἐπιόντα: cp. 7. 138, 157 τὸν ἐπιόντα. The neuter plural is certainly more appropriate here.

30. 1. ἐπαγγέλλοντο: simply on their own account, and not speaking with any authority from the Persian, but through their own messenger. Repeated in ἐπαγγελλομένων just below; on the word cp. 7. 1.

2. τῶν ταύτῃ ἀνθρώπων. The phrase doubtless covers the Lokrians, the Dorians, and other tribes or peoples of the neighbourhood; but Hdt. at least cannot mean to include the Delphians under it, though others might be tempted to do so.

3. ὥς ἐγὼ συμβαλλόμενος εὐρίσκω: cp. ὥς μοι δοκεῖν just below. Hdt. accepts, nay invites, full responsibility for the very unfavourable verdict on the Phokians at this crisis, enforcing it by the disparaging ἀνθρώπων just before. He wholly discounts, in fact, and discredits the spirited and patriotic reply of the Phokians, which he faithfully proceeds to report, as he has previously reported their actual service on the Greek side, 7. 203, 218, a service not very efficient, according to his showing. Hdt.'s attitude towards the Thessalians appears in contrast strongly favourable: according to him they, in the first instance, espoused the Greek cause, and only afterwards 'medized' under 'necessity'; cp. 7. 172. Pausanias 10. 1 contradicts Hdt. by representing the Phokians as in the first instance compounding with the Persians, and afterwards reverting to the national cause. This representation of the case might be due to an inference from the conduct of the Thessalians, as reported by Hdt., coupled with the judgement of Hdt. in the present passage. Or could there be any connexion between the conduct of the Phokians and the policy and fortunes of Delphi? The Phokians at least talked big, or reported themselves as so doing; but their positive services to the Greek cause are not very clear. If Delphi escaped their fate, its escape may have been due to the very different attitude of the Thessalians (and other medizing states) to Phokis and to the Amphiktyonic shrine. Considering how decidedly Hdt. 'atticizes,' his attitude towards the Phokians is the more remarkable. Should it be connected with τὸν ἱερὸν καλούμενον πόλεμον in 448 B.C. (cp. Thuc. 1. 112. 5; Busolt III. i. 419 ff.)?

4. κατὰ δὲ τὸ ἔχθος τὸ Θεσσαλῶν: the preposition = ob, propter, as in 7. 136 κατὰ ταῦτα ἦκειν, 9. 15 κατὰ ἔχθος αὐτῶν (just as here), 9. 109 κατ' ἄλλο μὲν οὐδέν (as here, above) φοβεύμενος δὲ Ἀμυστριν μὴ κτλ. The genitive is 'objective'; cp. 9. 38 ἐθύετό τε καὶ προεθυμέτο κατὰ τε τὸ ἔχθος τὸ Λακεδαιμονίων καὶ κατὰ τὸ κέρδος.

τὰ Ἑλλήνων ἡῦξον, ὥς ἐμοὶ δοκέειν, ἐμήδιζον ἂν οἱ Φωκέες. 5
ταῦτα ἐπαγγελιομένων Θεσσαλῶν, οὔτε δώσειν ἔφασαν χρήματα, παρέχειν τέ σφι Θεσσαλοῖσι ὁμοίως μηδίξειν, εἰ ἄλλως βουλοίτο· ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔσσεσθαι ἐκόντες εἶναι προδότες τῆς Ἑλλάδος.

Ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἀνηνεύχθησαν οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι, οὕτω δὴ οἱ 31
Θεσσαλοὶ κεχολωμένοι τοῖσι Φωκεῦσι ἐγένοντο ἡγεμόνες τῷ βαρβάρῳ τῆς ὁδοῦ. ἐκ μὲν δὴ τῆς Τρηχινίης ἐς τὴν Δωρίδα

5 αὔξον van H. || δοκέει S, Cobet: δοκεῖ van H. 6 ἔφασαν·
χρήματα α 7 παρέχειν τέ β: τε παρέχειν ceteri || σφι: σφίσιν
Stein<sup>(1)</sup>2, van H. 31. 1 ἐπεὶ δὲ δὴ β 2 φωκεῦσι α || ἐγένοντο β
3 τρηχινίης R

7. παρέχειν is impersonal; cp. c. 8
supra; the tense must be at least imperfect: a pluperfect would have been acceptable.

Θεσσαλοῖσι ὁμοίως μηδίξειν has the sharper point as a reply to μὴ εἶναι ῥεῖοι ἡμῖν in the Thessalian message,
c. 29 supra.

ἄλλως, 'on independent grounds';
i.e. it would not in any case have been for the purpose of conciliating the Thessalians.

8. οὐκ ἔσσεσθαι ἐκόντες εἶναι: the idiomatic εἶναι in 7. 104, 164, 9. 7, but here rather odd after ἔσσεσθαι.

προδότες τῆς Ἑλλάδος, 'like the Thessalians,' subaudi.: a dangerous taunt.
The Phokian language is somewhat grandiloquent in view of their performance above Thermopylai, 7. 218, and sits better (if not quite discreetly) on the lips of Athens later on (c. 144 infra).

31. 1. οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι can only refer to the short reply, of less than three lines, just preceding; perhaps that is to be regarded only as a summary of a longer reply, or speeches: ἀνηνεύχθησαν, were 'reported.'

2. κεχολωμένοι: no doubt specifically by the title of 'traitors' just flung at them. Hdt. is rich in terms for the Thessalo-Phokian feud: ἐχοντες αἰεὶ χόλον
c. 27, ἐχοντες ἐγκοτον c. 29, τὸ ἐχθος
c. 30.

ἡγεμόνες . . τῆς ὁδοῦ: cp. 7. 197
ὁ κατ'ἡγεμόνες τῆς ὁδοῦ, where ὁδός is abstract, or conceptual.

τῷ βαρβάρῳ: sc. τῷ βασιλεῖ, or τοῖς Πέρσῃσι.

3. ἐκ μὲν δὴ τῆς Τρηχινίης ἐς τὴν Δωρίδα: one of the most luminous hints in the record. The term clearly implies and only applies to a pass west of and at right angles to Thermopylai, and roughly parallel to τῇ ἐσβολῇ ἣ ἐστὶ κατὰ Τάμπολον mentioned up above incidentally, c. 28. This western pass (running north and south) led over from the plain of the Spercheios and the Asopos to the upper plain of the Kephisos, and so to Delphi, and further.

It has been identified above, 7. 176,
notes, with ἡ διὰ Τρηχίνος ἔσθοδος ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα, a formula which Hdt. himself apparently (mis)applies to Thermopylai.
However that may be, in the present context Hdt. undoubtedly carries the whole Persian land-forces by this route, and by this route alone, from the banks of the Spercheios to the banks of the Kephisos. That is a manifestly absurd proceeding. One Persian column, of course, marched by Thermopylai, Kleonai, Hyampolis, and so forth. But what we have here to be thankful for is the clear indication that another column (probably more lightly equipped) made its way direct from Trachis into Doris.
The cavalry may all have passed by the easier route to Hyampolis (cp. the Thessalian case c. 28 supra). There is no clear indication of the continued tripartition of the Persian forces (unless
c. 34 contains it obscurely), but probably the system was maintained (unless one whole corps d'armée had remained behind in Makedon and Thrace). Perhaps while one column crossed by the Asopos-gorge or Trachinian pass, and another followed the coast-route and then turned inland to Hyampolis, a third may have made its way across the hills, between the two, by the modern Boudonitza—then, as now, a sufficiently ἐσέβαλον· τῆς γὰρ Δωρίδος χώρας ποδεὼν στεινὸς ταύτη 5 κατατείνει, ὡς τριήκοντα σταδίων μάλιστά κη εὖρος, κείμενος μεταξύ τῆς τε Μηλίδος καὶ Φωκίδος χώρας, ἥ περ ἦν τὸ παλαιὸν Δρυοπίς· ἡ δὲ χώρα αὕτη ἐστὶ μητρόπολις Δωριέων τῶν ἐν Πελοποννήσῳ. ταύτην ὦν τὴν Δωρίδα γῆν οὐκ ἐσίναντο ἐσβαλόντες οἱ βάρβαροι· ἐμήδιζόν τε γὰρ καὶ οὐκ 32 ἐδόκεε Θεσσαλοῖσι. ὡς δὲ ἐκ τῆς Δωρίδος ἐς τὴν Φωκίδα ἐσέβαλον, αὐτοὺς μὲν τοὺς Φωκέας οὐκ αἰρέουσι. οἱ μὲν γὰρ

5 τριάκοντα B 6 μηλίδος B: μηλιάδος || καὶ τῆς Sz || ἡ: ἡι α:
 ἡ B 7 δρυοπίης B 32. 1 δὲ: δ' α easy route (as I found to my own satisfaction in 1899).

4. τῆς γὰρ Δωρίδος χώρας ποδεὼν στεινὸς ταύτη κατατείνει, 'for there is a narrow neck, or strip, of the Dorian land (Doris) stretching down in this quarter'—to the vale of the Kephisos. Hdt. appears to give an extension to 'Doris' which would make it include not merely the higher ground of the Dorian tetrapolis but the head streams of the upper Kephisos valley. K. O. Mueller, OrchoMENOS<sup>2</sup> (1844) p. 486, observes that Pindos (= Dorion, Aischin. de f. L. 286. 2), Boion, Kytinion, Erineon formed the Dorian tetrapolis, properly so called: Lilaia, Karphaia (= Skarphaia), and Dryope, "if there ever was a town of this name," were 'Dorian' in 480 B.C. (Schol. Pindar Pyth. 1. 121, Tzetz. Lyc. 980), and constitute the στεινὸς ποδεὼν here described. For ποδεὼν cp. 2. 121. Stein remarks that the forms Δρυοπαῖος, Δρυπαῖος on Delphian inscrip. implies a township Δρυόπη.

6. ἥ περ ἦν τὸ παλαιὸν Δρυοπίς. These words must refer to the whole Δωρίς χώρα, and have the air of a gloss, which has crept into the text, and at an awkward place: in any case they should follow the Δωρίδος χώρας and not the Φωκίδος χώρας. Cp. c. 43 infra.

7. μητρόπολις Δωριέων τῶν ἐν Πελοποννήσῳ: a memorable note, marking Dryopis-Doris as the last station in the chart of the Dorian wandering before the invasion of the Peloponnesos and 'the return of the Herakleidai'; cp. c. 43 infra. Whether Hdt. is right in bringing all the Dorians in the Peloponnesos from this 'metropolis' (and apparently by one route! at one time?) is a further question, or group of questions, too large to discuss here in a note. It seems, however, that the Legend of the Return lay completely developed before Hdt.; cp. 9. 26 infra. The fact that the name of the Dorians attaches itself to this Dryopis, and to this place alone on the whole map of Greece, is at least proof of a genuinely Dorian character in the folk of that place. In 457 B.C. the Phokians invaded Δωριᾶς τὴν Λακεδαιμονίων μητρόπολιν Βοῖον καὶ Κυτίνιον καὶ Ἐρινεὸν Thuc. 1. 107. 2, and in 426 B.C. ἐννεπρεσβεύοντο δὲ αὐτοῖς (sc. Τραχινίοις) καὶ Δωριᾶς ἡ μητρόπολις τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων Thuc. 3. 92. 3. This application led to the foundation of Herakleia, the fortress which commanded the road from Trachis into Doris, used by the Persians in 480 B.C. In Amphiktyonic inscrip. the official title of these Dorians is Δωριεῖς οἱ ἐκ τῆς Μητροπόλεως, Buerger, Amphiktyonie (1887) p. 29.

8. οὐκ ἐσίναντο ἐσβαλόντες, 'they entered it, but they did it no harm,' for two reasons: (1) the Dorians 'medized,' (2) the Thessalians disapproved. This patronage or prostasia of Thessaly over Doris challenges observation.

32. 1. ἐκ τῆς Δωρίδος ἐς τὴν Φωκίδα: the exact frontier between Doris and Phokis is not very clearly marked by any actual boundary; the list of townships destroyed, in c. 33 infra, seems to show that K. O. Mueller, l.c. supr., extended the ποδεὼν too far in taking it down so as to include Lilaia, though that place, oddly enough, is not included in the list. But Hdt.'s topography of Phokis is not quite all that it might have been (die Angaben stimmen nicht zur Lokalität, Stein).

2. οἱ μὲν: the corresponding term is found in οἱ δὲ πλεῖντες, infra. The first term may perhaps be referred to the τῶν Φωκέων ἐς τὰ ἄκρα τοῦ Παρνησοῦ ἀνέβησαν· ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἐπιτηδὴ δέξασθαι ὁμίλον τοῦ Παρνησοῦ ἢ κορυφή, κατὰ Νέωνα πόλιν κειμένη ἐπ' ἐωυτῆς· Τιθορέα οὖνομα αὐτῇ· ἐς 5 τὴν δὴ ἀνηνείκαντο καὶ αὐτοὶ ἀνέβησαν. οἱ δὲ πλεῖνες αὐτῶν

3 παρνησοῦ α: παρνησοῦ || ἀνέβησαν . . Παρνησοῦ om. R 4
παρνησοῦ A: παρνησοῦ B: παρνησοῦ 5 κειμένην ἐπ' αὐτῆς? van H.
|| τιθορέα B || ἐς τὴν διὰ νηνείκαντο R: ἐς σπάρτην ἀνενείκαντο Eustath.
Od. p. 1604: ἀνηνείκαντό <τε πάντα> καὶ? van H.

fighting men, and the second, the majority, to the non-combatants.

3. τὰ ἄκρα τοῦ Παρνησοῦ need not necessarily be restricted to just the two famous topmost peaks, Lykorea and Tithorea, which earned Parnassos the title of biceps: Ovid, Metam. 2. 221; cp. 1. 316 Mons ibi verticibus petit arduus astra duobus, Nomine Parnassus; Lucan, Phars. 5. 72 Parnassus gemino petit aethera colle. The mountain has many ἄκρα, like every other large range or system: ἄκρα (τά) is used by Hdt. for high ground, as in 6. 100 τὰ ἄκρα τῆς Βεβόλης; and the very next sentence seems to show that Hdt. himself thought of Parnassos as having only one κορυφή, though it might have many ἄκρα. But cp. next note. Pausanias 10. 32. 2 employs the phrase τὰ ἄκρα τοῦ Παρνασοῦ.

4. τοῦ Παρνησοῦ ἢ κορυφή: Parnassos is a mountain with twin peaks, of which Tithorea was only one; cp. previous note. Hdt. treats Tithorea here as the sole summit. In c. 39 infra he names another κορυφή Hyampeia, but that is in a story from another (a Delphian) source; and moreover the word κορυφή there may be used simply for a peak, cp. c. 37—not as here obviously for the absolute summit. This sentence, however, comes in curiously, and has somewhat the air of an insertion, from the author's own hand, for (i.) it postpones the correlative to αὐτῶν above, and (ii.) it contains a slight correction of the foregoing statement, as it shows the Phokian minority gone up not to τὰ ἄκρα generally but to ἢ κορυφή, that is to Tithorea. Ulrichs (l.c. infra) suggests that the inhabitants of Neon retired to a large cave, well supplied with water, and impregnable, which lies behind Velitza.

κατὰ Νέωνα . . Τιθορέα: Bursian, Geogr. von Griechenl. i. (1862) 166, proves that there was in later times a township named Τιθόρρα (inscripp.) or Τιθόρα (inscripp. and Plutarch, Sulla 15), or (in the mss. generally) Τιθορέα, or (in Steph. B. erroneously) Τιθοράα, and asserts that Tithora occupied the site of the older city Neon. Extensive remains near the modern village of Velitza attest the site of Tithora, beyond doubt. Cp. Ulrichs, 'Topographie und Inschriften von Tithora,' Rhein. M. N.F. 2. 544 ff. (1843), but Ulrichs denies the absolute identity of the sites of the old Neon and the new Tithora, and identifies Neon with a site at Palea-Fiva some five miles north of Velitza (Tithora). The name of Neon, but not that of Tithora, occurs in the list of the twenty-two members of the Phokian League given by Pausanias 10. 3. 2. His remarks on the present passage may be quoted in full: 10. 32. 5 διάφορα ἐς τὸ ὄνομα οἶδα τῆς πόλεως Ἡροδότῳ τε εἰρημένα ἐν ἐπιστρατεῖα τοῦ Μήδου καὶ Βακίδι ἐν χρησμοῖς. Βάκεις μὲν γὰρ Τιθορέας τοὺς ἐνθάδε ἐκάλεσαν ἀνθρώπων· Ἡροδότου δὲ ὁ ἐς αὐτοὺς λόγος ἐπιώντος φησὶ τοῦ βαρβάρου τοὺς ἐνταῦθα οἰκοῦντας ἀναφινγεῖν ἐς τὴν κορυφήν, ὄνομα δὲ Νέωνα μὲν τῇ πόλει, Τιθορέαν δὲ εἶναι τοῦ Παρνασοῦ τῇ ἄκρᾳ. ἔοικεν οὖν ἀνὰ χρόνον πρῶτα μὲν δὴ τῇ ἀπάσῃ χώρᾳ, μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα, ἐπειδὴ ἀνωκίσθησαν ἀπὸ τῶν κωμῶν, ἐκινῆσαι καὶ ἐπὶ τῇ πόλει Τιθορέαν μὴδὲ ἔτι Νέωνα ὀνομάζεσθαι. Τιθορέα δὲ οἱ ἐπιχώριοι τεθῆναι φασιν ἀπὸ Τιθορέας νύμφης, οἷα τὸ ἀρχαῖον λόγῳ τῷ ποιητῶν ἐφύοντο ἀπὸ τε ἄλλων δένδρων καὶ μάλιστα ἀπὸ τῶν δρυῶν. (But what has Tithorea to do with trees!) Grasberger, Gr. Ortsnamen, attempts to connect Τιθοράα (sic), 'name of one of the heights of Parnassos,' with τιθρός a 'pap.' The name Τιθόρα has a more archaic appearance than Νέων (sic ap. Pausan.), and its later use was perhaps a revival, although applied to a fresh site.

6. ἀνηνείκαντο: sc. τὰ ἐαυτῶν: cp. c. 36 infra; 3. 148 ἀνευκαίμενος τὰ ἑχῶν ἐξεχώρησε makes the meaning clear.

ἐς τοὺς Ὀζόλας Λοκροὺς ἐξεκομίσαντο, ἐς Ἀμφισσαν πόλιν
τὴν ὑπὲρ τοῦ Κρισαίου πεδίου οἰκημένην. οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι τὴν χώραν πᾶσαν ἐπέδραμον τὴν Φωκίδα· Θεσσαλοὶ γὰρ 10 οὕτω ἤγον τὸν στρατόν· ὅκοσα δὲ ἐπέσχον, πάντα ἐπέφλεγον καὶ ἔκειρον, καὶ ἐς τὰς πόλεις ἐνιέντες πῦρ καὶ ἐς τὰ ἱρά.
33 πορευόμενοι γὰρ ταύτῃ παρὰ τὸν Κηφισὸν ποταμὸν ἐδήουν
πάντα, καὶ κατὰ μὲν ἔκανσαν Δρυμὸν πόλιν κατὰ δὲ Χαράδραν

7 ἄμφισσαν C 8 κρισαίου B || οἰκημένην Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.:
κειμένην C: οἰκεομένην ceteri, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder 11 πόλις B: πόλεις C
|| καὶ ἐς τὰ ἱρά: καὶ ἴστα ἱρά B: καὶ ἑστέρα V: καὶ ἕτερα R: κατέκαιον S
33. 1 ταύτῃ: τὰ τε? Stein<sup>2</sup> || παρὰ om. C || κηφισὸν BPz || ἐδήουν B:
ἐδήουν z 2 Δρύμον Stein<sup>1</sup> || χαράδραν C: χαράδρην PRS: (χαρά cum
dr supersc. V)

7. Ὀζόλας Λοκροὺς: Hdt. distinguishes from the Ὀπούντιοι Λοκροί: cp. 7. 203, c. 1 supra. They are the Western Lokrians in the peninsula, a primitive, not to say barbarous, folk even in the days of Thucydides (1. 5. 3), but useful allies withal on occasion (3. 95. 3). The 'Epizephyrian' Lokri are also mentioned by Hdt. 6. 23. Pausanias 10. 38 gives five different explanations of the name Ozoliai, and Strabo 427 adds a sixth. Five of these connect the name with one bad smell or another (δίζω); one traces it to ὄζος, a branch, shoot, but with a fanciful legend attached. The latter appears the better derivation, in the sense that these were the Branch-Lokri, from the parent stem in Opús: but need either alternative be more than a Volksetymologie?

Ἀμφισσαν: cp. c. 36 infra. No doubt the chief city of the Ozolian Lokri, situate at the inner edge of the 'Krisaia plain,' on the main route from Delphi to Thermopylai. The Amphissaiaans were not always on good terms with the Phokians; cp. Thuc. 3. 101. 2. Amphissa was denounced for sacrilege by Aischines in 340 B.C., and destroyed by Philip two years later (cp. J. B. Bury, Hist. of Greece, ii. 314 ff.), but subsequently restored, as its coinage attests (cp. Head, Hist. Num. 286).

8. τοῦ Κρισαίου πεδίου: neither Krisa, nor its port Kirrha, were in existence when Hdt. wrote; but neither here, nor elsewhere, has he taken occasion to refer to the so-called τερὸς πόλεμος which led to their destruction; cp. note to c. 29 supra. The old name must have clung to the fertile landscape, as it certainly clung to the bay, round which the landscape lies; cp. Thuc. 1. 107. 3, 2. 69. 1, etc.

10. οὕτω: sc. ὥστε τὴν χώραν πᾶσαν ἐπιδραμεῖν.

ὅκοσα δὲ ἐπέσχον: cp. c. 35 infra δσα δὲ καὶ οὗτοι ἐπέσχον τῇ Φωκίδος, πάντα ἐσινάμωρον. Whatever places they touched, reached, overspread, they devastated. Cp. 1. 104 οἱ δὲ Σκύθαι τὴν Ἀσίην πᾶσαν ἐπέσχον. It is an abstract synonym for the more graphic and concrete ἐπέδραμον.

33. 1. τὸν Κηφισὸν ποταμὸν: cp. 7. 178. The river Kephisos had its source proper in the territory of Lilaia: Pausan. 10. 33. 4 Λίλαιαν δὲ τῶν καλουμένων Ναϊδων καὶ Θυγατέρα εἶναι τοῦ Κηφισοῦ, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς νέμφης τὸ ὄνομα τεθῆναι τῇ πόλει φασί. It was a day's journey across Parnassos from Lilaia to Delphi, ib., i.e. there was a regular path that way. Lilaia (mod. Agoriani!) was a regular member of the Phokian League (Pausan. 10. 3. 2), and no doubt shared the fate of the other Phokian cities on this occasion. Pausanias 10. 33. 7 says: γῇ δὲ διακεκριμένως ἀρίστη τῆς Φωκίδος ἐστὶν ἢ παρὰ τὸν Κηφισὸν καὶ φυτεῦσαι καὶ σπεῖρειν καὶ ἀνείναι νομός· καὶ γεωργεῖται ταῦτα μάλιστα τῆς χώρας ὥστε κτλ.

2. κατὰ μὲν . . . κατὰ δέ: a remarkable tmesis; cp. 5. 81.

Δρυμὸν πόλιν: no doubt the Δρυμᾶ of Pausanias' list i.e., Δρυμᾶ ap. Steph. B., twenty stades distant from Tithronion, on the high ground above left bank of the river.

Χαράδραν: twenty stades east of Lilaia, that is, on the right (south) side of the river. The town suffered from καὶ Ἐρωχον καὶ Τεθρόνιον καὶ Ἀμφίκαιαν καὶ Νέωνα καὶ Πεδιέας καὶ Τριτέας καὶ Ἐλάτειαν καὶ Ὑάμπολιν καὶ Παρα-

3 τεθρόνιον B: Θρόνιον Eustath. II. p. 638 || ἀμφίκαια R

want of water, Pausan. 10. 33. 6. Charadra and Dryonaia may be taken to represent the frontier townships. Frazer, Paus. v. 416, gives a plan of the ruins, and puts the name on his map of Phokis (vol. vi.).

3. Ἐρωχον: Erochos occurs in Pausanias' list between Daulis and Charadra; Leake, N.G. ii. 89, regarded its site as undiscoverable; Bursian, op. c. i. 162, places it conjecturally between Charadra and Tithronion; it appears on Grundy's and Klepert's maps on the left side of the river, between Tithronion and Elateia. It was probably a small place, apparently restored after the Phokian war (in which it had been destroyed again); cp. Frazer, Paus. v. 215 (10. 3. 2).

Τεθρόνιον lay on a plain, 15 stades from Amphikleia, and 20 from Drymaia (Pausan. 10. 33. 12), apparently on the left side of the river: παρέχεται δὲ οὐδὲν ἐς μνημὸν, ibid. (Tithrone, Plin.; Τιθρώνιον Steph. B.).

Ἀμφίκαιαν, Pausanias states that the correct form of the name was Ἀμφικλαία, and appeared in the Dogma of the Amphiktyons on the destruction of the Phokian cities; but Ἡρόδοτος μὲν Ἀμφίκαιαν ἐκάλεσεν ἐπόμενος τῷ ἀρχαιοτάτῳ τῶν λόγων. Amphikaia was certainly the epichorion form, as is proved by the local legend narrated by Pausanias. This form was associated with a cult of Dionysos, and cures were effected δι' ὀνειράτων. The site is identified, apparently, on the hills to the south of Kephisos, below and east of Lilaia, just above the modern Dadi (Frazer v. 420): Pausanias' measurements here appear untrustworthy: Bursian i. 162.

Νέωνα: on the skirts of Parnassos; cp. c. 32 supra.

4. Πεδιέας καὶ Τριτέας: these names do not occur in Pausanias' list, nor elsewhere except in this place. Bursian (i. 163) condemns Leake's conjecture that Πεδιέας represents the township Διδίω (not mentioned by Hdt.), and suggests that these two towns never recovered after their destruction by the Persians in 480 B.C., although a Τριταία in Ozolian Lokris may, he supposes with almost equally little reason, be a new home for the Phokian Τριτεῖς.

Ἐλάτειαν: the chief city of Phokis μετά γε τοῦ Δελφοῦς, Pausan. 10. 34. Its site is identified (Leake ii. 82, Bursian i. 163, Frazer v. 425 ff.), commanding the outlet of the pass of Hyampolis (c. 28 supra). Its strategic importance becomes more prominent in the fourth century, and the Makedonian period. The immortal passage, in which Demosthenes describes the seizure of Elateia by Philip in 338 B.C. (de Cor. 284), is, or was, known to every schoolboy.

Ὑάμπολιν: on the main road from Boiotia and Phokis to Opús, and so to Thermopylai; cp. c. 28 supra. Pausanias 10. 35. 5 records that the city was a settlement of Ὑάντες from Thebes, and that the full name of the city was Ὑάντων πόλις. Kleonai, the actual scene of the Thessalian defeat (cp. Plutarch, L.c. c. 28 supra) a little higher up the pass, was presumably a dependency of Hyampolis; remains of Hyampolis are identifiable (Leake ii. 167, Bursian i. 165, Frazer v. 442). The city would be the first exposed to the attack of a force coming from Thermopylai, and probably in 480 B.C. (with Abai) was destroyed, not by the Persian column which had crossed from Malis into Doris, and then worked down the Kephisos valley, spreading ruin and death wherever it came, but by the main column, which must have advanced from Thermopylai along the coast, and through the pass of Hyampolis.

Παραποταμίους. Parapotamioi appears in Pausanias' list of the Phokian League, but the city had never recovered from its destruction by the Amphiktyons in the Phokian war. Παραποταμίους μὲν δὲ οὔτε ἐρείπια ἐτι ἦν, οὔτε ἐνθα τῆς χώρας ὥκισθη ἡ πόλις μνημονεύουσιν (10. 33. 8). The more careful modern periegetai have improved upon this. The site has been identified in the narrow strait, between Mounts Philoboiotos and Hadyleion, through which the Kephisos passes from the plain of Elateia to the plain of Chaironeia (Leake ii. 97, Bursian i. 164, Frazer v. 418). The order in which Hdt. names Hyampolis, Parapotamioi and Abai is not geographical in either direction. Abai is probably placed last, because there is a note to add to the name.

- 5 ποταμίους καὶ Ἀβας, ἔνθα ἦν ἱρὸν Ἀπόλλωνος πλούσιον, θησαυροῖσί τε καὶ ἀναθήμασι πολλοῖσι κατεσκευασμένον· ἦν δὲ καὶ τότε καὶ νῦν ἔτι χρηστήριον αὐτόθι. καὶ τοῦτο τὸ ἱρὸν συλήσαντες ἐνέπρῃσαν, καὶ τινὰς διώκοντες εἶλον τῶν Φωκέων πρὸς τοῖσι ὄρεσι, καὶ γυναῖκας τινὰς διέφθειραν 10 μισγόμενοι ὑπὸ πλήθεος.
- 34 Παραποταμίους δὲ παραμειβόμενοι οἱ βάρβαροι ἀπίκοντο εἰς Πανοπέας. ἐνθεῦτεν δὲ ἤδη διακρινόμενη ἡ στρατιὴ αὐτῶν

7 ἔτι: ἔστι B, Holder: 'an ἔτι ἔστι?' van H. 8 συλλήσαντες Bz
|| τῶν om. α 9 οὖρεσι CPz, van H. || διέφθειρον B 34. 1
παραμειψόμενοι van H.

Hyampolis and Parapotamioi are then in the order in which they would have been visited by a force coming from Opús. Cp. also next chapter.

5. Ἀβας: Abai was plainly situated lower down the (Assos) valley than Hyampolis, Pausan. 10. 35. 1. Its site is clearly identified (Leake ii. 164, Bursian i. 165, Frazer v. 436 with plans). Hyampolis, the city of the Hyantes, was also known as Hya; and it is possible that Abai was the city of the Abantes: Abantopolis! But the statement of Aristotle ap. Strabon. 445 that the old name of Euboea, viz. Abantia, was traceable to Thracians, who crossed over into the island from Abai, in Phokis, is not convincing. The chief claim of Abai to renown was no doubt its Apolline oracle.

6. θησαυροῖσί τε καὶ ἀναθήμασι: some of them due to the pious liberality of Kroisos, l. 46. It is a little remarkable that Hdt. does not specify this point here, especially in view of the notice in c. 35 infra; but perhaps when he wrote this passage originally he was not yet acquainted with the story of the Trial of the Oracles; in other words, his silence here makes for the earlier composition of Books 7-9; cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

ἦν δὲ καὶ τότε καὶ νῦν ἔτι: sc. ἔστι. The χρηστήριον survived the destruction of the ἱρὸν, and was even consulted in the following winter on behalf of Mardonios, c. 134 infra, a point which might tempt one to postpone the destruction of Abai till after the Plataian campaign.

7. τὸ ἱρὸν συλήσαντες ἐνέπρῃσαν: Pausanias, 10. 35. 2, says that this was one of the temples left in ruins as a witness of the war with the barbarians.

The ruined temple was again fired by the Thebans in the Phokian war; but of the twenty-two members of the Phokian League Abai was the only city not destroyed and 'di-oikized' by the Amphiktyons, being, indeed, the only one not associated in the sacrilegious attack on Delphi.

9. γυναῖκας τινὰς διέφθειραν: from the specification it might be inferred that such atrocities were unknown in Hellenic warfare.

10. ὑπὸ πλήθεος, prae multitudine, sc. τῶν μισγόμενων (Stein).

34. 1. Παραποταμίους δέ: this reversion to Parapotamioi, which just above was mentioned between Hyampolis and Abai, replaces it in its proper geographical position, at the lower extremity of the Elateian plain.

2. εἰς Πανοπίας: Panopeus, but twenty stades from Chaironeia, commanding the open frontier passage, according to Pausanias 10. 4. 1, appears in the list of the Phokian League, though the periegete is inclined to challenge its title to be a city at all, so poorly was it provided with all that doth a city make: ἀρχεῖα, γυμνάσιον, θέατρον, ἀγορά, κρήνη. Still the citizens had termini (ὄροι) and they sent representatives to the Phokian sanhedrim. He is curiously blind, apparently, to the evidences of its former greatness and strategic importance; cp. Leake ii. 110, Bursian i. 168, Frazer v. 216 ff. Πανοπέως appears in the Homeric Catalogue Il. 2. 520 side by side with Daulis; cp. 17. 307; and in Od. 11. 581 as on the road to Delphi; cp. Pausan. l.c. In Thucydides the name is modified into the form Φανορείς, 4. 89. 2; cp. 4. 76. 3 ἔστι δὲ ἡ Χαιρώνεια ἐσχάτον τῆς Βοιωτίας πρὸς τῇ Φανορίδι τῆς

ἔσχιζέτο· τὸ μὲν πλεῖστον καὶ δυνατώτατον τοῦ στρατοῦ
 ἄμα αὐτῷ Ξέρξῃ πορευόμενον ἐπ' Ἀθήνας ἐσέβαλε ἐς Βοιωτούς, ἐς γῆν τὴν Ὀρχομενίων. Βοιωτῶν δὲ πᾶν τὸ πλήθος ἐμήδιζε, 5

4 ἐπ' : ἐς B || ἐς Βοιωτοὺς καὶ Βοιωτῶν ἐς suspicatur Kallenberg
 5 γῆν τῶν B : τὴν τῶν z

Φακίδος. So Strabo (following Homer) 423 after Daulis mentions Πανοπεὺς δ' ὁ νῦν Φανοτεὺς, ὁμοιος τοῖς περὶ Λεβᾶδειαν τόποις (of which the insignificant Chaironeia might be one). The Herodotean form of the name is Πανοπέες (-είς).

διακρινόμενη ἡ στρατιὴ αὐτῶν ἔσχιζέτο. Hdt. thinks that at Panopeus there was a new departure. Hitherto the army has advanced, according to him, in a single column, from Thermopylai, via Doris, and the upper valley of the Kephisos, through the pass at Parapotamioi, to Panopeus. At this point, however, a division of the forces takes effect. One column, the smaller one, is detached for service against Delphi; the other, and larger portion of the army, advances with Xerxes into Boiotia, and so to Attika. It has been already shown that from Thermopylai the Persians must have advanced in at least two, and possibly even in three, columns; cp. co. 28, 31 supra. Two of these columns would naturally have reunited at Parapotamioi, or at Panopeus, unless indeed the left column in the advance crossed the mountain direct by the road from Hyampolis and Abai to Orchomenos (ἡ ἐπὶ Ὀποῦντα λεωφόρος ἡ ἐξ Ὀρχομενοῦ of Pausanias 10. 35. 1). As the main baggage-train and cavalry probably came by the coast route from Thermopylai, this alternative seems the less probable. Parapotamioi, then, may be looked upon as the probable rendezvous of the two columns from Thermopylai, that which devastated upper Phokis, and that which visited Hyampolis and Abai (and possibly other places on Mount Knemis). The columns thus reunited may have passed from Parapotamioi to Panopeus. From Panopeus too a column may have been detached to visit Delphi, as here narrated; but the story of the visit to Delphi is in itself open to the gravest suspicion (see further below), and it is even possible that, if the Persians ever visited Delphi at all, Panopeus was not the point of departure, but the point of reunion, for the forces. The start for Delphi might have been made from Trachis, or from Doris, and the route followed might have been by Amphissa to Delphi, and from Delphi down to Panopeus. The specification of Amphissa, c. 32 supra, as the chief refuge for the Phokians, is against this hypothesis, though the excellence of the route is in its favour. Or, again, the Persian column, operating in the upper Kephisos valley, might have detached a force at Lilaia—so curiously omitted by Hdt.—to go straight across Parnassos to Delphi. Λίλαια δὲ ἡμέρας μὲν ὁδὸν καὶ ὥρα χειμῶνος ἀπέχει Δελφῶν κατιοῦσι διὰ τοῦ Παρνασσοῦ Pausan. 10. 33. 3. The Persian force would then have rejoined the main body at Daulis, or Panopeus. One admission the Herodotean story makes: it shows a vague consciousness that through Central Greece the Persian forces had not moved all along in one single mass, on one single route.

4. ἐς Βοιωτούς, ἐς γῆν τὴν Ὀρχομενίων: the designation of the whole, followed by the designation of the part (cp. c. 23 supra). From Panopeus one road led west to Daulis (cp. next c.) and so to (or from) Delphi; another east to Chaironeia, little more than a couple of miles (twenty stades) distant. The actual frontier between Phokis and Boiotia must be sought in this interval; Bursian (op. cit. i. 167) finds it in the bed of the Μῶλος or Μῶριος, a small torrent descending from the north-western portion of Helikon and emptying into the Kephisos at the foot of Mount Hadyleion (Plutarch, Sulla, 17, 19). Hdt. does not mention Chaironeia, which was not at this time politically an important place, nor even an independent member of the Boiotian Confederacy (cp. Thuc. 4. 76. 3), but stood, probably, to Orchomenos in much the same relation as that between Kleonai and Hyampolis in Phokis (cp. c. 33 supra). Orchomenos was still no doubt the chief city in the western (or north-western) plain of Boiotia, though fallen from its high estate in 'Minyan' times, and now inferior in political importance to Thebes; cp. further 9. 16, notes.

5. Βοιωτῶν δὲ πᾶν τὸ πλήθος ἐμήδιζε:

τὰς δὲ πόλεις αὐτῶν ἄνδρες Μακεδόνες διατεταγμένοι ἔσφζον ὑπὸ Ἀλεξάνδρου ἀποπεμφθέντες· ἔσφζον δὲ τῇδε, δῆλον βουλόμενοι ποιεῖν Ξέρξῃ ὅτι τὰ Μήδων Βοιωτοὶ φρονέουσιν.

6 πόλεις B || ἔσφζον (bis) van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἔσωζον 7 τῇδε om. B,
'et commode abesse potest' van H. || βουλόμενοι δῆλον z

the political significance of this statement is ambiguous; is πᾶν τὸ πλῆθος, plebs universa, in distinction to the aristocracy? Or is it merely universa multitudo, the vast majority, independent of social rank, or political privilege? Again, what is the force and value of the contrast between τὸ πλῆθος and τὰς πόλεις? Is the πλῆθος wholly outside the πόλεις? Is it merely the plebs or multitudo rustica? Or is there any emphasis on the distinction? Or are the πόλεις specifically the citadels?

Baehr understands πλῆθος here as plebs, and takes the point to be that the rustic population, which was 'plebeian,' joined the Persians, while the cities, inhabited or held by the upper classes, were anti-Persian, but were saved from Persian vengeance by the good offices of the Makedonians. But this use of τὸ πλῆθος is hardly Herodotean (even 3. 80, 81 πλῆθος ἀρχον, ἐς τὸ πλῆθος φέρειν τὸ κράτος not quite justifying the supposed political and social connotation of the word, as used in this passage). And again, that interpretation would not square with the points in the Plataio-Theban argument in Thuc. 3. 53-67 (ex hypothesi 427 B.C.), where the Plataians represent themselves, and that to the oligarchic Spartans, as the only Boiotians who had not medized; while the Theban reply is not that only the democratic multitude medized, but that the medism of Thebes was due to the inner ring of oligarchy (δυναστεία ὀλίγων ἀνδρῶν 3. 62. 3).

Βοιωτῶν πᾶν τὸ πλῆθος here is, therefore, to be understood 'the Boiotians without (or with hardly) an exception.' But Thespiæ and Plataia were, of course, exceptions: perhaps, however, they were not truly 'Boiotians.'

6. τὰς δὲ πόλεις αὐτῶν . . ἔσφζον: Makedonian garrisons were introduced into the various Boiotian cities, and preserved them from the Persians, and the fate of the Phokian townships. Hdt. does not enumerate or specify the Boiotian cities thus preserved, but he records, c. 50 infra, the destruction of Thespiæ and of Plataia, and other Boiotian cities he names incidentally: Orchomenos (as here), Lebadeia c. 134 infra, Thebes c. 134 infra, et passim, Tanagra 9. 15 et al., Akraiphia c. 135 infra, and perhaps inferentially Kopai ibid. Phokis was made more memorable by its misfortunes than Boiotia by its immunities.

διατεταγμένοι: distributed, by order, throughout the cities severally. 'The men of Makedon' were apparently not single agents, but bodies of soldiers, garrisons.

7. ὑπὸ Ἀλεξάνδρου ἀποπεμφθέντες: the absence of the patronymic is to be observed. Alexander is treated as a known quantity; the article is equally absent, for he has not been named recently; but this passage could not be his first introduction: cp. 7. 173, 175. These Makedonian garrisons appear to have been sent on ahead.

τῇδε, 'for this purpose.' Hdt. ascribes to the men (βουλόμενοι) what must have been the wish and policy of their master. This good understanding between Alexander and the Boiotians, i.e. primarily the Thebans, throws considerable doubt upon the loyalty of Thebes and Boiotia to the national cause in the first instance. But the precautions taken to save them from pillage, if necessary, would show, either that the Persian forces were getting out of hand, or that the Boiotians had really made a stand at Thermopylai, and provoked the enemy.

It is, however, quite possible that here, as elsewhere, while the act is historical, the motive is fictitious. Makedonian garrisons may have been introduced into the Boiotian cities, not for the purpose of saving them from the Persians, but for the purpose of saving the medizing factions from the loyal or 'hellenizing' party. The curious turn of phrase, ὅτι τὰ Μήδων Βοιωτοὶ φρονέουσιν, 'that there were Boiotians of the Medes' way of thinking,' may support that view. With φρονέειν cp. 7. 145; with τὰ M. cp. τὰ Ἑλλήνων c. 30 supra.

οὔτοι μὲν δὴ τῶν βαρβάρων ταύτῃ ἐτράποντο, ἄλλοι δὲ αὐτῶν 35
 ἡγεμόνας ἔχοντες ὁρμέατο ἐπὶ τὸ ἱρὸν τὸ ἐν Δελφοῖσι, ἐν δεξιῇ τὸν Παρνησὸν ἀπέργοντες. ὅσα δὲ καὶ οὗτοι ἐπέσχον τῆς Φωκίδος, πάντα ἐσιναμώρεον· καὶ γὰρ τῶν Πανοπέων τὴν πόλιν ἐνέπρησαν καὶ Δαυλίων καὶ Αἰολιδέων. ἐπορεύοντο 5

35. 2 ὁρμέατο CP      3 παρνησὸν α: παρνησσὸν      5 αἰολίδων Pz: Διλαίων Valckenaer, (Blakesley), van H.

35. 1. ταύτη: sc. ἐς Βοιωτούς.

ἄλλοι δὲ αὐτῶν: Hdt. gives neither the number of the force sent to Delphi, nor the name of its commander. ἡγεμόνας: sc. τῆς ὁδοῦ, cp. c. 31 supra: their names, their race, anonymous too!

2. ὁρμέατο has no psychological suggestion, but is purely mechanical; cp. 7. 215 ὁρμέατο δὲ περὶ λόχων ἀφὰς ἐκ τοῦ στρατοπέδου.

τὸ ἱρὸν τὸ ἐν Δελφοῖσι: the geographical position of Delphi hardly requires elucidation, in general: situate on a sloping edge, or shelf of rock, 2000 feet above the sea, backed by sheer cliffs of Parnassos, with the gorge of the Pleistos immediately below walled in by the ridge of Kirphis, with the fertile plain of Amphissa, of Kirrha, beyond, in full view of the Krissaian bay, and sighting the Arkadian mountains that tower beyond the Korinthian gulf, Delphi yields in natural charms and grandeur of aspect and prospect to no landscape in Hellas! It is accessible from three directions: (i.) The easiest route comes up from the sea, across the plain, and the steep spurs of Parnassos, half a day's journey. (ii.) Behind Delphi, up over the western heights and glades of Parnassos, runs the path to Lilaia (Agorianē) in the valley of the Kephisos, cp. c. 33 supra. (iii.) Away to the east goes the better route, first rising and then descending, from Delphi to Boiotia, forking after a while (the σχιστὴ ὁδός!), the right path running on to Lebadeia, the left to Daulia, Panopeus, and so on into Boiotia, cp. l. 4 supra. It is by this last route that Hdt. would have us conceive the Persian column approaching the shrine. τὸ ἱρὸν was of course the fabric of the Alkmaionidai: 5. 62. On all that concerns the topography and archaeology of the place cf. Frazer's Pausanias, v. 234-398 (pending the full and official publication of the results of the excavations conducted by the French School).

ἐν δεξιῇ τὸν Παρνησὸν ἀπέργοντες: these words would describe their position ever since they crossed from Trachis into Doris, and then marched down the Kephisos. They would also bar out, if accepted as final, not merely the advance on Delphi by the Πυθιάς or sacred road from the north, via Amphissa, but also an advance from Lilaia across Parnassos, by which the highest points of Parnassos would still have lain to the left. Hdt., believing Panopeus to be the point of departure, naturally says they marched with Parnassos on their right, and, he might have added, with Helikon and Kirphis on their left.

3. ὅσα δὲ . . ἐπέσχον . . ἐσιναμώρεον: cp. c. 32 supra. σιναμώρεον (cp. l. 152, 5. 92 συνάμωρος) appears to be a strengthened variant of σινεσθαι or σινέσθαι, c. 31 supra. The conduct ascribed to them is irrational, as they would need supplies on their way back from Delphi—for they must have intended to return; and this statement is, therefore, inconsistent with the idea that the visitors for Delphi started on this occasion from Panopeus.

4. Πανοπέων: cp. 34 supra; i.e. after the main army had gone on into Boiotia this corps remained behind and destroyed Panopeus! If the corps detached for Delphi destroyed Panopeus, then assuredly it was on the way down from Delphi, and not before starting. This inference favours the view that this corps had marched via Lilaia or Amphissa.

5. Δαυλίων, situate a little way up the ascent of route (iii.), and the last station apparently on the road to Delphi (cp. Strabo 423). From Daulis to Delphi (or vice versa) is an easy day's march; cp. Iliad 2. 520, Thuc. 2. 29. 3.

Αἰολιδέων, unknown and unintelligible as a place-name: does it represent the modern Arachova? i.e. Anemoreia (cp. Bursian, op. cit. i. 170, Frazer v. 232). Or shall we not rather accept Valckenaer's conjecture Αἰαλιδέων, approved by Blakesley, δὲ ταύτη ἀποσχισθέντες τῆς ἄλλης στρατιῆς τῶνδε εἵνεκα,<sup>6</sup>

ὅπως συλήσαντες τὸ ἱρὸν τὸ ἐν Δελφοῖσι βασιλεῖ Ξέρξῃ ἀποδέξαιεν τὰ χρήματα. πάντα δ' ἠπίστατο τὰ ἐν τῷ ἱρῷ ὅσα λόγου ἦν ἄξια Ξέρξης, ὡς ἐγὼ πυνθάνομαι, ἄμεινον ἢ τὰ

6 ταύτην α || εἵνεκεν β 7 συλλήσαντες Ss || τὸ ἐν Δελφοῖσι
'moleste repetitum' Kallenberg || Ξέρξῃ del. van H. 8 δὲ ἐπιστάτο
RSV (ἐπίστατο Schaefer, Bekker) || τὰ om. β

and then reverse the route of this corps, and obtain a name which is conspicuous by its absence in the Herodotean catalogue? Διλαίων would of course be from Διλαίος or Διλαίαι. Lilaia was an important member of the Phokian confederacy, and its omission from Hdt.'s list (which with it contains fifteen of the twenty-one names in the list of Pausanias) is very remarkable. Cp. note to c. 33 supra.

6. τῶνδε εἵνεκα. The political position and relations of the oracle at the time are of vital importance as bearing upon the story of the Persian visitation in 480 B.C. In the Iliad Pytho, or Python, is apparently as much a Phokian city as Daulis or Panopeus, Hyampolis or Lilaia (2. 517 ff.), which proves, inter alia, that the Catalogue is older than the First Sacred War. That war, waged by the 'Amphiktyons' on behalf of the Delphians, raised or secured the pan-Hellenic significance of the oracle, and doubtless emancipated it completely from Phokian leading. Whether an Ionian (Athens-Sikyon) or a Dorian (Sparta) or a Thessalian influence thereafter predominated may be matter of dispute; but the Phokians at least were but one among the Amphiktyonic folks. The war with the Thessalians, οὐ πολλοῖσι ἔτεσι πρότερον ταύτης τῆς βασιλείας στρατηλασίης c. 27 supra, may have had something of the character of a ἱερὸς πολέμος, although never so described. It cannot, however, be supposed that on the eve of the Persian war the Delphic oracle had sunk again to be a mere member of the Phokian League, or a mere organ of Phokian policy; the continuous notices of the oracle's action and utterances, from the date of the destruction of the temple in 548 B.C. to the Persian war, forbid that hypothesis. Or even if Phokian influence had been predominant, at least as against Thessalian, would the Thessalians have aimed at the destruction of the Amphiktyonic shrine, and not rather at the re-establishment of their own influence in Delphi, as commissaries and protégés of the Persian? The national Phokian oracle was at Abai; hence its treatment, c. 33 supra. Delphi was the concern of twelve peoples, of whom nine were now on the king's part, the Thessalians imprimis. Clearly the Thessalians cannot have taken the Persians to Delphi ὅπως συλήσαντες τὸ ἱρὸν τὸ ἐν Δελφοῖσι β. Ξ. ἀποδέξαιεν τὰ χρήματα.

8. ἀποδέξαιεν τὰ χρήματα, 'might exhibit, display, the objects of value' (not merely money). The assumption appears to be that they would pillage the temple, bring away the things, and exhibit them to the king—when they had overtaken him. Some of the things would have been rather difficult to transport, especially by that route! And would the king have been content merely to be a spectator of the show? If so, his best way was to go to Delphi in person and see for himself. The phrase might suggest that course as the one actually taken; but as in the sequel the Persians were utterly discomfited and routed, and no such disaster was or could be reported of the king himself, did the Delphic apologist discreetly suppress the visit of the Persian king?

πάντα δ' ἠπίστατο . . . εἰπε: this assertion would read less like a gross exaggeration if Xerxes had, indeed, visited Delphi, and seen the temple and its treasures with his own eyes. Otherwise the statement is a frigid absurdity, not made any better by the rationalistic reminder πολλῶν αἰεὶ λεγόντων, nor by the cautious asseveration ὡς ἐγὼ πυνθάνομαι. Where could Hdt. have convinced himself by inquiry of this absurdity if not in Delphi itself? The Delphian visitation is obviously from a Delphian source, and the story of it, a patent apology for the attitude of Delphi in the war, is an obvious insertion in the main draft of the history. Cp. Introduction, §§ 9, 10, Appendix III. § 7.

ἐν τοῖσι οἰκίοισι ἔλιπε, πολλῶν αἰεὶ λεγόντων, καὶ μάλιστα 10
τὰ Κροίσου τοῦ Ἀλυάττεω ἀναθήματα. οἱ Δελφοὶ δὲ πυν- 36
θανόμενοι ταῦτα ἐς πᾶσαν ἀρρωδίην ἀπύκατο, ἐν δείματι δὲ μεγάλῳ κατεστεῶτες ἐμαντεύοντο περὶ τῶν ἱρῶν χρημάτων, εἴτε σφέα κατὰ γῆς κατορύξωσι εἴτε ἐκκομίσωσι ἐς ἄλλην χώρην. ὁ δὲ θεὸς σφέας οὐκ ἔα κινεῖν, φᾶς αὐτὸς ἱκανὸς 5 εἶναι τῶν ἑωυτοῦ προκατῆσθαι. Δελφοὶ δὲ ταῦτα ἀκούσαντες σφέων αὐτῶν πέρι ἐφρόντιζον. τέκνα μὲν νυν καὶ γυναῖκας
πέρην ἐς τὴν Ἀχαίην διέπεμψαν, αὐτῶν δὲ οἱ μὲν πλείστοι

11 ἀλυάττεω PR 36. 1 οἱ δὲ δελφοὶ B, Holder, van H. 2
ἀρρωδίην P || ἀπύκατο Pz || δὲ: τε B 4 σφέας B || κατορύξωσι
Pz || εἴτ' B || ἐκκομίσωσι Pz 5 σφέας abesse malim || κινεῖν α, Holder, van H. 7 περιεφρόντιζον BC 8 ἀχαίην R

11. τὰ Κροίσου τοῦ Ἀλυάττεω ἀναθήματα: there is no reference here to ὁ πρῶτος τῶν λόγων, cp. 5. 36, and the use of the patronymic is noticeable. The observation supports the hypothesis that these Books (7, 8, 9), even in their second or enlarged draft (cp. previous note), were composed and in existence before the earlier Books (and the Lydian Logoi of Bk. 1 perhaps before the story of the Ionian Revolt in Bks. 5-6). Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

36. 1. οἱ Δελφοί: properly the name of the men, the population; not the place, the city. The place-name is Πυθῶ, cp. 1. 54 πέμψας αὐτὶς ἐς Πυθῶ Δελφοῖς δωρεῖται. The Catalogue, Iliad 2. 512, has the form Πυθῶν, but Πυθῶ (Πυθοῖ) in 9. 405 (with the epitheton considans πετρήσση). Pytho would be the holy place and oracular seat itself (hence ἡ Πυθία); the name of the people becomes the designation of the secular city. The native form of the name was Δάλφοι, a point illustrated, though not specified, in Head's Hist. Num. p. 288. Whether the name had anything to say to δελφίς, or to δελφύς (was not Pytho the ἀμφαλὸς τῆς γῆς?) is a question for the etymologists.

2. ταῦτα is vague, but may be referred generally to the sentence ἐπορεύοντο . . . χρήματα rather than to the sentence τέκνα . . . ἀναθήματα, which was an aside by Hdt. in propria persona.

ἐς πᾶσαν ἀρρωδίην ἀπύκατο: the pl. perf. is rather intensive than strictly temporal, 'were in the depths of despair'; cp. 4. 140 ἐς π. ἀρρ. ἀπύκοντο. κατεστεῶτες: the same phrase 7. 138, and cp. a. 12 supra.

3. ἐμαντεύοντο περὶ τῶν ἱρῶν χρημάτων: the first anxiety of the good Delphians is not about themselves, but about the holy things. ἐμ. is strictly medial; they would consult the god through the Pythia, although they apparently suggest two out of three possible alternatives: (a) to bury the treasures in the earth somewhere near, (b) to convey them into the Peloponnese. Are all the sacred vessels and offerings in all the 'Treasures' (Lakedaimonian, Sikyonian, Siphnian, Korinthian, Athenian, Knidian, etc.) here in view?

5. αὐτὸς ἱκανὸς εἶναι τῶν ἑωυτοῦ προκατῆσθαι: the construction is strictly idiomatic. With προκατῆσθαι cp. προκατημένους 7. 172, in a more strictly physical sense, and the same infinitive 9. 106. The sentiment is a pious rendering, or anticipation, of the legal or cynical maxim of the Roman emperor, Deorum iniurias Dis curae, Tacit. Ann. 1. 73. 5.

7. σφέων αὐτῶν πέρι ἐφρόντιζον: little expecting a miraculous intervention on their own account, or that the defence and preservation of the ἱρὰ χρήματα would compass their own.

τέκνα . . . καὶ γυναῖκας: cp. cc. 4, 40. The ολέται are to be understood.

8. πέρην ἐς τὴν Ἀχαίην: no doubt by sea; a better asylum than Amphissa, where the majority of the Phokians had taken refuge, and might now think themselves lucky if they escaped the Persians and Thessalians; see infra.

αὐτῶν 84 is emphatically masculine.

ἀνέβησαν ἐς τοῦ Παρνησοῦ τὰς κορυφὰς καὶ ἐς τὸ Κωρύκιον 10 αὐτρον ἀνηνείκαντο, οἱ δὲ ἐς Ἀμφισσαν τὴν Λοκρίδα ὑπεξήλθον.
 πάντες δὲ ὧν οἱ Δελφοὶ ἐξέλιπον τὴν πόλιν, πλὴν ἐξήκοντα 37 ἀνδρῶν καὶ τοῦ προφήτεω. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀγχοῦ ἦσαν οἱ βάρβαροι ἐπιόντες καὶ ἀπώρων τὸ ἰρόν, ἐν τούτῳ ὁ προφήτης, τῷ οὐνομα ἦν Ἀκέρατος, ὁρᾷ πρὸ τοῦ νηοῦ ὅπλα προκείμενα

9 παρνησοῦ B 10 ἀνηνείκατο C || ἀμφισσαν C 11 ἐξέλειπον B
 37. 1 ἐπέετε δὲ? van H. || ἀγχοῦ τε B, Holder, van H. 2 ἀπώρων B
 CPdz

9. τοῦ Παρνησοῦ τὰς κορυφὰς looks like 'the twin peaks,' but is probably used more generally; cp. 9. 104 σφίζονται ἐς τὰς κορυφὰς τῆς Μυκάλης. The Phokians had, some of them, gone up ἐς τὰ ἄκρα τοῦ Παρνησοῦ c. 32 supra; but there was plenty of room on the heights and peaks of Parnassos for Phokians and Delphians.

τὸ Κωρύκιον αὐτρον: the Korykian cavern, an immense hollow in the limestone, but of less extent and mystery than our own caves in the Peak (καὶ ἐστὶν ἐπὶ πλείστον ὁδεῦσαι δι' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀνευ λαμπτήρων Pausan. 10. 32. 7), is reached from Delphi by ascending above the 'Phaidriades' on a very steep path into the upper plateau, still well-wooded, beyond which rises a steep conical and rocky hill, near the top of which the entrance to the cavern may be detected. (A scramble of twenty-five minutes took me up this hill on April 7, 1899.) It was sacred to Pan and to the Nymphs, Pausan. l.c., Strabo 417.

10. ἀνηνείκαντο, ibidem; c. 32 supra.

ἐς Ἀμφισσαν τὴν Λοκρίδα: there they would foregather with the mass of the Phokian refugees; cp. c. 32 supra. The absence of any cross reference, and the repeated yet different description of Amphissa, confirm the opinion that this story of the preservation of Delphi is an independent narrative, from a different source, and of later composition and insertion in the main draft of the work; cp. c. 35. 8 supra.

11. δὲ ὧν, 'one way or another.'

πλὴν ἐξήκοντα ἀνδρῶν: why 60? Was that the number of the Delphian Council, perhaps, at this date, an aristocratic body, and did it remain, like the Roman curule magistrates and senators, at the coming of the Gauls? cp. Livy 5. 41. (The political constitution of the Delphic state is an enigma; the history of Delphi is best given by H. Pomtow ap. Pauly-Wissowa iv. 1901, 2517 ff.)

12. καὶ τοῦ προφήτεω: his name is supplied just below, Akeratos. It is a little surprising that the 'prophet' and not the 'Pythia' is there. The exact function of the Delphian, or Pythian, προφήτης is obscure; he is presumably at the head of the Delphian hierarchy, but whether an ιερεὺς or not, whether a sole official or with a colleague or colleagues, are questions hardly to be answered positively, least of all for the earlier period. The 'prophet' or 'priest' would be distinct anyway from the five δσιοι mentioned by Plutarch, Mor. 438 (with the προφήτης) and 292 (πέντε δὲ εἰσι Ὅσιοι διὰ βίου καὶ τὰ πολλὰ μετὰ τῶν προφητῶν (sic) δρώσιν οὗτοι, καὶ συνευρουγούσιν, ἅτε γεγονέναι δοκοῦντες ἀπὸ Δευκαλίωνος); like them, and the Pythia herself, the 'prophets' would hold office for life.

37. 1. ἀγχοῦ ἦσαν . . καὶ ἀπώρων: a parataxis. Apparently they never entered the sacred precincts, but just came within sight of the temple. They would have to come pretty near to be in sight, owing to the way in which the cliffs project on the road from Arachova. With ἀπώρων cp. ἀπιδόντες 9. 69.

2. ὁ προφήτης, τῷ οὐνομα ἦν Ἀκέρατος, see note previous chapter. The name is rare as a proper name, though common enough as an epithet, a fine one for a prophet or a priest (integer, pure, unmixed, undefiled).

3. ὁρᾷ: graphic present: πρό, very distinctly of place. The νηός here would denote the whole structure, including the peristyle. The arms would have been lying before the east front of the temple, in the open space on the terrace

ἔσθωθεν ἐκ τοῦ μεγάρου ἐξενηνευγμένα ἱρά, τῶν οὐκ ὅσιον ἦν ἄπτεσθαι ἀνθρώπων οὐδενί. ὁ μὲν δὴ ἦε Δελφῶν τοῖσι 5 παρεούσι σημανέων τὸ τέρας· οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι ἐπειδὴ ἐγίνοντο ἐπειγόμενοι κατὰ τὸ ἱρὸν τῆς Προναίης Ἀθηναίης, ἐπιγίνεται σφι τέρεα ἔτι μέζονα τοῦ πρὶν γενομένου τέρεος. θῶμα μὲν γὰρ καὶ τοῦτο κάρτα ἐστί, ὅπλα ἀρήια αὐτόματα φανήναι

4 ἐξενηνευγμένα α || ἱρά: ἀρήια Naber 5 ἀνθρώπω β || ἦε C 7
προνηίης RV, Holder, van H.: προνοίης Sz 8 γεγεννημένου βz ||
τέρεος del. van H. || θῶμα α, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: θῶμα β: θῶμα Stein<sup>1</sup>,
Holder || μὲν om. β

where now are the remains of the Altar of the Chians (see plan, Frazer v. 258).

4. τῶν οὐκ ὅσιον ἦν: they were ἀκίνητα; cp. c. 36 supra.

5. ὁ μὲν δὴ ἦε: he was evidently in the temple precincts; the 'sixty' were elsewhere.

6. τὸ τέρας: a marvel, sign, in abstracto; cp. c. 98 τέρας ἀνθρώποισι τῶν μελλόντων ἔσεσθαι κακῶν ἔφαινε ὁ Θεός. Down below τέρεα seems to be used in a slightly more concrete sense, of actual φάσματα, as certainly c. 27 supra, if the reading stand. Similar portents assured the courage of the Thebans before Leuktra: Xenophon, Hell. 6. 4. 7 ἀπηγγέλλετο δὲ καὶ ἐκ τῆς πόλεως αὐτοῖς ὡς οἱ τε νεῶ πάντες αὐτόματοι ἀνέψοντο, αἱ τε ἱέρειαι λέγουσιν ὡς νίκην οἱ θεοὶ φαίνουσιν. ἐκ δὲ τοῦ Ἡρακλείου καὶ τὰ ὅπλα ἔφασαν ἀφανῆ εἶναι, ὡς τοῦ Ἡρακλέους εἰς τὴν μάχην ἐξωρμημένου. Xenophon, who, though pious, is no friend to Thebes, adds: οἱ μὲν δὴ τινες λέγουσιν ὡς ταῦτα πάντα τεχνάσματα ἦν τῶν προεστηκότων.

7. κατὰ: of place; in the vicinity of, in a line with, over against.

τὸ ἱρὸν τῆς Προναίης Ἀθηναίης. This temple has now been identified by M. Homolle, and excavated; see J.H.S. xxi. (1901) 347. It was the last of five buildings on the left of the road from Arachova to Delphi, which formed an important group, or row, outside the Pythian sanctuary itself, at a spot known as the Marmaria, halfway between the Logarai and the gymnasium. The first of these buildings was in ruins at the time of Pausanias, the other four he mentions. The temple of Athene is now identified, not with the Rotunda or tholos (as by Laurent), but with a temple in antis, built of local limestone, the last of the five (περτέλοιπος!)

and therefore rightly πρόναος, which agrees with the description of ps.-Demosth. Or. 25. 34 παρὰ τῷ Ἀπόλλωνι ἐν Δελφοῖς κάλλιστος καὶ μέγιστος νεὺς εὐθὺς εἰσίνοντι εἰς τὸ ἱερόν. That Προναία (cp. l. 92, where the same temple is mentioned) is the official title of the goddess at Delphi is proved by inscriptions; albeit προναία is a frequent variant, found apparently in Pausanias 10. 8. 7, and therefore followed by J. G. Frazer, Pausanias, v. 251.

8. θῶμα: a more generic term than τέρας, and probably more 'subjective,' or psychological, at least in 'origin.' Hdt.'s method of describing the portent, miracle, apparition, godsend—perhaps in close loyalty to his source—is remarkable, and suggests some antecedent challenge, doubt, discussion. (a) There is a crescendo, a climax, from τέρας to τέρεα ἔτι μέζονα, and so on. (b) Thrice is the exact locality of the apparition indicated, κατὰ τὸ ἱρὸν τῆς Προναίης Ἀθηναίης (bis), ἐν τῷ τεμένει τ. Π. Ἀ. (c) His grammar becomes slightly disordered, as not infrequently, at moments of excitement: οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι . . . ἐπιγίνεται σφι. (d) He urges the case for marvelling the more: θῶμα μὲν γὰρ . . . ἄξια θαυμάσαι μάλιστα. (e) He adduces as evidence confirmatory of the miracle the stones still lying in the close of Athene. (f) He cites the Persians themselves as witnesses for ἄλλα θεία sc. φάσματα, sc. θῶματα sc. τέρεα. One cannot but admire the courage with which Delphi, when censured for its escape in the Persian war, knew how to defend itself. It is likely that the critique had been mainly an Athenian one; if so, Delphi called Athene Pronaia herself as chief witness for the defence, and Athene Pronaia, or Pronoia, was justified of her children. Cp. Appendix III. § 4.

- 10 ἔξω προκείμενα τοῦ νηοῦ· τὰ δὲ δὴ ἐπὶ τούτῳ δεύτερα ἐπιγενόμενα καὶ διὰ πάντων φασμάτων ἄξια θωμάσαι μάλιστα. ἐπεὶ γὰρ δὴ ἦσαν ἐπιόντες οἱ βάρβαροι κατὰ τὸ ἱρὸν τῆς Προναίης Ἀθηναίης, ἐν τούτῳ ἐκ μὲν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κεραυνοὶ αὐτοῖσι ἐνέπιπτον, ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ Παρνησοῦ ἀπορραγεῖσαι δύο
15 κορυφαὶ ἐφέροντο πολλῶ πατάγῳ ἐς αὐτοὺς καὶ κατέβαλον συγχρούς σφεων, ἐκ δὲ τοῦ ἱροῦ τῆς Προναίης βοή τε καὶ
38 ἀλαλαγμὸς ἐγένετο. συμμιγέντων δὲ τούτων πάντων, φόβος τοῖσι βαρβάροισι ἐνεπεπτώκεε. μαθόντες δὲ οἱ Δελφοὶ φεύγοντας σφέας, ἐπικαταβάντες ἀπέκτειναν πληθὸς τι αὐτῶν. οἱ δὲ περιέοντες ἰθὺ Βοιωτῶν ἔφενγον. ἔλεγον δὲ οἱ ἀπονο-

11 ἐπιγενόμενα Pz, Stein<sup>2</sup>: ἐπιγενόμενα α, Stein<sup>1</sup>: γινόμενα β || θωμάσαι α, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: θωνμάσαι β, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder 12 ἐπεῖτε? van H. 13 προνηίης R, Holder, van H.: προνοῖης SVz 14 παρνησοῦ α: παρνησοῦ || ἀπορραγεῖσαι α 15 κατέβαλον Reiske, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: κατέλαβον 16 προνηίης β, Holder, van H.: προνοῖης SVz (νηοῦ add. V) 38. 1 συμμιγέντων C 3 τι: τε β 4 ἰθὺ βz: εὐθὺ

10. δεύτερα, 'next,' but not inferior.

11. διὰ πάντων: in the whole catalogue (number, series) of . . .; cp. l. 25 of the krater of Glaukes the Chian, θέης ἄξιον διὰ πάντων τῶν ἐν Δελφοῖσι ἀναθημάτων. Also 7. 83 supra.

13. ἐν τούτῳ: sc. τῷ χρόνῳ.

κεραυνοί: fulmina; thunderbolts, strictly material and massive (like the rocks themselves), and not the mere flashes of lightning (σπεροπαί, fulgura) much less the mere crash or rumble of thunder (βρονταί, tonitrus). A thunderbolt can strike a ship: Od. 14. 305 ἐμβαλε νηὶ κεραυνόν etc.

14. δύο κορυφαί: not αἱ δ. κ. but simply two 'peaks' or pointed rocks; cp. τοῦ Παρνησοῦ τὰς κορυφὰς c. 36 supra, which cannot be supposed to have fallen on the Persians.

16. βοή τε καὶ ἀλαλαγμός, 'war-whoop and battle-cry'—a distinction without a difference: βοή is perhaps more generic, ἀλαλάζειν is to utter a specific cry, ἀλαλαί. Perhaps this is a cry of victory; cp. νίκην ὁρμῶντα ἀλαλάζειν Soph. Antig. 133. Pindar uses ἀλαλά (ἀλαλή) Nem. 3. 60, Isth. 6. (7.) 10, which L. & S. render 'the cry with which battle was begun,' and Rumpel (Lex. Pind., (1883) p. 25) clamor bellicus. Most remarkable is the personification Pindar Fr. 78 (225) κλύθ' Ἀλαλά Πολεμοῦ θύγατερ. The words ἀλαλάζειν et cog. of course came to be used for any loud cry, shout, etc. ἐλελίζειν is to raise the cry ἐλελεῦ, a battle-cry still, but a thinner, shriller one than ἀλαλαί, while ὀλολόζειν—the cry ὀλόλυ—is distinctly womanish: ὀλόλυξαν μὲν αἱ γυναῖκες, ἠλάλαξαν δὲ οἱ ἄνδρες Heliod. 3. 5.

We cry the cry still in our borrowed Allelu-jah; but it is only the 'Salvation Army' which uses it as a 'war-cry.'

38. 1. συμμιγέντων: more forcible than συμπεσόντων, συνελθόντων. It is only τὰ μέζονα τέρεα, not τὸ πρὶν γενόμενον τέρας, that could strictly be included in the μίξις. The new-comers would not know the miracle of the arms.

φόβος . . ἐνεπεπτώκεε, 'a panic possessed them': the pluperfect tense is rather rhetorical and stylistic than strictly temporal, much less past, in its effects. The φόβος is of course θεῶν τι.

2. οἱ Δελφοί . . ἐπικαταβάντες: that is, of course, from the peaks of Parnassos and the Korymbian cavern, c. 36 supra, but not before the Persians were in panic-stricken flight.

3. πληθὸς τι: the exact number of the Persians slain on this occasion would surely have been noted and remembered were the episode itself historical. This numerical vagueness is another nail in the coffin of this dead history.

4. ἰθὺ Βοιωτῶν: ex hypothesis by the στήσαντες οὗτοι τῶν βαρβάρων, ὡς ἐγὼ πυνθάνομαι, ὡς πρὸς 5 τούτοις καὶ ἄλλα ὥρων θεία· δύο γὰρ ὀπλίτας μεζόνως ἢ κατ' ἀνθρώπων φύσιν ἔχοντας ἔπεσθαί σφι κτείνοντας καὶ διώκοντας. τούτους δὲ τοὺς δύο Δελφοὶ λέγουσι εἶναι ἐπι- 39

χωρίους ἥρωας Φύλακόν τε καὶ Αὐτόνοον, τῶν τὰ τεμένεια

6 μεζόνως: μέζοντας codd., Stein, van H.: 'aut μεζόνως legendum aut μέζονα aut tandem delendum ἔχοντας' Reiske: μεζόνως Holder: μέζονα ἢ κατὰ ἀνθρώπων Wesseling: ἔχοντας secl. Stein, van H.: ἔόντας pro ἔχοντας conl. Koen: μέζοντας ἢ κατ' ἀνθρώπων ἔπεσθαί vult Cobet: κατὰ ACz 39. 1 εἶναι post ἥρωας Pz way they had come, which would bring them down to Daulia, and so to Panopeus and to Orchomenos, where they may have rejoined—or have joined—the army. Perhaps Xerxes himself crossed Parnassos from Lilaia to Delphi, and so to Daulia and Panopeus, and there rejoined the main body of the army: cp. c. 34 supra.

Διγιν . . οἱ ἀπονοστήσαντες . . ὡς ἐγὼ πυνθάνομαι. Where did Hdt. get this information? Was it from Thersandros of Orchomenos, who seems to have made it his business to collect, or to relate (ex eventu), the signs of Persian pessimism and panic in the war (cp. 9. 16); or was it from the Delphians, who, of course, could easily have gotten the information from Greeks in the Persian camp? The story was certainly to be heard at Delphi, for the Delphians interpreted it to Hdt.—and we can hardly suppose that he first told the facts to the Delphians and asked for the interpretation.

5. πρὸς τούτοις καὶ ἄλλα ὥρων θεία: in addition there were other manifestations of a supernatural order. ὄραν is used in an extended sense, for there had been πάταγος, βοή, ἀλαλαγμός, φόβος, φυγή, τραύματα, besides φάσματα. Even their experiences with these further apparitions are not confined to δῖεις.

7. ἀνθρώπων φύσιν: φύσις is 'growth,' hence 'stature,' for which φνῆ is the more usual term, which, vice versa, is used at times as = φύσις, in the usual senses. Each exchange is poetic, and chiefly to be illustrated from Pindar; cp. Rumpel, Lexicon, sub vv. The text is here in doubt; cp. App. Crit. Reiske's suggestion, adopted by Holder, is supported by Isokrates, 9. 21 τὰς μὲν φήμας καὶ τὰς μαντείας καὶ τὰς δῖεις τὰς ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις γενομένας, ἐξ ὧν μεζόνως ἀν' φανείη γεγονὼς ἢ κατ' ἀνθρώπων, αἰρούμαι παραλιπεῖν κτλ., for if we may say μεζόνως ἢ κατ' ἀνθρώπων γεγονέναι we may say μεζόνως ἔχειν ἢ κατ' ἀνθρώπων φύσιν.

καὶ διώκοντας seems rather weak, but is added to explain why any escaped.

39. 1. Δελφοὶ λέγουσι: it hardly needs this late indication to prove the story of the miraculous preservation of the Delphians, their temple and its treasures, a local Delphian legend, in the last resort. The phrase in itself would not prove that Hdt. had gleaned information in Delphi, but the context below points to that conclusion.

2. Φύλακόν τε καὶ Αὐτόνοον: Phylakos has a significant name (cp. φύλακος 1. 84 et passim), which is also a genuine proprrium, cp. c. 85 infra. In the Iliad (besides a 'Trojan' of the name, 6. 35) Podarkes, leader of the Thessalians, is son of Iphiklos, and grandson of Phylakos (heroic founder of Phylake), 2. 695-705, and the name reappears in Od. 15. 231. Could the Delphian 'Phylakos' be, after all, a Thessalian hero, and a further witness of the early period of Thessalian predominance in Delphi?

Autonoos, the name of a Danaan slain by Hektor, Il. 11. 301, is also found on the 'Trojan' side, Il. 16. 694 (a hero slain by Patroklos). But again the name appears in historic times in Thessaly, Polyb. 7. 5. 3.

τῶν τὰ τεμένεια: the 'closes' of these heroes were in the vicinity of the Pythian sanctuary; that of Phylakos hard by the road (from Delphi to Arachova and Daulia) along which the Persians fled, and so on higher ground than the temple of Pronaia Athene; that of Autonoos 'nigh Kastalia, the famous spring and burn close under the Hyampeian peak.' A small building, one of two discovered in the excavation of the Marmaria, has been conjecturally identi-

ἐστὶ περὶ τὸ ἱρόν, Φυλάκου μὲν παρ' αὐτὴν τὴν ὁδὸν κατύπερθε τοῦ ἱροῦ τῆς Προναίης, Αὐτονόου δὲ πέλας τῆς
5 Κασταλῆς ὑπὸ τῇ ῥαμπείῃ κορυφῇ. οἱ δὲ πεσόντες ἀπὸ τοῦ Παρνησοῦ λίθοι ἔτι καὶ ἐς ἡμέας ἦσαν σόοι, ἐν τῷ τεμένει τῆς Προναίης Ἀθηναίης κείμενοι, ἐς τὸ ἐνέσκηψαν διὰ τῶν βαρβάρων φερόμενοι. τούτων μὲν νυν τῶν ἀνδρῶν αὕτη ἀπὸ
τοῦ ἱροῦ ἀπαλλαγὴ γίνεται,

4 προνηΐης R: προνοΐης SVz 6 παρνησοῦ α: παρνησσοῦ || ἔσαν z
|| σώοι CPz || τεμένει AB 7 προνηΐης R: προνοΐης SVz || ἀνέσκηψαν B:
ἐνέσκηψαντο B

fied with the Phylakion (J. H. S. xxi. 1901, p. 347), which would thus appear to have been on the same side of the road as the Athenaion. Pausanias 10. 8. 7 describes the Φυλάκου τέμενος as πρὸς τῷ ἱερῷ τῆς Προναίης (sic). For the temenos of Autonoo see next note. Thirlwall (ii. 326) assumes that these dedications were made in consequence of the events of 480 B.C., but there is nothing in Hdt. to suggest that (cp. contra 7. 189).

5. Κασταλῆς: Pausan. 10. 8. 9 ἐκ δὲ τοῦ γυμνασίου τὴν ἐς τὸ ἱερὸν ἀνιόντι ἔστιν ἐν δεξιᾷ τῆς ὁδοῦ τὸ ὕδωρ τῆς Κασταλίας, καὶ πικρὸν ἥδύ. There has never been any doubt as to the identification of 'the water of Castaly' (cp. the exhaustive note in Frazer, Pausanias v. 255); but the shrine of the hero Autonoo has not yet been certainly identified, and is not even mentioned by Pausanias. "Leake thought that the little chapel of St. John hewn in the rock above the pool might be the precinct of the hero Autonoo. . . M. Foucart prefers to suppose that the precinct stood on a small platform between the pool and the road. Bursian thought he recognised a piece of the wall which had enclosed the precinct," Frazer l.c. (Bursian i. 172, says dogmatically enough: In der Nähe der Quelle war das Temenos des Heros Autonoo, von welchem noch ein Stück der Umfassungswand erhalten ist.) τῇ ῥαμπείῃ κορυφῇ: Hyampeia is the sheer wall of rock rising into a peaked summit a thousand feet or so above the road and the spring, and forming the right or eastern wall of the gorge or chasm in which the Kastalian waters arise. A similar peak flanks the narrow chasm on the other side, but the ancient name thereof has not been preserved. It cannot possibly be these two κορυφαί which earned Parnassos the title of 'biceps' (cp. c. 32 supra), for they are purely local features in the Delphian landscape, and can never have been mistaken for the actual summits of the mountain, to one of which Hdt. has already and correctly assigned a name (c. 32 supra, if the passage be not a gloss); Pape-Benseler's Wörterbuch, ii. 1573 sub v., achieves indeed the confusion, or seems to do so (eine der beiden Bergspitzen des Parnassos in der Nähe von Delphi). Strabo 424 mentions Hyampeia ἐν τῷ Παρνασσῷ only to distinguish it from Ῥάμπολις or Ῥα (cp. c. 33 supra). Plutarch, Mor. 557, reports that the Delphians executed Aisopos (cp. Hdt. 2. 134) ὥσαντες ἀπὸ τῆς πέτρας ἐκείνης ἦν Ῥάμπειαν καλοῦσιν.

6. ἔτι καὶ ἐς ἡμέας ἦσαν σόοι, and, for aught known, to the present day also: for the ground about there, below the road, is strewn with λίθοι, large and smaller, all of which have doubtless descended from Parnassos. The phrase has the note of Hdt.'s 'autopsy,' and the argument the stamp, alas! of Hdt.'s logic. He seems to think the stones an evidence of the truth of the story. It was, perhaps, the position of these stones which determined the point reached by the Persians in their "sacrilegious enterprise."

8. τούτων . . αὕτη . . ἀπαλλαγὴ: in sharpest contrast to the usual departure of good men, even non-Hellenes, who came to worship, to seek advice and consolation, to assist at the ἀγών or other solemn function, and went their way rejoicing.

9. γίνεται puts us en rapport with the story and the story-tellers, rather than with the Persians and their account. The story is verily a test one; it is one

‘Ο δὲ Ἑλλήνων ναυτικός στρατός ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀρτεμισίου 40
 Ἀθηναίων δεηθέντων ἐς Σαλαμίνα κατίσχει [τὰς νέας]. τῶνδε

40. 2 κατασχέιν β || τὰς νέας secl. Stein<sup>3</sup>: τὰς νῆας β || τῶνδε: τῶν
 RS, Schaefer

of the most transparent fictions in Hdt., though one that fully imposed on the good man himself. The early Victorian rationalists made sad work of it, of whom the Rev. Professor Rawlinson may in this case be taken as typical. He (iv.<sup>2</sup> 291) interprets the story as follows:—(1) The fragments of rock “were carefully prepared beforehand,” and precipitated by the men on the “peaks.” (2) In falling the rocks made a noise, which was mistaken for “thunder.” (3) The armour in front of the temple was arranged by a priest. (4) The war-cry was a shout from another priest. (5) The heroes were impersonated by “two men of unusual stature,” or (6) may have been “a mere excuse” made to Xerxes by his men. Such is the last word of unhistorical criticism upon uncritical history. It may not be possible to determine exactly what took place at Delphi in 480 B.C., or whether the Persians had any direct relations with Delphi, or ever visited it at all; but two points may here at least be urged. (i.) The story just examined (cc. 35–39) is evidently apologetic, i.e. told and devised in order to explain the suspicious escape of Delphi in the war. (ii.) It must not be isolated, and considered merely on its own merits, but must be brought into relation with (a) the evidences in regard to the whole attitude and policy and action of Delphi throughout the great crisis, and even in other similar crises; (b) the evidences for the policy of the Persians towards the Greeks, and especially towards the ‘medizers,’ who were as much interested in Delphi as any others; (c) the accounts preserved in Pausanias (1. 4. 4, 10. 23) of the attack of the Gauls upon Delphi in the year 279 B.C., and the part played by the ‘divine’ in that second deliverance. For an attempt to appreciate the story from that point of view cp. Appendix III. § 4.

40. 1. ὁ δὲ Ἑλ. ν. στ. ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀρτεμισίου: the narrative is resumed from c. 21 or 22 supra, or even from the words Θεμιστοκλῆς μὲν ταῦτα ἐνέγραψε in c. 23. The present tense κατίσχει anticipates much of the intervening narrative, the arrival of the Hellenic fleet “at Salamis” doubtless preceding the advance of the Persian forces from Thermopylai. The Greek fleet might well have arrived at the Salaminian station within forty-eight hours of quitting Artemision. If it left Artemision on Tuesday night (as it were) it might easily have reached Salamis in the course of Thursday morning. The words ἀπὸ τ. Ἀρτ. might be taken loosely to qualify ὁ . . . στρατός, or might be loosely constructed with κατίσχει, or might seem to desiderate a participle, e.g. ἀπαχθείς. For κατίσχει cp. 6. 101, and App. Crit.

2. Ἀθηναίων δεηθέντων. It is generally assumed that in the conception of Hdt. and his sources the station at Salamis was no part of the general plan of defence, but an after-thought, and an impromptu. To what extent is this assumption binding? What event called for an improvisation? The failure at Thermopylai? Or the non-appearance of the Peloponnesian forces in Boiotia? Had the full levy of the land-forces been, as was expected, already north of Kithairon, or even of the Isthmos, where better could the Greek fleet have halted than in the straits of Salamis? What appears to have taken the Athenians by surprise was that a situation had been allowed to arise in which the complete evacuation of Attica had become at least an open question. It is here that I would insert the story of the consultation of the Delphic oracle told, anachronistically, 7. 140–143 supra.

τῶνδε δὲ εἵνεκα. Hdt.’s motivation in this passage is curious, and perhaps involves a hysteron-proteron. He treats the evacuation of Attica as a foregone conclusion, and the problem of the quid agendum as only starting from that fait accompli. But τὸ ποιητέον ἔσται covers all that and much more (τὸ, of course, relative). Had the Peloponnesian forces been in Boiotia (as was expected), the evacuation of Attica would not have been in question, but Salamis might still have been the natural halting-place for the fleet, covering, as it would have done, the land-forces in Boiotia from the rear, or flank. But so far from the δὲ εἵνεκα προσεδεήθησαν αὐτῶν σχεῖν πρὸς Σαλαμίνα Ἀθηναῖοι, ἵνα αὐτοὶ παῖδας τε καὶ γυναῖκας ὑπεξαγάγωνται ἐκ τῆς

 5 Ἀττικῆς, πρὸς δὲ καὶ βουλευσονται τὸ ποιητέον αὐτοῖσι ἔσται. ἐπὶ γὰρ τοῖσι κατήκουσι πρήγμασι βουλὴν ἔμελλον ποιήσασθαι ὡς ἐφευσμένοι γνώμης. δοκέοντες γὰρ εὐρήσειν Πελοποννησίους πανδημί ἐν τῇ Βοιωτίῃ ὑποκατημένους τὸν βάρβαρον, τῶν μὲν εὖρον οὐδὲν εἶναι, οἱ δὲ ἐπυνθάνοντο τὸν 10 Ἴσθμὸν αὐτοὺς τειχέοντας, ὡς τὴν Πελοπόννησον περὶ πλείστου τε ποιευμένους περιεῖναι καὶ ταύτην ἔχοντας ἐν φυλακῇ, τὰ

4 ἵν' C || αὐτοὶ om. B 7 ποιήσεσθαι BPz, Holder, van H. 8
 πελοποννησίους R || πανδημί B, Stein 9 τῶν, οἱ μὲν z 10 ὡς τὴν
 Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: τὴν α, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder: καὶ τὴν B: ἐς τὴν Pz: εἰς τὴν
 C || πελοπόννησον R 11 τε post περιεῖναι B || ποιευμένους R: ποιοε-
 μένους || τᾶλλα B: τᾶλλα z, Holder: τὰ δὲ ἄλλα van H.

complete evacuation of Attica being a self-obvious necessity, it was even now not really adopted or fully carried out, cp. c. 51 infra. Moreover, there would be the question, even in the case of the women and children (παῖδας τε καὶ γυναῖκας, cp. cc. 36 supra, 41, 44, 60 infra), to what place or places they were to be conveyed. These are all matters for separate deliberation by the Athenians alone (it is not possible to refer αὐτοὶ and αὐτοῖσι to different persons); but they leave the purely strategic plan of occupying the straits of Salamis untouched.

6. τοῖσι κατήκουσι πρήγμασι (cp. c. 19 supra) may cover the evacuation of Artemision, but refers primarily to the news that the Peloponnesians, instead of being in full force beyond Kithairon, are busy fortifying the Isthmos. This news required formal deliberation, and the situation was discussed in Athens by the βουλὴ and ἐκκλησία (βουλευσονται, βουλὴν ποιήσασθαι, cp. 9. 5 infra). The term Ἀθηναῖοι in this passage may be somewhat loosely used to merge the στρατηγοὶ in the general mass of citizens. One might suspect that Themistokles was less taken by surprise (ἐφευσμένοι γνώμης, n.b. the perfect or pluperfect participle) than the majority of Athenians.

7. δοκέοντες . . τὸν βάρβαρον: there must have been good reason for this expectation; in other words, the plan of defence must have comprised a second stand for the protection of Attica, even if Phokis and Boiotia might have to be abandoned. The phraseology here involves more than the supposition that the Peloponnesians might reasonably have been expected to be on the march for Thermopylai: εὐρήσειν, πανδημί, ὑποκατημένους, all go beyond that. The participle here scarcely implies an ambush, but it certainly implies a settlement or resting-place; cp. 7. 27. The adverb signifies the levée en masse such as afterwards fought at Plataia; the verb may have an immaterial or purely psychological force (as εὖρον just below), i.e. 'to find that the Peloponnesians' etc., or a less figurative and more material meaning ('to find the Peloponnesians posted in wait for the barbarian north of Kithairon'). In either case the futurity is conditioned by the interval between the date of the δόκησις and its realisation or disappointment, and can hardly be reproduced in English idiom.

9. τῶν μὲν . . οἱ δέ: an inaccurate use of the antithetical particles, produced by the emphatic repetition of the subject; cp. 7. 6 supra: the τῶν must be neuter. αὐτοὺς δέ would have been more in order.

11. τὰ ἄλλα δὲ ἀπείναι: sc. βουλομένους, νοεόντας, or some such word, out of περὶ πλείστου ποιευμένους, a kind of zeugma. The position of the δέ is emphatic, and none the less, that μὲν has been omitted (τὴν μὲν II.). Stein takes ἀπείναι as co-ordinate with ἔχοντας ἐν φ. (= ταύτην μὲν φυλάσσειν) and cps. 5. 15, where, however, συναλίσθαι καὶ φυλάσσειν is far less harsh than the phrase here, for at least two reasons: (a) πυθόμενοι can be used regularly with both infinitive and participle; (b) the copula καὶ there

ἀλλὰ δὲ ἀπιέναι. ταῦτα πυνθανόμενοι οὕτω δὴ προσεδεήθησαν
σφέων σχεῖν πρὸς τὴν Σαλαμίνα. οἱ μὲν δὲ ἄλλοι κατέσχον 41
ἐς τὴν Σαλαμίνα, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἐς τὴν ἑωυτῶν. μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἄπιξιν κήρυγμα ἐποίησαντο, Ἀθηναίων τῇ τις δύναται σφῶζειν τέκνα τε καὶ τοὺς οἰκέτας. ἐνθαῦτα οἱ μὲν πλείστοι ἐς Τροίζην ἀπέστειλαν, οἱ δὲ ἐς Αἴγινα, οἱ δὲ ἐς Σαλαμίνα. 5 ἔσπευσαν δὲ ταῦτα ὑπεκθέσθαι τῷ χρηστηρίῳ τε βουλόμενοι

12 δὴ post ταῦτα BPz

41. 3 σφῶζειν van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: σῶζειν

C: σῶζειν

4 τὰ τέκνα Bz, Holder, van H.

6 ὑπεκθέσθαι del.

Gomperz, Holder

makes the co-ordination easier than the δὲ here.

41. 2. τὴν Σαλαμίνα . . τὴν ἑωυτῶν.
Not but what Salamis was also theirs,
but it was no part of Attica proper, it never was a 'deme.' (A kleruchy might be 'Athenian' without being 'Attic'; cp. 6. 139 f.) For the Salaminian settlement cp. my note to 5. 77. 9, and Hicks,
Manual<sup>2</sup> (1901), p. 6.

3. κήρυγμα ἐποίησαντο. This proclamation will have succeeded the decision of βουλή and δῆμος to abandon Attica, which itself will have followed upon the return of the theoria from Delphi (7. 140-144). The story told c. 51 infra makes it probable that the evacuation of Attica neither was nor was intended to be complete in a strategic sense. To have abandoned city and country without such authorization constituted προδοσία,
and was a capital crime, as the extant speech of Lykurgos proves—nay, even to convey out of the country into a place of safety τέκνα τε καὶ οἰκέτας (cp. c.
Leocrat. 53). Lykurgos' reply on the case before us is rather rhetorical than technical: § 69 οὐ γὰρ τὴν πόλιν ἐξέλειπον ἀλλὰ τὸν τόπον μετέλλαξαν. It is not to be supposed that the Strategoi by themselves either would or could have issued such a proclamation. The terms of the psephism are inaccurately preserved in 7. 144. The psephism there recorded belongs to a much earlier stage; cp. note
ad l.

4. οἱ μὲν πλείστοι ἐς Τροίζην: the passage is not free from ambiguity. Are we to understand that an actual majority of Athenian households were sent across to Troizen? Or, merely, that the number at Troizen was larger than either the number in Aigina, or the number in Salamis? That any should have been deposited in Aigina at all is remarkable, in view of the recent war (7. 144) and the present jealousies (c. 92 infra);

that any should have remained in Salamis but fighting men would tend to show that the Athenians by no means despaired of victory. The historic connexion between Athens and Troizen went back to the days when both were members of the Kalaorian amphiktyony (Strabo 204), to which Aigina also had belonged; and the mythic associations were no doubt deepened by the Theseuslegend, which was already fully domiciled in Attica. No state in Peloponnese was so closely connected with Athens
as Troizen, which even used the Attic standard of weight; there too Athene and Poseidon had contended for possession and divided the spoil; cp. Head,
H.N. 371. Yet Troizen, like Aigina, was Dorian; cp. 7. 99 supra, 9. 28 infra.
It is curious that the two vessels on the look-out with the Attic cruiser in 7. 179 f.
are from Troizen and Aigina.

6. τῷ χρηστηρίῳ can only have been the response, or responses, recorded above, 7. 140—which (as I suggest) were sought and obtained only after the disaster at Thermopylai. This passage, ἔσπευσαν δὲ ταῦτα . . τὴν ἀκρόπολιν, will hardly have been written before Hdt.'s first visit to Athens, and may very well be an insertion in the original draft. It is obviously not calculated primarily for an Athenian public: Athenians would be glad to hear of their fathers' derring deeds, but would not look to Hdt. for information on their own current ritual.
This passage, then, probably belongs to the 'second draft.' Cp. Introduction, § 9.

ὑπηρετέειν καὶ δὴ καὶ τοῦδε εἵνεκα οὐκ ἤκιστα. λέγουσι Ἀθηναῖοι ὄφιν μέγαν φύλακα τῆς ἀκροπόλιος ἐνδιατᾶσθαι ἐν τῷ ἱρῷ. λέγουσί τε ταῦτα καὶ δὴ ὡς ἐόντι ἐπιμήνια ἐπιτε-
10 λέουσι προτιθέντες. τὰ δ' ἐπιμήνια μελιτόεσσα ἐστί. αὕτη δὴ ἡ μελιτόεσσα ἐν τῷ πρόσθε αἰεὶ χρόνῳ ἀναισιμονμένη τότε ἦν ἄφραυστος. σημηνάσης δὲ ταῦτα τῆς ἱρείης, μᾶλλον τι οἱ

7 ὑπηρετεῖν B, Holder, van H. || τοῦδε: τοῦτου Pz || εἵνεκεν B, van H.
8 ὄφιν: σφι B || ἐνδιατᾶσθαι B 9 τε: δὲ B || καὶ δὴ καὶ B, Holder, van H. || τελέουσι Paris. 1635, z 10 τὰ δ': τὰ δὲ R || ἐστι μελι-τόεσσα B, Holder: ἐστι del. Kallenberg || αὕτη δὴ ἡ Stein<sup>2</sup>: αὕτη δ' (δὲ
R) ἡ 11 πρόσθεν codd., z || ἀναισιμονμένη B 12 τῆς om. R ||
ἱερείης α, Holder

7. λέγουσι Ἀθηναῖοι: there was no real snake visible; such is the inevitable inference from this passage and the still more explicit phrase below: λέγουσί τε ταῦτα καὶ δὴ ὡς ἐόντι κτλ., a conclusion which only adds point to the Aristophanic gibe: Lysistr. 710 ἐξ οὗ τὸν ὄφιν εἶδον τὸν οἰκουρὸν ποτε. The οἰκουρὸς ὄφιν was no doubt sacred to Athene, and may have been regarded as a symbol, or a reincarnation, of the earth-born Erechtheus; cp. M. P. Nilsson, J.H.S. xxi. (1901) p. 329; but in this case the only proof of the real presence of the serpent was the disappearance of the offering, the divine creature, no doubt, being thought to reside in the crypt of the Erechtheion (ἐνδιατᾶσθαι ἐν τῷ ἱρῷ, cp. c. 55 infra). With this story is naturally compared the tale of Bel and the Dragon (Apocryph. Vet. Test. ed. Fritzsche (1871) pp. 86 ff.), in which, as here, the serpent himself took the cake. Blakesley (quoting Valckenaer apparently) adds that at Alexandria any one might eat the cakes of Kronos (Athenaeus 110), while the fish-offerings to Atargatis (at Askalon? Athen. 346) were consumed by the priests as a matter of course, and above board, like the ἄρτοι προθέσεως of the Hebrews (cp. προτιθέντες here). The parataxis τε . . . καὶ is observable.

9. ἐπιμήνια ἐπιτελέουσι: sc. ἱερὰ. The offering was made once a month (perhaps at the new moon; cp. 6. 57), and in this case took the form of a sweet cake (μελιτόεσσα, sc. μάζα).

12. τῆς ἱρείης: sc. of Athene. The word σημηνάσης is consciously used of an official and solemn report; the thing reported is here indeed a 'sign.' τῆς θεοῦ, sc. Athene. The untouched cake proved the absence of the snake, the absence of the snake that of the goddess. But how long had the cake remained untouched? Did it generally disappear immediately on oblation? The serpent, as a religious symbol or cult-object, is found broad-cast in Hellas and the Mediterranean area; nor is it confined to that region; serpent-myths were "specially abundant in Egypt and Babylonia" (Encycl. Bibl. iv. 4395), and their area may safely be extended so as to include at least India on the one side and Scandinavia on the other. Whether it have a chthonian or an autochthonous reference, embody an oracular mission, or represent the heroic ancestor, be intended to convey a phallic suggestion, or be connected with the charm and mystery of the lithest and subtlest of animal forms; or whether, on the other hand, it serve, in venomous kind, to typify the powers of evil and destruction: whatever its purpose and significance, the serpent has played a long and curious rôle in religious legend and symbolism. Has it not everywhere gained admission? Remarkably enough, the serpent scarcely figures on the monuments of 'Mykenaeen Tree and Pillar cult' collected by A. J. Evans (J.H.S. xx. 1900, p. 52), but the missing link has been recently supplied (Annual Br. Sch. Ath. ix. 1902-3). At Knossos snakes are now to be seen brandished aloft by the Minoan goddess in her star-chamber (is she not Aphrodite Urania? cp. Hdt. i. 105). At Delphi the dragon (there, then, an evil being) was slain, but immortalized, by Apollo. At Athens the goddess received the snake into her service; it curled round the caduceus of Hermes and the magic

Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ προθυμότερον ἐξέλειπον τὴν πόλιν, ὥς καὶ τῆς θεοῦ ἀπολελοιπύνης τὴν ἀκρόπολιν. ὥς δέ σφι πάντα ὑπέξεέκειτο, ἔπλεον ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον.

Ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ ἀπ' Ἀρτεμισίου ἐς Σαλαμίνα κατέσχον τὰς νέας, συνέρρεε καὶ ὁ λοιπὸς πυνθανόμενος ὁ τῶν Ἑλλήνων ναυτικὸς στρατὸς ἐκ Τροίζηνος· ἐς γὰρ Πώγωνα τὸν Τροιζηνίων λιμένα προεῖρητο συλλέγεσθαι· συνελέχθησάν τε δὴ πολλῶ

13 προθυμότερον: πρότερον α || ἐξέλειπον α 14 ἀπολελοπούνης α
42. 1 ἐπεῖτε δέ? van H. || ἀπὸ β || εἰς β, Holder 2 νῆας συνέρρεε β
3 τῶν β 4 εἶρητο β

or medicinal wand of Asklepios. The serpent inspired the oracle of Trophonios at Lebadeia, and dominated the legend of Kadmos at Thebes; appeared in the ritual of Demeter at Eleusis, and contends with the eagle of Zeus on the coins of Elis. The god visited Olympias, the mother of Alexander, in the form of a snake (Plutarch, Alex. 2), and twin-snakes led the son safely through the wilderness to the temple of his divine sire (Arrian, Anab. 3. 3. 5). The snake-symbol, the ἀγαθὸς δαίμων, preserved the walls of Pompeii (and many another city) from impurity; the serpent figures on the monuments of Mithras, with the bull, the hound, and the scorpion, as a sacred mystery. The bronze serpent which, raised upon a mast, had stayed the plague in the wilderness for the Israelites, was worshipped till a reforming king destroyed the idol, and an idealizing legend identified the serpent's image with the Evil One, who had seduced the mother of mankind beside the tree of knowledge. Henceforth, for Hebrew and for orthodox Christian thought the snake-symbol is peccatus; but the earlier associations of tree and serpent were apparently beneficent. As round the world-ash in the Edda twines the great snake, Igdrasil, so the Attic serpent may have coiled round the sacred olive of Athens in the Erechtheion; cp. the remarkable representation, reproduced in Baumeister, Denkmäler iii. 1394, fig. 1542.

μᾶλλον τι . . . καὶ προθυμότερον.
The phrase betrays the reluctance and opposition to the evacuation of the land and the abandonment of the city, which is more clearly indicated above 7. 142, and c. 51 infra.

15. ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον: at Salamis.

42. 1. οἱ ἀπ' Ἀρτεμισίου: cp. c. 40 supra, now including the Athenians.

ἐς Σαλαμίνα: the sixth occurrence of the phrase since the beginning of c. 40. It is no wise clear whether Hdt. means 'the island' or the town, or whether he draws any distinction between them. For a moment the Greek naval forces had been in three divisions: (i.) the Athenians in Attica, (ii.) the rest of the fleet from Artemision in Salamis, (iii.) the reserves at Troizen. These three divisions are now united at Salamis, a movement which seems to imply a definite plan to make a stand in the Straits. The harbour of Troizen had been previously specified as the rendezvous for the reserves (προεῖρητο) by Sparta, or perhaps by the Congress at the Isthmos, and a summons was sent, or at least intelligence conveyed (πυνθανόμενος), from Salamis.

3. Πώγωνα: the 'Beard,' so called, perhaps, with some reference to its shape (ἐἰς Τροίζηναν δεῖ βαδίζειν. ἐπὶ τῶν κατογενείων καὶ σπανοπαγίωνων εἴρηται. Πώγων γὰρ ἐστὶ λιμὴν ἐἰς Τροίζηναν, Suidas), was the well-sheltered and spacious harbour covered by the island Kalauria (mod. Poros) on the coast of Argolis, due south from Aigina and Salamis. Troizen itself (a city sacred to Poseidon) was situate inland, some fifteen stades from the sea, Strabo 373. Cp. E. Curtius, Peloponnesos ii. (1852) 444, and notes to Pausanias, 2. 32, ap. Frazer and Hitzig-Bluemner.

4. πολλῶ πλεῖντες. According to the lists in Hdt. there were 54 more ships at Salamis than at Artemision, and nine states (Hermione, Ambrakia, Leukas, Naxos, Kythnos, Seriphos, Siphnos, Melos, Kroton) are represented at Salamis but not at Artemision: there

5 πλεῦνες νέες ἢ ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίᾳ ἐνανμάχον καὶ ἀπὸ πολλίων
πλεύνων. ναύαρχος μὲν νυν ἐπὶν ὧτος ὅσπερ ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ, Εὐρυβιάδης ὁ Εὐρυκλείδω ἀνὴρ Σπαρτιήτης, οὐ μέντοι γένεος
τοῦ βασιλίου ἐών· νέας δὲ πολλὰ πλείστας τε καὶ ἀρίστα 43 πλεούσας παρείχοντο Ἀθηναῖοι. ἐστρατεύοντο δὲ οἶδε· ἐκ μὲν Πελοποννήσου Λακεδαιμόνιοι ἑκκαίδεκα νέας παρεχόμενοι, Κορίνθιοι δὲ τὸ αὐτὸ πλήρωμα παρεχόμενοι καὶ ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ·
Σικυνῶνιοι δὲ πεντεκαίδεκα παρείχοντο νέας, Ἐπιδαύριοι δὲ
5 δέκα, Τροιζήνιοι δὲ πέντε, Ἑρμιονέες δὲ τρεῖς, ἐόντες οὗτοι

5 νῆες B      7 γένεός γε B, Holder, van H.      8 νῆας B      9
πλεούσας Bz      43. 1 οἶδε ABR      2 πελοποννήσου R || νῆας Bz
3 παρεχόμενοι τὸ secl. van H.: (τὸ B, Holder: ὁ α: om. Stein)      4 παρείχοντο secl. van H.: παρέσχοντο B is one, and only one absentee, the Opuntian Lokris, which has passed under the dominion of Persia.

7. Εὐρυβιάδης ὁ Εὐρυκλείδω: cp. c. 2 supra. The express renomination, with the patronymic repeated, marks less the solemnity of the occasion than the difference of the source. The description here is, indeed, more specific than there, more primitive, and may belong to an older stratum. The data must be ultimately referable to Sparta. The technical term ναύαρχος is here used, as against στρατηγός ὁ τὸ μέγιστον κράτος ἔχων supra, which has a more Athenian sound.

8. νέας δέ: between the sentence with μὲν and the sentence with δέ there is here a world of difference and contrast; but the latter would have even more point as the antithesis to the description of Eurybiades in c. 2, τὸν <μὲν> στρατηγὸν τὸν τὸ μέγιστον κράτος ἔχοντα παρείχοντο Σπαρτιῆται. No doubt ἀρίστα πλεούσας covers the merits of the trierarchs and crew as well as those of the builder.

43. 1. ἐστρατεύοντο δὲ οἶδε. There follows the navy-list for Salamis, apparently from a Peloponnesian, perhaps a Spartan, source. Hdt. apparently conceives the actual ships in question to be the very same as fought at Artemision, the increased total being due to pure additions; but some ships had been lost or completely disabled off Euboea (cp. cc. 16, 17 supra); the additional numbers must in part represent substitutes, and indicate, therefore, all the greater effort on the part of the Greek states.

2. Λακεδαιμόνιοι: 16, an addition of 6, as compared with Artemision.

3. Κορίνθιοι: apparently 40. πλήρωμα, used of a single ship, denotes the crew (Thuc. 7. 4. 6, 12. 3), but of a fleet, or squadron, as here, and c. 45 infra, the full number, the total.

4. Σικυνῶνιοι: 15, an addition of 3.

Ἐπιδαύριοι: 10, an addition of 2.

5. Τροιζήνιοι: 5, the same total.

Ἑρμιονέες: 3, a fresh contingent.

ἐόντες οὗτοι κτλ.: an ethnological and historical note which can have had nothing to say to an official navy-list, and comes, presumably, from a wholly different source, some logograph's work. It falls into two parts—a remark upon the Dorians, a remark upon the Dryopes. The former invites comparison with the locus classicus in 1. 56, the latter with the similar inset, or aside, in c. 31 supra.

There are two marked differences between this passage and 1. 56. (a) The chart of the Dorian wanderings is much fuller there than here, both in point of chronology and in point of geography, and therewith the historical aperçu is fuller. (b) Pindos here, coupled as it is with Erineos, plainly denotes the town in Dryopis, or Doris, of that name; in 1. 56 Pindos no less plainly (pace Stein) denotes the great mountain-range to the west of Thessaly. The passage in Bk. 1 is also more explicit on the question of nomenclature, attaching the 'Makedonian' title to the Pindostation, and the 'Dorian' to Dryopis only.

There is thus a discrepancy between the two passages, at least upon the πλὴν Ἑρμιονέων Δωρικόν τε καὶ Μακεδόνων ἔθνος, ἐξ Ἑρινεοῦ τε καὶ Πίνδου καὶ τῆς Δρυοπίδος ὕστατα ὀρμηθέντες. οἱ δὲ

second point; the phrase just below, ὕστατα ὀρμηθέντες, may be taken to cover the first point implicitly; and if the text is to stand, we must suppose that Hdt. (as not infrequently) lapsed from forgetfulness into a slight inconsequence; for an inconsequence it is, even if Mount Pindos and the town of the same name marked two stations (separated by a considerable interval both spatial and temporal) in the Dorian migration. But are the words Πίνδου καὶ here a gloss, an insertion, a reminiscence, by a mere transcriber of l. 56? Sense and grammar would be complete without them, and the inconsequence would disappear from the author's text. Failing that solution, we might delete καὶ and read Πίνδου τῆς Δρυοπίδος.

The question in any case remains of the repetition, the quasi-dittograph. The composition of the two passages was evidently separated by a considerable interval; but which was the earlier? Probably the fuller and completer passage in Bk. 1 is of later composition in the work of Hdt. Had it stood in its place originally, as it now stands, in relation to this, a reference here backwards would have been natural and sufficient, and in keeping with Hdt.'s practice. This passage, then, distinctly supports the theory that Bks. 7, 8, 9 are of earlier composition than the first and subsequent Books. Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

6. Δωρικόν τε καὶ Μακεδόνων: etymologizing is hazardous work, yet connexion between Μακεδόνες and Μακεδών can scarcely be doubted. In l. 56, where the term is associated with the station of the Dorians on Mount Pindos, in the NW. of Thessaly, a geographical argument for the etymological identification presents itself. This Makedonian station for the Dorians is in truth as far back as the chart or the story of the wandering in l. 56 really carries us; for the previous stages not only involve a pragmatic blunder (the confusion of Histiaiotis with Pelasgiotis, in order to purge the Dorians of all taint of 'barbarism'), but are also obviously designed to bring back the Dorians to the true fold and cradle of Hellenism in Achaia Phthiotis! It is infinitely more probable that the northern Dorians reached their station on Mount Pindos—within view of Hellas—from Makedonia, than that the ultimate conquerors of the south had been driven out of Phthiotis to start with.

ἐξ Ἑρινεοῦ (τε καὶ τῆς Δρυοπίδος). Erineos is mentioned by Thuc. 1. 107. 2 with Boion and Kytinion, as forming the 'metropolis' of the Lakedaemonians (Pindos is there conspicuous by its absence). Strabo 427 adds Pindos, the old name of which was said to be Akyphas, and makes the tetrapolis μητρόπολιν τῶν πάντων Δωριέων. The Dorian Tyrtaios celebrated windy Erineos as the point of departure (ap. Strabon. 362; Bergk ii. 4 8, P. 2).

αὐτοὶ γὰρ Κρονίων, καλλιστεφάνου πόσις
Ἥρης

Ζεὺς Ἑρακλείδαις τήνδε δέδωκε πόλιν· οἷσιν ἅμα προλιπόντες Ἑρινεὺν ἠνεμόντα εὐρείαν Πέλοπος νῆσον ἀφικόμεθα.

The name may be compared with Ὀλυνθος and many others derived ἀπὸ φωνῶν. Cp. Grassberger, Ortsnamen, pp. 221 ff. If Pindar, Pyth. 1. 65, describes the Herakleids, or Dorians, as Πινδὸθεν ὀρμήμενοι (a phrase which Pindaric commentators—Donaldson, Fennell, Mezger, Gildersleeve—leave severely alone), he will have had not the town, not the river, but the mountain in mind (Aigimios was at home in Thessaly).

7. οἱ δὲ Ἑρμιονέες εἰς Ἄρδρες: the people of Hermion (for its site cp. Thuc. 2. 56. 5) no doubt represented a non-Dorian and a prae-Dorian stock in the Peloponnesos, like the people of Asine in Lakonia, c. 73 infra, or like the 'Minyai' of the Lepreatis (ibid. 4. 148); but perhaps no more came from Doris-Dryopis than the Lepreatai from Lemnos, unless, indeed, they came with the Dorians. The people of Kythnos too are 'Dryopians', c. 46 infra; and there were 'Dryopians' on the Asiatic side (cp. 1. 146). Karystos in Euboea was 'Dryopian', Thuc. 7. 57. 4, and also perhaps Styra (Pausan. 4. 34. 11, despite Thuc. l.c., who makes them 'Ionian'). Even Kypros—if Diod. 4. 37. 2 were to be believed—contained Dryopians. That the name Dryopis was most clearly attached to the soil in the Oitaian region argues Oita as a real

Ἑρμιονέες εἰσὶ Δρύοπες, ὑπὸ Ἡρακλέους τε καὶ Μηλίων ἐκ
 44 τῆς νῦν Δωρίδος καλεομένης χώρας ἐξαναστάντες. οὗτοι μὲν
 νυν Πελοποννησίων ἐστρατεύοντο, οἶδε δὲ ἐκ τῆς ἑξω ἡπείρου, Ἀθηναῖοι μὲν πρὸς πάντας τοὺς ἄλλους παρεχόμενοι νέας ὀγδῶκοντα καὶ ἑκατόν, μοῦνοι. ἐν Σαλαμῖνι γὰρ οὐ συνεναν-

8 ἡρακλέους B
 οἱ δὲ 3 νῆας B

44. 2 οἶδε δὲ Schweighaeuser, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> :

seat of the Dryopians, and may help to explain its 'metropolitan' character. Busolt i.<sup>2</sup> (1893) 209 connects Dryops, 'oak-man,' with the Lapith 'Dryas,' Il. 1. 263, and so takes the Dryopians back into Thessaly, seeing in the geographical order of the Dryopian stations—Styra, Karystos, Kythnos—the links between the Malian and the Argolic gulfs. But geography is not history, and the historic inference from geographical distribution is just the fallacy committed in the Herodotean legend of the Minyai, 4. 145 ff. The Dryopians, like the Minyai, the Dolopians, the Kaukonos, the Kekropians, and so on, put us doubtless face to face with the primitive, or all but primitive, population of the Hellenic area. ἐπέκησαν δὲ καὶ Ἑρμιόνα ὑστερον Δωριεῖς οἱ ἐξ Ἀργεῶν Pausan. 2. 34. 5. The date and circumstances of this ἐποίκησις are not given, but it did not obliterate apparently the Dryopian character of the town.

8. ὑπὸ Ἡρακλέους τε καὶ Μηλίων. The story is told by Diodor. 4. 37, and by the Mythographi; e.g. Apollodoros 2. 7. 7; Appendix Narrationum, 28. 6, ed. Westermann (1843). Cp. also Pausan. 4. 35. 6 (for a version told by the Asinaians, cp. c. 73 infra). For the connexion of Herakles with Malis cp. 7. 176, 216 supra.

44. 2. ἐκ τῆς ἑξω ἡπείρου: not merely have the Peloponnesians precedence in this navy-list, but the remainder are enumerated from a Peloponnesian standpoint; contrast the list for Artemision c. 1 supra.

3. Ἀθηναῖοι μὲν: to this μὲν may correspond the δὲ in c. 45 infra, Μεγαρεῖς δὲ κτλ., but it looks somewhat 'pendent.' A kind of contrast is supplied by the case of the Plataians, but without a δέ, its place, perhaps, supplied by γὰρ; in fact the Plataians are resumed with οὗτοι μὲν νυν, to which immediately corresponds Ἀθηναῖοι δέ. The parenthetical character of the passage, and especially of the learned parenthesis on the origines of the Athenians, is manifest even in the style.

πρὸς πάντας τοὺς ἄλλους, 'to set against, to compare with all the other peoples.' For this use of πρὸς Blakesley cps. 2. 35 πρὸς πᾶσαν χώραν, and 3. 94 φόρον ἀπαγγέλον πρὸς πάντας τοὺς ἄλλους ἐξήκοντα καὶ τριηκόσια τάλαντα ψήγματος.

Hdt. gives the number of the Athenian ships at Salamis as 180. He evidently conceives of the total number available as 200, 20 being manned by the men of Chalkis, cc. 1, 14 supra. The anonymous Athenian ap. Thuc. 1. 74. 1 claims a little less than two-thirds of 400—which might be about 250. Cp. 7. 144 supra.

4. μοῦνοι: by themselves alone, i.e. without the Plataians, as the next sentence explains. There was evidently a problem: why were the Plataians, who had assisted to man the Athenian squadron at Artemision (c. 1 supra), absent from Salamis? The reason appears to be somewhat conjectural (διὰ τοιόνδε τι πρῆγμα). They had landed opposite Chalkis in order to remove their households. The fact of the debarkation is plainly indubitable; the reason for the act is more doubtful. It implies that the complete evacuation of Plataia, and therefore of Attica, had already been resolved on. In the light of c. 40 supra it is possible that the Plataians landed in Boiotia expecting to find the Peloponnesian army ready to cover and defend Plataia: they would naturally elect, and indeed be bound, to join the land-forces under such circumstances. The removal was then necessitated by the non-appearance of the Greek army. But had the Plataians been especially eager for further service at sea, they surely might have found a way of re-joining the Athenians at Salamis. Had the evacuation of Attica been already decided on when the Athenians and Plataians parted at Chalkis, surely μάχησαν Πλαταιέες Ἀθηναίοισι διὰ τοιόνδε τι πρήγμα·<sup>5</sup>

ἀπαλλασσομένων τῶν Ἑλλήνων ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀρτεμισίου, ὡς ἐγίνοντο κατὰ Χαλκίδα, οἱ Πλαταιέες ἀποβάντες ἐς τὴν περαίην τῆς Βοιωτῆς χώραν πρὸς ἐκκομιδὴν ἐτράποντο τῶν οἰκετῶν. οὗτοι μὲν νυν τούτους σῶζοντες ἐλείφθησαν, Ἀθη-

5 τι om. α
χώρας || κομιδὴν β

8 πτερίην β: περίην V, Valla || χώραν Stein<sup>8</sup>:
9 σῶζοντες van H., Stein<sup>8</sup>: σώζοντες

Salamis would have been given as the rendezvous. The Plataians did not perhaps escape some censure at Athens; there is some trace of an apologetic note in this passage. Athenian tradition had its revenge: this μοῖνοι became so emphatic that it was sometimes forgotten that the Plataians had fought at Marathon! Cp. 9. 27.

7. τὴν περαίην τῆς Βοιωτῆς χώραν, "the Boeotian territory on the opposite shore," Blakesley; "the opposite shore of Boeotia," Rawlinson, Macaulay (sc. χώρας). The meaning is clear, though the more usual sense would be "the coast opposite Boiotia." The 'Peraia' is looked at from Chalkis, not from Boiotia. Cp. App. Crit.

8. τῶν οἰκετῶν must surely include 'wives and children' as in c. 106 ἡντὰ κομίσας τοὺς οἰκέτας, at once followed by κομίσαι τὰ τέκνα καὶ τὴν γυναῖκα, or c. 142 ἡντὰ γυναῖκάς τε καὶ τὰ ἐς πόλεμον δαχρηστα οἰκετῶν ἐχόμενα πάντα, where it includes τέκνα. Cp. παῖδας τε καὶ γυναῖκας c. 40 supra (where οἰκέται are not specified), τέκνα τε καὶ τοὺς οἰκέτας c. 41, where γυναῖκας must be included. Add τέκνα καὶ γυναῖκες cc. 36, 60. The use of οἰκέτης as a domestic slave is perhaps something of a euphemism, or meiosis; cp. 7. 170. With ἐλείφθησαν cp. 7. 153 οὐκ ἐλείφθη.

9. Ἀθηναῖοι δέ: as the text now stands this phrase is antithetical to οὗτοι μὲν, but there is no true antithesis in the argument. This parenthesis on the Attic origins can hardly have been intended in the first instance for an Attic public, and may very well be an insertion (belonging to the second draft); in which case Μεγαρέες δέ would follow on οὗτοι μὲν . . . ἐλείφθησαν. But in that case too the antithesis is hardly correct. Perhaps the original text ran Ἀθηναῖοι μὲν πρὸς πάντας . . . ἐκόντες, Μεγαρέες δέ κτλ., and the double parenthesis may all be later insertion, and even perhaps not all of the same date and draft (the Attic origins being of the second, the note on the Plataian desertion of Athens of the third hand, or draft, that revision which took place at Athens after the outbreak of the Peloponnesian war, what time the case of Plataia was doubtless freely and frequently canvassed; cp. Introduction, § 9).

The epitome which follows is the quintessence of primitive Attic history. Hdt. has taken it from some predecessor (possibly Hekataios), though there were perhaps already native Ἀθηνογράφοι at work, cp. 6. 137. But this passage is hardly of strict Attic provenience, nor does it represent the orthodox Athenian tradition or theory. An Athenian would not have admitted Pelasgicism, nor allowed Κέκροψ a merely secondary place, nor described Ion as στρατάρχης (but rather as πολέμαρχος) of Athens. In this passage, as in 1. 57, the Athenians are Pelasgians, virtually from first to last, for the changes they have undergone are merely, or mainly, nominal—a change of names; but Hdt. does not here go so far as to assert that they had changed their language too, or that time was when the Athenians, yea the Ionians, spake a non-Hellenic tongue. The early history of Attica, or at least of Athens, is resumed in four stages, of which the Ionian (with the Ionian tribes, and so forth) was but the last, and imposed ab extra. Before there were Ionians there had been Athenians; the Athenian is older than the Ionian name—in Attica. But the names of Kekrops and Kekropidai are older still than the Athenian. So far back the stages, the epochs, are marked by proper names, Ion, Erechtheus, Kekrops. Before Kekrops there is a dim Pelasgian prime, and the forbears of the Athenian people, seemingly one tribe or section of the Pelasgian stock, were hight Kranaoi. But here it is the difference rather than the identity between Athenian and Pelasgian that is emphasized.

10 ναῖοι δὲ ἐπὶ μὲν Πελασγῶν ἐχόντων τὴν νῦν Ἑλλάδα καλεομένην ἦσαν Πελασγοί, ὀνομαζόμενοι Κραναοί, ἐπὶ δὲ Κέκροπος

11 οὐνομαζόμενοι Β

10. ἐπὶ μὲν Πελασγῶν ἐχόντων τὴν νῦν Ἑλλάδα. Hdt., so far as he has one single consistent view on the 'Pelasgian question,' regards the Pelasgoi as the fore-Hellenic and non-Hellenic population of all the continuous area afterwards invaded and occupied by the Hellenes, and so hellenized. Thus (i.) he places Pelasgoi in Peloponnese (1. 146, 2. 171, 7. 94): in Attica (1. 56, 2. 51, 4. 145, 6. 137): N. Greece (2. 52, 56): in the Islands (2. 51, 4. 145, 5. 26, 6. 136, 140): Asia Minor (7. 42, 95); (ii.) he makes Pelasgia the older name of the Hellenic peninsula (2. 56); (iii.) he believes that the Pelasgoi spake a non-Hellenic language (1. 57). On this view many or most of the early tribal names are subdivisions of the Pelasgic stock: Αἰγιάλες Πελασγοί (7. 94), Κραναοί Πελασγοί, and so forth; the Dorians become the Hellenes κατ' ἐξοχήν, and the area occupied by Hellenic or hellenized tribes in the historic period has, ex hypothesi, been occupied in the prehistoric by non-Hellenic tribes, exterminated or absorbed and hellenized by the invaders, leaving only a few isolated survivals here and there (1. 57). But the case of Athens, where there was no record of a Dorian conquest, is a difficulty on this theory, though Herodotus, the Dorian, nevertheless, or perhaps for that very reason, represents the Athenians as Pelasgic, without ever explaining their adoption of Hellenism. Thucydides, the Athenian, represents an opposite, or at least a corrective and rival view. He nowhere commits himself to the doctrine of the non-Hellenic character of the Pelasgoi, or the non-Hellenic character of their language. Hellene and Pelasgian are not with him alternative or exclusive terms at any period; the distinction is merely nominal and verbal. The Pelasgic is indeed older than the Hellenic, but the Pelasgoi are but one, the most considerable, of many tribes inhabiting the potentially Hellenic area (1. 3). The Hellenic name is a matter of fashion, culture, exchange, adoption. The exact relation of Athens to the Pelasgoi is not clear. It is possible that Thucydides did not connect τὸ Πελαργικόν (2. 17) with the Pelasgoi; but if the words καὶ Ἀθήνας in 4. 109. 4 are authentic (to me they have the air of a gloss), Thucydides admitted Πελασγοί Τυρσηνοί as quondam inhabitants (οἰκησάντων) of Athens: an excursion into the rival hypothesis! In any case he will hardly have regarded the Athenians as Pelasgoi in his own time, much less allowed the Dorian claim to the flower of 'Hellenism.'

Hdt.'s theory in this passage may be diagrammatically exhibited:

Ἀθηναῖοι	i.	ἦσαν ὠνομάσθησαν	Πελασγοί Κραναοί	<ἀπ' ἀρχῆς> ἐπὶ Πελασγῶν	Πελασγῶν ἐχόντων τὴν νῦν Ἑλλάδα καλεομένην
	ii.	ἐπεκλήθησαν	Κεκροπίδαι	ἐπὶ Κέκροπος	βασιλέος
	iii.	μετωνομάσθησαν	Ἀθηναῖοι	ἐπ' Ἐρεχθεός	ἐκδεξαμένου τὴν ἀρχὴν
	iv.	ἐκλήθησαν	Ἴωνες	ἐπ' Ἴωνος	στρατιάρχου γενομένου Ἀθηναίων

11. Κραναοί. Hdt. knows nothing apparently of the king or hero Kranaos, who is mentioned by Aischylos (παῖδες Κραναοῦ Eumen. 1011=Athenians), and whose monument (μνῆμα) was to be seen, in the time of Pausanias (1. 31. 3), in the deme of Lamprai; yet, on the other hand, he seems to anticipate the later traditions (i.e. theories) in denying the primacy of Kekrops. κρα-ναός may be rightly etymologized (καρ-, κρα-, and ναίειν) as the Dwellers-on-high (Stein: the antithesis to the Δα-ναοί=Ἀργεῖοι

'dwellers below, on the plain' looks daring, though attractive). Aristophanes has Κραναὰ πόλις Ach. 75 for Athens; cp. Birds 123 (τῶν Κραναῶν πόλιν) and (more specifically for the Akropolis?) Lys. 481 (μεγαλόπετρον ἄβατον). But Pindar has the word as an epithet not merely of Athens (Nem. 8. 11, Ol. 7. 82, 13. 38) but of Delos, Isth. 1. 4, and with Homer it is the standing epithet of Ithaca (Il. 3. 201, Od. 1. 247). The primitive meaning would seem to be rather 'hard' than 'head' or 'high.'

βασιλέος ἐκλήθησαν Κεκροπίδαι, ἐκδεξαμένου δὲ Ἐρεχθέως τὴν ἀρχὴν Ἀθηναῖοι μετωνομάσθησαν, Ἴωνος δὲ τοῦ Ξούθου

12 βασιλέως C: βασιλῆος = || ἐπεκλήθησαν B, Holder, van H. ||
ἐρεχθέως B 13 Ἀθηναῖοι: Ἐρεχθίδαι coni. Krueger

The word is, however, also found as a proper name already in Homer, Il. 3. 445, of an island, variously identified (but in no case Ithaca!); cp. Pausan. 3. 22. 1. Perhaps the names Κράνιοι Thuc. 2. 30. 2 etc., Κρανῶνιοι 2. 22. 3 may be traced to the same root. Cp. also next note.

Κέκροπος βασιλέος: for Thueydides, at least, Kekrops is apparently the first king in the land, 2. 15. 1, and the only one named by him previous to Theseus, though others are implied. Hdt. here adds Erechtheus, and in 1. 173 supplies the names of Pandion and Aigeus. Whether these four names would have comprised for Hdt. the complete list of Attic, or even of Athenian, kings before Theseus it is not easy to determine. As pointed out in the previous note, Kekrops can hardly be the first king for Hdt. What exact date he would have assigned to Kekrops must also remain an open question; but here at least the period of the Kekropidae is post-Pelasgian and prae-Ionian, nay, even prae-Athenian!

'Kra-naos' appears to be an epithet localized, and then converted into a tribe-name and a tribe-ancestor. The eponym has here been generated from the epithet. Is the case to some extent similar with 'Kekrops'? The etymology and meaning of Kekrops are, indeed, obscure. G. Curtius connected the word with καρπ-, fruit, fruitful (vid. L. & S.), in which case the Κέκροτες, Κεκρόπιοι, Κεκροπίδαι—terms all used = Ἀθηναῖοι—would be the πέδιοι, or πεδιαῖοι, under another aspect (and contrast well with the κραναοί as above explained). But is not κέρκρῳ a variant of κέρκοψ, κέρκωψ, the beast, or man, with the tail? (cp. 7. 216 supra). It was under such a form that Kekrops was found and worshipped on the Akropolis; and the serpentine image was, or became, symbolical of the autochthonous claim; cp. c. 41 supra. Apollod. 3. 14. 1 probably gives the orthodox Attic theory: Κέκροψ αὐτόχθων, συμφυὲς ἔχων σῶμα ἀνδρὸς καὶ δράκοντος, τῆς Ἀττικῆς ἐβασίλευσε πρῶτος (except that the unification, the synoikism, of the land should be left for Theseus).

12. Ἐρεχθέος: of the true essence of Erechtheus there need be comparatively little doubt; he is one with Poseidon (cp. c. 55 infra), although, of course, tradition, i.e. early speculation, divided them, and then multiplied Erechtheus by two, or more, into Erechtheus, Erichthonios, in order the better to harmonize discrepant legends. Etymologically he is 'the Render' (cp. ἐρέχθω, Ποσειδῶν ἐρεχθεύς = ἐννοσίγαιος (?), though the connexion with χθών even in Erichthonios is pseudetymology). Like Kekrops, with whom he was sometimes, reasonably enough, identified (cp. Eustath. p. 283, ap. Clinton, Fasti, i. (1834) p. 62a), Erechtheus is in Attic legend αὐτοχθών. But his divinity is even more incontestable, and he had his temple on the Akropolis, in close association with Athene; cp. above all Homer, Il. 2. 547. This close association accounts for the metonomasia from Κεκροπίδαι to Ἀθηναῖοι here associated with his régime; not but what Ἐρεχθεῖδαι is found in the poets as an equivalent, Pindar, Isth. 2. 19, cp. Pyth. 7. 10; Sophokles, Antig. 969, Aj. 201, etc. etc. Yet it is perhaps a pity that Hdt. did not complete his schematic history of Athenian titles by employing the term; so would he have had 'Athenians' all through as the common element underlying Pelasgians, Kranaians, Kekropids, Erechtheids, Ionians! Cp. App. Crit.

13. Ἴωνος δὲ τοῦ Ξούθου. The conventional pedigree of the sons of Hellen, for which our oldest authority is the Boiotian Hesiod (Frag. 25 = Rzsch 7), is everywhere presupposed in Hdt., even though the Hellenic character of the Ionians is thus guaranteed, in conflict with his theory (1. 56) of their Pelasgic descent. The insertion of Xuthos does, however, put Ion (and Achaïos) one step further from Hellen than Doros (and Aiolos); unless, indeed, with Euripides we make Doros also a son of Xuthos. In Attica Ion (and the Ionians) are immigrant, not autochthonous (though Euripides places his birth in one of the holy caves under the Akropolis), and no Attic tradition gave Ion a place in the suc-

στρατάρχεω γενομένου Ἀθηναίοισι ἐκλήθησαν ἀπὸ τούτου 45 Ἴωνες. Μεγαρές δὲ τὸντὸ πλήρωμα παρείχοντο καὶ ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ, Ἀμπρακίῳται δὲ ἐπὶ τὰ νέας ἔχοντες ἐπεβοή-θησαν, Λευκάδιοι δὲ τρεῖς, ἔθνος εὐντες οὗτοι Δωρικὸν ἀπὸ

14 ἀπὸ: ἐπὶ? van H.
 παρείχον τὸ α C: παρείχοντο τὸ PRz ἐπεβώθησαν SV, Gaisford, van H.

45. 1 παρείχοντο SV Marcianus:
 2 νῆας B || ἐπεβώθησαν R:

cession of kings, though he is recognized here (as in Ἀθην. πολ. l.c. infra) as war-leader, war-lord. Was there never an Ionian conquest of or in Attica? The Ionian elements in Attica seem closely welded with the native, and yet distinct (the analogy of Great Britain, with its Saxons and Britons, is perhaps admissible). In Attica, however, the Ionian can hardly have been the aboriginal element, and the 'Athenian' the immigrant; albeit such complete inversions of the truth, such hystera protera, are found in Greek legend (cp. 4. 145). One thing is clear: there was no 'Norman,' no Dorian conquest of Attica (cp. 5. 76 and my notes); and the settlement of population in Attica went back to a much more primitive date than in Peloponnese, or in the rest of Central Greece; hence the relative continuity of Attic history and culture, the priority and scale of the 'Theseian' synoikism.

14. στρατάρχεω: elsewhere Ion had been perhaps a king (cp. Pausan. 7. 1. 5 ἐπὶ τῆς Ἰωνος βασιλείας κτλ.), though Hdt. does not expressly say so in 7. 94. The 'Aristotelian' theory traced the origin of the πολεμαρχία, as distinct from the βασιλεία, to the appointment of Ion: δεύτερα δὲ ἐπικατέστη πολεμαρχία, διὰ τὸ γενέσθαι τινὰς τῶν βασιλέων τὰ πολέμια μαλακοῦς, ὅθεν καὶ τὸν Ἴωνα μετεπέμψαντο χρεῖας καταλαβοῦσης, Ath. Pol. c. 3. (The need was the war with Eumolpos of Eleusis.) Something very like this theory, this story, is already implied in Hdt. Strabo 383 possibly preserves the 'Aristotelian' version: Ἴων δὲ τοὺς μετ' Εὐμόλπου νικήσας Ὁρᾶκας οὕτως ὑπόδοκίμησεν ὥστ' ἐπέτρεψαν αὐτῷ τὴν πολιτείαν. ὁ δὲ πρῶτον μὲν εἰς τέτταρας φυλάς διέειλε τὸ πλῆθος εἰς τέτταρας βίους· τοὺς μὲν γὰρ γεωργοὺς ἀπέδειξε τοὺς δὲ δημιουργοὺς τοὺς δὲ ἱεροποιούς τετάρτους δὲ τοὺς φύλακας· τοιαῦτα δὲ πλείω διατάξας τὴν χώραν ἐπώνυμον ἑαυτοῦ κατέλιπεν. This looks like the πρώτη μετάστασις τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς, the κατάστασις Ἰωνος καὶ τῶν μετ' αὐτοῦ συνοικι-

σάντων (or συνοικησάντων Blass): τότε γὰρ πρῶτον εἰς τὰς τέτταρας συνενομήθησαν φυλάς, καὶ τοὺς φυλοβασιλέας κατέστησαν, c. 41. 2. Ion, on that showing, is war-lord and legislator, though not strictly 'king.' The four βίαι ap. Strabon. are, of course, a rationalization of the tribal names, as in 5. 66 supra; cp. notes ad l.c. The tomb of Ion was to be seen, in Pausanias' time, at Potamoi, Pausan. 1. 31. 3 (n.b. ἐπολεμαρχήσε), 7. 1. 5.

45. 1. Μεγαρές, like the Corinthians, add nothing to their Artemisian contingent (20), and the same formula is applied; cp. c. 43 supra. That they were Dorian 'goes without saying'; unless, indeed, the concluding words of the chapter be taken to cover the case of Megara, and to make it a Corinthian colony. This view would scarcely agree with 5. 76 supra, where the Dorian settlement of Megara is expressly recorded. Cp. Busolt i.<sup>2</sup> (1893) 220, who omits any reference to this passage, rightly enough. The later tradition that the Corinthians were especially concerned in the Dorization of Megara hardly accords, as Busolt points out, with the silence of Thucydides (i.e. the Corinthians ap. Thuc.), or with the cult of Hera Akraia, in Megara and in Byzantion, its colony.

2. Ἀμπρακίῳται: for the geographical position of Ambrakia cp. c. 47 infra. Ἀμπρακία is the older form of the name: cp. Oberhammer, Akarnanien, 25, etc. Their contingent of 7 is a clear addition to the Artemisian list. Ambrakia is expressly described as a colony from Korinth by Thuc. 2. 80. 3, and was plainly a loyal colony. For the coinage cp. B. Head, Historia Numorum, 270—none of the many extant varieties (all of Corinthian type) going back before the fourth century. The Ambrakiotēs probably came to Pogon and Salamis out of loyalty to Korinth and at her summons (ἐπεβώθησαν).

3. Λευκάδιοι: for the geographical

Κορίνθου. νησιωτέων δὲ Αἰγινῆται τριήκοντα παρείχοντο. 46 ἦσαν μὲν σφί καὶ ἄλλαι πεπληρωμέναι νέες, ἀλλὰ τῇσι μὲν τὴν ἐωυτῶν ἐφύλασσαν, τριήκοντα δὲ τῇσι ἄριστα πλεούσῃσι ἐν Σαλαμῖνι ἐναυμάχῃσαν. Αἰγινῆται δὲ εἰσὶ Δωριεῖς ἀπὸ position of Leukas cp. c. 47 infra. The Leukadian contingent of 3 is a clear addition to the navy-list. Leukas was a Korinthian colony (Thuc. 1. 30. 2), and, like Ambrakia, a loyal colony. Its coinage, of the Korinthian type and standard, reaches back into the fifth century B.C., Head p. 279.

46. 2 ἔσαν  $\approx$  || μὲν νυν B || ἄλλαι <ι' = δέκα> Cobet: ἄλλαι <δυοκαίδεκα> van H. || νῆες B: νέες δυοκαίδεκα? Stein 3 πλωούσῃσι (-ῖν V) B: πλωούσῃσι Palm, van H.

οὔτοι. It is not quite clear whether Hdt. means this word, and the statement which follows, to apply to the Leukadians only, or to Ambrakiotes and Leukadians, or to Megarians, Ambrakiotes, and Leukadians, all three. Prima facie it applies to the Leukadians alone. Historically it would be equally true of the Ambrakiotes. Its application to the Megarians would be at least highly questionable in a historic sense; see above.

46. 1. νησιωτέων: the third geographical division: without the article cp. 7. 95. There follow the names and numbers of ten contingents, from eight islands, Aigina, Euboea, Keos, Naxos, Kythnos, Seriphos, Siphnos, Melos, three separate contingents being drawn from Euboea. It is not clear on what principle the order is determined.

Αἰγινῆται, as furnishing the largest contingent, perhaps as having afterwards won the ἀριστεία, and as Dorians, have the first place. The contingent of 30 here recorded for Salamis exceeds the Artemisian contingent by 12; whether it includes the ships present at Artemision is not made clear. The statement is that the 30 ships at Salamis did not include all the Aiginetan ships actually in commission (πεπληρωμένοι, the πλήρωμα in this case being the Mannschaft; cp. c. 43 supra). The ἄλλαι νέες may have comprised all, or some, of the Artemisian contingent of 18, which, after the engagements off Euboea, might no longer be reckoned to τῇσι ἄριστα πλεούσῃσι. So the total of the Aiginetan vessels in commission might be raised to 48, and yet fall short of the fleet with which they had fought Athens between 487-482 B.C., cp. 6. 92, 93 (which can hardly have numbered less than 50). There is something amiss with the numbering of the Aiginetan fleets. Below, c. 48, Hdt. gives the total figure for the fleet at Salamis as 378, while his items only supply a sum 366. Are the missing 12 to be added to the 30 Aiginetans so as to bring the actual contingent present at Salamis to 42? If so, how did the figure 30 arise? Or are the 12 to be inserted here as the figure for the ἄλλαι (cp. App. Crit.)? But, if so, they should not be reckoned in the Salaminian total infra, for they were not at Salamis; moreover, Pausanias 2. 29. 5, rightly or wrongly, makes the Aiginetans second only to the Athenians in the number of their fleet (ἐν τῷ Μηδικῷ πολέμῳ παρασχέσθαι πλοῖα μετὰ γε Ἀθηναίων πλείεστα), yet the figure above given for the Korinthian squadron was 40. The figures 30, 18, 12 all come into the reckoning, and all stand in a definite relation to one another: did the Aiginetan fleet in 480 B.C. number less than 60 vessels, of which 42 were present at the battle of Salamis, only 30 being reckoned (αὶ ἄριστα πλέουσαι, while with 18—possibly those previously at Artemision—τὴν ἐωυτῶν ἐφύλασσαν—they were on guard off Aigina?

4. εἰσὶ Δωριεῖς ἀπὸ Ἐπιδαύρου: at the time when Hdt. wrote these words surely the Aiginetans were still in their own island home, and not outcasts in Kynuria, Thuc. 2. 27 (much less victims of extreme Athenian vengeance, Thuc. 4. 57); in other words, this passage is of older composition than 6. 91 supra. Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8. This note on the origin of the Aiginetans—Dorians from Epidauros—also seems written quite independently of the story in 5. 83, where the early dependence of Aigina upon Epidauros is described, though without any express recognition of the 'metropolitan' character of Epidauros—a contrast at least compatible with the hypothesis that this note is of earlier composition. That Aigina was a Dorian island in the historic period is indubitable; e.g. the not very numerous tituli Aeginetici, Cauer, Delectus<sup>2</sup> No. 65-70, E. S. Roberts, Gk. Epigraphy i. (1887) §§ 57-59, and the uniform literary and historical evidences from Pindar to Pausanias. The date and circumstances of its occupation by the Dorians, and the precise starting-point of the colonists, are items of doubtful tradition and speculation. Hdt. here traces the Dorian colonists no further back than Epidauros; in 1. 146 he mixes up Dorians of Epidauros with the Ionian migration to Asia Minor; the Dorization of Epidauros itself he does not record. Pausanias 2. 29. 5 supplies a text: μοῖρα Ἀργείων τῶν Ἐπιδάουρον ὁμοῦ Δηϊφόντῃ κατασχόντων διέβη ἐς Αἴγινα. The Dorians of Aigina ultimately hailed from Dorian Argos; and so more expressly Aigina was sometimes made a colony of Argos: Τριάκων τις Ἀργεῖος συλλέξας πλῆθος Ἀργείων, οἱ δὲ Ἀργεῖοι τοῦ Δωρικοῦ γένους, εἰς τὴν Αἴγινα ἦλθε καὶ κατέκρησε Schol. Pind. Ol. 8. 39. Epidauros was perhaps no more than the port of departure; and notwithstanding the air of antiquity lent to the traditions, we may reasonably doubt whether the Dorization of Aigina was much more ancient than the age of Pheidon, or the dependence of Aigina on Epidauros (5. 83) more than a misconception of the relations of the island to the Argive power under the last of the Temenid kings of Argolis.

5 Ἐπιδάουρον· τῇ δὲ νήσῳ πρότερον οὔνομα ἦν Οἰνώνη. μετὰ δὲ Αἰγινήτας Χαλκιδέες τὰς ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ εἴκοσι παρεχόμενοι καὶ Ἐρετρίες τὰς ἑπτὰ· οὗτοι δὲ Ἴωνες εἰσὶ. μετὰ

5. τῇ δὲ νήσῳ . . Οἰνώνη. The statement would suggest that the name Αἴγινα was of Dorian coinage; but it belongs to a class of names (beginning with Αἰγ-) that go back long before the coming of the Dorians, and Aigina was the name of the island apparently in the days of the Kalaurian Amphiktyony. So, too, the tradition that Zeus carried the nymph Aigina to the desert island Oinone, where she became mother of the first inhabitant Aiakos (Pausan. 2. 29. 2), pushes the proper name back as far as the earliest population. The form of the name given by Pindar Isth. 7. 23 (telling the same story) is Οἰνωσία (σὲ δ' ἐς νᾶσον Οἰνωσίαν φέρων ἔκομᾶτο κτλ.), but elsewhere he has Οἰνώνα (Nem. 4. 46, 5. 15, 8. 7, Isth. 4. (5.) 35). Is the supposed ancient 'name' of the island much more than an epithet deranged? As in the parallel cases of Καλλίστη Θήρα (4. 147), or Σχερία = Κόρκυρα (Pausan. 2. 5. 2), the supposed original is more indubitably Greek, or at least more transparently significant, than the name of supposed later origin—a point fatal to the asserted priority. 'Oinone,' too, is known as a nymph, the bride of Paris (Apollod. 3. 12. 6 et al.); and the syllable οἰν- is as common, but is it also as ancient, as αἰγ- in the composition of proper names? The name Oinone might be connected with the frequent Οἰνὴ (bis in Attica, ter in Peloponnese, and elsewhere; e.g. Ikaria, Steph. B.), Οἰνοῦς, Οἰνοῦσαι, Οἰνέων (Οἰνάνδα), and others—all genuine place-names, of indubitably vinous associations. Cp. Grassberger, Gr. Ortsnamen, p. 227. This nomenclature looks Indo-European: can it be primitive in loco?

6. Χαλκιδέες furnish 20 vessels to the Salaminian navy-list, and these expressly the same ships as at Artemision; but the list here leaves us to find out for ourselves by back reference that the ships, though manned by the men of Chalkia, were really supplied by Athens (c. 1 supra); in fact it might more accurately have been said of the Chalkidians, τὸντὸ πλῆρωμα παρέχοντο. The observation confirms the suspicion that Hdt. is here drawing on a different source.

7. Ἐρετρίες supply 'the seven,' i.e. the same as before, at Artemision; but these were really their own. The οὔτοι here refers to the Eretrians, who, though Ionians, are not ἀπὸ Ἀθηνέων. It might conceivably refer to both Chalkidians and Eretrians, but συναμφοτέροι οὔτοι would then have been clearer; see below. The 'Chalkidians' are presumably Athenian kleruchs, even though the crews in the 20 vessels may have been natives. Cp. c. 1 supra.

δὲ Κήιοι τὰς αὐτὰς παρεχόμενοι, ἔθνος ἔδν Ἴωνικὸν ἀπὸ Ἀθηνέων. Νάξιοι δὲ παρείχοντο τέσσερας, ἀποπεμφθέντες μὲν ἐς τοὺς Μήδους ὑπὸ τῶν πολιητέων κατὰ περ οἱ ἄλλοι 10 νησιῶται, ἀλογήσαντες δὲ τῶν ἐντολέων ἀπικάτο ἐς τοὺς Ἑλλήνας Δημοκρίτου σπεύσαντος, ἀνδρὸς τῶν ἀστῶν δοκίμου

8 κείῳ αCP, Palm, van H.: κίῳ Bz || ἔδν om. B 9 ἀθηναίων BB, Stein<sup>1</sup> 10 ἄλλοι B: ἄλλοι Schaefer, Gaisford, Holder, van H. 11 ἀπίκοντο B 12 πλείσαντος B

8. Κήιοι supply 'the same' ships as at Artemision, 2 in number; their Atheno-Ionian origin is expressly specified. The island of Keos is nowhere mentioned nominatim by Hdt. (cp. c. 76 infra), nor does it appear that he ever landed on it; but he had doubtless seen the Κήϊων Ἰστυγόριον at Delos (4. 35 supra), and he was acquainted with the works of the greatest of all Keians, Simonides; cp. 7. 228 supra. Athens claimed 'metropolitan' recognition, of course, from the Ionians of the Cyclades as from the Ionians of Asia; cp. 5. 99, 1. 147.

9. Νάξιοι: the four Naxian triremes are pure gain; the title refers grammatically to the very men on board, who had been despatched by the Commonwealth to join the enemy, their nominal suzerain, but had taken the law into their own hands, and joined the Greek side. This independent action of the Naxian fleet recalls, mutatis mutandis, the action of the Samians despatched by Polykrates to serve under Kambyses in Egypt, 3. 45, and anticipates (in a small way) the separate action of the Athenian fleet at Samos in 412-11 B.C., Thucydides 8. 75 f., not to say that of the Ionians at Byzantium in 477 B.C., Thuc. 1. 95, Plutarch. Arist. 23. One might suspect that the Naxian fleet on this occasion was more 'democratic,' more Attic, than οἱ πολίται. But see l. 12 below.

10. ἐς τοὺς Μήδους: not here, as sometimes, a geographical phrase. The employment of Μήδος for Πέρσης is not common in these Books, and perhaps belongs to 'the source.'

κατὰ περ οἱ ἄλλοι νησιῶται: in the Aegean, who, with the exception of Seriphos, Siphnos, Melos, had all given 'earth and water' to 'the barbarian.' Cp. c. 66 below.

11. ἀπικάτο: a pluperfect, with the full temporal significance, referring to a past act rather than to a present result; so, the force of the form is different from the construction with the auxiliary verb, as in ἦσαν πεπληρωμένοι vées l. 2 above.

12. Δημοκρίτου. Hdt. may owe the name of Demokritos (a popular name!) to an epigram of Simonides, recognized as authentic by M. Hauvette, de l'authenticité des Epigrammes de Simonide (1896) p. 53,

Δημόκριτος τρίτος ἦρξε μάχης ὅτε πᾶρ Σαλαμίνα

"Ἑλλήνες Μήδοις σύμβαλον ἐν πελάγει· πέντε δὲ νῆας ἔλεν δηίων, ἕκτην δ' ὑπὸ χειρὸς
ρύσατο βαρβαρικῆς Δωρίδ' ἄλικομένην,

preserved by Plutarch, de malig. Hdti. 36. His τριηραρχία presumably extended to one only of the four triremes. His position would not be inconsistent with his being a democrat. It is remarkable that Hdt. does not supply his father's name, nor does the epigram. There is no sharp opposition intended between τῶν ἀστῶν and τῶν πολιητέων just above.

On the Athenian origin of the Ionian Naxians cp. l. 8 above. Naxos was and had been a much more important island than Keos, and had been held to Athenian interests in the days of Peisistratos (1. 64). Its rivalry with Miletos at the end of the sixth cent., and party feuds within the island itself, had led indirectly to the conflict between the Ionians and Persia in which Athens had become involved (5. 28, 31); and though Naxos had escaped the first assault upon its liberties from the Asiatic side (5. 33), it had succumbed—with the rest—to Datis and Artaphrenes (6. 95 f.) in 490 B.C. For the decade previous to Salamis its history is a blank; but evidently Naxos had resigned neither its ambitions nor its party feuds.

καὶ τότε τριηραρχέοντος. Νάξιοι δὲ εἰσὶ Ἴωνες ἀπὸ Ἀθηναίων
 γεγονότες. Στυρές δὲ τὰς αὐτὰς παρείχοντο νέας τὰς περ 15 ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ, Κύνθιοι δὲ μίαν καὶ πεντηκόντερον, ἐόντες συναμφότεροι οὗτοι Δρύοπες. καὶ Σερίφιοι δὲ καὶ Σίφνιοι καὶ Μήλιοι ἐστρατεύοντο· οὗτοι γὰρ οὐκ ἔδωσαν μούνοι 47 νησιωτέων τῷ βαρβάρῳ γῆν τε καὶ ὕδωρ. οὗτοι μὲν ἅπαντες ἐντὸς οἰκημένοι Θεσπρωτῶν καὶ Ἀχέροντος ποταμοῦ ἐστρατεύοντο· Θεσπρωτοὶ γὰρ εἰσὶ ὁμοιρέοντες Ἀμπρακιώτῃσι καὶ

13 ἀπ' B, Holder, van H.

τὰς περ: τὰς καὶ B, Holder κύνθιοι BC, Marc.

16 δὲ Stein<sup>3</sup>: τε (πρὸς δὲ τούτοις καὶ Σερίφιοι?

Stein<sup>2</sup>) || σίφνιοι τε B

οἱ ὁμοιρέοντες Bz

14 γεγονότες secl. Kallenberg || νῆας B ||

15 Κύνθιοι Wesseling: κύνθιοι ABz:

16 δὲ Stein<sup>3</sup>: τε (πρὸς δὲ τούτοις καὶ Σερίφιοι?

Stein<sup>2</sup>) || σίφνιοι τε B

47. 1 πάντες B 3 γὰρ εἰσι Stein<sup>1</sup> ||

14. Στυρές. Styra, in Euboea, sends the same ships as to Artemision, two in number. The Styrians are 'Dryopians'; cp. c. 43 supra.

15. Κύνθιοι. Kythnos, a small island due south of Keos, had been unrepresented at Artemision; its modest contingent, one trireme and one 'pentekonter,' is hardly equivalent to its later, and apparently fixed, tribute to Athens of 3 talents, an amount doubled by the τάξις of 425 B.C.

16. συναμφότεροι clears οὗτοι.

Σερίφιοι. Seriphos, due south of Kythnos, appears for the first time, and with but one pentekonter; c. 48 infra. (It paid Athens afterwards 2-1 talents tribute—the figure for 425 B.C. unfortunately irrecoverable.) Athens counts as its metropolis, ib.

Σίφνιοι. Siphnos, SE. of Seriphos, was a well-to-do island (cp. 3. 57 f.), and afterwards paid 3 talents' tribute to Athens, a sum trebled by the τάξις of 425 B.C. Yet it likewise contributes but one pentekonter to the fleet, c. 48 infra. The population is indistinguishable from that of Seriphos, ib.

17. Μήλιοι. Melos, SW. of Siphnos, a larger island, and still better known to fame, but not properly belonging to the Kyklades (cp. c. 48 infra), furnished two pentekonters, c. 48 infra. In 425 B.C. the Athenians assessed Melos at 15 talents (vid. τάξις φόρου, Hicks's Manual,<sup>3</sup> No. 64); but this was probably a mere excuse for the conquest and destruction of the island, which was accomplished in 416 B.C., Thucyd. 5. 84-116 (unless, indeed, it was meant to recoup the Athenians for the failure of the previous expedition in the year before the τάξις, Thuc. 3. 91). The days of greatest wealth for Melos were in that primitive period when its beds of obsidian supplied one of the most valuable staples of the stone age (cp. Annual of Br. School at Athens, Nos. iii., iv., v.); but the fame of the island in modern times is more intimately associated with the marble now standing in the Louvre and known as the 'Venus of Milo.'

οὗτοι: there is again, and for the third time in the list, some ambiguity in the extension of this term, but it may be restricted to Μήλιοι.

47. 2. ἐντός, 'east of' this side: a natural phrase to Hdt. and his eastern sources, but not one that he would have used in this connexion while resident in Italy, or even after familiarity with the further west. Pro tanto the phrase makes for the early composition of these Books; cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

3. Θεσπρωτῶν καὶ Ἀχέροντος ποταμοῦ: the same conjunction in 5. 92 ἐς Θεσπρωτοὺς ἐπ' Ἀχέροντα ποταμὸν, the seat of a νεκρομαντήιον. Thesprotia is given above, 7. 176, as the original home of the Thessalians, and still more precisely in 2. 56 as in the neighbourhood of the oracle of Dodona. The position of Acheron and Thesprotis is still more clearly marked by Thucydides, 1. 46. 3 f. ἐπειδὴ δὲ προσέμειξαν τῇ κατὰ Κέρκυραν ἡπείρῳ ἀπὸ Λευκάδος πλεόντες, ὁρμίζονται ἐς Χειμέριον τῆς Θεσπρωτίδος γῆς. ἔστι δὲ λιμὴν, καὶ πόλις ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ κεῖται ἀπὸ θαλάσσης ἐν τῇ Ἑλλαδίτῃ τῆς Θεσπρωτίδος Ἐφόρη. ἐξίησι δὲ παρ' αὐτὴν Ἀχερουσία λιμὴν ἐς θάλασσαν· διὰ δὲ τῆς Θεσπρωτίδος Ἀχέρον ποταμὸς ῥέων ἐσβάλλει ἐς

Λευκαδίοισι, οἱ ἐξ ἐσχατέων χωρέων ἐστρατεύοντο. τῶν δὲ ἐκτὸς τούτων οἰκημένων Κροτωνιῆται μόνου ἦσαν οἱ ἐβοήθησαν 5 τῇ Ἑλλάδι κινδυνεύουσα μὴ νηί, τῆς ἡρχε ἀνὴρ τρίς πυθιονίκης Φάυλλος. Κροτωνιῆται δὲ γένος εἰσὶ Ἀχαιοί. οἱ μὲν 48

4 οἱ om. B || δ' α 5 οἱ ἐβώθησαν B, van H.: οἱ ἐβόθησαν V: οἱ βοηθήσαντες 2 6 νηὶ μὴ BPz, Holder, van H. || πυθιόνικος B (πυθόνικος R ap. Stein<sup>(1)</sup>) 7 φάυλος S Valla: Φαῦλος Eustath. Dion. 308 48. 1 μὲν νυν B: μὲν cum νυν superscr. A: μὲν B

αὐτὴν, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ τὴν ἐπωνυμίαν ἔχει. μετὰ δὲ καὶ Θάμις ποταμός, ὁρίζων τὴν Θεσπρωτίδα καὶ Κεστρίνην, ὧν ἐντὸς ἡ ἀκρὰ ἀνέχει τὸ Χειμέριον (where, by the way, ἐντὸς=μεταξύ). Cp. Thuc. 1. 30. 3, also 50. 3 ἐστὶ δὲ τὰ Σύβοτα τῆς Θεσπρωτίδος λιμὴν ἐρήμος.

Hdt.'s description of Thesprotis as bordering on Leukas and Ambrakia is not very precise, and leaves the relative positions of the two great Korinthian colonies in doubt. Here again Thucydides supplies fuller and more accurate topography, both directly and incidentally, e.g. the relation of Leukas to Kephallenia and its position in Akarnania, 2. 30. 2, and narrative passim; the site of Ambrakia, on the 'Ambrakian gulf,' 1. 29. 3; and the chorography presented in the account of the campaign round Argos Amphilocheium, 2. 68-114, passim.

Hdt.'s references here do not suggest autopsy, or any personal acquaintance with the region. If he ever landed in those parts (as e.g. for a visit to Dodona) it was after this passage had been written, and the passage has been left unrevised: fresh evidence of the relatively early date of the composition of this part of the work.

Acheron must have been notorious as the principal stream of Thesprotis, though by no means so considerable a stream as the Arachthos, on which Ambrakia was situate. What its relation, if any, to the subterranean stream of Homer, Od. 10. 513, is an obscure problem (but there was necromancy in the neighbourhood, see above).

5. Κροτωνιῆται: this passage on Kroton looks as though it might be an insertion (cp. Introduction, § 9): the one trireme from Italy does not affect the total, which is in any case out of gear. The addition of any one, after naming those ἐξ ἐσχατέων χωρέων, is rather clumsy. The absence of any reference in Bk. 7 to an invitation to Kroton further isolates this note. The Krotoniate name does not figure on the τρικάρηρος ὄφης. On the other hand, the notice of Phayllos τρίς πυθιονίκης makes it more likely that the service of the Krotoniate trireme at Salamis was definitely commemorated in the east, or the mother-land; and the passage presently quoted from Pausanias makes this conclusion binding. The μόνοι here excludes not merely all other Italiotes and Sikeliotes, but the Korkyraians to boot; cp. 7. 168.

7. Φάυλλος: Phayllos of Kroton was celebrated throughout Hellas for his three victories at Pytho, two in the Pentathlon, one in the foot-race alone. The inference that all three Pythian victories were won previously to his service at Salamis is not binding: it is enough that they were all ancient history to Herodotus. Φαῦλος (sic) δὲ Κροτωνιάτῃ—'Ολυμπίᾳ μὲν οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτῷ νίκη, τὰς δὲ Πυθοὶ πεντάθλου δύο ἀνέλετο καὶ σταδίου τὴν τρίτην· ἐνανμάχησε δὲ καὶ ἐναντία τοῦ Μήδου ναῦν τε παρασκευασάμενος οἰκέλαν, καὶ Κροτωνιατῶν ὅποσοι ἐπεδήμουν τῇ Ἑλλάδι ἀνεβίβασε—τούτου ἐστὶν ἀνδριάς ἐν Δελφοῖς Pausan. 10. 9. 2. The inscription on this statue is ultimately at least the source of this notice in Hdt. A Phayllos is mentioned by Aristophanes, Acharn. 215, Wasps 1206, as a proverbially good runner: the Scholiast calls him an 'Ολυμπιονίκης—which, if correct, would forbid identification with the man here in question, for not only does Pausanias expressly guard against it, but Phayllos of Kroton was more distinguished as a 'pentathlete,' and most distinguished for his service at Salamis. The name, a diminutive of Φάων, is not uncommon: the most celebrated bearer was undoubtedly the brother of Onomarchos, the Phokian, who plundered Delphi, Pausan. 10. 2. 6 etc. The passage in Pausanias quoted

νυν ἄλλοι τριήρας παρεχόμενοι ἐστρατεύοντο, Μήλιοι δὲ καὶ Σίφινοι καὶ Σερίφιοι πεντηκόντεροι. Μήλιοι μὲν γένος ἔοντες

2 παρέχοντες Β ('perperam' van H.)

3 ἔοντες Β: γεγονότες α

above suggests to Blakesley that Phayllos and his comrades were exiles, and that his participation in the battle of Salamis was a purely private affair. Had the Krotoniate by any chance come to try his fortunes at the 75th Olympiad?

Κροτωνιῆται δὲ γένος εἰσὶ Ἀχαιοί. To Hdt. the prae-Dorian population of the Peloponnesos was mainly or largely 'Achaian' (cp. 5. 72), a theory no doubt in part based upon the Homeric poems. The Achaians of historic Achaia had apparently concentrated in what was previously an Ionian province on the north coast, and expelled the Ionians; cp. 1. 145. From that Peloponnesian Achaia, Achaians had apparently subsequently migrated to southern Italy, and made of it a great or greater Hellas. To the Greeks of the fifth century the Achaians were undoubtedly the most genuine 'Hellenes' at least of earlier or prae-Dorian days, and the prae-Dorian culture, the culture of the Homeric poems, of the heroic age, was in their eyes an Achaian culture. The Achaian name is found actually attached to the soil of historic Hellas in two places, south Thessaly and north Peloponnese, and Achaians are with certainty to be found in Krete, in south Italy, and even as far as Kypros. How that could be, if the Achaians were not Greeks at all, but 'a small Celtic tribe' (Ridgeway, Early Age of Greece, i. 1901) merged and lost in the Hellenic mass, is an enigma. Prof. Bury, who in his History (1900) appears somewhat to minimize the importance of the Achaians, and even of the Hellenes, in Hellenic culture, nevertheless proved (to my mind) the virtual identity of Hellenes and Achaians originally, and explained thereby the strange origin of the designation of 'Great Greece' for the south of Italy, which could only have been so called in distinction to the lesser Hellas from which the Achaian colonists had come—a mere district of Peloponnese, or it may be of Thessaly; cp. J.H.S. xv. (1895) 235 ff.

48. 2. τριήρας . . . πεντηκόντεροι. The 'pentekonter' was a war-galley, no doubt open throughout, with 50 oars (25 each side), and probably not less than 100 feet long (120 feet; cp. Torr, Ancient Ships, p. 21). Its construction in Greece dated to the beginning of the seventh century if Thuc. 1. 13 is to be trusted (see C. Torr, op. cit. p. 4); the Phaiakians, however, in the Odyssey (8. 34 ff.) had such a vessel. It was in pentekonters, according to Hdt. 1. 163, that the Phokaians made their long voyages in the west, and that the Theraians crossed to Libya to found Kyrene in 630 B.C.; and in pentekonters, according to Thuc. 1. 13. 6, the Phokaians defeated the Carthaginians off Massalia about 600 B.C. Even the Athenian and Aiginetan navies at the beginning of the fifth century were mainly composed of pentekonters, according to Thuc. 1. 14. 3, and he even declares that most of the vessels in which the Athenians fought at Salamis were not fully decked, ib., a statement which ill accords with the large number of Epibatai carried. He does not, however, expressly deny that they were triremes.

Triremes were the rule in 480 B.C., according to Hdt. in this passage. He elsewhere reckons 200 men as the crew, or complement of rowers; cp. 7. 184 supra. (The actual number of oars used on the three banks (?) of an Attic trireme was 170 to 174, cp. Torr, op. cit. p. 10 f., and there might be thirty in reserve, or supplement; for the precise allocation of the oars cp. op. cit.) The trireme was something less than 150 feet long, and less than 20 feet broad (cp. Torr, p. 22)—measurements which may not be quite precise for 480 B.C. Cp. also M. A. Cartault, La trière Athénienne, 1881; J. Kopecky, Die attischen Trieren, 1890.

3. Μήλιοι . . . γένος ἔοντες ἀπὸ Λακεδαιμόνος. Hdt. says the Melians were from Lakeldaimon; he does not expressly say that they were Dorian. Thuc. 5. 84, 2. 89, 106, fully recognizes them as Λακεδαιμονίων ἀποικοί, and seems to give 1116 B.C. as an approximate date for the colonization in c. 112 (416+700). Judging by the parallel case of Thera (Hdt. 4. 148), the genuinely 'Dorian' element in the emigration will have been very small; yet, like Thera, Melos used a 'Dorian' alphabet and dialect (cp.

ἀπὸ Λακεδαιμόνος δύο παρείχοντο, Σίφνιοι δὲ καὶ Σερίφιοι Ἴωνες εἶοντες ἀπ' Ἀθηνέων μίαν ἑκάτεροι. ἀριθμὸς δὲ ἐγένετο 5 ὁ πᾶς τῶν νεῶν, πάρεξ τῶν πεντηκοντέρων, τριηκόσiai καὶ ἐβδομήκοντα καὶ ὀκτώ.

Ὡς δὲ ἐς τὴν Σαλαμίνα συνήλθον οἱ στρατηγοὶ ἀπὸ 49

5 Ἀθηνέων Stein<sup>2</sup>: ἀθηναίων 6 νηῶν B || ὀκτώ καὶ ἐβδομήκοντα (πεντήκοντα V) καὶ τριηκόσiai B, Holder, van H. 49. 1 στρατηγοὶ <οἱ> van H.

Roberts, Greek Epigraphy, §§ 19-23), a fact which no doubt would favour the 'Lakedaimonian' legend.

6. πάρεξ τῶν πεντηκοντέρων, of which there were all told seven: two from Keos, two from Melos, and one each from Kythnos, Seriphos, and Siphnos.

τριηκόσiai καὶ ἐβδομήκοντα καὶ ὀκτώ. This total is repeated (virtually) and raised to 380 by the addition of the Tenian vessel which joined at Salamis, and the Lemnian vessel which had joined at Artemision, c. 82 infra; the total here is therefore certain. Yet it exceeds the items, which amount only to 366, by 12. There is therefore something wrong with the items. Valckenaer would have read 42 for the Aiginetans, c. 46 supra; this agrees with the statement of Pausanias that next to the Athenians the Aiginetans supplied most ships. The repetition of the τριηκόσiai need not bar this emendation; if the figure was once corrupted, it would be corrected in the other case in the light of the corruption. Moreover, this bolder emendation is preferable to the insertion of 12 for the ἄλλαι νέες, first because the list is not a list of all the ships in commission, but only of those which fought at Salamis; secondly, because 42 is rather a low figure for the absolute sum of the Aiginetan navy, all told; while if 42 were at Salamis, and 18 in service at home, we get a total of 60 ships in commission, which is a more probable figure for Aigina at this time. If the Aiginetan 30 were to be maintained for Salamis we should have to tinker one or more of the other items. K. O. Møller, Aeginetica, p. 122, suggested reading Σικυωνίοι δὲ πεντεκαίδεκα παρείχοντο πλείους, i.e. 12+15, raising the Sikyonian contingent from 12 (Artemision) to 27, which is less ingenious than Gutschmid's compromise to raise Troizen from 5 to 7, and the Aiginetans from 30 to 40.

VOL I PT. II

Hdt. evidently finds it necessary to account for the smallness of the Aiginetan contingent by the remark that it was by no means all the ships they had in commission; but Rawlinson, in supposing that they had 40 on guard off their own island, while maintaining 30 at Salamis, seems to go too far; the majority of the Aiginetan navy, like that of every other Greek state, was at Salamis. The variant 353 is quite worthless; cp. App. Crit.

With Hdt.'s total of 378 (or 380) for the Greek navy at Salamis is to be compared Aischylos' 300 (Pers. 339), Thucydides' 400 (I. 74. 1), Demosthenes' 300 (de cor. 238). If Demosthenes did not find this figure in his copy of Thucydides (Stahl; "ex aliquot deterioribus," Hude) the two historians virtually agree as against the poet and the orator. Ktesias (ed. Gilmore, § 57), from the Persian point of view, makes it 700 (of which apparently only 110 are Athenian). Tzetzes' 271 (ad Lycoph. 1432) is surely only a confusion with the numbers given by Hdt. for Artemision.

The phrase repeated ἐν Σαλαμῖνι ἐνανμάχσαν suggests that the list is compiled not from documents drawn up for working purposes beforehand, but from memorial lists and commemorative offerings—an inference further supported by the mention of Demokritos and Phayllos.

49. 1. ἐς τὴν Σαλαμίνα: perhaps the town; cp. c. 42 supra.

οἱ στρατηγοὶ ἀπὸ τ. εἰρ. πόλιων: including Kroton, 21 πόλεις have been named in the navy-list. It is hardly conceivable that Phayllos, or even Demokritos, was admitted on equal terms to the Sanhedrin with the general, or generals, from Athens and Korinth, to say nothing of Sparta. Probably the six Peloponnesian cities were each represented by a strategos, Eurybiades for Sparta, Adeimantos for Korinth; the

G

τῶν εἰρημενέων πολλῶν, ἐβουλεύοντο, προθέντος Εὐρυβιάδεω γνῶμην ἀποφαίνεσθαι τὸν βουλόμενον, ὅκου δοκοῖ ἐπιτηδεότατον εἶναι ναυμαχίην ποιεῖσθαι τῶν αὐτοὶ χωρέων ἐγκρατέες 5 εἰσί· ἡ γὰρ Ἀττικὴ ἀπέιτο ἤδη, τῶν δὲ λοιπέων πέρι προετίθεε. αἱ γνῶμαι δὲ τῶν λεγόντων αἱ πλείσται συνεξ-

2 εἰρημενέων Stein: εἰρημένων 3 ἐπιτηδεότατον CPds || ποιήσεσθαι R (Stein) SV (Gaisf.) || χώρων B: χωρίων z 5 ἀφείτο B:
ἀφείται Pz || λοιπῶν B || πέρι om. B

others are anonymous. The Athenians, Aiginetans, and Megarians may have each been represented by one and only one voice. Ambrakia and Leukas probably were represented by Korinth; the position of Chalkis, Eretria, and the rest is obscure. The Council may not have comprised more than 9-12 persons. In the sequel the only dramatis personae are Eurybiades, Adeimantos, Themistokles; the rest are mutes—unless we add Mnesiphilos and Aristides. Themistokles should perhaps be regarded as protagonist; but, council or no council, it is evident that Eurybiades, in virtue of the Spartan Hegemonia and his own Navarchia, could do as he pleased: if he puts the question to the vote, it is merely for his own guidance; the result is not obligatory. The first council at Salamis may be taken to begin here; but the passages which follow are not sharply separated, but are in the nature of dissolving scenes.

3. ὅκου δοκοῖ κτλ.: the question laid before the council of war is limited to the selection of a battle-ground; 'the previous question,' whether to fight a sea-battle at all or not, is treated as closed and determined. It is, however, assumed that the fleet must rest upon a friendly shore, and have a harbour to retire on. τῶν is relative, but χωρέων is genitive, not by inverse attraction, but in regular construction with ὅκου, though it seems to come in rather epexegetically.

5. ἡ γὰρ Ἀττικὴ ἀπέιτο ἤδη: this statement, which may be conceived as Hdt.'s own, or as proceeding from Eurybiades upon the occasion, was not strictly true, so long at least as the Akropolis was still held by Athenians. The obfuscation of the defence of the Akropolis in the story which presently follows has perhaps reacted prejudicially upon the account of the deliberations at Salamis. The pluperfect force of ἀπέιτο is emphasized by ἤδη. The phrase shows anyway that Salamis was no part of Attica.

τῶν δὲ λοιπέων: was there any other conceivable alternative but Salamis or the Isthmos?

6. αἱ γνῶμαι δὲ τῶν λεγόντων: the opinions of the speakers—not the votes of those present—and, moreover, but a majority of them. There was a minority argument, but it is not given here by Hdt. He reserves it to be produced on a later occasion. Evidently Themistokles (backed by the Megarians and Aiginetans) must already at this stage have used those arguments in favour of remaining and doing battle at Salamis, which are put into his mouth by Hdt. at a later stage—always supposing that the question of remaining and fighting at Salamis was still, or ever, an open one.

συνεξέπιπτον, 'were falling out together': sc. ἀλλήλοις, i.e. were tending to agree, "de sententiis in unum convenientibus," Baehr, who perhaps rightly in this place derives the metaphor from casting of lots. Yet the sense might equally well (especially in view of the tense) be, 'were tending to fall (come, work) out to the same conclusion.' As the strategoi who spoke did not all speak together the tendency and result was cumulative and not instantaneous. συνεξέπιπτε is, however, used in 5. 22 of an occurrence which was single and instantaneous (though it has there nothing to say either to 'lots' or 'opinions'). In c. 123 infra the word might simply mean 'agreed.' An exact parallel to the present passage is found in 1. 206.

The construction of πλώσαντας is κατὰ σύνεσιν, as though οἱ πλείστοι τῶν λεγόντων had preceded.

ἐπιπτον πρὸς τὸν Ἴσθμὸν πλώσαντας ναυμαχέειν πρὸ τῆς Πελοποννήσου, ἐπιλέγοντες τὸν λόγον τόνδε, ὥς, εἰ νικηθῶσι τῇ ναυμαχίᾳ, ἐν Σαλαμῖνι μὲν ἔοντες πολιορκήσονται ἐν νήσῳ, ἵνα σφί τιμωρή οὐδεμία ἐπιφανήσεται, πρὸς δὲ τῷ Ἴσθμῳ<sup>10</sup> ἐς τοὺς ἑωυτῶν ἐξοίσονται. ταῦτα τῶν ἀπὸ Πελοποννήσου<sup>50</sup> στρατηγῶν ἐπιλεγομένων, ἐληλύθεε ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος ἀγγέλλων ἦκειν τὸν βάρβαρον ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν καὶ πᾶσαν αὐτὴν πυρπολέεσθαι. ὁ γὰρ διὰ Βοιωτῶν τραπόμενος στρατὸς ἅμα

7 πλώσαντες z 8 τόνδε: τοῦτον B || εἰ: ἦν BPz, Baehr, Holder, van H. 9 μενέοντες B || [ἐν νήσῳ]? van H. 10 οὐδεμία P: οὐδεμία Sz: οὐδὲ μὴ || φανήσεται B 50. 2 ἐληλύθεε Werfer: ἐλήλυθε

7. πρὸ seems to have a double significance, both local and causal. Cp. Index.

8. ἐπιλέγοντες τὸν λόγον τόνδε, 'adding this argument, or consideration . . .' But the speech can hardly have been an ἐπίλογος to the γνώμαι, containing, as it does, the pith and marrow of the arguments for adjourning to the Isthmos: a defeat at Salamis would mean a πολιορκία ἐν νήσῳ—and a siege meant inevitable starvation and surrender. Themistokles no doubt would have met such an argument at once with his three reasons: c. 60 infra.

εἰ νικηθῶσι . . . πολιορκήσονται is doubly remarkable to the grammarian. (a) εἰ without ἄν with the subjunctive Stein defends by ref. to 2. 13 εἰ (μὴ) . . . ἀναβῆ: 4. 172 ὥς . . . μυχθῇ: 1. 132 ὥς ἐθέλω: c. 22 supra ἐπεὶ ἀνερχοῦ, and other temporal clauses (vide Stein's note to 4. 172). We have εἰ with the subj. in questions, as in εἰ στρατεύηται 1. 53, εἰ ἀνέλυσται 2. 52, etc., not exact parallels to this case. If the reading here is maintained (vide App. Crit.) the condition may be understood as emphasizing the probability of defeat; it is merely a question of time. (b) πολιορκήσονται is passive in sense; cp. c. 70 infra.

11. ἐς τοὺς ἑωυτῶν ἐξοίσονται, 'they will have their own folks to fall back on': the verb perhaps suggesting further their wrecked and shattered condition; cp. ἐξοισομένων c. 76 infra, ἐξερχομένων c. 96 infra.

50. 1. τῶν ἀπὸ Π. στ. ἐπιλεγομένων: the verb means 'pondering, considering'; cp. 7. 49, 149, 236, etc. (Contr. the verb in the active just above.) The local designation of the doubters is important.

2. ἐληλύθεε: whether pluperfect or not (cp. App. Crit.) his arrival anticipates the decision of the deliberating generals in council. This anonymous messenger reports only what was to be fully expected, unless indeed the defence of the Akropolis was more seriously intended than appears from the subsequent narrative. But with this message, vague in its form, the narrative breaks off, only to be resumed in c. 56 infra, where the Greeks have learnt further of the capture and destruction of the Akropolis: a different matter to this first message.

3. πᾶσαν cannot be taken here to cover the destruction of the Akropolis, a disaster which would have demanded more precision in the messenger's report.

πυρπολέεσθαι: igne vastare, a word used (in the active) by Aristophanes frequently, and by Xenophon (Cyr. 3. 3. 25), and found in Homer, Od. 10. 30, but not elsewhere in Hdt.

4. ὁ γὰρ κτλ. introduces what is virtually a digression, resuming the narrative of the advance of the Persian army, from c. 39, or even from c. 34 supra. There was perhaps a concentration of the Persians in W. Boiotia (Koroneia?)—to which point the centre would have advanced by Parapotamioi and Chaironeia, the left wing, from Abai, by Aspledon and Orchomenos, the right wing, by Lilaia—Delphi—Panopeus—Chaironeia, or possibly even by Trachis—Amphissa—Delphi—Lebadeia.

Thespiāi and Plataiāi may have been destroyed by an advance of the column from Delphi; or by an excursion from Thebes, where no doubt the Persian force was concentrated: the Plataians serving on the fleet had reached home

5 Ξέρξη, ἐμπρήσας Θεσπιέων τὴν πόλιν αὐτῶν ἐκλελοιπότεων ἐς Πελοπόννησον, καὶ τὴν Πλαταιέων ὡσαύτως, ἡκέ τε ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας καὶ πάντα ἐκεῖνα ἐδήλου. ἐνέπρησε δὲ Θεσπειάν τε 51 καὶ Πλάταιαν πυθόμενος Θηβαίων ὅτι οὐκ ἐμῆδιζον. ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς διαβάσιος τοῦ Ἑλλησπόντου, ἔνθεν πορεύεσθαι ἤρξαντο οἱ βάρβαροι, ἕνα αὐτοῦ διατρίψαντες μῆνα ἐν τῷ διέβαινον ἐς τὴν Εὐρώπην, ἐν τρισὶ ἐτέροισι μῆσι ἐγένοντο ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ,

5 αὐτῶν: ἐκ τῶν B: αὐτέων z 6 τὴν: τῶν B: αὐτὴν τῶν?
7 ἐδῆον B: ἐδῶν z || δὲ et τε om. B || θέσπιαν B: Θέσπεάν z 51. 3 μῆνα om. B (Holder): μῆνα διατρίψαντες S (Gaisf.) 4 μῆνεσι B
(‘iniuria probatum Schaefero et Gaisfordio’ van H.)

in time to take part in the flitting to Peloponnesos; cp. c. 44 supra.

Hdt. evidently thinks that the whole land-forces of Xerxes entered Attica by one and the same road; cp. c. 113 infra. This supposition is absurd. From Thebes into Attica three routes would have been available. I. Right, or west, by Eleutherai—Eleusis (detaching a force against Plataiai?): probably the best and easiest route, then as now. II. Central, by Panakton—Phyle—Acharnai: the most direct, and also the most difficult. III. Left, or east, by Tanagra and Dekeleia (cp. 9. 15 infra), a considerable circuit, but a good and much frequented road. Probably the Persians used all three, both going and coming; doubtless also a considerable force was left behind in Boiotia, and garrisons all along the king's route to the rear. The singulars Θεσπεία, Πλάταια are unique in Hdt.

51. 1. ἀπό: temporal; cp. cc. 54, 55 infra.

2. τῆς διαβάσιος τοῦ Ἑλλησπόντου: cp. 7. 54–56 supra. The Hellespont is here, curiously enough, treated as the starting-point of the march (ἐνθεν πορεύεσθαι ἤρξαντο οἱ βάρβαροι). In Bk. 7 the passage of the Hellespont is a mere episode on the march from Sardes in 480 B.C., and the start is made from Sardes with great pomp and circumstance (7. 37–40). Again, in Bk. 7. 56 the passage of the Hellespont occupies seven days and seven nights, just a week of our reckoning: here, a month is spent in passing the Hellespont (ἕνα αὐτοῦ διατρίψαντες μῆνα ἐν τῷ διέβαινον ἐς τὴν Εὐρώπην). It might be possible to ‘harmonize’ the two statements by supposing that the month covers all the time spent on the Hellespont; but such a harmony is not convincing. The month might as well cover all the period from the start at Sardis: and in any case the discrepancy remains, and suggests a difference of source. The passages in Bk. 7 are probably from Asiatic sources. The passage before us here is hardly less obviously from the European side, and presumably from Attic authority, as the Archontate suggests. It is important to recognize the insouciance with which Hdt. writes down in different contexts different data from different sources, without troubling himself to rationalize them; cp. Introduction, § 10. This acceptance of the local source for all it may be worth is of the essence of Hdt.'s method, or unmethod; it is half the secret of his charm, and the chief cause of his value; the unity of his work is a literary, a poetic illusion, not a scientific miracle.

4. ἐν τρισὶ ἐτέροισι μῆσι. The meaning is not so self-evident as might be wished. How are the ‘months’ computed? By the calendar? Or purely by the interval between start and arrival? Are we to understand that just ninety days, or rather less, separated Sestos and Athens on the Persian march? Or are the months three months of the Attic calendar, Skirophorion, Hekatombaion, Metageitnion, for example? In either case the three months seems an underestimate. The battle of Salamis was fought about the 20th of Boedromion (cp. c. 65 infra), and surely within a month of the arrival of the Persians in Athens. The fighting at Artemision-Thermopylai approximately synchronized with the Olympiad (7. 206 supra, but cp. c. 26 supra), i.e. could not at the earliest have fallen before the Attic new year, which suits the date for

Καλλιάδεω ἄρχοντος Ἀθηναίοισι. καὶ αἰρέουσι ἔρημον τὸ 5
 ἄστυ, καὶ τινὰς ὀλίγους εὐρίσκουσι τῶν Ἀθηναίων ἐν τῷ ἱρῷ ἐόντας, ταμίᾳς τε τοῦ ἱεροῦ καὶ πένητας ἀνθρώπους, οἱ φραζά-

5 ἔρημον CPz, van H.

7 ἱεροῦ A, Holder: cf. 55. 8 infra

Salamis and the Archontate. But to suppose that the battle of Salamis took place only ninety days or so after the passage of the Hellespont ascribes extraordinary activity to the Persian advance. Moreover, the start from Sardes will probably have taken place at latest in Elaphebolion (say March), and the passage of the Hellespont in Thargelion (say May). Taking the months here as Attic months, and reckoning exclusively, it might be correct to say that Xerxes reached Athens three months after leaving the Hellespont, i.e. in the fifth month, reckoning inclusively.

There is an exactly parallel case in Xenoph. Hell. 1. 4. 21, where Alkibiades is said to have quitted Athens τρίτῳ μηνὶ μετὰ τὸν κατὰ πλοῦν (407 B.C.). He had landed on Thargelion 25 (ib. § 12); he left after Boëdromion 20 (§ 20). This would be at least four months after, reckoning simply from arrival to departure, or in the fifth month, reckoning by Attic months, nominatim, or after a clear three months' interval, reckoned exclusively. The word ἐτέρουσι here might favour this last method. (But does τρίτῳ μηνὶ in Xenophon perhaps = Βοηδρομιῶνι?) See further on the chronology Appendix IV. § 2.

5. Καλλιάδεω ἄρχοντος Ἀθηναίοισι, i.e. in the course of the year 480-479 B.C. = Ol. 75. 1. Cp. Clinton, F. H. ad an. But as there were twelve months in the year (and sometimes thirteen) this chronological indication, though highly acceptable on many grounds, leaves a good deal to be wished: if but the day of Xerxes' coming had happened to engrave itself upon the records! Probably it was a day towards the end of Metageitnion (say August) or beginning of Boëdromion (September).

τὸ ἄστυ, here, at least, must be admitted as contradistinguished from ἡ ἀκρόπολις, which they did not find deserted, or take without a struggle. Even in Attica they had picked up some 500 captives, if the story in 9. 99 infra be true as it stands, and the men there reported be not the remnant of the Akropolis garrison. The Asty was not apparently at this time sufficiently walled, or fortified, to enable it to stand a siege, or we may well doubt whether the Athenians would have evacuated Attica. It was, however, a πόλις τροχοειδής—unless, indeed, that description apply to the Akropolis, 7. 140.

6. καὶ τινὰς ὀλίγους εὐρίσκουσι . . ἐόντας: they discover a fact, perhaps to their astonishment, viz. that some few men of the citizens of Athens are in the Sacred Place—these words introduce an eminently apologetic and fictitious account of the defence and siege of the Akropolis, which was probably a far more serious and formidable undertaking than the story, devised in the light of events, expressly suggests. The men in the Akropolis were perhaps neither so few, so poor, so abject, so superstitious, nor so deplorable as the story assumes and asserts.

ἐν τῷ ἱρῷ: what temple is meant? Was this an old Erechtheion (cp. c. 55 infra), or was it the old 'Athenaeum' (so to speak) which had been enlarged by Peisistratos? Did Hdt. know anything of there being more than one temple on the Akropolis of Peisistratos? Or was there, in fact, more than one? Cp. Furtwaengler, Masterpieces (E.T.) Appendix, pp. 415 ff.; E. A. Gardner, Ancient Athens, c. iii. pp. 78 ff. Baehr would take τὸ ἱρὸν here in a wider sense: de toto loco diis ac potissimum Minervae consecrato in arce. But its recurrence just below, and in c. 53, is against him.

7. ταμίᾳς τε . . καὶ πένητας ἀνθρώπους: prima facie, the same persons are meant, but the ταμίαι τοῦ ἱεροῦ, or more correctly ταμίαι τῶν ἱερῶν χρημάτων τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς, for it surely must be these officials that are here intended (cp. G. Gilbert, Handbuch i.<sup>2</sup> 269), would of necessity have been assessed under the highest τίμημα, cp. Ἀθ. πολ. 7. 3, 8. 1. Their existence is demonstrable epigraphically before the middle of sixth cent., C.I.A. iv. 3. 373. They were not 'poor,' except in so far as the war had ruined them. ἀνθρώπους too is contemptuous: φραζάμενοι is a strict middle,

μενοι τὴν ἀκρόπολιν θύρῃσί τε καὶ ξύλοισι ἡμύνοντο τοὺς ἐπιόντας, ἅμα μὲν ὑπ' ἀσθενείης βίου οὐκ ἐκχωρήσαντες ἐς
 10 Σαλαμίνα, πρὸς δὲ αὐτοὶ δοκέοντες ἐξευρηκέναι τὸ μαντήιον τὸ
 ἢ Πυθίῃ σφί ἐχρησε, τὸ ξύλινον τεῖχος ἀνάλωτον ἔσεσθαι·
 αὐτὸ δὲ τοῦτο εἶναι τὸ κρησφύγετον κατὰ τὸ μαντήιον καὶ 52 οὐ τὰς νέας. οἱ δὲ Πέρσαι ἰζόμενοι ἐπὶ τὸν καταντίον τῆς ἀκροπόλιος ὄχθον, τὸν Ἀθηναῖοι καλέουσι Ἀρήιον πάγον,

9 ἐκχωρήσαντας z 10 δὲ καὶ B, Holder, van H. || τῷ ἢ malebat Valckenaer ('inutiliter' Gaisf.) 12 αὐτὸ: καὶ αὐτὸ S<sub>2</sub>, van H., aliiq: αὐτὸ γάρ? Stein<sup>3</sup> || εἶναι: ἔσεσθαι καὶ B || κατὰ τὸ μαντήιον abesse malit van H. || καὶ οὐ . . καταντίον om. R 13 νῆας B<sub>2</sub> and ἡμύνοντο a strict imperfect: θύραι not so much 'doors' torn from their hinges, as 'raft-like structures' (cp. 2. 96, Thuc. 6. 101. 3).

9. ἅμα μὲν . . πρὸς δέ . . : two reasons are given, one reflecting upon their material, the other upon their mental resources: they were poverty-stricken, deficient in means of livelihood; yet they were proud, or conceited enough to have a private interpretation of the divine word (αὐτοί): cp. τοὺς πλέον τι ἐς τὸν χρησμὸν ἢ Θεμιστοκλῆς εἰδέναι νομίζοντας Pausan. 1. 18. 2. These two reasons are sibi repugnantia (but this was written before the Lords decided that the 'Wee Frees' were in the right!): anyway everything tends to depreciate the defenders of the Akropolis, and to betray the 'pragmatism' of the story!

10. ἐξευρηκέναι τὸ μαντήιον, '(to have discovered), to understand, (the true meaning of) the response.' The reference is, of course, to the story told 7. 140-144; cp. especially c. 142, where the justification of the ξύλινον τεῖχος is better explained than in this passage, which only suggests the extemporized θύραι and ξύλα of these poor wretches.

Replaced in its proper perspective, that is, after the fiasco at Thermopylai, the story of the Athenian theoria to Delphi, of the two responses, and the various interpretations thereof, gains immensely in point. The defence of the Akropolis may have been of the nature of a compromise, a concession, on the part of Themistokles; yet it looks by no means inconsistent with his plan of a sea-fight at Salamis, and it might have had the effect of bringing the Peloponnesian army from behind the Isthmos into Attica to the rescue of the Akropolis: in any case, it occupied the Persian forces, and to some extent checked and divided them, and made pro tanto for the safety of Salamis and the success of the fleet.

11. ἀνάλωτον ἔσεσθαι: these words might have ended an hexameter, but as a matter of fact the actual verse ran ἀπόρθητον τελέθειν. The variation suggests that Hdt. is here following an independent story, without reference to 7. 141 supra.

12. τὸ κρησφύγετον: cp. 5. 124.

52. 1. καταντίον: right opposite the west end, where the ascent and entrance lay.

2. τὸν Ἀθηναῖοι καλέουσι: a phrase not taken from an Attic source, nor intended for an Attic audience.

Ἀρήιον πάγον. πάγος is a rocky point, or summit, as in Homer, Od. 5. 405 etc. The epithet may rather be connected with ἀραι than with Ἄρης originally, as the cult of the Σεμναί was certainly far more ancient on the spot than the cult of the war-god (cp. Aischyl. Eumen. 417, etc.), and it was with them and their rights that the Areiopagite court had to do; though in the historical period the association with Ἄρης was fully recognized—perhaps in consequence of a pseud-etymology—and a temple to Ares actually stood on or near the rock: Pausan. 1. 8. 4, with notes, Frazer ii. 91, Hitzig-Bluemner i. 161 f. The topographical relation of the Areios rock, or Athenian Ebal, to the Akropolis fitted it to form a base for the Persian siege-operations, as once for the operations of the Amazones against the Theseian citadel; so Aischyl. Eumen. 685 ff.—

ἐπολιόρκειον τρόπον τοιόνδε· ὅκως στυππείον περὶ τοὺς οἰστοὺς περιθέντες ἄψειαν, ἐτόξευον ἐς τὸ φράγμα. . . ἐνθαῦτα Ἀθηναίων οἱ πολιορκούμενοι ὁμῶς ἡμύνοντο, καίπερ ἐς τὸ 5 ἔσχατον κακοῦ ἀπιγμένοι καὶ τοῦ φράγματος προδεδωκότος· οὐδὲ λόγους τῶν Πεισιστρατιδῶν προσφερόντων περὶ ὁμολογίης ἐνεδέκοντο, ἀμυνόμενοι δὲ ἄλλα τε ἀντεμνηχανῶντο καὶ δὴ καὶ προσιόντων τῶν βαρβάρων πρὸς τὰς πύλας ὀλοιτρόχους ἀπίεσαν, ὥστε Ξέρξην ἐπὶ χρόνον συχνὸν ἀπορίησι ἐνέχεσθαι 10 οὐ δυνάμενον σφέας ἐλεῖν. χρόνῳ δ' ἐκ τῶν ἀπόρων ἐφάνη 53 δὴ τις ἐξοδος τοῖσι βαρβάροις· ἔδεε γὰρ κατὰ τὸ θεοπρόπιον πᾶσαν τὴν Ἀττικὴν τὴν ἐν τῇ ἡπείρῳ γενέσθαι ὑπὸ Πέρσῃ.

52. 3 ἐπολιόρκειον B(?) || στυππείον SV (Gaisf.): στυπείον CPdz 4 lacunam suspicatur Stein<sup>2</sup> 6 τοῦ κακοῦ z || φρήγματος z || προσδεδωκότος B 8 ἀντεμνηχανῶντο α, Stein<sup>2</sup>: ἀνεμνηχανέοντο B: ἀντεμνηχανέοντο Stein<sup>1</sup> 9 ὀλοιτρόχους Pz: ὄλοι τροχοὺς RS 10 ξέρξεα BPz 53. 1 δὲ B 2 ἐξοδος Gomperz, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: ἐσοδος codd., Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder 3 τὴν γε ἐν? Kallenberg || ἐν: ἐπὶ B

πάγον δ' Ἀρείον τόνδ' Ἀμαζόνων ἔδραν, σκηνάς θ' ὅτ' ἤλθον Θησέως κατὰ φθόρον στρατηλατοῦσαι, καὶ πόλιν νεώπολιν τήνδ' ὑψίπυργον ἀντεπύργωσαν τότε, Ἀρεὶ δ' ἔθουν, ἐνθεν ἔστ' ἐπώνυμος πέτρα, πάγον τ' Ἀρείος κτλ.

A passage which could hardly have been recited to an Athenian audience in 458 B.C. (Philokles) without vividly recalling the experiences of twenty-two years before (480, Kalliades). That there was a regular πολιορκία Hdt. expressly admits.

3. ὅκως . . ἄψειαν, ἐτόξευον: the construction is observable, the sense is clear: they would tow round their arrows, ignited it, and discharged them into the fortified enclosure on the Akropolis. Nor does Hdt. mean that they discharged any other arrows than those so treated. ἐτόξευον is used absolutely (cp. c. 128 infra, where the construction ὅκως γράψειε κτλ. is more regular, or logical, than here).

6. ἀπιγμένοι καὶ . . προδεδωκότος is not quite regular: the καὶ is de trop; cp. 3. 127 ἀτε οἰδεύοντων . . καὶ ἔχων. The p. or pl. participles mark the intense and utter certainty of their position. Also the words ὁμῶς ἡμύνοντο would more naturally come after καίπερ κτλ.

7. τῶν Πεισιστρατιδῶν: they have not been heard of since 7. 6 supra, which does not look as if much of the intervening matter had come from the supposed 'Memoirs of Dikaïos'; cp. Introduction, § 10.

9. τὰς πύλας: at the west end, where afterwards stood (and stand to some extent) the great Propylaea of Mnesikles and Perikles; cp. E. A. Gardner, Ancient Athens, 224 ff.

ὀλοιτρόχους, ap. oracul. 5. 92: no doubt 'round stones' that could be rolled down on the assailants. Where did these few poor creatures get these missiles? Were there any columns or pillar-drums lying about? (These, however, might have needed to have the gates opened for emission, which would not have done.)

10. ἐπὶ χρόνον συχνόν might mean almost any length of time, and is lamentably vague, but still goes to show the relative success of the desperate resistance.

ἀπορίησι ἐνέχεσθαι: a common expression; 7. 128, 9. 37, 98 etc.

53. 2. ἐξοδος, metaphorical; also a certain emendation. Cp. App. Crit.

ἔδεε γάρ: that the word of the god might be fulfilled! Cp. 7. 141 for the θεοπρόπιον in question, 5. 33 for the formula.

3. πᾶσαν τὴν Ἀττικὴν τὴν ἐν τῇ ἡπείρῳ: a curious qualification, for where was there any Ἀττικὴ except ἐν τῇ ἡπείρῳ? Salamis was no part of Attica; cp. c. 49 supra. Cp. also ἔμπροσθε ὧν πρὸ τῆς ἀκροπόλιος, ὅπισθε δὲ τῶν πυλίων καὶ 5 τῆς ἀνόδου, τῇ δὲ οὔτε τις ἐφύλασσε οὔτ' ἂν ἤλπισε μὴ κοτέτις κατὰ ταῦτα ἀναβαλὴ ἀνθρώπων, ταύτῃ ἀνέβησαν τινὲς κατὰ τὸ ἶρόν τῆς Κέκροπος θυγατρὸς Ἀγλαύρου, καίτοι περ ἀποκρήμνου ἐόντος τοῦ χώρου. ὥς δὲ εἶδον αὐτοὺς ἀναβε-βηκότας οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι ἐπὶ τὴν ἀκρόπολιν, οἱ μὲν ἐρρίπτεον 10 ἐκ τῶν κατὰ τοῦ τείχεος κάτω καὶ διεφθείροντο, οἱ δὲ ἐς τὸ μέγαρον κατέφηνγον. τῶν δὲ Περσέων οἱ ἀναβεβηκότες πρῶτον μὲν ἐτράποντο πρὸς τὰς πύλας, ταύτας δὲ ἀνοίξαντες τοὺς

4 πρὸ om. B, Holder, van H. 6 ταῦτα: τοῦτο? Stein<sup>2</sup>, approb.
 van H. ('sed κατὰ ταῦτα, quod post τη abundat, glossema videtur' van H.)
 7 καίπερ B, Holder, van H. 8 δ' B 9 ἐπὶ: ἐς B || ἐπὶ τὴν ἀκρόπολιν del. Cobet, Holder, (van H.)

6. 139. Perhaps Ἀττική = Ἀθήναι = Ἀθηναῖοι.

γενέσθαι ὑπὸ Π.: cp. 7. 11.

4. ἔμπροσθε . . . πρὸ τῆς ἀκροπόλιος, ὅπισθε δὲ τῶν πυλίων καὶ τῆς ἀνόδου: the position is further defined just below by the grotto of Aglauros. The place described is no doubt the north side, towards the west end. It is curious that Hdt. does not specify the point of the compass, or rather the quarter of the heavens, but Leake asserts that the north side is spoken of as 'the front'—so it might appear to the modern Athenian, the town lying mainly on the north side; so also to a Greek, perhaps, of Hdt.'s time, when the larger quarter of the town was on that same side; so to invaders, like the Persians, who had approached, perhaps, from the north side, or were lingering to a great extent there. The gates of an ancient citadel were seldom in 'the front,' but rather to the side; the case of the Athenian Akropolis, especially as we know it, may be peculiar, if not unique; and even at the time of the Persian siege the πύλαι may have presented a very different appearance, and one less suggestive of a front, or frontage, than the glorious building of Mnesikles. πρὸ looks de trop, but is plainly local.

6. ἀνθρώπων: to ascend by that route one had needs be ἡ θηρίον ἢ θεός!

7. τὸ ἶρόν τῆς Κέκροπος θυγατρὸς Ἀγλαύρου: for Kekrops cp. c. 44 supra, 7. 141. Aglauros was one of three sisters (Herse, Pandrosos); Pausan. 1. 18. 2. Athena entrusted to their charge an ark, containing Erichthonios, with strict orders not to look therein; Pandrosos obeyed, the other two opened the ark, went mad, and cast themselves headlong down from the Akropolis, ἐνθα ἦν μάλιστα ἀπὸ τοῦ μανθάνειν. There, or thereunder, was no doubt the sanctuary: ὑπὲρ δὲ τῶν Διοσκούρων τὸ ἱερόν Ἀγλαύρου τέμενος ἐστίν, Pausan. l.c. It probably communicated with the Akropolis by a flight of steps; Wachsmuth ap. Pauly-Wissowa i. 1829. Cp. E. A. Gardner, Anc. Ath. 526. Hdt. seems to think that the Persians clambered up the inaccessible cliff; possibly they ascended the steps. There were Athenians with them who might show the way—the suspicion of a betrayal is hard to resist.

καίτοι περ is a strong expression; καίπερ or καίπερ τοι would be less surprising. Hdt. evidently supposes this party of Persians to have scaled the rock. Curiously enough the garrison attempts, according to Hdt., no resistance, some leaping down from the wall to certain destruction, others taking refuge in the Megaron, where they were presently butchered.

11. τῶν δὲ Περσέων κτλ.: there is some obscurity or confusion in this passage. What 'gates' did these Persians open? If the gates of the Akropolis, we should expect them to admit the main force before slaughtering the suppliants. Did the suppliants too forgo all resistance? A good deal seems left here to the imagination. Who was there to tell the story if none of the Athenians escaped? Is this story from Athenian sources?

ικέτας ἐφόνεον· ἐπεὶ δέ σφι πάντες κατέστρωντο, τὸ ἱρόν
συλῆσαντες ἐνέπρησαν πᾶσαν τὴν ἀκρόπολιν.

Σχῶν δὲ παντελῶς τὰς Ἀθήνας Ξέρξης ἀπέπεμψε ἐς 54
Σούσα ἄγγελον ἰππέα Ἀρταβάνω ἀγγελέοντα τὴν παρεούσαν σφι εὐπρηξίην. ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς πέμψιος τοῦ κήρυκος δευτέρῃ ἡμέρῃ συγκαλέσας Ἀθηναίων τοὺς φυγάδας, ἐωυτῷ δὲ ἐπομένους, ἐκέλευε τρόπῳ τῷ σφετέρῳ θῦσαι τὰ ἱρὰ ἀναβάντας 5
ἐς τὴν ἀκρόπολιν, εἴτε δὴ ὦν ὄψιν τινὰ ἰδὼν ἐνυπνίου ἐνετέλλετο ταῦτα, εἴτε καὶ ἐνθύμιόν οἱ ἐγένετο ἐμπρήσαντι τὸ ἱρόν. οἱ δὲ φυγάδες τῶν Ἀθηναίων ἐποίησαν τὰ ἐντεταλμένα.
τοῦ δὲ εἵνεκεν τούτων ἐπεμνήσθην, φράσω. ἔστι ἐν τῇ 55
ἀκροπόλει ταύτῃ Ἐρεχθέος τοῦ γηγενέος λεγομένου εἶναι νηός,

13 οἰκέτας B || ἐπεῖτε δέ van H. 14 πᾶσαν om. B 54. 1
ἔχων δὲ παντελῶς B 3 εὐπραξίην α: εὐταξίην C 7 ἐνετέλλετο
ταῦτα del. Krueger, van H. || ἐμπρήσαντα A<sup>1</sup> C: ἐμπρήσοντα B 55. 2
ἀκροπόλει B

13. κατέστρωντο: 9. 76 infra.
τὸ ἱρόν: there is nothing to distinguish this from τὸ μέγαρον just above, or to show that Hdt. would have recognized the existence of more than one temple of Athene; cp. cc. 41, 51 supra.
54. 1. σχῶν δὲ παντελῶς τὰς Ἀθήνας, 'having gained complete possession of Athens' (but not of the Athenians)—παντ., cp. 7. 37 supra, 4. 95 (π. εἶχε in a different sense and construction); with σχ. cp. εἶχε 5. 46, etc. The despatch to Artabanos is for a dramatic purpose, perhaps from a dramatic hint, cp. c. 99 infra. Artabanos has been left as major-domo 7. 52 supra. It is not to be supposed, in the light of c. 98 infra, that the one courier rode all the way from Athens to Susa. ἄγγελον ἰππέα . . . ἀγγελέοντα is a little redundant; which noun is adj. may be doubted. Just below the man is a κῆρυξ.

3. ἀπό: temporal. The audience with the 'Peisistratidai,' Dikaïos, and so forth, 'the Athenian exiles, those to wit (34) in his suite,' takes place on the next (δευτέρῃ) day. The behest to offer sacrifice according to Hellenic ritual on the Akropolis appears to be entirely in accordance with Achaimenid policy and practice, though Hdt. seems to think it demands special explanation. The wonder rather was that Xerxes deputed the duty: probably he 'assisted' at it, and the sacrifice is made on the king's behalf. The alternatives εἴτε δὴ ὦν—εἴτε καὶ . . . are not mutually exclusive.

7. ἐνθύμιον, 'matter of conscience,' scruple, misgiving; cp. 2. 175; Thuc. 7. 50. 4 (of the lunar eclipse, Aug. 27, 413 B.C.).

τὸ ἱρόν, of Athene; cp. cc. 51, 53.

55. 1. ἔστι: presumably at the time of writing; the νηός referred to is apparently an Erechtheion, or contains the sacred memorials afterwards associated with the Erechtheion, Pausan. 1. 26. 5 ff. That temple was only built or restored, completely, long after the death of Hdt. This chapter is not free from ambiguity. Hdt. does not distinguish between the temple of Athene and 'the House of Erechtheus'; he speaks of the temple in a way as both existing and not existing—for it had just been burnt down—even on the day after the burning. It is quite possible that not merely the portent of the olive-shoot, but the whole circumstances of this story as first composed by Hdt., rested upon the authority of the Athenian Emigrés, at least ultimately, and that this passage may belong to the draft of these Books written before Hdt. himself had visited Athens. Cp. Introduction, § 9.

2. Ἐρεχθέος τοῦ γηγενέος λεγομένου εἶναι. The Erechtheus, who is the child of Earth, the nursling of Athene, taken into her own shrine (ἐφ' ἐν πτόνι νηῷ) and therein worshipped by his people (δῆμος), ἐν τῷ ἐλαίῃ τε καὶ θάλασσα ἐνι, τὰ λόγος παρὰ Ἀθηναίων Ποσειδewνά τε καὶ Ἀθηναίην ἐρίσαντας περὶ τῆς χώρας 5 μαρτύρια θέσθαι. ταύτην ὦν τὴν ἐλαίην ἅμα τῷ ἄλλῳ ἱρῷ κατέλαβε ἐμπρησθῆναι ὑπὸ τῶν βαρβάρων· δευτέρῃ δὲ ἡμέρῃ ἀπὸ τῆς ἐμπρησίας Ἀθηναίων οἱ θύειν ὑπὸ βασιλέως κελεύο-

3 παρὰ: παρ' z: ὑπὸ B
βασιλῆος z

7 Ἀθηναῖοι οἱ z, vulg. || βασιλέως O:

Iliad 2. 546 ff., is no doubt one and the same ultimately with Poseidon Erechtheus (cp. c. 41 supra), as his μαρτύρια, the θάλασσα, and the σχῆμα τριαίνης (Pausan. 1. 26. 6) of themselves would show. A (possibly late) ἱερὸς λόγος made him son of Athene and Hephaistos, Apollod. 3. 14. 6. In Od. 7. 81 Athene goes in under the roof of Erechtheus (perhaps the older view?). Anyway, the reference in Homer as in Hdt. here is prima facie to an Erechtheion, but whether the House of Erechtheus had been absorbed in the Old Temple of Athene, which was destroyed by the Persians and never rebuilt, or whether there was an Erechtheion north of that temple, and more or less on the site of the existing building, is a moot point. Cp. c. 51 supra.

3. ἐλαίῃ τε καὶ θάλασσα: the existing temple comprised three cellae, of which the eastern one, or Erechtheion proper, contained θαλάσσιον ἐν φρέατι and also a σχῆμα τριαίνης ἐν τῇ πέτρᾳ. ταῦτα δὲ λέγεται Ποσειδewν μαρτύρια ἐς τὴν ἀμφισβήτησιν τῆς χώρας φανῆναι, Pausan. 1. 26. 5. Hdt. would probably have mentioned the σχῆμα τριαίνης had he seen it. In the Erechtheion also were three altars, one to Poseidon—ἐφ' οὗ καὶ Ἐρεχθεὶ θύουσιν—one to the hero Boutes, and one to Hephaistos. The central shrine was dedicate to the Polias, and contained, among many interesting objects, the olive (Pausan. 1. 27. 2, but cp. l.c. Apollod. infra), apparently a growing tree. The third, or western shrine, was dedicate to Pandrosos (cp. c. 53 supra).

λόγος παρὰ Ἀθηναίων: the phrase suggests that the passage is written for other than an Athenian audience; nor does it involve the inference that Hdt. had visited Athens before making this report. Cp. Introduction, § 10.

4. Ποσειδewνά τε καὶ Ἀθηναίην: the myth of the ἐρις περὶ τῆς χώρας is given by Apollodoros 3. 14. 1, the event being dated to the days of Kekrops: ἐπὶ τούτου, φασίν, ἔδοξε τοῖς θεοῖς πόλεις καταλαβέσθαι, ἐν αἷς ἐμμελλον ἔχειν τιμὰς ἰδίας ἑκάστος. ἦκεν οὖν πρῶτος Ποσειδewν ἐπὶ τὴν Ἀττικὴν καὶ πλήξας τῇ τριαίνῃ κατὰ μέσσην τὴν ἀκρόπολιν ἀνέφηνε θάλασσαν, ἣν νῦν Ἐρεχθίδα καλοῦσι. μετὰ δὲ τοῦτον ἦκεν Ἀθηνᾶ καὶ ποιησαμένη τῆς καταλήψεως Κέκροπα μάρτυρα ἐφύτευσεν ἐλαίαν, ἣ νῦν ἐν τῷ Πανδρωσίῳ (sic) δεικνύται. γενομένης δὲ ἐριδος ἀμφὸς περὶ τῆς χώρας Ἀθηνᾶν καὶ Ποσειδewνα διαλύσας Ζεὺς κριτὰς ἔδωκεν, οὐχ ὥς εἶπὼν τινες Κέκροπα καὶ Κραναόν, οὐδὲ Ἐρυσιχθῶνα, θεοὺς δὲ τοὺς δώδεκα, καὶ τούτων δικαζόντων ἡ χώρα τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς ἐκρίθη, Κέκροπος μαρτυρήσαντος ὅτι πρῶτον τὴν ἐλαίαν ἐφύτευσεν. The evidence of Kekrops was on the showing of this myth untrue; the jury of the Twelve Gods was deceived. The most reasonable interpretation of the myth is the historical, which sees in it a transfigured reminiscence of a struggle between two cults, and the different worshippers of two deities, Athene-worshippers, Poseidon-worshippers, in Attica, in which case, further, the Poseidonians can be no other than Ionians, and the Ἀθηναῖοι may well be the natives. Cp. c. 44 supra; Roscher's Lexikon (1884), 683; Pauly-Wissowa ii. (1896) 1951; and especially L. R. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, i. (1896) 270. The association of the olive with Athene marks her at least in this connexion as an agricultural deity (Roscher l.c.); the significance of the connexion of Poseidon with the θάλασσα is self-evident.

5. μαρτύρια θέσθαι: the substantive is appositive, or predicative.

ἅμα τῷ ἄλλῳ ἱρῷ, as well as the temple, or 'together with the temple as well.' The force of ἄλλος in such a construction is noticeable; cp. 7. 206. 2, and c. 65 infra, ad f. (also 4. 191, 5. 32, 6. 129, etc.).

6. δευτέρῃ δὲ ἡμ. ἀπὸ τῆς ἐμπρησίας: cp. c. 54 supra, from whence it follows that the ἐμπρησις τῆς πόλεως and the πέμψις τοῦ κήρυκος took place on the same day.

μενοι ὡς ἀνέβησαν ἐς τὸ ἱρόν, ὥρων βλαστὸν ἐκ τοῦ στελέχεος
 ὅσον τε πηχυαῖον ἀναδεδραμηκότα. οὗτοι μὲν νυν ταῦτα ἔφρασαν <τῷ βασιλεί>,<sup>10</sup>

Οἱ δὲ ἐν Σαλαμῖνι Ἕλληνες, ὥς σφί ἐξηγγέλθη ὡς ἔσχε<sup>56</sup>
 περὶ τὴν Ἀθηναίων ἀκρόπολιν, ἐς τοσοῦτον θόρυβον ἀπίκοντο ὥς ἔνιοι τῶν στρατηγῶν οὐδὲ κυρωθῆναι ἔμενον τὸ προκείμενον πρῆγμα, ἀλλ' ἔς τε τὰς νέας ἐσέπιπτον καὶ ἰστία ἀείροντο

8 ἱρόν: ἰ/ρὸν A ('Herodotum ubique scripsisse ἱερός et ἱρόν probable est propter vetustiores titulos Ionicos' van H.) 9 μὲν ὦν B 10 <τῷ βασιλεί> Stein<sup>3</sup> 56. 1 ἐξαγγέλθη B, vulg. 2 τὰ περὶ B,
 Stein<sup>1 2</sup>, Holder, van H. || Ἀθηναίων Bekker, Holder, alii 3 ὥς: ὥστε
 B, Holder, van H. 4 νῆας Bz || <τὰ> ἰστία Jacobitz

8. τὸ ἱρόν, as above, cc. 41, 51, 54.
 βλαστὸν . . ἀναδεδραμηκότα: obviously a portent, a miracle, under the circumstances (ὅσον τε does not so much qualify as emphasize the cubit's length), explained by Dionys. Halic. 14. 4 as signifying ὅτι ταχέως ἐαυτὴν ἡ πόλις ἀναλαβοῦσα βλαστοῦς ἀντὶ τῶν παλαιῶν ἐξοίσει νέων. Pausanias 1. 27, 2 makes the shoot two cubits length, on the same day as the burning. Blakesley sees references to the story in Soph. O.K. 695 ff.; Eurip. Ion 1433.

56. 1. οἱ δὲ ἐν Σαλαμῖνι Ἕλληνες shifts the scene back to Salamis, as in c. 50 supra; but what of the time! The message there is not prima facie identical with the message here; and an appreciable interval of time might be held to occur between the news of the Persians' arrival in Athens and the news of the destruction of the Akropolis (cp. cc. 52, 53). But was it the news of the destruction of the Akropolis, or only the news of the blockade of the Akropolis, which reached the Greek camp? Hdt. does not here say clearly which. Would the destruction of the Akropolis have required to be reported? The conflagration would have been fully visible from Salamis. Whether reported or witnessed, the capture of the Akropolis might form a ground for reopening the question whether the Greek fleet should remain at Salamis or not. Perhaps the error in Hdt. lies in his having recorded a debate above, before the news of the Persian arrival, or the evidence of the Persian capture of the Akropolis, was conveyed to Salamis. As long as the Akropolis stood siege, there might be a hope that the Peloponnesian army would advance to its relief; and so long at least the Greek fleet would of course remain at Salamis. Once the Akropolis had been captured, or surrendered, a new situation did arise. The anecdote of Mnesiphilos is transparently apocryphal; but the notion that a debate on the next move arose after the capture of the Akropolis is not in itself so improbable.

ὥς: the word occurs four times in as many lines, but may be rendered differently: 'when—how—that—as.' But cp. App. Crit.

3. ἔνιοι τῶν στρατηγῶν: these members of the council of war (c. 49 supra) are to be supposed to have treated the news about the Athenian Akropolis as leaving only one alternative, or at least as rendering the retreat from Salamis inevitable. But it had not yet been decided, when 'they tumbled into their ships' (ἐσέπιπτον imp.), what the scene of the navmachy was to be. They may have intended to wait to hear this. The θόρυβος was not exactly a panic, it was a hubbub (they would be all speaking at the same time now); but no one as yet actually takes to flight, though ἀποθευσόμενοι seems to expect it (cp. App. Crit.). It is not very probable that any actual members of the Synedrion conducted themselves in this fashion: subordinate officers and crews may have made preparations on the safe side.

τὸ προκείμενον πρῆγμα seems to refer back to the subject of discussion in c. 49, δὲ δοκεῖ ἐπιτηδεύειν εἶναι κτλ.

4. ἰστία ἀείροντο: the voice is middle and the tense imperfect: even so, if they were in such a desperate hurry to be off, they would surely first get the oars out.

5 ὡς ἀποθυσόμενοι· τοῖσί τε ὑπολειπομένοισι αὐτῶν ἐκυρώθη
 πρὸ τοῦ Ἴσθμου ναυμαχέειν. νύξ τε ἐγένετο καὶ οἱ διαλυθέντες 57 ἐκ τοῦ συνεδρίου ἐσέβαινον ἐς τὰς νέας. ἐνθαῦτα δὲ Θεμισ-στοκλέα ἀπικόμενον ἐπὶ τὴν νέα εἶρετο Μνησίφιλος ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος ὃ τι σφί εἴη βεβουλευμένον. πυθόμενος δὲ πρὸς αὐτοῦ ὡς εἴη δεδογμένον ἀνάγειν τὰς νέας πρὸς τὸν Ἴσθμον 5 καὶ πρὸ τῆς Πελοποννήσου ναυμαχέειν, εἶπε "οὐτ' ἄρα, ἦν ἀπαείρωσι [τὰς νέας] ἀπὸ Σαλαμῖνος, περὶ οὐδεμῆς ἔτι πατρίδος

5 ἀποπλευσόμενοι Naber || αὐτέων Bz 6 ἐγένετο B 7 νῆας Bz
 57. 1 Θεμιστοκλήα z 2 νῆα Bz 4 νῆας Bz 5 οὐτ' α: οὔτοι B: οὐ τοι Bekker, Holder, van H.: οὐκ Plutarch. Mor. 869 6
 ἀπαίρωσι codd. z || τὰς νέας del. Stein<sup>2</sup>: τὰς νῆας Bz || περὶ οὐδὲ μῆς AB:
 οὐδὲ περὶ μῆς Plutarch. Lc.

5. τοῖσί τε ὑπολειπομένοισι αὐτῶν ἐκυρώθη: how this decision was arrived at Hdt. does not clearly indicate; it might seem by a sheer majority of votes, but below Eurybiades is treated as really supreme in the matter. When the others left the council (was it held in a building or sub Iove?) the Isthmos was still ex hypothesi only one of several potential stations, cp. c. 49 supra. The decision is still to fight a battle: only the venue is shifted. This more dignified section did not 'tumble into their ships,' but ἐσέβαινον. On πρὸ cp. c. 49. The parataxis νύξ τε εἴη, καὶ is observable: αἱ is doubtless demonstrative. τὸ συνέδριον marks the meeting decidedly as a regular and formal one; cp. 7. 145 supra, cc. 75, 79 infra; it was probably held under cover, in a house on shore, perhaps occupied by Eurybiades.

57. 1. Θεμιστοκλέα: not mentioned in the account of the first council (συνέδριον) on shore, chez Eurybiades; cc. 49 ff. But, of course, if any such meeting had been held, if any such decision arrived at, Themistokles had been there and against the making of it.

2. Μνησίφιλος ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος: a shrewder man than Themistokles, and one well and significantly named! Plutarch, Them. 2, makes him a demote of Themistokles, and in Mor. 795 an older man, quite naturally! But more critically in the de Hdti. malig. 37 f., Mor. 869, he points out the improbability of this tale, according to which Themistokles was dishonestly indebted to Mnesiphilos for the arguments in favour of giving battle at Salamis. Going beyond Plutarch, one might suspect that Mnesiphilos was a pure fiction, the only evidence of his existence being this apocryphal anecdote. Of course Hdt. did not invent him: the story is part of the Themistoklean legend, and perhaps among the older elements therein, forming perhaps the reply by some detractor to the foundation by Themistokles of the ναὸν Ἀριστοβούλης Ἀρτεμίδος ἐν Μελίτῃ.

3. βεβουλευμένον . . . δεδογμένον, 'the matter of their deliberations,' 'the thing decided on': both words might seem to imply a joint decision; yet cp. 7. 12 supra δεδογμένων αἱ.

5. εἶπε: Hdt. and his sources do not hesitate to reproduce in oratio recta the ipsissima verba of Mnesiphilos to Themistokles: a device which adds nothing to the probability of the story in the eyes of a critical reader. Who else was present at the interview? Did Themistokles report it? Or Mnesiphilos?

οὐτ' ἄρα is answered by ἀπολέεται τε infra. For ἀρα cp. Index.

6. ἀπαείρωσι: cp. c. 60 infra.

περὶ οὐδεμῆς ἔτι πατρίδος ναυμαχῆσις: 'thou wilt no longer have a country to fight for at sea' might mean one of three things: (a) that Attica will be lost for ever—the context and explanation seem to rule this out as inadequate; (b) that there will no longer be any country belonging to any of the Greek peoples taken severally, to fight for—this would be far-fetched; (c) that Hellas will no longer exist to fight for. On the whole this appears to be the meaning—albeit it anticipates the second clause, and the use of parpis for the whole of Hellas is remarkable. The double negative οὐτε

ναυμαχήσεις· κατὰ γὰρ πόλις ἕκαστοι τρέφονται, καὶ οὔτε σφέας Εὐρυβιάδης κατέχειν δυνήσεται οὔτε τις ἀνθρώπων ἄλλος ὥστε μὴ οὐ διασκεδασθῆναι τὴν στρατιήν· ἀπολέται τε ἡ Ἑλλὰς ἀβουλήσι. ἀλλ' εἴ τις ἐστὶ μηχανή, ἴθι καὶ 10 πειρῶ διαχεῖαι τὰ βεβουλευμένα, ἣν κως δύνῃ ἀναγνώσαι Εὐρυβιάδην μεταβουλευσασθαι ὥστε αὐτοῦ μένειν." κάρτα 58 τε τῷ Θεμιστοκλείῃ ἤρесе ἡ ὑποθήκη, καὶ οὐδὲν πρὸς ταῦτα ἀμειψάμενος ἦε ἐπὶ τὴν νέαν τὴν Εὐρυβιάδω. ἀπικόμενος δὲ ἔφη θέλειν οἱ κοινόν τι πρῆγμα συμμίζειν· ὃ δ' αὐτὸν ἐς τὴν νέαν ἐκέλευε ἐσβάντα λέγειν, εἴ τι θέλει. ἐνθαῦτα ὁ 5 Θεμιστοκλῆς παριζόμενός οἱ καταλέγει ἐκείνὰ τε πάντα τὰ ἤκουσε Μνησιφίλου, ἑωυτοῦ ποιεύμενος, καὶ ἄλλα πολλὰ

7 πόλις Bp 9 οὐ μὴ α 10 καὶ del. van H. 12
 εὐρυβιάδης B || μεταβαλέσθαι, ὥστ' B || μένειν B, Stein<sup>1</sup> 58. 2 τε B:
 δὲ α; δὴ ε: 'fortasse τε δὴ' Kallenberg || τῷ om. B 3 νῆα Bz 4
 ἐθέλειν α, Holder, van H. || συμμίζειν Stein<sup>12</sup> || δὲ B 5 νῆα Bz || ἐμβάντα ἐκέλευε B || ἐσβάλοντα B || θέλοι B || ὁ om. B 6 παρεζό-
 μένός α || γέ οἱ B || κείνὰ Bz

... οὐδεμῆς is purely intensive. The reading in Plutarch, Mor. 869, οὐκ ἀρα ... οὐδὲ περὶ μῆς ἐτι πατρίδος ναυμαχήσεις· κατὰ γὰρ πόλις ἕκαστοι τρέφονται appears to mean, the country for which you are going to fight will no longer be one and united; or, you will be fighting for a country divided into as many sections as states. The expression is not Herodotean (Krueger).

9. ὥστε μὴ οὐ διασκεδασθῆναι τὴν στρατιήν: an instance of a genuinely idiomatic μὴ οὐ, which follows not merely the alternative negatives οὔτε ... οὔτε ... but also perhaps the subordinate negation contained in the word κατέχειν, to restrain, prevent, prohibit. Cp. c. 100 infra οὐ γὰρ ἐστὶ Ἑλλῆσι οὐδεμία ἐκδυσίς, μὴ οὐ δόντας λόγον κτλ., c. 119 ἐν μυρήσι γνώμῃσι μίαν οὐκ ἔχω ἀντίρρουν, μὴ οὐκ ἂν ποιῆσαι βασιλέα τοῖονδε.

11. διαχεῖαι, to upset, confound, undo. The verb is used in the literal sense 6. 119.

τὰ βεβουλευμένα = τὰ δεδογμένα.

12. μεταβουλευσασθαι: cp. 7. 12 supra μετὰ δὴ βουλεύει—there too of a change of decision, resolve, counsel, by a single individual; cp. 1. 3 supra.

58. 2. ὑποθήκη: the suggestion; 6. 52, 1. 156, 211.

οὐδὲν πρὸς ταῦτα ἀμειψάμενος: not even, for example, that he had pointed all that out already. The arguments were irrefutable, and obvious. The remark has a somewhat unfavourable suggestion about it, as of an incriminating silence! See below.

3. ἦε: afoot, or in a boat? It is not quite clear. As just below he asks Eurybiades ἐκ τῆς νεὸς ἐκβῆναι, Eurybiades was on board, and his ship presumably in the water. Moreover, the strategoi in c. 56 supra have not to launch their galleys. It seems more probable that the ships were all afoot. In c. 83 infra Themistokles addresses a σύλλογον τῶν ἐπιβατίων on land; but that would not show that the ships were not in the water.

4. κοινόν: of public concern; e re publica. συμμίζειν, in the sense 'to communicate,' is observable.

6. παριζόμενος: was Eurybiades abed? καταλέγει ἐκείνὰ τε ... καὶ προστιθεῖς looks a little irregular. But the sentence here is complete without προστιθεῖς, which is 'epexegetical.' So too τάξαντες in 9. 10 infra. 1. 8 is more remarkable.

ἐκείνὰ τε πάντα: there had not been so many points; practically but one.

7. ἑωυτοῦ ποιεύμενος enforces the unfavourable insinuation above conveyed in οὐδὲν ἀμειψάμενος, more explicitly.

ἄλλα πολλά: perhaps arguments—if so, what? Perhaps only entreaties, prayers, etc. (χρητῶν). In either case προστιθείς, ἐς δ' ἀνέγνωσέ <μιν> χρηρίζων ἔκ τε τῆς νεὸς 59 ἐκβῆναι συλλέξαι τε τοὺς στρατηγούς ἐς τὸ συνέδριον. ὥς δὲ ἄρα συνελέχθησαν, πρὶν ἢ τὸν Εὐρυβιάδην προθεῖναι τὸν λόγον τῶν εἵνεκα συνήγαγε τοὺς στρατηγούς, πολλὸς ἦν ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς ἐν τοῖσι λόγοισι οἷα κάρτα δεόμενος· λέγοντος 5 δὲ αὐτοῦ, ὁ Κορίνθιος στρατηγὸς [Ἀδείμαντος ὁ Ὠκύτου]

 εἶπε “ὦ Θεμιστόκλεες, ἐν τοῖσι ἀγῶσι οἱ προεξανιστάμενοι 60 πόμμενοι οὐ στεφανοῦνται.” τότε μὲν ἡπίως [πρὸς] τὸν
 Κορίνθιον ἀμείψατο, πρὸς δὲ τὸν Εὐρυβιάδην ἔλεγε ἐκείνων

8 μιν Stein<sup>(2)</sup> || νῆος Bz 9 ἐκβῆναι τὸν εὐρυβιάδεα Bz 59. 2
 ἄρα om. B || εὐρυβιάδεα Bz || προσθεῖναι α || τὸν del. Cobet, van H.
 3 πολλὸς codd., z 5 Κορινθίων Kallenberg: ‘si στρατηγὸς genuinum, requiro Κορινθίων’ van H.: emblema seclusi || ὁ om. B 6 δ om. B ||
 θεμιστόκλεις B 8 στεφανοῦνται B 60. 1 τότε: τοῦτο Naber ||
 πρὸς del. Krueger, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> 2 ἡμείψατο B: ἀμείβεται
 Krueger: aut πρὸς aut hoc suspectum hab. Stein<sup>2</sup> || εὐρυβιάδεα Rz

the phrase should not be held to cancel the insinuations to Themistokles' discredit, albeit somewhat weakening them. Once started on this line—by Mnesiphilos—he can find further pleas of himself, till finally, at the ensuing council, he makes a really powerful speech!

9. τὸ συνέδριον: evidently held on land, but not necessarily sub Iove frigido.

59. 2. συνελέχθησαν: this will be the second or the third meeting, according as cc. 49 and 56 are interpreted of one and the same meeting, or of two different meetings.

πρὶν ἢ . . . τοὺς στρατηγούς: if προθεῖναι τὸν λόγον means ‘to give account of,’ ‘to explain,’ the statement appears again to be designed to discredit Themistokles; in any case, the commander-in-chief must surely have offered some reason for the extraordinary summons of this meeting, which is apparently to be conceived as taking place at night.

3. πολλὸς ἦν . . . ἐν τοῖσι λόγοισι: i.e. π. ἦν λέγων, surely not simply ‘made a long speech,’ or even ‘said a great many things,’ but rather ‘was vehement’; cp. 7. 158 supra, 9. 91 infra. But what, by the way, could he have said, if Eurybiades had the subject of debate still in petto?

4. οἷα κάρτα δεόμενος: cp. c. 3 supra.

6. προεξανιστάμενοι: so in the aorist, 9. 62 infra. προ- with the force of ἀπολύμενος, ‘trying to excuse himself,’ sc. τὴν αἰτίαν, τὴν διαβολήν. He understood the value of the soft answer, which, however, failed on this occasion. Plutarch, Them. 11, substitutes Eurybiades for Adeimantos in this duel of wit, and adds a second mot by Themistokles to Eurybiades, who raises his baton to strike: πάταξον μὲν ἀκουσον δέ. In the Mor. 185 he restores the remark to the Korinthian.

‘too soon,’ ‘prematurely,’ ‘before they are bidden.’ Competitors are referred to, not merely spectators, as, indeed, the answer of Themistokles implies.

7. ῥαπίζονται: by the βαβδούχοι, who kept order in the ring. Our athletes would hardly appreciate this severity. For the word cp. 7. 35.

δέ γε, ‘yes, but . . .’

ἐγκαταλειπόμενοι, i.e. who get a bad start, not “longe in cursu post tergum relictī victique,” Wesseling, nor “qui cunctanter ad certamen prodeunt,” Sintenis. 2 Cor. 4. 9 διωκόμενοι ἀλλ’ οὐκ ἐγκαταλειπόμενοι does not help us.

60. 1. [πρὸς] τὸν Κορίνθιον ἀμείψατο: a doubtful construction, not justified by πρὸς ταῦτα ἀμειψάμενος, c. 58 supra; cp. App. Crit.

2. ἐκείνων μὲν . . . δ δέ: the subject expressed and resumed with δέ, cp. 7. 50, etc. ἐκείνων is of course neuter.

μὲν ἔτι οὐδὲν τῶν πρότερον λεχθέντων, ὥς ἐπεὰν ἀπαίρωσι ἀπὸ Σαλαμῖνος διαδρῆσονται· παρῶντων γὰρ τῶν συμμάχων οὐκ ἔφερε οἱ κόσμον οὐδένα κατηγορεῖν· ὁ δὲ ἄλλου λόγου 5 εἶχετο, λέγων τάδε. “ἐν σοὶ νῦν ἐστὶ σῶσαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα, ἣν ἐμοὶ πείθῃ ναυμαχίην αὐτοῦ μένων ποιέεσθαι, μηδὲ πειθόμενος τούτων τοῖσι λόγοισι ἀναζεύξης πρὸς τὸν Ἴσθμον τὰς νέας. ἀντίθες γὰρ ἑκάτερον ἀκούσας. πρὸς μὲν τῷ Ἴσθμῳ συμβάλλων ἐν πελάγει ἀναπεπταμένῳ ναυμαχίῃς, [ἐς] τὸ 10 ἥκιστα ἡμῖν σύμφορον ἐστὶ νέας ἔχουσι βαρυτέρας καὶ ἀριθμὸν ἐλάσσονας· τοῦτο δὲ ἀπολέεις Σαλαμῖνά τε καὶ Μέγαρά καὶ Αἴγινα, ἣν περ καὶ τὰ ἄλλα εὐτυχήσωμεν. ἅμα δὲ τῷ ναυτικῷ αὐτῶν ἔψεται καὶ ὁ πεζὸς στρατός, καὶ οὕτω σφέας αὐτὸς ἄξεις ἐπὶ τὴν Πελοπόννησον, κινδυνεύσεις τε ἀπάσῃ τῇ 15 Ἑλλάδι. ἦν δὲ τὰ ἐγὼ λέγω ποιήσης, τοσάδε ἐν αὐτοῖσι χρηστὰ εὐρήσεις· πρῶτα μὲν ἐν στεινῷ συμβάλλοντες νηυσὶ ὀλίγησι πρὸς πολλὰς, ἦν τὰ οἰκότα [ἐκ τοῦ πολέμου] ἐκβαίνῃ,

3 ἔτι: οὐκέτι B, Holder, van H. || ἀπαίρωσι codd., z 5 κατηγορεῖν Valckenaer: κατηγορεῖν van H. 7 μένων om. B 8 λόγοισι Krueger, Stein<sup>2</sup>: λέγουσι 9 νῆας Bz 10 συμβαλὼν RS || ἐς del. Krueger, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || τὸ Struve: ὁ 11 νῆας Bz: ‘an ἀνάγειν νέας? Stein<sup>1,2</sup> || βραδυτέρας coni. Stein, recep. van H.: βραχυτέρας Matthiae 12 ἐλάσσονα α 13 ἣν περ τὰλλα B || δὲ Stein<sup>2</sup>: γὰρ 14 στρατός om. z 15 αὐτοὺς B 16 ποιήεις α 17 συμβαλόντες B 18 οἰκότα α || ἐκ τοῦ πολέμου eccl. Stein<sup>2</sup>

3. ἀπαίρωσι, as in c. 57 supra. διαδρῆσονται is emphatic, and the δια- signifies ‘in various directions’; the word is perhaps more contemptuous than διασκεδασθῆναι, c. 57.

5. οὐκ ἔφερε οἱ κόσμον οὐδένα, ‘it by no means beseeemed him’; cp. κόσμον φέρον, c. 142 infra.

κατηγορεῖν: sc. τί τινας: cp. 7. 205 supra, 2. 113; cp. App. Crit.

ἄλλου λόγου εἶχετο: cp. 7. 5 τοιοῦτου λόγου εἶχετο, λέγων κτλ.

6. λέγων τάδε. The ipsissima verba of Themistokles in 480 B.C. as of Miltiades in 490 B.C., 6. 109. The one speech is modelled on the other as far as the circumstances admit, but this may be the prior one in Hdt.’s composition.

7. αὐτοῦ, ‘where you are . . .’

8. ἀναζεύξης: with τὸν στρατὸν 9. 41, 53, 6. 12; but the word is frequently intransitive, or elliptical, and generally used of the movements of land-forces; cp. App. Crit.; ‘break up and move to the Isthmos.’

9. ἀντίθες: Themistokles’ oratory, in

Hdt.’s conception, runs to antitheses, cp. c. 83 infra; and to figures, cp. cc. 109, 111 infra.

πρὸς μὲν: the correspondence or antithesis comes with ἦν δὲ τὰ ἐγὼ λέγω infra.

10. συμβάλλων: sc. τοῖς ἐναντίοις, or τῷ βαρβάρῳ, or sint.

π. ἀναπεπταμένῳ: in patenti pelago (Valla): ἀναπεπταμένους τόποις, Plato Phaedr. 111 c.

11. βαρυτέρας: were the Greek ships heavier than the Persian (Phoenician)? Plutarch Them. 14 says just the opposite. ‘Heavier’ might be taken to mean ‘less easy to manage’ (χείρον πλέουσας), and be referred to the crews and seamanship rather than to the actual material of the fleet. But cp. App. Crit.

12. τοῦτο δέ: the τοῦτο μὲν has not preceded. It may be ideally supplied before ἐν πελάγει ἀναπ. ναυμαχίῃς—where the proximity of πρὸς μὲν might account for its omission.

18. ἦν τὰ οἰκότα . . . ἐκβαίνῃ, πολλὸν κρατήσομεν. Themistokles, according πολλὸν κρατήσομεν· τὸ γὰρ ἐν στείνῳ ναυμαχέειν πρὸς 20 ἡμέων ἐστὶ, ἐν εὐρυχωρίῃ δὲ πρὸς ἐκείνων. αὐτὶς δὲ Σαλαμὶς περιγίνεται, ἐς τὴν ἡμῖν ὑπεκκείται τέκνα τε καὶ γυναῖκες.

 καὶ μὴν καὶ τότε ἐν αὐτοῖσι ἔνεστι, τοῦ καὶ περιέχεσθε μάλιστα· ὁμοίως αὐτοῦ τε μένων προναυμαχέεις Πελοποννήσου καὶ πρὸς τῷ Ἰσθμῷ, οὐδὲ σφέας, εἴ περ εὖ φρονέεις, ἄξεις ἐπὶ τὴν 25 Πελοπόννησον. ἦν δέ γε καὶ τὰ ἐγὼ ἐλπίζω γένηται καὶ νικήσωμεν τῇσι νηυσί, οὔτε ὑμῖν ἐς τὸν Ἰσθμὸν παρέσονται οἱ βάρβαροι οὔτε προβήσονται ἐκαστέρῳ τῆς Ἀττικῆς, ἀπίασί τε οὐδενὶ κόσμῳ, Μεγάροισί τε κερδανέομεν περιεοῦσι καὶ Αἰγίνῃ καὶ Σαλαμῖνι, ἐν τῇ ἡμῖν καὶ λόγιον ἐστὶ τῶν ἐχθρῶν κατ-30 ὑπερθε γενέσθαι. οἰκότα μὲν νυν βουλευομένοισι ἀνθρώποισι ὥς τὸ ἐπίπαν ἐθέλει <κατὰ νόον> γίνεσθαι· μὴ δὲ οἰκότα βουλευομένων οὐκ ἐθέλει οὐδὲ ὁ θεὸς προσχωρέειν πρὸς τὰς ἀνθρωπείας γνώμας."

20 αἰθις σαλαμῖς B 21 ὑπέκκειται α, van H.: νῦν ἐγκείται B
 22 μὴν: μὲν R, Stein<sup>2</sup> || περιέχεσθαι BB 23 τε: τῇδε post Krueger
 van H. || προναυμαχέεις ABC, Stein<sup>3</sup>: προναυμαχίσεις SV, Stein<sup>1,2</sup>, Holder, van H.: πρὸς ναυμαχίσεις R: προσναυμαχίσεις Marc. 25 γε καὶ om. B, καὶ tantum Marc., van H. 26 ἡμῖν Bz 27 ἐκαστέρῳ P: ἐκατέρῳ α: ἐκατέρῳ BC: ἐκαστέρῳ z 31 <κατὰ νόον> Stein<sup>3</sup>:
 <εὖ> Krueger, Cobet, van H. || μὴ οἰκότα δὲ z 32 βουλευομένων
 Stein<sup>3</sup>: βουλευομένοισι to Hdt., counts upon victory. Phormio

 ap. Thuc. 2. 90 seems to contradict the tactical principle here enunciated by Themistokles, but on the understanding that the smaller fleet is superior in manœuvring power, which the Greek fleet at Salamis (νέες βαρύτεραι) was not.

19. πρὸς ἡμέων, 'to our interest,' cp. c.
 22 supra; the context also illustrates the use of πρὸς with accus. (πρὸς πολλὰς supra),
 and with dative (πρὸς τῷ Ἰσθμῷ infra).

21. ἐς τὴν κτλ.: a pregnant construction. The singular verb is to be noticed.
 τέκνα τε καὶ γ.: cp. c. 44 supra.

22. καὶ μὴν: introducing a fresh argument. αὐτοῦ τε μένων . . . καὶ πρὸς τῷ Ἰσθμῷ are co-ordinate alternatives.

περιέχεσθε: most of the address is in 2nd pers. singular. Themistokles by the plural here avoids accusing Eurybiades of partiality. Cp. App. Crit.

23. προ- in προναυμαχίσεις, cp. cc. 56,
 57 supra. εἰ . . . φρονέεις: sc. εἰ αὐτοῦ μένεις, or αὐτοῦ μένων. The words merely resume the wise course.

27. τῆς Ἀττικῆς grammatically might be a partitive, or a comparative

gen.; the context, and the fact asserted
 c. 50 supra, favour the comparative.

28. οὐδενὶ κόσμῳ: nullo ordine, c.
 117, 9. 56, 65 infra, etc. ἀπίασι has plainly the future sense. περιεοῦσι, by its position, combines with Αἰγίνῃ and Σαλαμῖνι as well as with Μεγάροισι, 'we shall profit by the immunity of Megara, Aigina, Salamis.'

29. λόγιον ἐστὶ perhaps merely refers to his own interpretation of the lines
 ὧ θεῇ Σαλαμῖς κτλ., 7. 142 supra.
 Themistokles is made to conclude with an apophthegm of heavy calibre (= 'God helps those that help themselves,' or 'Put your trust in God and keep your powder dry').

31. A subject (χρηστά vel sim.) were wanted for ἐθέλει, but for the emendation: cp. App. Crit.

32. προσχωρέειν πρὸς: to go to meet,
 to accede to, to further, men's plans;
 the construction and meaning are remarkable, and not easy to parallel; 9.
 55 infra ad f. might serve best as commentary.

The speech here put into the mouth

Ταῦτα λέγοντος Θεμιστοκλέος αὖτις ὁ Κορίνθιος Ἀδεί- 61
μαντος ἐπεφέρετο, σιγᾶν τε κελεύων τῷ μὴ ἔστι πατρίς καὶ Εὐρυβιάδην οὐκ ἔων ἐπιψηφίζειν ἀπὸλι ἀνδρί· πόλιν γὰρ τὸν Θεμιστοκλέα παρεχόμενον οὕτω ἐκέλευε γνώμας συμβάλλεσθαι.

61. 1 θεμιστοκλέους BCz || αὖτις R || Ἀδείμαντος secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. 2 μὴ ἔστι Stein<sup>1</sup>: μὴ ἔστι Pz 3 εὐρυβιάδεα B || ἔαν B
|| ἀπόλιδι B, van H. 4 Θεμιστοκλήα z

of Themistokles is a brief and masterly résumé of the pros and cons of the case between Salamis and the Isthmos as the scene of the sea-fight, which (it is admitted and agreed) must be fought somewhere. The argument in the main is presented in a series of six antithetical considerations, which may be re-combined into three antithetical or double-edged assertions, followed by a peroration (iv.).

i. The narrow water of Salamis is in favour of the Greeks; the open sea off the Isthmos would tell in favour of the Persians.

ii. By moving to the Isthmos they will certainly lose Megara, Aigina, Salamis; by remaining where they are they will probably save them.

iii. They will defend the Peloponnesos as well, or even better, by remaining at Salamis; a defeat at the Isthmos will be final. The reasons for this last assertion are not quite fully given in the speech; only it is suggested that the Persian fleet and Persian army will be brought unduly near to the Peloponnesos, in which case a defeat would be very serious; Mnesiphilos above, and Themistokles himself, has taken the still more alarming view that if they once quit Salamis no battle will be fought at all.

iv. Finally, Themistokles adds that a divine promise of victory has been received, though they must not expect it to be fulfilled if they deliberately choose the less prudent alternative.

61. 1. αὖτις, 'again,' a second time; the first time being in c. 59 supra. Cp. αὖτις δέ c. 60 supra corresponding to πρῶτα μὲν just before.

2. πατρίς, 'a fatherland'; cp. c. 57 supra, where Mnesiphilos regards Themistokles as possessing actually, or potentially, a πατρίς so long as the Greek fleet is kept together at Salamis.

3. Εὐρυβιάδην οὐκ ἔων ἐπιψηφίζειν ἀπὸλι ἀνδρί, 'trying to prevent Eurybiades reopening the question (putting a question to the vote) for the benefit of (at the request of, to please) a landless

(city-less) man; let Themistokles produce a city to which he belongs before (said he) offering us his advice.'

There seems to be no sufficient reason for abandoning (with Stein) the normal meaning of ἐπιψηφίζειν so as to make it mean 'to allow a vote to'—an interpretation which leads him to take γνώμας συμβάλλεσθαι in the sense 'mit-zustimmen,' i.e. to vote with (us). In 5. 92 (γνώμας ἀμείνορας συμβαλέσθαι ἢ περ νῦν) the meaning is clearly 'to advise.' Against the normal interpretation Stein asks: Warum sollte der Antrag eines heimatlosen Mannes nicht Gegenstand einer Abstimmung sein dürfen? The point of the story as told by Hdt. appears to be that Adeimantos wishes to find some pretext on which to prevent the question being reopened. He objects to Themistokles, who is now a landless man, being allowed to propose a motion or an amendment, as subject for a vote in the council of war: he takes exception to a man, who no longer represents a state, having any opinion or proposal submitted to a vote.

There is, indeed, a radical flaw or inconsequence in the narrative of Hdt. in that, on the one hand, it implies that the question of remaining or going was to be decided by the votes of the majority, while, on the other hand, it no less clearly implies that the whole and sole decision rested with Eurybiades. But this inconsequence leaves the meaning of ἐπιψηφίζειν unaffected.

Stein quotes two late writers in support of his interpretation. Lucian Tim. 44 ἐπεψήφισε τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ. Diog. L. 7. 10 ἐκκλησίᾳ κυρία τῶν προέδρων ἐπεψήφισεν Ἰππῶν. I should take ἐκκλησίᾳ κυρία as a remoter dative, or even locative, and so too τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, rather than as objectively constructed with ἐπεψήφισεν, and the verb itself as absolute. Cp. Thuc. 6. 14. 1 ταῦτα . . . ἐπιψήφισε καὶ γνώμας προτίθει αὖτις Ἀθηναίους, where Nikias is pleading for 'the previous question.'

5 ταῦτα δὲ οἱ προέφερε, ὅτι ἡλώκεσάν τε καὶ κατείχοντο αἱ Ἀθηναίαι. τότε δὴ ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς ἐκείνων τε καὶ τοὺς Κορινθίους πολλά τε καὶ κακὰ ἔλεγε, ἑωυτοῖσί τε ἐδήλουν λόγῳ ὡς εἴη καὶ πόλεις καὶ γῇ μέζων ἢ περ ἐκείνοισι, ἔστ' ἂν διηκόσαιο νέες σφί ἔωσι πεπληρωμέναι· οὐδαμῶς γὰρ Ἑλλήνων αὐτοὺς 62 ἐπιόντας ἀποκρούσασθαι. σημαίνων δὲ ταῦτα τῷ λόγῳ διέβαινε ἐς Εὐρυβιάδην, λέγων μᾶλλον <ἤδη> ἐπεστραμμένα. “σὺ εἰ μενέεις αὐτοῦ καὶ μένων ἔσσαι ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός· εἰ δὲ μή, ἀνα-

5 προέφεροτο αC || αἱ om. BP, Holder 6 δὴ: δὲ B: δὲ δὴ Valekenae, van H. 7 καλὰ B 8 μέζω B 9 νῆες B || οὐδαμῶς B 10 ἀποκρούσασθαι BB: ἀποκρούεσθαι 62. 2 εὐρυβιάδα Bz || <ἤδη> Stein<sup>3</sup> 3 <μέν> μενέεις Werfer, Holder, van H.

5. ἡλώκεσάν τε καὶ κατείχοντο, 'had been taken and were in the hands of the enemy': the pl.p. and imp. tenses are noticeable.

6. τότε δὴ: a contrast to the former occasion, and the soft answer; τότε, c. 60 supra. Now Themistokles 'lets him have it.'

7. ὡς εἴη καὶ πόλεις καὶ γῇ . . ἔστ' ἂν διηκόσαιο νέες σφί ἔωσι π.: the sequence is hardly quite regular. The 200 includes the ships lent to Chalkis. On πεπληρωμέναι cp. c. 46 supra. The formula that 'so long as they have 200 ships fully manned, the Athenians have both City and Land, greater than Korinth and Korinthia,' is ruined by the explanation that 'no Hellenes whom they attack will be able to resist them.' Nothing further is heard of the threat in this sense; and it spoils the beautiful crescendo of Themistokles' arguments, being the most direct and brutal, if that indeed was what he meant. He probably meant something quite different: 'Stone walls do not a city make.' The scholiast on Aischyl. Pers. 347 cites Alkaios; cp. Bergk, P.L.G. iii.<sup>4</sup> 156, Fr. 23 ἀνδρες πόλιος πύργος ἀρείοιο. The passage in Aischylos runs:

AT. ἔτ' ἂρ' Ἀθηνῶν ἔστ' ἀπόρθητος πόλις;
AT. ἀνδρῶν γὰρ ὄντων ἔρκος ἐστὶν ἀσφαλές.

Sophokles formulates the idea still more explicitly, Oid. Tyr. 56 f. ὡς οὐδὲν ἐστὶν ὅτε πύργος ὅτε ναὺς ἔρμος ἀνδρῶν μὴ ξυνοικούντων ἔσω. The Athenians, far beyond most Greeks of the fifth cent. B.C., attained the conception of the ideal and spiritual character of the City, and its independence of the particular place and material conditions. Their invention of the kleruchy, in anticipation of the Roman colonia civium opt. iur., is an evidence of that. A great stage in their education was doubtless the evacuation of Attica in 480 B.C., and it bore fruit sixty-eight years later, when in 412 B.C. the Athenian naval στρατόπεδον at Samos preserved the continuity of the Athenian Constitution, and formulated the conception of a polity virtually independent of place: Thucyd. 8. 76. It is but natural that the Nephelokokkygia of Aristophanes and the Republic of Plato are products of Attic genius. Cp. 7. 234. 9 supra.

62. 1. σημαίνων δὲ ταῦτα, 'with these significant hints.' τῷ λόγῳ διέβαινε, together.

2. μᾶλλον ἐπεστραμμένα: not more earnestly, vehemently, than he had spoken to Adeimantos—it could hardly have been so—but than before to Eurybiades. ἐπεστραμμένος, p.p. from ἐπιστρέφειν, seems here to = adj. ἐπιστρεφής, where it is not the 'turn' but the 'attention,' the aim, which is emphasized; cp. ἐπιστρεφής 1. 30, and Plato Prot. 342 E ἐνέβαλε ῥῆμα . . συνεστραμμένον ὥσπερ δεινὸς ἀκοντιστής.

εἰ μενέεις . . καὶ ἔσσαι: the expression is hardly in strict grammar, and an anastrophe, or a lacuna, might be suspected; so Baehr approves of Valckenae's suggestion to supply mentally σώσεις τὴν Ἑλλάδα. But the excitement of the moment might account for some incoherence. Certainly καὶ μένων is tautologous, and de trop. One might try to force a special point in it: 'You, if you are going to remain—yea, in remaining (as you are now)—will be a good man and true.'

3. ἀνατρέψαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα: this might be described as μᾶλλον ἐπεστραμμένον

τρέψεις τὴν Ἑλλάδα· τὸ πᾶν γὰρ ἡμῖν τοῦ πολέμου φέρουσι αἱ νέες. ἀλλ' ἐμοὶ πείθεο. εἰ δὲ ταῦτα μὴ ποιήσης, ἡμεῖς 5 μὲν ὡς ἔχομεν ἀναλαβόντες τοὺς οἰκέτας κομμιέμεθα εἰς Σίριν

5 αἱ om. B || νῆες B || ποιήσεις Pz, Holder, van H.

6 σίριν CPz

compared with κινδυνεύσεις ἀπάσῃ τῇ Ἑλλάδι c. 60 supra.

4. τὸ πᾶν γὰρ ἡμῖν τοῦ πολέμου φ. αἱ νέες: cp. οὐδὲν πλέον ἐφέροντο 7. 211 infra, πλέον μέντοι ἔφερε οἱ ἡ γνώμη κατεργάσασθαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα c. 100 infra, and more especially ταῦτα μὲν νῦν ἐπὶ σμικρὸν τι ἐφέροντο τοῦ πολέμου 4. 130. 'The whole fate, or issue, of the war depends for us on the ships.' ἡμῖν need not be restricted to the Athenians.

5. ἀλλ' ἐμοὶ πείθεο: cp. II. 1. 259 ἀλλὰ πείθεσθ', 2. 139 ἀλλ' ἀγεθ' ὡς ἂν ἐγὼ εἶπω πειθώμεθα πάντες.

εἰ . . ποιήσης: cp. c. 49 supra.

6. ὡς ἔχομεν, 'just as we are,' without more ado.

τοὺς οἰκέτας: cp. c. 41 supra.

Σίριν τὴν ἐν Ἰταλίῃ: there was another 'Siris' in Paionia; cp. c. 115 infra; the Italiote Siris was on a navigable river of the same name, twenty-four stades distant from the (later) Herakleia (Strabo 264); it was in the neighbourhood of this river that Pyrrhus fought his first engagement with the Romans 280 B.C., Plutarch Pyrrh. 16.

The foundation legend is given by Strabo, l.c. Siris, originally a settlement of the Chonians (i.e. native Italians of that region, but cp. 9. 93 infra), was occupied by fugitive Trojans after the fall of Troy (hence the worship of the winking Athene in the city, Strabo l.c.). At a later time Ionians flying from the Lydian conqueror (temp. Gygis?) occupied the town. The Ionians were apparently from Kolophon, and under them the Ionian city, in the midst of Achaian neighbours, rose to great prosperity, and rivalled Sybaris and Kroton in wealth and luxury. (Athen. 523 καὶ οἱ τὴν Σίριν (sic) δὲ κατοικοῦντες, ἦν πρῶτοι κατέσχον οἱ ἀπὸ Τροίας ἐλθόντες, ὕστερον δὲ Κολοφώνιοι, ὡς φησι Τιμαίος καὶ Ἀριστοτέλης, εἰς τρυφὴν ἐξώκειλαν οὐχ ἥσσον Συβαριτῶν.) The fertility of its soil was proverbial: οὐ γὰρ τι καλὸς χῶρος οὐδ' ἐφίμερος οὐδ' ἐρατὸς οἶος ἀμφὶ Σίρινος ῥοῆς, Archilochos ap. Athen. l.c., Bergk II. 4 389, No. 21. Among the suitors of Agariste (c. 570 B.C.) figured Damasos, son of Amyrgis, τοῦ σοφοῦ λεγομένου, 6. 127 supra. It must have been after that epoch, and before the destruction of Sybaris by Kroton (see 5. 44), that the Achaian colonies, Metapontion, Sybaris, and Kroton, combined to destroy Siris (Trogus Pomp. ap. Justin. 20. 2. 3 ff.), and apparently accomplished their purpose, notwithstanding the alliance of the Sirites with Lokroi. Siris must have continued to be inhabited, as 'a member of the Achaian confederacy' (B. Head, Historia Numorum, p. 69), and stood in intimate commercial relation with the town of Pyxos, a town on the Tyrrhene sea, probably of Sybarite foundation, and afterwards, perhaps, involved with Siris in the ruin of that city 510 B.C.—a catastrophe not inconsistent with the dim record of a projected occupation of Sirite territory by Samian adventurers (cp. 7. 164 supra), which may have been an anticipation of the Athenian project: Σάμιοι, πλεῖσαντες εἰς Σύβαριν καὶ κατασχόντες τὴν Σιρίτιν χώραν, περικλων ἀναπτόντων καὶ ποιησάντων φόβον, ἐκπλαγέντες ἐφυγον, καὶ ἐμβάντες εἰς τὰς ναῦς ἀπέπλευσαν, Hegesander of Delphi ap. Athen. 656 = Fr. 44, Mueller iv. 421. The dream of an Ionian restoration at Siris was part of the heritage which Athens accepted in placing, or replacing, herself at the head of the Ionian race, after the fall of Miletos; but there shows no definite trace of an earlier connexion between Siris and Athens. The dream was not destined to be fulfilled. Thurioi was, indeed, founded in 443 B.C., but at a considerable distance from the Siris (330 stades, Strabo l.c.), nor was Thurioi a successful settlement from an Athenian point of view (cp. Busolt, Gr. G. III. i. 518-541). Somewhat later, however (in 431 B.C.), Tarentum succeeded where Athens had failed: Ταραντίνοι τοὺς τὴν Σίριν καλουμένην οἰκούντας μετοκίσαντες ἐκ τῆς πατρίδος καὶ ἰδίου προσθέντες οἰκήτορας, ἔκτισαν πόλιν τὴν ὀνομαζομένην Ἡράκλειαν. The new city was founded on healthier ground than the old, but Siris remained the port (χρόνῳ δὲ τῆς Ἡρακλείας ἐντεύθεν οἰκισθείσης ὑπὸ Ταραντίνων, ἐπίνειον αὐτῇ τῶν Ἡρακλειωτῶν ὑπῆρξε, Strabo l.c.);

- τὴν ἐν Ἰταλίῃ, ἣ περ ἡμετέρη τε ἐστὶ ἐκ παλαιοῦ ἔτι, καὶ τὰ λόγια λέγει ὑπ' ἡμέων αὐτὴν δέειν κτισθῆναι· ὑμεῖς δὲ συμμάχων τοιῶνδε μουνωθέντες μεμνήσεσθε τῶν ἐμῶν λόγων.”
- 63 ταῦτα δὲ Θεμιστοκλέος λέγοντος ἀνεδιδάσκετο Εὐρυβιάδης· δοκέειν δέ μοι, ἀρρωδήσας μάλιστα τοὺς Ἀθηναίους ἀνεδιδάσκετο, μὴ σφεας ἀπολίπωσι, ἣν πρὸς τὸν Ἰσθμὸν ἀγάγῃ τὰς νέας· ἀπολιπόντων γὰρ Ἀθηναίων οὐκέτι ἐγίνοντο ἀξιόμαχοι 5 οἱ λοιποί. ταύτην δὲ αἰρέεται τὴν γνώμην, αὐτοῦ μένοντας διαναυμαχέειν.

7 τέ ἐστι vulgo      8 δεῖ B: δέον Marc., z      9 τοιούτων Pz
 63. 1 θεμιστοκλέους d: Θεμιστοκλῆος z || Εὐρυβιάδης . . ἀνεδιδάσκετο
 om. R: ἀνεδιδάσκετο post. l. del. Cobet, van H.      3 ἀνάγῃ B: ἀνάγῃ Holder, van H.      4 νῆας Bz      5 δὴ S, Krueger: δὲ ὦν? Stein

though Pliny 3. 15. 3 seems to identify the two (Heraclia, aliquando Siris vocitata). Cp. F. Lenormant, La Grande Grèce (1881) i. 201 ff.

8. τὰ λόγια λέγει κτλ.: the formula is noticeable, as the λόγια in question were no doubt in writing. This passage may fairly be taken as evidence of the antiquity of the idea at Athens of an extension or colonization in the West. To see in the speech of Themistokles, more or less fictitious though it be, nothing but the reflexion of ideas and discussions current in Athens about the date of the foundation of Thurioi is to ignore the points above adduced as antecedents of that very undertaking itself. There is also other sufficient evidence to connect the name of Themistokles with the conception of an expansive policy in the West; cp. Thucyd. 1. 136. 1, Plutarch Themist. 32 (names of his daughters, Italia, Sybaris). Busolt's defence of the claim of Themistokles in this connexion against the adverse critique of Beloch, Hermes 29 (1894), 604, concedes perhaps too much in sacrificing the antiquity of these λόγια and seeing in them mere products of the Θουριομάντεις. Athens had long been nursing commercial relations with the West (as Busolt well shows), and, moreover, Themistokles and the Athenians would probably have claimed as their own λόγια which in the first instance might have been intended to promote relations between the Ionians and the West (cp. 1. 94, 163-167, 170, 3. 136-138, 4. 152, 5. (42-47), 106, 6. 2, 21, 23-24, 7. 158, 163, 8. 22). Themistokles, if any man, was likely to have taken into account the Ionian precedents in the West. Whether he used any such threat upon this occasion, as is here fathered on him by Hdt., is another question. It would not have been easy to carry out, and the threat of joining the Medes would have been still more efficacious (cp. 9. 11). But the anecdote implies that Eurybiades and the Peloponnesians were on the point of withdrawing from Salamis, and this implication is hardly acceptable; cp. Appendix VI. § 1.

63. 1. ἀνεδιδάσκετο Εὐρυβιάδης: the verb has full middle force: 'allowed himself better instruction'—'changed his mind (his instructions)', 'was converted'; cp. 4. 95 (ἀναδιδάσκειν, to change the ideas, beliefs, of others). Materially it is important to observe that everything depended on the mind of Eurybiades.

2. δοκέειν δέ μοι. This expression of personal opinion and judgement by Hdt. is noticeable, especially for the reason given, that without the Athenians the Greeks would have been unable to resist the Persian successfully; cp. the still more elaborate statement of the same verdict, 7. 139 supra. Perhaps that passage is of later composition than this straightforward matter-of-course judgement here, though its simple directness might be ascribed to the very fact that a more elaborate statement and discussion has preceded.

4. οὐκέτι ἐγίνοντο ἀξιόμαχοι: i.e. ἐγίνοντο οὐκέτι ἀξιόμαχοι, and ἐγίνοντο = ἐμελλον γίνεσθαι, or γενήσεσθαι.

5. αὐτοῦ μένοντας διαναυμαχέειν. This γνώμη involves two elements—(i.) αὐτοῦ μένειν, (ii.) διαναυμαχέειν. If the preceding narrative be correct there was

Οὕτω μὲν οἱ περὶ Σαλαμίνα ἔπεσι ἀκροβολισάμενοι, ἐπεῖτε 64
Εὐρυβιάδῃ ἔδοξε, αὐτοῦ παρεσκευάζοντο ὡς ναυμαχῆσόντες.
ἡμέρῃ τε ἐγένετο καὶ ἅμα τῷ ἡλίῳ ἀνιόντι σεισμὸς ἐγένετο ἐν τε τῇ γῇ καὶ τῇ θαλάσῃ. ἔδοξε δέ σφι εὐξασθαι τοῖσι θεοῖσι καὶ ἐπικαλέσασθαι τοὺς Αἰακίδας συμμάχους. ὥς δέ 5

64. 1 οὗτοι B

3 τε om. B || ἐγένετο z || ἐγένετο B

no question about (ii.); the only question was where the battle was to take place: in which case, the decision now is simply πτόυ μένειν, i.e. αὐτοῦ διαναυμαχεῖν. But Mnesiphilos above has been allowed to point out that the two were one—if the Peloponnesians left Salamis no battle would be fought anywhere.

64. 1. ἐπεσι ἀκροβολισάμενοι: nach solchem Wortgefecht, Stein, who cps. λόγων ὄθισμός c. 78 infra. But there is a difference. ὄθισμός would be for the heavy-armed, ἀκροβολισμός would be for the light-armed orators. Moreover, an ἔπος is a 'winged-word.' The reference seems to be rather back to the don-mots in cc. 59, 61 than to the weighty arguments of Themistokles in cc. 60, 61 f.

ἐπεῖτε Εὐρυβιάδῃ ἔδοξε: a decision by Eurybiades was all that was necessary; the Spartan navarch had absolute power in the matter, in virtue of the Spartan Hegemonia. He might consult a council of war, but he was not bound by a majority of votes, or even bound to put the question to the vote at all. Naturally, however, he could not give battle unless assured of the approval of the Athenians, who supplied two-thirds of the forces.

3. ἡμέρῃ τε ἐγένετο καί: the parataxis is to be observed: not that the sunrise had of necessity anything to say to 'the earthquake on land and sea.' The earthquake is, however, surely portentous and Poseidonian. Seisms are unfortunately of no use chronologically; but the day in question is apparently the very day before the actual battle, the Persian fleet is all in sight, at Phaleron, albeit its arrival has still to be recorded in the story, cp. c. 66 infra. If the introduction of the anecdote in c. 65 as upon this day may be used for a chronological indication, conscious or unconscious, then the date would probably be Boëdromion 20; cp. l.c.

4. ἔδοξε δέ σφι: the Council again? or the Athenians? or, vaguely, the whole armament of the Greeks? A regrettable obscurity.

εὐξασθαι τοῖσι θεοῖσι: the day before the battle is largely devoted to religious exercises; the earthquake having probably emphasized the natural instinct of piety at such a crisis. The Athenians will have felt an especial grief in their exclusion from Eleusis on this day; but their prayers to the goddess were destined to obtain a rich response within the year, cp. 9. 101 infra. None of the gods was omitted from the litany on this occasion.

5. ἐπικαλέσασθαι τοὺς Αἰακίδας συμμάχους: Aiaikos was a son of Zeus (Il. 21. 189 etc., but in Homer Aiaikos is not yet descended into hell, as Judge of the Underworld). The best known sons of Aiaikos are Peleus, the father of Achilles, and Telamon the father of Aias. From Aias were further descended the Philaidai, and Eurysakidai—two great Attic clans—through their eponyms, his sons, Philaios, Eurysakes. But Aiaikos had also a son Phokos (Pausanias 2. 29. 7), whose tomb was shown in Aigina, where he had been slain by his half-brother Telamon, who was in consequence banished the island. Hence the Greeks, or Athenians, could invoke Telamon and Aias in Salamis (where they had resided), but had to send to Aigina itself to invoke, or to fetch, Aiaikos and the other Aiakidai. But what others? For Peleus and for Achilles they would surely have had to send to their tombs in Thessaly (l.), in the Troad (Od. 24. 80 ff.; Arrian, Anab. 1. 11. 12; cp. 5. 94 supra). The descendants of Phokos, too, were to be sought in 'Phokis,' Pausan. 2. 29. 2. (It seems as if Aiaikos and Phokos were the only 'Aiakids' to be found in Aigina.) In view of the story in 5. 80, 81 it may fairly be argued that this ship was sent to fetch actual idols (ξόανα), and not merely to perform an invocation in loco; cp. my notes to l.c. This ship would have to evade the Persian fleet and look-out, though that σφι ἔδοξε, καὶ ἐποίηεν ταῦτα· εὐξάμενοι γὰρ πᾶσι τοῖσι θεοῖσι, αὐτόθεν μὲν ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος Αἰαντά τε καὶ Τελαμῶνα ἐπεκαλέοντο, ἐπὶ δὲ Αἰακὸν καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους Αἰακίδας νέα ἀπέστελλον ἐς Αἴγιναν.

- 65 Ἐφη δὲ Δίκαιος ὁ Θεοκύδεος, ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος φυγὰς τε καὶ παρὰ Μήδοισι λόγιμος γενόμενος τοῦτον τὸν χρόνον, ἐπεῖτε ἐκέριετο ἡ Ἀττικὴ χώρα ὑπὸ τοῦ πεζοῦ στρατοῦ τοῦ Ξέρξεω εἴουσα ἔρημος Ἀθηναίων, τυχεῖν τότε ἐὼν ἅμα Δημ-necessity has not yet transpired in the narrative of Hdt.; it may therefore be surmised that it was sent at night, not in daylight. But, again, if so, it can hardly have gone and come in one night, but was probably sent out on the night preceding, and returned as recorded in c. 83 infra.

6 ἐποίηεν B 7 μὲν om. B || ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος secl. van H. || Αἰαντα τὸν Τελαμῶνος S, Valla (ap. Gaisf.): τε καὶ τὸν R: τῶν V (ap. Holder) 8 νῆα SVz: νῆας R 65. 1 Δικαῖος z (bis) || τε: 'an δέ?' van H.

ὥς . . καὶ . . : a parataxis, but not a synchronism, and even an incorrect parataxis, seeing that either ὥς or καὶ is de trop; cp. ei . . καὶ c. 62 supra. The difference in the tenses ἔδοξε, ἐποίηεν should be marked.

65. 1. ἔφη: the word might perfectly well be understood of a written authority or source, cp. 4. 13, 6. 137, and Introduction, § 10. Had Hdt. himself spoken face to face with his authority, he would have let his readers know it (cp. 9. 16), and if he were reporting simply a conversation with others he would scarcely have named one interlocutor without at least indicating the presence of the others. The words with which the anecdote, and the chapter, conclude, ταῦτα μὲν Δίκαιος ὁ Θεοκύδεος ἔλεγε, Δημαρῆτον τε καὶ ἄλλων μαρτύρων καταπτόμενος, look more like an appeal to the vox viva, but are hardly conclusive in this respect, and certainly leave Hdt. himself out of audible range of Δίκαιος.

Δίκαιος ὁ Θεοκύδεος: doubtless a man of some importance in his day, presumably of the Peisistratid party (cp. cc. 52, 54 supra), and on friendly terms with Demaratos, as the ensuing anecdote proves. But the romantic hypothesis which P. Trautwein has woven out of these few indications plus general probability or possibility, making The Memoirs of Dikaios one of the principal sources used by Hdt. in his history of the Persian war, especially in those passages wherein Demaratos figures, is little more than a suggestive fancy. Sources, and written sources, Hdt. doubtless had; but alas! we can do little to identify or to reproduce them. Cp. Introduction, § 10.

The names 'Dikaios' and 'Theokydes' are rare, and almost unparalleled; but 'Thucydides' implies 'Thucydes' (Θεο-θυ-κύδης), and, if fancy is to be the order of the day, one might speculate upon a possible connexion between the father of Dikaios and the son of Oloros. What was the name of the father of Oloros, or Orolos? Considering the Thracian connexions of Thucydides, noting the extremely 'superior' manner in which he disposes of mediocrism and the Median question, marking his tolerance of the Peisistratidai and the Tyrannis at Athens, one might amuse an idle half-hour in elaborating the conjecture that here, in this record of the unpatriotic rôle played by a more or less distant relative of his own, the Athenian historian and exile scented a provocation to the depreciatory estimate, both of the subject selected and the methods pursued, by his greatest literary predecessor, of whom he was obviously more than a little jealous! Cp. Thuc. 1. 20-23.

2. Μήδοισι rather suggests citation than free composition by Hdt. himself. Cp. c. 5 supra.

3. ἐπεῖτε ἐκέριετο: the imperfect has its proper force, but the statement seems less important chronologically than causally—as explaining how they came to be where they were.

4. Δημαρῆτῳ τῷ Λακεδαιμονίῳ: cp. Bk. 7 passim. The description was hardly necessary at this stage in the αρήτῳ τῷ Λακεδαιμονίῳ ἐν τῷ Θριασίῳ πεδίῳ, ἰδεῖν δὲ 5 κοινορτὸν χωρέοντα ἀπ' Ἑλευσίνος ὡς ἀνδρῶν μάλιστά κη τρισμυρίων, ἀποθωμάζειν τε σφέας τὸν κοινορτὸν ὅτεων κοτὴ εἴη ἀνθρώπων, καὶ πρόκατε φωνῆς ἀκούειν, καὶ οἱ φαίνεσθαι τὴν φωνὴν εἶναι τὸν μυστικὸν ἱακχόν. εἶναι δ' ἀδαήμονα τῶν

6 ἀπὸ B, Holder || κον ABC 7 ἀποθωμάζειν τε ABC, Stein<sup>2</sup>, (τέ) Holder, van H.: ἀποθωμάζοντες R: ἀποθωμάζοντάς S (Gaisf.): ἀποθωμάζον τέ V: ἀποθωμάζειν τέ (σφέας) Stein<sup>1</sup> || σφέας om. B: 'an transponendum post ἰδεῖν δὲ?' van H.

continuous story, and comes perhaps from the source. Did the Spartan exile recall his previous visit to Eleusis some thirty years before (5. 75)?

5. ἐν τῷ Θριασίῳ πεδίῳ: mentioned again 9. 7 infra by the Athenian envoy at Sparta as τῆς γε ἡμετέρας ἐπιτηδεύατον μαχέσασθαι u.v. How did Dikaios and Demaratos find themselves there? Had they come from Athens with a Persian column simply to ravage the plain? or were they on their way to Athens with the column which had left Boiotia by the pass of Dryos-Kephalai (cp. c. 50 supra)? or, as might seem most probable, were they crossing the Thriasian plain with the Persian force detached to move against the Isthmos, as recorded c. 70 infra? Or are they to be thought as there by themselves, and for no particular purpose, otherwise how could a cloud of dust surprise them? The Thriasian plain is a good size; it is a pity their exact position thereon is not more precisely defined.

6. κοινορτὸν χωρέοντα ἀπ' Ἑλευσίνος. Did Hdt. suppose that the Pomp moved from Eleusis to Athens? K. O. Mueller accused him; Baehr defends, by invoking the N. or NW. wind! Surely the dust-cloud must move from Eleusis, because Persian fleet and Persian army are conceived, in the anecdote, as still to the east of Aigaleos.

ἀνδρῶν μάλιστά κη τρισμυρίων: this is the conventional number of Athenian citizens, cp. 5. 97, but the figure can hardly be used here with that reference, as the context clearly asserts that the festival was not confined to Athenians, while on the other hand all Athenian citizens were not initiate.

7. ἀποθωμάζειν τε . . . καὶ . . . ἀκούειν, 'they were not done wondering . . . when they heard (were hearing)'; the parataxis has force. πρόκατε: c. 135 infra.

8. ἀνθρώπων: not the Persian army, nor yet the advancing Peloponnesians (they thought), nor any mortal beings. The doubt is whether it be not superhuman.

καὶ οἱ φ. τ. φ. εἶναι: Dikaios is not quite sure. If there is any truth in the anecdote (as seems probable) this Athenian exile, himself a mystes, may well have been in an excited frame of mind that evening, Boëdromion 20, that found him once more in his native land, under such unhallowed auspices, to assist on the morrow at the consummation of its ruin, or of his own eternal disgrace. Like the anecdote of Thersandros (9. 16), the story would suggest that there were those in the king's following who viewed with apprehension the struggle at close quarters with the Greeks, and were anything but confident of victory.

9. τὸν μυστικὸν ἱακχόν: i.e. the cry 'Iakchos,' or the hymn in honour of 'Iakchos'—a specimen of which is perhaps presented by Aristoph. Frogs, 398-413, and which was uttered by the band of pilgrims as they went from Athens to Eleusis on the 19th or 20th Boëdromion; see further infra. The very day itself was also apparently known by the same name, Plutarch, Camillus 19. Iakchos may be etymologically a reduplicated form of Bakchos (Ἰβακχος, cp. L. & S.), but, as M. Foucart points out (l'Origine et la Nature des Mystères d'Eleusis, 1895, p. 81), Iakchos was a late comer at Eleusis, and a subordinate personage; this very passage is the earliest evidence of his association with the mysteries.

ἀδαήμονα: an 'Epic' word, not used by Hdt. elsewhere. Stein suggests that it comes, with σίνος and ἀρίδηλα below, from Hdt.'s 'source'—a suggestion which further suggests that the source in question was in writing. How far this ignorance on the part of the Spartan

- 10 ἰρῶν τῶν ἐν Ἐλευσίνι γινομένων τὸν Δημάρητον, εἰρέσθαι τε αὐτὸν ὃ τι τὸ φθεγγόμενον εἴη τοῦτο. αὐτὸς δὲ εἰπεῖν "Δημάρητε, οὐκ ἔστι ὅπως οὐ μέγα τι σίνος ἔσται τῇ βασιλέως στρατιῇ· τάδε γὰρ ἀρίδηλα, ἐρήμου ἐούσης τῆς Ἀττικῆς, ὅτι θεῖον τὸ φθεγγόμενον, ἀπ' Ἐλευσίνος ἰὸν ἐς τιμωρίην Ἀθηναίους
- 15 τε καὶ τοῖσι συμμάχοισι. καὶ ἦν μὲν γε κατασκήψῃ ἐς τὴν Πελοπόννησον, κίνδυνος αὐτῷ τε βασιλεῖ καὶ τῇ στρατιῇ τῇ ἐν τῇ ἡπείρῳ ἔσται, ἦν δὲ ἐπὶ τὰς νέας τράπηται τὰς ἐν Σαλαμῖνι, τὸν ναυτικὸν στρατὸν κινδυνεύσει βασιλεὺς ἀποβαλεῖν. τὴν δὲ ὁρτὴν ταύτην ἄγουσι Ἀθηναῖοι ἀνὰ πάντα

10 ἰρῶν BBAcorr., cp. c. 55 || τε om. B 11 τοιοῦτον B || εἶπε B :
εἶπαι z 12 σίνος PRz || βασιλέως C ; βασιλῆος z 14 ἀπὸ B,
Holder || ἐὼν Bz 16 βασιλεῖ AB 17 νῆας Bz 18 ἀπο-βαλέειν Bz 19 ἀνὰ del. Kallenberg, Holder || πᾶν ἔτος maleb. Krueger, van H.

exile is assumed for dramatic purposes, it is hard to determine. But even if Demaratos is the mere vehicle of Herodotean didactics, it is obvious that Herodotus addresses an audience which had much to learn in regard to the Eleusinia. Such a public was hardly to be found in Athens. Whether the author himself was a μύστης does not appear, but, no doubt appropriately, the Athenian exile plays the part of divine or exegete, the Spartan that of politician or diplomat.

τῶν ἰρῶν τῶν ἐν Ἐλευσίνι γινομένων: in Hdt.'s own day, as in the times of Demaratos and Dikaios, of Peisistratos, and long before. There is surely no need to bring down this whole anecdote to the later draft of Hdt.'s work, or its revision—easily as the chapter might be an insertion—or to connect it merely with the attempted revival, or rather extension, of the Eleusinian Festival after the thirty years' truce, which was to be one of Perikles' consolations for the failure of his more violent attempts to make Athens the head of a great empire, or of his still earlier and more ingenuous plan to win pan-Hellenic recognition for his city by making it the focus of a pan-Hellenic Congress (Plutarch Perik. c. 17).

12 οὐκ ἔστι ὅπως οὐ . . ἔσται: there is here an omitted antecedent, and the ellipse, coupled with the double negation, serves to emphasize the assertion, in this case a prediction; cp. Xenoph. Anab. 2. 4. 3 οὐκ ἔστιν ὅπως οὐκ ἐπιθήσεται ἡμῶν (sc. βασιλεὺς). σίνος (neut.), an ἀπαξ λ.

in Hdt., though the verb σίνεσθαι is to be found passim (esp. Bk. 9); cp. l. 9 supra.

13. στρατιῇ, as the context proves, embraces both the land and sea forces, ἀρίδηλα, 'absolutely clear'—also a ἀπαξ λ. in Hdt.; cp. l. 9 supra.

14. ἐς τιμωρίην, assistance, aid, support—as often ap. Hdt. The prominence of 'the Athenians' betrays the origin of the anecdote.

15. κατασκήψῃ: for the verb cp. 7. 134, 137 supra, passages which would suggest that a μῆνις or νέμεσις was here too in view—although clearly not directed against the Greeks in Peloponnese or in Salamis. The word may be used in a weakened sense, meaning little more than the τράπηται just below. The grammatical subject is obscure: the nearest would be τὸ φθεγγόμενον, but, as that must be taken in the passive, the result is nonsense. Stein suggests νέφος, by anticipation; κοινοτός from above would be less remote and obscure; but a vague though self-evident subject, such as τὸ θεῖον τοῦτο, or such like, suggests itself in the immediate context, or even τὸ σίνος τοῦτο, τὸ κακὸν τ.

19. τὴν δὲ ὁρτὴν ταύτην: no feast or festival, strictly speaking, has been described, or even expressly mentioned, but may be taken as implied in τὸν μυστικὸν λαχόν supra. The reference here is not to an ἀγών, which undoubtedly was held at Eleusis (in strict terminology τὰ Ἐλευσίνια), but to the celebration of the 'mysteries' (τὰ με-

ἔτεα τῇ Μητρὶ καὶ τῇ Κούρῃ, καὶ αὐτῶν τε ὁ βουλόμενος 20
καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων μνείται· καὶ τὴν φωνὴν τῆς ἀκούεις ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ ὀρτῇ ἰακχάζουσι." πρὸς ταῦτα εἰπεῖν Δημάρητον
"σίγα τε καὶ μηδενὶ ἄλλῳ τὸν λόγον τοῦτον εἶπες· ἦν γάρ τοι ἐς βασιλέα ἀνευχεθῇ τὰ ἔπεα ταῦτα, ἀποβαλέεις τὴν κεφαλὴν, καὶ σε οὔτε ἐγὼ δυνήσομαι ῥύσασθαι οὐτ' ἄλλος 25 ἀνθρώπων οὐδὲ εἷς. ἀλλ' ἔχ' ἥσυχος, περὶ δὲ στρατιῆς τῆσδε θεοῖσι μελήσει." τὸν μὲν δὴ ταῦτα παραινέειν, ἐκ δὲ τοῦ κονιορτοῦ καὶ τῆς φωνῆς γενέσθαι νέφος καὶ μεταρσιωθὲν φέρεσθαι ἐπὶ Σαλαμῖνος ἐπὶ τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων.

20 τῇ δῆμητρι B: τῇ Δήμητρι Holder, van H. || κούρη ACP: κόρη
21 μνείται Stein<sup>1</sup> 22 εἶπαι z 24 βασιλῆα z || ἀνευχεθῇ B
26 οὐδὲ εἷς ABC: οὐδεὶς 27 δὴ om. AC || ἐκ δὴ z 28 μεταρσιον ἀρθὲν Cobet 29 ἐς τὸ B, Holder, van H.

γάλα), which took place annually in Boëdromion (15-23?), the 19th and 20th being especially devoted to the Iakchos-pomp, and the latter of the two known by his name. On the evening which began that calendar day the pilgrims reached Eleusis. During the daylight of the 19th they would have been marching from Athens, and it is, therefore, inferentially to the 19th that the conversation between Dikaios and Demaratos is to be dated, and consequently to the 20th that the actual battle is to be referred. Cp. generally, on the festival, etc., A. Mommsen, Feste der Stadt Athen (1898), 179-277.

ἀνὰ πάντα ἔτεα: cp. 7. 106 ἀνὰ πᾶν ἔτος.

20. τῇ Μητρὶ καὶ τῇ Κούρῃ: the cult of the mother and the daughter, Demeter and Persephone, was presumably the original nucleus of the Eleusinian teletai, but not necessarily, like the Thesmophoria, confined to women (cp. 2. 171). The Homeric Hymn to Demeter bears no trace of the exclusion of men. The position of the other deities ('the god' and 'the goddess,' Eubulos, Pluton, Triptolemos, Dionysos) associated with the cult is obscure, but the supposed Egyptian origin of the mysteries (Foucart, op. cit. supra) looks like a retrogression in constructive criticism. At some early date, perhaps in connexion with the introduction of a new deity, perhaps as a consequence of the Athenian conquest of Eleusis, the cult obtained more catholic recognition, but the exact point at which 'pan-Hellenic' significance was given to the 'mysteries' is not clear; probably at least as early as the times of Peisistratos, with whose position and policy such ideas were congruous. Even in the age of Peisistratos the enlarged Eleusinia may have been represented as a restoration.

22. ἰακχάζουσι: sc. ᾄδουσι (τὸν Ἰακχόν), cp. 1. 9 supra.

23. τὸν λόγον τοῦτον . . . τὰ ἔπεα ταῦτα appear to be used here as virtual equivalents; cp. Index sub vv.

24. ἀνευχεθῇ, 'be reported.'

26. οὐδὲ εἷς, 'no, not one!'—a somewhat false, but perhaps idiomatic emphasis; cp. 9. 80 infra.

ἔχ' ἥσυχος: an eminently idiomatic expression; Larcher cites Eurip. Med. 553, Orest. 1275 for the adjectival construction with ἔχειν.

στρατιῆς: as above, l. 13.

27. θεοῖσι μελήσει, 'the will of the gods be done.'

ἐκ: perhaps with a double force, material and temporal: 'out of the dust and after the voice'; for temporal ἐκ cp. 7. 188.

28. μεταρσιωθὲν = μεταρσιον γενόμενον: μεταρσιον = μετέωρον, cp. 7. 188. But cp. App. Crit.

29. ἐπὶ: the uses with genitive (Σαλαμῖνος) and accusative (τὸ στρατόπεδον) illustrated. The cloud could not have reached the Hellenic laager without reaching Salamis. Apparently here the genitive denotes the more general direction, the accusative the more definite.

30 οὕτω δὴ αὐτοὺς μαθεῖν ὅτι τὸ ναυτικὸν τὸ Ξέρξῳ ἀπολέσθαι μέλλοι. ταῦτα μὲν Δίκαιος ὁ Θεοκύδεος ἔλεγε, Δημαρήτου τε καὶ ἄλλων μαρτύρων καταπτόμενος·

66 Οἱ δὲ ἐς τὸν Ξέρξῳ ναυτικὸν στρατὸν ταχθέντες, ἐπειδὴ ἐκ Τρηχίνος θεησάμενοι τὸ τρώμα τὸ Λακωνικὸν διέβησαν ἐς τὴν Ἰστιαίην, ἐπισχόντες ἡμέρας τρεῖς ἔπλεον δι' Εὐρίπου, καὶ ἐν ἐτέρησι τρισὶ ἡμέρησι ἐγένοντο ἐν Φαλήρῳ. ὥς μὲν

30 δὴ Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: δὲ || ἀπολέσθαι B 31 μέλλει? Krueger
(Marc.) || τε οἱ. αC 32 τῶν ἄλλων B || καταπτόμενος α 66. 1
δ' B || ξέρξῳ B 3 ἔπλεον Bz || διὰ α

30. οὕτω δὴ κτλ.: that this vision of the souls of the faithful celebrating a pan-Hellenic festival in a land occupied by the enemy portended aught but destruction to the barbarian, could not enter their minds!

31. Δημαρήτου τε καὶ ἄλλων: they were not then tête-à-tête; others were present to attest the truth of the story. Or did Dikaios disregard the injunctions of Demaratos, and communicate their adventure to other persons on returning to camp? μαρτύρων is of course used appositively; cp. note on ἄλλοι c. 55 supra. καταπτόμενος: cp. 6. 88, antestans, obtestans, a purely Herodotean use; cp. L. & S.

This remarkable anecdote is framed in, so to speak, at the beginning and the end, by express reference to the source, the authority. It comes in strangely and out of place here, at the close of the account of events on the Greek side, and before the account of events on the Persian side, to which it might rather seem to belong; but (i.) the Persian army has already been introduced into Attica, cc. 50-55; (ii.) chronologically the event seems to belong to the very day reached in c. 64.

66. 1. οἱ δὲ . . . ταχθέντες: cp. οἱ δὲ Ἑλλήνων . . . ταχθέντες c. 1 supra. The narrative is here resumed from c. 25 ad f.

2. τὸ τρώμα τὸ Λακωνικόν, 'the disaster to the Lakonians' they beheld in seeing the corpse-exhibition, c. 25 supra. The Thespians are not here taken any account of.

3. ἐπισχόντες: they 'halted,' or remained at rest, waited; cp. ἐπισχών 5. 16.

Six days are here accounted for, three of which are consumed by the further halt at Histiaia, and three by the voyage to Phaleron. These six days are in succession to two days accounted for in c. 25 supra, upon the second of which the naval forces were occupied in getting back to Histiaia, while the land-forces were getting under way on their march through Phokis and Boiotia to Athens. The previous day had been devoted to sight-seeing at Thermopylai; the day before that the king's fleet was occupied in advancing from Aphetai to Histiaia (c. 23 supra). Thus nine days in all are accounted for. The first of these nine days is the day immediately succeeding the fighting off Artemision, which occupies three days, exactly synchronizing ex hypothesi with the engagements at Thermopylai: adding these three days it would appear that the Persian fleet arrived at Phaleron on the twelfth day after its arrival at Aphetai, both events included. The fleet apparently finds the army in full possession of Athens, but what interval separated the arrival of army and of fleet Hdt. does not specify. If Xerxes occupied the Athenian Akropolis in less than a week after leaving Thermopylai, having in the meantime ravaged at least Phokis, and destroyed Plataiai and Thespiiai, his advance was a tolerably rapid one. In fact, it is hardly credible. The log of the fleet may have been accurately preserved; but the arrival of fleet and army in Attica may have been synchronized, the apparent interval being an illusion due to Hdt.'s method in separating the accounts of synchronous operations, and completing (relatively) the story of one series before entering on that of the other. He himself is here more concerned with the material mass than with the temporal motions of the forces. Cp. Appendix VI. § 2.

4. ὥς μὲν ἂν μοι δοκίεν: the construction

ἐμοὶ δοκέειν, οὐκ ἐλάσσονες ἔοντες ἀριθμὸν ἐσέβαλον ἐς τὰς 5
 'Αθήνας, κατὰ τε ἤπειρον καὶ τῇσι νηυσὶ ἀπικόμενοι, ἢ ἐπὶ τε Σηπιάδα ἀπίκοντο καὶ ἐς Θερμοπύλας· ἀντιθήσω γὰρ τοῖσι τε ὑπὸ τοῦ χειμῶνος αὐτῶν ἀπολομένοισι καὶ τοῖσι ἐν Θερμοπύλῃσι καὶ τῇσι ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ ναυμαχήσῃσι τοῦσδε τοὺς τότε οὐκ ἔπομένους βασιλεί, Μηλιάς καὶ Δωριέας καὶ Λοκροὺς 10
 καὶ Βοιωτοὺς πανστρατιῇ ἔπομένους πλὴν Θεσπείων καὶ Πλαταιέων, καὶ μάλα Καρυστίους τε καὶ Ἀνδρίους καὶ Τηνίους

5 δοκέει Sz, Cobet || ἐσέβαλλον C 6 ἀπικόμενοι om. B, secl.
 van H. || ἐπεί z 10 Μηλιάς τε S, Gaisford, van H. 11
 θεσπείων τε CPz, Gaisford, van H.

is an asyndeton, there is no δέ corresponding to μέν, the infinitive is pendens. The judgement or calculation thus introduced by the historian and claimed as his own is not to his credit, being flatly contradicted by his own previous narrative, and in itself irrational. He judges the forces of Xerxes by sea and by land to have been as large, when they occupied Attica, before the battle of Salamis, as they had been at their arrival off Sepias and at Thermopylai. It is not quite clear, perhaps, whether Hdt. means to exclude the losses in the storm off the Magnesian shore (as Blakesley suggests); but even so, Blakesley finds it impossible to conceive Hdt.'s statement as "at all near the truth, unless enormous exaggeration is to be presumed in the accounts of the engagements off Artemision." But the more natural interpretation of this passage would refer it back to 7. 183 supra, where the barbarians ἐξανόουσι τῆς Μαγνησίης χώρας ἐπὶ Σηπιάδα—a statement at once followed by the grossly exaggerated estimate of the king's forces (7. 184-7), which is in itself one of the greatest stumbling-blocks in Hdt.'s historiography. His record of the Persian losses at sea since that point amount to upwards of 700 triremes: of his original total 1327, only about 600 remain at this point, according to the narrative, ἀξιώμαχος. The notion that these enormous losses could have been made good by additions to the fleet between Artemision and Phaleron is patently absurd. The alternative presents itself: that the losses, and that the original numbers themselves, have been greatly exaggerated. But the navy-list, though not free from miscalculation, is perhaps approximately sound (cp. Appendix II. § 5). Hdt.'s purpose is obvious, to identify the navy-list for Salamis with the estimate and lists already given, and so to glorify the victory. He may have been encouraged by the fact that Aischylos had given, virtually, the maximum for Salamis. Hdt. not merely asserts that all losses had been made good, but also assumes that the whole fleet came to Phaleron. Probably on neither point is he correct.

The case of the army is not identical with that of the fleet. Losses had been lighter, and the supplements far greater. The Hellenic troops in the army of Mardonios are estimated at 50,000 (9. 32 infra). But Hdt. apparently makes no allowance, in the case of army or of fleet, for any guards or garrisons left en route, or for the ordinary wear and tear of warfare. He assumes that the whole land-forces of the king invaded Attica: that assumption, if true, would render more than ever incredible the gross exaggeration of his estimates, 7. 184 ff.

In any case the deliberate calculation of Hdt. in this passage, as in 7. 184 ff., shows that he takes himself seriously as a historian, precludes our treating him merely as an irresponsible raconteur, and goes far to justify the rigid application of Sachkritik to his methods and results.

10. Μηλιάς . . Πλαταιέων: on the Malians, Lokrians, Boiotians cp. 7. 132; on the Dorians 8. 31. For Thespiæ and Plataiæ, c. 50 supra.

12. Καρυστίους: the geographical position of Karystos is indicated in 4. 33 and 6. 99; the latter passage shows that the Karystians had in 490 B.C. resisted the 'barbarians,' though not successfully. An attempt was made τε καὶ τοὺς λοιποὺς νησιώτας πάντας, πλὴν τῶν πέντε πολίων τῶν ἐπεμνήσθημεν πρότερον τὰ οὐνόματα. ὅσφ γὰρ δὴ προ-15 ἐβαينه ἐσωτέρω τῆς Ἑλλάδος ὁ Πέρσης, τοσοῦτω πλέω ἔθνεά οἱ εἶπετο.

67 Ἐπεὶ ὦν ἀπίκато ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας πάντες οὗτοι πλὴν Παρίων (Πάριοι δὲ ὑπολειφθέντες ἐν Κύθνῳ ἐκαπαδόκεον τὸν πόλεμον κῆ ἀποβήσεται), οἱ δὲ λοιποὶ ὥς ἀπίκοντο ἐς τὸ Φάληρον, ἐνθαῦτα κατέβη αὐτὸς Ξέρξης ἐπὶ τὰς νέας, ἐθέλων 5 σφι συμμείξαι τε καὶ πυθέσθαι τῶν ἐπιπλεόντων τὰς γνώμας.

13 τε post Τηνίους om. α 14 ἐπεμνήσθην B, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H. || προσέβαινε(ν V) Bz 15 ἐσωτέρω α 67. 1 ἐπεῖτε ?
 van H. || ἀπικέατο Pz: ἀπικέτο B || οὔτοι om. z 3 ἦ B: τῇ z 4
 νῆας Bz || θέλων B 5 συμμείξαι van H., Stein<sup>2</sup>: συμμείξαι || ἐπι-πλεόντων B

in 480 B.C. to punish them for their 'medism'; cp. c. 121 infra. They were afterwards subjected to Athens (cp. 9. 105), and assessed generally at five talents (cp. Hill, Sources, p. 91).

Ἀνδρίους: for the position of Andros cp. 4. 33, 5. 31. For the subsequent operations against it, cc. 108 ff. infra.

Τηνίους: for the position of Tenos cp. 4. 33, 6. 97; for the subsequent patriotism of Tenos and its reward, cc. 32 ff. infra.

13. τῶν πέντε πολίων: not counting the Aeginetans or Euboian towns, six island states have been enumerated in the Greek navy-list (c. 46 supra), viz. Keos, Naxos, Kythnos, Seriphos, Siphnos, Melos; it is the first five, perhaps, which are here referred to (Stein understands Keos to be the one omitted). Paros also has to be excepted, c. 67.

14. τῶν ἐπεμνήσθημεν πρότερον τὰ οὐνόματα: the reference back is to c. 46 supra. The grammatical construction is remarkable; cp. 6. 136. But the accusatives, especially οὐνόματα here, might be taken as of reference or limit, rather than as directly objective.

προέβαινε ἐσωτέρω τῆς Ἑλλάδος: cp. c. 60 supra προβήσονται ἐκαστέρω τῆς Ἀττικῆς. 'Hellas' has here rather more the appearance of a geographical sense, even limited to the peninsula.

67. 1. ἀπίκατο ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας: corrected, both as to time and place, just below into ἀπίκοντο ἐς τὸ Φάληρον. The city-name might pass for the country, cp. 9. 17.

2. Πάριοι had paid dearly for Medism in 489 B.C.; cp. 6. 133-5. They now 'remained behind' (ὑπολειφθέντες, cp. 5. 61, 9. 53) in Kythnos—itsself on the patriotic side, c. 46 supra—and like the Korkyreans in the west, ἐκαπαδόκεον τὸν π., cp. 7. 168. This attitude of the Parians seems to show—like the desertion of the Lemnian and the Tenian—that the islanders by no means regarded the triumph of the king as a foregone conclusion.

3. οἱ δὲ λοιποὶ: the δὲ resumptive, after a parenthesis; cp. 7. 95 tot. verb.

τὸ Φάληρον, c. 66 supra. In 6. 116 it is described as 'at that time (490 B.C.) the Athenian arsenal (ἐπίκειον)'—perhaps because in the narrative there the remark is of especial point in view of the threatening pause of the Persian fleet in the offing; or perhaps because when Hdt. wrote that passage he had a personal acquaintance with the Attic harbours, which he still lacked when writing this, Introd. §§ 6, 7.

4. κατέβη αὐτὸς Ξέρξης: the king doubtless rode, or was driven down in his open chariot or closed carriage (cp. 7. 41 supra); he surely would not be walking from Athens. But it was an effort of condescension; for Xerxes might have summoned the council of war to Athens if he had merely wished to take advice. The king had not reviewed his fleet properly since Doriakos, or at least since Therme (cp. 7. 44, 100, 127).

5. σφί: not the ships, but the men, or their commanders. τῶν ἐπιπλεόντων: cp. 7. 98 supra. With συμμείξαι cp. c. 58 supra.

ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀπικόμενος προίζετο, παρήσαν μετάπεμποι οἱ τῶν ἐθνέων τῶν σφετέρων τύραννοι καὶ ταξίαρχοι ἀπὸ τῶν νεῶν, καὶ ἔζοντο ὡς σφί βασιλεὺς ἐκάστῳ τιμὴν ἐδεδώκεε, πρῶτος μὲν ὁ Σιδώνιος [βασιλεὺς], μετὰ δὲ ὁ Τύριος, ἐπὶ δὲ ὅλλοι.
 ὡς δὲ κόσμῳ ἐπεξῆς ἔζοντο, πέμψας Ξέρξης Μαρδόνιον εἰρώτα 10
 ἀποπειρώμενος ἐκάστου, εἰ ναυμαχίην ποιεόιτο. ἐπεὶ δὲ περιῶν 68 εἰρώτα ὁ Μαρδόνιος ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τοῦ Σιδωνίου, οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι κατὰ τῶντὸ γνῶμην ἐξεφέροντο κελεύοντες ναυμαχίην ποιεέσθαι, Ἄρτεμισίη δὲ τάδε ἔφη. "εἰπεῖν μοι πρὸς βασιλέα, Μαρδόνιε, ὡς ἐγὼ τάδε λέγω, οὔτε κακίστη γενομένη ἐν τῇσι ναυμαχίῃσι 5
 τῇσι πρὸς Εὐβοίῃ οὔτε ἐλάχιστα ἀποδεξαμένη. δέσποτα, τὴν

7 ταξίαρχαι R || νηῶν Bz 8 ἐδεδώκε RS: ἐδέσδωκε V 9 βασιλεὺς Stein: del. Cobet, van H. 10 ἡρώτα CPz 11 ποιοῖντο α: ποιοῖντο C 68. 1 ἐπέιτε? van H. 2 μὲν δὲ B, Holder, van H. || ὅλλοι B, Wesseling 3 ἐπεφέροντο α 4 εἶπαι z, van H.
 || μοι om. B || βασιλῆα z 5 κακίστην γενομένην α 6 ἀποδεξαμένη
 Pz: ἀποδεξαμένην αC: προσδεξαμένη B: πωδεξαμένη Marc. || δέσποτα.
 PRz || τὴν δὲ: τήνδε S, Reiske: δὲ del. Valckenaer, van H.

6. προίζετο: sedem altiore, praecipuum, cepit (occupabat?), Baehr. The others ἔζοντο, just infra. Cp. 4. 88 Δαρῖον ἐν προεδρίῃ κατήμενον, and 7. 44 —the προεδρία on which Xerxes sat (ἔζο) at Abydos to review the fleet. Similarly προκατιζόμενος 5. 12, and the same word in the active 1. 14, 97. ταξίαρχοι, as in 7. 99.

9. ὁ Σιδώνιος [βασιλεὺς]: cp. App. Crit. Stein defends the βασιλεὺς on account of the proximity of ταξίαρχοι, in which case Σιδωνίων would be more usual. Tetramnestos was his name, 7. 98 supra; the Tyrian's was Mapen, ib.

10. Μαρδόνιον: why is Mardonios, one of the six field-m Marshals (7. 82), thus employed on this occasion, when there were four admirals, including two 'of the blood,' who commanded the fleet (7. 97)? Blakesley replied that much greater confidence was placed in his strategic talents, and that he was perhaps regarded as the commander-in-chief of both services. But Xerxes himself surely occupies at present this position. Mardonios figures here perhaps for literary reasons, because he is one of the leading dramatis personae, and it is high time that something more were heard of him; he is needed as a foil to Artemisia; cp. cc. 100-102 infra. One must not take this council too seriously;

the Persian admirals are conspicuous by their absence.

11. ἀποπειρώμενος ἐκάστου: cp. 6. 48. 68. 2. οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι . . Ἄρτεμισίη δέ . . : cp. 5. 36 οἱ μὲν δὲ ἄλλοι πάντες γνῶμην κατὰ τῶντὸ ἐξεφέροντο κελεύοντες ἀπίστασθαι. Ἐκαταῖος δ' ὁ λογοποιὸς κτλ. On Artemisia 7. 99 supra.

4. τάδε ἔφη, 'made the following speech.' The very words are given of the speech, and of a speech within the speech.

εἰπεῖν μοι, 'prythee, say!'—imper. infin. (cp. 7. 159 App. Crit.), and dativ. ethic.

Artemisia claims to have distinguished herself in the sea-fights off Euboea (Artemision!), of which claim the sources followed by Hdt. above apparently know nothing. He is here, doubtless, drawing upon his native traditions, and perhaps composing rather freely.

6. τὴν δὲ εἰούσαν γνῶμην: the δέ is peculiar, but, as Stein explains, may be taken to express the antithesis between the real or genuine (εἰούσαν) opinion, which she expresses, and the unreal opinions given by the others. But the antithesis would be more pointed if it lay between the persons—Artemisia on the one side, the kings on the other—than between the opinions. How little τυχάνω need connote of 'chance' is well

δὲ εὐόσαν γνώμην με δίκαιον ἐστὶ ἀποδείκνυσθαι, τὰ τυγχάνω φρονέουσα ἄριστα ἐς πρήγματα τὰ σά. καὶ τοι τάδε λέγω· φείδεο τῶν νεῶν μηδὲ ναυμαχίην ποιέο. οἱ γὰρ ἄνδρες τῶν 10 σῶν [ἀνδρῶν] κρέσσονες τοσοῦτο εἰσὶ κατὰ θάλασσαν ὅσον ἄνδρες γυναικῶν. τί δὲ πάντως δέει σε ναυμαχίῃσι ἀνακινδυνεύειν;
οὐκ ἔχεις μὲν τὰς Ἀθήνας, τῶν περ εἵνεκα ὁρμήθης στρατεύεσθαι, ἔχεις δὲ τὴν ἄλλην Ἑλλάδα; ἐμποδὼν δέ τοι ἴσταται οὐδεὶς· οἱ δέ τοι ἀντέστησαν, ἀπήλλαξαν οὕτω ὥς 15 κείνους ἔπρεπε. τῇ δὲ ἐγὼ δοκέω ἀποβήσεσθαι τὰ τῶν ἀντι-πολέμων πρήγματα, τοῦτο φράσω. ἦν μὲν μὴ ἐπειχθῆς ναυμαχίην ποιούμενος, ἀλλὰ τὰς νέας αὐτοῦ ἔχῃς πρὸς γῆ μένων ἢ καὶ προβαίνων ἐς τὴν Πελοπόννησον, εὐπετέως τοι δέσποτα χωρήσει τὰ νοέων ἐλήλυθας. οὐ γὰρ οἰοί τε πολλὸν 20 χρόνον εἰσὶ τοι ἀντέχειν οἱ Ἕλληνες, ἀλλὰ σφέας διασκεδᾷς, κατὰ πόλιν δὲ ἕκαστοι φεύξονται. οὔτε γὰρ σῆτος πάρα σφι ἐν τῇ νήσῳ ταύτῃ, ὥς ἐγὼ πυνθάνομαι, οὔτε αὐτοὺς οἶκός, ἦν σὺ ἐπὶ τὴν Πελοπόννησον ἐλαύνῃς τὸν πεζὸν στρατόν, ἀτρεμεῖν

9 νηῶν BPz || ποιέει B: ποιέειο z || τοί, γὰρ z 10 ἀνδρῶν secl.
Stein<sup>2</sup> || τοσοῦτό αC, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H.: τοσοῦτον 11 δεῖ
Holder, van H. 12 εἵνεκεν B, van H. || ὁρμήθης B, Stein<sup>1</sup> 14
ἀνέστησαν; ἀντίσταται B || οὕτως B 15 ἐκείνοις z || δ' αPz || δοκέωι B
17 ποιούμενος B || νῆας Bz 18 ἢ om. B 21 πόλιν δὲ α: δὲ
πόλιν Pz: πόλεις δὲ C: πόλιος δὲ τοι B || σφι Stein: σφίσι 22
αὐτὸς B 23 ἐλαύνεις R || ἀτρεμεῖν BPz

illustrated by the context (it has as much affinity with τέχνη as with τύχη).

9. οἱ γὰρ ἄνδρες . . γυναικῶν: cp. 7. 210 supra, where something nearly as bad is said of the fighting on land, and c. 88 infra, where Xerxes remembers this shrewish mol, with a difference. Cp. 9. 107, which shows how bitter was the taunt even to the barbarian. In vilipending the fleet Artemisia apparently would make a silent exception for the Greek contingents! cp. l. 30 infra.

12. ἔχεις μὲν, 'thou art in possession of . . ' ἔχῃς just below, 'keep.'

τῶν περ . . στρατεύεσθαι: cp. 7. 4. Athens is the goal of the expedition. 'The rest of Hellas' was hardly to be included in the actual possessions of the king, so long as Peloponnesos, to say nothing of the West, remained.

15. ἀντιπολέμων = ἀντιπολεμίων: cp. 7. 236, 4. 134, 140.

18. ἢ καὶ προβαίνων ἐς τὴν Πελο-

πόννησον. Artemisia too is credited with the idea previously ascribed to Demaratos, 7. 235 supra, of an advance on the Peloponnesos, but with a difference: she appears to advocate a weak blockade of Salamis and an advance by the army (cp. below, ἦν σὺ ἐπὶ τὴν Πελοπόννησον ἐλαύνῃς τὸν πεζὸν στρατόν). Such an advance, she argues, will dissipate and scatter the Hellenic fleet—apparently that is the Hellenic fleet at Salamis, who are to be allowed and encouraged to break up κατὰ πόλιν. They must be looking for a ναυμαχίη, as shortage of provisions would in any case compel them either to fight or to dissolve. 'Refuse battle by sea, push on by land,' is Artemisia's plan—a distinctly inferior plan to that ascribed to Demaratos l.c. Artemisia underrates the defensibility of the Isthmos, which, apart from naval co-operation, the Greeks could have held for ever; the gates into Peloponnesos were across the water; cp. 9. 9 infra.

τοὺς ἐκείθεν αὐτῶν ἤκοντας, οὐδέ σφι μελήσει πρὸ τῶν Ἀθηνέων ναυμαχεῖν. ἦν δὲ αὐτίκα ἐπειχθῆς ναυμαχῆσαι, δειμαίνω 25 μὴ ὁ ναυτικὸς στρατὸς κακῶθῃς τὸν πεζὸν προσδηλήσεται. πρὸς δὲ ὦ βασιλεῦ καὶ τόδε ἐς θυμὸν βάλεν, ὥς τοῖσι μὲν χρηστοῖσι τῶν ἀνθρώπων κακοὶ δοῦλοι φιλέουσι γίνεσθαι, τοῖσι δὲ κακοῖσι χρηστοί. σοὶ δὲ εἰσὶν ἀρίστῳ ἀνδρῶν πάντων κακοὶ δοῦλοι εἰσὶ, οἳ ἐν συμμάχων λόγῳ λέγονται εἶναι ἔοντες 30 Αἰγύπτιοί τε καὶ Κύπριοι καὶ Κίλικες καὶ Πάμφυλοι, τῶν ὄφελος ἐστὶ οὐδέν." ταῦτα λεγούσης πρὸς Μαρδόνιον, ὅσοι 69 μὲν ἦσαν εὖνοοι τῇ Ἀρτεμισίᾳ, συμφορὴν ἐποιεῦντο τοὺς λόγους ὥς κακὸν τι πεισομένης πρὸς βασιλέως, ὅτι οὐκ ἔα ναυμαχίην ποιέεσθαι· οἳ δὲ ἀγέομενοί τε καὶ φθονέοντες αὐτῇ, αἵτε ἐν πρώτοισι τετιμημένης διὰ πάντων τῶν συμμάχων, 5

24 οὐδὲ Stein<sup>3</sup> (fortuito?): μελήσειν van H. e Plutarch. Mor. 870
25 ναυμαχῆσαι: ναυμαχεῖν B 26 προσδηλήσεται α: προδηλήσεται
P: προδηλήσεται B 27 βαλέο α 28 φιλοῦσι α 30 δοῦλοί
εἰσι A, Stein<sup>1</sup> || ἐν om. B || εἶναι om. B 69. 2 ἔσαν z || ἐποιέοντο B
3 βασιλῆος z || εἰ α: εἰ B: εἰ Reiske, Holder, van H. 4 ἀγέομενοί
BCSV: ἀγαιόμενοι AR, Holder, van H. 5 τετιμημένη z

27. ἐς θυμὸν βάλεν: 7. 51. Cp. Πιάδ 1. 297. The aphorism which follows is not a very sound one; rather, one might say, 'Good masters (and still more good mistresses) make good servants.' If the slaves and subjects of Xerxes were indeed such as Artemisia described them, it was a condemnation of the master, of the system. Still more absurd is her converse: The better the master, the worse the slave! But is not Hdt. himself aware of all this? Is not the perverted aphorism, put into the mouth of Artemisia, a hit at the tyrant, and the tyrannis? Is there not a little malice at the woman's expense? The lines quoted by Wesseling from Naumachios ap. Stob. lxxi. p. 438 fin. are not identical in sentiment with the Herodotean, but rather a plea for the τῆς μεδία—

μήτε κακῇ δμῶεσσι τοῖς ἔσο· μήτε μάλ' ἐσθλῇ φαίνεο· ῥητέροι γὰρ αἱ που πῆμα φέρονται.
θέρσῃ δειδιότων μάλ' ἐπικρατέουσιν ἀνακτες.

30. ἐν συμμάχων λόγῳ: Artemisia apparently implies that the only persons deserving the honourable title of the king's allies were Hellenes—like herself. The non-Hellenic members of the fleet—Egyptians, Kyprians, Kilikians, Pamphylians—are born slaves, and naturally worthless for fighting purposes. But she does not venture so to taboo the Phoenicians. Mardonios amends her list, c. 100 infra.

According to the navy-list, 7. 89 ff., the Egyptians furnished 200 ships, the Kyprians 150, the Kilikians 100, the Pamphylians 30, a total of 480 ships. This might conceivably represent one squadron of the whole fleet, if it was divided tripartito; cp. 7. 97.

69. 1. ταῦτα λεγούσης: sc. τῆς γυναῖκος. She had her friends, and her enemies, as the context suggests.

2. συμφορὴν ἐποιεῦντο: cp. c. 100 infra, 5. 5.

3. οὐκ ἔα: vetabat, dissuadebat; cp. cc. 36, 61 supra. The opt. (ἐφῆ) would be in order here but less graphic and forcible.

5. αἵτε . . τετιμημένης below appears to be co-ordinate with ὡς πεισομένης above—the gen. abs. following a dat. (as often)—except that the one is a conjecture, the other a matter of fact; but had Hdt. written τετιμημένη it would (as Stein observes) have transformed the fact, alleged by the historian, merely into the motive experienced by her envious enemies. ἀγέομενοί τε καὶ φθονέοντες: cp. 6. 61 φθόνῳ καὶ ἀγῇ ἐτέρποντο τῇ ἀνακρίσει ὥς ἀπολεομένης αὐτῆς. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀνηνεύθησαν αἱ γνώμαι ἐς Ξέρην, κάρτα τε ἦσθη τῇ γνώμῃ τῇ

'Αρτεμισίης, καὶ νομίζων ἔτι πρότερον σπουδαίην εἶναι τότε πολλῷ μᾶλλον αἶνεε. ὅμως δὲ τοῖσι πλείοσι πείθεσθαι ἐκέλευε, 10 τὰδε καταδόξας, πρὸς μὲν Εὐβοίῃ σφέας ἐθελοκακέειν ὥς οὐ παρέοντος αὐτοῦ, τότε δὲ αὐτὸς παρεσκεύαστο θεήσασθαι ναυμαχέοντας.

70 Ἐπεὶ δὲ παρήγγελλον ἀναπλέειν, ἀνῆγον τὰς νέας ἐπὶ

6 ἀνακρίσει α: κρίσει β: κρίσι Holder, van H. || ἐπειδὴ β: ἐπείτε? van H. 7 ξέρξαι β: || τῇ ἀρτεμισίης AB: τῆς ἀρτεμισίης 9 πλείοσι β 11 παρεσκεύαστο delete, θεήσασθαι pos. Naber, van H. 70. 1 ἐπειδὴ β, Holder, van H. || παρήγγελλον A<sup>1</sup>V: παρήγγελλεν (sic) Valckenaer, van H. || ἀναπλώειν β: || νῆας β:

χρεώμενος (Demaratos: was he among Artemisia's rivals here?).

διὰ πάντων, as in c. 37 supra.

6. The meaning of ἀνάκρισις—disceptatio—appears to be guaranteed by ἀνακρινόμενος 9. 56 infra, otherwise ἀποκρίσι or κρίσι might rather be expected here; cp. App. Crit.

8. ἐτι πρότερον, 'still earlier'—just as we say, ἐτι being used with any comparative, to strengthen it—and not necessarily=ἤδη, though no doubt ἤδη would give an excellent sense with the temporal adverb. σπουδαίην, sc. τὴν γυναῖκα.

10. καταδόξας, as in 3. 27.

ἐθελοκακέειν is imperfect.

ὥς οὐ παρέοντος αὐτοῦ, 'in his absence,' as matter of fact; a reason in Xerxes' mind, though not suggested as a reason which had been in their minds.

11. τότε δέ, 'but now'—αὐτός, though in the oratio obliqua—'he had made all preparations to see them fight at sea.'

παρεσκεύαστο: the pl.p. pass. in midd. or active sense is remarkable. Cp. App. Crit.

70. 1. ἐπὶ δὲ παρήγγελλον: what interval, if any, intervened between the resolution of Xerxes to do battle and the ἀνάπλος of the fleet, does not appear. The grammatical subject of παρήγγελλον is also obscure: is it οἱ τῶν ἐθνέων τῶν σφετέρων τύραννοι καὶ ταξίαρχοι of c. 67 supra, or is it not rather οἱ τοῦ ναυτικοῦ στρατηγοὶ (7. 97)? Whatever it is, the subject of ἀνῆγον is different: those who issue and those who execute one and the same order cannot be identical. Hdt. apparently assumes that the whole fleet was together at Phaleron.

ἀνῆγον κτλ.: though ἀνῆγον is the imperfect, παρεκρίθησαν διαταχθέντες is a perfect aorist, and bars the assumption that the ἀνάπλος was not accomplished: it was for ναυμαχίην ποιήσασθαι that daylight failed. The exact position, however, occupied by the fleet, when this ἀνάπλος was carried out completely, is not clearly defined by the words ἐπὶ τὴν Σαλαμίνα. Leake, followed by Grote, argued that the movement here described took the Persian ships right into the straits, and ended in their being drawn up in battle-array along the Attic shore, facing the Greeks in the bay of Salamis. That argument is in so far justified as it gives point to the statement immediately succeeding, τότε μὲν νῦν . . . ναυμαχίην ποιήσασθαι, for this statement seems to imply that the Persians have reached a position in which they have it in their power to deliver an attack. Possibly Hdt. so conceived the situation (as far as he had any clear and distinct conception in the matter), but nevertheless Leake's theory cannot be correct or true to the facts. For reasons given elsewhere (cp. Appendix VI. § 3) it is incredible that the Persian fleet entered the straits by daylight and took up a position in order of battle opposite the Greeks in the bay of Salamis. Nor do the words of Hdt. in this passage, which no doubt reproduce what he had heard or read, of necessity imply any such absurdity. The Persian ships moved from Phaleron upon Salamis to attack the Greeks, and reached a position in battle-array; but whether that position was within or outside the straits is not expressly stated, nor is τὴν Σαλαμῖνα καὶ παρεκρίθησαν διαταχθέντες κατ' ἡσυχίην. τότε μὲν νυν οὐκ ἐξέχρησέ σφι ἡ ἡμέρη ναυμαχίην ποιήσασθαι· νύξ γὰρ ἐπεγένετο· οἱ δὲ παρεσκευάζοντο ἐς τὴν ὑστεραίην. τοὺς δὲ Ἕλληνας εἶχε δέος τε καὶ ἄρρωδίη, οὐκ ἤκιστα δὲ τοὺς ἀπὸ Πελοποννήσου· ἄρρώδεον δέ, ὅτι αὐτοὶ μὲν ἐν Σαλαμῖνι κατήμενοι ὑπὲρ γῆς τῆς Ἀθηναίων ναυμαχέειν μέλλοιεν, νικηθέντες τε ἐν νήσῳ ἀπολαμφθέντες πολιορκήσονται, ἀπέντες

3 (ἐξήρκεσε? van H.) || ποιέσθαι 2
εἰς B, Holder 8 ἀφέντες α

4 τε γὰρ B || ἐγένετο Pz ||

its orientation given. As the Persians were allowed to carry out this manoeuvre without being disturbed, the inference would rather be that, as far as the movement went this day, it was all outside the straits.

2. παρεκρίθησαν διαταχθέντες κατ' ἡσυχίην: these words mean that they were allowed to take up a position, squadron by squadron, parallel to, or alongside of, some given line or object. On the διάταξις cp. 7. 34, 124, 178. In 9. 28 infra we have πολλὸν δὲ πειρὸν παρασκευάζοντο παρὰ τὸν αἰγιαλόν. The foot-soldiers are necessarily on land, but drawn up along-shore. In the present instance παρὰ τὸν αἰγιαλόν is wanting; and even if it were supplied, the question would arise, what or which shore? The only indication of direction in this passage is in the words ἐπὶ τὴν Σαλαμῖνα—the παράταξις (so to speak) is prima facie παρὰ τὴν Σαλαμῖνα, or secondly περὶ Ἀλλήλους—simply in parallel lines, the whole position being indefinite, but presumably outside the straits. If 'Salamis' with the article in Hdt. always denoted 'the town' as distinct from 'the island,' this passage would, indeed, carry them inside the straits; but no such canon obtains.

It is, however, quite possible that Hdt. has gone too far in reporting for this precise point the occupation of a position, wherever it was, by the Persian fleet, in battle-array; the ἀνάπλους may have begun, but παρεκρίθησαν διαταχθέντες may be incorrect and premature. Or, again, the διάταξις, too, may have been complete, and the reason why no battle ensued may be, not that night descended on the Persians, but that the Greek fleet remained ensconced in the bay of Salamis, and would not respond to the challenge, or come out to do battle with the king's fleet in the open waters.

The precise day upon which the ἀνάπλους took place and battle was offered, but not accepted, by the Greeks, is clearly the day before the actual battle, and as such would apparently coincide with the day in cc. 64, 65 supra, of the earthquake by sea and land, and the vision of Dikaos and Demaratos. If an earthquake really took place that morning, it speaks volumes for the courage of the Persians that they were prepared to go out to battle.

4. οἱ δὲ παρεσκευάζοντο ἐς τὴν ὑστεραίην: these words can hardly cover a return to land, and a fresh start, so to speak; rather the implication seems to be that the Persian fleet remained at sea. The δέ is associated with the grammatical subject, iterated for sake of emphasis (cp. 7. 50).

5. τοὺς δὲ Ἕλληνας: the scene shifts back to the Greek laager, the time is not changed, the day in c. 64 above coinciding with the day in this, but night has apparently fallen, and the tone of the narrative, the temper of the Greeks, is completely transformed! There they had decided to do battle (but not for a day or two, not until they can summon, or fetch, the Aiakids from Aigina!): here they are seized with fear and trembling.

6. αὐτοὶ μὲν: the antithesis is indirectly supplied below by τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων κτλ. They were likely to be shut up in Salamis, while the Peloponnesos was being invaded by the land-forces of the Persians (Artemisia's plan, cp. c. 68). The sequence μέλλοιεν—πολιορκήσονται—ἐπορεύετο is observable. Stein takes the last sentence (τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων κτλ.) as simply explanatory of the words immediately preceding: other editors make it begin a new chapter or paragraph.

8. νικηθέντες . . . πολιορκήσονται: cp. c. 49 supra, εἰ νικηθῶσι τῇ ναυμαχίᾳ

τὴν ἐωυτῶν ἀφύλακτον. τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων ὁ πεζὸς ὑπὸ τὴν 71 παρῶσαν νύκτα ἐπορεύετο ἐπὶ τὴν Πελοπόννησον. καίτοι τὰ δυνατὰ πάντα ἐμεμηχάνητο ὅπως κατ' ἤπειρον μὴ ἐσβάλοιεν οἱ βάρβαροι. ὥς γὰρ ἐπύθοντο τάχιστα Πελοποννήσιοι τοὺς
 5 ἐκ τῶν πολλῶν ἐς τὸν Ἴσθμὸν ἵζοντο, καὶ σφί ἐπὶ στρατηγὸς Κλεόμβροτος ὁ Ἀναξανδρίδew, Λεωνίδew δὲ ἀδελφεός. ἰζόμενοι

71. 2 τὰ δυνατὰ del. Krueger, van H. || ἐμβάλοιεν B: ἐσβάλλοιεν z
 4 λεωνίδα B 5 τὲ ἐκ B 6 ὁ om. α

ἐν Σαλαμῇ μὲν ὄντες πολιορκήσονται ἐν νήσῳ. The Greeks, in fact, are back in the state of mind before—or perhaps more truly just after—the capture of the Akropolis; the resolution of the preceding night goes for nothing. Artemisia, c. 68 supra, seems to deny the possibility of their standing a siege in the island, for lack of provision. There is no similar suggestion here. She, however, had advised the king to avoid battle at sea, and restrict his naval operations to a blockade. The Greeks anticipate a defeat.

9. τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων . . ἐπὶ τὴν Πελοπόννησον: we must suppose this a fact, even if it is an element in their fear. Towards nightfall on the day on which the Persian fleet had moved up on Salamis, the Persian army was known to be on the march for the Isthmos, moving in the cool. The movement of the army must surely stand in some relation to the movement of the fleet; Artemisia had proposed it as an alternative (c. 68 supra).

Were Dikaioi and Demaratos with this army, or army-column, when they had their vision, c. 65 supra?

Was there, in fact, any demonstration by land against the Peloponnesos? From Eleusis to the Isthmos was some thirty miles. Was some movement of the land-forces, designed to enable them to co-operate with the fleet in the impending battle, misinterpreted as an advance on the Peloponnesos? Or is the march quite surely timed? Is it certain that it took place just on this day, and at nightfall? There is a considerable margin of possible error in this assertion. The comprehension of strategic movements and plans depends upon the nicest chronological accuracy of days and hours; and it is risky work reconstructing them from so casual and haphazard a writer as Hdt.

ὑπὸ τὴν παρῶσαν νύκτα, cp. 9. 58 infra.

71. 1. καίτοι, 'and yet'—they need not have been so mightily afraid, nor was their own country ἀφύλακτος—it had been rendered impregnable, as far as the land route was concerned: and they must have known it! There were three measures of defence: i. The Σκιρωνίς ὁδὸς had been broken up and rendered impassable. ii. A wall had been built across the isthmus. iii. Just behind that wall was laagered a large army, under command of the Spartan Regent. Yes, κατ' ἤπειρον Peloponnesos was safe. A movement of the Persian army in that direction could not have caused consternation in Salamis. Had the Persian fleet shown signs of moving in that direction there would have been more ground for apprehension; cp. c. 68 supra.

2. ἐμεμηχάνητο: the pluperfect here has its full temporal force, as also τετελευτηκέναι just below.

3. ὥς . . τάχιστα, 'as soon as ever' they knew the fate of Leonidas and his men. How soon would that have been? Long before the arrival of the Persian in Attica, and even before the arrival of the Greek fleet at Salamis. What follows might almost seem to be regarded by Hdt. as a spontaneous, and so fortuitous, concourse of armed men to the Isthmos: no doubt the movement was in response to Spartan command. But the army may have been under orders to mobilize, nay, may have been under way. Was not this the very force that should have been in Boiotia? Cp. c. 40 supra.

6. Κλεόμβροτος ὁ Ἀναξανδρίδew, Λεωνίδew δὲ ἀδελφεός. Not much can be made out of this notice under the head of Composition; see 7. 205 supra. The mere patronymic would prove little. Yet this passage may be δὲ ἐν τῷ Ἴσθμῳ καὶ συγχώσαντες τὴν Σκιρωνίδα ὁδόν, μετὰ τοῦτο ὡς σφί ἔδοξε βουλευομένοισι, οἰκοδόμεον διὰ τοῦ Ἴσθμοῦ τεῖχος. ἅτε δὲ ἐουσέων μυριάδων πολλέων καὶ παντὸς ἀνδρὸς ἐργαζόμενον, ἦνετο τὸ ἔργον· καὶ γὰρ λίθοι καὶ πλίνθοι καὶ 10 ξύλα καὶ φορμοὶ ψάμμον πλήρεις ἐσεφέροντο, καὶ ἐλύνουν οὐδένα χρόνον οἱ βοηθήσαντες ἐργαζόμενοι, οὔτε νυκτὸς οὔτε

7 σκειρωνίδα B, van H. 8 οἰκοδόμεον z 9 μυριάδων ABP:
μυριαδέων 10 ἦνετο A<sup>1</sup>B: ἦρετο C: ἦννετο 11 ἐσεφορέοντο B, of older composition than the other, as it almost certainly is older than 5. 41. Why does not Hdt. add here that Kleombrotos was Regent for Pleistarchos? Cp. 9. 10 infra.
Holder, van H.

7. τὴν Σκιρωνίδα ὁδόν: between Megara and Krommyon, and so to the Isthmos; Strabo 391 μετὰ δὲ Κρομμυῶνα ἐπερκεῖνται τῆς Ἀττικῆς <ἀκτῆς> αἱ Σκειρωνίδες πέτραι πάροδον οὐκ ἀπολείπονται πρὸς θαλάττῃ· ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν δ' ἐστὶν ἡ ὁδὸς ἢ ἐπὶ Μεγάρων καὶ τῆς Ἀττικῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἴσθμοῦ· οὕτω δὲ σφόδρα πλησιάζει ταῖς πέτραις ἡ ὁδὸς ὥστε πολλαχοῦ καὶ παράκρημνός ἐστι διὰ τὸ ὑπερκείμενον ὄρος δυσβατόν τε καὶ ὀψήλόν: Pausanias I. 44. 7 (10) τὴν δὲ ὀνομαζομένην ἀπὸ Σκίρωνος καὶ ἐν τῷδε (ὁδῷ) Σκίρων, ἠνίκα Μεγαρεῦσιν ἐπολεμάρχει, πρῶτος, ὡς λέγουσιν, ἐποίησεν ἀνδράσιν ὀδεῖν εὐζώνους. Ἀδριανὸς δὲ [δ] βασιλεὺς καὶ οὕτως, ὡς καὶ ἦν ἄρματα ἐναντία εἰσάγεται, κατέστησεν εὐρυχωρή τε καὶ ἐπιτηδεῖαν εἶναι. It is described as it existed in the middle of the last century, a proverbial Via Mala (Kaki Skala), in Curtius's Peloponnesos i. (1851), p. 9, when it was again a mere foot-path. But Hadrian can hardly have been absolutely the first to make it available for vehicles. Perhaps the Peloponnesians on this occasion were destroying a road adapted for wheels. The verb συγχώσαντες implies a made road or causeway. (skíros perhaps means 'hard-rock.' Strabo 393 mentions Σκιρῆς among several old names for the island of Salamis; cp. c. 94 infra.) There went at least one (cp. Blakesley, Rawlinson), if not two, other roads (Curtius l.c.) through the Megarid to the Peloponnesos: the Skironian was the shortest, and, bad as it may have been, presumably the easiest.

8. ὡς σφί ἔδοξε βουλευομένοισι suggests a formal and deliberate plan, without precisely dating it. There was room for discussion: ought they not to have marched into Boiotia? Cp. c. 40 supra. They substitute the defence of the Peloponnesos for the defence of Attica.

οἰκοδόμεον διὰ τοῦ Ἴσθμοῦ τεῖχος. It was not finished for some time—not till the summer of 479 B.C., if we may trust 9. 8 infra. Blakesley remarks that the wall was not built at the narrowest point of the isthmus, but further south, from Lechaem to Cenchreae (cp. Pausan. 7. 6. 7), "with a view of preventing a debarkation <immediately> in the rear of the defending force." E. Curtius, however, Pelop. i. 14, places the wall at the narrowest part; cp. below.

9. μυριάδων πολλέων: a vague but large estimate, which, if anywhere near the truth, makes it the more surprising that the work was still unfinished in the following summer; 9. 8 infra.

10. ἦνετο: from ἄνω, 'radic. form of ἀνώ, ἀνώτω'; cp. 7. 20 supra; II. 18. 473 ὅπως Ἡφαιστός τ' ἐθέλοι καὶ ἔργον ἀνοίτο. The imperfect tense is here emphatic. The materials of the wall are remarkable. λίθοι for foundation; πλίνθοι for the superstructure; ξύλα for palisading, towers, etc.; φορμοὶ ψάμμον, either to be used for filling holes or the sand for making mortar.

The visible traces of building which still remain hardly go back to 480 B.C. The wall seems to have been rebuilt in 279 B.C. (Pausan. l.c. supra), as also by Valerian 253 A.D., and three centuries later by Justinian, and in modern times by the Venetians against the Turk; cp. Curtius l.c.; Baedeker's Greece (1889), p. 233. The line of wall is immediately south of the Diolkos (cp. Strabo 335).

11. ἐλύνουν: cp. 7. 56 supra.

72 ἡμέρης. οἱ δὲ βοηθήσαντες ἐς τὸν Ἴσθμὸν πανδημί οἷδε ἦσαν Ἑλλήνων, Λακεδαιμόνιοι τε καὶ Ἀρκάδες πάντες καὶ Ἡλείοι καὶ Κορίνθιοι καὶ Σικυνῶνιοι καὶ Ἐπιδαύριοι καὶ Φλειάσιοι καὶ Τροιζήνιοι καὶ Ἑρμιονέες. οὗτοι μὲν ἦσαν οἱ βοηθήσαντες
5 καὶ ὑπεραρρωδέοντες τῇ Ἑλλάδι κινδυνευούσῃ· τοῖσι δὲ

72. 1 βοηθήσαντες B, van H. || πανδημί οἷδε Holder, van H.: πανδημί οἷδε α: πανδημί οἷδε Stein: πανδήμοι δὲ B || ἦσαν z (bis) 2 καὶ πάντες RV 4 βοηθήσαντες B, (ὑπεραρρωδέοντες καὶ βοηθήσαντες, van H.)

72. 1. οἱ δὲ βοηθήσαντες . . πανδημί: evidently some great credit is taken for this βοήθεια: in six lines the title or term is used thrice, the effort is emphasized (πανδημί), the complete list of folks represented in the muster is given nominatim, the rest of the Peloponnesians are stigmatized for their indifference. Yet, in truth, what the Spartans and their allies deserved was a severe censure for broken pledges, and the selfish abandonment of Attica. This Isthmian wall was no credit to the Peloponnesians, and hardly consistent with Spartan principles (though they had used the wall at Thermopylai likewise, 7. 176 supra). The levy for Plataia was also πανδημί, i.e. the two-thirds, or all save οἱ πρεσβύτεροι and οἱ νεώτεροι, and the figures for Plataia would give a total here of not less than 22,000 hoplites, while, of course, large masses of ψιλοὶ and of slaves would have been employed upon the actual building.

2. Λακεδαιμόνιοι. It is perhaps not to be assumed that Sparta sent as many men to the Isthmos in 480 B.C. as to Plataia in 479 B.C. (supposing the figures for the latter to be correct, 9. 28).

Ἀρκάδες πάντες. Tegea, Mantinea, Orchomenos would certainly be included—and probably other places. The phrase is remarkable, as though relative to a καιὸν τῶν Ἀρκάδων. At Thermopylai the Arcadians are represented by 2120 men, 7. 202. But what of the medizers, c. 26 supra?

Ἡλείοι: no figure is given for their contingent at Plataia; cp. 9. 77 infra. They could number at least 1000 hoplites.

3. Κορίνθιοι, if they sent 5000 to Plataia, might certainly send 5000 to the Isthmos, though they have a squadron at Salamis, and had only sent 400 to Thermopylai; 7. 202.

Σικυνῶνιοι had at least fifteen ships at Salamis (cp. c. 43 supra), and sent 3000 hoplites to Plataia.

Ἐπιδαύριοι—like Korinth represented at Salamis, and by ten ships—sent but 800 hoplites to Plataia.

Φλειάσιοι have a Chiliad at Plataia in 479 B.C., but only 200 at Thermopylai, 7. 202 supra, and are unrepresented at Salamis.

4. Τροιζήνιοι have five ships at Salamis, and send 1000 men to Plataia next year.

Ἑρμιονέες have three ships at Salamis, and were to send 300 hoplites to Plataia.

This list of nine states named as sending contingents to the Isthmos is curious, and not on the face of it authoritative. The figures for each contingent are left to be inferred or conjectured; and, what is worse, there may be omissions in it. Were not the Megarians too, who had twenty ships at Salamis, and sent 3000 hoplites to Plataia in 479 B.C., also behind the wall? The order in which the contingents are named is odd, the Phleiasians at least curiously breaking into the geographical continuity.

5. καὶ ὑπεραρρωδέοντες: i.e. they are more afraid even than their fellow-citizens at Salamis! For themselves—or for the fleet? Only the latter would be to their credit: the fate of Hellas hung on the fleet. If so, the βοήθεια at the Isthmos must be conceived as intended to co-operate with the fleet: perhaps Kleombrotos is counting on the fleet falling back on the Isthmos.

τοῖσι δὲ ἄλ. Π. ἔμλε οὐδέν: a sentence which obviously betrays the apologetic purpose of the passage; it must be false, so far as the list is incomplete, and it is hardly likely to have been strictly true in any case—even of Argos, etc.

ἄλλοισι Πελοποννησίοισι ἔμελε οὐδέν. Ὀλύμπια δὲ καὶ Κάρνεια παροιχώκεε ἥδη. οἰκέει δὲ τὴν Πελοπόννησον ἔθνεα 73
ἐπτά, τούτων δὲ τὰ μὲν δύο αὐτόχθονα ἔοντα κατὰ χώραν ἴδρυται νῦν τε καὶ τὸ πάλαι [οἴκεον], Ἀρκάδες τε καὶ

6 ἔμελε P: ἔμελλε α (-ν B) 7 κάρνια BP 73. 2 τούτων ::
αὐτόχθονα B 3 τε: τῇ Schaefer, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H.: τὴν Koen ||
οἴκεον secl. Stein<sup>2</sup> (τε redintegrato) || τε om. ::

6. Ὀλύμπια . . Κάρνεια . . ἥδη appears to be a clear reference back to 7. 206 supra, and a reference of a kind which could occur only in a work intended for a reading public. The passing of the festivals sets the Peloponnesians free to occupy the Isthmos παρρημῖ. But the story has advanced long past the Olympia: the 'night' in c. 70 supra is the night of Boëdromion 20. One might perhaps suppose with safety that as soon as the Olympia were over, certainly as soon as the news of the end of Leonidas reached Sparta, the move to the Isthmos was made—if, indeed, it was not rather a halt of the forces which were on their way into Central Greece, to support Leonidas (cp. 7. 203 supra), or to cover Attica (c. 40 supra).

73. 1. ἔθνεα ἐπτά: Hdt. gives the ethnography of the Peloponnesos, not its geographical divisions, which only partially coincide with the ethnography. Of the seven ἔθνεα therein, Hdt. regards two as autochthonous and in occupation of their original seats, viz. Arkadians and Kynurians; a third, the Achaïans, as autochthonous, but migrant within the Peloponnesos itself. The four others are immigrant, ἐπηλύδα, Dorians, Aitolians, Dryopians, Lemnians; see further the notes below. The Homeric Catalogue may be taken as recognizing six groups in Peloponnesos (II. 2. 559-624): i. of δ' Ἄργιοι τ' εἶχον κτλ. (559-568) = Argolis. ii. αἱ δὲ Μυκῆρας εἶχον κτλ. (569-580) = Achaia. iii. οἱ δ' εἶχον κολῆν Λακεδαιμόνα κτλ. (581-590) = Lakonia. iv. οἱ δὲ Μεσσην κτλ. (591-602) = Messenia. v. οἱ δ' ἔχον Ἀρκαδίην κτλ. (603-614) = Arkadia. vi. οἱ δ' ἄρα Βουπράσιόν τε καὶ Ἥλιδα δῖον ἔναϊον κτλ. (615-624) = Elis. Thucyd. 1. 10. 2 may be understood to divide the Peloponnesos into five equal fractions, assigning two to the Spartans—a division which disregards ethnology and geography alike; unless, indeed, we are to read it in the light of Pausan. 5. 1. 1—a passage obviously composed in view of Thucydides: δοσι δὲ Ἑλλήνων Πελοποννήσου πέντε εἶναι μοίρας καὶ οὐ πλείονας φασιν, ἀνάγκη σφᾶς ὁμολογεῖν, ὡς ἐν τῇ Ἀρκάδων οἰκούσιν Ἠλείοι καὶ Ἀρκάδες, δευτέρα δὲ Ἀχαιοῶν, τρεῖς δὲ ἐπὶ ταύταις αἱ Δωριέων (sc. Messenia, Lakonia, Argolis). Thucydides, by the way, reckons Messenia as part of Lakonia, in accordance with the political situation in his own time, which clearly shows that his 'fifths' are arithmetical fractions, not geographical. Pausanias continues (with an obvious reference to this passage in Hdt.): γένη δὲ οἰκεῖ Πελοπόννησον Ἀρκάδες μὲν αὐτόχθονες καὶ Ἀχαιοί. καὶ οἱ μὲν ὑπὸ Δωριέων ἐκ τῆς σφετέρης ἀνέστησαν, οὐ μέντοι Πελοποννήσου γε ἐξεχώρησαν, ἀλλὰ ἐκβαλόντες Ἴωνας νέμονται τὸν Αἰγιάλιν τὸ ἀρχαῖον, νῦν δὲ ἀπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν τοῦτων καλούμενον· οἱ δὲ Ἀρκάδες διατελοῦσιν ἐξ ἀρχῆς καὶ ἐς τὸδε τὴν αὐτῶν ἔχοντες. τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ ἐπηλύδων ἐστὶν ἀνθρώπων. Κορινθιοὶ μὲν γὰρ οἱ νῦν . . Δρύοπτες δὲ καὶ Δωριεῖς, οἱ μὲν ἐκ Παρνασοῦ, Δωριεῖς δὲ ἐκ τῆς Οἰτῆς ἐς Πελοπόννησόν εἰσιν ἀφιγμένοι. τοὺς Ἠλείους ἴσμεν ἐκ Καλυδῶνος διαβεβηκότας καὶ Αἰτωλίας τῆς ἄλλης. Pausanias then specifies—for the Hellenic period—Arkadians, Achaïans, (Ionians), Dorians, Dryopians, Aitolians. (Could ἱ' or η' have dropped out after γένη δὲ?)

2. κατὰ χώραν ἴδρυται emphasizes the local fixity of the two autochthonous ἔθνεα specified.

3. νῦν τε καὶ τὸ πάλαι: the date of this 'Now' is unfortunately obscure; no doubt the remark would hold good of any day in Hdt.'s whole life, but the precise date of the composition of this chapter is a curiosity; cp. Introduction, § 9.

The passage contains five illustrations of the force of τε καὶ worth observing: here, (1) of the absolute continuity of past and present; just below, (2) of Arkadians and Kynurians, as belonging to one class, and further, (3) of Dorians

Κυνούριοι· ἐν δὲ ἔθνος τὸ Ἀχαικὸν ἐκ μὲν Πελοποννήσου 5 οὐκ ἐξεχώρησε, ἐκ μέντοι τῆς ἐωντῶν, οἰκείει δὲ τὴν ἀλλοτρίην.
 τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ ἔθνεα τῶν ἑπτὰ <τὰ> τέσσερα ἐπήλυδα ἐστί, Δωριέες τε καὶ Αἰτωλοὶ καὶ Δρύοπες καὶ Λήμνιοι· Δωριέων

4 ἀχαιῶν A<sup>2</sup>BP: ἀχαιῶν
 7 καὶ Δωριέων z

6 <τὰ> Stein<sup>3</sup> || τέσσαρα CR

and Aitolians, who came in perhaps together, (4) of Hermion and Asine, cities of one folk, while (5) in 'the many famous cities' the conjunction is so close as to disappear altogether in our idiom.

Ἀρκάδες: to Hdt. the Arkadians are Pelasgians, cp. 1. 146, 2. 171, and βαλανηφάγοι ἄνδρες ap. orac. 1. 66. Tegea (1. 66 etc.), Mantinea (4. 161 etc.), Orchomenos (7. 202), Nonakris (6. 74), Pheneos (ibid.), Phigaleia (6. 83), Trapezus (6. 127), Paion (ibid.), Dipaia (9. 35), and indirectly Stymphalos (6. 76), are mentioned among the cities of Arkadia. Arkadians are serving on the king's fleet from Kypros (7. 90), and perhaps as mercenaries in his army (c. 26 supra).

4. Κυνούριοι, described just below as Ionians, and nowhere else mentioned expressly by Hdt. Thuc. 4. 56. 2 enables us to identify their territory: ἀφικνούνται ἐπὶ Θυρέαν, ἥ ἐστι μὲν τῆς Κυνουρίας γῆς καλουμένης μεθορία δὲ τῆς Ἀργείας καὶ Λακωνικῆς: cp. 5. 14. 4, and 41. 2 περὶ τῆς Κυνουρίας γῆς ἥς αἰεὶ περὶ διαφέρονται μεθορίας οὖσης (ἔχει δὲ ἐν αὐτῇ Θυρέαν καὶ Ἀνθήλην πόλιν, νέμονται δ' αὐτὴν Λακεδαιμόνιοι). The great chapter out of the ἔρις περὶ χώρου καλεομένου Θυρέης is told above 1. 82; of Kynurian Anthele Hdt. appears to know nothing; and it is remarkable that in one place he speaks of Thyrea as the χώρη in debate. All this does not look as if he had knowledge of the operations in the district during the Archidamian war (424 B.C., Thuc. 4. 56, 57) or even of the settlement of the Aiginetans there after their expatriation in 431 B.C. (6. 91, Thuc. 2. 27. 2).

τὸ Ἀχαικόν: what the strict ethnological relation of the Achaians to the Pelasgians (Arkadians) and Ionians of the Peloponnese Hdt. nowhere clearly indicates. Were they also (in his opinion) Pelasgians? Topographically he must place them south of their historic province, probably in Lakonia. Historic Achaia, with its Dodekapolis, had been Ionian before it was Achaian, according to Hdt. 1. 145. The relation of the ἐκ μὲν Πελοποννήσου οὐκ ἐξεχώρησε: is it possible that Hdt. did not trace the 'Achaian' settlements in Italy to the Peloponnesos? Or the 'Achaians' in Kreta to the same source (Od. 19. 175)? Or does he merely mean by these words that the Achaian stock has not completely evacuated the Peloponnese, though it has shifted from one place to another within it? τῆς ἐωντῶν: sc. historic Lakonia. τὴν ἀλλοτρίην: sc. historic Achaia.

'Achaians' of Peloponnesos to the 'Achaians' of Thessaly is not a problem about which Hdt. concerns himself; cp. 7. 196 supra.

7. Δωριέες: the legend of the Dorian invasion, or of 'the Return of the Herakleids,' is in part narrated 9. 28 infra, and everywhere presupposed in Hdt.; cp. c. 31 supra.

Αἰτωλοὶ: Hdt. apparently is acquainted with a form of the legend, which made Aitolians accompany or guide the Dorian invaders from 'Naupaktos'; but he nowhere expressly refers to the legend of Oxylos (Pausan. 5. 3. 5).

Δρύοπες: the 'Dryopian' invasion of the Peloponnesos, which left its mark in Hermion and Asine, is doubtless conceived by the Greek historians as long prior to the Dorian, though it started, according to one story, from the same quarter or cradle (Strabo 434 τὴν Δρυοπίδα τετράπολιν γενομένην ποτε καθάπερ καὶ τὴν Δωρίδα, μητρόπολιν δὲ τῶν ἐν Πελοποννήσῳ Δρυόπων νομιζομένην). They had quarrelled with Herakles in their native Dryopis, and been banished by him to the South. (Diodoros 4. 37; Strabo, etc.) The geographical positions of the Dryopians in historical times (cp. c. 43 supra) suggests a sea-route for the migration—if, indeed, the whole legend be not a fiction, and the Dryopians of historic times fragments of a wide-spread stratum of early population. According to 'Aristotle' ap. Strabon. 373 Dryops was an Arkadian.

Λήμνιοι, evidently a consequence of the legend narrated 4. 145; but μὲν πολλαί τε καὶ δόκιμοι πόλεις, Αἰτωλῶν δὲ Ἥλις μούνη, Δρυόπων δὲ Ἑρμιῶν τε καὶ Ἀσίνῃ ἢ πρὸς Καρδαμύλῃ τῇ Λακωνικῇ, Λημνίων δὲ Παρωρεῖται πάντες. οἱ δὲ Κυνοῦριοι 10 αὐτόχθονες ἔοντες δοκέουσι μῶνοι εἶναι Ἴωνες, ἐκδεδωρίενται

8 πόλεις α: πόλεις C 9 ἑρμιων Α<sup>1</sup>Β: ἑρμιῶν R: ἑρμηῶν
V: ἑρμιῶν A<sup>2</sup>C: ἑρμιόνη PSz 10 παρωραιῇται B(S?) 11
ἐκδεδωρίενται Pz: ἐκ δὲ δωρίενται B: ἐκδεδωρίᾱται α: ἐκδεδωρίωνται Valckenaer, van H.: ἐκδεδωρίδαται Dindorf

*Lemnian' is hardly an ethnic designation. Why does not Hdt. here call them Minyai? Does he expect his readers to have that passage in mind? And is this passage of later composition or insertion? (Cp. Introduction, § 9.) But see below.

8. δόκιμοι πόλεις: e.g. Sparta, Argos, Corinth, Sikyon, Phleis, Epidaurus, Troizen, et al.

*Ἥλις μούνη. This phrase can hardly be quoted (as by Blakesley) to prove that the passage is 'a later addition' to the work of Hdt., for even if Strabo 336 were right in saying that the city of Elis did not exist at the time of the Persian war, still it existed before any part of the work of Hdt. But Strabo probably overstates his case. Elis increased owing to a συνοικισμός shortly after the Persian war, Diodor. 11. 54. 1 (471 B.C.) (cp. 4. 148 supra), but there was a city of Elis already; cp. Homer, Il. 2. 615, cited above.

9. Ἑρμιῶν, cp. c. 43 supra, in the S.E. of the Argolis peninsula. It was celebrated as the spot from which there was the shortest cut down to Hades. Strabo 373.

*Ἀσίνῃ: the place here mentioned is on the east coast of Messenia, i.e. on the west side of the Μεσσηνιακὸς κόλπος (Strabo 359), not to be confused with the Asine in Lakonia, in the neighbourhood of Helos, visited by the Athenians in 424 B.C. (Thuc. 4. 54. 4), though possibly identical with the Asine mentioned in two other places in Thucydides (4. 13. 1, 6. 93. 3). It may have derived its name from an older settlement in close proximity to Hermion, Il. 2. 560, the inhabitants of which sided with the Spartans in the Messenian and Argive wars, and were expelled by the Argives, but given a new home by the Lakedaemonians, Strabo 373; Pausan. 2. 36. 4, 3. 7. 4.

ἢ πρὸς Καρδαμύλῃ: expressly to distinguish it from the one in Argolis, which, if still existing, was a mere village (Strabo l.c.). But has Hdt. correctly located it, or can πρὸς here mean 'opposite' 'over against'? Kardamyle was in the realm of Menelaos of old: σημείον δέ· ἐκ γὰρ τοῦ Μεσσηνιακοῦ κόλπου καὶ τοῦ συνεχοῦς Ἀσιναίου λεγομένου ἀπὸ τῆς Μεσσηνιακῆς Ἀσίνης αἱ ἐπὶ τὰ ἦσαν πόλεις, ἀς ὑπέσχετο δάσσειν ὁ Ἀγαμέμνων τῷ Ἀχιλλεῖ "Καρδαμύλῃν Ἐνὸπνῃν τε κτλ." (Il. 9. 150, 295) Strabo 359. Bursian (ii. 154) describes it as situate about 5 miles (zwei Stunden) N. of Leuktra, and 1 mile (20 min.) from the coast, upon a steep rock, the village still preserving the name, Skardamyla.

τῇ Λακωνικῇ: to distinguish it from any other place of the same name, e.g. the city on Chios mentioned by Thucyd. 8. 24. 3.

10. Παρωρεῖται: according to 4. 148 the 'Paroreatai' and 'Kaukonos' had been driven out of their cities by the Minyai (i.e. the Lemnians); here Hdt. appears to identify the Paroreatai with the Lemnians (i.e. Minyai) or with a part of them. The two passages must be regarded as independent, even though the Lemnian legend underlies this one. The two peoples stood on the same ground. Strabo 346 ἐλέγοντο δὲ Παρωρεῖται τινὲς τῶν ἐν τῇ Τριφυλίᾳ κατέχοντες ὄρη περὶ τὸ Λέπρειον καὶ τὸ Μάκιστον καθήκοντα ἐπὶ θάλατταν πλησίον τοῦ Σαμακοῦ ποσείδιου. The name no doubt means the inhabitants of the Παρωρεῖα, which means 'the Highland'—though why L. & S. place this particular Paroreia in 'Arcadia', unless by confusion with the town mentioned by Pausanias 8. 27. 3, is not obvious. The name is found in Thrace (Livy 39. 27) and even on the Euxine (C.I.G. 2053, B 17).

11. μῶνοι εἶναι Ἴωνες: Hdt. appears to think that the 'Kynurians' were Ionians, and the only Ionians remaining in the Peloponnesos. As they occupy their original abode, he must conceive

δὲ ὑπὸ τε Ἀργείων ἀρχόμενοι καὶ τοῦ χρόνου, ἔοντες Ὀρνεῖται [καὶ οἱ περίοικοι]. τούτων ὦν τῶν ἐπτα ἔθνων αἱ λοιπαὶ πόλεις, πᾶρες τῶν κατέλεξα, ἐκ τοῦ μέσου κατέατο· εἰ δὲ 15 ἐλευθέρως ἔξεστι εἰπεῖν, ἐκ τοῦ μέσου κατήμενοι ἐμῆδιζον.

74 Οἱ μὲν δὴ ἐν τῷ Ἰσθμῷ τοιούτῳ πόνῳ συνέστασαν ἅτε
περὶ τοῦ παντὸς ἤδη [δρόμου] θέοντες καὶ τῇσι νηυσὶ οὐκ

12 ἀρχόμενοι del. Cobet, van H. || καὶ ὑπὸ τοῦ (participio retento)
Schaefer, Krueger || χρόνου <προϊόντος> Stein<sup>2</sup> || ὀρνεῖται α 13
καὶ οἱ περίοικοι secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>: οἱ om. β: verba ἔοντες . . περίοικοι mihi suspecta || τουτέων βΡ<sup>2</sup> 14 πόλις α: πόλεις C || ἐκατέατο α:
ἐκατέατο β 15 εἶπαι 2, van H. 74. 2 δρόμου del. Lobeck:
an δρόμον?

the Ionians as originally occupying more ground in the Peloponnesos than the historic Achaia.

ἐκδεωρύνονται, 'they have become' more Dorian than the Dorians, or, at least, 'thoroughly dorized.' Cp. App. Crit. But what to Hdt. were the notes of Dorism, apart from descent?—dialect, 1. 139; dress, 5. 88; organization, 5. 68; perhaps cult, 5. 72. It is, indeed, curious how little there is to distinguish the Dorians as such; but of course to Hdt. they are the Ἕλληνες κατ' ἐξοχήν: cp. 1. 56, 5. 88, 7. 93 etc. At the time Hdt. wrote this passage Thyrea can hardly yet have been in the hands of the Aiginetans; in other words, it makes against the theory of the late composition of Bks. 7–9 (cp. Introduction, § 9), and even against dating the composition, or insertion, of this chapter to the final revision (ibid. § 10).

12. ὑπὸ τε Ἀργείων ἀρχόμενοι καὶ τοῦ χ.: the participle is exegetical, after Argives, χρόνου is in direct regimen from the preposition, 'by their subjection to the Argives and by lapse of time.' Stein's last lection (cp. App. Crit.), reducing the construction to a simple genit. absol., waters down a forcible phrase.

Ὀρνεῖται: Orneai is known to the Homeric Catalogue, Il. 2. 571, in the Mykenaian (or Achaian) group (cp. 1. 1 supra); it certainly was not in Kynuria; cp. Strabo 376, Pausan. 2. 25. 5. If this whole phrase be not (as I suspect) a gloss (cp. App. Crit.), it must be inferred, with K. O. Müller (Dorier<sup>2</sup> i. 85, 160, etc.), that Orneai had been reduced by Argos before the Persian war, or at least before the date of Hdt.'s composition, and that, like the Caerites at Rome, the Orneatai gave their name to a political status—resembling that of the perioikoi in Laconia.

At the battle of Mantinea in 418 B.C. the Orneatai are described, with the Kleonaians, as ἐόμμοχοι of the Argives (Thuc. 5. 67. 2), and the reduction and destruction of Orneai is recorded later, in 415 B.C. (Thuc. 6. 7. 2). The city was at that time occupied by Argive exiles, supported by a Lakedaemonian garrison (Diodor. 12. 81. 4).

14. πᾶρες τῶν κατέλεξα: the construction is by attraction. The phrase, remarkable as a reference back to c. 72, might perhaps support the view that c. 73 is a later insertion from the author's hand; or would not Hdt. have used the perfect rather than the aorist if cc. 72–73 had been originally written in einem Flug?

εἰ δὲ ἐλευθέρως ἔξεστι εἰπεῖν. Why should there be any difficulty about free speech, free writing? Hdt. has an audience, or a reading public in view, which may be offended by his verdict. Is that public found in the 'Achaian' colonies of Italy? Or in Athens, at a time when the alliance with Argos, with Achaia, might be 'in the air'? The ethnography of the Peloponnesos might have had special interest for either public.

15. ἐκ τοῦ μέσου κατήμενοι ἐμῆδιζον. This verdict appears much more severe than the apology for the Argives in 7. 152 supra, and might well belong to a different stratum, a different draft, in the composition of the work.

74. 1. πόνῳ συνέστασαν: cp. λιμῷ συνεστεώτας 7. 170, and ἔχοντι δὲ οἱ τοῦτον τὸν πόνον 1. 206. Baehr observes that συνέστασαν is plus-quam perfectum in sense, and compares κατέστησαν 2. 30.

2. περὶ . . θέοντες: cp. 7. 57 περὶ

ἐλπίζοντες ἐλλάμψεσθαι· οἳ δὲ ἐν Σαλαμῖνι ὁμῶς ταῦτα πυνθανόμενοι ἀρρώδεον, οὐκ οὕτω περὶ σφίσι αὐτοῖσι δειμαίνοντες ὥς περὶ τῇ Πελοποννήσῳ. τέως μὲν δὴ αὐτῶν ἀνὴρ 5 ἀνδρὶ παραστάς σιγῇ λόγον ἐποιέετο, θῶμα ποιεύμενοι τὴν Εὐρυβιάδew ἀβουλίην· τέλος δὲ ἐξερράγη ἐς τὸ μέσον. σύλλογός τε δὴ ἐγίνετο καὶ πολλὰ ἐλέγετο περὶ τῶν αὐτῶν, οἳ μὲν ὥς ἐς τὴν Πελοπόννησον χρεὼν εἶη ἀποπλέειν καὶ 8 περὶ ἐκείνης κινδυνεύειν μηδὲ πρὸ χώρας δοριαλώτου μένοντας 10

3 ἐλλάμψεσθαι CP: ἐλάμψεσθαι z: ἐνλάμψεσθαι || σαλαμῖνι ἔλληνες B || πυνθανόμενοι ταῦτα B 5 πελοποννήσῳ B(?) || τέως Reiske: ἔως || αὐτέων z 6 θῶμα Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup> || ποιεύμενος z: ποιεόμενος B 8 αὐτέων z 9 χρεὼν CPdz || ἀποπλέειν Bz, van H. 10 δοριαλάτου z

εἰντοῦ τρέχων. δρόμον might be better than δρόμου; cp. App. Crit.

τῇσι v. οὐκ ἔλπ. ἐλλάμψεσθαι, 'having no hope (expectation) of success (glory) at sea.' Cp. 1. 80 τὸ ἱππικόν, τῷ δὴ τι καὶ ἐπεῖχε ἐλλάμψεσθαι ὁ Λυδός. But this despair at the Isthmos is unworthy (i.) of the previous record and present position of the fleet; (ii.) of the plan to co-operate therewith; (iii.) of the misgivings on the other side—probably not unknown to the Greeks. Moreover, strategically, it involves an absurdity, for unless the Greek fleet could hold its own against the Persian, the wall at the Isthmos would be worse than useless.

3. οἳ δὲ ἐν Σαλαμῖνι: the scene shifts back to the time and place of c. 70 supra, but the temper of the Greeks at Salamis is changed; there they were nervous on their own account, primarily anticipating defeat and blockade in Salamis, while Peloponneses was left exposed. Now, on hearing of the wall, the army, and all (ταῦτα πυνθανόμενοι), they drop their selfish fears and are terror-struck (ἀρρώδεον, cp. c. 72 and c. 70) on account of the Peloponneses! This argument and motivation is not very good. The ταῦτα might, perhaps, be referred, or made to include, the medium in the Peloponneses—but that was hardly news (πυνθανόμενοι) to them; and in any case the point remains that 'the Greeks' are not really afraid of the result of a naval battle, but wish to win it at the Isthmos.

5 ff. τέως μὲν δὴ, 'for a while'—there was only silent, or at least private, criticism (σιγῇ λόγον ἐποιέετο), one man to another, all expressing their astonishment at the folly of Eurybiades: at last (τέλος δέ) they could stand it no longer—things came to a head—the storm burst openly—a meeting came together, and the whole question was opened afresh. (ἐξερράγη, app. impers.; and cp. 3. 133 of a tumour (φύμα . . ἐκραγέν) and 6. 129 ἐκραγήναι ἐς τινα. ἐς τὸ μέσον, cp. 7. 152.)

Very graphic, but not quite coherent. Is this in the night which has come over the scene in c. 70 supra? The men are plainly ashore. Who are the actors, or speakers? The general body of Epibatai, or only the Strategoi? Is the σύλλογος a public meeting (cp. c. 83 infra), or is it the Synedrion? These points are not clear in the story, or in the mind of the historian.

8. περὶ τῶν αὐτῶν is rather obscure and clumsy, even if a reference back to the discussion reported cc. 59-63.

9. οἳ μὲν: sc. λέγοντες, as though ἐλεγον had immediately preceded; const. ad sensum.

These would be the Corinthians, and perhaps Sikyonians, Epidaurians, etc. They treat the ἀπὸ πλοῦς as still completely open to them. This could not be the case if the Persian fleet had, in c. 70, entered the straits and taken up a position facing the bay of Salamis. This party is prepared to fight, but proposes to change the venue.

10. περὶ . . πρὸ: the prepositions have both local and causal force.

δοριαλώτου: cp. 9. 4. The word looks poetical but is found in Xenophon and orators; cp. ἡ αἰχμή 7. 152 supra.

μάχεσθαι, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ καὶ Αἰγινῆται καὶ Μεγαρέες αὐτοῦ 75 μένοντας ἀμύνεσθαι. ἐνθαῦτα Θεμιστοκλῆς ὡς ἐσσοῦτο τῇ
γνώμῃ ὑπὸ τῶν Πελοποννησίων, λαθὼν ἐξέρχεται ἐκ τοῦ

11 δὲ: τε B

12 μένοντες B || ἀμυνέσθαι R: ἀμύνασθαι z

12. ἀμύνεσθαι rather suggests, though not quite conclusively, that they expect attack and are prepared to act on the defensive. The Athenians, Aeginetans, Megarians have a common interest, and pull together; cp. c. 60 supra.

75. 1. Θεμιστοκλῆς ὡς ἐσσοῦτο τῇ γνώμῃ: a strange phrase to be used of Themistokles! cp. 9. 122 infra. Themistokles surely had much the best of the argument, cp. c. 60 supra; and he is backed by the Aeginetans and Megarians. The phrase is, indeed, a concession to the necessities of the false tradition, which represents the Peloponnesians as resolved, at all costs, to abandon Salamis. But ἐσσοῦτο (i.q. ἤσσαντο) is of course imperfect, and therefore, perhaps, not quite conclusive.

2. λαθὼν ἐξέρχεται ἐκ τ. συνεδρίου. This is plainly a meeting of the Strategoi (cp. c. 78 infra), and it would be at least the third recorded in Hdt. (cp. cc. 49-56, 59-64 supra). It is apparently being holden at night—like the previous one!—and the night would be Boëdromion 20 (by Attic reckoning; cp. c. 65. 19), on which the Persian army was reported or believed to be moving ἐπὶ τὴν Πελοπόννησον, c. 70 supra, while the Persian fleet had been manœuvring all, or most of the day previous, with a view to bringing about a battle: ibid. These manœuvres, these movements, may well have given rise to fresh debate among the Greek Strategoi. The question would be, whether to assume the offensive, or to await attack: and if the offensive was to be assumed (as at Artemision, cp. c. 9 supra), at what particular point: were the Greeks to advance right out of the straits—as the Persians appeared to desire—and to encounter the king's fleet in comparatively open water? Or were they to allow, or to induce, the Persian admirals to enter the narrow waters, and to expose themselves, in entering, to a flank attack?

It is possible that the Peloponnesians were prepared to go out into the open waters: the move to the Isthmos, the selection of the open water there as the scene of the engagement which (all agreed) had to be fought somewhere, might almost justify the suspicion that the Peloponnesians were now advocating an advance against the Persian fleet in the open waters to the S. of Salamis. But such an hypothesis were rash. To fight in the open water off the Isthmos, the bay of Kenchreai, with the Peloponnesos immediately in the rear to fall back upon, is one thing; but in the open water off Salamis, another. The risk of being shut up and besieged in Salamis was, indeed, not in that case inevitable; they might make good their escape, if needs were, to the Peloponnesos; but still, with difficulty, and not without risk of being surrounded and cut off, which would not be possible, in the bay of Kenchreai.

To fight at Salamis, and in the narrow waters between Salamis and the Attic shore, was clearly the plan of Themistokles. But to procure the realization of this plan, the Persian fleet should enter the straits; and it had not yet done so (cp. c. 70 supra). His problem was to bring that movement about. The Persians presumably wished to fight in the open waters off Salamis: some of the Peloponnesians perhaps preferred to fight in the less open, but also less confined, waters of the bay of Kenchreai.

But the plan of Themistokles had been already endorsed and adopted. The movement of the Persian army towards the Peloponnesos (if it really was moving thitherwards) could not affect that plan. What did affect it was the clear perception that the Persian admirals had apparently no intention of entering the straits: how, indeed, could they venture to do so, with the Greek fleet drawn up in the bay of Salamis, ready to charge them in flank! A debate might very well arise among the Greek Strategoi as to the means of inducing the Persian fleet to enter the channel. Such a debate once started, the previous question may possibly have been raised again, as to whether the Greek fleet had not better make for the Isthmos. A battle had to be fought somewhere. If the Persians would not fight in closed waters, the battle must

συνεδρίου, ἐξελθὼν δὲ πέμπει εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ Μήδων
 ἄνδρα πλοῖω ἐντειλλόμενος τὰ λέγειν χρεὼν, τῷ οὐνομα μὲν ἦν Σίκιννος, οἰκέτης δὲ καὶ παιδαγωγὸς ἦν τῶν Θεμιστοκλέος<sup>5</sup>
 παίδων· τὸν δὲ ὕστερον τούτων τῶν πρηγμάτων Θεμιστοκλῆς

75. 4 χρεὼν α: χρῆν β: χρεῶν δ σίκιννος C: σίκινος βz
 || Θεμιστοκλοῦς R: θεμιστοκλέους V: Θεμιστοκλῆος z 6 τῶν πρηγμάτων τούτων β || τούτων z || ὁ θεμιστοκλῆς β

be fought in the open. The bay of Kenchreai was clearly more favourable to the Greek chances than the open waters off Salamis. The ruse of Themistokles, presently related, undoubtedly led to the battle in the straits; but it is extremely difficult to believe that in effectuating that ruse he acted without the knowledge and connivance of his colleagues (see below); it is, therefore, difficult to believe that at this stage at least the question of retreating to the Isthmos was again seriously debated. The real problem before the council was to devise, or to accept, a plan by which the Persians might be induced at dawn of day to be entering the straits. The plan devised, employed, perhaps expounded, by Themistokles was a bold one, not to be accepted without discussion.

The notion that Themistokles could slip unobserved out of the Synedrion, the debate still continuing without him, make his elaborate arrangements, remain outside for hours, until Aristides arrives to report that the ruse is successful, the Persian fleet already fully surrounding the island, and then re-enter the council—still sitting—with the startling news, is simply absurd. Moreover, the reception of the news seems to show that the Greek admirals are not taken by surprise. The story, as told by Aischylos, lends absolutely no support to the tradition that the plan of Themistokles was devised as much against the Greeks themselves, his colleagues, as against the Persians, their enemies.

3. εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ Μήδων. It is not clear above, in c. 70, whether Hdt. conceives the Persian fleet, after the manoeuvres of the day, as remaining at sea, or as returning to Phaleron. This passage seems to imply that the admirals at least are ashore, for τὸ στρατόπεδον can hardly be used consciously for the fleet at sea. From

Salamis to Phaleron it would take a man in a boat some hours to go and return—to say nothing of obtaining his interview with the Persian admirals. The admirals (οἱ στρατηγοὶ τῶν βαρβάρων, cp. c. 67 supra) make their appearance here again; in Aischylos the messenger from the Greek camp has audience of the king himself (Pers. 355 f.).

5. Σίκιννος. The name is Greek (cp. Σίκινος ἡ, the island), Aischyl. Pers. 355 makes the messenger a Greek, and Plutarch Them. 12 is probably wrong in calling this man a 'Persian' (cp. c. 110 infra), though he was, no doubt, a 'domestic slave,' and 'paedagogue' or tutor. Themistokles had five sons in all, Plutarch Them. 32; but Polyainos 1. 30. 3 has παιδαγωγὸς τοῦ παιδὸς—so perhaps he had only two in 480 B.C., or two of age to have a tutor.

6. τὸν δὲ ὕστερον . . ὀλβιον: the emancipation, enfranchisement, enrichment of Sikinnos followed, presumably, soon after the battle of Plataiai, and, of necessity, before the ostracism of Themistokles (in 473 or 472?). The rebuilding and restoration of Thespiiai, by the admission of citizens, was, of course, necessitated by its ruin in the war; cp. 7. 222 and c. 50 supra. The active ἐποίησε is remarkable: was the business actually entrusted to Themistokles? Thespiiai may be expected to have 'atticized' subsequently: but the Thespians in 424 B.C. were severely handled by the Athenians in the battle of Oropos (Delion), Thuc. 4. 96. 3, a misfortune which enabled the Thebans shortly afterwards to demolish the walls; ib. 133. 1. Ten years later there was an abortive coup d'état by the atticizing party, Thuc. 6. 95. 3, and the dominant faction sent hoplites to Syracuse to take part in the ruin of the Athenian armada (ib. 7. 19. 3, 25. 3). In the next century Thespiiai is the chief basis of the Spartan operations against Thebes, during the decade

Θεσπία τε ἐποίησε, ὥς ἐπεδέκοντο οἱ Θεσπιῆες πολίτας, καὶ
 χρήμασι ὀλβιον· ὃς τότε πλοῖω ἀπικόμενος ἔλεγε πρὸς τοὺς στρατηγούς τῶν βαρβάρων τάδε. “ἐπεμψέ με στρατηγὸς ὁ 10 Ἀθηναίων λάβρη τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων (τυγχάνει γὰρ φρονέων τὰ βασιλέως καὶ βουλόμενος μᾶλλον τὰ ὑμέτερα κατύπερθε γίνεσθαι ἢ τὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων πρήγματα) φράσσοντα ὅτι οἱ 11 Ἕλληνες δρησμὸν βουλευόνται καταρρωδηκότες, καὶ νῦν παρέχει κάλλιστον ὑμέας ἔργων ἀπάντων ἐξεργάσασθαι, ἣν

7 πολίτας S: πολίτας 9 ἐπεμψε ὁ στρατηγὸς α (-ν ὁ C) || ὁ
 om. αC 11 βασιλῆος z || μᾶλλον om. B || κατύπερθε B 12
 γενέσθαι Pz 13 βούλονται B 14 ἔργον πάντων Bz

preceding the battle of Leuktra (Xenoph. Hell. Bks. 5 and 6), and suffered accordingly, but must have enjoyed (like Plataia) a second or third resurrection (after the ruin of Thebes), as in the first century Thespiai and Tanagra were the only two flourishing cities in Boiotia: Strabo 403.

9. τάδε: the message of Themistokles, by the lips of Sikkinos, as reported by Hdt. differs in several notable respects and circumstances from the anonymous message reported by Aischylos. (i.) In Aischylos the message is despatched and received by daylight: in Hdt. by night. (ii.) In Aischylos it is received by the king: in Hdt. by the admirals. (iii.) In Aischylos the message leads the king to resolve on action, to wit, the advance of the fleet: with Hdt. the king has previously resolved to do or to offer battle. This difference is more apparent than real, as in each case the Persian fleet advances to pursue the Greeks supposed to be in flight—but the effect of the difference is to make the message perhaps even more prominent in Aischylos than in Hdt. (iv.) Far more important, with Aischylos the message in no way compromises the sender or the messenger, and there is nothing to show or to suggest that it was despatched with other than the full knowledge and approbation of the authorities on the Greek side: with Hdt. and the main tradition after his time the message is designed to outwit the Greeks no less than the Persians, nay, rather, to force the hand of the Greeks in the first instance, and compel them, against their will, to do battle at Salamis. (v.) As a further difference, the message in Aischylos reports simply a projected flight of the Greeks: the message in Hdt. proclaims the ‘medism’ of the sender, and of a great part of the fleet.

The ‘flight’ motif and the ‘medism’ motif might be alternatives, combined in the message as given by Hdt. The flight of the Greeks means that they are not going to do battle, but to escape, and that under cover of night. The message as given by Aischylos is thoroughly consistent with itself, and with the time and circumstances of its despatch. The message as given by Hdt. reports instant flight (in the night), but also promises medism if the flight is stayed and a battle forced on. Possibly the ‘medism’ has been projected back into this message from the later career of Themistokles.

στρατηγὸς ὁ Ἀθηναίων: what of his colleagues? Cp. c. 79 infra.

12. οἱ Ἕλληνες δρησμὸν βουλευόνται καταρρωδηκότες: this is virtually identical with the message as reported by Aischyl. Pers. 357–9. In itself it might have been sufficient to induce the Persians to resolve—not on battle, for you cannot fight a flying enemy—but on pursuit, on a forward movement, which would bring a portion at least of the Persian fleet within the straits. As the Greek fleet by that time would be well under way, the Persians might be expected to overhaul it, and come upon its rear in the bay of Eleusis, or in the narrower waters beyond. As the (fresh?) plan or disposition of the Persian admirals certainly included the stopping of the narrow channel between Salamis and the Megarid, they might be expecting to find the Greek fleet thrown into utter confusion when they came upon it by the Eleusis channel.

μὴ περιίδητε διαδράντας αὐτούς. οὔτε γὰρ ἀλλήλοισι ὁμο- 15
φρονέουσι οὔτε ἀντιστήσονται ὑμῖν, πρὸς ἑαυτούς τε σφέας ἔψεσθε ναυμαχέοντας τοὺς <τε> τὰ ὑμέτερα φρονέοντας καὶ τοὺς μὴ." ὁ μὲν ταῦτά σφι σημήνας ἐκποδὼν ἀπαλλάσσετο · 76 τοῖσι δὲ ὡς πιστὰ ἐγίνετο τὰ ἀγγελθέντα, τοῦτο μὲν ἐς τὴν νησίδα τὴν Ψυττάλειαν, μεταξὺ Σαλαμίνος τε κειμένην καὶ τῆς ἠπείρου, πολλοὺς τῶν Περσέων ἀπεβιβάσαντο · τοῦτο δέ, ἐπειδὴ ἐγίνοντο μέσαι νύκτες, ἀνήγον μὲν τὸ ἀπ' ἐσπέρης 5

16 οὐτέτι (ἀντιστήσονται) B: οὐτ' ἐτι Schaefer, Holder, van H. || τέ
σφέας AB 17 τοὺς <τε> Stein, van H. 76. 1 ἀπαλλάσσετο B
2 ἐγένετο = 3 νησίδα Pz || Ψυττάλειαν, del. Cobet, van H. 4 ἀπεβιβάσαντο B: ἀπεβίβασαν B, Holder, van H. 5 νύκτες μέσαι B
|| ἀπὸ B

76. 1. σημήνας: it was a 'significant' message, much more than a hint; in what language was it conveyed? The Persians would have done well to have detained Sikinnos!

2. τοῖσι δὲ ὡς κτλ.: for the formula cp. cc. 80, 83 infra.

τοῦτο μὲν: their first act, on being convinced of the projected flight of the Greeks, was to land a large force of Persians on the island of Psyttaleia. Down below the motive of this action is elaborately explained: the island lay in the thoroughfare, or waterway, of the coming battle, and the men upon it would be useful in dealing with wrecks and men, whether friends or foes.

This motivation is obviously a complete misconception, if the island Ψυττάλεια is correctly identified with the island bearing the lighthouse between Peiraeus and Salamis to-day (Leipsokoutali)—one Engl. mile long and from 200 to 300 yards broad: Strabo 395, and the moderns, e.g. Leake—for an island in that position could have no bearing on the operation of the Persians now in hand. Even if they were expecting a battle at all, it was surely to take place far to the west of this position: unless indeed they assumed that the Greeks would be driven back and out of the straits eastwards by the ships sent round the island to the Megarid channel. Possibly, however, Hdt. has simply mistimed the occupation of Psyttaleia. If it was the first move of the Persians, then it had been made probably on the previous day, in connexion with the manœuvres recorded in c. 70 supra. If it was not made during the day of the 19th Boëdromion, then it was probably only made the next morning, after the sea-fight had begun—where Aischylos might be thought to place it, or admit of its being placed.

In any case, the identification of Psyttaleia is unfavourable to the theory of Leake and Grote, according to which the Persian fleet is supposed to be already by this time inside the straits, and drawn up, in battle-array, backed by the Attic shore, and facing the bay of Salamis. (If any island called for occupation from that position—especially in view of the message of Sikinnos—it would rather be the island of St. George, or of Leros!) It is difficult to see how Leipsokoutali could be said to be ἐν πόρῳ τῆς ναυμαχίης τῆς μελλούσης ἔσεσθαι, if both forces were inside the straits, and the Persian based on the Attic shore. This passage implies that the battle was to be fought between two forces, one attempting to get out of the straits, and the other attempting to get in.

5. ἐπειδὴ ἐγίνοντο μέσαι νύκτες. On the phrase cp. 4. 181, 9. 51 infra. The night is apparently that which fell in c. 70 supra, and towards the fall of which the Persian army had moved in the direction of the Peloponnesos, ibid. Thereafter has taken place the σύλλογος in c. 74, the συνέδριον in c. 75, the performances of Themistokles and Sikinnos, culminating in the present movement of Persian soldiers and ships. The naval movement which results from the (day-light) message in Aischylos begins at nightfall (Pers. 374-9): a consequence of the fundamental discrepancy between our two chief authorities. For Dr. G.

κέρας κυκλοῦμενοι πρὸς τὴν Σαλαμίνα, ἀνήγον δὲ οἱ ἀμφὶ τὴν Κέον τε καὶ τὴν Κυνόσουραν τεταγμένοι, κατεῖχόν τε

7 Κέον: Λέρον Lolling: Ζέαν Pridek, cf. Bursian. J.-B. 86. 80 || τὴν ante Κυνόσουραν fortasse delendum || κατέχον :: κάτεχον Bekker: (κατεῖλόν Stein<sup>8</sup>, oper. err.)

B. Grundy's view of the anachronism in Hdt.'s account cp. Great Persian War, 377 ff., and Appendix VI. § 3.

ἀνήγον τὸ ἀπ' ἐσπέρης κέρας: the phrase seems to imply that the ships were already at sea, and in position. This implication is consistent with c. 70 supra, where the ships have been left apparently in the water. What, then, was the exact position of 'the western wing': how was the fleet oriented? If the fleet was in the position advocated by Leake (vide supra) the western wing would be the right wing; if in a position outside the straits (as appears to be here implied in the immediate context, and is alone consistent with Aischylos), then the western wing might be, and probably was, the left wing. On the former hypothesis the movement here described would have for its purpose the foreclosure of the channel into the bay of Eleusis; on the latter hypothesis (really the only tenable one) the movement is one, imperfectly and obscurely described indeed, but apparently designed to detach a part of the fleet in order to circumnavigate the island, and to bar the western channel, between the island and the Megarid. Such a movement must, indeed, have been undertaken in the course of the Persian manoeuvres; to have omitted it would have been a cardinal blunder; it is actually recorded by Diodoros (Ephoros) 11. 17. 2, perhaps not from tradition, but from inference and Sach-Kritik; it is at best obscurely hinted, or covered, by Hdt. here and by Aischylos, Pers. 368.

6. κυκλοῦμενοι πρὸς τὴν Σαλαμίνα: these words would more naturally suggest the first alternative stated in the previous note. Baehr, however, understands it de insula circumveunda, and that is the better sense. It may be doubted whether Hdt. himself had a very clear view of the manoeuvre; he simply repeats his source. Strategy and tactics are not his forte, and he may have written this account before he saw the landscape.

οἱ ἀμφὶ τὴν Κέον τε καὶ [τὴν] Κυνόσουραν τεταγμένοι: prima facie this is another squadron, contrasted with τὸ ἀπ' ἐσπέρης κέρας, and it is one squadron, and not two squadrons; it is not = οἱ ἀμφὶ τὴν Κέον τεταγμένοι καὶ οἱ ἀμφὶ τὴν Κυνόσουραν τεταγμένοι. It is, in fact, the other, or eastern wing. Baehr and Rawlinson are right against others and Blakesley in refusing to identify this Keos with the island, and this Kynosura with the well-known promontory by Marathon. Hdt. has brought the whole Persian fleet to Phaleron; and he (still more his sources) would have hesitated to move a squadron from Marathon to Munichia in half a September night, even if the order for moving could have been communicated. Leake identified this Kynosura with the long pointed promontory of Salamis projecting due east, and narrowing the channel between Salamis and Psyttaleia. Keos he wished to place somewhere on Salamis, or on the Attic coast opposite Kynosura, or again proposed to read τὴν νήσον, i.e. Psyttaleia, which last gives good sense. But Stein more ingeniously identifies Keos with Kynosura, a younger and an elder name, 'Kynosura' being also necessitated by the oracle quoted below c. 77. The name of the island, moreover, was not Κέος but Κέως, hence the inhabitants are Κεῖοι, Κῆροι; cp. cc. 1, 46 supra. If the repeated article τὴν is an obstacle to the identification of the two place-names, it may be deleted (O passi graviores!), or explained away, as due to Hdt.'s ignorance.

But could οἱ ἀμφὶ τὴν Κέον, so understood, be 'the eastern wing'? They would be, or become so, at least when the western wing had moved off to circumnavigate Salamis. It is possible that the topographical indication represents rather the point of destination than the point of departure. In any case the terms ἀνήγον μὲν—ἀνήγον δὲ refer apparently not to a concentration of the fleet, but to a division and separation into two wings, or squadrons, moving in opposite, or independent, directions. Moreover, each squadron, in carrying out this order, may have undergone a fresh tactical disposition.

7. κατεῖχόν τε μέχρι Μουνιχίης:

μέχρι Μουνιχίης πάντα τὸν πορθμὸν τῇσι νηυσί. τῶνδε δὲ εἵνεκα ἀνῆγον τὰς νέας, ἵνα δὴ τοῖσι Ἑλληνσι μὴδὲ φυγεῖν ἐξῆν, ἀλλ' ἀπολαμφθέντες ἐν τῇ Σαλαμῖνι δοῖεν τίσιν τῶν ἐπ' 10 Ἀρτεμισίῳ ἀγωνισμάτων. ἐς δὲ τὴν νησίδα τὴν Ψυττάλειαν καλεομένην ἀπεβίβαζον τῶν Περσέων τῶνδε εἵνεκεν, ὥς, ἐπεὰν γίνηται ναυμαχίη, ἐνθαῦτα μάλιστα ἐξοισομένων τῶν τε ἀνδρῶν καὶ τῶν ναυηγίων (ἐν γὰρ δὴ πόρῳ τῆς ναυμαχίης τῆς μελλούσης ἔσσεσθαι ἔκειτο ἡ νῆσος), ἵνα τοὺς μὲν περιποιέωσι 15 τοὺς δὲ διαφθείρωσι. ἐποίουν δὲ σιγῇ ταῦτα, ὥς μὴ πυνθανοίαιτο οἱ ἐναντίοι. οἱ μὲν δὲ ταῦτα τῆς νυκτὸς οὐδὲν ἀποκοιμηθέντες παραρτέοντο,

8 Μουνυχίης Stein<sup>12</sup>: correx. van H. || πάντα: παρὰ αC (pace Holder) || δὲ om. B, Holder 9 εἵνεκεν B || νῆας Bz || μὴ δὲ φυγεῖν α: μὴ φυγεῖν B: μὴδὲ φυγεῖν z: μὴ διαφυγεῖν mal. Stein<sup>1</sup> 10 τίσι z 11 νησίδα Pz 12 εἵνεκα αz 13 γίνηται Bz, Holder, van H. 14 πόρῳ C: πόρῳ z || τῆς ante ναυμαχίης om. BPz, Holder 15 ἔσσεσθαι om. B || περιποιέωσι codd., z, Holder 16 ἐποίουν α

these words, especially the topographical item, might seem some justification for Grote's view that Keos and Kynosura were places somewhere on the Attic coast between Phaleron and Sunion. But the phrase applies as much to the clause ἀνῆγον μὲν τὸ ἀπ' ἐσπέρης κέρας as to the clause ἀνῆγον δὲ οἱ ἀμφὶ τὴν Κέον: in other words, it applies primarily to neither, unless, indeed, Hdt. was ignorant of the position of Munichia, here alone mentioned in his work. Μουνιχίη is undoubtedly and notoriously (i.) the hill above the Peiraeus, which formed the citadel of the Athenian port; (ii.) one of the three harbours under that hill, the other two being the Peiraeus and Zea (?); cp. E. A. Gardner, Ancient Athens (1902) pp. 59, 544, etc.; (iii.) perhaps in early times applied to the whole, ib. p. 549; Strabo 395 λόφος δ' ἐστὶν ἡ Μουνυχία κτλ. ὑποπίπτουσι δ' αὐτῷ λιμένες τρεῖς.

It is curious that the roadstead μέχρι Μουνιχίης should be described as a πορθμός, a term properly used of a ferry, strait, or narrow waterway; cp. c. 91 infra. The whole phrase here would better apply to the situation and aspect of the Persian fleet in the bay of Phaleron than in the more open waters, between Salamis (Keos) and Munichia; yet it may be taken generally to describe the position of the Persian fleet, extending from the isle of Salamis across to Munichia (the hill, λόφος) before it broke up into two squadrons, one of which moved west, round the island, to block the Megarian channel, while the other closed up towards Keos, to block the channel between Keos and Psyttaleia, and doubtless also filled up the space between Psyttaleia and the Peiraeus (cp. c. 85 infra).

9. ἵνα δὴ κτλ.: so Hdt.'s sources (primarily Ionian?) reported: there is here no exception made for those who might 'medize,' nor any clear prospect of a set battle, but merely the purpose to prevent the 'flight'—which is treated (also in Aeschylus) as a foregone conclusion. The inscriptions of Themistokles in the neighbourhood of Artemision (cp. c. 22 supra) held out no prospect of medism, but the reverse, τῶν here = δίκην.

16. ἐποίουν δὲ σιγῇ: this is possible, cp. c. 74 supra, though the movements of the ships can hardly have failed to be observed by Greek watchers on Salamis (was there not a moon?). Moreover, if the Greek vessels were already ex hypothesi in flight into the bay of Eleusis, for the Megarid channel, the object of all this secrecy is not apparent.

17. τῆς νυκτὸς οὐδὲν ἀποκοιμηθέντες: this statement agrees with that of Aeschylus: and if the mission of Siskinnos had had no result beyond keeping the Persian fleet on the go all night, it would not have been in vain. ἀποκοιμάσθαι is a remarkable word; cp. Aristoph. Wasps 213, Xenoph. Kyrop. 2.

77 Χρησμοῖσι δὲ οὐκ ἔχω ἀντιλέγειν ὥς οὐκ εἰσὶ ἀληθείες, οὐ βουλόμενος ἐναργέως λέγοντας πειράσθαι καταβάλλειν, ἐς τοιάδε ῥήματα ἐσβλέψας.

ἀλλ' ὅταν Ἀρτέμιδος χρυσαόρου ἱερὸν ἀκτὴν
5 νηυσὶ γεφυρώσῃσι καὶ εἰναλὴν Κυνόσουραν

77 incipit verbis οἱ μὲν δὴ κτλ. Stein<sup>1</sup>: a verbo νυκτὸς usque ad c. 84. 4 οὕτω δὴ om. B: totum cap. (χρησμοῖσι . . ἐνδέκομαι) damn. Krueger, van H. 3 ῥήματα coni. Stein<sup>2</sup>: πρήγματα 4 χρυσάορον z

4. 22, 'perhaps a military term' L. & S., 'to take a little sleep,' or to be allowed off duty, to sleep. Stein's interpretation 'to take sufficient sleep,' to have done with sleep (ἀπο-, as in 2. 40), will hardly do.

18. παραρτέοντο: with object (ταῦτα), 'were busily engaged in organizing.'

77. This chapter has been challenged; it is atheized by Krueger and by van Herwerden: there are at least seven arguments against its authenticity. (i.) The matter is very abruptly introduced, without any obvious justification in the context. What has a defence of oracles to do with the manoeuvres of the Persian fleet on the eve of the battle, or with the discussions of the Greek Strategoi? (ii.) There is some doubt whether the oracle cited originally referred to Salamis at all; see detailed notes below. (iii.) The language, not indeed of the oracle, but of the writer, is peculiar, and his style somewhat incoherent. Would Hdt. not have expressed himself somewhat differently? (iv.) We should hardly expect to find Hdt. taking Bakis, rather than Delphi, as his point d'appui in his Apologetic. (v.) The defence might have been introduced more aptly in c. 96 infra. (vi.) The oracle is a vaticinium post eventum. (vii.) The passage is omitted in B. But these objections are inconclusive both severally and cumulatively. Thus (i.) Hdt. makes digressions, and the description of the Persian fleet as filling the whole 'ferry' or Fahrweg might be excuse enough for introducing an oracle interpreted to refer to this appearance. (ii.) The correctness of the reference is neither here nor there; it is clear that the reference was actually made: why not by Hdt. if by any one? (iii.) Hdt. waxes incoherent at times, especially when excited. (iv.) Bakis and such seers would stand most in need of defence: many might impugn

Bakis, who would hesitate to challenge Delphi. (v.) The reference in c. 96 presupposes this quotation. (vi.) Even if a vatic. p. event. like many other oracles, there was time enough between the dates of Salamis and of Hdt.'s composition for the invention of the verses. (vii.) The better class of MSS. have this chapter, and the inferior omit not merely this chapter, but a good deal besides; cp. App. Crit. But this chapter is plainly an insertion; cp. c. 78 ad init.

Stein, who admits the authenticity of the chapter, seems to regard the argument as a reply to the scepticism current at the beginning of the Peloponnesian war. If so, it would belong to the third, or final draft of Hdt.'s history. But the reference in c. 98 is (I think) in favour of an earlier insertion, and scepticism was not a novelty in 431 B.C. I should be inclined to regard this chapter as belonging to the second draft, and as written after Hdt.'s first visit to Athens. Cp. Introduction, § 9.

2. καταβάλλειν, in a peculiar sense: deicere, reicere. The use in 9. 79 is not quite identical. ῥήματα (cp. App. Crit.) is an emendation: πρήγματα, if genuine, would be still more peculiar, as used apparently for the lines following. Still more peculiar, or at least incoherent, is the sentence which concludes the chapter. See below.

4. ἀλλ' ὅταν κτλ.: the oracle itself has a thoroughly genuine ring. The formula is reproduced by Aristophanes in his parody: Knights 197 ἀλλ' ὅπταν κτλ.

Ἀρτέμιδος χρυσαόρου ἱερὸν ἀκτὴν. Hesiod uses ἱερὸν ἀκτὴν (Δημήτερος) in the sense of 'corn,' Homer uses the word of 'meal' (cp. L. & S. sub v.). Here, of course, ἀκτὴ means 'the strand,' shore. What strand?

(1) Leake understood it of Salamis, or a part of Salamis: Pausan. 1. 36. 1 ἐν ἐλπίδι μαινομένη, λιπαρὰς πέρσαντες Ἀθήνας, δία δίκη σβέσσει κρατερὸν κόρον, ὕβριος υἱόν,

 δεινὸν μαιμώνοντα, δοκεῖντ' ἀνὰ πάντα πῖσθαι.
 χαλκὸς γὰρ χαλκῷ συμμείζεται, αἵματι δ' Ἄρης πόντον φοινίζει. τότε ἐλεύθερον Ἑλλάδος ἦμαρ εὐρύπτα Κρονίδης ἐπάγει καὶ πότνια Νίκη.

10

8 ἀναπάντα AB: ἀν' ἀπαντα Steger: ἀν' ἀπαντα Stein<sup>1</sup> || πῖσθαι
 Duentzer, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder (πῖσθαι van H. oper. err.): πιθέσθαι AP, Stein<sup>1</sup>:
 πείθεσθαι B: τίθεσθαι C: πυνθέσθαι z: (ἅμα πάντ' ἐφικέσθαι (sic) Naber)
 10 φοινίξη z

Σαλαμῖνι δὲ . . . τοῦτο μὲν Ἀρτέμιδος ἔστιν ἱερὸν, τοῦτο δὲ τρύπαιον ἔστηκεν ἀπὸ τῆς νίκης κτλ., and placed it on the west coast of the bay of Ambelaki: if this were correct the γέφυρα would seem to be formed by the Hellenic ships; unless, indeed, the reference were to the (projected) bridge of boats from Attica to Salamis, c. 97 infra. But the latter interpretation would ill suit Κυνόσουρα.

(2) A more famous strand of Artemis was that by Brauron, on the east coast of Attica. If that were the strand in view, then Kynosura would naturally be the best known promontory of the name at Marathon; and the reference in the oracle would rather be to the battle of Marathon than to the battle of Salamis.
 Blakesley, who identifies this Kynosura with the Marathonian, would place the Artemisian strand on the Euboian coast, near Eretria, where was a temple of Artemis Amarusia, which might give a better sense for γεφυρώσσει.

(3) The most obvious identification is to regard the Ἀρτέμιδος ἱερὸς ἀκτὴ here in question as the Attic shore near the temple of Artemis Munichia (Μουνιχίας ναὸς Ἀρτέμιδος Pausan. 1. 1. 4), and so
 R. Adam de Hdt. ratione historica (1890) p. 22, Goodwin, and others. The bridging of the sea from Munichia to Kynosura in this case, of course, would simply mean the appearance presented by the vast numbers of the Persian fleet, which, extending in line (or rather in three lines, cp. Aisch. Pers. 366) from the Peiraieus to Ἁγία Varvara, might be taken to present the appearance of a bridge, or raft, covering the sea.

(4) It has been suggested (J. A. R.
 Munro, J.H.S. xx. 1902, p. 306) that the real reference in this oracle is to the Artemision at the north end of Euboea, which has already figured largely in Hdt. Kynosura he refers to the Mara-thonian promontory of that name, and interprets the oracle as having originally promised a victory to Hellas when her enemies bridged with their ships the channels at the north and south ends of Euboea. But (1) if the reference had been to the circumnavigation of Euboea, Chalkis rather than Kynosura would surely have marked the southern channel.

 (2) Even if πότνια Νίκη could have been predicated or predicted of the sea-fights off North Euboea, (3) the reference to the sack of Athens, λιπαρὰς πέρσαντες Ἀθήνας, as antecedent of the 'bridging,' points clearly to Salamis, and shows that the previous solution is the correct one.
 But the oracle looks like a vaticinium
post eventum.

χρυσάδρου: gen. of χρυσάδρος = χρυσάωρ, 'with sword of gold,' not a specific epithet of Artemis, but found (practically) attached to Apollo, Zeus, Demeter, Orpheus; cp. L. & S. sub v. (Chrysaor, as proper name, Hesiod, Theog. 280).

6. λιπαρός: a favourite epithet of Athens, as is plain from Aristophanes,
Acharn. 639 f. etc., and so first in Pindar
Isth. 2. 30, Nem. 4. 18 (unless this oracle of Bakis were earlier!), but also used by Pindar of other places, Marathon, Orchomenos, Thebes, Smyrna, Naxos, Egypt.
 Cp. Rumpel, Lexikon Pind. sub v., who makes it = splendidus, nitidus. In reference to Athens it might well carry a special suggestion of the olive and its oil; cp. L. & S. sub v.

7. δία δίκη κτλ.: the personifications in this line, and also the alliterations in this and the following line, should not be lost, just for want of capitals.

8. ἀνὰ πάντα πῖσθαι, a tmesis:
 πῖσθαι, cp. App. Crit., future of πῖνω, but ἀναπῖνω is rare, late, and technical; cp.
 L. & S. sub v.

10. φοινίξει: perhaps no pun was intended. But are φοινός (φόνος) and φοινίξ

[ἐς] τοιαῦτα μὲν καὶ οὕτω ἐναργέως λέγοντι Βάκιδι ἀντιλογίης χρησμένων περὶ οὔτε αὐτὸς λέγειν τολμέω οὔτε παρ' ἄλλων ἐνδέκομαι.

- 78 Τῶν δὲ ἐν Σαλαμῖνι στρατηγῶν ἐγένετο ὄθισμός λόγων πολλός· ἤδεσαν δὲ οὐκ ὅτι σφέας περιεκυκλεύοντο τῇσι νηυσὶ οἱ βάρβαροι, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ τῆς ἡμέρης ὥρων αὐτοὺς τεταγμένους,
79 ἐδόκεον κατὰ χώρην εἶναι. συνεστηκότων δὲ τῶν στρατηγῶν ἐξ

12 ἐς del. Stein<sup>3</sup>: idem mihi visum erat (ἐς e verb. ἐς τοιάδε supra repetitum) || μὲν <ἐσβλέψας> e conl. Stein<sup>1 2</sup> in text. recep. van H. || ἀντιλογίης: ἀντιλογίην Reiske, (van H.): ἀντιλογίας vel potius δι' ἀντιλογίης, cum ἐλθεῖν pro λέγειν, Wesseling approb. van H.: αὐτὸς τι vel τολμέω οὐδὲν suspic. Stein (οὔτε τι Stein<sup>1</sup>) || τολμέω B 78. 2 περιεκυκλέοντο α: περικυκλέοντο C: περιεκυκλούντο Pz, Holder, van H.

not connected etymologically? Cp. 7. 89 supra.

12. [ἐς] τοιαῦτα μὲν . . ἐνδέκομαι: an admittedly difficult passage, and perhaps corrupt; cp. App. Crit. ἐς is unmeaning; it might be dittographed from ἐς τοιάδε supra. There is no direct object expressed for λέγειν. ἀντιλογίας might be supplied with Wesseling, or τι after αὐτὸς or οὐδὲν after τολμέω with Stein. Βάκιδι ἀντιλογίης χρησμένων περὶ is odd: Stein takes B. ἀντ. together (of speaking against Bakis) and χρ. περὶ absolutely, cp. 7. 237 supra. The genitive ἀντιλογίης remains in suspense. On Bakis cp. c. 20 supra.

78. 1. τῶν δὲ κτλ. corresponds grammatically with τοιαῦτα μὲν just before, and that badly; it corresponds really and well enough with οἱ μὲν δὴ κτλ., c. 76 ad f., and thus clearly betrays c. 77 for an insertion.

ὄθισμός: cp. 7. 225 supra; they were not merely skirmishing, or using light weapons, cp. c. 64 supra.

2. ὅτι σφέας περιεκυκλεύοντο κτλ.: these words primarily support the theory of Leake (cp. Appendix VI. § 3) as to the position attained by the Persian fleet in c. 70 supra. The περικύκλωσις as a manoeuvre round the outside of the island for the purpose of closing the Megarid channel is not clearly envisaged or affirmed by Hdt., nevertheless it probably underlies this and his similar expressions.

The verb is here imperfect, but even so a considerable lapse of time is presupposed and involved in the session of the Strategoi on this occasion: they are sitting up all night (the Persian manœuvre only began at midnight, c. 76 supra) and will get as little sleep as the Persian admirals themselves!

3. ὥσπερ τῆς ἡμέρης ὥρων αὐτοὺς τεταγμένους: this phrase implies that the Persian fleet had attained on the previous day a definite disposition, as in c. 70 supra, in that position was visible to the Greeks, and had not returned to port, or anchorage. Where exactly was that position? Probably its lines presented the 'bridge' from Keos = Kynosura, to Munichia-Peiraeus, with Psyttaleia about the centre of the position. The fleet had now, however, divided, the one wing, the left, moving away west to block the Megarid channel, the rest moving up closer into the channels either side of Psyttaleia, especially the eastern; other vessels, no doubt, may have been posted, or cruising off the SE. coast of Salamis, and others held in reserve at Phaleron.

79. 1. συνεστηκότων τῶν στρατηγῶν: for the verb cp. c. 27 supra. As to the tense Blakesley renders it, "after the commanders had come to a direct issue"; but the sense rather demands a present or imperfect, 'while the generals were still contesting the matter,' i.e. before they had come to a decision; and that suits the material sense of the word.

ἐξ Αἰγίνης: there is a precision about this, which is seductive. Had Aristides spent his exile in the island (cp. Ἀθην. πολ. 22. 8), the war with which was hardly his policy? Or would he have been in Aigina at this time, if the feud with Athens had not been composed (7. 145 supra)? Or was he there on the mission to the Aiakidai (c. 64

Διγίνης διέβη Ἀριστείδης ὁ Λυσιμάχου, ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος μὲν
ἐξωστρακισμένος δὲ ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου· τὸν ἐγὼ νεόμικα, πυνθανόμενος αὐτοῦ τὸν τρόπον, ἄριστον ἄνδρα γενέσθαι ἐν Ἀθήνῃσι καὶ δικαιοτάτον. οὗτος ὦν ἡρ' στὰς ἐπὶ τὸ συνέδριον ἐξεκαλέετο 5 Θεμιστοκλέα, ἔοντα μὲν ἐωυτῷ οὐ φίλον ἐχθρὸν δὲ τὰ μάλιστα· ὑπὸ δὲ μεγάθεος τῶν παρεόντων κακῶν λήθην ἐκείνων ποιεύμενος ἐξεκαλέετο, θέλων αὐτῷ συμμείξαι· προακηκόεε δὲ ὅτι

79. 6 Θεμιστοκλῆα 2 8 συμμίζει Stein<sup>12</sup>, cp. c. 67. 5 || προ-
ακηκόεε Matthiae : προακηκόει van H. : προακήκοε

supra)! The trireme despatched for them appears to return next morning, c. 83 infra; but see note ad l.

2. Ἀριστείδης ὁ Λυσιμάχου: his first appearance on the scene in Hdt., hence the patronymic, which is repeated with ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος in c. 95 infra, suggesting that the two passages are from different sources, and perhaps belong to different drafts. The anecdote which here follows is part of the legend of Themistokles. Lysimachos is a common Greek name; upwards of twenty men are known to have borne it. Of the father of Aristeides nothing more is recorded, but he was of course, like his son, of the tribe Antiochis and of the deme Alopeke (Plutarch Aristeid. 1); no doubt a man of substance, and perhaps of the Alkmaionid party. The ostrakism of Aristeides had taken place in 483 B.C. obviously to clear the way for the naval law of Themistokles (cp. Appendix III. § 4), and he had been recalled with all other exiles in 481 B.C. Stein supposes that the law of amnesty had only just been passed, otherwise Aristeides would have appeared sooner in the camp. But is the texture of the Herodotean historiography so close as to convince us that this was the actual κάθοδος of Aristeides? Far more probable is J. B. Bury's idea (Class. Rev. x. 1896, 414 ff.), that Aristeides was at this moment one of the Athenian Strategoi duly elected in the spring of 480 B.C., otherwise, indeed, his exploit in c. 95 infra is hardly intelligible. As such he would presumably have been present at the Synedrion of Strategoi, unless we are to suppose that only one Strategos from each state was present. If the anecdote here given is anything more than a fable, Aristeides must have been away on special service; in which case a mission to Aigina presents itself as the most plausible hypothesis to account for his movements. That mission, if not to invoke the Aiakidai, may have been for the purpose of conveying Athenian refugees; cp. c. 41 supra.

3. τὸν ἐγὼ νεόμικα . . δικαιοτάτον. This personal judgement is most significant. In the controversy over the rival merits of Themistokles and Aristeides, Hdt. definitely takes sides with the latter: of the moral superiority of Aristeides he has no doubt; his mind is absolutely made up once for all on that question (hence the perfect tense). Thucydides' celebrated defence of Themistokles (1.138) only affects his intellectual qualities, and his policy. The reputation of Aristeides was based probably upon four leading points, all subsequent to his ostrakism and restoration: (i.) his Strategia at Plataia; (ii.) his full acceptance of the naval destiny of Athens; (iii.) his great services in connexion with the foundation of the maritime hegemony, including the τάξις φόρον; (iv.) his popular reforms of the Constitution. But, above all, probably his personal character, honesty, and honour contributed to his apotheosis. See further, Appendix l.c.

5. στὰς ἐπὶ τὸ συνέδριον, 'presented himself at the council of generals': perhaps καταστὰς (cp. 3. 46, 156) might be expected; but he is not yet inside, actually in the presence of the council.

ἐξεκαλέετο, middle, by means of a messenger? ὑπό, 'by reason of.' ἐκείνων: not, of course, τὰ μάλιστα, but more vaguely, 'their previous quarrels.' συμμείξαι, as in c. 67 supra.

8. προακηκόεε: the pluperfect time reinforced by the compositum; how and where had he heard of the intentions of the 'Peloponnesians'? Well, it might, of course, be merely since his arrival in Salamis, but more is probably intended.

σπεύδουεν οἱ ἀπὸ Πελοποννήσου ἀνάγειν τὰς νέας πρὸς τὸν 10 Ἴσθμόν. ὥς δὲ ἐξήλθέ οἱ Θεμιστοκλῆς, ἔλεγε Ἀριστείδης τάδε. “ἡμέας στασιάζειν χρεόν ἐστι εἰ ἐν τεῷ ἄλλῳ καιρῷ καὶ δὴ καὶ ἐν τῷδε περὶ τοῦ ὁκότερος ἡμέων πλέω ἀγαθὰ τὴν πατρίδα ἐργάσεται. λέγω δέ τοι ὅτι ἴσον ἐστὶ πολλά τε καὶ ὀλίγα λέγειν περὶ ἀποπλόου τοῦ ἐνθεύτεν Πελοποννησίοισι.
 15 ἐγὼ γὰρ αὐτόπτης τοι λέγω γενόμενος ὅτι νῦν οὐδ’ ἦν θέλωσι Κορίνθιοι τε καὶ αὐτὸς Εὐρυβιάδης οἰοί τε ἔσονται ἐκπλώσαι· περιεχόμεθα γὰρ ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων κύκλῳ. ἀλλ’ ἐσελθὼν
 80 σφὶ ταῦτα σήμηνον.” ὁ δ’ ἀμείβετο τοισίδε. “κάρτα τε

9 νῆας  $\approx$  11 χρεόν AB: χρεών || εἰ ἐν τεῷ Stein<sup>8</sup> (ἐν τέ τεω
 Gomperz, Holder, van H.): ἐν τε τῷ (τε om.  $\approx$ ) 13 τῇ πατρίδι  $\approx$  ||
 τοι om.  $\approx$  || ἴσον d, hic et alibi prob. Cobet: sed cf. van Herwerden vol.
 iii, p. vi. 80. 1 τοῖσιδε Marc., Stein: τοῖσδε

11. στασιάζειν: with such a man even στάσις turns to good; ‘now, if ever, is the opportunity for us to rival each other in promoting the good of our common country.’ But the phrase is rather overstrained in the mouth of the returned exile, who has merely some valuable information to communicate to the commander-in-chief of the forces! Does Aristides already foresee his own performance on the morrow, in c. 95 infra, which was to be magnified into one of the chiefest episodes of the ἐλευθερον Ἑλλάδος ἥμαρ? Or is the phrase more than the formula of a stock debating question, ὁκότερος αὐτῶν (sc. A. and Th.) πλέω ἀγαθὰ τὴν πατρίδα εἰργασμένους εἶη;

15. ἐγὼ γὰρ αὐτόπτης . . κύκλῳ. If this announcement referred simply to a περικύκλωσις by the Persian fleet inside the straits (as in Leake’s theory), the Greeks themselves in Salamis would scarcely have failed to perceive it, and Aristides’ announcement would have been stale news. Or again, if Aristides had merely meant that the Persians had moved up and blocked the passages right and left of Psyttaleia, that movement would not have constituted a περικύκλωσις, and a way of escape by the Megarid channel would still have been open to the Peloponnesians. Moreover, on neither of these hypotheses is it clear how Aristides should have reached Salamis. If the bay of Ambelaki was blocked, he might have landed somewhere on the sea-front of the island, and made his way overland to the Greek laager; but he would not have been more an autoptes than hosts of others. If only the eastern ends of the straits were blocked, he might have come in by the west—but by the same channel the Greeks might go out. The only adequate meaning of the message is that both ends, that by Psyttaleia or Kynosura, and that by Megara-Budoron (Thuc. 2. 94. 4), are closed and held by Persian ships. Probably every one knew by this time that such was the case with the eastern end; the news Aristides brings is that there is a squadron blocking the western outlet. Coming from Aigina he might have discovered that by crossing the path of that squadron on its way, or perhaps by having to fly before it. How his own ship reached Salamis is not specified; but he may have come in by the Budoron channel. If there were Persian ships patrolling the coast of Salamis towards the open sea, the περικύκλωσις would be still more effective; but it was complete, as far as the argument requires, by the closure of both outlets from the straits.

18. σήμηνον: of important, significant news; cp. c. 76 supra.

80. 1. ὁ δ’ ἀμείβετο: Themistokles responds, and gives himself completely away. Had he really been playing the very dangerous game ascribed to him, and attempting to outwit not the Persians but his colleagues, he would have known how to contain himself in the presence of his personal enemy. But perhaps we take the record too seriously, and

χρηστὰ διακελεύεαι καὶ εὖ ἡγγειλας· τὰ γὰρ ἐγὼ ἐδεόμην γενέσθαι, αὐτὸς αὐτόπτης γενόμενος ἤκει. ἴσθι γὰρ ἐξ ἐμέο τὰ ποιούμενα ὑπὸ Μήδων· ἔδεε γάρ, ὅτε οὐκ ἐκόντες ἤθελον εἰς μάχην κατίστασθαι οἱ Ἕλληνες, ἀέκοντας παραστήσασθαι. 5 σὺ δὲ ἐπεὶ περ ἤκεις χρηστὰ ἀπαγγέλλων, αὐτὸς σφί ἡγγειλον.
ἦν γὰρ ἐγὼ αὐτὰ λέγω, δόξω πλάσας λέγειν καὶ οὐ πείσω, ὥς οὐ ποιούντων τῶν βαρβάρων ταῦτα. ἀλλὰ σφί σήμερον αὐτὸς παρελθὼν ὥς ἔχει. ἐπεὶ δὲ σημήνης, ἦν μὲν πείθονται, ταῦτα δὴ τὰ κάλλιστα, ἦν δὲ αὐτοῖσι μὴ πιστὰ γένηται, 10
ὁμοίον ἡμῖν ἔσται· οὐ γὰρ ἔτι διαδρήσονται, εἴ περ περιεχό-μεθα πανταχόθεν, ὥς σὺ λέγεις." ἐνθαῦτα ἔλεγε παρελθὼν ὁ 81 Ἀριστείδης, φάμενος ἐξ Αἰγίνης τε ἦκειν καὶ μόγις <δι>εκπλῶσαι λαθὼν τοὺς ἐπορμέοντας· περιέχεσθαι γὰρ πᾶν τὸ στρατό-

3 'fortasse αὐτὰ ταῦτα αὐτόπτης' van H. 4 τὰ : τάδε Krueger :
ταῦτα Cobet, van H. : <ποιούμενα> τὰ Naber || ἔθελον Pz 5 παρα-στήσασθαι C 8 ὥς . . ταῦτα secl. van H. 10 ταῦτα δὴ τὰ κάλλιστα secl. Krueger, τὰ tantum Naber, van H. 11 ὁμοίον CPz 81. 1 ἐνθαῦτα Krueger, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H. : ταῦτα 2 διεκπλῶσαι Naber, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> : ἐκπλῶσαι

Themistokles, in this private interview, preserved his discretion, and said to Aristides—something quite other than this report! A la bonne heure! But then, what becomes of any private speech or conversation reported by Hdt.?

2 διακελεύεαι: referring to the honourable and magnanimous στάσις to which Aristides has challenged him. διακελεύεσθαι, 'to encourage one another'; cp. 1. 1, 3. 77. It is also used more simply, 'to exhort,' 'command,' as in c. 84 infra.

ἐδεόμην, 'I was wanting,' c. 59 supra.

3 αὐτόπτης: sc. αὐτῶν or τούτων. ἐξ ἐμέο is predicative. ἔδεε, sc. ἐμέ. παραστήσασθαι, trans., sc. εἰς μάχην. ἐκόντες ἤθελον, redundant, for the sake of the ἀέκοντας to follow. αὐτά, 'what you have said,' 'the news.'

7. δόξω πλάσας λέγειν, 'I shall be thought to have invented what I say.' Such, alas, was his reputation!

οὐ πείσω, ὥς οὐ ποιούντων . . ταῦτα, 'I shall not persuade them, as (they are convinced) the barbarians are not doing that.' This ὥς has a good deal to carry, but is eased a little by the δόξω πλάσας just before. But cp. App. Crit.

9. παρελθὼν: sc. right into the presence of the Synedron of generals.

11. περιεχόμεθα πανταχόθεν: a stronger phrase than περιεχόμεθα κύκλῳ supra, and hardly accurate unless the whole island were surrounded.

81. 1. παρελθὼν ὁ Ἀριστείδης: into the very presence of the Strategoi; cp. c. 79. 5 supra.

2. μόγις <δι>εκπλῶσαι λαθὼν τοὺς ἐπορμέοντας: as the vulgar ἐκπλῶσαι must mean 'to sail out,' Aristides appears to report either the difficulty he had had in getting from Salamis to Aigina, or—as Hdt. does not conceive him starting in the first instance from Salamis—the difficulty he had experienced in getting out from Aigina, in which case τοὺς ἐπορμέοντας would be a squadron blockading Aigina. But this interpretation squares ill with the words which immediately follow, apparently as justification. It remains to interpret ἐκπλῶσαι of escaping from a pursuing squadron. The emendation διεκπλῶσαι (vid. App. Crit.), though a bit of rationalism, is rather favoured by λαθὼν and by διεκλεύσας, Plutarch Aristeid. 8.

3. περιέχεσθαι γὰρ . . Ἐξέρξω: these words again favour Leake's interpretation of the movements predicated in cc. 70, 76 supra, and point to the conclusion that, so far as Hdt. himself

πεδον τὸ Ἑλληνικὸν ὑπὸ τῶν νεῶν τῶν Ξέρξεω· παραρτέσθαι 5 τε συνεβούλευε ὡς ἀλεξομένους. καὶ δὲ μὲν ταῦτα εἶπας μετεστῆκε, τῶν δὲ αὐτῖς ἐγένετο λόγων ἀμφισβασίη· οἱ γὰρ 82 πλεῦνες τῶν στρατηγῶν οὐκ ἐπαίθοντο τὰ ἐσαγγελθέντα. ἀπιστεόντων δὲ τούτων ἦκε τριήρης ἀνδρῶν Τηνίων αὐτομολέουσα, τῆς ἦρχε ἀνὴρ Παναίτιος ὁ Σωσιμένεος, ἣ περ δὴ ἔφερε τὴν ἀληθείην πᾶσαν. διὰ δὲ τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον ἐνεγράφησαν Τήνιοι
 5 ἐν Δελφοῖσι ἐς τὸν τρίποδα ἐν τοῖσι τὸν βάρβαρον κατελοῦσι.

4 ξέρξεω B      6 ἀμφισβασίη z || οἱ πλεῦνες γὰρ z      7 ἐξαγγελ-θέντα z      82. 2 τούτων z      3 ἀνὴρ Τήνιος? Stein<sup>12</sup>: ἀνὴρ <τῶν ἐπιφανέων> Schenkl: Τήνιος inser. Krueger (1856): 'Sin minus, dele ἀνὴρ' van H. || ἔφερε: 'An ἔφαινε?' van H.      4 ἀληθῆναι z || ἐγράφησαν C

has any clear conception of the situation, he justifies Leake's interpretation. The result thereby attained is indeed an absurdity, but if a military expert and topographer like Leake could swallow it, why not Herodotus?

4. παραρτέσθαι: here strictly middle and reflexive; cp. c. 76 supra.

6. μετεστῆκε, 'withdrew'; the tense is rather rhetorical than grammatically exigent. For the meaning cp. Thuc. 5. 111. 6 (μεταστάντων ἡμῶν). λόγων ἀμφισβασίη: cp. 4. 14—something less than λ. ὠθισμός c. 78 and more than the ἀκροβολισμός c. 64. If the περικύκλωσις had been simply in the bay of Ambelaki the truth could have very easily been verified. The reputation of Aristides for δικαιοσύνη and ἀρετή does not appear to have been as yet established, at least in Peloponnesian circles.

82. 2. ἦκε is perfect in sense, not to say pluperfect: evidently ἐηλύθεε might quite well stand here. Cp. c. 83 infra. The participle agreeing with the ship and not with the men (αὐτομολέουσα) is piquant; and so it is the trireme that carries the truth.

Τηνίων. The Tenians have been mentioned, c. 66 supra, as joining the fleet of Xerxes, apparently after Thermopylai-Artemision. But the nesiot ships are all probably included in the 17 counted to the navy, 7. 95 supra. Tenos is located in 4. 33, 6. 97 (lying immediately S. of Andros, and N. of Mykonos, Delos, Rheneia). The ship here in question was probably the one and only Tenian trireme in existence. Tenos paid (as a rule) 3 talents tribute to Athens afterwards.

3. Παναίτιος ὁ Σωσιμένεος. Panaitios is a grand but not an uncommon name, its chief bearer, son of Nikagoras, of Rhodes, a celebrated Stoic, the friend of P. Scipio Aemilianus (Cicero, pro Murena, § 66, etc.). But of the gallant (ἀνὴρ) Tenian, and his father Sosimenes, nothing more is known. The desertion of the Tenians scarcely looks as though the Greeks on the Persian side despaired of the good cause. Plutarch by a lapse writes Tenedos (Themist. 12); Diodor. 11. 17. 3 reports a message, sent by the Ionians and carried by a Samian, to apprise the Greeks of the king's plans and dispositions, and to promise their own desertion; this covers the 'Aristeides' and 'Tenian' episodes in Hdt. Stein defends ἀνὴρ (cp. App. Crit.) by ref. to Il. 11. 92 εἰλε δ' ἀνδρα Βηήνορα, Sophokl. El. 95.

4. ἔργον: a derring deed! cp. Index. ἐνεγράφησαν . . . ἐς τὸν τρίποδα.

As the inscription is still legible, the statement of Hdt. can be verified. The name of the Tenians appears, not strictly speaking 'on the tripod,' which was of gold, but on the τρικάρηνος ὄφης, which was of bronze; cp. 9. 81. It is the fourth name on the seventh coil (no other coil has more than three names), and is inscribed more deeply than the rest, in Ionic letters, an addition probably made by the Tenians themselves, 'by permission'; cp. Hicks, Monum., No. 19 [12], Dittenberger 7 [1], Michel 1118, and Appendix I.

5. ἐν τοῖσι τὸν βάρβαρον κατελοῦσι. Stein thinks that the word κατελοῦσι must have occurred on the inscription, and quotes Thuc. 1. 132. 3. The word there is συγκατελοῦσαι, and

σύν τε ὧν ταύτῃ τῇ νηὶ τῇ αὐτομολησάσῃ ἐς Σαλαμῖνα καὶ τῇ πρότερον ἐπ' Ἀρτεμίσιον τῇ Δημνίῃ ἐξεπληροῦτο τὸ ναυτικὸν τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι ἐς τὰς ὀγδώκοντα καὶ τριηκοσίας νέας· δύο γὰρ δὴ νεῶν τότε κατέδεε ἐς τὸν ἀριθμὸν.

Τοῖσι δὲ Ἑλλήσι ὡς πιστὰ δὴ τὰ λεγόμενα ἦν τῶν Τηνίων 83 [ρήματα], παρεσκευάζοντο ὡς ναυμαχῆσόντες. ἥως τε διέφαινε καὶ οἱ σύλλογον τῶν ἐπιβατέων ποιησάμενοι, προηγόρευε εὖ ἔχοντα μὲν ἐκ πάντων Θεμιστοκλῆς, τὰ δὲ ἔπεα ἦν πάντα

6 σύν τε Stein<sup>3</sup>: σύν δὲ Krueger: σύν δὲ 8 νῆας 2 9 νηῶν 2
83. 2 ῥήματα intercl. Stein, Holder, van H. || τε δὲ ἔφαινε AB: τε δὲ διέφαινε Wesseling, van H.

the extant inscription does not support the inference—having merely the title τοῖδε τὸν πόλεμον ἐπολέμεον. But the inscr. is not complete. (This passage might have been added after Hdt.'s visit to Delphi; cp. Introduction, § 9.)

6. σύν τε ὧν κτλ.: a noticeable passage, containing, as it does, two implicit references back to antecedent passages, obvious to steady readers of the work. (1) In c. 48 supra Hdt. has given the total of the fleet as 378. (2) In c. 11 supra ad f. Hdt. has recorded the glorious desertion of Antidoros of Lemnos. Why has not the Lemnian been included in the navy-list in cc. 42-48 supra? Is not the omission due to Hdt.'s method of working from independent sources without co-ordinating the results?

83. 1. τοῖσι δὲ Ἑλλήσι κτλ. Blakesley considers this passage so confused as to be "quite inexplicable on the mere hypothesis of slovenly writing," and rewrites it not very happily. The chapter is confused, and partially corrupt, but the main purport is clear.

2. ἥως τε . . . καί: an effective parataxis. The night has apparently been spent by the Greeks, certainly by the Greek Strategoi, no less wakefully than by the enemy. It must be the Strategoi who are referred to in the demonstrative οἱ.

3. σύλλογον τῶν ἐπιβατέων: in c. 74 supra there comes a σύλλογος τῶν στρατηγῶν (Plutarch Aristeid. 8). The assembly of Epibatai must have been held on shore. The ships were in the water, the rowers on board. The battle was not to be so much a question of manœuvring as of hand-to-hand fighting, in the good old style: laying ships alongside, and boarding!

σύλλογον ποιησάμενοι cuts both ways. There was a plurality of conveners, but not necessarily of speakers. It is not quite clear whether each Strategos addressed his own Epibatai, or whether Themistokles was the sole speaker, as he is certainly the sole speaker reported. The total number of Epibatai is a matter of conjecture or inference, and might have varied with different contingents. Plutarch, Themist. 14, says that at Salamis the number was 18 per ship: if correct that estimate would give 6840 for the 380 ships. Hdt. gives 30 men as the number of Epibatai on the Persian side, 7. 184 supra—by no means a trustworthy figure in itself for the whole fleet, much less directly transferable to the Greek. If so transferred, it would give a total of 11,400. At the battle of Lade, in 494 B.C., there had been 40 Epibatai on each of the Chian vessels (6. 15), a very large allowance. During the Peloponnesian war, a time when ships were themselves the weapon of offence, and more was done by manœuvring and ramming, the normal complement was only 10 (Thuc. 2. 92, 102, 3. 91, 95, 4. 76, 101). It would be fairly safe to say that at Salamis there were from 7000 to 10,000 Epibatai on the Greek side.

4. ἐκ πάντων suggests that he was chosen or allowed to speak out of and on behalf of all; but it might mean that of all who spoke he was the most eminent and successful on the occasion (and so he alone is reported).

τὰ δὲ ἔπεα ἦν: the speech of Themistokles, verily ἔπεα πτερόεντα, may have been addressed solely, or primarily, to an Athenian audience, and reported from an Athenian source; it was no doubt a short speech, though not so short as this brief summary, or 'concept' thereof; but the speaker was evidently no mean orator. The speech comprised three heads: (i.) A series of antitheses, in which the better and the worse, the noble and the base alternatives in human nature, circumstances, and also no doubt actions, were contrasted. Hdt. characteristically fails to distinguish clearly between action and circumstance (cp. 7. 152 supra). (ii.) An appeal, or exhortation (παράνυσις) to his hearers to choose the better part, liberty, honour, death, rather than slavery, defeat, the lash and the tax-collector; and doubtless to remember that they were fighting under the eyes of their wives and children. (iii.) The appeal merged into a peroration (καταπλέξας τὴν ῥῆσιν), in which no doubt the gods and heroes were invoked, and Marathon, 'the trophies of Miltiades,' even Artemision, probably were not forgotten. The whole speech left upon the hearers' minds the sense of confidence, courage, ability, intellectual force. One misses from the brief report two points, which will hardly have been absent in the actual harangue: some estimate of the opponents and their chances, and some hints of the actual tactics to be pursued.

5 <τὰ> κρέσσω τοῖσι ἡσσοσι ἀντιτιθέμενα, ὅσα δὴ ἐν ἀνθρωπων φύσει καὶ καταστάσι ἐγγίνεται· παραινέσας δὲ τούτων τὰ κρέσσω αἰρέεσθαι καὶ καταπλέξας τὴν ῥῆσιν, ἐσβαίνειν ἐκέλευε ἐς τὰς νέας. καὶ οὗτοι μὲν δὴ ἐσέβαινον, καὶ ἦκε ἡ ἀπ' 84 Διγίνης τριήρης, ἣ κατὰ τοὺς Αἰακίδας ἀπεδήμησε. ἐνθαῦτα ἀνήγον τὰς νέας ἀπάσας Ἕλληνες, ἀναγομένοισι δὲ σφι αὐτίκα

5 <τὰ> Dobree, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || κρέσσω α || ἀντιτιθέμενα ὅσα δὴ A<sup>2</sup>: ἀντιτιθέμενα· ὅσα δὲ (δὴ) Holder: δὲ secl. et punctum post ἐγγίνεται pos. Gomperz, van H.) 6 φύσει καὶ καταστάσει αC || δὲ BC: δὴ 7 αἰρέεσθαι (sic) A<sup>1</sup> || καταπλέξας C || κρήσιν A<sup>1</sup>B || ἐκβαίνειν C || ἐκέλευσε α 8 νῆας z || μὲν: τε? Stein<sup>2</sup> 84. 2 νῆας z || οἱ Ἕλληνες z, van H.

7. ἐσβαίνειν ἐκέλευε ἐς τὰς νέας: doubtless before or after the speech they had breakfast on shore, and were better off than the Persians in this respect.

8. οὗτοι μὲν: there is no antithetical δὲ unless it be found somewhat incongruously in ἀναγομένοισι δὲ below.

ἐσέβαινον καὶ ἦκε: long before they were done embarking the trireme from Aigina was come, which had left the ranks (ἀπεδήμησε, cp. c. 41 supra) for the purpose of summoning, invoking, (and bringing) the Aiakids to the aid of Hellas (c. 64 supra). Presumably the trireme brought the images. But at what point exactly did it reappear in the ranks? If its arrival is to be dated in the morning, after the speech of Themistokles, how did it make its way through the enemy, where Aristeides had barely got through, even under cover of night? Is this trireme any other than the vessel of Aristeides? Was not he the envoy despatched to Aigina, from which he returned in c. 79 supra?

84. 2. ἀνήγον τὰς νέας ἀπάσας: advanced (or were advancing) their ships en masse; but before the movement was complete (ἀναγομένοισι δὲ σφι), indeed while it was little more than begun (αὐτίκα), they found themselves attacked by the barbarians (ἐπεκίετο οἱ β.). Our whole conception of the actual engagement must turn upon the true interpretation of these words. They look simple enough, but their meaning is obscure. At first sight they might seem to lend themselves to Leake's interpretation of the movements recorded in cc. 70, 76 supra; the Greek fleet advances out of the bay of Ambrakia, and finds itself at once involved, front to front, with the king's fleet, which has also advanced to attack. But if that were the situation, the two fleets would have been in full view of each other all along since the first streak of dawn; and the element of surprise, involved in these words, is inexplicable. The Greeks are taken ἐπεκέατο οἱ βάρβαροι. οἱ μὲν δὲ ἄλλοι Ἕλληνες ἐπὶ πρύμνῃν ἀνεκρούοντο καὶ ὤκελλον τὰς νέας, Ἀμεινίης δὲ Παλληνεὺς ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος ἐξαναχθεὶς νηὶ ἐμβάλλει· συμπλακείσης δὲ τῆς νεὸς καὶ οὐ δυναμένων ἀπαλλαγῆναι, οὕτω δὲ οἱ ἄλλοι

3 ἐπὶ del. Bekker, Holder, van H.

4 ἀνεκρούον τε Eltz || καὶ . .

νέας suspecta hab. Krueger, van H. || ὤκελον = || νῆας = || Παλληνεὺς om.

Marc. : del. Cobet, Holder, van H.

5 συμπλακείσης A<sup>1</sup>BC 6

νῆος =

aback: before their own movement is complete they find the barbarians in motion against them. Nothing of that sort could have arisen on Leake's hypothesis. Granted that Hdt. so conceived the matter: but what sense is there in saying of two fleets, moving upon each other, front to front, that the one fleet advanced to the attack, and, while it was advancing, the other fleet attacked it? Such a statement is only intelligible on the supposition of a flank engagement. If the Greek fleet was emerging from the bay of Ambelaki just at the same moment as the Persian fleet was entering the straits, such a situation might arise: either the Greek fleet might cut the Persian column, somewhere behind its leading ships, or the head of the Persian column might strike the extreme right of the Greek fleet en flank. If the Persian column were two or three ships abreast, or if there were two or more Persian columns—the one column perhaps pressing in between Psytaleia and the island of Salamis, the other between Psytaleia and the Attic mainland—a more complicated situation might easily arise: the extreme right of the Greek wing might be taken en flank, or involved with the left column of the Persian advance, while the right Persian column might have to advance much further before becoming engaged with the Greek left. If such was, indeed, the whole situation adumbrated in this chapter, it is possible that the engagement opened, that actual contact with the enemy was effected, sooner than Themistokles intended or could have wished: he must have desired a large number of the Persian vessels to enter the straits before the actual fighting began.

3. οἱ μὲν δὲ ἄλλοι Ἕλληνες: other than 'the Athenians,' or other than the one Athenian named? The latter is an absurd supposition: Themistokles and the other Athenian Strategoi knew what they were about, and were not likely 'to back water'—unless, indeed, the action of Ameinias of Pallene was ill-advised and premature. That the Greek right wing backed water (πρύμνῃν ἀνεκρούοντο), and, of course, by order, is likely enough; the Greeks on the right were much nearer the advancing enemy. That they were actually for beaching their ships (ὤκελλον) is probably a bit of popular (Attic) scandal, started by the man in the street, or the A.B. in the fleet, who did not understand what was going on, or the tactics of the admirals.

4. Ἀμεινίης δὲ Παλληνεὺς: this Ameinias was, according to Diodoros 11. 27. 2, the brother of the poet Aischylos (who was an Eleusinian), cp. 6. 114, and according to Plutarch, Themist. 14, of the deme of Dekeleia, cp. 9. 73 infra (not of Pallene). The deme Pallene (site of the temple of Athene Παλλήνης, cp. 1. 62) belonged to the tribe Antiochis, and lay on the spurs of Hymettos crossed by the road to Marathon. Ameinias is not an uncommon name, and Aischylos, Pers. 409, does nothing for his supposed brother's claim, though he supports the Athenian claim by making a Phoenician ship implicated. The addition of the Demotikon here, if genuine, without the patronymic, would betray the Attic source, even without the express statement just below, Ἀθηναῖοι μὲν οὕτω λέγουσι, but it rather conflicts with ἀν. Ἀθ. and may be an interpellation; cp. App. Crit.

5. ἐξαναχθεὶς: passive in form, middle in force; cp. 7. 194 supra (of ships, not of shipmasters); "longius evectus," Baehr. This chapter exhibits the verb ἀνάγειν in all three voices.

νηὶ might be his own (instrumental) or an enemy's (objective), probably the latter; cp. ἐρέβαλε νηὶ φιλίῃ, c. 87 infra. τῆς νεὸς is his own. οὐ δυναμένων, sc. τῶν τοῦ Ἀμεινίου.

Ἀμεινὴ βοθηόντες συνέμισγον. Ἀθηναῖοι μὲν οὕτω λέγουσι τῆς ναυμαχίας γενέσθαι τὴν ἀρχήν, Αἰγινῆται δὲ τὴν κατὰ τοὺς Διακίδας ἀποδημήσασαν ἐς Αἴγιναν, ταύτην εἶναι τὴν
 10 ἄρξασαν. λέγεται δὲ καὶ τάδε, ὡς φάσμα σφι γυναικὸς ἐφάνη, φανείσαν δὲ διακελεύσασθαι ὥστε καὶ ἅπαν ἀκοῦσαι τὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων στρατόπεδον, ὠνειδίσασαν πρότερον τάδε, “ὦ δαιμόνιοι, μέχρι κόσου ἔτι πρύμνην ἀνακρούσεσθε;”

85 Κατὰ μὲν δὴ Ἀθηναίους ἐτετάχατο Φοίνικες (οὗτοι γὰρ

8 γενέσθαι τῆς ναυμαχίας; 11 τὸ στρατόπεδον τῶν Ἑλλήνων; 13 ἀνακρούσεσθε (remos inhibebitis) Valla, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἀνακρούεσθε

8. Αἰγινῆται δέ: plainly a rival tradition. If the Athenians were on the extreme left, and the Aeginetans on the right, and the situation was such as above indicated, each claim may have been made in good faith, but the Aeginetan was more probably the true one. Whether it was the ship that had been away for the Diakids, which was actually the first engaged, may be more doubtful: it is such a happily ominous detail. The ship in question is clearly assumed to have been an Aeginetan; but Aristeides might have taken a berth in it.

10. λέγεται δὲ καὶ τάδε comes in well to remind us on what slender threads these λόγοι hang! The φάσμα here is nothing if not superhuman (cp. c. 94 infra); her voice alone is enough to prove that! Of the actual and living women and children, who, like enough, were lining the shores of Salamis and making the welkin ring, Hdt. says nothing.

11. διακελεύσασθαι: cp. c. 80 supra. τὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων στρατόπεδον seems here used of the navy alone and at sea; but there was a laager on shore which cannot have been wholly deserted, and perhaps this λόγος came from that quarter. Cp. c. 10. 14 supra.

12. δαίμονιοι, 'wretches,' 'luckless wights'; cp. 7. 48 supra.

85. 1. κατὰ μὲν δὴ Ἀθηναίους . . Φοίνικες: the Phoenician vessels were presumably on the right of the Persian line—if the Persian fleet was in line formation in accordance with Leake's hypothesis—or they were at the head of the column (probably three ships abreast, see Appendix VI. § 4), if the Persian fleet was entering the straits in column (the only conceivable formation for such a manoeuvre): in either case they might be described vaguely as holding τὸ πρὸς Ἐλευσινὸς τε καὶ ἐσπέρης κέρας, albeit undoubtedly this expression here squares best with the projection of the battle lines on Leake's plan. (If there were not a good deal in the text of Hdt. to suggest that plan it would never have been heard of.) It is the eminent merit of Professor W. W. Goodwin's paper, Papers Amer. Sch. Ath. i. 1885, 239 ff. (cp. Appendix VI. § 3) to have shown that the (natural) identification of τὸ πρὸς Ἐλευσινὸς τε καὶ ἐσπέρης κέρας in this place with τὸ ἀπ' ἐσπέρης κέρας in c. 76 supra is not necessary, and on a rational conception of the manoeuvres of the Persian fleet is, indeed, impossible. It by no means follows that Hdt. intended to distinguish them, or even clearly and consciously faced the problem of the identity or difference between them. Hdt. reported each movement in terms of his authorities, his sources; he had perhaps written a preliminary sketch or draft of the battle-piece before he ever saw the landscape: at no time did he compose an explicit, coherent, or relatively complete account. It was inevitable that Goodwin's suggestion should be challenged and discarded, in the forlorn hope of rehabilitating Hdt. as a competent war-correspondent; see 'Herodotus's Account of the Battle of Salamis,' by Pres. B. I. Wheeler in Trans. Am. Philol. Assoc. xxxiii. 1902, 127 ff. That kind of apology is hardly possible for students of Hdt. who deal with the work as a whole, and have realized the relation of Hdt. to his sources and the canons of his logography.

In strictest accuracy the wing, or column, towards Eleusis could not be the west wing: Eleusis is about due εἶχον τὸ πρὸς Ἐλευσίνος τε καὶ ἐσπέρης κέρας), κατὰ δὲ Λακεδαιμονίους Ἴωνες· οὗτοι δ' εἶχον τὸ πρὸς τὴν ἡῶ τε καὶ τὸν Πειραιέα. ἐβελοκάκεον μέντοι αὐτῶν κατὰ τὰς Θεμι-

85. 2 πρὸς Σαλαμῖνός Loeschke

3 δὲ β

4 αὐτέων z

north of 'Old Salamis,' and NNW. of Psyttaleia. But in entering the straits the Persian fleet would have been steering almost due west, and Eleusis would be ahead of it. The description is not one which should be found fault with under the circumstances: both its factors may be strictly true, not in relation to each other, but in relation to the Phoenician ships that fine morning—whether they were heading into the straits, or lying with their sterns towards the Attic coast off Mount Skaramanga (Aigaleos) and their stems to the bay of Salamis.

In either case the Athenians appear to be on the Greek left. This was the position which their hoplites occupied afterwards in the battle of Plataia, and the right wing was the natural place for the hegemonic state, or commander, to occupy (cp. 'the prytaneia' of Miltiades, and the position of the polemarch at Marathon: 6. 110, 111). The tactics of land-fighting were naturally transferred to the naval war. At Artemision, however, the Athenians had occupied apparently the right. There the Spartans wished to be in more immediate touch with Leonidas: the right was there also the post of danger; the Attic ships at Chalkis might be regarded as holding the extreme left (for the time being). In their own waters it may have been galling for the Athenians to hold the left; but Themistokles might gladly acquiesce in the inner station, which made a retreat for the Peloponnesians doubly difficult. It is, indeed, conceivable that had the Peloponnesian vessels at any time actually attempted to fly past the Athenian station, the barbarians might have enjoyed the spectacle of the Greeks πρὸς ἐσωτὸς ναυμαχέοντας—promised, or threatened, by Themistokles, pro bono publico, in c. 75 supra.

3. τὸ πρὸς τὴν ἡῶ τε καὶ τὸν Πειραιέα. Why Hdt. here substitutes the Peiraeus (an ἀπαξ λ. in his work!) for Munichia in c. 76 supra is an obscure problem, the solution of which might depend on the complete disclosure of the mystery of his sources. From the straits of Salamis (as W. W. Goodwin l.c. p. 252 n. observes) "the harbour of Peiraeus and all the lower land of the peninsula almost disappears from view, and the high hill of Munichia remains a most conspicuous landmark." The passage here before us, then, may come from a source, possibly even an 'Ionian' source, which was not looking back from the straits of Salamis, but was outside the straits, on sea, or even on land, and thought of Eleusis (quite invisible) and Peiraeus naturally as lying west and east.

If the conception above given of the manœuvres of the Persian fleet during the night be correct, it will appear probable that the Ionians in the first instance occupied the centre of the Persian lines—a position in which it would perhaps have been more difficult for them ἐβελοκάκεον. When the Persian position was developed, and altered, the Egyptians on the left being detached to circumnavigate the island and to block the Megarian channel, and the remainder moved up between Psyttaleia and the island on the one hand, the Attic shore on the other, the Ionian contingent may have occupied the left, or left centre of the Persian lines. In the morning when the Phoenician vessels entered the straits in column, and the Ionians swung round to follow, they would become the rear of the advancing column, and might easily extend back as far as the Peiraeus. But 'Peiraeus' may be here used almost as laxly in relation to actual orientation as 'Eleusis' just above. It would, however, be absolutely wrong and misleading if the Persian fleet were still drawn up in battle-array on the lines from the Attic coast through Psyttaleia to Keos-Kynosura; the left would then have been furthest from Peiraeus, and the right (i.e. the Phoenicians) furthest from Eleusis. Of all modern theories of the battle-lines at Salamis this one is the most difficult to reconcile with the authorities, Hdt. included, and with common sense.

4. τὰς Θεμιστοκλῆος ἐντολὰς: an implicit reference back to c. 22 supra.

5 στοκλέος ἐντολὰς ὀλίγοι, οἱ δὲ πλεῖνες οὐ. ἔχω μὲν νυν συγχῶν οὐνόματα τριηράρχων καταλέξει τῶν νέας Ἑλληνίδας ἐλόντων, χρήσομαι δὲ αὐτοῖσι οὐδὲν πλὴν Θεομήστορος τε τοῦ Ἀνδροδάμαντος καὶ Φυλάκου τοῦ Ἰστιαίου, Σαμίων ἀμφοτέρων.
 τοῦδε δὲ εἵνεκα μέμνημαι τούτων μόνων, ὅτι Θεομήστωρ μὲν
 10 διὰ τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον Σάμου ἐτυράννευσε καταστησάντων τῶν Περσέων, Φύλακος δὲ εὐεργέτης βασιλέος ἀνεγράφη καὶ χώρα ἐδωρήθη πολλῇ. οἱ δ' εὐεργέται βασιλέος ὀροσάγγαι καλέονται 86 περσιστί. περὶ μὲν νυν τούτους οὕτω εἶχε· τὸ δὲ πλήθος τῶν νεῶν ἐν τῇ Σαλαμῖνι ἐκερατίζετο, αἱ μὲν ὑπ' Ἀθηναίων

6 νῆας z 7 θεμήστορος B: θεομήστορος C 9 τοῦδε δὲ Reiske:
 τοῦ δὲ AB: τοῦ, δὲ CPS: τοῦδε Rz || τοντέων z || μόνων B 11
 βασιλῆος z || χώρα P, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: χώρα ceteri, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder: χώρα
 οἱ z 12 πολλῇ P, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: πολλή || οἱ δ' . . περσιστί.
 Nonne glossema delendum? || τοῦ βασιλῆος z 86. 1 οὕτω: τοῦτο B
 2 νηῶν z || ὑπὸ CRz

5. ἔχω μὲν νυν . . ἐλόντων: this remarkable statement seems to support the suggestion that in this place Hdt. is not following Athenian or Spartan sources, but authorities which were to be found on the Asiatic side; the particulars he gives are of obvious Samian provenience, perhaps even backed by a Persian countersign! τριηράρχων is used without any suggestion of Attic institutes.

7. Θεομήστορος τε τοῦ Ἀνδροδάμαντος: his establishment as 'tyrant' in Samos (cp. case of Koës of Mytilene 5. 11) immediately succeeded his services; cp. 9. 90 infra. The name Theomestor is rare, perhaps unique, certainly magnificent; his father's name (not noticed in Pauly, or in Pauly-Wissowa), hardly less so, is known from Aristotle (Pol. 2. 12. 14=1274 B) as that of a legislator of Rhegion (possibly the same man), and from Pausanias (2. 6. 6, 7. 6, 12. 6) as the mythical son of Chthonophyle (of Sikyon) by Phlias, son of Dionysos!

8. Φυλάκου τοῦ Ἰστιαίου: Phylakos is the name of a 'Delphian' hero, c. 39 supra, u.c., but is apparently unique as the name of an historical person. His father's name, Histiaios, is found in Hdt. at Termera, cp. 7. 98 supra, and at Miletos, cp. 7. 10 supra. If the great Milesian tyrant had really been a Samian, or of Samian extraction (so in fifteenth century Michael Apostolios 16. 81 ap. Pape-Benseler), would Hdt. have failed to let us know?

11. εὐεργέτης βασιλέος ἀνεγράφη: no doubt in the Royal Archives, but the fact might have stood recorded in an inscription, and at Samos. Unfortunately Hdt. does not specify where the man's great landed possessions were situated. On such rewards cp. 9. 107 infra. On ἀνεγράφη Blakesley well compares Plato Gorgias 132, and Stein C.I.G. 84, where ἐν στήλῃ λιθινῇ is added.

12. οἱ δ' εὐεργέται β. ὀροσάγγαι κ. περσιστί. If not a gloss—it has a great look of one—this remark is evidence in support of the early composition of these Books, for in 3. 140 is an anecdote of a Samian benefactor to Dareios, where the explanation would more naturally have come in; and this, indeed, a glossator might have observed as well as the author. The word ὄρ. is interpreted σωματοφύλακες βασιλέως by Hesych. and Photius, and apparently used in that sense by Sophokles Fr. 185, and Stein has a derivation accordingly, ὄρο=VAR, to keep ('ware')—σαγγ=Kshidāyata (Shah!). Sir H. Rawlinson ap. Rawlinson ad l. connected it with khur, 'worthy,' sansa=Zend sañgha, 'to praise'; Benfey and Oppert had other forms.

86. 2. ἐν τῇ Σαλαμῖνι is rather a curious way of describing the locality; it seems to lay the scene at least between Salamis and the mainland; the battle has always and everywhere been named by the Hellenic base.

ἐκερατίζετο: the verb (κερατίζειν, cp.

διαφθειρόμεναι αὐτὸν δὲ ὑπ' Αἰγινητέων. ἄτε γὰρ τῶν μὲν Ἑλλήνων σὺν κόσμῳ ναυμαχεόντων <καὶ> κατὰ τάξιν, τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων οὐτε τεταγμένων ἔτι οὐτε σὺν νόῳ ποιεόντων 5 οὐδὲν, ἔμελλε τοιοῦτό σφι συνοίσεσθαι ὁλόν περ ἀπέβη. καίτοι ἦσαν γε καὶ ἐγένοντο ταύτην τὴν ἡμέρην μακρῷ ἀμείνονες αὐτοὶ ἐκείνων ἢ πρὸς Εὐβοίῃ, πᾶς τις προθυμόμενος καὶ δειμαίνων Ξέρξην, ἐδόκεε τε ἕκαστος ἐκείνων θεήσασθαι βασιλέα.

Κατὰ μὲν δὴ τοὺς ἄλλους οὐκ ἔχω [μετεξετέρους] εἰπεῖν 87 ἀτρεκέως ὡς ἕκαστοι τῶν βαρβάρων ἢ τῶν Ἑλλήνων ἡγωνί-

4 καὶ addidit Stein<sup>2</sup> || κατὰ τάξιν del. Cobet 5 οὐτε Baiter: οὐ
6 ἔμελλε αB || τοιοῦτόν B 7 ἔσαν z 9 τε: τοι B || θεήσασθαι
CP: θεήσασθαι z: θηήσασθαι vel θηήσασθαι 87. 1 μετεξετέρους
secl. Stein, Holder, van H. || εἴπαι z, van H. 2 ὡς om. C

1. 88, 159, 2. 115, 121) is used rather (in its Homeric sense) to mean 'plundering' than merely 'destroying'; but cp. 7. 125 supra. We recur here, with the Athenians and Aeginetans, to the chief rival sources of c. 84 above.

3. ἄτε γὰρ τῶν μὲν Ἑλλήνων: the term is applied here only to those on the national side (cp. 7. 149 etc., cc. 111, 121, 132 infra); cp. Ἑλληνίς c. 87 infra, also Ἑλλήνων c. 89.

4. σὺν κόσμῳ is more or less reproduced just below by σὺν νόῳ, and κατὰ τάξιν is paralleled by τεταγμένων ita, the two merits affirmed of the Greeks, denied of 'the barbarians,' albeit hitherto the Phoenicians have been admittedly 'better sailors'; cp. c. 10 supra, while the exploits of sundry Greeks on the Persian side, recorded below, cc. 87, 90, seem to declare a certain degree of νοῦς. κοσμός Stein refers to (a) the command of individual ships, (b) the general discipline of crews, etc.; τάξις to manœuvres of divisions, each ship keeping its own place, etc., perhaps a little hypercritically; κόσμος particularly need not be denied of the ensemble.

6. ἔμελλε, 'was bound,' 'was sure' . . . συνοίσεσθαι and ἀπέβη mark a distinction without a difference; the συμφορά comes more home than the ἀποβάν, and the two words denote one and the same event looked at as it came home to the person, or as it 'went off' in its natural order or sequence.

7. ἦσαν γε καὶ ἐγένοντο κτλ. Hdt. apparently says two things in one sentence: ἦσαν ταύτην τὴν ἡμέρην (acc. of time; cp. Index) ἀμείνονες ἐκείνων, i.e. they surpassed themselves, cp. 5. 118; and ἐγένοντο ἀμείνονες ἢ πρὸς Εὐβοίῃ. 2. 25 αὐτὸς ἐκείνου ῥέει πολλῶ ὑποδεέστερος ἢ τοῦ θέρεος is not an exact parallel, as there is only one verb in that passage. But the double redundancy here is not unnatural, and the alternative does not so much lie between ἦσαν and ἐγένοντο as between αὐτοὶ ἐκείνων and ἢ πρὸς Εὐβοίῃ—the extra verb rather eases this alternative. There is a clear though general reference back to the account of the sea-fights off Artemision, cc. 6-17 supra, as in the words with which the chapter concludes back to c. 69 supra. Such implicit references are natural in a work composed for a reading public.

9. ἐδόκεε τε . . .: this sentence is co-ordinate grammatically not with the preceding participles, but with the principal verbs ἦσαν γε καὶ ἐγένοντο above. θεήσασθαι: the aorist is observable; each was feeling that the king saw him—the king's eye was on him. (It might be for a moment—any moment; but that would be enough!)

87. 1. κατὰ: c. 85 supra, l. 1, purely locative; there again, l. 4, sequent, or consequent (κατὰ τὰς ἐντολάς); here, thirdly, respective, quod attinet ad . . .

οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν ἀτρεκέως: a confession of the failure of his sources. What the historian apparently regrets is the lack of heroic anecdote; strategic, tactical details do not much preoccupy him.

2. ἕκαστοι: not individual men, but,

ζοντο· κατὰ δὲ Ἀρτεμισίην τάδε ἐγένετο, ἀπ' ὧν εὐδοκίμησε
 μᾶλλον ἔτι παρὰ βασιλεί. ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἐς θόρυβον πολλὸν 5 ἀπίκετο τὰ βασιλέος πρήγματα, ἐν τούτῳ τῷ καιρῷ ἡ νηὺς ἡ Ἀρτεμισίης ἐδιώκετο ὑπὸ νεὸς Ἀττικῆς· καὶ ἡ οὐκ ἔχουσα διαφυγεῖν, ἔμπροσθε γὰρ αὐτῆς ἦσαν ἄλλαι νέες φίλλαι, ἡ δὲ αὐτῆς πρὸς τῶν πολεμίων μάλιστα ἐτύγχανε εἴδουσα,
 ἔδοξέ οἱ τότε ποιῆσαι, τὸ καὶ συνήνεκε ποιησάση· διωκομένη
 10 γὰρ ὑπὸ τῆς Ἀττικῆς φέρουσα ἐνέβαλε νηὶ φιλίῃ ἀνδρῶν τε
 Καλυνδέων καὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπιπλέοντος τοῦ Καλυνδέων βασιλέος

4 βασιλῆι α: βασιλεῖ || ἐπεὶ γὰρ α 5 βασιλῆος α 6 ναὺς β
 || νεὸς (νηὸς α) || ἡ β 7 ἔμπροσθεν β || ἔσαν α || νῆες α 9
 συνήνεγκε α 10 τε: δὲ? Kallenberg 11 ἐπιπλέοντος van H. || βασιλῆος α

as always, individual sets of men, contingents, etc.

3. Ἀρτεμισίην: Hdt.'s countrywoman, concerning whom he might naturally have fuller information, especially of a personal kind, from the first. There is a clear implicit reference in μᾶλλον ἔτι back to c. 69 supra; cp. last chapter. Note the use of ἔτι with the comparative; it clearly does not stand for ἤδη.

4. ἐς θόρυβον π. ἀπίκετο τὰ β. πρήγματα: θόρυβος, confusion; cp. c. 90 infra. ἐς θ. ἀπίκετο (aor.) = ἐθορυβήθη. πρήγματα: cp. c. 75 supra.

6. ἐδιώκετο ὑπὸ ν. Ἀττικῆς, which turns out afterwards (c. 93 infra) to be the ship of Ameinias! (On the Asianic side they would not have known the Attic trierarch's name.) ἡ demonstrative: of the lady, not of the ship.

7. ἔμπροσθε γὰρ αὐτῆς ἦσαν ἄλλαι νέες φ. Had Artemisia already gone about, and was she in flight, heading out for Phaleron or the open sea? If so, her course is embarrassed by the Persian reserves, which filled all the fare-way to Munichia; c. 76 infra. But it is possible that ἔμπροσθε refers to vessels ahead of her in the Persian column, i.e. west of her; that the Attic squadron had partially headed round the Phoenician ships; and that Ameinias was driving in upon Artemisia from the further side, east (or north). Cp. c. 89 infra, ἐς τὸ πρόσθε, etc. By this time the lines are rather mixed; Artemisia will have been in the centre originally (cp. c. 85 supra), and perhaps on the left, or in the rear, of the Persian line or column, after the development of the Persian position; if an Athenian vessel now pursues her, the Greek left has already pushed out beyond Psyttaleia; or, if Ameinias was posted not on the extreme left, but on the extreme right of the Athenian position, then he is attacking Artemisia from the right, i.e. west side (or south).

8. ἡ δὲ αὐτῆς: sc. νηὺς. The position here indicated suggests that Artemisia's ship might just be clear of Psyttaleia; but Hdt.'s locatives are too vague for us to credit him with any clear vision of the situation. The πολέμιοι here must be the 'Hellenes.'

9. ἔδοξέ οἱ: a change of construction, anacoluthon, which leaves ἡ οὐκ ἔχουσα pendens; an exact parallel in 7. 177 supra.

συνήνεκε here carries an unusually pregnant sense, 'succeeded,' 'turned out well'; cp. 9. 37 infra, and contr. cc. 88, 90 infra. The success in question is the remote, not the immediate result of the manœuvre. (ποιησάση, 'after she had done it.')

10. φέρουσα ἐνέβαλε νηὶ φιλίῃ: the principal verb might be used more naturally of the ship (cp. c. 90 infra) than of the lady, and the active participle (cp. φερομένη et sim., cc. 90, 91, 9. 102 infra) is also remarkable: perhaps a compliment to this careering woman.

11. Καλυνδέων . . Δαμασιθύμων. The 'Kalyndeans' of this passage are hardly other folk than the 'Kalydnians' of 7. 99 supra (u.v.), nor can Damasiythymos, their Basileus, be other than Damasiythymos, son of Kandaules, of 7. 98 supra. Hdt. might seem, indeed, to have meant

Δαμασιθύμου. εἰ μὲν καὶ τι νεῖκος πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐγεγόνεε ἔτι περὶ Ἑλλήσποντον ἑόντων, οὐ μέντοι ἔχω γε εἰπεῖν οὔτε εἰ ἐκ προνοίης αὐτὰ ἐποίησε, οὔτε εἰ συνεκύρῃσεν ἡ τῶν Καλυνδέων κατὰ τύχην παραπεσοῦσα [νηὺς]. ὥς δὲ ἐνέβαλέ τε<sup>15</sup> καὶ κατέδυσε, εὐτυχίῃ χρησαμένη διπλᾶ ἑωυτὴν ἀγαθὰ ἐργάσατο. ὃ τε γὰρ τῆς Ἀττικῆς νεὸς τριήραρχος ὥς εἶδὲ μιν ἐμβάλλουσαν νηὶ ἀνδρῶν βαρβάρων, νομίσας τὴν νέα τὴν Ἀρτεμισίης ἢ Ἑλληνίδα εἶναι ἢ αὐτομολέειν ἐκ τῶν βαρβάρων καὶ αὐτοῖσι ἀμύνειν, ἀποστρέψας πρὸς ἄλλας ἐτράπετο. τοῦτο μὲν<sup>88</sup>

12 δαμασίθου R 13 εἶπαι z, van H. 15 κατατυχεῖν B ||
νηὺς secl. Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἐνέβαλλέ C 17 νεὸς A : νηὸς z 18 νῆα z

two different states, two different persons; but the variant forms, if both genuine, may be ascribed to various sources, and the failure to refer from the one passage to the other to Hdt.'s insouciance, his independence in composition. ἐπιπλέοντος: cp. 7. 97 supra.

12. εἰ μὲν καὶ τι νεῖκος κτλ.: this passage implicitly indicates that some authorities, some source (Stein says 'some other' Geschichtschreiber, logographer!) had a story of a quarrel between Artemisia and Damasiythymos, 'while the forces were "still" (ἔτι) in the Hellespontine region,' i.e. just before the transit of the Hellespont. Perhaps the locality is not so certain as the suggested date, i.e. before the Persian forces crossed into Europe. (It is at least doubtful whether Artemisia and Damasiythymos were on the Hellespont at all; cp. 7. 44, 59.) Hdt. has here lost a golden chance! What was the cause of the νεῖκος? Was it a woman's reason—spretae iniuria formae? Or a man's ambition? Damasiythymos might ill brook the 'hegemonia' of the Halikarnassian queen! Was the mother anxious for the succession of her boy? Was the Karian dynast intriguing against the Mutter-recht? (cp. p. 126a supra). There are all the elements of a romance, a tragedy, or at least a melodrama, behind this passing allusion: had the subject been already too well handled for Hdt. to retouch it? He repeats instead his formula of despair, οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν.

14. ἐκ προνοίης, de industria, of set purpose, deliberately.

αὐτά, 'it,' we should say. Cp. 7. 8 ἐν αὐτοῖσι.

συνεκύρῃσεν: so c. 92 infra, συνεκύρεον νέες. In a more abstract sense, 9. 90 infra.

15. κατὰ τύχην παραπεσοῦσα. Hdt. has forgotten that the ship of Damasiythymos was one of the five ships led by Artemisia, 7. 99 supra; there can have been very little 'chance' in the fact that it was stationed close by the queen's ship, and so came first in her way. παραπεσοῦσα, cp. Plato Rep. 561 B ἢ παραπίπτουσα ἀεὶ ἡδονῇ. ἐργάσατο, with double accus.; cp. c. 79 supra.

17. ὁ . . . τριήραρχος: namely, Ameinias. His views (νομίσας) may be matter of conjecture. μιν: sc. τὴν γυναῖκα.

18. ἀνδρῶν βαρβάρων: Karians, to wit; cp. c. 135 infra. ἐκ τῶν βαρβάρων, more generally.

20. αὐτοῖσι, sc. τοῖσι Ἑλλησι, 'his countrymen.' Krueger asserts that ἐνωτοῖσι would be 'more correct' (gehöriger), cp. c. 61 supra. Abicht observes that, owing to the proximity of τὴν νέα (i.e. as Subject), ἐνωτοῖσι could only refer to 'the Persians' (i.e. τοῖσι βαρβάρουσι). Stein rules that "Hdt. employs the Reflexive (pronoun) in regard to the more remote Subject (here τριήραρχος) only when the nearer Subject (here τὴν νέα) follows after"; or, as we might say: If a fresh subject intervene between the subject of a sentence and the verb, Hdt. substitutes the Personal for the Reflexive pronoun to describe a Reflexive relation between the main Subject and its verb; for the simple reason that (as Stein elsewhere suggests), the interposition of the fresh Subject would eclipse, or obscure, the direct relation of the Reflexive pronoun; cp. 1. 111 ἢ δὲ γυνὴ (ἐν φροντίδι ἦν) ὃ τι οὐκ ἐωθὼς ὁ

τοιοῦτο αὐτῇ συνήναικε γενέσθαι <ὥστε> διαφυγεῖν τε καὶ μὴ ἀπολέσθαι, τοῦτο δὲ συνέβη ὥστε κακὸν ἐργασαμένην ἀπὸ τούτων αὐτὴν μάλιστα εὐδοκιμῆσαι παρὰ Ξέρξη. λέγεται
 5 γὰρ βασιλέα θηγόμενον μαθεῖν τὴν νέα ἐμβαλοῦσαν, καὶ δὴ τινα εἰπεῖν τῶν παρόντων "δέσποτα, ὁρᾷς Ἀρτεμισίην ὡς εὖ ἀγωνίζεται καὶ νέα τῶν πολεμίων κατέδυσε;" καὶ τὸν ἐπειρέσθαι εἰ ἀληθῶς ἐστὶ Ἀρτεμισίης τὸ ἔργον, καὶ τοὺς φάναι, σαφῶς τὸ ἐπίσημον τῆς νεὸς ἐπισταμένους· τὴν δὲ 10 διαφθαρεῖσαν ἠπιστάτο εἶναι πολεμίνην. τά τε γὰρ ἄλλα, ὡς εἴρηται, αὐτῇ συνήναικε ἐς εὐτυχίην γενόμενα, καὶ τὸ τῶν ἐκ τῆς Καλυνδικῆς νεὸς μηδένα ἀποσωθέντα κατήγορον γενέσθαι.
 Ξέρξη δὲ εἰπεῖν λέγεται πρὸς τὰ φραζόμενα "οἱ μὲν ἄνδρες

88. 2 τοιοῦτον B || ὥστε conl. Stein<sup>2</sup> || διαφυγέειν codd. z 4 του-τέων z 5 βασιλῆα z: βασιλέα τε? Stein<sup>2</sup> || νῆα z || ἐμβαλλοῦσαν C:
 ἐμβάλλονσαν Naber 6 εἰπεῖν om. C: εἶπαι z, van H. 7 <ῆ> καὶ Naber || νῆα z 9 σαφῶς Pz || νεὸς B: νηὶς z 11 συνήναικε Pz: συνήνεικεν || ἐς om. C 12 νηὶς z || ἀποσωθέντα C 13 εἶπαι z, van H.

"Ἀρπαγὸς μεταπέμψαιτο αὐτῆς τὸν ἄνδρα, 1. 146 (σφέων τοὺς πατέρας), 2. 121 (αὐτοῦ τὴν κεφαλὴν). But the plural αὐτοῖσι here, after the singular subject, resembles the use of ἐωντοῖσι l.c. supra.

88. 1. τοῦτο μὲν . . τοῦτο δέ, 'in the first place . . in the second place'; cp. Index for reff.

3. κακὸν ἐργασαμένην αὐτὴν μάλιστα εὐδοκιμῆσαι παρὰ Ξέρξη: there is a dash of malicious humour at the expense both of the queen and of the king. ἀπὸ τούτων is superfluous, and the plural vague; the preposition here is scarcely temporal, but rather causal.

4. λέγεται γάρ: Grote questions the sequel of Artemisia's exploit (ἔργον); Rawlinson fails to see why. There is reason enough in that Hdt. himself questions it, as he shows by the three apologetic references to the source (λέγεται bis, φασὶ ad fin.).

6. τινα: hardly a Greek, presumably a Persian, who knew no better; but the τοὺς below (like τὸν demonstrative) might well refer to Greeks.

9. τὸ ἐπίσημον τῆς νεὸς: cp. τὸ σημεῖον c. 92 infra. Polyainos, 8. 53. 1, says Artemisia varied her 'ensigns,' sometimes showing Greek and sometimes Persian colours. Rawlinson regards that as the refinement of a later age, such ensigns not existing in 480 B.C., the figure-head, which could not be changed at pleasure, being the only ensign; cp. 3. 59 (which cannot prove a negative!). But the admiral's ensign can hardly have been a figure-head. "Flags are represented at the sterns of the Athenian ships of about 500 B.C.," Torr, Ancient Ships, p. 100.

ἐπισταμένους, like μαθεῖν just above, of sensible perception, and so more than ἐπιστήμη, followed by ἠπιστάτο meaning 'believed'—something less than ἐπιστήμη (a word not used by Hdt.). The psychological terminology of Hdt. is in a rudimentary stage; cp. his use of the words θυμός, νόος, φρήν, φρόνημα, ψυχὴ, διάνοια, μαθεῖν, ἐπίστασθαι, etc.

10. ὡς εἴρηται, just above, a reference back but of a few lines. συνήναικε ἐς εὐτυχίην γενόμενα recurs through συνήναικε γενέσθαι l. 1, to the συνήναικε in c. 87 supra, which was used there with much the same meaning as the fuller expression here.

12. μηδένα ἀποσωθέντα κατήγορον γενέσθαι: the participle is here essentially a part of the predicate; the meaning clearly being, not that none of the survivors impeached her, but that there were no survivors, and so no impeachment.

13. οἱ μὲν ἄνδρες κτλ.: the remark was borrowed from (or by) Artemisia, cp. c. 68 supra; it comes better from the lips of Xerxes.

γεγόνασί μοι γυναῖκες, αἱ δὲ γυναῖκες ἄνδρες." ταῦτα μὲν Ξέρξην φασὶ εἰπεῖν;

15

Ἐν δὲ τῷ πόνῳ τούτῳ ἀπὸ μὲν ἔθανε ὁ στρατηγὸς 89 Ἀριαβίγνης ὁ Δαρείου, Ξέρξῳ ἔων ἀδελφεός, ἀπὸ δὲ ἄλλοι πολλοὶ τε καὶ ὀνομαστοὶ Περσέων καὶ Μήδων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων συνμάχων, ὀλίγοι δὲ τινὲς καὶ Ἑλλήνων· ἅτε γὰρ νέειν ἐπιστάμενοι, τοῖσι αἱ νέες διεφθείροντο, καὶ μὴ ἐν χειρῶν 5 νόμῳ ἀπολλύμενοι, ἐς τὴν Σαλαμίνα διένειον. τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων οἱ πολλοὶ ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ διεφθάρησαν νέειν οὐκ ἐπιστάμενοι. ἐπεὶ δὲ αἱ πρῶται ἐς φυγὴν ἐτράποντο, ἐνθαῦτα αἱ πλείσται διεφθείροντο· οἱ γὰρ ὕπισθε τεταγμένοι, ἐς τὸ πρόσθε τῇσι νηυσὶ παριέναι πειρώμενοι ὥς ἀποδεξόμενοι τι 10
καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔργον βασιλεί, τῇσι σφετέρῃσι νηυσὶ φευγούσῃσι περιέπιπτον.

Ἐγένετο δὲ καὶ τότε ἐν τῷ θορύβῳ τούτῳ. τῶν τινες 90

89. 2 ἀριαβίγνης C || δὲ ἔων? Kallenberg 5 νῆες codd. z || καὶ :
οἱ Krueger, van H. 8 ἐπέτε? van H. || ἐσφυγεῖν B 9 ὅπισθεν B
10 πρόσθεν B: ἔμπροσθε z 11 βασιλεῖ AB || <τῇσι> φευγούσῃσι?
Stein<sup>2</sup>

89. 1. πόνῳ: cp. 6. 114, 7. 224.

ἀπὸ μὲν . . . ἀπὸ δέ: a tnesis—
well recalling the originally substantive quality of the preposition; cp. 5. 81 (καρδ).

2. Ἀριαβίγνης: cp. 7. 97 supra; he was admiral of the Ionio-Karian division.
His mother was a daughter of Gobryas,
so he was not full brother to the king.

3. τῶν ἄλλων συνμάχων: τῶν ἄλλων
is appositive, not adjectival; Περσέων, and even Μήδων, would hardly come under the head of συνμάχων. The Persians and Medes furnished Επίβαται,
cp. 7. 96 supra; the Sakai are here not specified, except so far as covered by συνμάχων. Ἑλλήνων seems to refer primarily to the national forces, but might cover at least some cases on the barbarian side; cp. c. 86 supra.

4. νέειν ἐπιστάμενοι: an art, not a science; cp. 7. 211, and c. 88 supra.
The participles refer not to the ὀλίγοι
πάντες who perished, but to the implied majority who survived, even when their ships were destroyed; but Hdt.'s way of putting the case is a little clumsy.
τοῖσι, relative.

5. ἐν χειρῶν νόμῳ: cp. 9. 48 infra;
cominus, hand to hand, with the ships laid alongside each other (συνπλακείσων τῶν νεῶν, cp. c. 84 supra) and the Επίβαται

fighting almost as on land. These ones too could have swum, but did not get the chance; nor, again, was it only those who lost their ships that knew how to swim!

6. ἐς τὴν Σαλαμίνα διένειον, 'swam right in to Salamis'—one might have expected some of them to have been picked up on the way. Were there no Greek ships left between them and the shore?

8. αἱ πρῶται: the vanguard, the leading ships, the head of the column,
the first line, in distinction to οἱ ὀπισθε
τεταγμένοι the rearward, the second line, the tail of the column, as the case may be; falling back upon those behind, the foremost ships threw everything
into confusion (πόνος, θόρυβος).

10. τῇσι νηυσὶ is a kind of instrumental, circumstantial, or descriptive dative.

ὥς ἀποδεξόμενοι τι καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔργον βασιλεί seems written in view of
c. 87 and c. 86—but was there really such keen competition (καὶ αὐτοὶ)?

11. τῇσι σφετέρῃσι νηυσὶ: just the ships on their own side, which were not their own! cp. σφετέρας 7. 194. With περιέπιπτον cp. περὶ, περὶ ἀλλήλας c.
16 supra.

90. 1. τῶν τινες Φοινίκων: a thoroughly

Φοινίκων, τῶν αἱ νέες διεφθάραι, ἐλθόντες παρὰ βασιλέα διέβαλλον τοὺς Ἴωνας, ὥς δι' ἐκείνους ἀπολοῖαι αἱ νέες, ὥς προδόντων. συνήνεικε ὦν οὕτω ὥστε Ἴωνων τε τοὺς στρατη-5 γοὺς μὴ ἀπολέσθαι Φοινίκων τε τοὺς διαβάλλοντας λαβεῖν τοῖόνδε μισθόν. ἔτι τούτων ταῦτα λεγόντων ἐνέβαλε νηὶ
'Αττικῇ Σαμοθρηκικῇ νηὺς. ἥ τε δὴ 'Αττικὴ κατεδύετο καὶ ἐπιφερομένη Αἰγιναίῃ νηὺς κατέδυσε τῶν Σαμοθρηκικῶν τὴν
νέα. ἅτε δὲ δὴ ἑόντες ἀκοντισταὶ οἱ Σαμοθρηκικες τοὺς ἐπι-

90. 2 Φοινίκων H. Stephanus: φοίνικες || νῆες :: διεφθαρέαιτο codd.
(διεφθειρέαιτο P) || βασιλῆα :: 3 ἀπολλοῖαιτο C || νῆες :: ὥς προδόντων del. Cobet, van H. 4 οὕτω <γενέσθαι> ὥστε? Stein<sup>2</sup>:
nonne melius οὕτω secluseris? (cp. van H. in l.) 5 διαβαλόντας ::
6 τοιοῦτον :: || τούτων :: || νηὶ (sic) B 7 σαμοθρηκικῇ BC:
σαμοθρηκικῇ ASV 8 αἰγινέῃ B :: σαμοθρηκικῶν B 9 νῆα ::
|| δὲ δὴ Stein<sup>3</sup>: δὲ P marg., Krueger, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: δὴ

Herodotean collocation, cp. 7. 143, 146
supra. The men in question would of course be of high position, kings or what not: it is a pity they are anonymous!
Cp. 7. 98.

2. διεφθάραι: a pluperfect, and with its full temporal force.

3. δι' ἐκείνους, 'thanks to them.' ὥς προδόντων seems to be added as an explanation, not by the Phoenicians,
but by the writer; it were as well away,
and, but for the change of case, might be bracketed as a gloss. What had the Ionians done? Was it the Ionians who had turned tail? Was it not the Phoenicians who had been leading the van? Were they angry that the Ionians had not made way, when they turned to flight? Or did they suspect the Ionians of collusion with the enemy,
and of purposely obstructing the passage?
Such questions may seem to treat the anecdote too seriously. It is in any case evidence of a rivalry and friction between Ionian and Phoenician, which was doubtless one of the elements of weakness on the Persian side.

4. συνήνεικε: here quite neutral; cp.
c. 88 supra. οὕτω, 'in the following way'—i. q. ὥδε.

Ἴωνων . . . τοὺς στρατηγούς: not the Persian admirals, but the (subordinate) Greek captains, or generals of squadrons.

6. μισθόν: ironical; cp. c. 117 infra.
Hdt. is not a lover of the Ionians, but he prefers them here to Phoenicians;
cp. 7. 23 supra.

ἐνέβαλε νηὶ 'Αττικῇ Σαμοθρηκικῇ νηὺς. The verb is naturally used; cp.
c. 87 supra. The involution of Attic, Samothrakian, and Aiginetan vessels is remarkable. The Athenian squadron must have taken up more than half the Greek lines of battle; the Aiginetans may have been posted (or had some of their ships posted) on the extreme left of the Peloponnesian contingent, or wing. The Athenian vessel may have come out left of Psyttaleia, and the Aiginetan on the right. The dramatic transaction, which is probably historical, should take place in the outer, not in the inner waters: the notion that it occurred under the very eyes of Xerxes is perhaps for the sake of the moral, i. e. fabulous.

The Samothrakians are in this anecdote regarded as Ionians: the primitive population was Pelasgian, 2. 51; 'Thracian Samos' (Homer, Il. 13. 12) was very naturally believed to have been colonized
by 'Samians,' Schol. ad l.c., Pausan. 7.
4. 3; but the story in Pausanias throws some doubt on their Ionism. Blakesley acutely remarks that 'Ionian' was the common orientalism for Hellene, and
cps. 4. 138, 6. 8, 7. 95 supra.

9. ἀκοντισταὶ: armed with the ἀκόν-τιον, the characteristic weapon of Thrace, of Asia Minor, of the Peltast (cp.
Appendix II. § 4), which here proves superior to the panoply of the hoplite.
The Samothrakian Peltasts cleared the deck of the heavy infantry, boarded and possessed themselves of the Aiginetan vessel (ἔσχον). The amount of ramming βάτας ἀπὸ τῆς καταδυσάσης νεὸς βάλλοντες ἀπήραξαν καὶ 10

ἐπέβησαν τε καὶ ἔσχον αὐτήν. ταῦτα γενόμενα τοὺς Ἴωνας ἐρρύσατο· ὥς γὰρ εἶδε σφέας Ξέρξης ἔργον μέγα ἐργασαμένους, ἐτράπετο πρὸς τοὺς Φοίνικας ὅλα ὑπερλυπεόμενός τε καὶ πάντας αἰτιώμενος, καὶ σφῶν ἐκέλευσε τὰς κεφαλὰς ἀποταμεῖν, ἵνα μὴ αὐτοὶ κακοὶ γενόμενοι τοὺς ἀμείνονας διαβάλλωσι. ὅκως 15
γὰρ τινὰ ἴδοι Ξέρξης τῶν ἐωυτοῦ ἔργον τι ἀποδεικνύμενον ἐν τῇ ναυμαχίῃ, κατήμενος ὑπὸ τῷ ὄρει τῷ ἀντίον Σαλαμῖνος
τὸ καλέεται Αἰγάλεως, ἀνεπνυθάνετο τὸν ποιήσαντα, καὶ οἱ

10 νεὸς C: νηὸς z || ἀπήραξαν z 13 πᾶν z 14 ἐκέλευε
Jacobitz 15 διαβάλλωσιν R 17 οὐρεῖ CPz, van H.

done is remarkable; and if the description is correct—and as early as 494 B.C. the Ionians at least were supposed to be competent in that manoeuvre, cp. 6. 12, 15—the battle of Salamis was not simply a land-fight on ‘wooden wall’ or ‘boarded’ field, but a true sea-fight, in which the ship was itself a weapon, and manoeuvres were as much the order of the day as simply jamming the ships alongside, and fighting ἐν χειρῶν νόμῳ, cp. c. 89.

12. ὥς γὰρ εἶδε σφέας Ξέρξης: if this great feat (ἔργον) really took place as described; if Xerxes with his own eyes saw it; if he was at that moment sitting somewhere on Mount Aigaleos, or on its skirts (see just below), then the scene of the action would more probably lie west of Phytaleia. The σφέας is rather vaguely referent to τοὺς Ἴωνας. In any case the royal logic was at fault: even if the Samothracians were Ionians, or passed as such, other Ionians, from Asia and elsewhere, might have deserved all the bad things the Phoenicians were supposed to have said of them. There can be no doubt that σφῶν refers to Φοίνικας. Xerxes did not order the Phoenicians to cut off the heads of the Ionians, and when he turned himself to the Phoenicians the act was mental rather than physical. ‘Heading’ was a regular formula, cp. 7. 35 supra, and Phoenicians were accustomed to it—in Ionian story. Hdt. below specifies that the king’s orders are executed. ἵνα μὴ . . . διαβάλλωσι seems to be a motive supplied by the narrator, not a part of the king’s doom.

17. κατήμενος ὑπὸ τῷ ὄρει . . . Αἰγάλεως. During at least some part of the day Xerxes may have been seated somewhere on a throne, from which he could witness the fight, ‘the principal officers of his household standing around him, the imperial parasol held by an attendant over his head, and the scribes by his side, writing down the names of those who had distinguished themselves in the action,” Leake, Athens and the Demi, ii.<sup>2</sup> 270. From Mount Aigaleos you can overlook the whole bay, and survey the waters both within and beyond the island of Lipsokulali: what a view!—but hardly from a seat ὑπὸ τῷ ὄρει, ‘at the foot of the mountain.’ If the seat of Xerxes was down there, or even down on the lower slopes, but little above the shore, not much would have been seen of the details of a battle, even all confined to the straits and bay of Salamis (Ambelaki).

18. The words τὸ καλέεται Αἰγάλεως have a parenthetic, not to say gloss-like appearance, but might easily have been inserted by the author himself, after making acquaintance with the scene. To survey all the possible area of action, to look down into the bay of Eleusis as well as into the bay of Salamis, Xerxes would have needed to ascend high on Mt. Skaramanga: the matter afloat this time was no mere parade, or procession, as in 4. 88, 7. 44 supra. Neither was the king bound to sit still in one spot all the time! He will have ridden to the foot of the ascent, and have moved up and about the high ground, attended by his aides-de-camp and suite, as the evolutions of the battle proceeded. Surely, had he been fixed to one spot, we should have heard how he sprang up from his seat, thrice and three times thrice, δέισαντα περὶ τῇ στρατιῇ (7. 212 supra). If Xerxes had a throne for this occasion its exact site is hard to define. The ancients themselves are not agreed.

γραμματισταὶ ἀνέγραφον πατρόθεν τὸν τριήραρχον καὶ τὴν

19 τὸν τε! Stein<sup>1</sup>

It first makes its appearance in the poetic source: Aischyl. Pers. 465 ff. ἔδραν γὰρ εἶχε παντὸς εὐαγγὲ στρατοῦ ὑψηλὸν ὄχθον ἄγχι πελαγίας ἁλός. In these lines ἔδραν is not necessarily even 'a seat,' much less 'his throne' (the ἀργυρόπους δίφρος preserved afterwards in the Akropolis and stolen by Glauketes, Demosth. c. Timocr. 24. 129, hence the silence of Pausan. 1. 27. 1). παντὸς στρατοῦ seems to cover army as well as fleet, and some of the army was, if Hdt. is to be trusted, west of Aigaleos (c. 70 supra). ὑψηλὸν ὄχθον would at any rate suit Aigaleos, and the top of Aigaleos, but contradicts Hdt.'s ὑπὸ τῷ ὄρει. πελαγίας ἁλός need not be pressed so as to rule out the straits, as though πέλαγος could only mean the high or open seas; but Aischylos is not anyway in strict accord with Hdt. Phanodemos (ap. Plutarch. Themist. 13) placed the seat of Xerxes ὑπὲρ τὸ Ἡράκλειον—which may be the source of Diodoros 11. 18. 2, so far as the king's position is concerned therein—but how far, how much above the Herakleion? The Herakleion apparently occupied the shore end of the ferry, across the narrowest part of the straits (cp. note to c. 97 infra). Akestodoros (Plutarch l.c.) located the king far to the west, beyond Eleusis, ἐν μεθορίῳ τῆς Μεγαρίδος ὑπὲρ τῶν καλουμένων Κεράτων. In that position he would have seen nothing at all of the actual battle described in Hdt., though he might have seen something worth seeing (cp. c. 94 infra). The tradition in Akestodoros deserves, however, less absolute contempt than it has received: the very fact that it is so remote from the apparent necessities of the case should have obtained for it a careful scrutiny. Considering that the army, or a part of the army, had moved in the night before the battle to the west (c. 70 supra); that on the day before the battle Demaratos and Dikaïos, eminent members of the king's suite, were on the Thriasian plain (c. 65 supra); that a detachment of the Persian fleet had been sent round Salamis to block the Megarian channel (c. 76 supra); that the Greeks were (perhaps) believed to be in full retreat through the bay of Eleusis (c. 75 supra), a position overlooking the Megarian

Sound might not have seemed ill-chosen for a bird's-eye view of the coming encounters. No one would have suggested it as commanding the actual scene of the battle of Salamis. Given the main facts of the battle, granted the obvious supposition that the king witnessed it, and a place was bound to be provided for him ἐναντίον τῆς Σαλαμίνος, pity that the authorities could not agree whether that place was at the top or the bottom of the mountain! That Xerxes actually ascended the Kerata is incredible. Even if he was at Eleusis on the morning of the battle, he would have hurried eastwards when the true state of the case was revealed by the early light. The greater part of the battle he may have actually overlooked from the heights of Skaramanga. The oddity in Aristodem. 1. 2 (καθεζόμενοι ἐπὶ τοῦ Πάρνηθος ὄρους) is surely a variant for Aigaleos—the whole for the part. Blakesley's ingenious hypothesis that Xerxes began on the top of the mountain and then descended to the neighbourhood of the Herakleion does not really bear out his own conclusion that "all the varying accounts may have some truth in them," for it ignores Akestodoros; nor does it square with the probable course of events: for at what hour did Xerxes start on the top of the mountain? Did he spend the night there? If not, the unexpected course of events in the morning would probably have upset the plan of ascent. In any case, you inevitably start at the bottom, not at the top of a mountain: once up, no doubt you are sure to come down. The traditional site of the Throne of Xerxes is on the hill fronting the road to the ferry, a little beyond the supposed site of the Herakleion. Lolling (Baedeker's Greece p. 108) suggested the rocky promontory of Keratopyrgos, which projects into the bay about three-quarters of a mile beyond the chapel of St. George, as the point from which Xerxes witnessed the battle, commanding as it does an admirable survey of the straits. It is now occupied by a powder magazine. The partial coincidence between the modern name of this promontory and the Kerata, in Akestodoros, is curious.

οἱ γραμματισταὶ ἀνέγραφον: we have seen these historiographers at πόλιν. πρὸς δέ τι καὶ προσεβάλετο φίλος ἔων <Ἰωσι> 20 Ἀριαράμνης ἀνὴρ Πέρσης παρεὼν τούτου τοῦ Φοινικηίου πάθεος. οἱ μὲν δὴ πρὸς τοὺς Φοίνικας ἐτράποντο,

Τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων ἐς φυγὴν τραπομένων καὶ ἐκπλεόντων 91
 πρὸς τὸ Φάληρον, Αἰγινῆται ὑποστάντες ἐν τῷ πορθμῷ ἔργα

20 δέ τι Bekker: δ' ἔτι B: δὲ ἔτι ceteri || προσεβάλλετο C: προσε-λάβετο Reiske, van H. || Ἰωσι coni. Stein, approb. van H.: Ἰώνων ante ἔων Abresch: cp. comment. infra work, under more favourable circumstances, before, 7. 100 supra. Possibly the royal Anagraphai may have contained the names of Theomestor and Phylakos, but Hdt. will scarcely have consulted them; cp. c. 85 supra.

19. πατρόθεν: cp. 6. 14, but not necessarily a Greek touch; the patronymic plays a prominent part in the Persian lists, e.g. 7. 61 ff. But τὸν τριήραρχον καὶ τὴν πόλιν sounds calculated mainly for the case of Greeks; what if not a πόλις but an ἔθνος were concerned? The whole sentence ὅκως γάρ . . τὴν πόλιν comes in very curiously here, and would be better placed at the end of c. 85 after πολλῇ.

20. πρὸς δέ κτλ. This is a further explanation of the escape of the Ionians and of the doom (πάθος) of the Phoenicians, but the phraseology is peculiar, and the text perhaps corrupt; cp. App. Crit. The texts vary between τι and ἐτι. προσεβάλετο is of doubtful sense and reading; see below.

φίλος ἔων is obscure: whose friend was Ariaramnes? Ἰωσι is conjectural. The last clause, too, οἱ μὲν δὴ κτλ., appears incomplete. Does the corruption extend perhaps much further than hitherto suspected? See following note.

προσεβάλετο might be a middle, or a passive, although if Ariaramnes is its subject it is presumably middle, and may be interpreted 'contributed somewhat (τι) to the disaster of the Phoenicians'; contribit ad illam Phoenicum cladem; Schäfer ap. Baehr: Stein compares Eurip. Med. 284 συμβάλλεται (sic) δὲ πολλὰ τοῦδε δειματός. Baehr himself prefers (with Lange) to take προσεβάλετο τι absolutely, and παρεὼν with τούτου . . πάθεος, 'present at this disaster' (surely wrong!). (Blakesley reads προσελάβετο and understands Ariaramnes to have shared the fate of the Phoenicians.) φίλος has been taken in three ways: τῶν Ἰώνων (Baehr), amicus regis (Valla), of the Phoenicians (Blakesley).

I am inclined to suspect that the real verb has here disappeared, and that προσεβάλετο may have come in from lower down, where τοῖσι προσεβάλετο αὐτῇ ἡ ἀχαρις τιμὴ (7. 36 supra), or some similar phrase, seems to have dropped out after οἱ μὲν δὴ. Perhaps the text in this passage ran πρὸς δὲ (ἐτι) καὶ ἐπελάβετο φίλος ἔων κτλ., in which case Ariaramnes was a friend of the Phoenicians, and the conjectural Ἰωσι must be omitted. With ἐπιλαμβάνεσθαι τινος cp. 1. 127 (προσάττω), 6. 49 (προφάσιος), 9. 99 (δυνάμιος), though it must be confessed that πάθεος is not in the same category.

21. Ἀριαράμνης. His name suggests that he was an Achaimenid; cp. 7. 11 supra.

91. 1. τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων covers, no doubt, Greeks on the Persian side, but would scarcely be used unless Phoenicians and other non-Hellenic folks were included.

ἐκπλεόντων πρὸς τὸ Φάληρον. If the barbarian lines had been all parallel with the Attic shore, then, when driven back and put to flight, the ships would naturally have run aground under Mount Aigaleos. The fact that they make out of the straits for Phaleron, though not perhaps in itself conclusive, favours the view that such was the natural line of retreat. Phaleron, not Peiraeus, is their goal, or base; cp. cc. 85, 67 supra.

2. Αἰγινῆται ὑποστάντες ἐν τῷ πορθμῷ. The Aiginetans will have made their way out of the straits to the right of Psyttaleia, unless the squadron here mentioned has come up, during the action, from home (cp. c. 46 supra), but the vessels here would surely have been αἱ ἀριστα πλεούσαι. ὑποστάντες suggests their being posted in ambush, lying in wait, or at least 'waylaying

ἀπεδέξαντο λόγου ἄξια. οἱ μὲν γὰρ Ἀθηναῖοι ἐν τῷ θορύβῳ ἐκεραίζον τὰς τε ἀντισταμένας καὶ τὰς φευγούσας τῶν νεῶν, οἱ δὲ Αἰγινῆται τὰς ἐκπλεούσας· ὅπως δὲ τινὲς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους 92 διαφύγοιεν, φερόμενοι ἐσέπιπτον ἐς τοὺς Αἰγινήτας. ἐνθαῦτα συνεκύρεον νέες ἢ τε Θεμιστοκλῆος διώκουσα νέα καὶ ἡ Πολυ-κρίτου τοῦ Κριοῦ ἀνδρὸς Αἰγινήτεω νηὶ ἐμβαλοῦσα Σιδωνίη, ἢ περ εἶλε τὴν προφυλάσσουσαν ἐπὶ Σκιαθῶ τὴν Αἰγιναίην, ἐπ' ἣς ἔπλεε Πυθέης ὁ Ἰσχενοῦ, τὸν οἱ Πέρσαι κατακοπέντα ἀρετῆς εἵνεκα εἶχον ἐν τῇ νηὶ ἐκπαγλεόμενοι· τὸν δὲ περιά-γουσα ἅμα τοῖσι Πέρσησι ἤλω <ή> νηὺς ἡ Σιδωνίη, ὥστε Πυθέην οὕτω σωθῆναι ἐς Αἶγιναν. ὥς δὲ ἐσεῖδε τὴν νέα τὴν Ἀττικὴν ὁ Πολύκριτος, ἔγνω τὸ σημήιον ἰδὼν τῆς στρατηγίδος,
10 καὶ βώσας τὸν Θεμιστοκλέα ἐπεκερτόμησε ἐς τῶν Αἰγινητέων

91. 4 νηῶν z 92. 2 νῆες z 3 αἰγινητέων B 5 Ἰσχενοῦ
H. Stephanus: ἰσχένου 6 νῆι B, cf. c. 90, 6 7 ἢ add. Stein<sup>2</sup>
8 νῆα z 9 ἔγνω τε! Stein<sup>2</sup> 10, 12 Θεμιστοκλῆα (bis) z

the foe,' as they would do if they were covered by Psyttaleia. ὁ πορθμός might doubtless refer to the water inside the straits (W. of Psyttaleia) primarily; but it is used, c. 76 supra, distinctly of the more open water to the east, and that interpretation seems to give a better sense here.

ἔργα ἀπέδειξαντο λ. ἄξ.: cp. 7. 211. These achievements helped to win them the prize; cp. c. 93 infra.

3. ἐν τῷ θορύβῳ might almost seem to be locative, in contrast with ἐν τῷ πορθμῷ—the Athenians destroying, ramming (ἐκεραίζον, c. 86 supra) those within in the mêlée, whether offering resistance or trying to escape, the Aeginetans waylaying those who were getting out, so that if they escaped (διαφ.) the Athenians inside Psyttaleia, they fell headlong (φ. ἐσέπ.) among the Aeginetans ambushed outside.

92. 2. συνεκύρεον: cp. συνεκύρησε c. 87 supra. The anecdote which follows is remarkable, inter alia, in its bearing on the problem of Hdt.'s composition. 'Polykritos, son of Krios, an Aeginetan,' is introduced, without the slightest apparent reference to the story of the meeting of his father Krios with King Kleomenes, 6. 50 supra. Perhaps this is the earlier passage and the earlier anecdote, the enmity of Polykritos and Themistokles having revived, or generated, the story of the mediocrity of Krios 10-11 years earlier; cp. Introduction,

§§ 7, 8. The Sidonian ship must have been originally on the right of the Persian line, or at the head of the Persian column. (By this time the Greek right has probably all pushed out well past Psyttaleia, but the Aeginetans ὑποστάντες, c. 91 supra.)

4. ἢ περ εἶλε . . ἐκπαγλεόμενοι: an implicit reference back to the story told 7. 181 supra, with close verbal coincidences, unintelligible except to a reader. ὥστε . . οὕτω is one thing, οὕτω ὥστε another; cp. c. 90 supra.

9. τὸ σημήιον . . τῆς στρατηγίδος: i.e. the admiral's flag, or ensign, whatever it was; cp. τὸ ἐπίσημον τῆς νεὸς (of Artemisia) c. 88 supra. That the ship was an Attic ship he would have known before identifying it as the Flag-ship. Themistokles was assuredly not the only Athenian Strategos at Salamis; probably all nine others were there (δέκατος αὐτός Thuc.), but he was certainly ἡγεμὼν—and doubtless had a thoroughly distinctive and unmistakable pennon or crest. K. O. Müller, Aeginetica p. 125, suggests that Polykritos was commander-in-chief of the Aeginetans; if so, he had supported Themistokles' plans, c. 74 supra. Or was he perhaps captain of the ship which had run the blockade to invoke the Aiakids?

10. βώσας . . ὀναδίζων, 'after a loud cry (perhaps Themistokles' very name) he reproached Themistokles in bitter

τὸν μηδισμόν ὀνειδίζων. ταῦτα μὲν νυν νηὶ ἐμβαλὼν ὁ Πολύκριτος ἀπέρριψε ἐς Θεμιστοκλέα· οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι τῶν αἰνέες περιεγένοντο, φεύγοντες ἀπίκοντο ἐς Φάληρον ὑπὸ τὸν πεζὸν στρατόν.

Ἐν δὲ τῇ ναυμαχίῃ ταύτῃ ἤκουσαν Ἑλλήνων ἄριστα 93 Αἰγινήται, ἐπὶ δὲ Ἀθηναῖοι, ἀνδρῶν δὲ Πολύκριτός τε ὁ Αἰγινήτης καὶ Ἀθηναῖοι Εὐμένης τε ὁ Ἀναγυράσιος καὶ Ἀμεινίης Παλληνεύς, ὃς καὶ Ἀρτεμισίην ἐπεδίωξε. εἰ μὲν νυν

11 <τῇ> νηὶ Reiske, van H. 13 νῆες 2 93. 3 Ἀθηναῖος 2
 || ἀναγυράσιος B 4 <ὁ> Παλληνεύς van H.: ἀμεινίης παλληνεύς R ||
 ἐπεδίωξεν B: ἀπεδίωξε 2

terms with reference to the charge of medism against the Aeginetans—a rather clumsy passage, containing an obscure allusion—nothing having previously been said of any charge of ‘medism’ against Aigina (except the old charge back in 491 B.C., cp. 6. 49 supra: had Themistokles a hand in that?). With ἐπεκερτόμην cp. the adj. κέρτομος in 5. 83. One is almost tempted to think that the Attic and Aeginetan ship had collided (νηὶ ἐμβαλὼν). The emendations do not affect this materially. ἀπέρριψε: cp. 4. 142, 1. 32, 153.

13. ἐς Φάληρον ὑπὸ τὸν πεζὸν στρατόν, ‘into Phaleron, under cover of the land-forces’—which cannot, therefore, all have marched westward; cp. c. 70 supra. Doubtless the Persian land-forces had lined the whole coast of the straits during the day.

93. 1. ἤκουσαν Ἑλλήνων ἄριστα Αἰγινήται: i.e. the Aeginetans, among states or contingents, obtained the ἀριστεία: cp. c. 122 infra. When was the award made? Immediately after the battle! The Athenians (had) obtained the award for Artemision; cp. c. 17 supra. For εἶ, κακῶς ἀκούειν cp. 7. 16, 6. 86, 2. 173; and cp. 3. 131. The aid of the Aikidai may have contributed to the Aeginetan award. It was alleged that the islanders had begun the fight, and with the trireme which had brought that divine aid; cp. c. 84 supra. The Athenians perhaps regarded this award as an injustice to themselves; but it was made not for size and weight of vessels, nor for wisdom in the command, nor for the sacrifice of hearth and home, but simply for collective and individual valour in the actual engagement, and we need not assume that it was flagrantly unfair. Hdt.’s account of the battle does perhaps less than justice to the action of the Greek right. The Athenian orator in Thuc. 1. 74 does not precisely challenge this award, and Themistokles had not much to complain of (cc. 123, 124 infra).

2. ἐπὶ: as in cc. 67, 113.

ἀνδρῶν δέ: included in Ἑλλήνων above, which therefore has no μὲν.

Πολύκριτος: c. 92 supra.

3. Εὐμένης ὁ Ἀναγυράσιος: i.e. Eumenes of the deme of Ἀναγυροῦς (of the tribe Erechtheis, situate to SE. of Hymettos, and comprising the bay and plain of the modern village Vari, named from the ἀνάγυρος, anagyris foetida, stinking bean-trefoil; cp. L. & S. and Milchhoefer ap. Pauly-Wissowa i. 2028). The Demotikon shows the official character of the record; but of this Eumenes nothing more appears to be known. Is it possible that Hdt. has, c. 84 supra, transferred to Ameinias what belongs to Eumenes? Ameinias has enough to his credit without that! cp. c. 87. There is here a clear reference back to that passage.

4. εἰ μὲν . . οὐκ ἂν . . πρότερον ἢ . . ἦλω: a very pretty conditional sentence. ‘Had he known that Artemisia was aboard, he would not have abandoned the chase until he had captured her or been himself taken prisoner.’ ταύτῃ is rather loose, as her ship has not been mentioned; εἰ μὲν νυν ἔμαθε, οὐκ ἂν ἐπαύσατο is of course a perfectly normal form of conditional sentence; πλείοι is certainly defensible in the dependent sentence; cp. είεν c. 107, and App. Crit. The verbs εἶλε and ἦλω in the indicative appear to be complementary to the construction of the protasis. Baehr’s notion

5 ἔμαθε ὅτι ἐν ταύτῃ πλέει Ἀρτεμισίη, οὐκ ἂν ἐπαύσατο πρό-
 τερον ἢ εἰλέ μιν ἢ καὶ αὐτὸς ἦλω. τοῖσι γὰρ Ἀθηναίων τριηράρχοισι παρεκέλευστο, πρὸς δὲ καὶ ἄεθλον ἔκειτο μύρια δραχμαί, ὃς ἂν μιν ζῶν ἔλῃ· δεινὸν γάρ τι ἐποιοῦντο γυναῖκα ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀθήνας στρατεύεσθαι. αὕτη μὲν δὴ, ὥς πρότερον 10 εἴρηται, διέφυγε· ἦσαν δὲ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι, τῶν αἱ νέες περιεγεγόνεσαν, ἐν τῷ Φαλήρῳ.

94 Ἀδείμαντον δὲ τὸν Κορίνθιον στρατηγὸν λέγουσι Ἀθηναῖοι

5 πλώει ἡ Ἀρτεμισίη z 7 παρακέλευστο CPz 8 τοι z
 10 εἴρηται 'Plerumque H. addit μοι' van H. || διέφυγε om. C || ἦσαν . .
 Φαλήρῳ del. Krueger approb. van H. || ἔσαν z || νῆες z 94. 1
 Κορινθίων Naber, van H. ('sed fortasse insititium est στρατηγὸν') that δν has to be mentally supplied is not happy. The double use of ἢ, comparative, and simply alternative, is noticeable.

6. Ἀθηναίων τριηράρχοισι: the term τριηραρχος is used freely of the ship-captains, or commanders, on both sides, and of any folk; though at Athens a special form of the τριηραρχία had perhaps already been instituted; cp. Appendix III. § 4.

7. παρεκέλευστο: a strict temporal pl.p. from παρακελεύεσθαι: cp. c. 15 supra, 9. 102 (absolutely).

μύρια δραχμαί: 100 minai, or 1½ talents, say £400, which at the then value of money might be multiplied by at least ten to give the equivalent.

8. ὃς ἂν μιν ζῶν ἔλῃ, (for) 'whoever took her alive.' What did they intend to do with her? It was hardly chivalry that prompted the proclamation: yet was not their guardian deity of the feminine gender? ζῶς (sic) 1. 194, 2. 70, 122, 132, 7. 113.

δεινὸν . . στρατεύεσθαι, 'they took it sorely to heart that a woman should be on the war-trail against Athens'—δ. ποιεῖσθαι 7. 35 etc. There was the precedent of the Amazons! Cp. 9. 27 infra. That war had ended with a wedding.

9. ὥς πρότερον εἴρηται: an explicit reference to c. 87 supra. μοι would make the phrase less like a gloss.

10. ἦσαν δὲ . . ἐν τῷ Φαλήρῳ. This sentence is a repetition of the concluding words of c. 92, but with a difference: ἀπικοντο is replaced by ἦσαν (action by condition), τῶν αἱ νέες περιεγόντο by τῶν αἱ ν. περιεγεγόνεσαν (aorist by pluperfect), and ἐς Φάληρον by ἐν τῷ

Φαλήρῳ (motion by rest). Even καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι adds a point. But cp. App. Crit.

94. 1. Ἀδείμαντον: c. 5 supra, and cp. 7. 137.

λέγουσι Ἀθηναῖοι: the story here told from Athenian sources is a transparent bit of scandal, due to the rivalry and jealousy of Athens and Corinth in and after the Persian war. It is improbable, if not absurd, in itself; it is contradicted by the Corinthians, who were supported by the rest of Greece: Plutarch de Hdti. malig. 39 has an easy task in refuting it, by the evidence of extant monuments, and epitaphs and stories. Dio Chrysostom (?) says, Or. 37. 7 (ed. Teubner ii. p. 295), that the first draft of Hdt.'s history did not contain the story, and that Hdt. inserted it to revenge himself for the refusal of the Corinthians to give him money. The fact (of composition) and the explanation can here be distinguished. The explanation is itself 'malignant,' and (as Plutarch shows) the anecdote is hardly less to the discredit of the Athenians than of the Corinthians—one might indeed say, more.

The story might well be an addition, an insertion, by the author, in a second or third draft; it has the air of an anecdote, and Hdt. uses below one of the rare formulae (φάτις ἔχει) which are most suggestive of oral sources; cp. Introduction, §§ 9, 10. But false as the story must be, had the Athenians no excuse, no peg on which to hang the scandal? If a detachment of the Persian fleet had been sent to circumnavigate Salamis, and to bar or to penetrate the Megarid channel, a squadron of Greek αὐτίκα κατ' ἄρχάς, ὡς συνέμισγον αἱ νέες, ἐκπλαγυντα τε καὶ ὑπερδείσαντα, τὰ ἱστία ἀειράμενον οἴχεσθαι φεύγοντα, ἰδόντας δὲ τοὺς Κορινθίους τὴν στρατηγίδα φεύγουσαν ὡσαύτως οἴχεσθαι. ὡς δὲ ἄρα φεύγοντας γίνεσθαι τῆς Σαλαμίνης κατὰ τὸν ἱρὸν Ἀθηναίης Σκιράδος, περιπίπτειν σφί κέλητα θείῃ πομπῇ,

2 καταρχὰς AB || νῆες π 3 τὰ del. Krueger 4 φέρουσιν C
6 τὸ ἱρὸν π, van H. || σκιρράδος B

ships must have been detached to confront the 'barbarians' and keep them out. The 40 Korinthian ships may have been detached on this service (cp. the service of the 53 Athenian ships at Chalkis, c. 14 supra), and may even have had some fighting to do on their own account. The Athenian travesty need not be brought down to the date of the Archidamian war in 431 B.C.; the first Peloponnesian war in 458 B.C. would be a possible occasion; but there was already friction enough in 480 B.C. for a deal of mutual scandal to be set afloat.

2. αὐτίκα κατ' ἄρχάς: cp. 7. 88 supra.

συνέμισγον: here of hostile encounter, cp. 1. 166, 4. 127, 6. 14; of friendly converse, cc. 67, 79 supra, etc.

3. τὰ ἱστία ἀειράμενον: cp. c. 56 supra.

4. τοὺς Κορινθίους: all forty vessels! c. 43 supra; what of the Amprakiotes, and Leukadians (making together ten more, c. 45 supra)! The Athenians forgot to account for them; but probably they accompanied the Korinthians for better or worse.

5. ἄρα: still the Athenian reporter; the word has a touch of malignity here, even if it betokens 'an advance in the action' (Abicht) as in 7. 116, 9. 8.

κατὰ ἱρὸν Ἀθηναίης Σκιράδος. According to Pausan. 1. 36. 4 the oldest temple of Athene Skiras was at Phaleron, and had been founded by a diviner from Dodona named Σκίρος, who had fallen in the war between the Eleusinians and Erechtheus, and had been buried, by them, near a torrent, which afterwards, as well as the place, was known by his name. The temple here in question cannot be the one at Phaleron; it is plainly on Salamis. Strabo 393 gives Σκίρας as an old name of Salamis, 'from some hero,' and therefrom derives also the title of Athene. The Σκιρανίς ὁδὸς is not far off, cp. c. 70 supra. σκίρος means hard, harsh (σκληρός), and appears in the names of rough places, cp. Σκιρίται. The connexion with σκίρον, Σκιροφόρια (cp. Strabo l.c.) is doubtless based upon a Volksetymologie. The temple on Salamis may have had no proper connexion with the temple at Phaleron. As to its position: (i.) Stein places the temple of Athene Skiras on the extreme southern point of the island; the ἄκρον τὸ Σκιράδιον is mentioned by Plutarch, Solon 9, as apparently in the neighbourhood of a χηλή τις πρὸς τὴν Εὐβοίαν (sic) ἀποβλέπουσα, and in Mor. 870 (= de Hdt. m. 39) this episode is located περὶ τὰ λήγοντα τῆς Σαλαμίνης—which would perhaps suit that 'end' of Salamis best. If this view be correct the line of the Korinthian flight would lie outside the island, and be quite inconsistent with any of the theories of the battle-lines. (ii.) Leake, Topogr. and Dem. ii.<sup>2</sup> 171 ff., identified the spot with "the north-western promontory of Salamis" now occupied by a monastery of the Παναγία φανερωμένη (the Virgin brought to light). The monastery stands on the site of an Hellenic building. This position would suit the argument better; and the continued existence of a sacred building is in its favour. (iii.) Westermann ad Plutarch. makes it the extreme western promontory of Salamis, nearest Megara. This location suits best with the suggestion above made in regard to the true services of the Korinthians; moreover, if one were concerned to rationalize the incident of the κέλης this position would be the most intelligible: a message, carried from the Greek fleet, across the wasp's waist of Salamis, and then by boat to Budoron, might easily have 'met' the Korinthians as they made their way out of the straits.

6. περιπίπτειν, 'encountered,' c. 89 supra.

κέλητα: here inevitably a boat, cp. 7. 86 supra; θείῃ πομπῇ 4. 152 etc.

τὸν οὔτε πέμψαντα φανῆναι οὐδένα, οὔτε τι τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς στρατιῆς δὴ εἰδόσι προσφέρεσθαι τοῖσι Κορινθίοισι· τῇ δὴ συμβάλλονται εἶναι θεῖον τὸ πρήγμα. ὥς γὰρ ἀγγχοῦ γενέσθαι 10 τῶν νεῶν, τοὺς ἀπὸ τοῦ κέλῃτος λέγειν τάδε. “Ἀδείμαντε, σὺ μὲν ἀποστρέψας τὰς νέας ἐς φυγὴν ὄρμησαι καταπροδοὺς τοὺς Ἕλληνας· οἱ δὲ καὶ δὴ νικῶσι ὅσον αὐτοὶ ἡρῶντο ἐπικρατήσαντες τῶν ἐχθρῶν.” ταῦτα λεγόντων ἀπιστέειν γὰρ τὸν Ἀδείμαντον, αὐτὶς τάδε λέγειν, ὥς αὐτοὶ οἰοί τε εἶεν 15 ἀγόμενοι ὁμηροὶ ἀποθνήσκουσιν, ἣν μὴ νικῶντες φαίνονται οἱ Ἕλληνες. οὕτω δὴ ἀποστρέψαντα τὴν νέαν αὐτόν τε καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐπ’ ἐξεργασμένοις ἐλθεῖν ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον. τούτους μὲν τοιαύτη φάτις ἔχει ὑπὸ Ἀθηναίων, οὐ μέντοι αὐτοὶ γε Κορινθιοὶ ὁμολογέουσι, ἀλλ’ ἐν πρώτοις σφέας αὐτοὺς τῆς
20 ναυμαχίης νομίζουσι γενέσθαι· μαρτυρεῖ δὲ σφί καὶ ἡ ἄλλη Ἑλλάς.

95 Ἀριστείδης δὲ ὁ Λυσιμάχου ἀνὴρ Ἀθηναῖος, τοῦ καὶ

7 φάναι C 8 τῇ δὴ Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 8 (et Madvig), Holder, van H.:
τῇδε δὲ 10 νηῶν z || λέγει C 11 ναὺς || φυγεῖν B || ὄρμησαι B, Stein<sup>1</sup> 12 αὐτοῖς: αὐ B 13 ἐπικρατήσαντες Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.:
ἐπικρατῆσαι 14 καὶ ὥς? Stein<sup>3</sup> || τε del. Cobet, van H.: ‘expectabam
ἐτοίμοι vel ἄρτιοι’ van H. 16 ἀποστρέψαντες z || νῆα z 17
ἐπεξεργασμένοις Cz 20 μαρτυρεῖ codd. z, Holder, van H.

7. τὸν οὔτε . . οὐδένα. ‘It was never discovered that any one had despatched the boat,’ rather than ‘it was evident that no one had despatched the boat’—a ὅσπερ would make the point clearer. But there was apparently nothing at the moment in evidence to suggest to the Corinthians the supernatural character of the occurrence.

οὔτε τι . . Κορινθίοις: the meaning is clear, but the expression is involved: ‘and the Corinthians whom it approached knew nothing of the fortunes of the fleet’; i.e. προσφέρεσθαι τε τ. Κ. οὐδὲν τῶν ἀπὸ τ. στ. εἰδόσι. The participle is essentially a part of the predicate. τὰ ἀπὸ, as of news from; cp. 4. 54 τὰ ἀπὸ τούτων τῶν ποταμῶν.

9. συμβάλλονται: coniiciunt; sc. οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι, οἱ λέγοντες.

10. τοὺς ἀπὸ τοῦ κέλῃτος: a false parallel to τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς στρατιῆς just above; perhaps an ‘unconscious iteration.’

11. ἀποστρέψας apparently means ‘having turned tail,’ or having turned aside, cp. c. 87 supra; which shows that τὰς νέας is here superfluous; cp. 4. 43. The word is repeated below, of the return from flight.

ἐς φυγὴν ὄρμησαι: the verb is apparently perf. pass. unaugmented; cp. App. Crit. καὶ δὴ=§δὴ 4. 102. καταπροδοὺς: cp. 7. 157, 9. 7, 11 etc.

12. ὅσον αὐτοὶ ἡρῶντο, ‘to the height of their own prayers,’ i.e. of the Greeks.

14. ὥς αὐτοὶ . . ἀποθνήσκουσιν: i.e. the men in the boat (their number is not given) offered to be treated as hostages, to go bail, for the truth of their statement. Yet Adeimantos lets them depart, apparently convinced by this generous offer! ἀγόμενοι, middle, ‘of their own accord.’

17. ἐπ’ ἐξεργασμένοις ἐλθεῖν: cp. 9. 77 infra.

τὸ στρατόπεδον, the fleet; cp. c. 11 l. 7, c. 84 l. 11 supra.

18. φάτις ἔχει: cp. 7. 3 supra, and Introduction, § 10.

95. 1. Ἀριστείδης . . Ἀθηναῖος: cp. c. 79 supra. To have the full description ὀλίγω τι πρότερον τούτων ἐπεμνήσθην ὡς ἀνδρὸς ἀρίστου, οὗτος ἐν τῷ θορύβῳ τούτῳ τῷ περὶ Σαλαμίνα γενομένῳ τάδε ἐποίηε· παραλαβὼν πολλοὺς τῶν ὀπλιτέων οἱ παρατετάχατο παρὰ τὴν ἀκτὴν τῆς Σαλαμίνης χώρας, γένος ἔοντες Ἀθηναῖοι, 5

95. 2 ἐμνήσθην Pz

4 οἱ: οἱ R: οἱ πολλοὶ z

of the man repeated totidem verbis within a few pages, together with the express and unusually explicit reference back (τοῦ . . . ἀρίστου), creates a problem in regard to Hdt.'s composition. It can hardly be that the two passages belong to one and the same draft of the Book, and were written in einem Flug. This passage may belong to the first draft, that to the second; in which case the back reference was inserted, apologetically, without sacrificing the 'patronymic' and 'ethnic,' which serve to emphasize the deed of Aristides. Was Aristides in command of all the Athenian hoplites on shore (amounting to some thousands), while Themistokles was in command of the fleet?

3. τάδε ἐποίηε. There are three accounts of the exploit, more or less differing from each other, but substantially reconcilable: (i.) Aischylos (Persae 447 ff.) places the affair late in the day apparently, when the enemy's fleet has been beaten, and there is nothing to prevent the Greeks surrounding the island with their own ships (Blakesley). It is not, however, correct to say that Aischylos represents the assault as made by the actual crews of the vessels (Rawlinson); and it is only fair to observe that in Aischylos Xerxes is still looking on. (ii.) Herodotus places the exploit late in his narrative (perhaps in conformity with Aischylos), but apparently dates the affair earlier on the day of battle (ἐν τῷ θορύβῳ τούτῳ κτλ.: cp. e. 91 supra). He does not explain how Aristides got his men on to the island: boats may be supposed. A happy thought apparently occurs to Aristides while the battle is raging, and he executes it instantly. (iii.) Plutarch, Aristeid. 9, of course, goes further. Aristides observes that the island is strongly occupied: puts picked volunteers in boats, destroys all the Persians, except a few (whom he sends to Themistokles, three nephews of the king included, who were immolated ὠμῶς τῇ Διονύσῳ), and occupies the whole shore of the island with troops in order to assist the men of the fleet in destroying the enemy. Yet Plutarch may be substantially right.

The occupation of Psyttaleia by the Persians on this occasion proved as great a tactical blunder as the occupation of Sphacteria by the Spartans in 425 B.C., and for the same reason, that the occupants of the island were involved in the fate of the fleet. But there was more excuse for the Persian. The naval superiority of the Greeks was not a foregone conclusion, and the occupation of Psyttaleia probably had as its ultimate object a landing on Salamis, and an assault upon the Greek forces in the island. This aspect of the case makes it not improbable that the Athenian attack on the island should be placed ἐν τῷ θορύβῳ τούτῳ with Hdt., with Plutarch, and even possibly with Aischylos: it was not a mere afterthought, or sequel of the battle, but an essential part of it, concerted, in all probability, between Themistokles and Aristides. The Athenian hoplites remembered Marathon: not a few of them had even fought there.

4. τῶν ὀπλιτέων οἱ παρατετάχατο: he did not denude Salamis of its defenders. The παράταξις shows that the generals perfectly understood the situation: just at that point, where the Greek right wing was posted, a success, even temporary, on the part of the Persians, would have led to an attempt to land from Psyttaleia upon Salamis (Kynosura), from which it would have been difficult to dislodge the enemy.

5. τὴν ἀκτὴν τῆς Σαλαμίνης χώρας may refer primarily to Keos = Kynosura, but need scarcely be confined to that promontory. If Aristides was in command (στρατηγὸς ἐπὶ τὰ ὅπλα) he would naturally have been on the right in this immediate neighbourhood.

γένος ἔοντες Ἀθηναῖοι: this particularity is remarkable: were his volunteers primarily the Salaminian οἰκήτορες?

ἐς τὴν Ψυττάλειαν νῆσον ἀπέβησε ἄγων· οἱ τοὺς Πέρσας τοὺς ἐν τῇ νησίδι ταύτῃ κατεφόνευσαν πάντας.

- 96 Ὡς δὲ ἡ ναυμαχία διελέλυτο, κατειρύσαντες ἐς τὴν Σαλαμίνα οἱ Ἕλληνες τῶν ναυηγίων ὅσα ταύτῃ ἐτύγχανε ἔτι ἑόντα, ἔτοιμοι ἦσαν ἐς ἄλλην ναυμαχίην, ἐλπίζοντες τῇσι περιούσησι νηυσὶ ἔτι χρῆσεσθαι βασιλέα. τῶν δὲ ναυηγίων 5 πολλὰ ὑπολαβὼν ἄνεμος ζέφυρος ἔφερε τῆς Ἀττικῆς ἐπὶ τὴν ἡίονα τὴν καλεομένην Κωλιάδα· ὥστε ἀποπλησθῆναι τὸν χρησμὸν τὸν τε ἄλλον πάντα τὸν περὶ τῆς ναυμαχίας ταύτης

6 νῆσον del. Cobet, Holder, van H. 7 νησίδι CPz 96. 1 κατειρύσαντες CP: κατερρύσαντες z 2 ταύτῃ α: ταύτῃ ἔτι B 3 ἐτοίμοι CPz || ἔσαν z 4 βασιλῆα z 5 ὑποβαλὼν C || ὁ ἄνεμος z || ἐξέφερε τοῖς Ἀττικοῖς Lex. Vindob. p. 181 6 ἀποπλησθῆναι Valla (ut impletum sit): ἀποπλησθῆναι Buttmann: ἀποπεπλησθῆναι Abicht, van H.: ἀποπληῆσαι

6. Ψυττάλειαν: c. 76 supra. According to Steph. Byz. the island was named from Ψύτταλος: but what of him?

ἀπέβησε ἄγων: he headed the landing-party. ἀπέβ. is trans. The last sentence of the chapter denies the sacrifice, the story of which is preserved by Plutarch; see above.

96. 1. διελέλυτο: pl.p. There is no more actual fighting going on. Aischylos, Pers. 428, does not say that the actual fighting, but that the weeping and wailing lasted ἕως κελαινῆς νυκτὸς δμῦ ἀφείλετο. Hdt. plainly implies that the battle was over, in time apparently for the Greeks to apprehend a fresh attack.

κατειρύσαντες, to land. In the Odyssey it is always used of dragging the vessel down into the sea.

2. ὅσα ταύτῃ . . ἔτι ἑόντα: i.e. not yet driven by wind or current to the Attic coast; see just below. They would easily possess themselves of the wrecks west of Psyttaleia. Evidently at first they did not realize the magnitude of their success, or the depression of the enemy, but expected (ἐλπίζοντες) that the king would order a fresh attack.

3. τῇσι περιούσησι νηυσί: not merely, or so much, those which had returned to Phaleron (c. 92 supra), as the squadron which had moved round the island the night before, and were still perhaps almost intact, c. 76 supra. The text may originally have proceeded Ξέρξης δὲ κτλ. c. 97 infra; the intervening passage has the air of a παρενθήκη (cp. 7. 171), or προσθήκη (4. 30), added in his second draft by Hdt. after a visit to Athens; cp. Introduction, § 9.

5. ὑπολαβὼν: as in 7. 170 supra.

τὴν ἡίονα τὴν καλεομένην Κωλιάδα: Kolias is a cape, or promontory (ἄκρα ἦτοι ἀκτὴ, Steph. Byz.), some twenty stades from Phaleron, cp. Pausan. 1. 1. 5 ἀπέχει δὲ σταδίου ἐκκοσιν ἄκρα Κωλιάς . . Κωλιάδος δὲ ἐστὶν ἐνταῦθα Ἀφροδίτης ἀγάλμα καὶ Γενετυλλίδες ὀνομαζόμεναι θεαί. Leake's identification of Kolias with Hagios Georgios (τρεῖς Πύργοι), the eastern limit of the bay of Phaleron, is endorsed by Milchhoefer: Strabo 398 places it apparently further south, in the neighbourhood of Anaphlystos. Cp. Hitzig-Bluemner, Pausanias, l.c. ἡίον, as in 7. 44 supra.

6. ὥστε . . τὸ εἰρημένον: the structure and argument of the passage are remarkable: what Hdt. is apparently concerned to say is that τὸν χρησμὸν ἀποπλησθῆναι δε ἐλελήθεε πάντας τοὺς Ἕλληνας, sc. τὸ πολλοῖσι ἔτεσι πρότερον τοῦτων ἐν χρησμῷ Λυσιστράτῳ Ἀθηναίῳ ἀνδρὶ χρησμολόγῳ εἰρημένον—but, having started on the fulfilment of prophecy, he is led to say a good word in passing for the much more extensive and less obscure prophecy of Bakis. When he started, τὸν χρησμὸν may have been intended for the prophecy of Lysistratos, but as it is diverted to Bakis, the idea is resumed in the words τὸ εἰρημένον ἐν χρησμῷ.

7. τὸν τε ἄλλον πάντα . . Βάκιδι. On Bakis cp. c. 77 supra. There was presumably extant in Hdt.'s time a pretty

εἰρημένον Βάκιδι [καὶ Μουσαίῳ], καὶ δὴ καὶ κατὰ τὰ ναυήγια τὰ ταύτῃ ἐξενοιχθέντα τὸ εἰρημένον πολλοῖσι ἔτεσι πρότερον τούτων ἐν χρησμῷ Λυσιστράτῳ Ἀθηναίῳ ἀνδρὶ χρησμολόγῳ, 10
τὸ ἐλελήθει πάντας τοὺς Ἕλληνας,

Κωλιάδες δὲ γυναῖκες ἐρετροῖσι φρύξουσι.
τοῦτο δὲ ἔμελλε ἀπελάσαντος βασιλέως ἔσεσθαι.

Ξέρξης δὲ ὡς ἔμαθε τὸ γεγονὸς πάθος, δέισας μὴ τις τῶν 97

8 καὶ Μουσέῳ :: 'fortasse spuria' Stein, seclusi : verba τὸν χρησμὸν . .
ἐξενοιχθέντα genuina esse dubit, van H. 9 ἐξενοιχθέντα CR 10 τούτων :: 11 λέληθε? Stein<sup>2</sup> 12 φρύξουσι Joach. Kuhn :
φρίξουσι 13 ἐπελάσαντος βασιλῆος :: 97. 1 τῶν τις Krueger,
van H.

extensive oracular poem ascribed to Bakis, the reference of which to Salamis was obvious. Cp. Introduction, § 10. καὶ Μουσαίῳ is to be removed as a gloss : otherwise the problem of the authorship of the poem is hopelessly confused. On Musaios cp. 9. 43.

9. πολλοῖσι ἔτεσι πρότερον τούτων : τούτων referring not to Hdt. and his own date of composition, still less to Bakis and Musaios, or the oracles of Bakis, but to the battle of Salamis, and the circumstances by which the prediction was fulfilled. The date is unfortunately vague : does it refer to the times of Peisistratos, or of Solon, or to still more ancient days?

10. Λυσιστράτῳ cannot of course be the Athenian, more or less contemporary with Hdt., who is a frequent subject of satire to Aristophanes (Acharn. 855, Knts. 1267, Wzps. 787 ff., 1301, Lysistr. 1105), but might conceivably be an ancestor of his.

11. τὸ ἐλελήθει πάντας τοὺς Ἕλληνας. Stein<sup>2</sup> has cancelled his own emendation λέληθε, and is content to return to the view that Hdt. is not claiming for himself the first correct application of the prophecy of Lysistratos, but dates the true interpretation to the time of Salamis. But the antiquity of the oracle demands an earlier occasion ; one might be found in the great adventure of Solon at Kolias, narrated in Plutarch, Solon, 8, which, according to one account, led to the Athenian capture of Salamis, though it is easy to understand that the learned Hellenes, interpreters of prophecy, in discussing such matters, might gladly have transferred, before the date of Hdt.'s composition, the fulfilment of this

chresm to the still grander occasion in their own times. Solon's adventure was scarcely remembered outside Athens—and Megara ! 'The Hellenes' here may well be writers, even if Hdt. himself is not claiming to have put them right. Cp. Introduction, § 10.

12. Κωλιάδες δὲ γυναῖκες ἐρετροῖσι φρύξουσι. 'The women of Kolias' are probably not so much local residents as women visiting the place for the cult or festival of the local Demeter (sic, Plutarch, Solon, 8), who may have used the oars (of the Megarians ?) to cook their cakes with. φρύξουσι, though an emendation, seems acceptable, and more oracular than φρίξουσι (cp. φρίξαντες 2. 94). πέλασοι would be used in the local cult ; or perhaps κριθαὶ πεφρυγμέναι, Thuc. 6. 22. Applied to the b. of Salamis in 480 B.C., the prophecy would have been fulfilled 'after the king's departure,' an event far in the future (ἔμελλε ἔσεσθαι), in the time of Lysistratos !

97. 1. ὡς ἔμαθε τὸ γεγονὸς πάθος, 'when he became aware of the extent of the disaster which had taken place.' τις τῶν : contr. c. 90 supra.

δεῖσας μὴ . . ἀπολέσθαι : this reported apprehension of Xerxes conveys potentially a criticism upon the Greek conduct of affairs at this crisis. The Greeks failed to utilize their victory to the full. Had the Persian communications with Asia been cut at this date, the king might never have returned alive, a revolt in Asia would certainly have taken place, Thrace and Macedon might have used their opportunity, the battle of Plataea need never have been fought. It was not the fault of Themistokles that the more daring but, in the

Ἰώνων ὑποθῆται τοῖσι Ἑλλησι ἢ αὐτοὶ νοήσωσι πλέειν· ἐς τὸν Ἑλλησποντον λύσοντες τὰς γεφύρας, καὶ ἀπολαμφθεὶς ἐν τῇ Εὐρώπῃ κινδυνεύσῃ ἀπολέσθαι, δρησμὸν ἐβούλετο. θέλων δὲ μὴ ἐπίδηλος εἶναι μήτε τοῖσι Ἑλλησι μήτε τοῖσι ἑωυτοῦ, ἐς τὴν Σαλαμῖνα χῶμα ἐπειράτο διαχοῦν, γαύλους τε Φοινικηίους

2 ἐπινοήσωσι? Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H. 4 ἀπολέσθαι κινδυνεύσῃ Ccorr.
P: ἀπολέσθαι κινδυνεύσει Cpr.: ἀπολέσθαι κινδυνεύσαι s || ἐβούλετο Pz
5 ἐπίδημος B 6 γαυλοῦς libri, van H.

long run, the more prudent course was omitted; cp. c. 108 infra.

3. ἀπολαμφθεὶς: c. 11 supra.

4. δρησμὸν: c. 4 supra.

5. ἐς τὴν Σαλαμῖνα χῶμα ἐπειράτο διαχοῦν, 'he attempted (more than 'began') to construct a mole right across to Salamis,' from the mainland. Hdt. unfortunately does not locate the structure. The time, the place, the nature of the work, and its purpose, are all in debate. The likeliest place would be on the line of the existing ferry, both because that is the shortest line, and also because the island of St. George offers a ready-made pier or point d'appui for the structure, though not on the direct line, which would be less than a mile across. Ktesias, Persica, ed. Gilmore, § 57, p. 157, locates the mole, and dates the attempt before the battle: ὁ δὲ Ξέρξης αὐτὸθεν ἐλθὼν ἐπὶ στενύτατον τῆς Ἀττικῆς ('Ἡράκλειον καλεῖται) ἐχώρην χῶμα ἐπὶ Σαλαμῖνα περὶ ἑπ' αὐτὴν διαβῆναι διανοούμενος. The attempt is frustrated by Themistokles and Aristides, who procure archers from Krete; and its failure makes a sea-fight necessary. The place may be right, 'the narrowest part of Attica' being taken to mean the narrowest part of the straits between Attica and Salamis; the time, or sequence, appears to be better in Hdt. To construct a mole, or bridge of boats, all across the straits, while the Greeks were in possession, and without a naval battle, was impossible. Moreover, before the naval battle such a work would have been inconsistent with the naval tactics. If it had run (as Stein supposes) from the Herakleion to Kynosura, it would (if completed) have kept the king's fleet out of the straits, and the Greek fleet inside! But even running from the extreme point of Skaramanga to the isle of St. George, or (and) on to the actual shore of Salamis, it could not have been seriously undertaken before a naval victory had cleared the Greek ships out of the bay; and it would have interfered with any design of circumnavigating the island freely. Alexander, indeed, attempted to take Tyre with a mole, while the Tyrians had command of the sea, Arrian 2. 18. But the two cases are not parallel. Tyre was a fortified island of small dimensions, half a mile only off the coast, and not in any way embayed; moreover, Alexander failed, until he had secured command of the sea, to capture the place. (Rawlinson is wrong on this matter of fact.) Thus a serious attempt to bridge the channel to Salamis was absurd and impossible without an antecedent naval victory; after a naval defeat, still more so. It follows that, if any such attempt at all was made, it was a feint, or it was some work completely misunderstood by Hdt.'s sources and himself. Phoenician round-ships may have been lashed together, the beginning of a mole or pier may have been started, and this work may have been begun before the naval engagement, in confident anticipation of a victory. After the naval defeat such preparations could have deceived nobody, and must have been abandoned. In regard to the form of the structure itself, the χῶμα may have been intended to serve as a solid pier leading on to the round-ships, which would support some sort of roadway, and could be tugged into position after the Greek fleet had been disabled. It is noticeable that, even according to Hdt., preparations for another naval battle are also on foot; i.e. command of the sea must be regained before the connexion with Salamis could be established, over which the land-forces might pour into the island. Is it not also possible that the projected or attempted structure was rather of the nature of a wharf or jetty or pier, for embarkation and so on, and συνέδεε, ἵνα ἀντί τε σχεδὴς ἔωσι καὶ τείχεος, ἀρτέετό τε ἐς πόλεμον ὡς ναυμαχίην ἄλλην ποιησόμενος. ὁρῶντες δέ μιν πάντες οἱ ἄλλοι ταῦτα πρήσσοντα εὖ ἠπιστάτο ὡς ἐκ παντὸς νόον παρεσκεύασται μένων πολεμήσειν. Μαρδόνιον δ' οὐδέν 10 τούτων ἐλάνθανε ὡς μάλιστα ἔμπειρον ἔοντα τῆς ἐκείνου διανοίης.

Ταῦτά τε ἅμα Ξέρξης ἐποίεε καὶ ἔπεμπε ἐς Πέρσας 98 ἀγγελέοντα τὴν παρεούσαν σφί συμφορὴν. τούτων δὲ τῶν ἀγγέλων ἐστὶ οὐδὲν ὃ τι θάσσον παραγίνεται θνητὸν ἔόν· οὕτω τοῖσι Πέρσῃσι ἐξεύρηται τοῦτο. λέγουσι γὰρ ὡς ὁσέων

8 ὁρέοντες C: ὁρέοντες Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. 9 εἶ del. Krueger 10 παρεσκεύαστο z 11 τούτων z || ἔοντα om. R 98. 1 τε
om. S 2 παρεούσαν Pz: παρούσαν || τούτων z 3 ἔστι PRz
4 ὁσέων Stein, van H.: ὅσον A: ὅσων

was never intended to reach the opposite shore!

9. εὖ ἠπιστάτο: i.e. merely 'were fully convinced,' 'firmly believed'; cp. c. 88 supra.

ἐκ παντὸς νόον παρεσκεύασται, (that the king) 'has completely made up his mind'; the verb, though passive in form, has obviously a middle force.

10. Μαρδόνιον: cp. c. 68 supra.

11. ἐλάνθανε: not merely 'escaped,' but 'deceived'; Mardonios saw through the king's ruse. He had most knowledge of the king's mental ways! διανοίης: cp. c. 88 supra.

98. 1. ἔπεμπε: was the postal route really carried all round the Aegean, from Athens to the Hellespont, and so on to Susa? Was there no system of signalling? Cp. 9. 3 infra. The parataxis with τε ἅμα καὶ may be noticed; the need for special emphasis is not obvious.

2. σφί would seem to refer primarily to (ἐς) Πέρσας, where the συμφορὴ was not, strictly speaking, παρεούσα—at least until the news arrived. It may be taken to cover all Persians—those at home being involved unwittingly in the disaster to those abroad. The word can hardly be taken simply with ἀγγελέοντα—and ἐς Πέρσας is practically rather locative than ethnical.

3. ἐστὶ οὐδέν ὃ τι θάσσον παραγίνεται θνητὸν ἔόν, 'there is nothing which comes along so fast—and yet is mortal.' This saying has almost a touch of autopsia, and is more forcible than the stereotyped τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν. (But cp. 2. 68 for the two in combination.) There are two points in which this account of the Persian postal service has a special interest for the problem of Hdt.'s composition: (i.) This passage conflicts with 3. 105 εἶναι δὲ ταχυτῆτα οὐδενὶ ἐτέρῳ ὅμοιον, οὕτω ὥστε, εἰ μὴ προλαμβάνειν τοὺς Ἰνδοὺς τῆς ὁδοῦ ἐν ᾧ τοὺς μύρμηκας συλλέγεσθαι, οὐδένα ἂν σφέων ἀποσώζεσθαι. Hdt. must have forgotten the one passage in writing the other. (ii.) A more important point: the Persian postal service is taken for granted in 3. 126 without description, and the very term itself—ἀγγαρήιον here explained—is used. (The substitution of ἀγγελιηφόρον is the substitution of the gloss for the text.) This passage, therefore, would appear to be of earlier composition than Bk. 3, although one must admit that the description of the post has not been introduced at the first possible occasion even in these Books (e.g. c. 54 supra). In 1. 216 the horse is described as πάντων τῶν θνητῶν τὸ τάχιστον—a statement not inconsistent with this passage, but in a different genre.

4. οὕτω . . . ἐξεύρηται τοῦτο, 'this swiftness the Persians have secured by the invention of those special messengers'; or, perhaps, 'this institution of messengers is a Persian invention for securing extraordinary rapidity.' Stein renders οὕτω adeo sollerter, comparing 4. 200 τοῦτο μὲν δὴ οὕτω ἐξευρέθη. But there the οὕτω may be merely modal, referring to the method of discovery just previously described. Others, again, boldly refer the whole sentence to what follows; so Rawlinson, "and this is the method of

5 ἂν ἡμερέων <ἡ> ἡ πᾶσα ὁδός, τοσούτοι ἵπποι τε καὶ ἄνδρες
 διεστᾶσι, κατὰ ἡμερησίην ὁδὸν ἐκάστην ἵππος τε καὶ ἀνὴρ τεταγμένοι· τοὺς οὔτε νυφетός, οὐκ ὄμβρος, οὐ καῦμα, οὐ νύξ ἔργει μὴ οὐ κατανύσαι τὸν προκείμενον αὐτῷ δρόμον τὴν ταχίστην. ὁ μὲν δὲ πρῶτος δραμὼν παραδιδόι τὰ ἐντεταλμένα 10 τῷ δευτέρῳ, ὁ δὲ δεύτερος τῷ τρίτῳ· τὸ δὲ ἐνθεύτεν ἦδη κατ' ἄλλον <καὶ ἄλλον> διεξέρχεται παραδιδόμενα, κατὰ περ <ἐν> Ἑλληνσι ἢ λαμπαδηφορίῃ τὴν τῷ Ἡφαίστῳ ἐπιτελέουσι.
 τοῦτο τὸ δράμημα τῶν ἵππων καλέουσι Πέρσαι ἀγγαρήιον.

5 ἡ add. Schaefer, Stein, Holder, van H. 6 ἵπποι B: ἵππος τε
 καὶ ἀνὴρ om. z 7 τεταγμένοι z || οὔτε: οὐ τι z, Schaefer: οὐ Cobet
 8 ἔργει z || ἐωυτῷ z, van H.: 'An delendum?' idem 11 καὶ ἄλλον
 Valla (aliū atque aliū) 12 ἐν add. Stein<sup>2</sup> (παρὰ ? Stein<sup>1</sup>) || λαμπαδιφορίῃ B 13 ἀγγειρήιον R: num verba τοῦτο . . ἀγγαρήιον quasi glossema sustuleris ?

it" (which will hardly do). It is unlikely, by the way, that 'the Persians' invented this courier service, or imperial post, though Xenophon, Kyrop. 8. 6. 17 f., ascribes it to Kyros, and Baebr—on general grounds—to Dareios. The invention may be taken to be centuries older than either, and to have been employed by all the great empires and kingdoms which were now merged in the Persian. It is substantially one with the system of the Prairie Post, or Pony Express, described by Mark Twain in Roughing it, c. viii.

λέγουσι: with this admission we relapse upon hearsay, or it may be a previous writer's description (Hekataios?). ἡ πᾶσα ὁδός, if it referred primarily to any actual route, would probably be the Royal Road, described in 5. 52 f., along which no doubt the Anatolian posts travelled. But the word is here of purely generic significance.

6. διεστᾶσι, 'are posted at intervals'—of a day's journey: in σταθμοί no doubt.

7. τοὺς οὔτε νυφетός κτλ. Cp. Mark Twain l.c. "No matter whether it was winter or summer, raining, snowing, hailing, or sleeting, or whether his 'beat' was a level straight road or a crazy trail over mountain crags and precipices, . . . he must be always ready to leap into the saddle and be off like the wind! There was no idling-time for a pony-rider on duty. He rode fifty miles without stopping, by daylight, moonlight, starlight, or through the blackness of darkness—just as it happened."

8. μὴ οὐ κατανύσαι: a simple instance of the idiom, which follows not merely the express negative οὔτε, but the implicit negative in ἔργει=κωλιδεῖ=οὐκ ἐλθ. The repetition of οὔτε by οὐκ is rhetorical: nearly the same sequence in 1. 132. αὐτῷ after τοῦς (relative) almost=ἐκαστῷ.

11. διεξέρχεται: sc. τὰ ἐντεταλμένα—presumably tablets, 7. 239 εἰρησα, or βυβλία, 3. 128, 5. 14 (in which passage one ἱππεὺς apparently carries the βυβλίον from sender to recipient).

κατὰ περ <ἐν> Ἑλληνσι ἢ λαμπαδηφορίῃ, 'just like in Greece the torch-bearing, with which they conclude the Festival of Hephaistos.' The reference is to such a performance as that described by Plato, Rep. 328 (in honour of Bendis), though the λαμπάς ἀφ' ἵππων is there treated as a novelty (καινὸν γε τοῦτο). Nor is the point of the comparison in Hdt. the presence of horses, but the passing of the torch from one man to another (λαμπάδια ἔχοντες διαδώσουσιν ἀλλήλους). The method described by Pausanias 1. 30. 2 of the race from the Akademeia to the Akropolis, in which each competitor carried a lighted torch (if he could) all the way, would not offer a true analogy. In 6. 105 Hdt. mentions a λαμπάς at Athens in honour of Pan—probably of the latter type.

13. τοῦτο . . καλέουσι Πέρσαι ἀγγαρήιον has an unfortunately gloss-like

ἡ μὲν δὴ πρώτη ἐς Σούσα ἀγγελίη ἀπικομένη, ὡς ἔχοι 99 Ἀθήνας Ξέρξης, ἔτερψε οὕτω δὴ τι Περσέων τοὺς ὑπολει-φθέντας ὡς τὰς τε ὁδοὺς μυρσίνη πάσας ἐστόρεσαν καὶ ἐθυμίων θυμῆματα καὶ αὐτοὶ ἦσαν ἐν θυσίῃσι τε καὶ εὐπαθείῃσι. ἡ δὲ δευτέρῃ σφί ἀγγελίῃ ἐπεσελθοῦσα συνέχεε οὕτω ὥστε τοὺς 5 κιθῶνας κατηρεῖξαντο πάντες, βοῇ τε καὶ οἰμωγῇ ἐχρέωντο ἀπλέτῳ, Μαρδόνιον ἐν αἰτίῃ τιθέντες. οὐκ οὕτω δὲ περὶ τῶν νεῶν ἀχθόμενοι ταῦτα οἱ Πέρσαι ἐποίουν ὡς περὶ αὐτῷ Ξέρξῃ δειμαίνοντες.

99. 3 ὡς τὰς τε: ὥστε τὰς Cobet: ὥστε τὰς τε van H. || μυρσίνησι 2
 4 αὐτοὶ secl. van H. || ἔσαν 2 || θυσίῃσι: εὐθυμίσῃ Naber: θαλίῃσι?
 van H. || εὐπαθείῃσι codd. 2 5 ἐπεσελθοῦσα Reiske, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἐπεξελθοῦσα || τοὺς τε conl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, recep. van H. 6 κατηρεῖ-
 ξαντο Cobet, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: κατερρήξαντο || καὶ βοῇ conl. Stein<sup>1</sup>,
 recep. van H.: βοῇ δέ τε? Kallenberg || ἐχρέοντο P, van H. 7 αἰτίῃσι P appearance, and might easily be an addition, even if from the author's hand. The fact remains that the word ἀγγαρήιον is also to be read 3. 126, naturally used; cf. note above. It was familiar in Greece before the days of Hdt. So Aeschylus, Agamemnon 282 φρυκτὸς δὲ φρυκτῶν δειρ' ἀπ' ἀγγάρου πυρὸς ἐπεμπεν — of the fire-signals crossing the Aegean; cp. 9. 3 infra. ἀγγαρεύει is found in N.T.; angaria and angariare in Later Latin. Suidas has articles on ἀγγαρεία, ἀγγαροί (bis), ἀγγαροί. οἱ ἐκ διαδοχῆς γραμματοφόροι. οἱ δὲ αὐτοὶ καὶ ἀστάνδαι. τὰ δὲ ὀνόματα Περσικά. In the Roman Empire the words had come to be used for any compulsory or enforced service. H. C. R. ap. Rawl. derives the word from hakkāreh, 'a man fit for every sort of work,' 'a messenger' ('a slight unmeritable man, meet to be sent on errands'), and notices that courier dromedaries are still known throughout India and Persia as kārhāreh.
 8 νηῶν αβς

99. 1. ἡ μὲν δὴ πρώτη ἐς Σούσα: cp. c. 54 supra. Hdt. never shows any consciousness that Susa was not a 'Persian' city; in his days it plainly counted in the West as the chief capital of the 'Persian' empire. τοὺς ὑπολειφθέντας, 'those who had stayed behind' (cp. 5. 61, c. 67 supra, 9. 53 infra). As if there were but a few of them! The passage may be influenced by scenic and dramatic representations from Phrynichos, or even Aeschylus.

VOL I PT. II

3. μυρσίνη, 'myrtle (boughs),' Att. μυρρίνη, the plant from which not merely wreaths, but a balsamic juice (μύρρα) was procurable; cp. 1. 132, (4. 195), 7. 54.

4. ἦσαν ἐν: ἐν εὐπαθείῃσι occurs 1. 22, 191, ἐν θαλίῃσι 3. 27, but ἐν θυσίῃσι is unique (Stein). Schweighauser defends ἐν θυσίῃσι here. The conjunction of θυσαί and εὐπαθείαι is no offence; cp. Stallbaum ad Plat. Rep. 365 a. Aristoph. Clas. 328 has θεῶν θυσαί θαλαί τε.

5. ἐπεσελθοῦσα: cp. 4. 154 of a stepmother; less significantly 1. 37. συνέχεε Stein takes to be the aorist, cp. ἐτερψε above. (Il. 18. 347 ἐν δ' ἀρ' ὕδωρ ἔχεαν.)

6. κατηρεῖξαντο: cp. 3. 66, Aeschyl. Pers. 538.

βοῇ . . ἀπλέτῳ: cp. 7. 211 supra, 9. 24 infra.

7. Μαρδόνιον ἐν αἰτίῃ τιθέντες: not for anything specially connected with the ships, but for having urged the king in the first instance to undertake the expedition; the phrase therefore constitutes an implicit reference to 7. 5 ff. supra.

περὶ τῶν νεῶν . . περὶ αὐτῷ Ξέρξῃ. 'it was not grief arising about the ships (that had been lost), but fear centred on the king's person (lest he should never return).' The genitive and dative are not mere stylistic variations. Just below, the accusative περὶ Πέρσας is, of course, purely locative.

M

- 100 Καὶ περὶ Πέρσας μὲν ἦν ταῦτα τὸν πάντα μεταξὺ χρόνον γενόμενον, μέχρι οὗ Ξέρξης αὐτὸς σφεα ἀπικόμενος ἔπαυσε, Μαρδόνιος δὲ ὁρῶν μὲν Ξέρξην συμφορὴν μεγάλην ἐκ τῆς ναυμαχίης ποιούμενον, ὑποπτεύων δὲ αὐτὸν δρησμὸν βουλευεῖν
5 ἐκ τῶν Ἀθηνέων, φροντίσας πρὸς ἑαυτὸν ὥς δώσει δίκην ἀναγνώσας βασιλέα στρατεύεσθαι ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα, καὶ οἱ κρέσσον εἴη ἀνακινδυνεύσαι ἢ κατεργάσασθαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα ἢ αὐτὸν καλῶς τελευτῆσαι τὸν βίον ὑπὲρ μεγάλων αἰωρηθέντα· πλέον μέντοι ἔφερε οἱ ἡ γνώμη κατεργάσασθαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα·
10 λογισάμενος ὦν ταῦτα προσέφερε <οἱ> τὸν λόγον τόνδε.
“δέσποτα, μήτε λυπέο μήτε συμφορὴν μηδεμίαν μεγάλην ποιεῖν τοῦδε τοῦ γεγονότος εἵνεκα πρήγματος. οὐ γὰρ ξύλων ἀγῶν

100. 1 πάντα τὸν vel τὸν πάντα τὸν Krueger 2 γινόμενον
Bekker, van H.: ‘an γινόμενα?’ Stein<sup>2</sup> || σφεα van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: σφεας
3 ὁρέων CPz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. 5 Ἀθηναίων CP<sup>1</sup>Rz 6 βασιλῆα z
7 κρείσσον ABRSV || ἀνακινδυνεύσαντα? van H. || ἢ αὐτὸν . . Ἑλλάδα om. B<sup>1</sup>: eadem bis R 9 πλέον C<sup>1</sup>: πλέω z || οἱ om. B<sup>2</sup> || ἡ
om. B || κατεργάσθαι V: κατεργάσεσθαι Cobet, Holder 10 οἱ add.
Stein<sup>(2)</sup>, van H. 11 μηδεμίαν z || ποιέο van H.

100. 1. ἦν ταῦτα . . μέχρι οὗ . .
ἔπαυσε: Hdt. apparently forgets that he is going to retain Xerxes at Sardes a good while; cp. 9. 108 infra. This passage again looks as if it might have been borrowed from a scene on the stage.
ἦν ταῦτα is a very bald phrase; γινόμενον
is a remarkable tense, and an unnecessary sense; Stein suggests γινόμενα.

3. Μαρδόνιος δέ: this bold analysis of the motives of Mardonios may be compared with the account of the motives of Aristagoras in a somewhat similar situation, 5. 35. Not that the prior passage is of earlier composition, though referring to an earlier date; rather,
perhaps, the flight of final verbs there,
compared with the procession of participles here, suggests a more accomplished style. Evidently Greek minds were greatly exercised to account for the commission of Mardonios after the Persian defeat at Salamis—reading the situation of September 480 B.C., as they did, too much in the light of after events.

ἐκ τῆς ναυμαχίης . . ἐκ τῶν Ἀθ.:
the one ἐκ causal, or material, the other purely local; neither temporal.

4. δρησμὸν βουλευεῖν: c. 97 supra.
Hdt. somewhat artfully calls Mardonios
as a witness for this libel.

5. δώσει δίκην, ‘he will be called to account . .’; cp. c. 114 infra.

8. καλῶς τελευτῆσαι τὸν βίον ὑπὲρ μεγάλων αἰωρηθέντα: a stately phrase, exactly descriptive of the actual and,
as it were, subsequent fate of Mardonios, which is thus prepared with a touch of tragic irony. Mardonios is, indeed, the real hero of the story in these Books; Xerxes is too capricious, too craven, to incur aught but the comic nemesis, which has already begun in c. 99. Cp.
Introduction, § 11. αἰωρηθέντα is better taken with βίον, notwithstanding Dionys.
H. 5. 27. 2 οὐκ ἀξιῶ λαθεῖν ἀπαντας
αἰωρηθεὶς ὑπὲρ μεγάλων.

9. πλέον . . ἔφερε: an exact parallel,
3. 77 ἐγένετο οὐδὲν τι Δαρείῳ ἢ γνώμη ἔφερε, ‘just such an event as Dareios was expecting.’ προσέφερε just below is inelegant (an ‘unconscious iteration’), and ὁ τὸ πᾶν φέρων worse still; cp. c. 62 supra.

11. λυπέο . . ποιεῖν: the force of the middle voice should not be missed, nor the dialectal inconsistency (cp. App. Crit.).

12. οὐ γὰρ ξύλων κτλ. Mardonios is made, rightly enough, to assert the de facto superiority of the Persian land-forces over the Greek, and the sequel justifies his anticipation (i.e. the writer is wise after the event) that no Greek army would venture to stay his regress.
But two points are omitted in the argument of Mardonios: (i.) the question of the commissariat, now the fleet was

ὁ τὸ πᾶν φέρων ἐστὶ ἡμῖν, ἀλλ' ἀνδρῶν τε καὶ ἵππων. σοὶ δὲ οὔτε τις τούτων τῶν τὸ πᾶν σφίσι ἤδη δοκεόντων κατεργάσθαι ἀποβὰς ἀπὸ τῶν νεῶν πειρήσεται ἀντιωθῆναι οὐτ' 15 ἐκ τῆς ἡπείρου τῆσδε, οἳ τε ἡμῖν ἡντιώθησαν, ἔδωσαν δίκας. εἰ μὲν νυν δοκέει, αὐτίκα πειρώμεθα τῆς Πελοποννήσου· εἰ δὲ καὶ δοκέει ἐπισχεῖν, παρέχει ποιέειν ταῦτα. μηδὲ δυσθύμεις· οὐ γὰρ ἔστι Ἑλλήσι οὐδεμία ἔκδυσις μὴ οὐ δόντας λόγον τῶν ἐποίησαν νῦν τε καὶ πρότερον εἶναι σοὺς δούλους. 20 μάλιστα μὲν νυν ταῦτα ποίεις· εἰ δ' ἄρα τοι βεβούλευται αὐτὸν ἀπελαύνοντα ἀπάγειν τὴν στρατιήν, ἄλλην ἔχω καὶ ἐκ τῶνδε βουλήν. σὺ Πέρσας, βασιλεῦ, μὴ ποιήσῃς καταγελᾶσθους γενέσθαι Ἑλλήσι· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐν Πέρσῃσι τοῖ τι broken; (ii.) the possibility of an attack by the Greeks on the bridges. With the landsman's contempt for ξόλα cp. Thuc. 4. 11. 4 (of Brasidas) ἔβρα λέγων ὡς οὐκ εἰκός εἴη ξόλων φειδομένους τοὺς πολεμίους ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ περιεῖν τείχος πεποιημένους, and Xenoph. Hell. 1. 1. 24 μὴ ἀθροεῖν ἐρεκα ξόλων (Pharnabazo loq. ref. van H.).

14 τούτων = || σφίσι Stein, Holder, van H.: σφι || κατεργάσασθαι B<sup>2</sup> 18 παρέχειν C || δυσθύμει libri (sic Stein!) 19 οὐδὲ μία AB: οὐδεμία = 20 τοὺς B 21 ποίειν R: ποίειν SV (Holder: 'Is tamen codex [sc. S] perspicue habet ποίειν' Gaisford) 22 ἀπαγαγεῖν B 24 οὐδὲ Stein<sup>2</sup>: οὐδὲν || Πέρσῃσι τοῖ τι Valckenaer, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder: Πέρσῃσι τοι Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: Πέρσῃσι τοισὶδε Reiske: Πέρσῃσι τοῖσι Schweighauser: τοῖσι Πέρσῃσι B: Πέρσῃσι τοῖσι α etc.

14. τῶν τὸ πᾶν σφίσι ἤδη δοκεόντων κατεργάσθαι: this is 'without prejudice,' and does not describe the attitude of the Greeks as recorded above c. 96. Perhaps the subsequent action—or inaction—of the Greeks provoked the taunt as a legitimate comment on their conduct. But in view of the achievement of Aristides on Psytaleia Mardonios could hardly have ventured upon such a remark.

16. οἳ τε ἡ. ἡν. ἔδωσαν δίκας contains of course a reference to Thermopylai, so notorious a story that even the locality of the affair is taken for granted, and also to the capture of the Akropolis. But the reference could hardly have been made in such unqualified terms.

17. πειρώμεθα τῆς Π.: the alternative the speaker apparently prefers; yet he does not adopt it next year, when in supreme command—and wisely. He will hardly have proposed it now.

εἰ δὲ καί: an alternative lies in δέ, an adversative in καί.

19. οὐ γὰρ ἔστι . . οὐδεμία . . μὴ οὐ: a simple or primary example of the doubled negative, though ἔκδυσις itself perhaps conveys something of a negation; still, the idiom would equally stand with ὁδός, ἐλπίς, or any purely positive idea. In other words, the cumulative negation is not attained by any strict cancelling of one negative against another, but is a purely idiomatic result of the sense of accumulation. λόγον δοῦναι here seems a variant for δίκην δοῦναι—and might almost suggest a civil rather than a criminal process!

21. εἰ δ' ἄρα suggests the more probable alternative: καὶ ἐκ τῶνδε, 'also suitable to this course' (Stein). The phrase has been taken to mean vel ex his quomodo tu bene evadas (Baehr), or, simply of time, post haec.

24. ἐν Πέρσῃσι might mean 'at home in Persia'—rather a far cry, and what of all Asia, and the rest of the empire? Perhaps the words may be taken in the same sense as the vulgate ἐν τοῖσι Π.: ubi Persae pugnarunt, Baehr, or Persarum culpa, Valckenaer, which is supported by Xerxes' own words c. 101 infra, and indeed by the immediate context here.

- 25 δεδήληται τῶν πρηγμάτων, οὐδ' ἐρέεις ὅκου ἐγενόμεθα ἄνδρες
κακοί. εἰ δὲ Φοίνικες τε καὶ Αἰγύπτιοι καὶ Κίπριοι τε καὶ Κίλικες κακοὶ ἐγένοντο, οὐδὲν πρὸς Πέρσας τοῦτο προσήκει τὸ πάθος. ἤδη ὦν, ἐπειδὴ οὐ Πέρσαι τοι αἴτιοι εἰσὶ, ἐμοὶ πέιθεο· εἴ τοι δέδοκται μὴ παραμένειν, σὺ μὲν ἐς ἡθεα τὰ 30 σεωντοῦ ἀπέλαυνε τῆς στρατιῆς ἀπάγων τὸ πολλόν, ἐμὲ δὲ σοὶ χρή τὴν Ἑλλάδα παρασχεῖν δεδουλωμένην, τριήκοντα μυριάδας τοῦ στρατοῦ ἀπολεξάμενον.”
- 101 Ταῦτα ἀκούσας Ξέρξης ὡς ἐκ κακῶν ἐχάρη τε καὶ ἤσθη, πρὸς Μαρδόνιον τε βουλευσάμενος ἔφη ὑποκρινέεσθαι ὁκότερον ποιήσει τούτων. ὡς δὲ ἐβουλευέτο ἅμα Περσέων τοῖσι ἐπικλήτοισι, ἔδοξέ οἱ καὶ Ἀρτεμισίην ἐς συμβουλὴν μετα-5 πέμψασθαι, ὅτι πρότερον ἐφαίνετο μούνη νοέουσα τὰ ποιητέα
ἦν. ὡς δὲ ἀπύκετο ἡ Ἀρτεμισίη, μεταστησάμενος τοὺς

25 ἐρείς codd. z, Holder, van H. 29 μὴ om. C || παραμένειν B || τὰς σεωντοῦ (sic) α 30 δέ σοι libri, Holder: δέ τοι van H. 101. 2 ὑποκρινέεσθαι Bredow: ὑποκρινεῖσθαι van H.: ἀποκρινεῖσθαι codd.: ἀπο-κρινέεσθαι z 3 τουτέων z || ἐβουλεύσατο? van H. 4 ἐπὶ συμ-βουλῇ BPrz, van H.

25. ὅκου ἐγενόμεθα, 'that we Persians
in any case proved . . .'

26. Φοίνικες . . . Κίλικες: just as in Artemisia's speech c. 68 supra, except that Mardonios substitutes 'Phoenicians' for 'Pamphylians.' This reproduction is hardly good art or history. A Persian would more probably have spoken ill of the 'Ionians'; Hdt. voices Greek prejudice. Besides, his account of the battle (cp. c. 90 supra) may have affected his composition of this speech.

27. οὐδὲν πρὸς Πέρσας . . . τὸ πάθος:
yet what of the Epibatai? What of the Persians on Psyttaleia? Hdt. in composing this speech for Mardonios has sacrificed historic probability to the ethical interest. Mardonios is ultra-Persian: the Persians are four times paraded in half a dozen lines!

29. ἡθεα τὰ σεωντοῦ: cp. 4. 76, 80,
5. 14, 15, etc. Persia might be meant,
or perhaps Asia, more at large.

30. ἐμὲ δέ σοι χρή. The proposal put into the mouth of Mardonios is no unreasonable one: he was to get rid
(1) of the king, (2) of the mob (τὴν στρατιήν), (3) of the fleet, but to have a large force of picked men wherewith to effect the conquest of Hellas. The dismissal of the fleet was, perhaps, a doubtful expedient, yet probably necessary to cover the Asiatic coast, and to prevent a movement in Ionia, or the larger islands. The figure 300,000 is an over-estimate, unless he retained the whole land-forces, which is improbable.

Cp. Appendix II. § 5.

101. 1. ὡς ἐκ κακῶν ἐχάρη τε καὶ
ἤσθη: a merely relative joy. Cp. Thuc.
7. 42. 2 τῶν δὲ προτέρων στρατεύματι ὡς ἐκ
κακῶν βῶμῃ τις ἐγγένητο (Stein).

2. βουλευσάμενος . . . ὑποκρινέεσθαι,
'he will let him know after consultation.'
Or, 'before replying, he must first take advice'—the participle is predicative.

3. Περσέων τοῖσι ἐπικλήτοισι: the privy councillors, cp. 7. 8 supra, Mardonios no doubt among them; so too τοῖς συμβούλοις Περσέων just below.
ἐβουλεύετο, imperfect. Artemisia was not present at the Privy Council of Persians. The Council of War had been a different matter; cp. c. 67 supra.

5. ὅτι πρότερον ἐφαίνετο . . . ἦν: a reference to c. 68 supra, an acquaintance with which is implied. Hdt. writes for a reading public.

6. μεταστησάμενος: cp. c. 81 supra.
The king pays Artemisia the compliment of dismissing not merely his councillors, but his guard of 'Immortals.' Apparently only Xerxes and Artemisia were present at this interview, yet Hdt. can report

ἄλλους τούς τε συμβούλους Περσέων καὶ τοὺς δορυφόρους, ἔλεξε Ξέρξης τάδε. “κελεύει με Μαρδόνιος μένοντα αὐτοῦ πειρᾶσθαι τῆς Πελοποννήσου, λέγων ὡς μοι Πέρσαι τε καὶ ὁ πεζὸς στρατὸς οὐδενὸς μεταίτιοι πάθους εἰσὶ, ἀλλὰ βουλο- 10 μένοισί σφι γένοιτ’ ἂν ἀπόδεξις. ἐμὲ ὦν ἡ ταῦτα κελεύει ποιεῖν, ἡ αὐτὸς ἐθέλει τριήκοντα μυριάδας ἀπολεξάμενος τοῦ στρατοῦ παρασχεῖν μοι τὴν Ἑλλάδα δεδουλωμένην, αὐτὸν δέ με κελεύει ἀπελαύνειν σὺν τῷ λοιπῷ στρατῷ ἐς ἡθεα τὰ ἐμά. σὺ ὦν ἐμοί, καὶ γὰρ περὶ τῆς ναυμαχίης εὖ συνεβούλευσας 15 τῆς γενομένης οὐκ ἔωσα ποιεῖσθαι, νῦν τε συμβούλευσον ὁκότερα ποίεω ἐπιτύχω εὖ βουλευσάμενος.” ὁ μὲν ταῦτα 102 συνεβουλεύετο, ἡ δὲ λέγει τάδε. “βασίλεῦ, χαλεπὸν μὲν

9 ἀποπειρᾶσθαι z 11 ἀπόδεξις A: ἀπόδειξις R 13 ἐμοί S
14 λυπῶι Apr. B<sup>1</sup> || τὰμά z 16 τε: ἄγε! Stein 17 ποίεω C

their tête-à-tête conversation: from which had he heard it? Had Artemisia let it out in Halikarnassos?

8. αὐτοῦ, locative adverb, ‘on the spot.’ κελεύειν may be used of the action of a political inferior; cp. 1. 116.

9. Πέρσαι τε καί, ‘the Persians, that is,’ cp. c. 100 supra. ὁ πεζὸς στρατός includes the cavalry.

10. ἀλλὰ βουλομένοισί σφι γένοιτ’ ἂν ἀπόδεξις, ‘as they would be glad to have an opportunity of demonstrating’—viz. that οὐδενὸς (μετ)αίτιοι πάθους εἰσὶ—that ‘the naval contingents alone were to blame for any distressing occurrence.’ With the construction cp. c. 14. 3 supra. The ἀλλά is adversative, where a relative might be expected. ἀπόδεξις is here used in a sense approximate to that in 1. 1 (Ιστορίης ἀπόδεξις), not to that in 1. 207 ἡμῖν λείπεται ἀπόδεξις ἔργων μεγάλων—though had ἔργων μεγάλων occurred here a good sense would have been obtained.

12. τριήκοντα μυριάδας: the second time this figure is given as the number of Mardonios’ army; cp. c. 100 ad f. and c. 113 infra.

14. τῷ λοιπῷ στρατῷ=τῆς στρατιῆς τὸ πολλόν c. 100 supra; cp. 7. 40, 55 supra. ἡθεα repeated from c. 100.

16. οὐκ ἔωσα, ‘in opposing,’ or ‘in trying to prevent.’

νῦν τε . . . βουλευσάμενος. Stein takes exception to νῦν τε as un-Herodotean in this sense (nunc quoque: cp. Thuc. 1. 69. 2 μόλις δὲ νῦν γε ἐξηγήσασθαι καὶ οὐδὲ νῦν ἐπὶ φανεροῖς), Hdt. generally using the combination to introduce begründete Adhortatio-sätze. But the sense here is good. The remainder of the sentence is rather complicated: ‘Advise me by doing which of the two I shall succeed in having been well advised’—by Mardonios—i.e. which of the alternatives recommended by Mardonios would you advise me to adopt? The word ἐπιτυχάνω appears to be rather a blot on the expression, used merely as equivalent to τυγχάνω. The sentence would be complete if it ran ὁκότερα ποίεω (or ποιήσας) ἐπιτύχω—i.e. ὁκότερα ποιήσας ἐπιτεύξομαι: cp. Xenoph. Hell. 4. 5. 19 ἐκ τούτου δὲ μάλα καὶ τάλλα ἐπετύγχανεν Ἰφικράτης: (αἱ ἐπιτετευγμένα πράξεις successful actions, Polyb. 6. 53. 2). It would perhaps be possible to take the word here in its fuller force, and understand εὖ βουλευσάμενος as epexegetical; but the absence of a copula, the difference of tense, the whole rhythm of the sentence, and the repetition of the formula in c. 103 infra (λέγουσα . . . ἐπετύγχανε), are against such a construction. In any case ποίεω is the real predicate.

102. 2. χαλεπὸν μὲν ἐστὶ συμβουλευόμενῳ τυχεῖν τὰ ἄριστα εἰπασθαι: ‘merito laudant Stephani versionem: me tibi consulenti optimum dare consilium difficile est,’ Baehr. But this ‘lauded’ version misses the point; it should have run: viro consulenti optimum dare consilium mulieri difficile est! Nor is there any me tibi in the Greek! Cp. αἱ δὲ γυναῖκες ἄνδρες c. 88 supra, and εἰ καὶ πάντες καὶ πᾶσαι συνεβούλευον αὐτῷ infra c. 103.

ἐστὶ συμβουλευομένῳ τυχεῖν τὰ ἄριστα εἶπασαν, ἐπὶ μέντοι τοῖσι κατήκουσι πρήγμασι δοκέει μοι αὐτὸν μὲν σε ἀπελαύνειν ὀπίσω, Μαρδόνιον δέ, εἰ ἐθέλει τε καὶ ὑποδέκεται ταῦτα ποιήσῃν, αὐτοῦ καταλιπεῖν σὺν τοῖσι ἐθέλει. τοῦτο μὲν γὰρ ἦν καταστρέψῃται τὰ φησὶ θέλειν καὶ οἱ προχωρήσῃ τὰ νοέων λέγει, σὺν τῷ ἔργῳ ᾧ δέσποτα γίνεται· οἱ γὰρ σοὶ δοῦλοι κατεργάσαντο. τοῦτο δὲ ἦν τὰ ἐναντία τῆς Μαρδονίου γνῶμης γένηται, οὐδεμία συμφορὴ μεγάλη ἔσται σέο τε περιεόντος καὶ ἐκείνων τῶν πρηγμάτων [περὶ οἶκον τὸν σὺν]· ἦν γὰρ σύ τε περιῆς καὶ οἶκος ὁ σός, πολλοὺς πολλάκις ἀγῶνας δραμέονται περὶ σφέων αὐτῶν οἱ Ἕλληνες. Μαρδονίου δέ, ἦν τι πάθῃ, λόγος οὐδεὶς γίνεται, οὐδέ τι νικῶντες οἱ Ἕλληνες νικῶσι, δοῦλον σὺν ἀπολέσαντες· σὺ δέ, τῶν εἵνεκα τὸν στόλον ἐποίησας, πυρώσας τὰς Ἀθήνας ἀπελᾶς."

102. 3 τοι τυχεῖν conl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, rec. van H. 4 μὲν σὲ codd.
5 ἐθέλοι z || ὑποδέκεται B ('non male' van H.) 6 καταλιπεῖν B
|| τοῦτο . . θέλειν om. R 7 τὰ σφίσι CP || θέλειν A<sup>2</sup>B: θέλει
A<sup>1</sup>CP; ἐθέλει SVz || προχωρήσει Bd: προχωρήσοι z 8 νοέειν? Stein<sup>2</sup>
10 οὐδὲ μία AB: οὐδεμίη z 11 περὶ . . σὺν secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. 13 αὐτέων z 16 ἐποίησω codd. z || ἀπέλασον Naber

3. ἐπὶ τοῖσι κατήκουσι πρήγμασι: cp. c. 19 supra, 5. 49. δοκέει μοι, it seems to me advisable.

6. σὺν τοῖσι ἐθέλει: sc. σὺν ἐκείνοις οὓς ἐθέλει (ἀπολίσσασθαι, or κατέχειν), i.e. the 300,000 λογάδες. Cp. τὰ φησὶ θέλειν just below: sc. καταστρέψασθαι.

τοῦτο μὲν . . τοῦτο δέ: cp. cc. 76, 80 supra.

7. τὰ νοέων λέγει: what he has in view when speaking—the predicative participle.

8. σὺν τῷ ἔργῳ: even on republican (but religious) principles the same formula applied to the Roman who won a victory alienis auspiciis: the victory was the doing of the Emperor, not of the legate. The establishment of Monarchy, of a sole Emperor, tended in the direction suggested by Artemisia's too servile flattery. So Japanese victories are due to the virtues of the Mikado (cp. Times, April 18, 1904, p. 5), perhaps on some esoteric principle not fully understood in the individualistic West.

12. ἦν γὰρ σύ τε περιῆς . . οἱ Ἕλληνες: this prophecy might seem to enforce the moral, hinted above c. 97, that it was a vast mistake to have let the king escape home out of Europe. Had the Greeks caught the king, and ended the dynasty,

they would have been saved a deal of subsequent trouble! On the other hand, the prophecy can hardly be regarded as altogether happy: Xerxes escaped, but the Hellenes, after Plataia, can hardly be said with truth to have had many bouts to stand, many races or risks to run, περὶ σφέων αὐτῶν, except what they incurred by invading the king's dominions! Is the passage a specimen of Hdt.'s irony?

13. Μαρδονίου δέ . . λόγος οὐδεὶς γίνεται: cp. 4. 135 τῶν ἦν ἐλάχιστος ἀπολυμένων λόγος. But Mardonios remains to all time a more interesting and real figure than Xerxes himself. Cp. Introduction, § 11.

14. οὐδέ τι νικῶντες οἱ Ἕλληνες νικῶσι, τι with the verb: νικῶντες=ἐὰν νικῶσι, the participle doing duty for a conditional sentence. This unfavourable verdict on Plataia is not the verdict of Hdt., cp. 9. 64 infra. ἀπελᾶς is future, and absolute; cp. 7. 32 supra, 1. 207 etc.

16. πυρώσας τὰς Ἀθήνας. Neither Artemisia nor Mardonios have made any allusion to the assault on Delphi and its miserable failure: an unconscious evidence of the good faith of Hdt. and the fictitious character of that legend; perhaps, too, of its bearing no part in

"Ἦσθη τε δὴ τῇ συμβουλῇ Ξέρξης· λέγουσα γὰρ ἐπετύγ- 103
χανε τὰ περ αὐτὸς ἐνόεε. οὐδὲ γὰρ εἰ πάντες καὶ πᾶσαι συνεβούλευον αὐτῷ μενειν, ἔμενε ἂν δοκέειν ἐμοί· οὕτω καταρρωδῆκεε. ἐπαινέσας δὲ τὴν Ἀρτεμισίην, ταύτην μὲν ἀποστέλλει ἄγουσαν αὐτοῦ τοὺς παῖδας ἐς Ἑφεσον· νόθοι γὰρ 5
τινὲς παῖδές οἱ συνέσποντο. συνέπεμπε δὲ τοῖσι παισὶ φύλακον 104
Ἑρμότιμον, γένος μὲν εὐντα Πηδασέα, φερόμενον δὲ οὐ τὰ δεύτερα τῶν εὐνούχων παρὰ βασιλεί· [οἱ δὲ Πηδασεὺς οἰκέουσι

103. 1 δὴ om. B || συμβουλῇ BPz, Holder, van H. 2 ἐνόεε van
H.: ἐπενόεε z || καὶ πᾶσαι suspecta habet Kallenberg 3 μενέειν C
4 καταρρωδῆκεε P || ταύτην τὴν B 5 τοὺς om. α 6 συνέσποντο
α: συνέποντο C 104. 2 πηδασέα B 3 βασιλεῖ AB || οἱ δὲ . . Ἑρμότιμος ἦν damn. Valckenaer, secl. Stein, Holder, e textu eiec.
van H.

the original draft of the Books. The burning of Athens is an incontestable fact; but cp. 9. 13 infra.

103. 1. Ἦσθη τε. The advice of Artemisia was a positive pleasure to Xerxes; cp. c. 101 ad init.; it squared so exactly with his own ideas! λέγουσα γὰρ ἐπετύγχανε: cp. c. 101 ad fin. The τε here has no καὶ following: the parenthetic expression of Hdt.'s own opinion (δοκέειν ἐμοί), that all the men and women in creation could not have persuaded Xerxes to remain, a little deranges the grammar of his narrative (which should have run on καὶ ἐπαινέσας).

3. οὕτω καταρρωδῆκεε, 'so utterly was he overcome with terror'—the pl.p. is rather intensive than temporal in character. οὕτω: cp. c. 98.

5. ἐς Ἑφεσον: the terminal port of the Royal Road; cp. 5. 54. Artemisia doubtless went by sea; perhaps on the very night after the battle.

6. οἱ: sc. Ξέρξη, as the αὐτοῦ παῖδας just before makes clear. ἐωντοῦ might have been expected there; Hdt. treats the king (Stein remarks) as the remoter of two subjects, and so prefers the demonstrative to the possessive pronoun; cp. c. 87 supra, where, however, ἡ δὲ αὐτοῦ is in a parenthesis.

The only queen-wife of Xerxes was (so far as we know) Amestris; cp. 7. 61, 114 supra, 9. 109 infra, by whom he had four sons (including Artaxerxes his successor; cp. 7. 106, 151 supra) and two daughters; cp. Rawlinson, iv. 255. Darius is the only other son named by Hdt.; cp. 9. 108. None of these sons of Xerxes will have been old enough to serve on this expedition. The fact that the νόθοι were sent home with Artemisia would suggest, what the probable age of Xerxes would confirm, that the παῖδες in question were quite young. The commission was no doubt a mark of royal favour, and recorded as such; yet is there no 'malice' in Hdt.'s notice of this exit of Artemisia?

104. 2. Ἑρμότιμον: the name is doubtless formed in honour of the god Hermes (not the river Hermos), and is borne by several historical persons (Aspasia's father, Plutarch, Per. 24, a philosopher of Klazomenai, prior to Anaxagoras, Aristot. Metaph. 1. 3, 984 B, to say nothing of the later Stoic, who gives his name to a Dialogue of Lucian's), γένος, 'by birth' a man of Pedasa (infra) alias Pedasos, or Pedason, 5. 121—'second to none' of the 'chamberlains' at the court (or 'in the king's eyes'). φέρεσθαι τὰ δεύτερα, a metaphor from the race-course, Iliad 23. 537 ff.

3. εὐνούχοι, 7. 187 supra, is a strictly Hellenic term for a thoroughly un-Hellenic institution, at least in the classic period=οἱ τὴν εὐνήν ἔχοντες. From the miserable fate of these confidential slaves emasculation was indissolubly associated with the word, and so completely domineered the merely etymological meaning that Aristotle (no humorist) applies the term to fruits without seed (cp. L. & S. sub voc.). Rawlinson's idea that Hermetimos exhibits the first historical instance of the great position of the Chamberlains, and that the influence of the Seraglio first made itself felt in the reign of Xerxes, ὑπὲρ Ἀλικαρνησοῦ· ἐν δὲ τοῖσι Πηδάσοισι τουτέοισι τοιόνδε 5 συμφέρεται πρήγμα γίνεσθαι· ἐπεὶ τοῖσι ἀμφικτυόσι πᾶσι τοῖσι ἀμφὶ ταύτης οἰκέουσι τῆς πόλιος μέλλῃ τι ἐντὸς χρόνου ἔσσεσθαι χαλεπὸν, τότε ἡ ἱερεὶα αὐτόθι τῆς Ἀθηναίης φύει 105 πώγωνα μέγαν. τοῦτο δὲ σφι δις ἤδη ἐγένετο. ἐκ τούτων δὴ τῶν Πηδασέων ὁ Ἑρμότιμος ἦν] τῷ μεγίστῃ τίσις ἤδη ἀδικηθέντι ἐγένετο πάντων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν. ἀλόντα γὰρ

4 ἀλικαρνησοῦ α || Πηδασέοισι z || τουτέοισι BPz, Holder 5
 φέρεται BPz, Holder 7 ἱρέη B 105. 1 τουτέων z

is not merely contrary to the evidence of Ktesias, Pers. 5, 9, 11, 20 (ed. Gilmore, §§ 36, 40, 42, 51, etc.), but in itself improbable. Hdt. himself mentions τῶν εὐνούχων τοὺς πιστοτάτους at the court of Astyages 1. 117, and of Amasis 2. 4, and the large harems of the oriental kings will have employed these unfortunates in still earlier ages. Xenoph. Kyrop. 7. 5 (of course) ascribes the institution to Kyros.

οἱ δὲ Πηδασεῖς—ἐγένετο. This passage occurs, or recurs, almost totidem verbis in 1. 175. Are both passages genuine? If not, which of the two is genuine? Or are both spurious? Rawlinson accepts them both, seeing no more difficulty in such a dittograph by author than by copyist. Valckenaer first challenged this passage and regarded the genuine text as having run παρὰ βασιλέα, τῷ μεγίστῃ τίσις κτλ. Stein adopts and develops his arguments: (1) The notice suits the context better in Book 1 (where Hdt. is recording the resistance offered to Harpagos by the Pedasians). (2) Strabo 611, in citing, cites from Bk. 1, not from this passage. (3) The phraseology is not thoroughly Herodotean, and betrays (Stein adds) by incorrect turns the amateur of the Hadrianic age: thus (a) for αὐτοῖσι τε καὶ τοῖσι περιόκοισι the interpolator here has τοῖσι ἀμφικτυόσι—leaving out αὐτοῖσι; (b) πᾶσι is an addition, and an exaggeration; (c) the preposition is incorrectly used, with genitive, of place, probably suggested by the falsified ἀμφικτυόσι; (d) ἐντὸς χρόνου is de trop (perhaps suggested by ἐκὰς χρόνον c. 144 infra, Stein); (e) χαλεπὸν is the forger's variant for the Herodotean ἀνεπιτήδειον; (f) so too φύει for ἴσχει; (g) συμφέρεται is also hardly in order. These arguments are cogent. (h) The most remarkable difference between the two passages is that the miracle has happened δις here, in Bk. 8, as against τρίς there in Bk. 1. That is regarded as an oversight: a curious one. Had the interpolator held the opinion that the 8th Bk., or the story of the Persian war, had been composed by Hdt. previously to the composition of the rest of the work, or of Bk. 1, he could not have forged a better bit of evidence! Moreover, he has inserted this note on the Pedasians here (by that theory at the earliest possible chance) rather than in Bk. 5. 121, or Bk. 6. 20, in either of which contexts the note would be more consonant with the context. It is impossible to maintain the authenticity of this passage in view of the objections; the other, on the testimony of Strabo, is genuine. This verdict sacrifices on the altar of truth a telling argument in favour of the priority of these Books. Fortunately, enough remains to prove it. Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

105. 2. τῷ μεγίστῃ τίσις ἤδη: almost more forcible than μεγίστῃ δὴ τίσις—cp. πάντων ἀνδρῶν ἤδη κτλ. c. 106 infra. The story of this unparalleled τίσις, δίκη, is in Hdt.'s best manner, or at least in a thoroughly characteristic vein, with the moral which he loves. Whether it originally stood in this place might be doubted; incidentally the view is fully endorsed that the king's objective was "Athens" (cp. c. 106 ad init.).

3. τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν. This formula occurs five times in these Books, as from Hdt.'s own pen (7. 20, 8. 105, 124, 9. 37, 64), twice on the lips of his dramatis personae (7. 27 a Persian; 9. 78 an Aiginetan). Cp. δσον ἡμ. 13. 7. 111, and contrast τῶν ἐγὼ οἶδα 7. 238. It might well have occurred in 7. 70 οἱ δ' ἐκ τῆς Λιβύης . . . ἀνθρώπων: and again 9. 35 μούνοι δὲ . . . πολιῆται. Hdt. will not add ἀνδρῶν here, or even ἀνθρώπων.

αὐτὸν ὑπὸ πολεμίων καὶ πωλεόμενον ὠνέεται Πανιώνιος ἀνὴρ Χίος, ὃς τὴν ζόην κατεστήσατο ἀπ' ἔργων ἀνοσιωτάτων· ὅκως 5
 γὰρ κτήσαιο παῖδας εἶδες ἐπαμμένους, ἐκταμὼν ἀγνέων ἐπώλεε ἐς Σάρδις τε καὶ Ἐφεσον χρημάτων μεγάλων. παρὰ γὰρ τοῖσι βαρβάροισι τιμώτεροι εἰσὶ οἱ εὐνοῦχοι πίστιος εἵνεκα τῆς πάσης τῶν ἐνορχίων. ἄλλους τε δὴ ὁ Πανιώνιος ἐξέταμε πολλούς, ἅτε ποιεύμενος ἐκ τούτου τὴν ζόην, καὶ δὴ 10
 καὶ τούτον. καὶ οὐ γὰρ τὰ πάντα ἐδυστύχῃς ὁ Ἑρμότιμος, ἀπικνέεται ἐκ τῶν Σαρδίων παρὰ βασιλέα μετ' ἄλλων δώρων, χρόνον δὲ προϊόντος πάντων τῶν εὐνούχων ἐτιμήθη μάλιστα παρὰ Ξέρξη. ὥς δὲ τὸ στράτευμα τὸ Περσικὸν ὄρμα βασιλεὺς 106
 ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀθήνας ἔων ἐν Σάρδισι, ἐνθαῦτα καταβάς κατὰ δὴ

4 παιώνιος B 5 ζώνη C: ζώνη B (cum ó supersc. R) || κατεκτήσατο Cobet, van H. 6 ἐκταμὼν Reiske, Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἐκτάμνων 7
 ἐπώλεε ἀγνέων? Stein<sup>2</sup> || σαρδιάς τε καὶ ἐς B 9 εἵνεκεν RS: εἵνεκε V
 || ἐνορχίων B: ἐνορχίων Pz 10 ποιεύμενος B || τούτων z || ζώνη C
 13 μάλιστα ἐτιμήθη παρὰ βασιλεῖ Ξέρξη (sic) B 106. 1 ὄρμα a,
 Stein<sup>1</sup> || ὁ βασιλεὺς z 2 ἐνθαῦτα δὴ (δὲ R) B

ἀλόντα . . ὑπὸ πολεμίων suggests prima facie a misfortune of war; the Ionian revolt (498-494 B.C.) from 15-18 years previous to the date required for this story seems to offer a likely enough occasion. Cp. the threats of the barbarians and their recorded fulfilment,
 6. 9, 32. (Stein, however, suggests a piratical kidnapping.)

4. Πανιώνιος ἀνὴρ Χίος: Panionios,
 a man and a Chian. He did not remain an ἀνὴρ. His name is, perhaps, significant of the 'Panionic' ambitions of the period, which produced the 'Ionic Revolt': his ethnicon suggests that the notorious wealth of the Chians was partly due to slave-trading; cp. Thucyd.
 8. 40. 2, and the whole passage on Chios, Athenaeus 6. 86-91=265 ff. (where inter alia this passage of Hdt. is cited).

5. τὴν ζόην κατεστήσατο: cp. τὸν βίον κτησάμενε c. 106 infra. Panionios was not the only Greek that had engaged in this trade; the Corinthians were perhaps tarred with the same brush;
 cp. 3. 48.

6. εἶδες ἐπαμμένους, 'possessed of beauty.' L. & S. give ἐπάπτω as Ionic for ἐφάπτω. Homer, at least, only contains the aspirated forms of the verb.
 The participle is perf. (passive in form, middle in force).

ἐκταμὼν ἀγνέων: the double participles are rather awkward, but not so awkward as if both were in the present (defensible as indicating repeated acts?); cp. App. Crit. ἀγνέων is itself a frequentative of ἀγω (used in the middle 7. 33 supra); here perhaps especially suitable for 'bringing to market.'

7. ἐς Σάρδις τε καὶ Ἐφεσον: the great markets for such wares, from their position on the Royal Road (vide 5. 52-54); and also perhaps with a local demand for the temples of Kybele and Artemis (Stein).

παρὰ γὰρ τοῖσι βαρβάροισι κτλ.:
 the difference between Hellenic and Asiatic culture is emphatic; the remark is, however, only intended to apply to slaves.

8. πίστιος . . τῆς πάσης, faithfulness, fidelity, in all respects. For the antithesis εὐνοῦχος, ἐνορχίς cp. 6. 32 (ἐρχίς subst. 4. 109).

106. 1. τὸ στράτευμα τὸ Περσικόν:
 the word στράτευμα is used both for
 'expedition' and 'army' or 'host';
 here perhaps (with ὄρμα) rather in the latter sense. It was a 'Persian' army, not merely politically, but in the main ethnically, while at Sardes in 481-480 B.C. (cp. 7. 26, 40), and this passage is an undesigned homage to the fact.

2. καταβάς: from inland to the coast.
 κατὰ δὴ τι πρῆγμα, 'on some (other) business.'—Perhaps Panionios

τι πρῆγμα ὃ Ἑρμότιμος ἐς γῆν τὴν Μυσίην, τὴν Χίοι μὲν νέμονται Ἀταρνεὺς δὲ καλέεται, εὐρίσκει τὸν Πανιώνιον ἐνθαῦτα.
 5 ἐπυγνοὺς δὲ ἔλεγε πρὸς αὐτὸν πολλοὺς καὶ φιλίους λόγους, πρῶτα μὲν οἱ καταλέγων ὅσα αὐτὸς δι' ἐκεῖνον ἔχοι ἀγαθὰ, δεύτερα δέ οἱ ὑπισχνεύμενος ἀντὶ τούτων ὅσα μιν ἀγαθὰ ποιήσει, ἣν κομίσας τοὺς οἰκέτας οἰκὴν ἐκείνην, ὥστε ὑποδεξάμενον ἄσμενον τοὺς λόγους τὸν Πανιώνιον κομισαί τὰ τέκνα 10 καὶ τὴν γυναῖκα. ὥς δὲ ἄρα πανοικίῃ μιν περιέλαβε, ἔλεγε
 ὁ Ἑρμότιμος τάδε. “ὦ πάντων ἀνδρῶν ἤδη μάλιστα ἀπ’ ἔργων ἀνοσιωτάτων τὸν βίον κτησάμενε, τί σε ἐγὼ κακὸν ἢ αὐτὸς ἢ τῶν ἐμῶν τις σὲ προγόνων ἐργάσατο, ἢ σὲ ἢ τῶν σῶν τινα, ὅτι με ἀντ’ ἀνδρὸς ἐποίησας τὸ μὴδὲν εἶναι; ἐδόκεές

3 μὲν om. B, Holder 4 ἀταρνεός B: Ἀταρνεὺς Holder || παιώνιον B
 5 ἔλεγε ἄρα B 7 τουτέων z 8 ποιήσει B: ποιήσειεν || κομισάμενος B || οἰκέτας: παῖδας CPz || ἐκεῖ van H. || ἀποδεξάμενον conl. Stein<sup>1</sup>,
 rec. van H. 9 παιώνιον B || τά <τε> van H. 12 σε del. Cobet, Holder, van H. 13 τίς σε CPz, Stein<sup>2</sup>: τις B, Holder, van H.:
 τις σε || προγόνων om. B, Holder, van H.

was a reformed character by this time, with a wife and family of his own, and only engaged in lawful trade: all the more terrible the vengeance. But l. 11 infra hardly supports this.

3. γῆν τὴν Μυσίην: the term is partitive or restrictive, and plainly not used with the same extension as in 7. 42 supra, as the next words prove.

τὴν Χίοι μὲν νέμονται Ἀταρνεὺς δὲ καλέεται. Cp. 1. 160 χώρος τῆς Μυσίης Λέσβου ἀντίος. The dreadful story of this 'field of blood' is told 1. 160. Cp. 7. 42 supra. The specification here was hardly necessary after that passage. The notice here is probably reproduced from the 'Source,' and without any memory of the other passages. The absence of a cross reference is suggestive of Hdt.'s method of work.

4. εὐρίσκει: not that he was looking for him; it is a casual meeting apparently.

5. ἐπυγνοὺς: as Hermotimos 'recognizes' his tormentor he will not have been a mere child at the time of his capture.

6. καταλέγων, of a series, or list; cp. 7. 110.

8. ἐκεῖνον, 'thanks to him.'

7. ὑπισχνεύμενος: Hdt. apparently uses freely both forms ὑπισχνέομαι and ὑπισχομαι. Cp. 7. 104, 168, 9. 109, 2. 152, etc.

ἀντί, in return for.

8. τοὺς οἰκέτας: τὰ τέκνα καὶ τὴν γυναῖκα infra; cp. c. 41 supra.

ἐκείνη: sc. ἐν τῷ Ἀταρνεῖ, Stein; or possibly ἐν Σάρδεσι.

ὑποδεξάμενον ἄσμενον: this construction is paralleled in Thuc. 6. 12. 2 ἄρχων ἄσμενος αἰρεθείς. ἄσμενος is a curious adjective, itself at times almost participially constructed; cp. c. 14 supra.

10. πανοικίη: 7. 39 supra.

περιέλαβε: cp. περιῆλθε ad fin.

11. ἤδη: as in c. 105 supra.

12. ἔργων is here (and there) used perhaps of industrial 'works' (ἔργα καὶ ἡμέραι). The formula τῶν ἡμ. ἰδ. would be very dull here! Cp. c. 105 supra.

τὸν βίον κτησάμενε: a variant on τὴν ζῶν κατεστήσατο c. 105.

τί σε ἐγὼ κτλ. a vendetta might have justified the cruelty of Panionios to Hermotimos—as it now justifies that of Hermotimos to Panionios.

14. ὅτι με ἀντ' ἀνδρὸς ἐποίησας τὸ μὴδὲν εἶναι, 'that thou hast made me to be, instead of a man, the merest cipher.' τὸ μὴδὲν, cp. 9. 58 infra οὐδένες ἄρα ἐόντες κτλ. and 1. 32 ἢ δ' ἡμετέρῃ εὐδαιμονίῃ οὕτω τοι ἀπέρριπται ἐς τὸ μὴδὲν . . ., neither of which passages is so forcible as this. Contr. Plato Laues 716 B πολλοὶς τισιν ἐδοξεν εἶναι τις.

ἰδόκεές τε θεοὺς λήσεν οἷα ἐμῆχανώ τότε, 'thou wast thinking to

τε θεοὺς λήσειν οἷα ἐμχανῶ τότε· οἷ σε ποιήσαντα ἀνόσια, 15 νόμῳ δικαίῳ χρεώμενοι, ὑπήγαγον ἐς χεῖρας τὰς ἐμάς, ὥστε σε μὴ μέμψασθαι τὴν ἀπ' ἐμέο τοι ἐσομένην δίκην." ὥς δέ οἱ ταῦτα ὠνείδισε, ἀχθέντων τῶν παίδων ἐς ὄψιν, ἠναγκάζετο ὁ Πανιώνιος τῶν ἐωυτοῦ παίδων τεσσέρων ἐόντων τὰ αἰδοῖα ἀποτάμνειν, ἀναγκαζόμενος δὲ ἐποίηε ταῦτα· αὐτοῦ τε, ὡς 20 ταῦτα ἐργάσατο, οἱ παῖδες ἀναγκαζόμενοι ἀπέταμνον. Πανιώνιον μὲν νυν οὕτω περιῆλθε ἢ τε τίσις καὶ Ἑρμότιμος;

Ξέρξης δὲ ὡς τοὺς παῖδας ἐπέτρεψε Ἀρτεμισίῃ ἀπάγειν 107 ἐς Ἐφεσον, καλέσας Μαρδόνιον ἐκέλευσέ μιν τῆς στρατιῆς διαλέγειν τοὺς βούλεται, καὶ ποιεῖν τοῖσι λόγοισι τὰ ἔργα πειρώμενον ὅμοια. ταύτην μὲν τὴν ἡμέρην ἐς τοσοῦτο ἐγένετο, τῆς δὲ νυκτὸς κελεύσαντος βασιλέος τὰς νέας οἱ στρατηγοὶ ἐκ 5

15 οἱ δέ σε? Stein<sup>2</sup> 16 χρεώμενοι P, van H. || ἐς om. B || χέρας CPz 17 μέμψασθαι Cobet, van H. || τοι: του B 18 ὠνείδιζε CPz 19 παιώνιος B || τεσσάρων C 20 ὥς: ὅς P<sup>1</sup> 21 παιώνιον B 22 τε om. B || ὁ Ἑρμότιμος CPz, van H. 107. 1 ἄρτεμισίῃ ἐπέτρεψε CPz 2 ἐκέλευέ B, Holder 3 τοὺς ἀν βούλεται z 4 πειρώμενον secl. Krueger || ὅμοια CPz, van H. || τοσοῦτον Bz 5 βασιλῆος z || νῆας Bz

escape the eyes of God in such deeds as thou wast then contriving.'

16. νόμῳ δικαίῳ χρεώμενοι: the Divine justice to Hdt. is strictly anthropomorphic. Cp. Introduction, § 11.

ὥστε σε μὴ μέμψασθαι, ferocious irony: 'so that you (should) find no fault with . . .', 'so that you (should) have no fault to find with.' Not merely, 'so that you have no right to complain that I revenge myself on you!' Cp. Xenoph. Hell. 6. 2. 34 εἰ δέ τις μὴ ἀκολουθήσει, προέειπε μὴ μέμψασθαι τὴν δίκην: Plato Laies 716 π ὑποσχὼν τιμωρίαν οὐ μεμπτήν τῇ δίκῃ ἐαυτὸν τε καὶ οἶκον καὶ πόλιν ἀρδὴν ἀνάστατον ἐποίησε. The aorist infinitive with the future participle is piquant.

20. ἀναγκαζόμενος, passive: no doubt by torture.

22. περιῆλθε ἢ τε τίσις καὶ Ἑρμότιμος: is it possible that Hdt. should have meant to spoil his grim story with a pun! Yet be τίσις never so much personified the phrase seems not quite happy. Cp. 3. 4 σοφίῃ γάρ μιν περιῆλθε ὁ Φάειν. L. & S. render the word here 'came at last upon . . .' (περιέλαβε up above seems the complement), and in c. 6 supra 'surround,' in potestatem habuit (Baehr). Perhaps the explanation should be sought not so much in a zeugma

(περιῆλθε) as in a hendíadys (ἢ τε τίσις καὶ Ἑρμότιμος), 'Vengeance in the person of Hermotimos laid hands on Panionios.'

107. 1. Ξέρξης δέ: the narrative resumed from c. 103 supra; the story of Hermotimos, though a digression, is hardly an insertion: it will have belonged to the earliest deposits in Hdt.'s memory and knowledge.

3. διαλέγειν, secernere, to divide the 'sheep and the goats'; cp. c. 113 infra τοῖσι εἶδεα ὑπῆρχε διαλέγων.

ποιεῖν τοῖσι λόγοισι τὰ ἔργα πειρώμενον ὅμοια: πειρώμενον, a limitation; sí fieri posset, Stein. Or, 'so far as in him lay.'

4. ταύτην μὲν τὴν ἡμέρην. Is this merely a conventional turn, or does Hdt. use it with conscious design? No change of day has been noticed since the dawn in c. 83 supra. On that showing, the day here is the day of battle, and the night is the night of that very day. There seems no reason to doubt this result, though it suggests that the battle was over long before nightfall (perhaps before noon!).

ἐς τοσοῦτο ἐγένετο: things went no further; éyivero, impers. as in c. 6 supra.

5. οἱ στρατηγοί, the admirals; cp. c. 75 supra.

τοῦ Φαλήρου ἀπῆγον ὀπίσω ἐς τὸν Ἑλλήσποντον ὡς τάχεις εἶχε ἕκαστος, διαφυλαξούσας τὰς σχεδίας πορευθῆναι βασιλεί.
ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀγχοῦ ἦσαν Ζωστήρος πλέοντες οἱ βάρβαροι, ἀνατεί-νουσι γὰρ ἄκραι λεπταὶ τῆς ἡπείρου ταύτης, ἔδοξάν τε νέας 10 εἶναι καὶ ἔφευγον ἐπὶ πολλόν· χρόνῳ δὲ μαθόντες ὅτι οὐ νέες εἶεν ἀλλ' ἄκραι, συλληχθέντες ἐκομίζοντο.

108 Ὡς δὲ ἡμέρη ἐγένετο, ὁρῶντες οἱ Ἕλληνες κατὰ χώραν

6 ταχέως Sz 7 ἔσχεν B || φυλαξούσας B || βασιλῆα z: βασιλεῖ
8 ἔσαν z || πλώοντες BPz 9 τῆς ἡπείρου, ταύτας B: 'An τῆς ἡπείρου
ταύτης?' Kallenberg: 'An ταύτης, ταύτας?' van H. || νῆας Bz 10 νέες
C: νῆες 108. 1 ἐγένετο CPz || ὁρέωντες C: ὁρέοντες B, Steinl,
van H.

ἐκ τοῦ Φαλήρου . . ἐς τὸν Ἑλλήσ-ποντον: from out the bay of Phaleron into the Hellespont—from which they had come (ὀπίσω). Did they go direct, or all round by the route they had come by? They apparently reached the Hellespont, cp. c. 117 infra.

6. ὡς τάχεις εἶχε ἕκαστος, 'each one as fast as he could . . .' The picture presented is of a shattered fleet streaming across the sea in a saute qui peut style.

7. διαφυλαξούσας . . βασιλεί, "infinitivum πορευθῆναι nescio quid durius habere videtur," Baehr. διαφ. βασ.
ὥστε αὐτὸν πορευθῆναι, Schweighauser.
Perhaps πορευθῆναι is rather an exegetical,
or even a telic infinitive after διαφυλαξούσας, and βασιλεί a purely ethical dative (so B.). Stein cps. 4. 64 χλαίνας ἐπείνυσθαι ποιέουσι, and καταβάλλειν 7.
25 supra (a less exact parallel).

8. Ζωστήρος. Strabo 398 describes it as a large promontory, next the deme of Aixone. It is certainly identified with the three-headed promontory, near the modern Vari. Pausanias 1. 31. 1 mentions that there was an altar there
'Αθηνᾶς καὶ Ἀπόλλωνος καὶ Ἀρτέμιδος καὶ Λητοῦς, and explains the name: τεκεῖν μὲν οὖν Λητῷ τοὺς παῖδας ἐνταῦθα οὐ φασι.
λύσασθαι δὲ τὸν ζωστήρα ὡς τεχομένην,
καὶ τῷ χωρίῳ διὰ τοῦτο γενέσθαι τὸ ὄνομα.
The promontory might perhaps be considered like a ζωστήρ in appearance.

9. ἄκραι λεπταὶ τῆς ἡπείρου ταύτης:
is ταύτης merely graphic=ταύτη, or is
Hdt. writing as in Europe? Stein cps.
7. 201, which does not settle the point.

Zoster itself is a large promontory;
but its three headlands may be referred to as ἄκραι λεπταί. Rawlinson, however, remarks that "it is not very likely they could have been mistaken by the Persians

(sic) for ships." Theophrastus Charact.
25 has ὁ δεῖλός τοιοῦτός τις ὁλος πλέων τὰς ἄκρας φάσκειν ἡμισοίας εἶναι.

10. ἐπὶ πολλόν, of space, as in 2. 32,
not of time, as in 2. 119.

11. συλληχθέντες: passive in form, middle in force. ἐκομίζοντο, 'they continued their voyage'; cp. ἐκομίζετο
c. 118 infra.

108. 1. ἡμέρη: apparently the day after the battle. Hdt. has spent the night on the Persian side (cc. 97-107).
The Greeks had retired into the bay of Salamis again (c. 96 supra), quite ignorant of the magnitude of their success, and expecting to have the struggle renewed (as at Artemision) upon the following day. The illusion was not dissipated at once even with the return of the sun: the Persian army was still visible on the Attic shore, and the sight created a presumption that the fleet was not far off. If so, the presumption was ill-founded: the army might have remained in order to cover the retreat of the ships. It seems unlikely that news of the flight of the king's vessels had not reached the Greeks;
but it would have been quite impossible for the Greeks to leave Salamis, while the king's land-forces were in occupation of Attica, even if no visible threat of an assault upon Salamis (cp. c. 97 supra) was in being. Hdt. has hardly envisaged or grasped the strategic situation in this case.

οἱ Ἕλληνες: the Greeks at large,
but more particularly the commanders.

κατὰ χώραν μένοντα τ. στ. τ. πῆδον:
the same army as was marching, on the night before the battle, to the attack of Peloponnesos, c. 70 supra. It is, of course, possible for us, with two or three μένοντα τὸν στρατὸν τὸν πεζὸν ἡλπίζον καὶ τὰς νέας εἶναι περὶ Φάληρον, ἐδόκεόν τε ναυμαχήσειν σφέας παραρτέοντό τε ὡς ἀλεξήσομενοι. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐπύθοντο τὰς νέας οἰχωκυίας, αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα ἐδόκεε ἐπιδιώκειν. τὸν μὲν νυν ναυτικὸν τὸν 5 Ξέρξῳ στρατὸν οὐκ ἐπέιδον διώξαντες μέχρι Ἄνδρου, ἐς δὲ τὴν Ἄνδρον ἀπικόμενοι ἐβουλεύοντο. Θεμιστοκλῆς μὲν νυν

2 νῆας Bz 4 ἐπεῖτε? van H. || δ' B || νῆας Bz || ὡχωκυία R: ὡχωκυίας SV 5 τὸν μὲν στρατὸν τὸν ξέρξῳ R: τὸν μὲν ναυτικὸν στρατὸν τὸν ξέρξῳ SV columns of Persian infantry and cavalry at our disposal, to harmonize the discrepancy; but it remains a discrepancy on Hdt.'s own showing.

2. εἶναι περὶ Φάληρον: whither the survivors had retired on the previous day; c. 93 supra. Ships at Phaleron, or in the bay, would be invisible to the Greeks at Salamis: a matter of conjecture or speculation (ἡλπίζον).

3. παραρτέοντο: cp. c. 81 supra.

4. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐπύθοντο: Hdt. fails to specify the exact time, at which, or the means by which, the Greeks were informed of the flight of the king's fleet. If they no sooner learned it than they resolved to pursue (αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα), we might infer that they only learnt the retreat of the fleet after the evacuation of Athens and Attica by the army. But, if the fleet evacuated Phaleron immediately after the battle, it had a long start of the Greeks, who, whatever they might desire or decide to do, could not leave Salamis unprotected, until they were assured that the Persian army too was in full retreat. Was the pursuit of the Persian fleet seriously intended? It would certainly not have been lightly undertaken, or without ardent debate. Hdt. records just below a debate at Andros; but the Hellenes can hardly have rowed to Andros, whatever the object of that movement, without a previous council and discussion. Hdt. has assuredly omitted to report a debate at Salamis, after the victory.

6. μέχρι Ἄνδρου. The island of Andros, one of the 'Kyklades' (cp. 5. 31), lies between Euboea and Tenos (cp. 4. 33), and is about 80 E. miles voyage from Salamis. It had evidently 'medized,' cp. c. 66 supra, and has special reasons for medizing; cp. 7. 115 supra.

7. ἐβουλεύοντο: the scene, the speakers, the subject, of this council, or debate, are all open to challenge. For reasons above given the Greek fleet can hardly have quitted Salamis in pursuit of 'the flying Mede': if the Greeks put into Andros, which was a Persian outpost or stronghold, it must have been with the intention of 'liberating' or gaining the island for the good cause; the attack on Andros, and the medizing islands, will have been resolved upon before the Greeks left Salamis. Hdt. treats this operation as a matter of course, or as the obvious alternative to a pursuit of the 'barbarian' fleet (c. 111 infra); but it will have required an express decision, even if covered by the general vow against the medizers (7. 132). Again, Eurybiades here appears as taking part in the debate, and as the opponent of Themistokles; dramatic, and perhaps constitutional proprieties are better observed above in the accounts of the debates before Salamis, where Korinthian opposes Athenian, or in the variant on this very anecdote, which pits Aristides against Themistokles (cp. Appendix VII. § 2). The Spartan has perhaps come in as the exponent of the characteristically Lakonian policy, not to pursue a flying foe. The plan ascribed to Themistokles is here expressed in almost self-contradictory terms, or as combining incompatible objects: διὰ νήσων τραπέσθαι ἐπιδιώξαι τὰς νέας πλέειν ἰθὺς ἐπὶ τ. Ἑλλ. λύσαντας τὰς γεφύρας (i.e. ἐπὶ τ. Ἑλλ. πλεύσαντας λύσαι τ. γ.). The first phrase may be ambiguous, covering alike operations against the islands (the Kyklades) in succession, and a passage through them without touching; but the ideas of pursuing the Persian fleet and of sailing for the Hellespont to destroy the bridges could only be harmonized on the assumption that the Persian fleet had made for the Hellespont; and even so, the pursuit of the γνώμην ἀπεδείκνυτο διὰ νήσων τραπομένους καὶ ἐπιδιώξαντας

τὰς νέας πλέειν ἰθέως ἐπὶ τὸν Ἑλλήσποντον λύσοντας τὰς 10 γεφύρας· Εὐρυβιάδης δὲ τὴν ἐναντίην ταύτην γνώμην ἐτίθετο, λέγων ὡς εἰ λύσουσι τὰς σχεδίας, τοῦτ' ἂν μέγιστον πάντων
σφί κακῶν τὴν Ἑλλάδα ἐργάσαιο. εἰ γὰρ ἀναγκασθεῖη ἀπολαμφθεῖς ὁ Πέρσης μένειν ἐν τῇ Εὐρώπῃ, πειρῶτο ἂν ἡσυχίην μὴ ἄγειν, ὡς ἄγοντι μὲν οἱ ἡσυχίην οὔτε τι προ-15 χωρέειν οἶόν τε ἔσται τῶν πρηγμάτων οὔτε τις κομιδὴ τὸ ὀπίσω φανήσεται, λιμῶ τέ οἱ ἡ στρατιὴ διαφθερέεται, ἐπιχειροῦντι δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ ἔργου ἔχομένῳ πάντα τὰ κατὰ τὴν
Εὐρώπην οἶά τε ἔσται προσχωρῆσαι κατὰ πόλιν τε καὶ κατὰ

8 ἐπεδείκνυτο B 9 νῆας Bz || πλώειν Bz 12 σφέας B:
σφεῖς z || κακὸν B || ἐργάσατο R: ἐργάσαιντο SV: ἐργασαίαιτο Dindorf, Cobet, Kallenberg, van H. 13 ἐν τῇ εὐρώπῃ μένειν B: ἐν τῇ Εὐρώπῃ
huc ex fine cap. translata susp. Kallenberg || πειρῶτ' ABz 15 <ἐς> τὸ Cobet (quod olim impugn. Schweighauser) 16 φανέεται? Krueger ||
διαφθαρέεται α: διαφθαρείται van H. || ἐπιχωρέοντι B

fleet might involve a second engagement, which might prove an obstacle to destroying the bridges. Possibly all three ideas (i. the destruction of the bridges; ii. the pursuit of the flying Phoenicians; iii. the visitation of the medizing islands) were traditionally and rightly associated with Themistokles; but they should not have been given to him in one breath!

10. γνώμην ἐτίθετο: a variant upon the more common γν. ἀπεδείκνυτο (cp. just above), perhaps used here out of regard to the commanding position of Eurybiades; or perhaps simply from the analogy of voting, as in c. 123 infra ἐτίθετο τὴν ψήφον. The opinion ascribed to Eurybiades that the destruction of the bridges would be a national calamity for Greece is doubly refuted, (i.) by the apprehension previously ascribed to Xerxes (in a different anecdote) c. 97 supra; (ii.) by the logic of facts, the bridges having been destroyed without injury to Greece; cp. c. 117 infra.

11. τοῦτ' ἂν . . ἐργάσαιο: as ἐργάσαιο can scarcely be passive, the construction is with a double acc. after the verb (c. 79 supra), of which τοῦτο is subject, σφί being, of course, ethical dative. Cp. App. Crit.

14. ἡσυχίην μὴ ἄγειν: a curious equivalent for ἐπιχειρεῖν, or ἔργου ἐχέσθαι (phrases used below), perhaps suggested by the speaker's desire that the Persian should ἡσυχίην ἄγειν (Stein). The argument which follows (ὡς ἄγοντι μὲν οἱ κτλ.) seems far-fetched: the destruction of the bridges is to compel the Persian to the conquest of Europe; the victory at Salamis and the consequent superiority of the Greeks at sea are ignored. The whole passage reads like an estimate of the necessity for active and offensive measures on the invader's part before the invasion, or at least before his defeat, a necessity which was not conditioned simply by the existence or non-existence of the bridges; cp. Appendix IV. § 1.

15. τῶν πρηγμάτων, 'his plans.' προχωρεῖν, 'to succeed': προσχωρῆσαι just below comes in rather inelegantly.

κομιδὴ τὰ ὀπίσω: cp. ἡ κομιδὴ ἡμῶν ἔσται τὸ ὀπίσω 4. 134, and ἡ ὀπίσω κομιδὴ c. 120 infra. κ. in a different sense 9. 73 infra.

18. οἶά τε ἔσται προσχωρῆσαι. The subject appears to be πάντα τὰ κ. τ. Εὐρώπην, 'all the parts of Europe,' i.e. all Europe; but the speaker is perhaps to be taken only to refer to the Hellenized portions, though ἐθνεα may cover non-Hellenic tribes (cp. 7. 1, 110 supra), and 'Europe' is again and again suggested as the ultimate Persian objective. The harvests of Hellas would hardly suffice for the universal conquest of all Europe.

ἔθνεα, ἥτοι ἀλισκομένων γε ἢ πρὸ τούτου ὁμολογούντων· τροφήν τε ἔξειν σφέας τὸν ἐπέτειον αἰεὶ τὸν τῶν Ἑλλήνων<sup>20</sup> καρπὸν. ἀλλὰ δοκέειν γὰρ νικηθέντα τῇ ναυμαχίῃ οὐ μενέειν ἐν τῇ Εὐρώπῃ τὸν Πέρσῃ· ἐατέον ὧν εἶναι φεύγειν, ἐς ὃ ἔλθοι φεύγων ἐς τὴν ἑωυτοῦ· τὸ ἐνθεῦτεν δὲ περὶ τῆς ἐκείνου ποιέεσθαι ἤδη τὸν ἀγῶνα ἐκέλευε. ταύτης δὲ εἶχοντο τῆς γνώμης καὶ Πελοποννησίων τῶν ἄλλων οἱ στρατηγοί. ὥς δὲ<sup>109</sup> ἔμαθε ὅτι οὐ πείσει τοὺς γε πολλοὺς πλέειν ἐς τὸν Ἑλλησποντον ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς, μεταβαλὼν πρὸς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους

20 τὸν ante τῶν om. B, Holder 21 ἀλλ' οὐ δοκεῖν C || οὐ μενέειν :
μένειν C 22 πέρσεα B: Περσέα z 23 ἔλθη B: ἔλθη Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder 24 ἐκέλευε del. Cobet, van H. 109. 2 πλώειν B:
3 ἔλεγε πρὸς B

19. ἢ πρὸ τούτου ὁμολογούντων: grammatically the less likely looks politically the more likely alternative; viz. that they should come to an agreement before being taken, or reduced by force. The (masculine) gen. abs. is noticeable. With the phraseology of this passage cp. 7. 139 supra.

20. τὸν ἐπέτειον αἰεὶ τὸν τ. Ἑλ. καρπὸν. The article as in τὸν ναυτικὸν τὸν Ζέρξῳ στρατὸν l. 5 supra. Unless αἰεὶ might have practically a locative sense the phrase seems to imply a series of annual campaigns, though ἐπέτειος might not perhaps in itself necessitate a succession of harvests; cp. 2. 25 δοκέει δέ μοι οὐδὲ πᾶν τὸ ὕδωρ τὸ ἐπέτειον ἐκάστοτε ἀποπέμπεσθαι τοῦ Νείλου ὁ φάσις κτλ., 2. 92 τὴν δὲ βόβλον τὴν ἐπέτειον γινομένην ἐπὶ ἀνασπάσσει κτλ.

21. ἀλλὰ δοκέειν γὰρ νικηθέντα κτλ. Eurybiades the Spartan is represented as saying—and so say all of the Peloponnesian commanders—that the Persians would not remain in Europe after the defeat at Salamis. This prognostication is abundantly nullified, not merely by the commission of Mardonios, but even after Plataia by the remnant in Thrace, cp. 7. 106, 107 supra. It is, however, possible that the formula represents accurately enough the Spartan and 'Peloponnesian' point of view, or hope: the more plausible, if the Greeks had already witnessed the evacuation of Attica by the land-forces of the barbarian. Even when later the Spartans must have been convinced that the Persian had not abandoned Europe, or even Hellas, in spite of his defeat at Salamis, they were still hoping to avoid any necessity for another land-engagement; cp. Appendix VII. § 1.

23. περὶ τῆς ἐκείνου ποιέεσθαι ἤδη τὸν ἀγῶνα: remarkable is the idea of an aggressive movement upon the king's possessions thus formulated on the lips of Eurybiades. Is it an anachronism, borrowed from the πρόσχημα of the Delian League in 477 B.C. (cp. Thuc. 1. 96)? Or is it but an anticipation of the naval programme of Mykale and Sestos, in the next year (479 B.C.)? Or is it not rather a testimony to the first and fundamental principles of Themistoklean strategy, which had already, and even before Salamis, advocated an offensive movement as the best means of relieving the tension in Greece? After all, 'the march to Sardis' was an old idea, nay, a fait accompli, in Athenian quarters; cp. 5. 97 ff.; but that a Spartan in 480 B.C. contemplates a struggle for the possession of the king's own territory (περὶ τῆς ἐκείνου, causal not locative) is a little surprising.

24. εἶχοντο with the gen., 'laid hold of,' 'adhered to'; cp. (with γνώμης) Thuc. 1. 140. 1, and 6. 94 supra ταύτης ἐχόμενοι τῆς προφάσις.

109. 2. οὐ πείσει τοὺς γε πολλούς. Hdt. here writes as though the movements of the fleet were determined by a majority of votes; no doubt the Navarch, Eurybiades, really had the actual decision; cp. c. 64 supra.

3. μεταβαλὼν: cp. 5. 75 Κορίνθιοι . . μετέβαλλον τε καὶ ἀπαλλάσσοντο. In that passage, as in 7. 52 supra, the word appears to be used, intransitively, of actual physical change of place; and here the words πρὸς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους

(οὔτοι γὰρ μάλιστα ἐκπεφυνγότεων περιημέκτεον, ὁρμέατό τε
 5 ἐς τὸν Ἑλλησποντον πλέειν καὶ ἐπὶ σφέων αὐτῶν βαλλόμενοι, εἰ οἱ ἄλλοι μὴ βουλοίατο) ἔλεγέ σφι τάδε. "καὶ αὐτὸς ἤδη πολλοῖσι παρεγενόμενῃ καὶ πολλῷ πλέω ἀκήκοα τοιάδε γενέσθαι, ἄνδρας ἐς ἀναγκαίην ἀπειληθέντας [νενικημένους]
 ἀναμάχεσθαι τε καὶ ἀναλαμβάνειν τὴν προτέρην κακότητα.
 10 ἡμεῖς δέ, εὖρημα γὰρ εὐρήκαμεν ἡμέας τε αὐτοὺς καὶ τὴν
 Ἑλλάδα, νέφος τοσοῦτο ἀνθρώπων ἀνωσάμενοι, μὴ διώκωμεν

4 ὁρμέατό α etc. 5 πλώειν Bz || αὐτέων z || βαλλόμενοι z: βουλό-μένοι B 6 εἰ ὧλλοι B 7 πλείω B 8 νενικημένους Stein;
 del. Cobet, Holder, van H. 11 τοσοῦτον A ante ras. Bz || ἀνθρώπων damn. Dobree || ἀνωσάμενοι BPz: ἀνασώσάμενοι support a similar interpretation—otherwise a mental conversion might be preferable. Mutato consilio ad Athenienses se convertens (Schweigh. Lex.) seems unwarrantably to combine both.

4. περιημέκτεον: an Herodotean word, used with the dative, as in 4. 154, and absolutely, as in 1. 114 μᾶλλον τι περιημέκτεε, is here used with a sort of causal genitive (ἐκπεφυνγότεων). The meaning is clear ('were aggrieved'), but the etymology unknown.

ὁρμέατο: the pluperfect passive, without augment. The tense might here have its temporal meaning, even in view of the sequence εἰ οἱ ἄλλοι μὴ βουλοίατο. The condition predicated is, of course, purely psychological.

5. ἐπὶ σφέων αὐτῶν βαλλόμενοι, 'at their own risk'? 'on their own responsibility'? or 'by themselves'? cp. 5. 73 and 3. 71. The exact metaphor is less clear than the meaning; the expression is apparently Herodotean. καί, etiam.

6. ἔλεγέ σφι τάδε. Hdt. does not shrink from reporting the speeches of Themistokles; cp. cc. 60, 61 f., 80, 83 supra.

7. πολλοῖσι παρεγενόμενῃ: πολλοῖσι is presumably neuter, as co-ordinate with πολλῷ πλέω just below. The occasions referred to, if set out, would have furnished an interesting chapter of autobiography. The emphatic co-ordination καὶ . . . καὶ is observable.

8. ἀπειληθέντας [νενικημένους]: the doubled participles are clumsy though intelligible; cp. App. Crit. At Andros (Mannheim, Pape-Benseler) the Greeks have to do with ἀνδρες. Themistokles does not despise the enemy.

9. ἀναμάχεσθαι τε καὶ ἀναλαμβάνειν: cp. 5. 121 μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο τὸ τῷμα ἀνέλαβόν τε καὶ ἀνεμαχέσαντο οἱ Κῆρες. (Themistokles can hardly have been present on that occasion.) ἀναλαμβάνειν having an object here (κακότητα) is of simpler construction, and perhaps of more obvious meaning, cp. 7. 232 supra, but κακότης itself is of disputable significance. In 2. 128 it appears to mean 'evil plight,' misery; and it may bear the same meaning in 2. 124; so too, most clearly, in 6. 67, where it is opposed to εὐδαιμονίῃ, but in 7. 168 supra it certainly denotes a defect of character, cowardice or what not (cp. Thuc. 5. 100 κακότης καὶ δειλία), and it might bear that interpretation here.

10. εὖρημα γὰρ εὐρήκαμεν, 'we have had a stroke of luck,' cp. 7. 10 l. 43; the cognate acc. is simple enough, but the addition of the further accusatives, ἡμέας τε αὐτοὺς καὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα, complicates the sentence, and without the addition of a participle, co-ordinate with ἀνωσάμενοι, a constructio ad sensum is a trifle violent—as though εἴρ. εὐρήκ. might form a single verbal idea and construction = ἀναελαβήκαμεν (sc. ἀνελήφαμεν). ἡμέας τε αὐτοὺς καὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα may, however, be taken in apposition to εὖρημα—a somewhat excited phrase! Anything were better than inserting ἀνασώσάμενοι. Cp. App. Crit.

11. νέφος τοσοῦτο ἀνθρώπων ἀνωσάμενοι: the metaphor is superb; the barbarians are mere ἀνθρωποι from this point of view (though ἀνδρες φείγοντες immediately below). The verb is curious—cp. App. Crit.—but justified by 7. 139, a passage perhaps influenced by the oratory of Themistokles.

ἀνδρας φεύγοντας. τάδε γὰρ οὐκ ἡμεῖς κατεργασάμεθα, ἀλλὰ θεοὶ τε καὶ ἥρωες, οἱ ἐφθόνησαν ἄνδρα ἓνα τῆς τε Ἀσίας καὶ τῆς Εὐρώπης βασιλεύσαι ἔοντα ἀνδρσίον τε καὶ ἀτάσθαλον· ὃς τὰ τε ἱρὰ καὶ τὰ ἴδια ἐν ὁμοίῳ ἐποιέετο, ἐμπιπράς τε καὶ 15 καταβάλλον τῶν θεῶν τὰ ἀγάλματα· ὃς καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν

15 τε ante ἱρὰ om. BPz || ἐμπιπρεῖς α: ἐμπιπρήσας C

12. τάδε, of antecedents; cp. the occasional use of ταῦτα for consequents; ὅδε and οὗτος both contrast with ἐκεῖνος, as the nearer with the more remote; and with each other, as the immediate present (or just coming) with the mediate present (or just gone).

13. θεοὶ τε καὶ ἥρωες, 'Gods and Heroes combined.' The passage refutes incidentally the sneer of Mardonios against the Greeks as τῶν τὸ πᾶν σφίσι ἤδη δοκούντων κατεργασθαι c. 100 supra (spoken of course with quite another 'intention'), for at least it disclaims the victory as their own work: even Themistokles, however, appears in the context as overrating the effects of the battle of Salamis (παντελέως ἀπελάσας τὸν βάρβαρον).

οἱ ἐφθόνησαν... βασιλεύσαι: the doctrine of the divine φθόνος appears here upon the lips of Themistokles in its simplest form: the gods view with jealousy one man's lordship of Asia and Europe combined. Such an excess of human power is in itself a sufficient reason for the divine passion. The words which follow ἔοντα ἀνδρσίον τε καὶ ἀτάσθαλον may be taken, not as the justification of the ways of gods to man, but as a statement of pure matter of fact—a fact inevitable, since what mortal invested with such power could avoid pride, presumption, impiety, sin? In the examples which follow (ὃς κτλ.), if it were worth while to distinguish the ἀνοσιότης and the ἀτασθαλίη, the destruction of temples and cult-objects might illustrate the former, and the lashing and fettering of the sea the latter.

15. ἐν ὁμοίῳ ἐποιέετο, 'made no difference between...'; cp. 7. 138 supra (in a somewhat different sense).

ἐμπιπράς τε καὶ καταβάλλον: as at Abai c. 33 supra, and above all at Athens c. 53 supra. It is noticeable that there is no reference to the case of Delphi (cc. 35–39 supra); nor is anything said of the cases in which Xerxes had shown positive respect for Greek religion and cult-objects (e.g. at Troy 7.

43 supra, at Halos 7. 197 supra, at Athens itself c. 54 supra, and of course at Thebes, not to press the sacrifices at Nine Ways 7. 114, at Sepias 7. 191). Athenians naturally made the most of the point (cp. Aischyl. Pers. 805 f.), though their own record was not clean in this respect (cp. 5. 102); but it was left for Cicero to represent the Persians as Puritan fanatics, indignant with the Greeks for believing that the gods could be enclosed 'in temples made with hands' (de legg. 2. 10. 26 Xerxes inflammasse templa Graeciae dicitur, quod parietibus includerent deos, quibus omnia deberent esse patentia ac libera, quorumque hic mundus omnis templum esset et domus). That view is refuted by what is known of the policy of Dareios and his successors in Egypt, in Babylon, in Greece itself—to say nothing of the acts of Kyros and Kambyses. The invasion of Greece was in no sense a crusade or religious war, but the Greeks naturally enough invested their victory with a religious halo, and exaggerated the offences against the national religion committed by the Persians as incidents of the campaign. Hence the intensely religious tone of the Herodotean narrative, little as the great centres of the national religion did for Greece in her hour of need. Hence too the decree, or supposed decree, that the temples destroyed by the Persian should remain for ever in ruins (cp. the forged oath in Lycurgus c. Leocrat. 81, and Pausan. 10. 35. 2), a decree directly contravened by the earliest programme of Perikles (Plutarch, Perikl. 17) inter alia. But cp. c. 33 supra, 9. 116 infra.

16. καὶ τὴν θ. ἀπεμαστίγωσε πῆδας τε κατήκε: according to the story related in 7. 35 supra. Themistokles omits the stigmatization! If this speech were authentic, and rightly dated to 480 B.C., it would be the earliest extant evidence for the incidents: items of Themistoklean oratory may be preserved in it, but hardly this particular sentence, which ἀπεμαστίνωσε πέδας τε κατῆκε. ἀλλ' εὖ γὰρ ἔχει ἐς τὸ παρεὸν ἡμῖν, νῦν μὲν ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι καταμείναντας ἡμέων τε αὐτῶν ἐπιμεληθῆναι καὶ τῶν οἰκετῶν, καὶ τις οἰκίην τε 20 ἀναπλάσασθω καὶ σπόρου ἀνακῶς ἐχέτω, παντελέως ἀπελάσας

17 τε κατῆκε: τ' ἐγκατῆκε van H. 18 μὲν <ἄμεινον> Stein<sup>8</sup>
 (χρεὸν ἔστι? Stein<sup>2</sup>) || καταμείναντες Bz 19 αὐτέων αCz || ἐπιμεληθῶμεν z 20 ἀναπλάσασθω z, Eustath. Od. p. 1425 || σπόρους C:
 σποράς Eustath. || παντελέως AB: παντελῶς reads in any case rather forcedly. Perhaps the whole religious parenthesis (τάδε γὰρ . . . κατῆκε) is Herodotean rather than authentic Themistokles, ἀπομαστιγῶσαι, 'to flog soundly,' occurs 3, 29.

17. ἀλλ' εὖ γὰρ . . ἡμῖν: cp. 7, 158 ἀλλὰ (sic) εὖ γὰρ ἡμῖν καὶ ἐπὶ τὸ ἄμεινον κατέστη, Geleise log. (It can hardly be argued that the Sikeliote orator preserved while the Athenian avoided the hiatus: the variation exhibits the inconstancy of the mss., perhaps of the author himself!)

18. νῦν μὲν . . ἐπιμεληθῆναι. Stein regards this construction as intolerably harsh, and emends the text (cp. App. Crit.); but surely the infinitive may stand as hortative (Madvig, Gk. Syntax, § 168), especially here when elucidated immediately in the very next sentence by the imperative ἀναπλάσασθω (cp. Aristoph. W'sps. 108), to say nothing of the jingle ἄμεινον καταμείναντας. The form of the verb ἐπιμεληθῆναι, like the subst. ἐπιμέλεια (6, 105), implies a present ἐπιμελόμαι—though the form of the present in use appears to have been ἐπιμέλομαι; cp. ἐπιμέλεισθαι 1, 98, ἐπιμελομένω 2, 2, ἐπεμέλετο 2, 174. (μέλομαι, I care for, take care of, with gen.; in the Tragedians passim.)

19. οἰκετῶν: cp. c. 106 l. 8 supra.

20. ἀναπλάσασθω. πλάσσειν is used properly of soft materials, earth, wax, etc.

σπόρου ἀνακῶς ἐχέτω: cp. 1, 24 ἀνακῶς δὲ ἔχειν τῶν πορθμένων. Also Thuc. 8, 102, 2 ὅπως αὐτῶν ἀνακῶς ἔχουσιν, ἣν ἐκπλέωσι. The construction of ἔχειν with the adv. is, of course, regular enough, but the word ἀνακῶς itself is a curious one; cp. Plutarch, Thes. 33 τιμὰς ἰσοθέου ἐσχον (sc. οἱ Τυνδαρίδαι) Ἀνακας προσαγορευθέντες, ἢ διὰ τὰς γενομένας ἀνοχὰς (in Attica), ἢ διὰ τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν καὶ κηδεμονίαν τοῦ μηδένα κακῶς παθεῖν στρατίας τούτης ἐνδον οὐσης· ἀνακῶς γὰρ ἔχειν τοὺς ἐπιμελομένους ἢ φυλάττοντας ὀνομαζέμεν· καὶ τοὺς βασιλεῖς ἰσως ἀνακτας διὰ τοῦτο καλοῦσιν. εἰσι δὲ οἱ λέγοντες διὰ τὴν τῶν ἀστέρων ἐπιφάνειαν Ἀνακας ὀνομάζεσθαι· τὸ γὰρ ἄνω τοὺς Ἀττικοὺς ἀνάκας ὀνομάζειν καὶ ἀνέκαθεν τὸ ἄνωθεν. The passage contains an exemplary bit of antique etymologizing, but L. & S. accept the connexion of ἀνακῶς with ἀναξ. The word was used by Plato, Com. incert. 24 (ed. Bothe-Didot) καὶ τὰς (or τὰς) θύρας ἀνακῶς ἔχειν: cp. Erotianos p. 66, Ἀνακῶς ἐπιμελῶς καὶ περιπεφυλαγμένως. ἔστι δὲ ἡ λέξις Δωρικὴ. (Is it not rather 'old Attic,' and so appropriate in the mouth of Themistokles?)

παντελέως ἀπελάσας τὸν βάρβαρον. Themistokles appears to share the illusion (ascribed above to Eurybiades) that Salamis had put an end to the presence of the 'barbarian' in Greece. Stein, indeed, takes the sentence as conditional, and refers it not to the battle which has taken place, but to the land-engagement, which Themistokles expects to be fought before the winter (i.e. not "now that we have driven," but "as soon as we shall have driven the barbarian clean away"). This interpretation (i.) ill suits the context, especially the corresponding passage c. 108 ad fin.; (ii.) involves Themistokles in a huge misconception in regard to the probable action of the Peloponnesians; (iii.) makes him treat a great land-battle immediately to come as a foregone conclusion, to be mentioned en passant, sandwiched between the restoration of Athens and the expedition to the Hellespont; while (iv.) Hdt. himself declares the rusé character of Themistokles' advice to the Athenians; and although the purpose he assigns is unacceptable (see below), the possibility remains open that the argument of the speaker is a make-believe. In fact, the words, if τὸν βάρβαρον· ἅμα δὲ τῷ ἔαρι καταπλέωμεν ἐπὶ Ἑλλησπόντου καὶ Ἰωνίης.” ταῦτα ἔλεγε ἀποθήκην μέλλων ποιή-

21 ἑλλησποντον C

22 ὑποθήκην = || ποιήσασθαι BB: ποιήσεσθαι

authentic, may have been used by Themistokles with his eyes open, and his participation in the Spartan illusion, that no land-battle would ever be necessary, may have been a voluntary hypothesis, argumenti causa. So, too, the promise to sail to the Hellespont and Ionia in the spring might at this point have been rather a concession to gain the Athenians, and to prevent the break-up of the fleet, than a deliberate plan, in view of the utter discomfiture of the Persian, or in anticipation of the subsequent policy of reprisals. It would, however, be a possible preventive of the re-invasion of Attica, in case the Persians had not evacuated Europe: as applicable in the spring as in the present autumn. The whole discussion (it must be remembered) can hardly have taken place until the Persians had evacuated Attica, and probably did not take place at Andros, but at Salamis. Whether Themistokles, when he realized that Mardonios was still in Greece with an army, failed to grasp the strategic aspects of the case, is a further question (cp. Appendix VII. § 1). It is at least arguable that the greatest of the Athenians never had any illusions upon the point.

22. ταῦτα ἔλεγε ἀποθήκην μέλλων ποιήσασθαι. This contribution to the Themistoklean legend represents him as a traitor from the beginning. The motivation is plainly an inference from the event (τά περ ὧν καὶ ἐγένετο), and is both psychologically and historically bad. There is an assumption involved that Themistokles did wrong in dissuading the Athenians from sailing off by themselves from Andros (or Salamis?) to the Hellespont, and his crime is the more flagrant seeing that he himself had advocated the move to the Hellespont just before. But Themistokles was neither inconsequent nor disloyal if he now wrought with the Athenians to prohibit a schismatic undertaking: rather might Hdt. have pronounced such an eulogy upon his act as Thucydides pronounced upon the act of Alkibiades in retaining the Athenian fleet at Samos in 411 B.C. from precipi-

tately making for the city (cp. Thuc. 8. 82. 2). Strategically, the separate adventure of the Athenians must have been highly precarious; politically, it might have shattered the Alliance, which still had work to do: the reduction of the Kyklades by the confederate fleet was both strategically and politically the better investment. In so far as Hdt. (or his source) ascribes to Themistokles a prevision of possible disaster to himself in time to come, and sets him about making provision against a turn of Fortune's wheel, the bounds of psychological possibility are not passed, for a Greek and a Themistokles. Of such reverses, too, he could say: καὶ αὐτὸς ἤδη πολλοῖσι παρεγενόμην καὶ πολλῷ πλέω ἀκήκοα τοιάδε γενέσθαι. The trophies of Miltiades were before his eyes day and night. But there is no real relation between his reported advice on this occasion and his subsequent 'medism'—such as it was. The motivation here depends upon the truth of the story (in the next c.) of the second mission of Sikinnos—and that story is a transparent fraud. Grote, indeed, credits the view that Themistokles—"a clever man, tainted with such constant guilt"—calculated on being one day detected and punished; i.e. Grote takes the Themistokles-legend very much at its own estimation. Blakesley's note is curiously perverse, amounting to this: Thucydides is wrong in saying that Themistokles claimed credit in his letter to Artaxerxes (1. 137) for having saved the bridge for Xerxes, while Hdt. is right in saying that Themistokles, not knowing that the bridges were already broken down in 480 B.C. (if they were; cp. c. 117. 4 infra), intended, on some future occasion, should need arise, to claim credit with the king for saving the bridge!

ἀποθήκην . . . ποιήσασθαι (= ἀποθέσθαι, or ἀπόθετον ποιήσασθαι) is scarcely adequate; cp. 6. 41 χάριτα μεγάλην καταθήσεσθαι. Is here looks like apud. τὸν Πέρσην generalized (for Ξέρξην) perhaps in the light of the event, Hdt., of course, knowing that Themistokles was received by Artaxerxes.

σασθαι ἐς τὸν Πέρσην, ἵνα ἦν ἄρα τί μιν καταλαμβάνῃ πρὸς Ἀθηναίων πάθος, ἔχῃ ἀποστροφὴν· τὰ περ ὧν καὶ ἐγένετο.

- 110 Θεμιστοκλῆς μὲν ταῦτα λέγων διέβαλλε, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἐπείθοντο· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ καὶ πρότερον δεδογμένος εἶναι σοφὸς ἐφάνη ἐὼν ἀληθῶς σοφός τε καὶ εὐβουλος, πάντως ἔτοιμοι ἦσαν λέγοντι πείθεσθαι. ὥς δὲ οὗτοί οἱ ἀνεγνωσμένοι ἦσαν, αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς ἄνδρας ἀπέπεμπε ἔχοντας πλοῖον, τοῖσι ἐπίστευε σιγᾶν ἐς πᾶσαν βάσανον ἀπικνεομένοισι

23 πέρσεα Bz || ἦν : εἰ C || ἄρα τι AB 24 ἔχει B 110. 1 ταῦτα μὲν z || διέβαλλε z 2 σοφός 'fortasse rectius abesset' van H. 3 ἔτοιμοι CPz 4 ἔσαν z || οὔτοι ἀνεγνωσμένη B || ἔσαν z 5 ὁ om. B 6 ἐπίστευσε B, Holder : ἐπέστελλε z || ἀπικνεομένοισι(V) BPz

23. ἄρα, "in hypotheticals, to indicate the improbability of the supposition," L. & S. comparing Thuc. 1. 93. 7 τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις παρήναι (sc. ὁ Θεμιστοκλῆς) ἦν ἄρα ποτὲ κατὰ γῆν βιασθῶσι, καταβάντας ἐς αὐτὸν ταῖς ναυσὶ πρὸς ἅπαντας ἀντίστασθαι. The particle conveys perhaps a note of irony in the present passage, or perhaps a reference to the mind of Themistokles away from the author's. πάθος = πάθημα, as often.

24. ἀποστροφὴν : in somewhat the same sense Thuc. 4. 76. 5 οὐδὲς ἐκάστοις διὰ βραχείας ἀποστροφῆς (per fugium). In a less literal sense, but more material, Hdt. 2. 13 οὐ γὰρ δὴ σφι ἐστὶ ὕδατος οὐδεμία ἄλλη ἀποστροφή διτι μὴ ἐκ τοῦ Διὸς μοῦνον.

110. 1. διέβαλλε : decipiebat, cp. 5. 50. "The expression shows how much prejudiced Herodotus is against Themistokles even in a case where not a shadow of suspicion falls on him," Stein. With the whole phrase cp. 5. 107 Ἰστιαῖοι μὲν λέγων ταῦτα διέβαλλε, Δαρεῖος δὲ ἐπείθετο.

2. σοφός : the word in itself is not necessarily commendatory ; cp. 5. 23 ὦ βασιλεῦ, κοῖνὸν τι χρῆμα ἐποίησας, ἀνδρὶ Ἕλληνι δευρὺν τε καὶ σοφῷ δοὺς ἐγκτίσασθαι πόλιν ἐν Θρηίκῃ ; but ἀληθῶς σοφός τε καὶ εὐβουλος is no faint praise, and admits that the advice of Themistokles to the Athenians was good, however questionable its motive. The contrast between δεδογμένος εἶναι and ἐφάνη ἔων is emphatic, but inappropriate ; the word δεδογμένος is, however, a strong one, and weakens the grammatical or idiomatic antithesis. With the fact cp. c. 124 ἡγήσατο ἐβώσθη τε καὶ ἐδοξάθη εἶναι ἀνὴρ πολλὸν Ἕλλησιν σοφώτατος—a situation which looks almost like the antecedent of the δεδογμένος in this passage ! Wila-mowitz, Herm. xiv. 183, and Cobet, Mnem. xii. 279, refer to Themistokles the line, σοφὸς μὲν ἀνὴρ τῆς δὲ χειρὸς οὐ κρατῶν (Eupolis Δήμοι ? van H.).

4. ἀνεγνωσμένοι ἦσαν : this form of construction may be taken to give a really temporal pluperfect, so far as the participle is concerned. It is substantially identical with the construction c. 108 surgea ἐπύθοντο τὰς νέας οἰχωκυίας, and in each case the words αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα (emphasizing the tense category) follow immediately. The Herodotean (or Ionic) use of ἀναγινώσκων ('to convince,' 'persuade') is observable ; cp. 7. 10, and passim.

6. τοῖσι ἐπίστευε σιγᾶν. Was Themistokles deceived in his confidential agents, from whose lips tortures were not to wring a confession ? Was one of them, Sikinnos himself perhaps, the authority for this story ? And who was to torture them—the king ? the Athenians ? To the king they were carrying the message ; he had no need to torture them in order to learn it. The phrase looks as though some of the domestics of Themistokles had been put to the 'question' (say, in 471–70 B.C.) to prove his 'medism' ; but whether anything like this anecdote was extracted from them is doubtful ; the phrase might even suggest a negation. Themistokles was, indeed, himself the author of the fiction that Xerxes owed to him the preservation of the Hellespontine bridges (cp. Thuc. 1. 134). The letter of the exiled Athenian to Artaxerxes (in 465 B.C. ?) is the earliest source to which the fiction can be traced : his enemies apparently improved the occasion, and elaborated the version preserved by Herodotus. Cp. Appendix VII. § 3.

τὰ αὐτὸς ἐνετείλατο βασιλεῖ φράσαι· τῶν καὶ Σίκιννος ὁ οἰκέτης αὐτὶς ἐγένετο· οἱ ἐπεῖτε ἀπίκοντο πρὸς τὴν Ἀττικὴν, οἱ μὲν κατέμενον ἐπὶ τῷ πλοίῳ, Σίκιννος δὲ ἀναβὰς παρὰ Ξέρξην ἔλεγε τάδε. "ἔπεμψέ με Θεμιστοκλῆς ὁ Νεοκλῆος, 10 στρατηγὸς μὲν Ἀθηναίων ἀνὴρ δὲ τῶν συμμάχων πάντων ἄριστος καὶ σοφώτατος, φράσοντά τοι ὅτι Θεμιστοκλῆς ὁ Ἀθηναῖος, σοὶ βουλούμενος ὑπουργεῖν, ἔσχε τοὺς Ἕλληνας τὰς νέας βουλομένους διώκειν καὶ τὰς ἐν Ἑλλησπόντῳ γεφύρας λύειν. καὶ νῦν κατ' ἡσυχίην πολλὴν κομίζεο." οἱ μὲν ταῦτα 15 σημῆναντες ἀπέπλεον ὀπίσω,

7 τὰ αὐτὸς: τοῦτοισιν B || βασιλεῖ AB || σίκιννος R 8 ἐπειδὴ
BPz 9 σίκιννος C: σίκιννος R 10 ξέρξαι Bz 12 ὅτι:
ὁ C || ὁ Ἀθηναῖος del. Kallenberg 13 σοὶ: σὺ C: om. B || ὑπουργεῖν α
14 νῆας Bz 16 ἀπέπλων Bz

7. τῶν καὶ Σίκιννος ὁ οἰκέτης αὐτὶς ἐγένετο: the reference is to the former mission of Sikinnos reported c. 75 supra, which brought about the disastrous movement of the king's navy, and its consequent defeat. The statement (which reappears in Diodor. 11. 19 and Trogus ap. Justin. 2. 13) that the same messenger was a second time employed to approach Xerxes, or the Persians, refutes itself, and discredits the whole anecdote. Plutarch, Them. 16, and Polyainos 1. 30. 3 follow a more plausible source, which made Arnakes, a eunuch and prisoner, the messenger on this occasion. Blakesley remarks that in the time of Plutarch Themistokles apparently was believed to have purposely hastened the retreat of Xerxes by sending him word of the projected Greek move to the Hellespont, and probable destruction of the bridges. More recent critics have discovered in 'the popular'—or was it the rationalized?—view of the Plutarchian age the true key to the mystery; cp. Appendix VII. § 2.

8. τὴν Ἀττικὴν. Hdt. of course assumes that Themistokles is in Andros (c. 108 supra), and Xerxes still in Athens; the absurdity of this assumption is noted c. 108 supra. Plutarch's story is again more plausible in laying the scene of the debate between Themistokles and Aristeides (sic) in Salamis.

10. ἔλεγε τάδε. The terms of the message are obviously exaggerated to exhibit the vanity of Themistokles, who iterates his own name and titles, and claims the prize not merely of 'wisdom' but of

'valour' among the Hellenes; the phrase τῶν συμμάχων could not have been used to the king in this connexion; there is no reference to the previous message, which now certainly called for explanation. But if any such message had been sent, it must have run very much in the terms ὅτι Θεμιστοκλῆς . . . κομίζεο.

13. ὑπουργεῖν: cp. 7. 38, etc.

ἔσχε, 'held,' 'stayed'—aor., but why not present tense? Is it that Sikinnos is in Athens, Themistokles in Andros (ex hypothesi), and time has elapsed since the charge was entrusted to the speaker? Or is the past tense of the essence of the message, Themistokles wishing to suggest a doubt how long the action can be maintained? Or is the aorist used, 'without prejudice,' but from the speaker's point of view, as simply denoting a particular matter of fact? But this use would be more proper in a plain narrative than in an authentic message. Perhaps the message here simply preserves one of the charges against Themistokles afterwards formulated in the γραφὴ προδοσίας.

14. διώκειν . . . λύειν: two different operations, which Themistokles could not assume to involve the same direction for the fleet; cp. c. 108 supra, and c. 111 infra.

15. οἱ μὲν . . . ὀπίσω. Had Sikinnos been the messenger he would surely have been retained a prisoner; had Arnakes, he would have regained his position at court: in neither case would the messenger have returned; cp. c. 76 supra. On the former occasion Sikinnos had

- 111 Οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες, ἐπεῖτε σφί ἀπέδοξε μῆτ' ἐπιδιώκειν ἔτι
 προσωτέρω τῶν βαρβάρων τὰς νέας μῆτε πλέειν ἐς τὸν Ἑλλήσποντον λύσοντας τὸν πόρον, τὴν Ἄνδρον περικατέατο ἐξελεῖν ἐθέλοντες. πρῶτοι γὰρ Ἄνδριοι νησιωτέων αἰτηθέντες
 5 πρὸς Θεμιστοκλέος χρήματα οὐκ ἔδοσαν, ἀλλὰ προῖσχομένου Θεμιστοκλέος λόγον τόνδε, ὡς ἤκοιεν Ἀθηναῖοι περὶ ἑαυτοὺς ἔχοντες δύο θεοὺς μεγάλους, πειθῷ τε καὶ ἀναγκαίῃν, οὕτω τέ σφί κάρτα δοτέα εἶναι χρήματα, ὑπεκρίναντο πρὸς ταῦτα λέγοντες ὡς κατὰ λόγον ἦσαν ἄρα αἱ Ἀθῆναι μεγάλαι τε καὶ

111. 2 προσωτέρω α || νῆας B || μῆτ' ἐπιπλώειν B: μῆτε πλώειν z
 3 περικατέατο CPz 4 ἐξελέειν B 5 Θεμιστοκλέος . . προῖσχομένον om. R || χρήματα ante αἰτηθέντες z 6 τὸν λόγον B 8
 ταῦτα: τάδε B 9 ἔσαν z || ἄρα ante ἦσαν B || αἱ om. B, Holder acted alone; the plurality of messengers here is no argument of the truth of this story. With σημήναντες cp. σημήνας l.c.

111. 1. ἀπέδοξε μῆτ': a double negative, the preposition ἀπό in composition having the force of a negation, dispicuit; cp. ἀπηγόρευε μή c. 116 infra. The further pursuit of the 'barbarian' ships, and the voyage to the Hellespont, are here rightly treated as co-ordinate alternatives, not as identical actions.

3. πόρον here seems = γεφύρας, and not the waterway; cp. 7. 36. The object was not to free the passage, but to destroy the crossing.

τὴν Ἄνδρον περικατέατο: is this a maritime or a terrestrial operation? The Greeks were in complete command of the sea, but the actual investment of the city of Andros by land will be here included.

4. πρῶτοι γάρ κτλ.: the rationale is obviously at fault and malicious. The refusal of the Andrians to pay money to Themistokles would be no reason for their being invested by the confederate fleet or forces, unless, indeed, the money was for confederate purposes, a mulct perhaps inflicted on the Andrians for medism; and such is in fact the implication below, c. 112 (ὡς πολιορκεῖτο διότι ἐμήδισε). On the motives of Andrian policy in the Persian war cp. 7. 115. 6 supra.

5. προῖσχομένου is imperfect, or at least historical, and is followed by a double construction in orat. oblig.: (a) the conjunction with optative (ὡς ἤκοιεν), and (b) accusative with infinitive (δοτέα εἶναι). (κάρτα, by the way, would scarcely have occurred in Attic prose.)

6. λόγον τόνδε, 'a speech, as follows': another speech from Themistokles, in the nature of an apologue, to which the Andrians reply in the same vein. The personification, the apotheosis, of Peitho and Ananke, Suasion and Necessity, is less piquant or surprising than that of Poverty and Inability (Penia, Amechania), especially the latter, as a mere negation. The attitude of the Andrians might come as a fresh case in the experience of Themistokles that ἄνδρας ἐς ἀναγκαίην ἀπειληθέντας ἀναμάχεσθαι τε καὶ ἀναλαμβάνειν τὴν προτέραν κακότητα, c. 109 supra.

περὶ ἑαυτούς, 'about them,' 'in their train'; a well-known Atticism, cp. οἱ περὶ τὸν Πεισανδρον πρέσβεις Thuc. 8. 63. 3. Themistokles is made to speak as though the Athenians were acting independently and alone, a view refuted by the whole context; but perhaps the Andrian apologue was not really uttered on this occasion, in 480 B.C., when Athens was in ruins, but belongs to a later crisis; cp. the reply of the Andrians, below. In fact, the fable of Themistokles and the Andrians reads like a current apologue on the ἀργυρολογία of the Athenians among their allies.

9. κατὰ λόγον ἦσαν ἄρα. The reply of the Andrians is in any case ironical, but doubly so if uttered when Athens itself was in ruins, and Xerxes indeed, ex hypothesi, in possession of Attica. But if we may choose between this mordax ironia (Schweigh.) and a simple anachronism, let us discount the irony. κατὰ λ., 'proportionately' (to Andros); the imperfect ἦσαν Baehr seems to think refers to the time before the war, and εὐδαίμονες, καὶ θεῶν χρηστῶν ἦκοιεν εὖ· ἐπεὶ Ἀνδρίους γε 10

εἶναι γεωπέιντας ἐς τὰ μέγιστα ἀνήκοντας, καὶ θεοὺς δύο ἀχρήστους οὐκ ἐκλείπειν σφέων τὴν νῆσον ἄλλ' αἰεὶ φιλοχωρεῖν, πενίην τε καὶ ἀμηχανίην, καὶ τούτων τῶν θεῶν ἐπηβόλους εἶοντας Ἀνδρίους οὐ δώσειν χρήματα· οὐδέποτε γὰρ τῆς ἐωυτῶν ἀδυναμίας τὴν Ἀθηναίων δύναμιν εἶναι κρέσσω. 15
οὗτοι μὲν δὴ ταῦτα ὑποκρινάμενοι καὶ οὐ δόντες τὰ χρήματα ἐπολιορκέοντο, Θεμιστοκλῆς δέ, οὐ γὰρ ἐπαυέτο πλεονεκτέων, 112

10 <εἶ> καὶ Stein<sup>3</sup>: <αἶ> καὶ Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. || ἀνδρείους C
11 γεωπέιντας B<sup>2</sup>CP<sup>2</sup>: γεοπεινίης Krueger: γεωπίνας || μάλιστα PR<sup>2</sup>
12 χρηστοὺς B || ἐλείπειν A<sup>1</sup>B || ἐμφιλοχωρεῖν Naber 13 τούτων z
14 ἐπηβόλους C: ἐπιβούλους B || γὰρ <ἀν> Dobree, van H. 16
τὰ χρήματα αC: χρήματα B etc., Holder, van H.

translates fuisse; but it is purely idiomatic, cp. Stallbaum ad Plat. Phaedr. 35 cited by Baehr himself. Sitzler observes that the imperfect with ἀρα indicates that the speaker has just suddenly become aware of the truth of a proposition, previously ignored. A curious instance is afforded by 4. 64 supra: δέρμα δὲ ἀνθρώπου καὶ παχὺ καὶ λαμπρὸν ἦν ἀρα. The imperfect might then have stood in the orat. recta. In any case the ἀρα points the irony.

10. θεῶν χρηστῶν ἦκοιεν εὖ: the sequence ἦσαν . . ἦκοιεν was perhaps eased by the latter's being in a relative sentence (Stein<sup>2</sup>), unless the optative might express a conditional prediction (cp. 5. 97 ἔλεγε . . ὥς οὔτε ἀσπίδα οὔτε δόρυ νομίζουσι εὐπετέες τε χειρωθῆναι εἴσασιν, a fact, and a contingency). Cp. the same combination in the simple orat. obliq. 9. 69. 4. Stein, however, simplifies the situation here by a new emendation; cp. App. Crit. With θεῶν χρηστῶν εὖ ἦκειν cp. 1. 30 τοῦ βίου εὖ ἦκοντι (also simply τῆς πόλιος εὖ ἦκούσης just before), and again, 7. 157 supra διωμάς τε γὰρ ἦκειν μεγάλως. 'Athens, among its many blessings (καί), will be well provided with excellent divinities.'

ἐπεὶ Ἀνδρίους γε κτλ., 'the Andrians, on the other hand, in their plentiful lack of real property were unrivalled, and had two divinities, of the opposite kind (χρηστῶν . . ἀχρήστους), which never quitted their island but stuck to the spot, Poverty and Inability; with these divinities for their patrons the Andrians must decline to give money; their impotence would always prove too much for the power of the Athenians.'

11. γεωπέιντας, 'poor in land' (L. & S.), has nothing (surely) to say to land-hunger; in 2. 6 γεωπεῖναι are simply contrasted with men of large landed possession, or territory; the word presents a statistical fact, not a personal feeling.

ἐς τὰ μέγιστα ἀνήκοντας: cp. 5. 49 τὰ ἐς τὸν πόλεμον ἐς τὰ μέγιστα ἀνήκετε ἀρετῆς πέρι.

13. πενίην τε καὶ ἀμηχανίην: this pair had already been coupled by Alkaios (Bergk, Poet. L. iii. 4 p. 179, Fr. 92 [65]):

ἀργάλεον πενία κάκον ἀσχετον, ἃ μέγα δάμναις

λαὸν ἀμαχανία σὺν ἀδελφεῖς.

Euripides recognizes the divinity of Πενία, but denies it a cult, or at least a temple: Fr. 250 (Nauck) οὐκ ἔστι πενίας ἱερὸν ἐχθίστης θεοῦ.

14. ἐπηβόλους: cp. 9. 94 infra. οὐδέποτε γὰρ . . κρέσσω: this gnome has already done duty in the mouth of the Thessalians, 7. 172 supra. It was probably not original in either connexion.

112. 1. οὐ γὰρ ἐπαυέτο πλεονεκτέων: the animus is obvious. Neither the case of the Andrians nor that of the other islanders looks at all like an instance of the private greed of Themistokles. In his previous career the only allegation of corrupt and avaricious practice is the story of his bribery by the Euboians (cc. 4, 5 supra), the inconsequence and absurdity of which are self-evident. Rawlinson refers to the well-known lines of Timokreon (Plutarch Them. 21) to show that such charges were brought against Themistokles during his lifetime: no doubt—but were they proved? During and

ἐσπέμπων ἐς τὰς ἄλλας νήσους ἀπειλητήριους λόγους αἶτε χρήματα διὰ τῶν αὐτῶν ἀγγέλων, [χρεώμενος τοῖσι καὶ πρὸς βασιλέα ἐχρήσατο,] λέγων ὥς, εἰ μὴ δώσουσι τὸ αἰτεόμενον, 5 ἐπάξει τὴν στρατιὴν τῶν Ἑλλήνων καὶ πολιορκέων ἐξαιρήσει.
 λέγων ταῦτα συνέλεγε χρήματα μεγάλα παρὰ Καρυστίων τε καὶ Παρίων, οἱ πυνθανόμενοι τὴν τε Ἄνδρον ὥς πολιορκέοιτο διότι ἐμήδισε, καὶ Θεμιστοκλέα ὥς εἶη ἐν αἵνῃ μεγίστη τῶν στρατηγῶν, δείσαντες ταῦτα ἔπεμπον χρήματα. εἰ δὲ δὴ

112. 2 αἶτε R 3 αὐτέων z || χρεώμενος tantum del. Cobet,
 van H.: totum glossema seclusi: χρεώμενος P || λόγοισι τοῖσι BPz
 4 βασιλέα αC: ἀνδρίους ceteri z, Holder, van H. 5 ἐπάξειν C:
 ἀπάξει B || σφέας ἐξαιρήσει? van H. 6 λέγων ὦν Schaefer, van H.:
 λέγων δὲ Reiske || τε om. B 8 Θεμιστοκλήα z || τιμῇ B

after the Persian war they arose and accumulated. Themistokles was probably a wealthy man, at the time of his exile (Kritias ap. Aelian. Var. Hist. 10. 17), but there is no evidence to show how much, if any, of his fortune was obtained by illegitimate means; and it is quite certain that most of the anecdotes to illustrate the charge of avarice are apocryphal. Thucydides 1. 138. 3 neither condemns nor acquits him; cp. 2. 65. 8 for the contrasted case of Perikles.

2. ἀπειλητήριους λόγους: the epithet, an Hapaxlegomenon, is no doubt derived from ἀπειλή (cp. 6. 32 τὰς ἀπειλὰς τὰς ἐπηπειλήσαν) and has nothing to say to ἀνδρας ἐς ἀναγκαῖον ἀπειληθέντας c. 109 supra!

3. χρεώμενος . . ἐχρήσατο: a manifest gloss. The reading varies (cp. App. Crit.). The phrase is an explanation of τῶν αὐτῶν ἀγγέλων. The motive for using the same messengers as used to the king would doubtless be that they could be trusted to hold their tongues (cp. c. 110 supra), but that should have been mentioned in connexion with the message to the Andrians; and here, without the elaborate gloss, the messengers to the Andrians would be obviously intended. χρεώμενος marks the gloss; Hdt. would have been content to write διὰ τῶν αὐτῶν ἀγγέλων τοῖσι καὶ πρὸς βασιλέα ἐχρήσατο. A perception of this may have led the inferior scribe to insert λόγοισι and to alter βασιλέα into Ἄνδριους. The gloss thereby becomes doubly absurd and superfluous, between ἀπειλητήριους λόγους and λέγων ὥς κτλ.

5. ἐπάξει τὴν στρατιὴν τῶν Ἑλλήνων. Themistokles is represented as able to control the movements and action of the confederate fleet, at his will and pleasure; this exaggeration betrays the libel.

6. παρὰ Καρυστίων τε καὶ Παρίων: the specification of the two places, both of which had medized at least after Thermopylai (cp. c. 66 supra), among the general ruck of islanders, might tempt one to suspect that Karystos and Paros had at some time or other special relations with Themistokles. Both places were of considerable importance in connexion with the Persian wars and the thalattocracy of Athens. The subsequent reduction of Karystos was of sufficient interest to obtain an express notice from Thucydides (1. 98. 3); cp. 9. 105 infra; while Paros had already been visited some ten years previously by an Athenian squadron for 'medism' (cp. 6. 132-136 supra). But, in fact, when Andros, Tenos (c. 82 supra), Keos, Naxos, Kythnos, Seriphos, Siphnos (cp. c. 46 supra) have been accounted for, there is not much left in the neighbourhood of the 'Kyklades' for Themistokles to exploit, except Paros and Karystos. (The other Euboian cities, Styra, Eretria, Chalkis, were on the right side, c. 46 supra.)

8. διότι ἐμήδισε: the conjunction is perhaps favoured by the oblique or dependent construction. The reason for the visitation was their medism, not the avarice of Themistokles.

ἐν αἵνῃ: εἶναι, cp. 9. 16 infra, = ἐπαινετὸς εἶναι. Hdt. uses also the form αἶνος 7. 107 supra.

9. ταῦτα is rather vague, but must mean the possibility of their being subjected to a similar visitation.

τινὲς καὶ ἄλλοι ἔδοσαν νησιωτέων, οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν, δοκέω δὲ 10
τινὰς καὶ ἄλλους δοῦναι καὶ οὐ τούτους μούνοιν. καίτοι Καρυστίοισι γε οὐδὲν τούτου εἵνεκα τοῦ κακοῦ ὑπερβολὴ ἐγένετο. Πάριοι δὲ Θεμιστοκλέα χρήμασι ἱλασάμενοι διέφυγον τὸ σπράτευμα. Θεμιστοκλῆς μὲν νυν ἐξ Ἀνδρου ὁρμώμενος χρήματα παρὰ νησιωτέων ἐκτᾶτο λάβρῃ τῶν ἄλλων 15
στρατηγῶν.

Οἱ δ' ἄμφι Ξέρξην ἐπισχόντες ὀλίγας ἡμέρας μετὰ τὴν 113
ναυμαχίην ἐξήλαντον ἐς Βοιωτοὺς τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδόν. ἔδοξε

10 ἄλλων νησιωτέων ἔδοσαν B || εἶπαι Bz, van H. 11 μόνους C
12 γε om. B || οὐδὲν: οὐδὲ Apr.: οὐδεμία? van H. || εἵνεκε B 13 Θεμιστοκλήα z || ἐφυγον ABC 14 ὁρμώμενος C: ὁρμεόμενος BPz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. 15 ἐκτᾶτο Merzdorf, Stein, Holder, van H.: ἐκτέατο αC:
ἐκτέετο BP: ἤτέετο z: ἐκτῆτο Dindorf 113. 1 ξέρξεα BPz || ἡμέρας
ὀλίγας α

10. οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν, δοκέω δέ. Hdt. unfortunately associates himself here with the scandalmongers. He has not a scrap of evidence to adduce, but is willing to supply its place with conjecture. As above shown, there were not many places handy, besides Paros and Karystos, from which to express anything. Delos would hardly be assailable; Mykonos, Syros, Gyaros and the rest hardly worth visiting.

11. καίτοι Καρυστίοισι γε . . ἐγένετο: grammatically it is not quite clear whether Hdt. means that there was no postponement of the evil day for Karystos, or that there was a postponement, though not procured by their bribes to Themistokles but by some other means (e.g. the obstinate resistance of Andros); in other words, is τούτου εἵνεκα predicative, or is the predicate simply οὐδὲν τοῦ κακοῦ ὑπερβολὴ ἐγένετο? The form of the negative perhaps favours the latter interpretation; and Hdt. records below (c. 121) that Karystos was 'visited' before the Greeks returned to Salamis. The final reduction of the Karystians—evidently no easy task—was not accomplished until after the ostrakism, or perhaps the condemnation, of Themistokles. (Cp. note to 9. 109 infra.) That observation, as far as it goes, would suit well enough their being clients of his, and might have been cited in support of the scandal, which is refuted by the fact (if it be a fact) that Karystos was devastated by this very expedition. The sense of ὑπερβολή here is unusual, as if from ὑπερβάλλεσθαι, 7. 206, 9. 51; cp. Polyb. 14. 9. 8.

13. ἱλασάμενοι, generally used of propitiating gods (1. 50, 67, 4. 7) or heroes (5. 47), is doubtless used here with a special intention. Hdt. does not draw from the visitation of Karystos the inference that Themistokles had not been bribed by the Euboians, though from the escape of Paros—intelligible enough without it—he infers that the Parians had bribed the Athenian strategos.

14. Θεμιστοκλῆς μὲν κτλ.: the conjecture of four lines back becomes a precise matter of fact, by repetition: a frequent fallacy in historiography—and criticism.

113. 1. οἱ δ' ἄμφι Ξέρξην. The scene shifts back to the Persian camp (cc. 113-120). It may be true that Attica was not evacuated for some days after the naval engagement and the retreat of the Persian fleet; but if so, the Greek fleet must have remained at Salamis. (Is it even quite certain that the Persian fleet sped across the Aegean, the day after the battle?) Hdt. has now several series of synchronous movements to co-ordinate (Persian fleet, Persian army, Greek fleet, perhaps Greek army): small wonder if he fail to adjust them convincingly.

2. τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδόν as that by which they had come. Hdt. assumes that the whole Persian force came and went by one and the same road: unfortunately he does not specify which of the two or three possible alternatives (Eleutherai-

γὰρ Μαρδονίῳ ἅμα μὲν προπέμψαι βασιλέα, ἅμα δὲ ἀνωρίην εἶναι τοῦ ἔτεος πολεμέειν· χειμερίσαι τε ἄμεινον εἶναι ἐν 5 Θεσσαλίῃ, καὶ ἔπειτα ἅμα τῷ ἔαρι πειρᾶσθαι τῆς Πελο-ποννήσου. ὥς δὲ ἀπικατο ἐς τὴν Θεσσαλίην, ἐνθαῦτα Μαρδόνιος

3 γὰρ καὶ C || βασιλῆα z || ἀνωρίην BPz, Holder: ἀωρίη Cobet, van H.
4 τε: δὲ z 5 Θετταλίη z || ἔπειτεν van H. 6 ἀπικέτο Bz:
ἀπικέατο P

Eleusis, Panakton-Phyle, Tanagra-Dekeleia). Unless the land-force was very small, no doubt more than one route was followed, but Xerxes and his suite may, of course, have come and gone by the same route, probably the best, via Eleusis (cp. c. 65 supra).

ἔδοξε . . . ἅμα μὲν . . . ἅμα δέ . . . : the verb is used in two senses: 'appeared good' and simply 'appeared,' or 'thought right' and 'thought.' Mardonios might have remained in occupation of Attica, but the season was late for campaigning, supplies probably were difficult to procure so far south, and he wished to see the king well out of Greece. How far Hdt. had any definite information about the motives of Mardonios it is not easy to say; the intention πειρᾶσθαι τῆς Πελοποννήσου (cp. c. 100 supra) was never realized, and the retreat into winter quarters in Thessaly was hardly the best prognostic of it. Attica seems to have been really evacuated; but it is scarcely likely that Boiotia, Thermopylai, and Central Greece were wholly denuded of Persian troops. At the same time, the naval superiority of the Greeks after Salamis might (had they known how to use it) have made the occupation of Central Greece impracticable. Cp. Appendix VII. § 4.

3. ἀνωρίη appears to be a ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

4. χειμερίσαι: Hdt. employs χειμερίζειν as = χειμάζειν (to winter) 6. 31, 7. 37, c. 126 infra, 9. 130. He has χειμάζειν in its primary sense 7. 191 supra. Cp. also χειμαλίνειν, -εσθαι (to be tempest-tossed) c. 118 infra.

5. ἅμα τῷ ἔαρι just after the ἅμα μὲν and ἅμα δέ above is not quite happy ('unconscious iteration').

6. ἀπικατο is a full temporal pl.p.

Μαρδόνιος ἐξελέγετο. The process of selection would take some time: did the king remain in Thessaly, while Mardonios performed it, and not rather go on immediately, under the escort of Artabazos (cp. cc. 115, 126 infra)? Hdt.'s account of the selection, and of the component elements in the grand army of Mardonios when selected, is far from clear. It is neither quite self-consistent, nor quite consistent with the corresponding lists previously given in Bk. 7, which are apparently here referred to; and it is scarcely verified in the battle-roll of Plataia, 9. 31, 32 infra. Hdt. gives the sum total as 300,000, infantry and cavalry combined. He does not clearly indicate the proportion of the two arms, but the corps d'armée under Artabazos is apparently to be included, c. 126 infra. Nor does Hdt. treat the thirty myriads as a cadre fixed by the commander, to be filled up by the levies on selection, but as a result, more or less accidental, of the selection of the picked troops (just as at Doriskos the sum total of infantry, 1,700,000, is only discovered as a result of the levée en masse, when its numerical aspect is tested and proved!). Mardonios pursues two methods in his selection: certain nations, to wit, Persians, Medes, Scythians, Bactrians, Indians, he selects in full, as they stand; but of the remaining (42) nations he only takes such individuals as are of obvious value or of made reputation. Probably the five nations named supplied the bulk of the army of Mardonios. The omission of the Kissians, however, is remarkable (were they chiefly in the corps d'armée of Artabazos?).

But we may safely assert that if the total forces left with Mardonios comprised, even nominally, thirty myriads, then there was no selection, he retained the army of Xerxes in full: if there was a real selection, then his forces amounted to nothing like thirty myriads; cp. further Appendix II. § 5.

ἐξελέγετο πρώτους μὲν τοὺς Πέρσας πάντας τοὺς ἀθανάτους καλεομένους, πλὴν Ὑδάρνεος τοῦ στρατηγοῦ (οὗτος γὰρ οὐκ ἔφη λείψεσθαι βασιλέως), μετὰ δὲ τῶν ἄλλων Περσέων τοὺς θωρηκοφόρους καὶ τὴν ἵππον τὴν χιλὴν, καὶ Μήδους τε καὶ 10 Σάκας καὶ Βακτρίους τε καὶ Ἰνδοὺς, καὶ τὸν πεζὸν καὶ τὴν ἄλλην ἵππον. ταῦτα μὲν ἔθνεα ὅλα εἶλετο, ἐκ δὲ τῶν ἄλλων συμμάχων ἐξελέγετο κατ' ὀλίγους, τοῖσι εἶδεά τε ὑπῆρχε διαλέγων καὶ εἰ τεοῖσί τι χρηστὸν συνήδεε πεποιημένον· ἐν δὲ

7 τοὺς πέρσας πάντας τοὺς α: τοὺς μυρίους πέρσας τοὺς β, Holder: πέρσας πάντας τοὺς CPz: Πέρσας τοὺς μυρίους τοὺς vel τοὺς μυρίους Πέρσας πάντας τοὺς van H. 9 λήψεσθαι β || βασιλέως β: βασιλῆος z 11 τε om. BPz 12 ἄλλην om. β, Holder, van H. || εἶλατο β || ἄλλων om. αC 14 εἰ τέοισί τε Cz: εἰ τι οἱ β || συνήδεε R: συνείδεε αCSV || ἐν BB<sup>2</sup>: ἐν AB<sup>1</sup>: ἐν reliqui

7. τοὺς Πέρσας πάντας τοὺς ἀθανάτους καλεομένους: these are identical with the corps described in 7. 83, and apparently in 7. 41, and have been twice seen in action, 7. 211, and 7. 215. (Whether they were all strictly speaking 'Persians' is doubtful, in view of the frieze from the Apadana now in the Louvre, which suggests that even the negro population of Kissa was admitted to the ranks of the Immortals. But the heads are 'restored'.)

8. Ὑδάρνεος τοῦ στρατηγοῦ: cp. 7. 83. His devotion to the king's person on this occasion was, perhaps, in part dictated by an unwillingness to serve under Mardonios; but for the captain, strategos, or myriarch of the Immortals to depart and leave his men behind him is a strange proceeding. Would the guards not have seen the king further than Thessaly? Were the Immortals not among the king's escort, even if they returned to take part in the campaign of 479?

9. τῶν ἄλλων Περσέων τοὺς θωρηκοφόρους: this designation is not quite clear, as all the Persian infantry appear to have been θωρηκοφόροι, cp. 7. 61, and there is nothing in 7. 40 and 54 f. to explain the use of the term here, apparently for a special body of men.

10. τὴν ἵππον τὴν χιλὴν: which chiliad of cavalry is this? The ἱππῶται χίλαιοι ἐκ Περσέων πάντων ἀπολελεγμένοι who headed the procession out of Sardes 7. 40, or the ἵππος ἄλλη χιλὴν ἐκ Περσέων ἀπολελεγμένη who followed the Immortals on that occasion?

11. καὶ τὸν πεζὸν καὶ τὴν ἄλλην

ἵππον, 'as well infantry, as all the rest of the cavalry.' The phrase applies to all the ethnic contingents just previously named, all of whom figure in the cavalry-list (7. 84-86). ἄλλην, if not deleted, may be taken to mean that Mardonios not only retained the cavalry of these nations in addition to the chiliad specified, but all the cavalry. Or is ἄλλην merely idiomatic, like ἄλλων just below? Or is it dittographed from ἄλλων? But cp. App. Crit.

12. ταῦτα: assimilated by ἔθνεα. τούτων or τοῦτους might be expected.

13. κατ' ὀλίγους: as in Thuc. 3. 111. 1 ὑπαπῆσαν κατ' ὀλίγους, 4. 11. 3 κατ' ὀλίγας ναὺς διελόμενοι (Wesseling). The preposition is distributive in force: 'by small lots,' in small bodies.

τοῖσι εἶδεά τε ὑπῆρχε διαλέγων: the copula is not in its strictly correct place. The plural substantive is observable, but suggests that there was a plurality, a variety, of good forms; Stein cps. μεγάθεα 3. 102—where certainly the 'ants' need not all be just the same size. διαλέγων, as in c. 107 supra.

14. ἐν δὲ πλείστον ἔθνος Πέρσας αἵρετο seems to mean that the Persians were the largest unit, the most numerous national contingent, among those he was selecting, though Hdt. immediately adds that the Medes were equally numerous. There is a parallelism between this sentence and ταῦτα μὲν ἔθνεα ὅλα εἶλετο (in spite of the difference of tense), and πλείστον seems to be attracted to ἔθνος (for πλείστους). ἐν δὲ would of course be an adverbial use of

- 15 πλείστον ἔθνος Πέρσας αἰρέετο, ἄνδρας στρεπτοφόρους τε καὶ ψελιοφόρους, ἐπὶ δὲ Μήδους· οὗτοι δὲ τὸ πλῆθος μὲν οὐκ ἐλάσσονες ἦσαν τῶν Περσέων, ῥώμῃ δὲ ἥσσονες. ὥστε σύμπαντας τριήκοντα μυριάδας γενέσθαι σὺν ἱππεύσι.
- 114 Ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ, ἐν τῷ Μαρδονίου τε τὴν στρατιὴν διέκρινε καὶ Ξέρξης ἦν περὶ Θεσσαλίην, χρηστήριον ἐληλύθει ἐκ Δελφῶν Λακεδαιμονίοισι, Ξέρξην αἰτέειν δίκας τοῦ Λεωνίδεω φόνου καὶ τὸ διδόμενον ἐξ ἐκείνου δέκεσθαι. πέμπουσι δὲ
5 κήρυκα τὴν ταχίστην Σπαρτιῇται, ὃς ἐπειδὴ κατέλαβε εἶδον ἔτι πᾶσαν τὴν στρατιὴν ἐν Θεσσαλίῃ, ἐλθὼν ἐς ὄψιν τὴν Ξέρξῳ ἔλεγε τάδε. "ὦ βασιλεῦ Μήδων, Λακεδαιμόνιοί τε

16 τὸ om. BPz, Holder, van H.
ξέρξεα Bz

17 ἔσαν z || ἔσσονες z 114. 3

the preposition, like ἐπὶ δέ just below; Stein supports ἐν by Thucyd. 3. 39. 1 μάλιστα δὴ μίαν πόλιν ἡδικηκότας ὑμᾶς: 3. 113. 6 πᾶθος γὰρ τοῦτο μὰ πόλει . . μέγιστον δὴ . . ἐγένετο: 8. 40. 2 οἱ γὰρ οἰκᾶται . . μὰ γε πόλει . . πλείστοι γενόμενοι.

15. ἄνδρας στρεπτοφόρους τε καὶ ψελιοφόρους: curious gear for men! Cp. 9. 80. The Immortals, par exemple, χρυσὸν τε πολλὸν καὶ ἀφθονον ἔχοντες ἐνέτροπον (7. 83).

17. ῥώμῃ: cp. 7. 103.

114. 2. Ξέρξης ἦν περὶ Θεσσαλίην. Hdt. seems to keep Xerxes waiting all the while Mardonios was making his selection—an improbability in itself, and hardly consistent with the emphasis laid upon the rapidity of the king's flight, cc. 115, 120 infra.

χρηστήριον ἐληλύθει ἐκ Δ. Δ.: another item in Delphian apologetics; obviously the anecdote and oracle are this time at least post eventum. If so, is it necessary to inquire at what ideal point of time in 480 B.C. we shall date the response, or whether the Lakedaemonians had consulted the oracle concerning the death of their king? χρηστήριον is here the actual response, or utterance. The pluperfect appears to be rhetorical, but not temporarily incorrect; cp. c. 50 supra. δίκας αἰτέειν τινά τινας is of course the regular construction, cp. 1. 2 etc.

4. τὸ διδόμενον ἐξ ἐκείνου δέκεσθαι. De Pauw misunderstood: accipere omen. Wesseling approved. Baehr corrected: id quod a Xerxe oblatum esset, accipere. No doubt δέκομαι can be used of accepting an omen (cp. 9. 91), but also of accepting anything offered. Stein follows Baehr (apparently), and for τὸ διδόμενον cps. 3. 148, 8. 138, 9. 111. Below, δεξάμενος τὸ ῥηθέν has a slightly more oracular flavour, and though not used of accepting an oracle, is used of accepting something more than human.

5. Σπαρτιῇται is hardly used by Hdt. in deliberate contrast to Λακεδαιμονίοισι just above, and Λακεδαιμόνιοι just below, but merely as a literary variation.

κατέλαβε, deprehendit, overtook; cp. κατελαμβάνετο 6. 29.

6. πᾶσαν: not merely the select 300,000. Nor is there any hint of any garrisons south of Othrys.

7. Μήδων: had Sparta or Delphi not yet perceived the distinction between Medes and Persians? The use of the term generally is a kind of recognition, from the Greek side, of the continuity of the empires of Astyages, Kyros, Darius.

Λακεδαιμόνιοί τε . . καὶ Ἡρακλείδαι οἱ ἀπὸ Σπάρτης. The demand is a joint one, on behalf of the state, and of the royal family—which has now a blood-feud of its own with the Achaimenids. The Herakleids of Sparta—there were other Herakleids elsewhere—had a longer pedigree than Xerxes himself; cp. 7. 11, 204, and c. 131 infra. It can hardly be said that the vendetta was wiped out by the death of Mardonios, but it does not figure as real history afterwards. (Alexander, though an Herakleid, took a very different line; cp. Arrian Anab. 3. 22. 1, 30. 1-3, 4. 7. 3 ff.)

σε καὶ Ἡρακλεῖδαι οἱ ἀπὸ Σπάρτης αἰτέουσι φόνου δίκας, ὅτι σφένον τὸν βασιλέα ἀπέκτεινας ῥυόμενον τὴν Ἑλλάδα."
ὁ δὲ γελᾶσας τε καὶ κατασχὼν πολλὸν χρόνον, ὥς οἱ ἐτύγχανε 10
παρεστῶς Μαρδόνιος, δεικνὺς ἐς τοῦτον εἶπε "τοιγὰρ σφί Μαρδόνιος ὁδε δίκας δώσει τοιαύτας οἷας ἐκείνοισι πρέπει."
ὁ μὲν δὴ δεξάμενος τὸ ῥηθὲν ἀπαλλάσσετο, Ξέρξης δὲ 115 Μαρδόνιον ἐν Θεσσαλίῃ καταλιπὼν αὐτὸς ἐπορεύετο κατὰ τάχος ἐς τὸν Ἑλλήσποντον καὶ ἀπικνέεται ἐς τὸν πόρον [τῆς διαβάσιος] ἐν πέντε καὶ τεσσαράκοντα ἡμέρησι, ἀπάγων

8 αἰτέοντα B      9 βασιλῆα z      10 οἱ om. SV || ἔτυχε B
11 τοιγὰρ τοι Μαρδόνιος S (Gaisf.)      115. 4 τῆς διαβάσιος del.
van H., Holder, Stein<sup>2</sup> || ἐν om. B || τεσσαράκοντα B

10. ὁ δὲ γελᾶσας τε καὶ κατασχὼν πολλὸν χρόνον: one does not see much to laugh at (the laugh was soon to be on the other side): but perhaps the king already had his humorous answer ready, though he must wait some considerable time to deliver it, until Mardonios is in evidence.

κατασχὼν: like another despot, under sorer provocation, who (6. 129) κατεῖχε ἐνωτὸν, οὐ βουλόμενος ἐκραγῆναι.

11. τοιγὰρ σφί Μαρδόνιος . . . πρέπει: the remark is not a reply to the 'herald' but a witticism addressed to the suite (but δεικνὺς ἐς τοῦτον, for the benefit of the Spartan?), unless, indeed, the king spake Greek, or elaborated his jest through the medium of an interpreter. The irony of the anecdote is conspicuous, and the king's promise, or prophecy, is fulfilled, to his shame and astonishment, in 9. 64 ἀποθνήσκει δὲ Μαρδόνιος ὑπὸ Ἀειμητήσῃ ἀνδρὶ ἐν Σπάρτῃ λογιμῷ. But if Xerxes himself had fought and fallen at Plataea, how much more tragic, more cathartic, had been the irony! He would at least have escaped the comic Nemesis. Mardonios in death is the more dignified figure. Even the great Kyros had fallen by a woman, cp. 1. 214. But that is another story.

12. πρέπει: sc. διδόναι or δοῦναι: so L. & S., Krueger, Abicht, Sitzler. Rawlinson renders 'they deserve to get' (i.e. δέξασθαι), which gives a more pregnant and forcible sense, and is, perhaps, just grammatically possible ad sensum.

115. 2. ἐπορεύετο κατὰ τάχος ἐς τὸν Ἑλλήσποντον: considering the time of year, once it was decided that the king should not remain in Europe, probably no time was lost on the march to Asia. Yet Hdt. has not merely detained the king 'a few days' in Attica after the battle (cp. c. 113 supra), but has kept him waiting in Thessaly, while Mardonios picks out all the best fighting men, leaving only the refuse ex hypothesi to escort the king to the Hellespont! But cp. c. 126 infra.

3. τὸν πόρον [τῆς διαβάσιος]: the πόρος here appears to be the passage from shore to shore across the strait, by means of the bridge; cp. 7. 36 supra.

4. ἐν πέντε καὶ τεσσαράκοντα ἡμέρησι: is this period intended to cover the march from Thessaly to the Hellespont only, or the whole course from Athens? If the latter, are 'the few days' which elapsed between the battle and the move from Athens (c. 113 supra) included or not? As forty-five days would be a longish time to spend over the march from Thessaly, the latter alternative, in one form or other, is to be preferred. In this case the exact figure would be more convincing if it did not happen to be exactly half the time consumed in the advance from the Hellespont to Athens, c. 51 supra (3 months=90 days). In 394 B.C. Agesilaos marched from the Hellespont to Boiotia in a month, or less (Beloch, Gr. Ges. ii. 196); cp. Xenoph. Ages. 2. 1. But then he had only a relatively small force with him: Xenophon does not give the exact figures. Before the battle of Koroneia reinforcements had reached the king, and he was not inferior in numbers to the allied army opposed to him, which, a little while before, at the battle of Korinth, had

5 τῆς στρατιῆς οὐδὲν μέρος ὥς εἰπεῖν. ὅκου δὲ πορευόμενοι γινοῖατο καὶ κατ' οὔστινας ἀνθρώπους, τὸν τούτων καρπὸν ἀρπάζοντες ἐσιτεύοντο· εἰ δὲ καρπὸν μηδένα εὖροιεν, οἱ δὲ τὴν ποίην τὴν ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἀναφυομένην καὶ τῶν δενδρέων τὸν 10 φλοῖον περιλέποντες καὶ τὰ φύλλα καταδρέποντες κατήσθιον, ταῦτα δ' ἐποίηον ὑπὸ λιμοῦ. ἐπιλαβὼν δὲ λοιμός τε τὸν στρατὸν καὶ δυσεντερίη κατ' ὁδὸν ἔφθειρε. τοὺς δὲ καὶ νοσέοντας αὐτῶν κατέλειπε, ἐπιτάσσαν τῇσι πόλισι, ἵνα ἐκάστοτε γίνοιτο ἐλαύνων, μελεδαίνειν τε καὶ τρέφειν, ἐν

5 εἶπαι ζ, van H. 6 τούτων ζ || καρπὸν: καρ R 7 ἀναρ-πάζοντες B || ἐσιτεύοντο C 8 δένδρων B || τὸν <τε> conl. Stein, rec.
 van H. 9 περιβλέποντες C || τὰ: κατὰ R || καταδιέποντες B 10
 ἔλειπον BP: ἔλιπον 11 ταῦτα . . λιμοῦ del. Naber, van H. ||
 ἐποίηον ζ || ὑπολαβὼν Cobet, van H. || λιμός τότε ζ 12 διέφθειρε S
 13 αὐτέων Bz || κατέλειπε ζ 14 ἐκάστοθι CR || γίνηται ζ || τε om. αC numbered 24,000 hoplites with 1550 cavalry, and numerous light-armed troops; cp. Xenoph. Hell. 4. 1, 2. 16 ff., 3. 15 ff.

ἀπάγων τῆς στρατιῆς οὐδὲν μέρος ὥς εἰπεῖν. He had left (ex hypothesi) 300,000 of the best with Mardonios; he was escorted by Artabazos with 60,000 of the said 300,000 (cp. c. 126 infra). The phrase here is apparently intended to introduce the result of the losses en route between Thessaly and Sardes; but these losses are themselves to be heavily discounted in the light of that authentic escort. The millions which had accompanied Xerxes into Greece had to be disposed of somehow: he sheds most of them on the way home! Have the flight and sufferings of the survivors of Plataia been antedated and transferred to the escort of Xerxes, a year before? But even in the later disaster, Artabazos carries a substantial remnant home to Asia (9. 89). The rectification of the numbers of the host of Xerxes tends to adjust the proportion of losses. Bad as this passage in Hdt. may be, as regards horrors and exaggerations, he is by no means the worst offender: his predecessor Aeschylus (Persae 484-516) and Troguus Pompeius long afterwards (Justin 2. 13) pile up the agony more unscrupulously still. Cp. Appendix VII. § 2.

6. καρπὸν, Blakesley objects, could not be the growing harvest, for the harvest was over; but Hdt. meets that objection in the next sentence. Nor need καρπός be restricted to cereals. There would of course be no hardship in this, except for the despoiled owners!

7. οἱ δέ: the real hardships are introduced by δέ in apodosis, with the subject repeated; cp. 7. 51 supra.

8. ποίην, Att. πόαν (cp. ποιέω, ποίω).

9. φλοῖον: cp. 4. 67. The people of Petelia ate it, during the siege in the Hannibalic war, Polyb. 7. 1. 3. περιλέπειν is a rare word, Iliad 1. 236, the only other ref. in L. & S. Baehr, however, cites Theophrastus, Hist. pl. 6. 4. 10, and Suidas (quoting this passage sub v. Δρέπου).

11. ὑπό: cp. with genitive propter or propter; cp. ὑπὸ δέους καὶ κακοῦ 1. 85, etc.

12. δυσεντερίη: cp. Plato, Tim. 86 A διαρροίας καὶ δυσεντερίας καὶ τὰ ταυαῦτα νοσήματα πάντα παρέσχετο. Celsus de medicin. 4. 22 (15), quoted verbatim by Baehr, gives a full medical description of the symptoms and sufferings.

τοὺς δὲ καὶ νοσέοντας κτλ. Xerxes was at least more careful of the sick than his father had been beyond the Danube, according to the story 4. 135.

13. ἵνα, locative; γίνοιτο, "optative of indefinite frequency," Madvig § 133.

14. μελεδαίνειν: an Ionic word; cp. 7. 31.

Θεσσαλίῃ τε τινὰς καὶ ἐν Σίρι τῆς Παιονίης καὶ ἐν Μακεδονίῃ. 15
 ἔνθα καὶ τὸ ἵρὸν ἄρμα καταλιπὼν τοῦ Διός, ὅτε ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα ἤλανε, ἀπὼν οὐκ ἀπέλαβε, ἀλλὰ δόντες οἱ Παίονες τοῖσι Θρήξι ἀπαιτέοντος Ξέρξῃ ἐφάσαν νεμομένας ἀρπασθῆναι ὑπὸ τῶν ἄνω Θρήκων τῶν περὶ τὰς πηγὰς τοῦ Στρυμόνος οἰκημένων. ἔνθα καὶ ὁ τῶν Βισαλτέων βασιλεὺς γῆς τε τῆς 116 Κρηστανικῆς [Θρήξι] ἔργον ὑπερφυῆς ἐργάσατο· ὃς οὔτε αὐτὸς ἔφη τῷ Ξέρξῃ ἐκὼν εἶναι δουλεύσειν, ἀλλ' οἷχετο ἄνω εἰς τὸ ὄρος τὴν Ῥοδόπην, τοῖσί τε παισὶ ἀπηγόρευε μὴ στρα-

15 ἐν Σίρι τῆς Παιονίης . . ἐν Μακεδονίῃ transponenda vidit Stein<sup>2</sup>, transposuit van H. || παιονίας C 18 ἀρπασθῆναι codd. z 19
 καὶ τῶν περὶ C || πηγὰς om. R 20 οἰκεομένων z 116. 2 κρη-στανικῆς R || Θρήξι secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. (θρηξ α: θρηξ BC:
 θρηξ reliqui) || ἐργάσατο z 3 τῷ om. B || οἷχετο αC 4
 οὔρος z: τὸ οὔρος abesse malit van H.

15. ἐν Σίρι τῆς Παιονίης: to avoid confusion with Σίρις ἡ ἐν Ἰταλίῃ c. 62 supra. Siris in Paionia, the chief town of the Siro- or Siro-paiones (Steph. B. s.v. Σίρις), cp. 5. 15, was situate above Lake Prasias (5. 16), apparently mentioned by Livy 45. 4 Sirae oppidum terrae Odomanticae (Baehr ad 5. 15 suggests that it became 'Odomantian' after the removal of the Siro-paionians to Asia by Dareios). Now Seres, the centre of an important plain, or vale; cp. Hogarth, Nearer East, 89, 101; Reclus, Univ. Geogr. E.T. i. 112.

καὶ ἐν Μακεδονίῃ is strangely out of place, like an afterthought, a correction, a gloss. ἔνθα apparently refers to Siris. But cp. App. Crit.

16. τὸ ἵρὸν ἄρμα: 7. 40 supra. The road west of Siris was presumably too rough. The fact has not been recorded on the outward journey. The two passages are so wholly independent of each other that the chariot-team here is composed of mares (νεμομένας), which there was composed of horses. (Cp. 7. 55 οἱ τε ἵπποι οἱ ἱπὸι καὶ τὸ ἄρμα τὸ ἵρὸν, where the horses specified are of course the ten Nesaian, not the eight white horses of 7. 40.)

19. τῶν περὶ τὰς πηγὰς τοῦ Στρυμόνος οἰκημένων. The sources of the Strymon (Struma) appears to have been in the territory of the Agrianes; cp. Strabo 331 (36) ὑπὲρ δὲ τῆς Ἀμφιπόλεως Βισάλται καὶ μέχρι πόλεως Ἡρακλείας, ἔχοντες ἀλλήλους εὐκαρπον, ὃν διαρρεῖ ὁ Στρυμών, ὠρμημένοι ἐκ τῶν περὶ Ῥοδόπην Ἀγριανῶν

. . οὐ μόνον δ' ὁ Ἀξίος ἐκ Παιόνων ἔχει τὴν ῥέσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὁ Στρυμών· ἐξ Ἀγριανῶν γὰρ διὰ Μαλδῶν καὶ Σιντῶν εἰς τὰ μεταξὺ Βισαλτῶν καὶ Ὀδομάντων ἐκπίπτει. The Agrianes appear to be regarded by Thucyd. (2. 98. 3) as Paionians, though subject (in 429 B.C.) to the suzerainty of the Odrysian monarch.

116. 1. ἔνθα καὶ, repeated from c. 115 l. 16 supra, unless that passage is a later addition.

ὁ τῶν Βισαλτέων βασιλεὺς: on the position of Bisaltia cp. Strabo l.c., and 7. 115 supra. γῆ ἡ Κρηστανικὴ is not immediately north, but higher up, on the sources of the Cheiduros, 7. 124, 127. The king here is anonymous; but a king named 'Mosses,' dated about 500-480 B.C., is known from the coinage; cp. Head, Hist. Num. p. 179; G. Macdonald, Catalogue of Gk. Coins in the Hunterian Collection, i. (1899) p. 269.

2. ἔργον ὑπερφυῆς ἐργάσατο. The epithet here appears to be used in a dyslogistic sense; in 9. 78 eulogistically; in a purely matter-of-fact way, 2. 175. The word is not uncommon in the Attic writers.

3. ἐκὼν εἶναι: the substantive verb purely idiomatic, 'at least willingly,' in the negative sentence (Madvig § 151. 2).

4. τὸ ὄρος τὴν Ῥοδόπην: one or other appositive might be a gloss; Rhodope has not been mentioned before in these Books, but occurs in 4. 49 as a mountain in Paionia. "The main skeleton of the country between the Danube and the Aegean" is well described in Arnold's

5 τεύεσθαι ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα. οἱ δὲ ἀλογίσαντες, ἢ ἄλλως σφι θυμὸς ἐγένετο θεήσασθαι τὸν πόλεμον, ἐστρατεύοντο ἅμα τῷ
 Πέρσῃ. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀνεχώρησαν ἀσινέες πάντες ἐξ ἐόντες, ἐξώρυξε 117 αὐτῶν ὁ πατήρ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς διὰ τὴν αἰτὴν ταύτην. καὶ οὔτοι μὲν τοῦτον τὸν μισθὸν ἔλαβον, οἱ δὲ Πέρσαι ὥς ἐκ τῆς Θρηίκης πορευόμενοι ἀπίκοντο ἐπὶ τὸν πόρον, ἐπειγόμενοι τὸν
 Ἑλλήσποντον τῇσι νηυσὶ διέβησαν εἰς Ἀβυδὸν· τὰς γὰρ
 5 σχεδίας οὐκ εὗρον ἔτι ἐντεταμένας ἀλλ' ὑπὸ χεიმῶνος διαλελυμένας. ἐνθαῦτα δὲ κατεχόμενοι σιτία τε πλέω ἢ κατ' ὁδὸν ἐλάγχανον, <καὶ> οὐδένα τε κόσμον ἐμπιπλάμενοι καὶ ὕδατα μεταβάλλοντες ἀπέβησκον τοῦ στρατοῦ τοῦ περιέοντος πολλοί.
 οἱ δὲ λοιποὶ ἅμα Ξέρξῃ ἀπικνέονται εἰς Σάρδις.

5 ἀλογίσαντες 3 6 θεήσασθαι B || τῷ ξέρξῃ B 8 αὐτέων B
 117. 3 θρήικης B 5 οὐχ B || ἐντεταμένας C || ἀλλὰ α 6 δὴ 2 ||
 τε om. BPz, Holder 7 <καὶ> Stein<sup>2</sup> || τε: δὲ (omisso τε post σιτία)?
 Kallenberg 8 περιόντος B

note to Thuc. 2. 96. 4 (though Arnold's use of 'Orbelus' is hardly correct). Rhodope is that branch of the fourfold mountain system which runs down to the Aegean, dividing the valleys of the Hebros (Maritza) and Nestos (Kara Su), and breaking away into lower ranges further west, towards the Strymon. Cp. also Hogarth, Nearer East, pp. 24 f. ἀπηγόρευε μή: cp. c. 111 supra. This Bisaltian's apparent phil-Hellenism is noticeable: he did not take his cue from Macedon, nor perhaps anticipate the subsequent invasions of his territory by Athenian adventurers.

5. ἀλογίσαντες: c. 46 supra. ἢ ἄλλως . . ἐγένετο: the grammatical co-ordination is not exact. ἄλλως as in 4. 148, εἰ τε δὴ οἱ ἢ χώρα ἤρεσε, εἴτε καὶ ἄλλως ἠθέλησε τοῦτο ποιῆσαι. But there is not really a true alternative involved.

7. ἀσινέες: cp. c. 19 supra. The fact does not support the traditions of the hardships of this campaign.

ἐξώρυξε . . τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς: such a punishment was non-Hellenic, barbarous, as Aelian 5. 11, narrating this anecdote, expressly notices. Cp. 4. 2 supra. But Hdt. seems to suggest that they deserved it (τοῦτον τὸν μισθόν). The words διὰ τὴν αἰτίαν ταύτην add nothing to the force of the passage, unless it be supposed that there was another view of the motive for the king's inhuman action, e.g. a suspicion of a plot to depose him, or what not.

117. 3. τὸν πόρον: not the bridge, for the bridge was ex hypothesi gone, but perhaps the place where the bridge should have been—i.e. the passage across (not adown) the straits; cp. c. 115 supra.

4. τῇσι νηυσί: the ships had made for the Hellespont from Salamis διαφυλαζούσας τὰς σχεδίας πορευθῆναι βασιλεῖ, c. 107 supra. But according to this text the bridges were no longer taut (ἐντεταμένας 7. 34, 9. 106, 114), and the ships had to be used to convey Xerxes, and the remnant of his forces, across the Hellespont. Blakesley challenges this tradition: Aeschylus takes Xerxes back over the bridge (Pers. 725), and the Greeks, a year later, on Hdt.'s own showing, were still ignorant of the supposed destruction of the bridges in the course of the summer or autumn of 480 B.C.

6. κατεχόμενοι: probably passive in force; cp. c. 114 supra. ἐμπιπλάμενοι, very distinctly middle.

7. οὐδένα . . κόσμον = ἀκόσμως: this adverbial or modal accusative is observable.

ὕδατα μεταβάλλοντες: they must have been doing so all the way from Attica, and not merely after crossing the Hellespont. Nothing is said of the failure of the rivers on the way back. The mere change of drinking water, if the water in itself was good, could hardly have the effects ascribed to it, pace Hippocrat. περὶ ἀέρων κτλ. 2.

9. ἐς Σάρδις: where he remained for a considerable time; cp. 9. 107 infra.

Ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἄλλος ὁδε λόγος λεγόμενος, ὡς ἐπειδὴ Ξέρξης 118 ἀπελαύνων ἐξ Ἀθηνέων ἀπύκετο ἐπ' Ἡϊόνα τὴν ἐπὶ Στρυμόνι, ἐνθεῦτεν οὐκέτι ὁδοπορήσει διεχράτο, ἀλλὰ τὴν μὲν στρατιὴν Ἰδάρνει ἐπιτράπει ἀπάγειν ἐς τὸν Ἑλλήσποντον, αὐτὸς δ' ἐπὶ νεὸς Φοινίσσης ἐπιβὰς ἐκομίζετο ἐς τὴν Ἀσίην. πλέοντα δέ 5 μιν ἄνεμον Στρυμονίην ὑπολαβεῖν μέγαν καὶ κυματίνην. καὶ δὴ μᾶλλον γάρ τι χειμαίνεσθαι γεμούσης τῆς νεὸς, ὥστε ἐπὶ τοῦ καταστρώματος ἐπεόντων συχνῶν Περσέων τῶν σὺν Ξέρξῃ κομιζομένων, ἐνθαῦτα ἐς δεῖμα πεσόντα τὸν βασιλέα εἰρέσθαι βώσαντα τὸν κυβερνήτην εἰ τίς ἐστί σφι σωτηρίη, καὶ τὸν 10 εἶπαι "δέσποτα, οὐκ ἔστι οὐδεμία, εἰ μὴ τούτων ἀπαλλαγὴ τις γένηται τῶν πολλῶν ἐπιβατέων." καὶ Ξέρξην λέγεται ἀκούσαντα ταῦτα εἰπεῖν "ἄνδρες Πέρσαι, νῦν τις διαδεξάτω ὑμέων βασιλέος κηδόμενος· ἐν ὑμῖν γὰρ οἶκε εἶναι ἐμοὶ ἡ σωτηρίη." τὸν μὲν ταῦτα λέγειν, τοὺς δὲ προσκυνέοντας 15

118. 1 λεγόμενος λόγος z 2 ἀθηνέων AP: ἀθηναίων || ἐπ': ἐς? Kallenberg 3 ἐνθεῦτεν om. B || διεχρήτο αC: διεχρέετο 4 Ἰδάρνει ABPz || ἐπιτρέπει libri 5, 7 νεὸς C: νηὸς Bz (bis) || πλώοντα B 9 βασιλῆα z 10 κυβερνήτην B: κυβερνήτεια Bz || ἔστι R, van H. || σφι om. P: σφίσι? van H. 11 εἶπε C || οὐ δὲ μία AB: οὐδεμία z || εἰ: ἦν B, Holder, van H. || τουτέων z 12 ξέρξεια Bz || λέγεται secl. van H. 13 εἶπαι RSz, Holder, van H.: εἶπε V 14 βασιλῆος z || ἔοικεν B || ἐμοὶ εἶναι z || ἡ om. B

118. 1. ἄλλος ὁδε λόγος λεγόμενος, 'another story is told, to the following effect . . . The formula does not prove that the variant had not been reduced to writing (cp. Introduction, § 10). If it had been merely an oral tradition perhaps Hdt. would not have been at such pains to refute it.

2. Ἡϊόνα τὴν ἐπὶ Στρυμόνι: cp. 7. 25.

3. ὁδοπορήσει: of journeys by land; the plural perhaps only idiomatic or rhetorical (like ἀβουλῆσι c. 97 supra). Cp. 3. 52 ἀλουσίῃσι τε καὶ ἀσιτίῃσι, which Stein regards as Homeric.

4. Ἰδάρνει: cp. c. 113 supra. This story coheres with that anecdote, and is contradicted by the story (probably truer) of Artabazos c. 126 infra, though Hdt. misses this argument.

ἐπὶ νεὸς Φοινίσσης: of course; cp. 7. 128 supra.

6. ἄνεμον Στρυμονίην. It was πνοαὶ δ' ἀπὸ Στρυμόνος μολοῦσαι κακὸςχολοι, νήσιδες, δόσορμοι, that detained the fleet of Agamemnon at Aulis (Aischyl. Ag. 192 f.). Cp. Aristotle, de vent. σ 973 ν Θρακίας κατὰ μὲν Θράκην Στρυμονίας, πνέει γὰρ ἀπὸ τοῦ Στρυμόνος ποταμοῦ. (It does not, however, figure on the octagonal 'Tower of the Winds' in Athens.) Baehr considers it equivalent to Boreas. 'Strymonian' is presumably a purely geographical expression. Hdt. has suddenly changed into orat. oblig. after having started with ws and the recla. as in c. 111 supra.

7. χειμαίνεσθαι, cp. c. 113 supra, seems to be a poetical word, an observation not contravened by its (metaphorical) use in Aristotle, Poet. 17. 3. It is not quite plain whether the construction here is transitive (passive) or intransitive (neuter); and if transitive, whether τὴν νεά or τὸν βασιλέα should be understood as subject.

13. διαδεξάτω . . . κηδόμενος, 'may prove his care of . . .'; cp. 3. 72 δεικνύσθω ἐνθαῦτα ἐὼν πολέμιος. With the τις cp. c. 109 supra.

14. ἐν ὑμῖν: cp. c. 60 supra.

15. προσκυνέοντας: cp. 7. 186 supra. That even in this supreme hour the ἐκπηδᾶν ἐς τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ τὴν νέα ἐπικουφισθεῖσαν οὕτω δὴ ἀποσωθῆναι ἐς τὴν Ἀσίην. ὥς δὲ ἐκβῆναι τάχιστα ἐς γῆν τὸν Ξέρξην, ποιῆσαι τοιόνδε· ὅτι μὲν ἔσωσε βασιλέος τὴν ψυχὴν, δωρήσασθαι χρυσὴν στεφάνην τὸν κυβερνήτην, ὅτι <sup>20</sup> δὲ Περσέων πολλοὺς ἀπώλεσε, ἀποταμεῖν τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ. 119 οὗτος δὲ ἄλλος λέγεται λόγος περὶ τοῦ Ξέρξεω νόστου, οὐδαμῶς ἔμοιγε πιστὸς οὔτε ἄλλως οὔτε τὸ Περσέων τοῦτο πάθος. εἰ γὰρ δὴ ταῦτα οὕτω εἰρέθη ἐκ τοῦ κυβερνήτεω πρὸς Ξέρξην, ἐν μυρήσι γνώμῃσι μίαν οὐκ ἔχω ἀντίξουν μὴ οὐκ <sup>5</sup> ἂν ποιῆσαι βασιλέα τοιόνδε, τοὺς μὲν ἐπὶ τοῦ καταστρώματος καταβιβάσαι ἐς κοίλῃν νέα ἑόντας Πέρσας καὶ Περσέων τοὺς πρώτους, τῶν δ' ἐρετέων ἑόντων Φοινίκων ὅκως οὐκ ἂν ἴσων πληθὸς τοῖσι Πέρσῃσι ἐξέβαλε ἐς τὴν θάλασσαν. ἀλλ' ὁ

16 ἐκπηδέειν B || νῆα Rz 18 ξέρξεα Bz || βασιλῆος z 19 χρυσέω στεφάνῳ B: χρυσέω στεφάνῳ Holder, van H. || κυβερνήτην B: κυβερνήτεια Bz 119. 1 ἄλλος B: ἄλλως || λέγεται ὁ λόγος CPz: λόγος λέγεται B 2 ἄλλως Bz: ἄλλος ('ni fuit potius ὁ ἄλλος' Stein) || τὸ post τοῦτο B 3 οὕτω CPz: οὕτως || ἡρέθη C: ἐρέθη B: ἐρρήθη Pz 4 τὸν ξέρξεα B: ξέρξεα z || μίην z || ἔχω: ἔξω Krueger, van H. || μὴ om. B 5 βασιλῆα z || ἐπὶ: ἐκ B, Holder, van H. 6 νῆα Bz || καὶ τῶν B 7 δὲ α || ἐρετρίων B || κῶς Pingel, van H. || ἴσων R 8 θάλασσαν; (Pingel) van H.

forms of Persian court etiquette are not omitted is a touch not so much of verisimilitude as of humour.

19. ψυχὴν: 7. 39 supra.

20. ἀποταμεῖν τὴν κεφαλὴν: on beheading, 7. 35 supra; did he wear the crown at his execution? The anecdote illustrates the despot's cowardice and caprice, and the ludicrous loyalty of his subjects; it is a part of the comic Nemesis, though a trifle grim.

119. 2. οὐδαμῶς ἔμοιγε πιστός. Hdt. is no doubt right in discrediting the story, but the point he emphasizes against it seems a poor one. Persian grandees would have been but sorry hands at the oars compared to the Phoenician tars; and the process of pitching a lot of the oarsmen into the sea, during a raging storm, to make way for those aristocratic amateurs, might not have been easy or expeditious. Hdt. relates a story which he discredits perhaps on the principle laid down 7. 152.

οὔτε ἄλλως οὔτε τὸ Περσέων τοῦτο πάθος: reading ἄλλως the construction

seems irregular (which is better, however, than the very tame ὁ ἄλλος); for is τὸ πάθος nominative (subject) or accusative (of reference, limitation)? The latter seems preferable. ἄλλως itself is simple enough here ('in other respects'); cp. c. 116 supra. The πάθος is self-inflicted in this case.

4. ἐν μυρήσι γνώμῃσι μίαν . . ἀντίξουν: does Hdt. mean that he had often discussed the story, and never found a single person dispute his point? Or does he merely wish to emphasize his own conviction by asserting that, if ten thousand opinions were polled, they would all be found to agree with him? ἀντίξοος, cp. 7. 218 supra. The apodosis in the conditional sentence is not οὐκ ἔχω, strictly speaking, but οὐκ ἂν ποιῆσαι. οὐκ ἔχω . . μὴ οὐκ ἂν ποιῆσαι is a clear case of the idiomatic use of the double negative μὴ οὐ. Instead of μὴ οὐκ ἂν ποιῆσαι Hdt. might have written ὅκως οὐκ ἂν ἐποίησε, as he writes below ὅκως οὐκ ἂν ἐξέβαλε instead of μὴ οὐκ ἂν ἐκβαλεῖν. But Pingel's emendation (vide App. Crit.) is seductive.

6. ἐς κοίλῃν νέα, 'into the ship's hold.'

μέν, ὥς καὶ πρότερόν μοι εἴρηται, ὁδῶ χρεώμενος ἅμα τῷ ἄλλῳ στρατῷ ἀπενόστησε ἐς τὴν Ἀσίην. μέγα δὲ καὶ τότε 120 μαρτύριον· φαίνεται γὰρ Ξέρξης ἐν τῇ ὀπίσω κομιδῇ ἀπικόμενος ἐς Ἀβδηρα καὶ ξεινίην τέ σφι συνθέμενος καὶ δωρησάμενος αὐτοὺς ἀκινάκη τε χρυσέῳ καὶ τήρῃ χρυσοπάστῳ. καὶ ὥς αὐτοὶ λέγουσι Ἀβδηρίται, λέγοντες ἔμοιγε οὐδαμῶς πιστά, 5 πρῶτον <αὐτοῦ> ἐλύσατο τὴν ζώνην φεύγων ἐξ Ἀθηναίων ὀπίσω, ὥς ἐν ἀδείῃ ἐών. τὰ δὲ Ἀβδηρα ἱδρυται πρὸς τοῦ Ἑλλησπόντου μᾶλλον ἢ δὴ τοῦ Στρυμόνος καὶ τῆς Ἡϊόνος, ὅθεν δὴ μιν φασὶ ἐπιβῆναι ἐπὶ τὴν νέα.

9 μοι om. BP, Stein<sup>1</sup> || χρεώμενος P, van H. 120 totum caput necnon c. praeced. a verb. οὔτε ἄλλως suspect. hab. Krueger, Kallenberg 3 ξεινίην B 4 τε om. B || τήρῃ Stein<sup>2</sup>, etc.: τιάρῃ Stein<sup>3</sup>: τήρῃ B: τήρῃ α: τρήρει CP: τρήρει z 5 οὐδαμῶς ἔμοιγε B: μὲν οὐδαμῶς ἔμοι z 6 <αὐτοῦ> van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἀθηναίων BSCz 7 πρὸς τοῦ Ἑλλησπόντου δὲ μᾶλλον τὰ Ἀβδηρα ἱδρυται ἢ z 8 ἢ δὴ Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἢ (om. B) 9 νῆα Bz: post hanc voc. λεί στι <sup>xx</sup> κ̃ (sc. λείπουσι στίχοι εἴκοσι) exhib. B<sup>m</sup>

9. ὥς καὶ πρότερόν μοι εἴρηται: the reference back is but to cc. 115-117 supra.

ἅμα τῷ ἄλλῳ στρατῷ: a merely idiomatic ἄλλος without distinct reference to any division of the army; cp. c. 113 supra.

120. 1. μέγα δὲ καὶ τότε μαρτύριον: the point here made is a convincing one, the fact being admitted. τότε is not merely the exact position of the town, nor the fact that Xerxes reached it on his return; for neither of these by itself would prove the point; but more generally the whole argument which comprises both items.

2. φαίνεται . . . ἀπικόμενος. No real proof is given that the visit of Xerxes to Abdera was ἐν τῇ ὀπίσω κομιδῇ (cp. c. 108 supra); the ξεινίη might have been established, and the gifts presented, on the outward journey, 7. 109 supra; cp. 7. 120.

4. ἀκινάκη: Περσικὸν ξίφος τὸν ἀκινάκην καλεοῦσι 7. 54 supra.

τήρῃ: cp. 7. 61 supra. For χρυσόπαστος cp. Aischyl. Ag. 776 (769) τὰ χρυσόπαστα δ' ἐδέσθη.

5. ὥς αὐτοὶ λέγουσι Ἀβδηρίται: they must have been the ultimate authority for the previous statement which Hdt. accepts, as much as for the subsequent statement which he rejects (λέγοντες ἔμοιγε οὐδαμῶς πιστά). The argument and sentence are incomplete without the insertion of ἐς Ἀβδηρα or παρὰ σφῆας ἀπικόμενος or αὐτοῦ: cp. App. Crit. The statement would be entirely inconsistent with Hdt.'s own previous narrative (e.g. c. 114 supra), as well as improbable in itself; it illustrates the growth of the legend of Xerxes' flight (φεύγων). The story of Artabazos also contradicts it; but Hdt. takes no heed of that.

6. ἐλύσατο τὴν ζώνην: i.e. changed his raiment. Stein well cps. the vow of Histiaios 5. 106 supra. ζώνη was not an exclusively male article of dress (cp. L. & S. and 1. 51). It has been regarded as emblematic of virility in the one sex, and of chastity in the other (cp. Sir R. Temple in the Cambridge Review, vol. xxvi. No. 643, p. xxix.).

8. μᾶλλον ἢ δὴ τοῦ Στρυμόνος. Hdt. must certainly have meant to say that Abdera was nearer than Eion to the Hellespont, not that it was nearer to the Hellespont than to the Strymon. The point is necessary to the argument, but it is only obtained by an emendation. The substitution of the Strymon for Eion in the comparison is awkward, and perhaps led to the corruption. Blakesley, who obelizes cc. 118, 119 on account of the weakness of the argument in c. 119, regards this sentence as a mere gloss; i.e. a fraud within the fraud. Cp. App. Crit.

9. φασί: the authors of the story in c. 118 supra.

- 121 Οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες ἐπεῖτε οὐκ οἶοί τε ἐγίνοντο ἐξελεῖν τὴν Ἄνδρον, τραπόμενοι ἐς Κάρυστον καὶ δηλώσαντες αὐτῶν τὴν χώραν ἀπαλλάσσουντο ἐς Σαλαμίνα. πρῶτα μὲν νυν τοῖσι θεοῖσι ἐξείλον ἀκροθίνια ἄλλα τε καὶ τριήρεας τρεῖς Φοινίσσας, 5 τὴν μὲν ἐς Ἴσθμὸν ἀναθεῖναι, ἥ περ ἔτι καὶ ἐς ἐμὲ ἦν, τὴν δὲ ἐπὶ Σούνιον, τὴν δὲ τῷ Αἴαντι αὐτοῦ ἐς Σαλαμίνα. μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο διεδάσαντο τὴν λήην καὶ τὰ ἀκροθίνια ἀπέπεμψαν ἐς Δελφούς, ἐκ τῶν ἐγένετο ἀνδριάς ἔχων ἐν τῇ

121. 1 ἐγένοντο CPs || ἐξελέειν B 2 δηλώσαντες B || αὐτέων 2
5 ἀναθῆναι C || καὶ om. C 6 δ' ἐπὶ α || 'an αὐτόσε [ἐς Σαλαμίνα]?'
van H. 7 τοῦτο del. van H. || τὰ om. B || ἐπεμψαν B

121. 1. οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες: the scene shifts back to Hellas (cc. 121-125) and resumes the story dropped in c. 112. The Greeks are foiled at Andros (even as Miltiades had been foiled at Paros, some nine or ten years before, 6. 132 ff.). Karystos is devastated, Rawlinson solemnly remarking that Themistokles seems to have lacked the influence, or the honesty, to keep his bargain with these unfortunates. What is really here disproved is the bargain. αὐτῶν: sc. τῶν Καρυστίων.

3. ἀπαλλάσσουντο ἐς Σαλαμίνα. Had they ever really quitted it? Are the operations against Andros and Karystos correctly dated, or are they duplicates, by anticipation, of the subsequent operations of the Athenian alliance?

τοῖσι θεοῖσι. Had Polytheism a more vivid sense of the divine presences and operations than our Christendom? The nations nowadays seldom venture upon particular offerings to the Deity in acknowledgement of victory. Or does our religion dispose us rather to set the higher powers and graces on the losing side?

4. ἐξείλον after ἐξελεῖν just above, in a totally different sense, is not happy, is an 'unconscious iteration.'

ἀκροθίνια: a poetical word (but found in the sing., Thuc. 1. 132. 2) and properly an adjective. ἀναθεῖναι appears to be an exegetical infinitive, nor does it involve the conclusion that these dedications were carried out, or set up, immediately.

5. ἥ περ ἔτι καὶ ἐς ἐμὲ ἦν. It is surely a curious remark for Hdt. to make, that of the three Phoenician triremes dedicated for erection, one at the Isthmos, one at Sunion, and one in Salamis, the first was still in existence down to his own day. What then of the other two? Had they disappeared? Or had Hdt. seen the one at the Isthmos, but not the other two? Or had he certain information about the first, but not about the others? It is remarkable that two of these national dedications were to be upon Attic soil, and that of those two Hdt. appears to have no precise knowledge.

6. τῷ Αἴαντι. Hdt. does not specify to whom the dedications at Sunion and the Isthmos were made; presumably to Athens and to Poseidon—by so little were the gods and heroes then distinguished. Aias is of course the Aiakid, cp. c. 64 supra. αὐτοῦ, 'on the spot.'

7. μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο: i.e. after the ἐξαίρεσις ἀκροθίνων. 'The' ἀκροθίνια sent to Delphi had presumably been included in the operation, before the division of the spoil; but each state, to whom a share of booty fell, had also to make an offering to Delphi, though the point is not quite clearly put by Hdt. We learn also from Pausanias, l.c. infra, that individual commanders made offerings at Delphi from their shares of the spoil.

8. ἐκ τῶν ἐγένετο: the actual fabrication and erection of this statue, the collective dedication of the Greeks from the victory of Salamis, can hardly have been effected until the victory of Plataia had placed the loyalty and the security of Delphi on a new footing. Hdt. does not specify the subject of the statue. Pausanias 10. 14. 3 (5) is more explicit, without fully describing the type: Ἕλληνες δὲ οἱ ἐναντία βασιλείας πολεμήσαντες ἀνέθεσαν μὲν Δία ἐν Ὀλυμπίᾳ χαλκοῦν, ἀνέθεσαν δὲ καὶ ἐς Δελφοὺς Ἀπόλλωνα ἀπὸ ἔργων τῶν ἐν ταῖς ναυσὶν ἐπὶ τε Ἀρτεμισίῳ καὶ ἐν

χειρὶ ἀκρωτήριον νεός, ἐὼν μέγαθος δυνάδεκα πηχέων· ἐστήκεε δὲ οὗτος τῇ περ ὁ Μακεδὼν Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ χρύσεος. πέμ- 122
ψαντες δὲ ἀκροθίνια οἱ Ἕλληνες ἐς Δελφοὺς ἐπειρώτων τὸν θεὸν κοινῇ εἰ λελάβηκε πλήρεα καὶ ἀρεστὰ τὰ ἀκροθίνια. ὁ δὲ παρ' Ἑλλήνων μὲν τῶν ἄλλων ἔφησε ἔχειν, παρὰ Αἰγινητέων δὲ οὐ, ἀλλὰ ἀπαίτεε αὐτοὺς τὰ ἀριστήια τῆς ἐν 5
Σαλαμῖνι ναυμαχίης. Αἰγινῆται δὲ πυθόμενοι ἀνέθεσαν ἀστέρας χρυσοῦς, οἱ ἐπὶ ἴστοῦ χαλκέου ἐστᾶσι τρεῖς ἐπὶ τῆς γωνίης, ἀγχοτάτω τοῦ Κροίσου κρητῆρος.

9 χερὶ :: ἀκρωτήριον post ἔχων B || νεὸς BCP: νηὸς :: δυοκαίδεκα α || ἔστηκεν RSV, van H. (ἔστηκε B ap. Holder) 122. 2 ἐπηρώτων BCP: ἐπρωτέων :: 4 ὁ δὲ παλλήνων A<sup>1</sup> || ἔχει :: παρ' BPz 5
ἀλλ' Pz 8 ἀγχοτάτω αP || κροίσου Pz: χρυσοῦ B: κροῖσεω (Κροισίου coni. Stein<sup>2</sup>, recep. Holder)

Σαλαμῖνι. Apollo had precious little claim to an offering from Salamis (and it might have been the god's guilty conscience which led him to decline the offering of Themistokles! Pausan. l.c. He could hardly have been wroth with the Athenian for the defence of the medizers, Plutarch Themist. 20).

9. ἔστηκεν δὲ . . ὁ χρύσεος. To mark the position of the god's by the man's image, if both were still in situ, is an odd procedure. [Demosth.] 12. 164 Φίλιπ. ἐπιστ. mentions 'the golden Alexander' as an offering at Delphi made by Alex. I. from the spoil (τῶν αἰχμαλώτων Μήδων) captured by him on the site of Amphipolis—a very questionable item of history. Blakesley regards ἔστηκεν . . ὁ χρύσεος as the note of a later editor, on two grounds: (1) a portrait statue of a living person would be an anachronism; (2) a gold statue seems too rich for the Makedonians of the period; and thinks the Alexander here named was Alex. Magnus. As to (2), the statue would be bronze gilt, and Alexander was wealthy, cp. 5. 17. As to (1), the portrait was probably an ideal, and the text above cited is some confirmation of Hdt.

122. 1. πέμψαντες δέ. Hdt. seems to assume that this mission and inquiry followed at once, and at the same time. But a more or less considerable interval is involved (a) in the military situation, which would make such offerings an absurdity, while Mardonios was still about; (b) in the implicit assumption that various states had made separate offerings; (c) in the time necessary for the designing and execution of such dedications. In this 'common inquiry by the Hellenes' we may fairly see the hand of the Amphiktyons, at the date of the attempted revival and development of the League, the rehabilitation of Delphi, and the reaction against Athens and the Delian movement; cp. 7. 228 supra.

5. τὰ ἀριστήια τῆς ἐν Σαλαμῖνι ναυμαχίης, 'the prize of valour for the sea-fight at Salamis.' The Aiginetans themselves had obtained the first prize in the battle (c. 93 supra); and this passage has generally been taken to mean that the god made a special demand upon the Aiginetans, as the ἀριστεύσαντες. Stein more subtly interprets the god as claiming for himself the award, and conjectures that the Aiginetans had been favoured in the fight with a propitious sign, such as befell Lysander at Aigospotami (Plutarch Lysandr. 12), viz. an apparition of the Dioskouroi, and of Apollon Delphinios, a special patron of the Aiginetans—the three being represented by the stars on the Aiginetan offering. This explanation is acceptable, and is endorsed by Busolt ii.<sup>2</sup> 716. 3. It was a compliment to the Aiginetans, and a set-back to Athens: it was also a direct claim, advanced by Delphi, to a credit for the victory at Salamis. Perhaps the Aiginetans had already offered the mast with two stars (at the yard-arm's ends) (the Dioskouroi), and had only to add a third, and larger star, above, to represent the sun-god.

7. γωνίης: sc. τοῦ προνηίου 1. 51.

- 123 Μετὰ δὲ τὴν διαίρεσιν τῆς λήϊς ἔπλεον οἱ Ἕλληνες ἐς τὸν Ἴσθμον ἀριστήϊα δώσαντες τῷ ἀξιοτάτῳ γενομένῳ Ἕλλη-νων ἀνὰ τὸν πόλεμον τοῦτον. ὥς δὲ ἀπικόμενοι οἱ στρατηγοὶ διένεμον τὰς ψήφους ἐπὶ τοῦ Ποσειδέωνος τῷ βωμῷ, τὸν
5 πρῶτον καὶ τὸν δεύτερον κρίνοντας ἐκ πάντων, ἐνθαῦτα πᾶς τις αὐτῶν ἐωυτῷ ἐτίθετο τὴν ψήφον, αὐτὸς ἕκαστος δοκέων ἄριστος γενέσθαι, δεύτερα δὲ οἱ πολλοὶ συνεξέπιπτον Θεμι-στοκλέα κρίνοντας. οἱ μὲν δὲ ἔμουνοντο, Θεμιστοκλῆς δὲ

123. 1 ἔπλεον Bz, van H. 4 διένεμοντο Pz: ἔφερον B: 'Num διέφερον?' van H. || ποσειδέωνος B 5 κρίνόντες van H. 6
αὐτέων z: om. B 7 δὲ om. C || ξυνεξέπιπτον B || Θεμιστοκλῆα =
8 ἔμουνοντο A<sup>1</sup>: ἔμουνοντο C

The Krater of Kroisos must be the silver one, for the gold one was in the Treasury of Klazomenai; ib. This little chapter looks very like an addition of the second hand; cp. Introduction, § 9.

123. 1. μετὰ δὲ τὴν διαίρεσιν τῆς λήϊς: these words, carrying back over c. 122, show that the Aiginetan episode just recounted belongs to a later date, and suggest that the record of it may be an insertion, not of the first draft; see preceding note.

2. ἀριστήϊα δώσαντες: the prize is not a mere ideal award, but sufficiently material to pass from hand to hand; cp. next c.

3. ἀνὰ τὸν πόλεμον τοῦτον. This proposal to award the prize for the war—which is not yet over—is a little premature. Did the Greeks then believe that the war was over (cp. c. 109 supra)? Or is this episode at the Isthmos ante-dated some twelve months? Or is it altogether apocryphal? It has a somewhat fabulous air. Pliny 34. 53 has a similar anecdote of Polykleitos, presumably plagiarized from this.

οἱ στρατηγοί: apparently of the fleet: the admirals (but was Aristeides among them?). The fleet is all apparently supposed to have moved to the Isthmos. The Peloponnesian army too might still be there; but its organization was probably different from that of the fleet, and in any case its commanders could hardly be conceived as awarding each to himself the prize on this occasion.

4. διένεμον τὰς ψήφους ἐπὶ τ. Ποσειδέωνος τῷ βωμῷ: a specially solemn procedure, designed to secure an absolutely honest decision, as in judicial proceedings

(Plutarch Perikl. 32 οἱ δὲ δικασταὶ τὴν ψήφον ἀπὸ τοῦ βωμοῦ φέροντες . . . κρίνουσιν). διένεμον τὰς ψήφους apparently means to divide the votes among the (possible) competitors for first and second place. Cp. διαφέρειν τὴν ψήφον 4. 138. φέρειν, τίθεσθαι would be more usual. How the voting was actually conducted does not clearly appear. Perhaps there were two urns upon the altar, into one of which each strategos put an ostrakon, with the name of his nominee for first place inscribed upon it, and into the other that for the second place; in the scrutiny it would have been discovered that in the first urn no two ostraka bore the same name, while in the second every sherd was inscribed with the name of Themistokles. (But how did the Athenian himself vote?) The shrine of Poseidon and its contents are described by Pausanias 2. 1. 7-9, for his own day; the temple in 480 B.C. was presumably the sixth-century edifice, of which remains have been found; cp. Frazer iii. 11.

7. οἱ πολλοὶ συνεξέπιπτον: cp. c. 49 supra; here (as in 5. 22) the verb is used with a personal subject, but appears to have merely the meaning 'coincided,' agreed; the fortuitous character of the agreement may have suggested the use of the word.

Θεμιστοκλέα κρίνοντας: sc. τὸν δεύτερον εἶναι. δεύτερα just above is merely adverbial.

8. οἱ μὲν δὲ ἔμουνοντο: they were left each with one vote only (for first place). The same remark, however, applies to Themistokles, so that the contrast here is not quite complete.

δευτερείοισι ὑπερεβάλλετο πολλόν. οὐ βουλομένων δὲ ταῦτα 124
κρίνειν τῶν Ἑλλήνων φθόνῳ, ἀλλ' ἀποπλεόντων ἐκάστων ἐς τὴν ἐωυτῶν ἀκρίτων, ὅμως Θεμιστοκλῆς ἐβώσθη τε καὶ ἐδοξώθη εἶναι ἀνὴρ πολλὸν Ἑλλήνων σοφώτατος ἀνὰ πᾶσαν τὴν Ἑλλάδα. ὅτι δὲ νικῶν οὐκ ἐτιμήθη πρὸς τῶν ἐν Σαλα- 5
μῖνι ναυμαχησάντων, αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα ἐς Λακεδαίμονα ἀπῆκετο θέλων τιμηθῆναι· καὶ μιν Λακεδαιμόνιοι καλῶς μὲν ὑπεδέξαντο, μεγάλως δὲ ἐτίμησαν. ἀριστήια μὲν νυν ἔδοσαν
. . . Εὐρυβιάδῃ ἐλαίης στέφανον, σοφίης δὲ καὶ δεξιότητος Θεμιστοκλέϊ καὶ τούτῳ στέφανον ἐλαίης· ἐδωρήσαντό τέ μιν 10
ὄχῳ τῷ ἐν Σπάρτῃ καλλιστεύσαντι. αἰνέσαντες δὲ πολλά,

9 ὑπερέβαλλε B 124. 2 ἀποπλεόντων B 3 ἐβοήθη C
4 ἐδοξώσθη = || πολλῶν BCz || Ἑλλήνων del. van H. 5 νικῶν 'suspectum' Stein<sup>2</sup>: φιλονικίων? Stein<sup>3</sup> 9 ἀνδραγαθίης vel e Plutarch.
Them. c. 17, Mor. p. 871 ἀνδρηίης supplend. cens. Stein et alii 10 τέ: δέ CPz 11 καλλιστεύοντι B, Holder, van H.

9. δευτερείοισι ὑπερεβάλλετο: sc. τοὺς ἄλλους στρατηγοὺς. δευτερεία (εὐδαιμονίης) 1. 32; ὑπερβάλλεσθαι c. 24 supra; and 1. 61 Θηβαῖοι ὑπερεβάλλοντο τῇ δόσει τῶν χρημάτων.

124. 1. οὐ βουλομένων δὲ . . φθόνῳ: the sentences may be taken to refer to the judicial fiasco just recorded. τῶν Ἑλλήνων = τῶν στρατηγῶν. But without much pressing the passage might be taken to refer to a refusal to decide the question on appeal, ἐκάστων (each set and each contingent) just below favouring that too. ἀκρίτων is plainly active, 'without giving a decision.'

φθόνος is the besetting sin of Greek citizenship, cp. 7. 236 supra, and was not eliminated between confederates.

3. ἐβώσθη τε κτλ.: cp. 6. 131 οὕτω Ἀλκμεωνίδαι ἐβώσθησαν ἀνὰ τὴν Ἑλλάδα.

7. θέλων τιμηθῆναι: this motivation again betrays animus (cp. c. 112 supra). The visit of Themistokles to Lakadaimon in the autumn or winter (480-79) was probably by invitation (cp. Plutarch Themist. 17), and may have had deeper political and diplomatic ends in view than the Herodotean historiography has reckoned with.

The honours heaped upon the Athenian in Sparta Diodoros 11. 27 (Ephoros) traces to Spartan apprehensions of reprisals on the part of the Athenians and Themistokles, for the set-back after Salamis; they may have been intended, at least in part, to promote a naval policy for the future (cp. c. 108 supra), as well as to reward its past success. They do not appear to have turned his head, much less won Themistokles to sacrifice Athenian to Spartan interests. Within a twelve-month he is in Sparta again, for a very different purpose, and at considerable risk to himself; cp. Thucyd. 1. 89-92. The Themistoklean legend had attempted to discount his services to Athens in Sparta by ignoring the visit after Plataia-Mykale, and caricaturing the visit after Salamis; Thucydides' record is a part of the Rettung of Themistokles, which he favours. Cp. Appendix VII. § 4.

9. Εὐρυβιάδῃ, who must, according to the antecedent anecdote, have voted the prize to himself at the Isthmos.

σοφίης δὲ καὶ δεξιότητος: the distinction between the 'ethical' (ἀνδρηίης, cp. App. Crit.) and the 'intellectual' virtues, and their rewards, shows that the Spartans had some philosophy in them! The award is the same in each case, an olive-wreath; and the co-ordination (which justifies our understanding ἀριστήια before σοφίης) is emphasized by the words καὶ τούτῳ (et ipsi; cp. καὶ οὗτοι 7. 40, Stein).

11. ὄχῳ τῷ ἐν Σπάρτῃ καλλιστεύσαντι. Stein observes the astonishing use here of the aorist. Perhaps when the chariot reached Athens it was not so much thought of!

αἰνέσαντες might seem grammatically to belong to the τριηκόσιοι, but κατὰ προέπεμψαν ἀπιόντα τριηκόσιοι Σπαρτιητέων λογάδες, οὔτοι οἱ περ ἵππες καλέονται, μέχρι οὐρων τῶν Τεγεατικῶν. μῦνον δὴ τοῦτον πάντων ἀνθρώπων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν Σπαρτιή-125 ται προέπεμψαν. ὥς δὲ ἐκ τῆς Λακεδαιμόνος ἀπῆκετο ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας, ἐνθαῦτα Τιμόδημος Ἀφιδναῖος τῶν ἐχθρῶν μὲν τῶν Θεμιστοκλέος ἑών, ἄλλως δὲ οὐ τῶν ἐπιφανέων ἀνδρῶν, φθόνῳ καταμαργέων ἐνείκεε τὸν Θεμιστοκλέα, τὴν ἐς Λακεδαί-

 5 μονα ἄπιξιν προφέρων, ὥς διὰ τὰς Ἀθήνας ἔχει τὰ γέρεα τὰ παρὰ Λακεδαιμονίων, ἀλλ' οὐ δι' ἑωυτόν. ὁ δέ, ἐπεῖτε οὐκ ἐπαύετο λέγων ταῦτα ὁ Τιμόδημος, εἶπε "οὕτω ἔχει τοι· οὕτ'

12 ἀνιόντα Pz 13 οὐρων B<sup>2</sup> 125. 2 ἀθηναῖος B || μὲν om. B 3 ἀνδρῶν om. R 4 καταμαργέων αCz (γρ. μαργέων P<sup>m</sup>) || Θεμιστοκλήα z || σπάρτην B 5 ἔχει z 6 ἑωυτῶν B || ἐνέκειτο καὶ οὐκ z 7 ταῦτα λέγων z || οὕτως R

σύνεσιν, a reference to the previous subject (Λακεδαιμόνιοι) seems more pointed and natural. The αἶνος perhaps took the form of songs or orations in his honour; cp. Thuc. 2. 25. 2. It is followed by the 'pomp,' or escort, to the frontier.

12. τριηκόσιοι Σπαρτιητέων λογάδες: perhaps the royal body-guard, οἱ τριακόσιοι ἱππῆς καλούμενοι Thuc. 5. 72. 4 (but cp. 6. 56, 7. 205 supra), apparently identical with the corps d'élite of hoplites, described by Xenophon, Laced. Rep. 4, as chosen by the three Hippagretai, each choosing 100 men, the Hippagretai themselves having been selected by the Ephors; the corps would then be annually recruited, and a fresh levy may have been made since Thermopylai. There were no real riders in the Spartan army of this date, but the title was an interesting survival. Cp. 1. 67, a passage which suggests that the corps of Hippēis at Sparta was partially recruited every year, the thirty seniors perhaps taking their discharge (and furnishing the five Ἀγαθοεργοί), while thirty juniors would be admitted to the corps, the whole being thus normally renewable every decade. But provision must, of course, have been made for occasional vacancies.

14. μῦνον δὴ τοῦτον π. ἀνθ. τ. ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν: cp. Athenian orator ap. Thuc. 1. 74. 1 καὶ αὐτὸν διὰ τοῦτο ἡμεῖς ἐτιμήσατε μάλιστα δὴ ἀνδρὰ ξένον τῶν ὡς ἡμᾶς ἐλθόντων. On the Herodotean formula cp. c. 105 supra. The asyndeton is observable; cp. 9. 35 μῦνοι δὲ δὴ πάντων κτλ.

125. 1. ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας seems to assume that the Athenians had reoccupied the city; cp. c. 109 supra.

2. Τιμόδημος Ἀφιδναῖος: on the deme of Aphidnai cp. 9. 73 infra. Pindar composed an Ode (Nem. 2) for the victory of Timodemos, son of Timonooos, of Acharnai, in the Pankration, about Ol. 75, a man, too, with a Salaminian connexion (op. c. 20), but the only apparent glory of the Aphidnian was that he belonged to the well-defined group of τῶν ἐχθρῶν τῶν Θεμιστοκλέος. The anecdote is transferred by Plato Rep. 329, followed by Plutarch Thest. 18, to an anonymous Seriphian: had the aristocratic tradition in Athens grown sensitive of the fame of Timodemos?

3. ἄλλως, in its simplest meaning.

τῶν ἐπιφανέων: the word appears used in a party sense in [Aristot.] Ἀθ. πολ. 28 τῶν μὲν ἐπιφανῶν προιστῆται Νεκίας, but in an entirely unpolitical sense in Thuc. 2. 43. 3 (ἀνδρῶν γὰρ ἐπιφανῶν πᾶσα γῆ τάφος). The meaning here is between the two; cp. 2. 89, 172.

4. φθόνῳ here appears in its proper place as the characteristic Republican vice; cp. c. 124 supra. The man here is mad with it. καταμαργέων: cp. 6. 75 (ἐπέλαβε μανίη νοῦσος ἔντα καὶ πρότερον ὑπομαργότερον of Kleomenes).

5. προφέρων: obiciens, exprobrans; cp. c. 61 supra. The participles καταμαργέων and προφέρων are piled on without copula (Asyndeta).

τὰ γέρεα: to wit, the Olive-wreath, the Chariot, the Encomium, and the Escort, enumerated in the previous chapter.

ἀν ἐγὼ ἐὼν Βελβινίτης ἐτιμήθην οὕτω πρὸς Σπαρτιητέων, οὐτ' ἀν σὺ ὠνθρωπε ἐὼν Ἀθηναῖος." ταῦτα μὲν νυν ἐς τοσοῦτο ἐγένετο,

10

Ἀρτάβαζος δὲ ὁ Φαρνάκειος ἀνὴρ ἐν Πέρσῃσι λόγιμος 126 καὶ πρόσθε ἐὼν, ἐκ δὲ τῶν Πλαταικῶν καὶ μᾶλλον ἔτι γενόμενος, ἔχων ἑξ μυριάδας στρατοῦ τοῦ Μαρδόνιος ἐξελέξατο, προέπεμπε βασιλεῖα μέχρι τοῦ πόρου. ὥς δὲ ὁ μὲν ἦν ἐν τῇ

8 καὶ ἐὼν Valla (etiam si) || πρὸς Α<sup>1</sup> || οὔτε σὺ B 9 νυν om. αC ||
τοσοῦτον Bz 126. 2 πρόσθεν Bz || γενησόμενος? van H. 3
τοῦ: ὄν z 4 βασιλῆα z || ἦν om. αC

8. ἐὼν Βελβινίτης . . ἐὼν Ἀθηναῖος. The Βελβίνα here referred to is no doubt the small island of that name (Strabo 375, 398), identified with St. George (San Giorgio d' Arbore) about 12 m. due S. of Sunion. It appears once on the Athenian tribute-lists (C.I.A. 37, i.e. τὰς φέρον of 425 B.C.) with an assessment of 300 drachmai: perhaps a gross imposition. The first ἐὼν is obviously hypothetical: why not the second too? In which case the retort of Themistokles has the added sting of insinuating ξενία against this ἀνθρωπος.

9. ἐς τοσοῦτο, 'no further'; cp. 5. 50.

126. 1. Ἀρτάβαζος δὲ ὁ Φαρνάκειος has been already mentioned, 7. 66, as commander (ἄρχων) of the Parthians and Chorasmians. He has not been mentioned above, in the story of the return of Xerxes (cc. 115-17), where his presence is urgently called for. The omission points to the mutual independence of the various sources employed by Hdt., and also to his failure to fuse them into a consistent whole; cp. Introduction, § 10. The story here told of Artabazos reduces even the comparatively unexaggerated record of the 'flight' of Xerxes given by Hdt. above to an absurdity. Stein remarks that Hdt. speaks with such transparent good-will and such special knowledge of Artabazos that we may infer personal relations between the historian and the man's family, or even the man himself. Artabazos became satrap of Daskyleion in 476 B.C. in order to further the treason of Pausanias, Thuc. 1. 129. 1. Pharnakes, son of Pharnabazos (Thuc. 2. 67. 1), plainly a near relative, is found there 431-414 B.C., and was in turn succeeded by his own son, Pharnabazos, 413-388 B.C. (Thuc. 8. 6. 1). An Artabazos appears again in possession of the same satrapy (360-53 B.C.); cp. Krumbholz, de Asiae min. Satrapis (1883), p. 73. Stein regards Tritantaichmes, son of 'Artabazos,' the satrap of Babylon (1. 192), as another of his sons (but cp. notes to 7. 82, 121 supra), and apparently thinks that Hdt. found him as satrap in Babylon. (But Hdt.'s visit to Babylon has still to be proved.) Cp. further, 9. 89.

2. ἐκ δὲ τῶν Πλαταικῶν καὶ μᾶλλον ἔτι γενόμενος: a clear anticipation of the story in Bk. 9. 41, etc. The participle, γενόμενος, is used from the writer's point of view, and date. Hdt. throughout treats the main events as notorious; but in the πρόσθε ἐὼν just before the reference is to the date of the events in the narrative, and might lead us to expect γενησόμενος. How τὰ Πλαταικά could redound to the credit of Artabazos is not obvious in the narrative of those events, even with this praeiudicium to guide us.

3. ἔχων ἑξ μυριάδας στρατοῦ τοῦ Μ. ἐξελέξατο: that would be, strictly speaking, one-fifth of the army of Mardonios. He presumably had some cavalry—say, one myriad: that would give him five myriads of infantry. If the army of Mardonios (Xerxes?) numbered all told nominally 300,000, it may have been composed of five divisions, each comprising 50,000 infantry and 10,000 cavalry—Artabazos being the commander of one of these divisions. In Bk. 9, indeed, Artabazos appears as almost of co-ordinate authority with Mardonios. If that was the true state of the case, their total forces combined may but have amounted to 120,000 men (nominal). Cp. further, Appendix II. § 5.

4. τοῦ πόρου: cp. c. 115 supra. The story, of course, conflicts directly with both the stories previously told and discussed (cc. 115-17, 118-20), and is more moderate than either.

5 Ἀσίην, ὃ δὲ ὀπίσω πορευόμενος κατὰ τὴν Παλλήνην ἐγένετο, ἄτε Μαρδονίου τε χειμερίζοντος περὶ Θεσσαλὴν τε καὶ Μακεδονίην καὶ οὐδέν κω κατεπείγοντος ἦκειν ἐς τὸ ἄλλο στρατόπεδον, οὐκ ἐδικαίου ἐντυχὼν ἀπεστεῶσι Ποτειδαίητῃσι μὴ οὐκ ἐξανδραποδίσασθαι σφέας. οἱ γὰρ Ποτειδαίηται, ὥς βασιλεὺς
10 παρεξεληλάκεε καὶ ὁ ναυτικὸς τοῖσι Πέρσησι οἰχώκεε φεύγων ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος, ἐκ τοῦ φανεροῦ ἀπέστασαν ἀπὸ τῶν βαρβάρων.
127 ὥς δὲ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι οἱ τὴν Παλλήνην ἔχοντες. ἐνθαῦτα δὴ Ἀρτάβαζος ἐπολιόρκεε τὴν Ποτείδαϊαν. ὑποπτεύσας δὲ καὶ τοὺς Ὀλυνθίους ἀπίσταςθαι ἀπὸ βασιλέως, καὶ ταύτην ἐπο-

5 ἐγένετο z 8 Ποτειδαίητῃσι van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: Ποτιδαίητῃσι Stein<sup>1,2</sup>, Holder (et sic passim) 11 ἐκ τῆς Σαλαμῖνος z, van H. || ἀπέστησαν C 12 ὥς ABRz: (ὥς van H.) || ὅλλοι B: ὅλλοι Holder, van H. 127. 2 ὁ Ἀρτάβαζος C || Ποτείδαϊαν van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ποτιδαίαν a, Stein<sup>1,2</sup>, Holder: ποτιδαίην Bz 3 βασιλῆος z

5. ὀπίσω πορευόμενος κατὰ τὴν Παλλήνην ἐγένετο. Artabazos apparently experiences no difficulty in marching backwards and forwards in Macedonia and Thrace. Is it possible after all that Artabazos did not escort the king to the Hellespont, but simply went from Thessaly to operate against Poteidaia? Or is it even possible that he had been safeguarding the king's route all along, and never was south of Thessaly until he joined Mardonios in the spring of 479 B.C.? On Pallene cp. 7. 123 supra.

6. χειμερίζοντος: cp. c. 113 supra; by this time it was winter. Mardonios' men were partly in Μακεδονίῃ.

7. καὶ οὐδέν κω κατεπείγοντος ἦκειν, 'Mardonios was not yet pressing his coming . . .' i.e. that Artabazos should join him. κατεπείγειν is an ἀπαξ λεγόμενον in Hdt. ἐπείγειν is frequent (e.g. c. 68 supra, his).

8. οὐκ ἐδικαίου . . μὴ οὐκ ἐξανδραποδίσασθαι σφέας: a true instance of the idiomatic double negative μὴ οὐ: cp. c. 119 supra.

10. παρεξεληλάκεε . . οἰχώκεε: both verbs are strict temporal pluperfects; but the acts were neither synchronous, nor are they mentioned in the historical order—unless, indeed, the fleet was accompanying the king on his way back (as the apocryphal story in c. 118 supra might be held to imply).

12. ὥς δὲ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι . . ἔχοντες. The revolt of all the towns on Pallene appears as a direct result of the battle of Salamis. As they were the first to disown the Persian yoke, so were they probably among the first to enter the Delian League (cp. Thuc. 5. 18. 5). The proximity of Makedon, and its relations with the Persian, were calculated to stimulate their Hellenic sympathies. The complete absence of any reference in the story of the siege of Poteidaia in 480-79 B.C. which follows, to the siege of Poteidaia in 432 B.C. and the following years (Thucyd. i. 58, etc.), is observable, and makes against the theory that Hdt. was composing these Books for the first time about the time of the outbreak of the Peloponnesian war. This story may well belong to the first draft of the work, and he has not inserted into this context any late reference; the latest hint of the final revision of these Books occurs above in 7. 137. Perhaps Hdt. was not aware of the fall of Poteidaia in the winter of 430-29 B.C., Thuc. 2. 70, though he can hardly have been ignorant of the Athenian blockade, and may have avoided express reference to its prolongation out of respect for Athenian susceptibilities. But the argumentum a silentio does not carry us very far; cp. Introduction, § 7.

127. 3. τοὺς Ὀλυνθίους . . καὶ ταύτην: sc. τὴν Ὀλυνθον. Cp. c. 121 supra for the reverse process. On Olynthos cp. 7. 122. For the Βοττιαῖοι cp. 7. 123, Θ. κόλπου 7. 121.

ἀπίσταςθαι: imperfect.

λιόρκεε· εἶχον δὲ αὐτὴν Βοττιαῖοι ἐκ τοῦ Θερμαίου κόλπου ἐξαναστάντες ὑπὸ Μακεδόνων. ἐπεὶ δὲ σφέας εἶλε πολιορκέων, 5 κατέσφαξε ἐξαγαγὼν ἐς λίμνην, τὴν δὲ πόλιν παραδίδοι Κριτοβούλῳ Τορωναίῳ ἐπιτροπεύειν καὶ τῷ Χαλκιδικῷ γένει, καὶ οὕτω Ὀλυνθον Χαλκιδέες ἔσχον. ἐξελὼν δὲ ταύτην ὁ 128
 Ἀρτάβαζος τῇ Ποτειδαίῃ ἐντεταμένως προσεῖχε· προσέχοντι
 δὲ οἱ προθύμως συντίθεται προδοσίην Τιμόξεινος ὁ τῶν Σκιωναίων στρατηγός, ὅντινα μὲν τρόπον ἀρχήν, ἔγωγε οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν (οὐ γὰρ ὦν λέγεται), τέλος μέντοι τοιάδε ἐγίνετο· 5
 ὅκως βυβλίον γράφει ἡ Τιμόξεινος ἐθέλων παρὰ Ἀρτάβαζον πέμψαι ἢ Ἀρτάβαζος παρὰ Τιμόξεινον, τοξεύματος παρὰ τὰς

4 οἱ ἐκ Bz, Holder 7 Τορωναίῳ om. aC || ἐπιτροπεύειν aC
 128. 3 συνετίθετο z || τιμόξενος B 4 τρόπων Apr. 5 εἶπαι z, van H. 6 βιβλίον Pz || γράψοιεν S (Gaisf.) || τιμόξενος θέλων B
 7 τιμόξενον B || παρὰ: περι Valckenaer, Gaisford, ex Aenea tact. 31

5. ἐξαναστάντες ὑπὸ Μακεδόνων, 'driven out by the Makedonians,' or 'retired before the M.' ὀπό with the neuter, or intrans. verb, cps. with θυήσκειν, ἐκπέσειν, etc.

6. κατέσφαξε . . ἐς λίμνην: he apparently butchered the inhabitants (Bottiaians) and threw their bodies into the lake, prob. the Bolyca Lagoon, a little E. of the city, Leake, N. Gr. iii. 155 (ἡ Βολυκὴ λίμνη, Athenaeus). The commentators, however, generally take ἐς λίμνην merely with ἐξαγαγὼν: if Hdt. had intended that, would he not have placed the words differently? The Persians worshipped rivers, running water, 1. 138.

παραδίδοι . . ἐπιτροπεύειν: the first verb is in the historic present—the rather, perhaps, as the result is permanent, and obtains at the time of writing; the second is exegetical, and refers only to the position of Kritoboulos.

7. Κριτοβούλῳ Τορωναίῳ . . καὶ τῷ Χαλκιδικῷ γένει. Nothing more seems known of this Kritoboulos: the name is a common one (cp. 2. 181). Torone (cp. 7. 122) was presumably a colony from Chalkis. The Bottiaioi were not exterminated by this massacre at Olynthos, as they appear in Thucydides again and again, e.g. 1. 58. The great Chalkidic synoikism of Olynthos took place in 432 B.C., Thuc. l.c. To it there seems no reference made by Hdt. Olynthos thus appears to have passed through at least three stages of development before the Peloponnesian war: (i.) primitive settlement; (ii.) Bottiaian; (iii.) Chalkidic, in two degrees; in each of which the Chalkidic 'race' is the protégé of the foreigner, Persian, Makedonian.

128. 2. ἐντεταμένως προσεῖχε: sc. τὸν νοῦν: the adv. from the pass. part. perf. is observable, cp. 7. 53 supra. προθύμως just below reproduces the sense.

3. Τιμόξεινος ὁ τῶν Σκιωναίων στρατηγός. The name (Timoxenos) is common, but this Skionaian is only mentioned again by Polyainos, 7. 33. 1, in reproducing this very anecdote. On Skione cp. 7. 123 supra. The towns on Pallene had not merely all revolted (c. 126 supra ad f.) but were all in alliance; cp. infra παρὴν δὲ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Παλληναίων συμμαχίᾳ.

4. ἀρχήν . . τέλος: both words are adverbial; ab initio . . ad extremum. The correspondence of μέν and μέντοι is en regle; cp. Madvig § 254.

ἔγωγε οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν (οὐ γὰρ ὦν λέγεται): both statements are genuine Herodotus, he never deliberately invents; but neither implies that he had made inquiries in loco: his source might be literary.

6. ὅκως . . γράφει, opt. of indefinite frequency; cp. c. 52 supra. It is not likely that any of these interesting documents were preserved, much less that Hdt. had seen them.

7. τοξεύματος παρὰ τὰς γλυφίδας: τόξευμα of the arrow itself, as in 4. 132 (τῶνδε τῶν τοξευμάτων = διστοῦς πέντε c. 131). The γλυφίδες have been variously interpreted: (i.) of 'the notched end of γλυφίδας περιελίξαντες καὶ πτερώσαντες τὸ βυβλίον ἐτόξευον

 ἐς συγκείμενον χωρίον. ἐπαίστος δὲ ἐγένετο ὁ Τιμόξεινος 10 προδιδούς τὴν Ποτειδαίαν· τοξεύων γὰρ ὁ Ἀρτάβαζος ἐς τὸ συγκείμενον, ἀμαρτὼν τοῦ χωρίου τούτου βάλλει ἀνδρὸς Ποτειδαίητεω τὸν ὦμον, τὸν δὲ βληθέντα περιέδραμε ὄμιλος, οἳα φιλεῖ γίνεσθαι ἐν πολέμῳ, οἱ αὐτίκα τὸ τόξευμα λαβόντες
 ὡς ἔμαθον τὸ βυβλίον, ἔφερον ἐπὶ τοὺς στρατηγούς· παρῇν 15 δὲ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Παλληναίων συμμαχίῃ. τοῖσι δὲ στρατηγοῖσι ἐπιλεξαμένοισι τὸ βυβλίον καὶ μαθοῦσι τὸν αἴτιον τῆς προδοσίης ἔδοξε μὴ καταπλῆξαι Τιμόξεινον προδοσίῃ τῆς Σκιωναίων πόλιος εἵνεκα, μὴ νομιζοίατο εἶναι Σκιωναῖοι ἐς 129 τὸν μετέπειτα χρόνον αἰεὶ προδόται. ὁ μὲν δὴ τοιοῦτῳ τρόπῳ ἐπαίστος ἐγεγόνει· Ἀρταβάζῳ δὲ ἐπειδὴ πολιορκέοντι ἐνεγε-

8 γλαφίδας R || βιβλίον Pz 9 ἐγένετο αC || τιμόξενος B 10
 Ποτειδαίαν van H., Stein<sup>8</sup> || ὁ om. B 12 Ποτειδαίητεω van H., Stein<sup>8</sup>
 14 βιβλίον Pz || παρῆσαν A (=M), Gronovius 15 συμμαχίῃ B
 16 βιβλίον Pz || μαθοῦσα R || τὸ αἴτιον S (Gaisf.), Marc. 17 κατα-
 πλέξαι τιμόξενον B 129. 2 ἐγένετο Pz

an arrow-shaft," i.e. notched for the bow-string (but why, then, the plural? idiomatic, perhaps: besides, you would make the notch with two cuts). (ii.) Stein understands notches (Kerben) cut in the arrow for the first and second fingers to draw; but such notches are superfluous. (iii.) Schweighaeuser suggests four notches, or slits for the insertion of the feathers: four is too many (Eurip. Orest. 273 f. is not conclusive: οὐχ ὁρᾶθ' ἐκμηδύλων Τόξων πτερωτὰς γλυφίδας ἐξορμωμένας; much less Od. 21. 419): L. & S. seem to approve. (iv.) Blakesley boldly understands 'barbs,' rather topsy-turvy; it is clearly the upper end of the arrow that is referred to, and γλυφίδες could scarcely mean the (notched) barb: arrows were not always barbed, and barbs were not always notched.

13. οἳα φιλεῖ γίνεσθαι ἐν πολέμῳ. Had Hdt. seen any fighting, or is this graphic touch from his literary source? ὄμιλος . . . οἱ is κατὰ σύνεσιν.

14. ἔμαθον, 'perceived'—they did not all, or any, read it. (Cp. ἐπιλεξαμένοισι below.)

τοὺς στρατηγούς: of the Potēdaiai? or of the allies generally? In the latter case Timoxenos himself would have been included. If by reading the document they were able to detect the traitor, it must have been written in Greek and addressed to him (Ἀρτάβαζος Τιμοξένῳ): a gratuitous imprudence.

15. συμμαχίη = σύμμαχοι, abstract for concrete. The list would comprise Aphytis, Neapolis, Aige, Therambos, Skione, Mende, Sane; cp. 7. 123 supra.

17. ἔδοξε μὴ καταπλῆξαι T. προδοσίῃ: a formal resolution of the Council of War: προδοσίῃ proditione, i.e. proditionis crimine; καταπλῆξαι, if it is to stand (cp. App. Crit.), 'to dumb-founder.' καταπλέξαι would be 'to involve,' entwine; but the meaning, c. 83 supra, is not parallel.

τῆς Σκιωναίων πόλιος εἵνεκα: a strange degree of consideration! Timoxenos must have been all-powerful in Skione, and Skione in the peninsula. In 423 B.C. Skione revolted from Athens, after the conclusion of the Twelve-months' Truce (Thuc. 4. 120), for which revolt it afterwards dearly paid (Thuc. 5. 32. 1); but there appears to be no reference whatever in Hdt. to those later events.

129. 2. ἐγεγόνει . . . ἐνεγένεσαν: the tense does not seem of much importance in either case, but has its full temporal value at least in the second; the 'unconscious iteration,' duplicated by γίνεσθαι and γενόμενον, all within four lines, marks a certain poverty of style. The three months' siege of Potēdaia will have filled the winter of 480-79 B.C.

γόνεσαν τρεῖς μῆνες, γίνεται ἄμπωτις τῆς θαλάσσης μεγάλη
καὶ χρόνον ἐπὶ πολλόν. ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ βάρβαροι τέναγος γενόμενον παρήσαν ἐς τὴν Παλλήνην. ὥς δὲ τὰς δύο μὲν <sup>5</sup> μοίρας διδοιοπορήκεσαν, ἔτι δὲ τρεῖς ὑπόλοιποι ἦσαν, τὰς διελθόντας χρῆν εἶναι ἔσω ἐν τῇ Παλλήνῃ, ἐπῆλθε πλημμυρὶς τῆς θαλάσσης μεγάλη, ὅση οὐδαμὰ κω, ὥς οἱ ἐπιχώριοι λέγουσι, πολλάκις γινομένη. οἱ μὲν δὴ νέειν αὐτῶν οὐκ ἐπιστάμενοι διεφθέροντο, τοὺς δὲ ἐπισταμένους οἱ Ποτειδαιῆται <sup>10</sup> ἐπιπλώσαντες πλοίοισι ἀπώλεσαν. αἴτιον δὲ λέγουσι Ποτειδαιῆται τῆς τε ῥηχίης [καὶ τῆς πλημμυρίδος] καὶ τοῦ Περσικοῦ πάθεος γενέσθαι τόδε, ὅτι τοῦ Ποσειδέωνος ἐς τὸν νηὸν καὶ τὸ ἄγαλμα τὸ ἐν τῷ προαστείῳ ἡσέβησαν οὗτοι τῶν Περσέων οἱ περ καὶ διεφθάρησαν ὑπὸ τῆς θαλάσσης· αἴτιον δὲ τοῦτο <sup>15</sup>

5 παρήσαν codd.: παρίεσαν z || μὲν δύο B, Holder 6 διω-δοιοπορήκεσαν Pz || ἔσαν z 7 ἔσω εἶναι Bz, Holder 8 ὅσην B ||
ὥς om. S 9 γενομένης RS: (γινομένης V): γενομένη z || αὐτῶν z
10 δ' α, van H. || οἱ om. BPz, Holder, van H. || Ποτειδαιῆται (bis) van H., Stein<sup>2</sup>: ποτιδαιῆται (ποτιδεῖται V) 12 καὶ τῆς πλημμυρίδος del.
Valckenaer, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. 13 ἐς post ὅτι B || νεὸν B
14 τὸ ἐν τῷ προαστείῳ om. B || ἐσέβησαν AB 15 τοῖπερ z

3. ἄμπωτις, 'ebb,' cp. 7. 198 supra. The words χρόνον ἐπὶ πολλόν are vague; it is impossible to say whether Hdt. means a matter of hours, or of days.

5. τὰς δύο μὲν κτλ., a curious particularity: at any rate, they had not got quite half-way. ὑπόλοιποι, cp. 7. 171 and ὑπολειφθέντες c. 67 supra.

7. πλημμυρίς, 'flood,' flood-tide: the reverse of ἀμπωτις just above; this was the largest on record, or in memory. The reference, however, in πολλάκις γινομένη cannot be to normal tidal phenomena such as he has recorded in 7. 198. This passage and that, from different sources, are apparently written without reference to each other. But Hdt. can hardly be taken in this passage to be referring to the great tidal disturbances recorded in Thuc. 3. 89. 2 ff. for the summer of 426 B.C. He has not been working at his composition so late as that; cp. Introduction, § 9.

8. ὥς οἱ ἐπιχώριοι λέγουσι: the authority (not necessary in voce) is adduced for a statement which Hdt. merely gives 'for what it is worth'; so, too, just below, αἴτιον δὲ λέγουσι Ποτειδαιῆται. These citations of sources do not, and are not intended to, guarantee the statements, much less to show that Hdt. has cross-questioned the natives. Cp. Introduction, § 10. αἴτιον is used here in a less physical sense than in 7. 125 supra.

12. ῥηχίης is plainly identical with πλημμυρίδος (cp. 2. 11, 7. 198).

15. αἴτιον δὲ τοῦτο λέγοντες εἰ λέγειν ἔμοιγε δοκέουσι. If just the very 'Persians' (were they all Persians?), neither more nor fewer, who perished, had been guilty of the sacrilege in the temple of Poseidon, the coincidence would, indeed, have been remarkable: but was not the guilt to some extent inferred from the doom, on the well-established canon which condemned the Galileans on whom the tower in Siloam fell as sinners above all Galileans? Hdt. is less of a critic in this passage than in his rationale of Poseidonian action at Tempe, 7. 129 supra. Perhaps the direct intervention of the deity was more intelligible to him, in a case of human ἀσέβεια, than in the case of a natural object. Hdt. does not indeed here actually specify the personal action of the outraged god; but he must be supposed to have taken it for self-evident, between the ἀσέβεια and the ῥηχίη. Poteidaia is, of course, a city of Poseidon: Poseidon Hippios appears on its coinage, λέγοντες εὖ λέγειν ἔμοιγε δοκέουσι. τοὺς δὲ περιγενομένους ἀπῆγε Ἀρτάβαζος ἐς Θεσσαλίην παρὰ Μαρδόνιον. οὗτοι μὲν οἱ προπέμψαντες βασιλέα οὕτω ἔπρηξαν,

- 130 Ὁ δὲ ναυτικός ὁ Ξέρξεω περιγενομένος ὡς προσέμειξε τῇ Ἀσίῃ φεύγων ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος καὶ βασιλέα τε καὶ τὴν στρατιὴν ἐκ Χερσονήσου διεπórθμευσεν ἐς Ἀβυδὸν, ἐχειμέριζε ἐν Κύμῃ. ἔαρος δὲ ἐπιλάμψαντος πρώιος συνελέγετο ἐς Σάμον· αἱ δὲ τῶν νεῶν καὶ ἐχειμέρισαν αὐτοῦ· Περσέων δὲ καὶ Μήδων οἱ πλεῖνες ἐπεβάτευον. στρατηγοὶ δὲ σφί ἐπῆλθον Μαρδόντης and Head (Hist. Num. p. 188) regards the type of the tetradrachm as "doubtless suggested by the sacred image of Poseidon, which Herodotus mentions as standing in front of the city, ἐν τῷ προστείῳ." The city itself appears to have been situate astride the isthmus, fortified north and south by two parallel walls, and protected east and west by the sea. The object of the Persians was to enter the city round the sea end of the wall (just as Aristeus did in 432 B.C., Thuc. 1. 53). Stein's idea that Poteidaia was not fortified on the S. side appears to arise from a misinterpretation of the words in Thuc. 1. 54. 2 τὸ δ' ἐς τὴν Παλλήνην ἀτείχιστον ἦν, which refer to the absence of Athenian siege-works on the south side. As a matter of fact the Athenians had demanded the dismantling of the south wall, τὸ ἐς Παλλήνην τεῖχος Thuc. 1. 54. 2, a demand compliance with which would have placed the town at the mercy of the sea-power.

16 ἐμοὶ S 18 βασιλῆα z || οὕτω ἔπρηξαν om. α 130. 1 ναυτικός στρατὸς z || ὁ περιγενομένος Krueger, van H.: στρατὸς ὁ περιγενομένος Stourac, cf. Bursian J.b. 86. 54 || προσέμειξε van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: προσέμειξε 2 βασιλῆα z || τε om. B 3 χερρονήσου B: χερωννήσου C || διεπórθμευσεν B || ἐχειμέρισε Pz 4 δ' α, van H. || πρώτων B 5 νηῶν Bz 6 καὶ στρατηγοὶ S || δὲ ἐπῆλθον σφί C || μαρδόντης Marc.

16. τοὺς περιγενομένους: he has 40,000 men in 9. 66 infra against 60,000 in c. 126 supra.

130. 1. ὁ δὲ ναυτικός ὁ Ξέρξεω: the narrative shifts to the Persian navy, cp. c. 117 supra. στρατὸς is omitted, cp. next c. l. 3. The article is repeated as in 7. 196, and often; contr. 7. 124 etc.

3. ἐχειμέριζε ἐν Κύμῃ. On Kyme cp. 7. 194 supra. The position was well chosen, in relation to Sardes, to the northern portion of Ionia and Aiolis, and to the Hellespont. It appears, however, immediately that some of the vessels had wintered at Samos: had these not been to the Hellespont, after Salamis! It is remarkable that Samos, not Kyme, is the rendezvous in the spring. χειμέριζεν, cp. c. 113 supra. ἐπιλάμψαντος = ἀρχομένου, a metaphor from the day transferred to the year (Sitzler). πρώιος keeps up the metaphor (Stein). αὐτοῦ, the adv. of place, 'on the spot.'

5. Περσέων δὲ καὶ Μήδων οἱ πλεῖνες ἐπεβάτευον. The literal meaning of these words is: 'Of Persians and Medes the majority were Epibatai.' Not absolutely, of course, but in relation to the Strategoi. This appears to give a very poor antithesis. 'Of Persians and Medes, serving on the fleet, very few were other than Epibatai.' But perhaps Hdt. meant to say that on the fleet the majority of Epibatai were Medes and Persians: 'the majority of those serving as Epibatai were of Persians and Medes,' οἱ πλεῖνες being the predicate: the genitive remains problematic. He can hardly mean that the majority of the Medo-Persian Epibatai originally mentioned (7. 96) were still serving on board: the allusion would be far-fetched. In any case the expression is wanting in style and lucidity.

6. στρατηγοὶ δὲ. There are three new admirals, or commanders, for a fleet of 300; but it appears afterwards that one of the three (Mardontes) is in command of the Epibatai, and the other two in command of the fleet; cp. 9. 102.

τε ὁ Βαγαίου καὶ Ἀρταύτης ὁ Ἀρταχάειω· συνήρχε δὲ
τούτοις καὶ ἀδελφιδέος αὐτοῦ Ἀρταύτεω προσελομένου Ἰθαμίτῃς. ἄτε δὲ μεγάλως πληγέντες, οὐ προήσαν ἀνωτέρω τὸ πρὸς ἐσπέρας, οὐδ' ἐπηνάγκαζε οὐδεὶς, ἀλλ' ἐν τῇ Σάμῳ<sup>10</sup> κατήμενοι ἐφύλασσον τὴν Ἰωνίην μὴ ἀποστῇ, νέας ἔχοντες
σὺν τῇσι Ἰάσι τριηκοσίας. οὐ μὲν οὐδὲ προσεδέκοντο τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἐλεύσεσθαι ἐς τὴν Ἰωνίην ἀλλ' ἀποχρήσειν σφί τὴν ἐωντῶν φυλάσσειν, σταθμεύμενοι ὅτι σφέας οὐκ ἐπεδίωξαν φεύγοντας ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος ἀλλ' ἄσμενοι ἀπαλλάσσοντο. κατὰ<sup>15</sup>
μὲν νυν τὴν θάλασσαν ἐσσωμένοι ἦσαν τῷ θυμῷ, πεζῇ δὲ

7 ἀρταβύτης ibid.: ἀρταύτης C || Ἀρταχάειω Stein, van H.: ἀρταχάειον 8 τοῖσδε αC, Stein<sup>1</sup> || ἀρταύτεω B: ἀρταύτεω C: ἀρταβύτεω Marc. || προσελομένου B 9 Ἰθαμίτῃς Wesseling: ὁ ἀμίτηρ R:
ὁ ἀμίτῃς ceteri || προήσαν α: προήσαν BP: προσήσαν C: προίεσαν z ||
ἀνωτέρω αP 10 τὸ: τὰ BPz || οὐδὲ εἰς B, Holder ('forsan recte' van H.) 11 νῆας Bz 12 μὴν αC, Holder 13 προσελεύσεσθαι z:
πλείεσθαι? Stein<sup>2</sup> || τὴν om. B 14 ὅτι σφέας A 15 φεύγοντες C 16 ἐσσωμένοι ἦσαν z

Μαρδόντης τε ὁ Βαγαίου has appeared already as ἀρχὼν τῶν νησιωτῶν τῶν ἐκ τῆς Ἐρυθρῆς θαλάσσης 7. 80 supra. He might know something of sea-faring, but, as a matter of fact, commands the men-at-arms; cp. previous note.

7. Ἀρταύτης ὁ Ἀρταχάειω: the Artachaias, no doubt, who was an Achaimenid giant, with a colossal voice, and had been one of the Commandants of the Canal (cp. 7. 22, 117). One Otaspes, brother of Artayntes, had apparently been ἀρχὼν of the Assyrians, 7. 63 supra.

9. Ἰθαμίτῃς was presumably son of the Otaspes just referred to. The ἀρχὼν of the Πάκτυες, however, was one Ἀρταύτης ὁ Ἰθαμίτρεω, 7. 67 supra.

μεγάλως πληγέντες: at Salamis; the expression need not be restricted to the Strategoi. ἀνωτέρω τὸ πρὸς ἐσπέρας seems to be used as an 'orientation' simply from the point of view of the narrative, or dramatis personae, and can hardly be cited as proof that Hdt. composed this part of his narrative in Asia.

10. ἐν τῇ Σάμῳ κατήμενοι ἐφύλασσον. Samos was probably the best basis of naval operations against an Ionia in revolt, as the Athenians discover in 412 B.C. But the Persians in 479 B.C. are in full possession of the Hinterland as well, and the prospect of a merely local revolt might well look almost hopeless.

* 12. οὐ μὲν οὐδέ, 'yet also not,' a double negative, the elements of which, simple and composite, do not cancel but confirm each other (Madvig § 209). The opinion here predicated of the Persians proved ill-founded, a strategic miscalculation; if entertained, it was based perhaps more on the presence of Mardonios in Greece than upon the non-pursuit of the previous year; but the conjecture put forward by Hdt. constitutes a justification of the project of Themistokles (c. 108 supra), and condemns pro tanto the failure of the Greeks to follow up their victory. The Persian reflexion takes no account of the pursuit as far as Andros.

14. σταθμεύμενοι: the form σταθμώμενος occurs 7. 237 supra; σταθμεύμενοι is found 2. 150. Are we to conclude that Hdt. used three different forms of one participle? Or that the mss. variants are responsible for the discrepancies? σταθμάομαι, σταθμέομαι, σταθμώομαι are all possible Ionica (cp. L. & S. sub v., and Weir Smyth § 688, p. 570).

15. ἀπαλλάσσοντο: middle (even the active is used intransitively).

16. ἐσσωμένοι ἦσαν: the imperfect final verb here is as important as the perfect participle for describing their condition, and the combination, so far from resulting in a plusquam perfectum, as a thing of the past, denotes an enduring state of things, or rather of ἔδόκεον πολλῷ κρατήσῃν τὸν Μαρδόνιον. ἔόντες δὲ ἐν Σάμῳ ἅμα μὲν ἐβουλευόντο εἴ τι δυναίητο κακὸν τοὺς πολεμίους ποιεῖν, ἅμα δὲ καὶ ὠτακούστων ὅκη πεσέεται τὰ Μαρδονίου 20 πρήγματα.

- 131 Τοὺς δὲ Ἕλληνας τό τε ἔαρ γινόμενον ἤγειρε καὶ Μαρδόνιος ἐν Θεσσαλίῃ ἑών. ὁ μὲν δὴ πεζὸς οὐκω συνελέγετο, ὁ δὲ ναυτικὸς ἀπρίκετο ἐς Αἴγιαν, νέες ἀριθμὸν δέκα καὶ ἑκατόν. στρατηγὸς δὲ καὶ ναύαρχος ἦν Λευτυχίδης ὁ
5 Μενάρως τοῦ Ἡγησίλεω τοῦ Ἴπποκρατίδεω τοῦ Λευτυχίδεω

17 πολλὸν B 18 ἐβουλευόντο B || δυνάτο Marc.: δύναιτο z
19 καὶ om. BSV || ὅκη A: ὅση C: ὅκη ceteri 131. 1 γινόμενον
BPz 2 ὅκου C 3 νῆες αβz 4 Λευτυχίδης A<sup>m</sup> (bis) 5
μενάρως C || ἡσίλεω B

feelings: no doubt in this case τῷ θυμῷ helps materially to establish the true aspect of the verb. They had no stomach for fighting at sea: at the same time they are described as planning at Samos how they may injure the enemy—a fruitless quest, if they were not prepared to move at sea. The hopes and attention concentrated on Mardonios suggest that the fleet was to be prepared to act, at least on the receipt of good news, and possibly upon the receipt of bad news. Though now far apart, the fortunes and acts of fleet and of army could not be matters of indifference, even strategically, one to the other. Hdt.'s motivations are seldom quite adequate or satisfactory; but in regard to the movements, and even the mind of the naval forces on the Persian side, he probably had access to Ionian sources, both narrative and critical, worth something. Cp. Introduction, § 10.

19. ὠτακούστων ὅκη πεσέεται: cp. παραδοκίοντες . . . τῇ πεσέεται 7. 168 supra. The substantive ὠτακουστής occurs in Aristot. Pol. 8. 11. 7=133 z of spies, 'eavesdroppers,' employed by Hieron: the verb is used by Xenophon and others.

131. 1. τό τε ἔαρ γινόμενον κτλ., 'the approach of spring, and the presence of Mardonios in Thessaly' (cp. c. 113 supra, 133 infra). ἤγειρε, excitabat: not yet sufficiently, however, to bring an army together; it was only the ships which were under way. Aigina is the port of rendezvous; the fleet is counted at 110; its composition and the provenience of the various contingents are left as matters of inference and conjecture, no less than the respective numbers of Ionian and other vessels in the Persian fleet at Samos, c. 130 supra.

4. στρατηγὸς δὲ καὶ ναύαρχος, 'commander-in-chief and navarch' (primarily a Spartan title?). Cp. cc. 2 (στρατηγός) and 42 (ναύαρχος). The investment of a king with the 'navarchy' is remarkable: barring Pausanias, the Regent, such a commission is unparalleled in the fifth century B.C. After the θῆρες of Pausanias (c. 3 supra) there is a long interval to the appointment of Agesilaos in 395-94 B.C., Xenoph. Hell. 3. 4. 27, and Agesilaos appointed a deputy.

Λευτυχίδης: Leotychidas here introduced with an immense flourish of trumpets is an old acquaintance, as the work now stands; cp. 6. 71 etc. However weak the argument from the patronymic, the two Herakleid pedigrees in these Books must be regarded as good evidence of the earlier composition of Bks. 7-9. It seems very unlikely that Hdt. would have reserved these pedigrees throughout his work for the sake of especially glorifying Leonidas and Leotychidas at the end, the latter of whom had little claim to any special honour. The pedigree of Leotychidas is interesting as proving the distinction between generations and reigns, owing to the especial circumstances of the succession in his case: one has to go back eight generations (inclusive) from Leotychidas to find the king (Theopompos, 13th from Herakles) whose eight ancestors are all kings of Sparta.

5. Μενάρως: Menares (6. 65, 71), the 20th from Herakles, belongs apparently to the same 'generation' as Demaratos

τοῦ Ἀναξίλειω τοῦ Ἀρχιδήμου τοῦ Ἀναξανδρίδew τοῦ Θεοπόμπου τοῦ Νικάνδρου τοῦ Χαρίλειω τοῦ Εὐνόμου τοῦ

7 Χαρίλειω Stein, Holder: χαρίλλου B, van H.: χαρίλου || τοῦ ἡρακλέως τοῦ εὐνόμου C

the son of Ariston, whose complete pedigree is recoverable from Pausanias, 3. 7, and the antecedent names in the two Eurypontid pedigrees run back in pairs, neck and neck, to Theopompos.

Ἡγησίλειω: this Hegesileos (Agesilas, Agesilaos) appears in 6. 65 supra as Agis, which may be regarded as the hypokoristic, or diminutive, but shows the independence of Hdt.'s sources, and how little he is at pains to harmonize them. This Agesilas is 19th from Herakles, and corresponds with Ariston in the pedigree of Damaratos (7. 3 supra, etc.).

Ἱπποκράτιδew. An Hippokratidas is credited in Plutarch (Mor. 222) with a couple of apophthegms, but as one is addressed to a satrap of Karia, its author can hardly be this man. Names compounded with ἵππο- are not common in Sparta, where ἵπποτροφία was comparatively rare; cp. c. 124 supra. Hippokratidas, as 18th from Herakles, ranges with Agesikles in the parallel pedigree.

Λευτυχίδew: Leotychidas ὁ πρῶτος is distinguished by Plutarch (Mor. 224) from Leotychidas son of Ariston (sic), and credited with four smart apophthegms (on Opportunism, Economics, Education, Sobriety). Leotychidas is 17th from Herakles, ranging with Archidamos I. (On the form of the name Λευ- = Λew- [Λα-?] cp. Weir Smyth, § 287, p. 254.)

6. Ἀναξίλειω. This Anaxilas, the 16th from Herakles (=Anaxidamos in the parallel line), may be the author of the apophthegm preserved in Plutarch Mor. 217 on the Ephoralty, and might just possibly be identified with the man who sat in judgement on the Atheno-Megarean question, Plutarch Solon 10. The name was not common at Sparta, and was never borne by a king; the Anaxilaos of Xenoph. Hell. 1. 3. 19 is Βοζάντιος καὶ οὐ Λακεδαιμόνιος.

Ἀρχιδήμου. Archidamos, the 15th from Herakles in the pedigree of Menares (=Zeuxidamos in the parallel list), bears a name which was not uncommon in the reigning house of Eurypontids (Prokleids), though never borne by an Agid (Eurysthenid) king.

Thus this grandson of Theopompos may have been named from his uncle (through whom the sceptre descended), and no less than five kings in all bore the name, of whom the best known was Hdt.'s contemporary, who succeeded Leotychidas.

Ἀναξανδρίδew: the name Anaxandridas is familiar as that of the (15th) Agid king, son of Leon, and father of Kleomenes, as of Dorieus, Leonidas, and Kleombrotos; cp. 7. 204 supra. This Anaxandridas, 14th in descent from Herakles, is not otherwise known to fame than as the founder of the cadet branch of the Eurypontids (Prokleids). His name corresponds with that of his brother Archidamos in the now elder branch of the House. This Archidamos was never king; Theopompos was succeeded by his grandson Zeuxidamos (Pausan. 3. 7. 5). It is rather odd that the Eurypontid (Prokleid) succession in the eighth century B.C. should thus anticipate, with so nice a difference, the succession in the fifth century B.C., when Zeuxidamos, son of Leotychidas, predeceased his father, leaving an Archidamos to succeed; cp. 6. 71 supra; the story preserved in Pausanias looks like fiction modelled on the facts of the fifth century. The Eurypontid line of kings would seem to be longer-lived, or longer-reigned, than the Agid, for Leotychidas is but the 16th king, and in the 16th generation, from Aristodamos, while Leonidas is the 18th king in the elder House; and this discrepancy is rather increased than diminished subsequently; but then the lists of kings, and even the genealogies, are not above suspicion. With Hdt. Leonidas and Leotychidas are in the same generation (21st) from Herakles.

7. Θεοπόμπου: on Hdt.'s own showing (see below) Theopompos is the 9th king of Sparta (Aristodamos included), and the 13th generation from Herakles included, corresponding to Teleklos in the pedigree of Leonidas, 7. 204 supra. This is the only passage in which the name of this king—of whom later writers have so much to tell us—occurs in the work of Hdt. A great external crisis, the 'first' Messenian war (Pausan. 4.

Πολυδέκτω τοῦ Πρυτανίους τοῦ Εὐρυφώντος τοῦ Προκλέους

8 Πολυδέκτω Valckenaer: πολυδέκτος || τοῦ πρυτανίους om. C || Εὐρυφώντος Valckenaer, van H., deinde <τοῦ Σόου>, sed vide comment. infra

4. 3), and a great internal development, the institution of the Ephors (Aristot. Pol. 8. 11. 2=1313 A), were dated to his reign. The story of the Messenian wars is virtually a lost chapter in Spartan history to Hdt. (cp. 3. 47, the sole articulate reference in the work): the Ephorality he expressly ascribes to Lykourgos, 1. 65. The importance of King Theopompos dates apparently from the Delphic researches of the (Agid) King Pausanias early in the fourth century B.C. Cp. Ed. Meyer, Forschungen, i. (1892) 211 ff.

Νικάνδρου: Nikandros is 8th king in Sparta and 12th descendant of Herakles (corresponding thereby to Archelaos in the pedigree of Leonidas, 7. 204 supra). The later writers have something to say of him: Plutarch Mor. 250 records three apophthegms (one of them addressed to an Athenian, and assuredly not earlier than the fifth century); Pausanias 2. 36. 5, 3. 7. 4 associates his name especially with the invasion of Argolis.

Χαρίλῳ: Charilaos is 7th king of Sparta, and 11th descendant of Herakles (corresponding thereby to Agesilaos in the pedigree of Leonidas, 7. 204 supra). The name appears in the Politics of Aristotle in two forms, Χάριλλος (2. 10. 2=1271 B) and Χαρίλαος (8. 12. 12=1316 A); and later tradition had something to say of him, making him out a 'tyrant,' yet also the nephew and ward of Lykourgos, and associated in his Reforms (Plutarch Lykourg. 5). This latter point is in direct conflict with Hdt. 1. 65, where Lykourgos appears associated with the elder House, two (or, as the Greeks would have said, three) generations earlier. Pausanias (2. 36. 5, 3. 7. 3, 4. 4. 3), who gives the father's name as Polydektes (not Eunomos), reversing the Herodotean order, represents Charillos as engaged in war especially with Argos and with Tegea (l.c.), and as taken prisoner by the Tegeatai (8. 5. 6) but liberated after swearing that the Lakedaemonians should never again invade Argolis, an oath soon broken (8. 48. 5). Hdt. can hardly have been acquainted with this story (obviously an Argive tale) when he wrote 1. 66.

Εὐνόμου: Eunomos is 6th king of Sparta and 10th descendant of Herakles, corresponding thereby with Doryssos in the pedigree of Leonidas, 7. 204 supra; his name is perhaps suspiciously significant, coming about the time of Lykourgos, and none the less so in view of the Εὐνομία of Tyrtaios (Aristot. Pol. 8. 7. 3=1306 B), and the fact that Lykourgos was made his son, in the fourth century theory (cp. Plutarch Lykourg. 2); but the name is not an uncommon one in the historical period (e.g. Xenoph. Hell. 5. 1. 5). More suspicious is the fact that the lists followed by Pausanias reversed the order of the names Eunomos and Polydektes, and that even Pausanias has nothing to tell us of Eunomos but that he was son of Prytanis, and that in his reign, and in his son's, 'the land had rest,' ἐν εἰρήνῃ διετέλεσεν οὖσα ἡ Σπάρτη (3. 7. 2). According to Plutarch (l.c. supra) he came to a violent end, being struck down with a cleaver, in the praiseworthy attempt to terminate a brawl.

8. Πολυδέκτω: Polydektes is the 5th king of Sparta and the 9th descendant of Herakles, corresponding thereby with Labotas in the pedigree of Leonidas, 7. 204 supra. Curiously enough, the name Polydektes is otherwise only associated with mythical characters, viz. (1) as an epithet of Hades, Hymn to Demeter, 9; (2) as king of Seriphos, son of Magnes, brother of Dictys, changed into a stone, Pindar, Pyth. 12. 24, Pausan. 1. 22. 7, Arrian, Anab. 3. 3. 1 etc.

Πρυτανίους: Prytanis is the 4th king in Sparta, and the 8th descendant of Herakles: corresponding thereby with Echestratos in the pedigree of Leonidas, 7. 204 supra. The name is of course significant, and as a magisterial title (though not apparently in actual use at Sparta) somewhat suspicious; but historical examples of its use as a proper name are forthcoming (the earliest, a Lykian, Iliad 5. 678, also a boxer from Kyzikos, Pausan. 5. 21. 3, and others). The statement of Pausan. 3.

τοῦ Ἀριστοδήμου τοῦ Ἀριστομάχου τοῦ Κλεοδαίου τοῦ
 "Τλλου τοῦ Ἡρακλέος, ἐὼν τῆς ἐτέρης οἰκῆς τῶν βασιλέων. 10
 οὗτοι πάντες, πλὴν τῶν ἐπτά τῶν μετὰ Λευτυχίδα πρώτων

11 ἐπτά Paulmier: δυνῶν (δυνῶν z: cum τῶν om. R)

7. 2 that the quarrel between Sparta and Argos began in his reign is worth very little, even if it be not contradicted by the next words, that the Spartans had previously made war on the Kynurians.

τοῦ Εὐρυπύωντος: the aspirate in the word is observable; the usual form is Εὐρυπῶν, for which the variant Εὐρυπίων (a more intelligible proper name) occurs, as in Plutarch Lykourg. 2 where Valckenaer's emendation Εὐρυπῶντα (and Εὐρυπωντίδας) is now accepted. (So too in Polyain. 2. 13.) This Eurypon is 3rd king in Sparta, and 7th descendant of Herakles, corresponding thereby with Agis, in the pedigree of Leonidas, 7. 204 supra. Pausanias (3. 7. 1) only tells us of him that he attained such glory that the House was called Eurypontidai after him, Προκλίδας ἐς ἐκείνων καλουμένους. Plutarch Lykourg. 2 gives as the reason, ὅτι δοκεῖ πρῶτος Εὐρυπῶν τὸ ἄγαν μοναρχικὸν (sic) ἀνεῖναι τῆς βασιλείας, δημαγωγῶν καὶ χαριζόμενος τοῖς πολλοῖς. That speculation might provoke further speculation: was it really Eurypon who established the 'younger' House, or obtained recognition for it, in the constitution of Sparta, the dual royalty only dating from his day? Polyainos (l.c. supra) has a strange story of the ruse by which Eurypon obtained possession of the city of Mantinea for the Lakedaimonians, a story which suffers under a double anachronism, in crediting Mantinea with a democracy, and the democracy with surrendering the city to Eurypon.

Stein<sup>2</sup> wished to insert τοῦ Σδου after Εὐρυπύωντος. This project was for the purpose of harmonizing Hdt. with Pausanias and with himself (1. 65, 67), as Stein<sup>3</sup> avers. But in reality it would have the effect of dislocating Hdt. himself, whose pedigrees of the two Houses correspond generation by generation, and king for king, as above shown. Hdt. is plainly of a different opinion to Pausanias, 3. 1. 7, in regard to the correspondences.

Πρόκλεος: the 2nd king in Sparta (reckoning Aristodemos), the 6th descendant of Herakles, the twin-brother of Eurysthenes, and the apparent, though not the nominal founder, not the Eponym, of the younger House; cp. previous note. With Prokles we pass on to ground already familiar, cp. 6. 52, 4. 147 supra. The legend of the twins is, of course, an aetiological fiction. Pausanias has nothing to add to the stories in Hdt., but Polyainos again (1. 10) opposes the 'Herakleid' Prokles to the 'Eurystheids' who were in possession of Sparta, and has him win a victory over them, thanks to his pipers. This sporadic tradition is perhaps the most suggestive, the most historic-looking fossil, in the legendary records of Sparta. The name Prokles is borne by many historical personages, cp. 3. 50 (an Epidaurian), Xenoph. Hell. 3. 1. 6 (cp. note to Hdt. 6. 70), 6. 5. 38 (a Phleisian) etc.

9. Ἀριστοδήμου: with this name the dual pedigree, and the dual royalty, cease; Aristodemos is monarch, in or out of Sparta, and 5th descendant of Herakles; cp. note to 7. 204 supra. It is possible that Aristodemos is a genuine ancestor in the pedigree of the 'younger,' the true Herakleid, and perhaps Dorian, House: the legend of the Twins has inserted him also as ancestor of the Agid, i.e. Eurysthenid or Eurystheid, House, which was already in possession, and with him his legendary ancestors Kleodaios, Hylllos, Herakles. On these names see further notes to 7. 204 supra; and on the still earlier and mythological stages of the pedigree, 6. 53 f.

10. τῆς ἐτέρης οἰκῆς τῶν βασιλέων: these words appear to contain an implicit reference back to the pedigree of the other House in 7. 204 supra. Such references imply the solidarity of these three Books.

11. πλὴν τῶν ἐπτά τῶν μετὰ Δ. πρώτων: ἐπτά is a certain emendation; cp. App. Crit. Hdt. might seem to have fallen into the vulgarism 'seven first' instead of 'first seven'; but πρώτων is to be taken predicatively with καταλεχθέντων. It is a material inaccuracy to reckon the heroes before Aristodemos as 'kings of Sparta,' unless indeed Hdt. means titular or pretendant; but he should not be charged with reckoning καταλεχθέντων, οἱ ἄλλοι βασιλείες ἐγένοντο Σπάρτης. Ἄθη-132 ναίων δὲ ἐστρατήγεε Ξάνθιππος ὁ Ἀρίφρονος. ὥς δὲ παρεγένοντο ἐς τὴν Αἴγιναν πᾶσαι αἱ νέες, ἀπίκοντο Ἴωνων ἄγγελοι ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον τῶν Ἑλλήνων, οἱ καὶ ἐς Σπάρτην ὀλίγω πρότερον τούτων ἀπικόμενοι ἐδέοντο Λακεδαιμονίω 5 ἐλευθεροῦν τὴν Ἰωνίην· τῶν καὶ Ἡρόδοτος ὁ Βασιλίδεω ἦν· οἱ στασιῶται σφίσι γενόμενοι ἐπεβούλευον θάνατον

 Στράττι τῷ Χίου τυράννῳ, ὄντες ἀρχὴν ἐπτά· ἐπιβουλευόντες

12 βασιλῆες z 132. 2 νῆες z 3 ἐς τὴν z 4 τούτων z
 6 στασιῶται C: στασιῶταί || σφίσι C: σφισι ad: σφι BPz 7 στάττι
 B: στράττι cum η lit. ult. superscr. C: στράντη Marc.

'Archidemos son of Theopompos,' who predeceased his father, among the βασιλείες Σπάρτης (Stein<sup>6</sup>). Hdt. nowhere even mentions him. Cp. note p. 561b supra.

13. Ξάνθιππος ὁ Ἀρίφρονος: the patronymic, though he has been mentioned 7. 33 supra, is not surprising, even if that passage be not of later insertion; cp. 6. 131, 136. Xanthippos was one of the returned exiles, cp. c. 79 supra, and may, like Aristides, have already been elected one of the Strategoi for 480-79 B.C.

132. 2. Αἴγιναν: a relatively advanced post, which would have left Salamis exposed, if all the Greek ships had been taken so far; we may reasonably doubt whether Salamis was thus exposed during the reoccupation of Attica. 110 ships would not account even for the Athenian fleet.

Ἴωνων ἄγγελοι=πρέσβεις Ἴ. (cp. 7. 1 supra): six in number; see below. The genitive is observable; they were apparently all Chians, but they act in the general interest, and with authority, for they demand the liberation of 'Ionia.' The story is curious and probably incomplete.

4. ὀλίγω πρότερον τούτων: the chronological indication leaves something to be desired, but suggests the winter or spring of 480-79, and even a point after the rendezvous of the fleet at Aigina.

ἐδέοντο: Stein remarks on this as a surprising use of the imperfect; but explains it (in a note on ἐφέροντο 1. 66) by two considerations: (a) the extremely free use made of the imperfect by Hdt. (wie wohl kein anderer Autor), not so much with strict temporal reference, as with regard to the importance or energy of the action; (b) and especially in relative or secondary sentences, where it is freely so used without regard to the temporal relation of the verb to the main sentence and its predicate. As a specially characteristic case he cites 5. 21 καὶ οὗτοι . . . διεφθάρσαν . . . εἶπετο γάρ κτλ. (a passage in which immediately afterwards the pl.p. ἠφάνιστο occurs); cp. also 7. 195 ἦγε, etc.

5. Ἡρόδοτος ὁ Βασιλίδεω. Baehr approves Dahlmann's supposition that the author would not have named his namesake unless they had also been relatives; but surely the coincidence in their names (and their fortunes, each opposing the 'tyrannis' in his native place) might be reason enough. Herodotos, son of Basileides, the Chian, is not otherwise known to fame. Baehr, vol. iv. p. 401 ff., has compiled a list of about a score of men bearing the name of Herodotos, the majority late-comers. Cp. also Pape-Benseler. The Chian, and the Theban for whom Pindar wrote Isthm. 1, are the only ones contemporary with or prior to our author. (An old Chian inscrip., however, has Ἀθηναγόρης Ἡροδότου C.I.A.n. 382, Stein.) Basileides, too, is a not uncommon name attested for Athens, Kos, Rhodes, etc. Pape-Benseler, i. 199 sub v.

6. στασιῶται σφίσι γενόμενοι: σφίσι=ἀλλήλοις. Stein takes the phrase as implying that the conspirators came together from various cities (or townships), six or seven of which can just be discovered in Chios; cp. Forbiger, Alt. Geogr. ii. 199 (Chios, Delphinion, Bolissos, Kaukasa, Polichne, Leukonion, 'the Hollows'); but why should not all the cabal have been resident in the capital? For the figure 'seven' there was high precedent; cp. 3. 70.

7. Στράττι. A Strattis is named in δὲ ὥς φανεροὶ ἐγέγονον, ἐξευείκαντος τὴν ἐπιχειρήσιν ἐνὸς τῶν μετεχόντων, οὕτω δὴ οἱ λοιποὶ ἐξ ἐόντες ὑπεξέσχον ἐκ τῆς Χίου καὶ ἐς Σπάρτην τε ἀπίκοντο καὶ δὴ καὶ τότε 10 ἐς τὴν Αἴγινα, τῶν Ἑλλήνων δεόμενοι καταπλῶσαι ἐς τὴν Ἰωνίην· οἱ προήγαγον αὐτοὺς μόγισ μέχρι Δήλου. τὸ γὰρ προσωτέρω πᾶν δεινὸν ἦν τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι οὔτε τῶν χώρων ἐοῦσι ἐμπείροισι, στρατιῆς τε πάντα πλέα ἐδόκεε εἶναι, τὴν

8 ἐγίνοντο αC 9 οὕτω δὴ: οὔτοι B || ἐξ ἐόντες abesse malit van H. 10 τε om. BPz 12 προήγαγον δὲ sine οἱ B 13
προσωτέρω α: προτέρω B

4. 138 as one of the Ionian 'tyrants' on the Danube in 512 B.C., i.e. 33 years or so before the date here reached: is this the same man, or his descendant? And at what date was the plot actually hatched? ἀρχήν, as in c. 128 supra.

8. ἐξευείκαντος τὴν ἐπιχειρήσιν: one of the participants published, or betrayed, the plot; for this meaning of ἐκφέρειν cp. 3. 71, 74.

9. ὑπεξέσχον, as in 5. 72, 'made their way out secretly.'

10. καὶ δὴ καί, a phrase perhaps not so common in these Books; cp. c. 134. 4.

τότε seems to separate somewhat the visit to Aigina from the visit to Sparta; otherwise it might be supposed that they had been referred by the home government to the King Navarch at Aigina.

12. προήγαγον αὐτοὺς μόγισ μέχρι Δήλου, 'with difficulty the Ionian ambassadors persuaded the Hellenic admirals to move forwards as far as Delos.' There follows the motivation, or rationale, of this reluctance in the form of two reasons: first, ignorance of the topography, a point further emphasized by the remark upon Samos and the pillars of Herakles; and secondly, apprehension of encountering resistance, that is, of course, in the shape of the Persian fleet. Hdt. does not suggest that the naval movements were in any degree dependent on the operations of Mardonios and the Persian forces behind them in Greece. In his scheme of presenting the facts Mardonios has not yet been brought into Central Greece, but is wintering in Thessaly. Literary methods here help to obscure the real sequence and nexus of events.

14. τὴν δὲ Σάμον ἐπιστάτο δόξῃ καὶ Ἡρακλῆας στήλας ἴσον ἀπέχειν. At Delos they were considerably more than half-way from Aigina to Samos. This is the only passage in these Books in which 'the Herakleian Pillars' are mentioned: indeed, save for the mention of them in 2. 33, they are only mentioned in Bk. 4 (and therein seven times, cc. 8, 43, 152, 181, 185, 196), a striking illustration of the 'Western' interest in that Book. The form of the designation in Hdt. is always adjectival (never Ἡρακλέος στήλαι, as in Strabo 169), and the passages cited leave no room for doubt as to its geographical significance (=straits of Gibraltar), but Hdt. nowhere indicates exactly what he understands by the phrase. His contemporary Euktemon, of Athens, apparently understood the expression to apply to two Islands, 30 stades distant from each other, covered with wood, and inaccessible for large vessels, and each provided with a temple and an altar of Herakles: Euktemon ap. Avienum, Or. maritim. ed. A. Holder (cp. Berger, Gesch. d. Wissensch. Erdkunde, ii. 67). Pomponius Mela (temp. Claudii), a native of the region, considered the Pillars, or Columns, to be the two mountains, Calpe (Gibraltar) and Abyla (Ἀβύλα, Strabo 170: Ceuta), rising on the European and African side of the straits respectively (2. 6. 96; cp. Bunbury, Anc. Geogr. ii. 358). Poseidonios, however, his predecessor, who spent a considerable time at Gades (Strabo 174), believed that the Pillars were literally Pillars, to wit, the bronze Pillars 8 cubits (12 feet) high in the Herakleion at Gades; cp. Strabo 170, where the various alternatives (including that afterwards favoured by Mela) are set out and discussed, Strabo himself finally inclining to the metaphorical meaning (but not deciding between 'islands' and 'mountains'). Our clearer knowledge of the early import-

- 15 δὲ Σάμον ἐπιστέατο δόξῃ καὶ Ἡρακλέας στήλας ἴσον ἀπέχειν. συνέπιπτε δὲ τοιοῦτο ὥστε τοὺς μὲν βαρβάρους τὸ πρὸς ἐσπέρης ἀνωτέρω Σάμου μὴ τολμᾶν καταπλῶσαι καταρρωδηκότας, τοὺς δὲ Ἕλληνας, χρηζόντων Χίων, τὸ πρὸς τὴν ἡὺ κατωτέρω Δήλου. οὕτω δέος τὸ μέσον ἐφύλασσε σφέων.
- 133 Οἱ μὲν δὴ Ἕλληνες ἔπλεον ἐς τὴν Δήλον, Μαρδόνιος δὲ

15 ἡπιστέατο Pz || δόξῃ secl. van H. 16 τοιοῦτον B: τοιοῦτ' z
 17 ἀνωτέρω α || καταπλῶσαι: ἀναπλῶσαι? Stein: πλῶσαι van H. || καταρρωδηκότες P 18 verba χρηζόντων τῶν Χίων suspecta habet van H.: χρηζόντων Apr.: τῶν χίων B 19 κατωτέρω αP: κατώτερον Marc. || δέος BPz: δὲ ἐς || ἐφύλασσε σφῶων Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H.: (ἐφύ-λασσόν z) 133. 1 ἔπλεον Bz, van H.

ance of Pillar-worship (cp. A. J. Evans, Mycenaean Tree and Pillar Cult, 1901), and its undoubted association with the Tyrian Herakles (cp. Hdt. 2. 44) might incline us to take the western 'Pillars of Herakles' as really marking the limits of Phoenician navigation, and the metaphorical application as an afterthought; but such phrases as δι' Ἡρακλέων στήλων ἐκπλεῖν, διεκπερᾶν (4. 42, 43, 152) suggest that Hdt. uses the phrase with the metaphorical reference, and would have set the pillars either side the strait. The statement that "the Greeks at Delos (in 479 B.C.) believed (ἐπιστέατο δόξῃ, an interesting collocation) Samos as far off (ἀπέχειν, cp. 9. 52 infra) as Gades" is characterized by Rawlinson as "perhaps the grossest instance in Hdt. of rhetorical exaggeration" (5. 97 runs it close). But it should not be put down primarily to Hdt., least of all with the object, "by an imaginary effect of contrast, to place in a more striking light the rapid increase during his own time of nautical power and enterprise among his European fellow-countrymen" (Mure, quoted by Blakesley ad l.). Nor is it to be treated (so by Blakesley himself) as a serious record of real matter of fact, or feeling, explicable by the evil associations which had gathered at Sparta round "the voyage to Samos" (cp. 3. 56). The case is really much simpler. The phrase reproduces the impatience of Hdt.'s Ionian source with the cautious policy of the Spartan navarch (for which there were good grounds enough); or perhaps it even reflects the scornful witticisms of a period, the Pentekontaëteris, when Athenian policy had practically made the Aegean a mare clausum to Peloponnesian long-ships. At Delos the Hellenic fleet was in sight of Samos on a clear day, and before very long, in this very same year, crossed boldly to that bourne (9. 90 ff.). Hdt.'s device of projecting this account of the naval movement into the record of the previous winter and early spring has softened the inconsequence. What kept the Greek fleet at Delos was, first, that they demanded further assurances from the Ionians, and secondly, that they had to consider the situation behind them in Greece. Cp. Appendix IV. § 9, VII. § 7.

16. συνέπιπτε . . ὥστε: cp. c. 15 supra; there of a strictly formal coincidence, here of a rather more material one.

17. καταπλῶσαι Stein regards as a slip on a copyist's part for ἀναπλῶσαι, cp. καταπλῶσαι ἐς τὴν Ἰωνίην just above, but καταπλῶσαι would then need to be supplied with κατωτέρω Δήλου, so the passage is not quite precisely composed; hence van Herwerden's suggestion is preferable; cp. App. Crit.

18. χρηζόντων Χίων: the six Chians had presented themselves at Sparta, at Aigina, as Ἰωνίων ἀγγελοι, but they were really or primarily mere στασιῶται, and their credentials may have been incomplete: the fleet advances on the advent of a Samian embassy, 9. 90 infra.

19. τὸ μέσον, 'the intervening space,' i.e. mutual fear kept them apart. Cp. 7. 11 supra.

133. 1. ἔπλεον: on this imperfect cp. c. 132 supra. Here it seems to be calculated rather with regard to what follows—the account of Mardonios, whose actions preceded in temporal order the move to Delos, or even the move to Aigina.

περὶ τὴν Θεσσαλίην ἐχείμαζε. ἐνθεῦτεν δὲ ὀρμώμενος ἔπεμπε κατὰ τὰ χρηστήρια ἄνδρα Εὐρωπέα γένος, τῷ οὐνομα ἦν Μῦς, ἐντειλάμενος πανταχῇ μιν χρησόμενον ἐλθεῖν, τῶν οἰά τε ἦν σφί ἀποπειρήσασθαι. ὃ τι μὲν βουλόμενος ἐκμαθεῖν 5 πρὸς τῶν χρηστηρίων ταῦτα ἐνετέλλετο, οὐκ ἔχω φράσαι,* οὐ γὰρ ὦν λέγεται· δοκέω δ' ἔγωγε περὶ τῶν παρεόντων πρηγμάτων καὶ οὐκ ἄλλων πέρι πέμψαι. οὗτος ὁ Μῦς ἐς 134

2 ἐχειμέριζε? Krueger, van H. || ὀρμώμενος BP, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ὀρμώμενος Cz 3 τὰ om. B || Εὐρωπεία emend. Stein, recep. Holder, van H. 4 χρησόμενον αCP, Stein<sup>1</sup> 5 ἐκμαθεῖν z 7 δὲ B 8 περιπέμψαι B

2. περὶ τὴν Θεσσαλίην ἐχείμαζε: cp. e. 113 supra. The word χεῖμαζειν here (=Hdt. χεῖμερῖζειν) is observable; cp. 7. 191.

ἐνθεῦτεν δὲ ὀρμώμενος: has the participle any real force? Does it mean 'as he was starting,' i.e. before leaving; or simply 'from headquarters there' (cp. e. 112 ἐξ Ἀνδρου ὀρμώμενος, where the phrase is not quite so much atrophied)?

3. κατὰ τὰ χρηστήρια: the preposition is observable, and appears to be used locally and distributively rather than of the object or purpose of the mission (i.e. not ad consulenda oracula); Stein ops. 1. 30 τὸν Σόλωνα θεράποντες περιῆγον κατὰ τοὺς θησαυροὺς.

Εὐρωπεία γένος, τῷ οὐνομα ἦν Μῦς, 'a man of Europos by name Mys.' Europos as a place-name or town (fem.) is found in several quarters, notably in Makedonia, Thuc. 2. 100. 3. (The towns of this name in further Asia were probably Makedonian foundations?) The man here named was evidently a Karian, cp. e. 135 infra: Steph. B. sub v. ἐστὶ καὶ ἄλλη Κάρια, τὴν Ἰδριάδα, ἀπὸ Ἰδρίως τοῦ Χρυσάρορος (sc. ὀνομάζουσι). On Ἰδριάς cp. 5. 118. Oddly enough Steph. B. also has sub v. Εὐρωμος· πόλις Κάριας, ἀπὸ Εὐρώμου τοῦ Ἰδριέως Κάρως. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Εὐρωμῆος. Of Europos he gives the ethnikon as Εὐρώπιος. Stein<sup>2</sup> suggested Εὐρωμεία as the true reading here, and Stein<sup>3</sup> suggests that Εὐρωπεία is an ancient error for Εὐρώπιος (sic), i.e. from the small Karian town of Εὐρωμος (also Τρωμος). Blakesley (overlooking the Karian utterance of the Pythia below) makes Mys a Makedonian, and (observing that Europe was a surname of Demeter in the cult of Trophonios, Pausan. 9.

39. 5), an 'Achaian' to boot. Mys (mouse, 2. 141) as a proper name is curious, but genuine; there are several later instances, e.g. Pausan. 1. 28. 2 (a celebrated artist, possibly contemporary with Pheidias, as he is said to have executed the reliefs on the shield of the Promachos): a boxer, of Tarentum, Suidas sub v. etc.

4. τῶν οἰά τε ἦν σφί ἀποπειρήσασθαι: notwithstanding its plural form, οἰά does not refer to χρηστήρια, but=pote or fas esset: one relative is enough! The ἀπόπειρα of the Oracles by Mardonios, or Mys, is a genuine consultation, not a trial (διάπειρα 1. 47) or testing, like that of Kroisos 1. 46. On the contrary, it is a remarkable homage on the part of the Persian to the Greek religion. Delphi is apparently not one of the centres it is possible for him to consult!

6. οὐκ ἔχω φράσαι· οὐ γὰρ ὦν λέγεται· δοκέω δ' ἔγωγε. . . Hdt.'s conjecture appears eminently reasonable, and is confirmed pro tanto by the anecdote in 9. 42 infra: it is, however, remarkable that Hdt. had not been able to discover the purport of Mardonios' inquiries—in other words, he had not been able to obtain any of the answers given to Mys. This circumstance certainly does not enhance the credit of the story, and taken in conjunction with the conspicuous absence of the Pythia, suggests the suspicion that the whole story may be a part of the Rettung of Delphi. But it has a bona fide air withal, and reads like a Boiotian memory. Was it, perhaps, one of the tales told Hdt. by his Boiotian friend Thersander of Orchomenos? Cp. 2. 16, and Introduction, § 10.

τε Λεβάδειαν φαίνεται ἀπικόμενος καὶ μισθῷ πείσας τῶν ἐπιχωρίων ἄνδρα καταβῆναι παρὰ Τροφώνιον, καὶ ἐς Ἄβας τὰς Φωκέων ἀπικόμενος ἐπὶ τὸ χρηστήριον· καὶ δὴ καὶ ἐς

134. 2 λαβάδειαν Ο || ἀπικόμενος φαίνεται :: 3 ἀνδρῶν ἄνδρα
Marc. 4 δὴ καὶ: δὴ Β

134. 2. Λεβάδειαν: though the oracle is mentioned 1. 46, this is the only passage in Hdt. where the name of the city occurs, the modern Livadia, a place of more importance in Roman and Turkish than in ancient times. Plutarch Lys. 52 mentions its capture and sack by Lysander; Strabo 414 marks its position: Λεβάδεια δ' ἐστίν, ὅπου Διὸς Τροφώνιον μαντεῖον ἱδρύται, χάσματος ὑπονύμου κατάβασιν ἔχον, καταβαίνει δ' αὐτὸς ὁ χρηστηριαζόμενος· κείται δὲ μεταξύ τοῦ Ἑλικῶνος καὶ τῆς Χαιρωνέας, Κορωνέας πλησίον. Pausanias 9. 39, 40 describes the ritual from his own experience, and gives the story of the origin of the oracle. The process of consultation was extremely awful, and expensive, and apparently could not be carried on properly by a deputy, or deputy's deputy (as contemplated in this case). The oracle was, of course, chthonian, and τροφώνιος perhaps originally an epithet of Zeus.

3. καταβῆναι παρὰ Τροφώνιον: the grove (ἄλσος) of Trophonios was situate beyond the river Herkyna, which rose out of a cave in a gorge on Helikon. The worshipper crossed the stream and ascended through the grove (ἀναβᾶσι δὲ ἐπὶ τὸ μαντεῖον Pausan. l.c.) to the cave in which the actual rite took place. Several days' preparation and initiation were necessary before the votary was permitted 'to descend' (ἐς τοῦ Τροφώνιον κατέναι), and the privilege was reserved for the male sex (cp. ἄνδρα here, and ἀνδρὶ Pausanias l.c.). Purifications, divinations, sacrifices, are the order of the day, culminating in the offering of a ram on the night of the actual descent. You are first washed in the Herkyna, and anointed, by two acolytes, or 'Hernai'; the priests then take you in hand, give you to drink of the waters of Oblivion and of Remembrance, display to your adoring gaze the ancient image, and invest you with proper garb, for the dire ordeal. You then essay 'the descent' into the house of Trophonios. In the oracular chamber is a mysterious opening, or well, carefully built round and over, about six feet in diameter, and some twelve feet in depth, looking like an oven. Into this pit you descend by a light ladder, introduced for the purpose, taking some honey-buns with you (cp. Aristoph. Clouds 507 f.). Arrived at the bottom, you find a small opening at one side, just large enough to admit you feet foremost: you lie down on your back and work through it; and no sooner have your knees passed the aperture than you find yourself suddenly and irresistibly drawn or sucked down into the Holy of holies. There the secrets of the future are revealed to you in a way over which Pausanias somewhat abruptly drops the curtain. The exit has to be effected by the same entrance (στόμα τὸ ἱερὸν), and again feet foremost. By this time you are more dead than alive, but the ordeal is not over. The priests set you on the seat of Remembrance, and question you on what you have seen and heard below: after they have obtained the requisite information, they return you to your anxious relatives or attendants, who convey you, in a state of trance or unconsciousness, back to your apartment at the sign of 'Good Luck and the Daimon.' But do not despair: no proper consultant has ever been known to expire under the ordeal, and some have lived to smile again after it.

ἐς Ἄβας: it required some effrontery on the part of the Persian to consult this oracle of Apollon; cp. c. 33 supra! Blakesley tries to get over the difficulty by supposing that the sack of the shrine was not the work of the division of the army commanded by Mardonios—but according to Blakesley himself Mardonios was commander-in-chief all along; and again, that compensation was now made—of which Hdt. says nothing. The important point is that Hdt. is unconscious of the difficulty, so completely independent are his various stories one of another.

4. καὶ δὴ καὶ: c. 132 supra.

ἐς Θήβας may be taken in a wide sense to cover all the territory subject

Θήβας πρῶτα ὡς ἀπίκετο, τοῦτο μὲν τῷ Ἰσμηνίῳ Ἀπόλλωνι 5 ἐχρήσατο· ἔστι δὲ κατὰ περ ἐν Ὀλυμπίῃ ἱροῖσι αὐτόθι χρηστηριάζεσθαι· τοῦτο δὲ ξείνον τινὰ καὶ οὐ Θηβαίων χρήμασι πείσας κατεκοίμησε ἐς Ἀμφιάρεω. Θηβαίων δὲ οὐδενὶ ἔξεστι μαντεύεσθαι αὐτόθι διὰ τὸδε· ἐκέλευσε σφέας ὁ Ἀμφιά-

5 ἰσμηνίῳ B 6 κατὰ: καὶ τὰ B 8 κατεκοίμισε αPz || ἀμφιάρεωι B: ἀμφιάραον Paris. 1635, z 9 ἐκέλευσέ σφας Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ἐκέλευε σφας CPz, Holder || ἀμφιάρεος B: Ἀμφιάραος z

to Thebes (so Baehr): the temple of Amphiaraios was not in Thebes proper. πρῶτα is rather puzzling; nothing is said of a second visit, though doubtless he had been to Thebes in passing through with the army to and from Athens, and doubtless visited it again in company with Mardonios (cc. 34, 50, 113 supra, 9. 2, 15 etc. infra). The meaning is complicated by τοῦτο μὲν· τοῦτο δέ (in the first place, in the second place) immediately following. Stein suggests that πρῶτα ὡς ἀπίκετο equals πρῶτα ἀπίκετο, ἀπικόμενος δέ, but adds that Thebes was the first place he visited (coming from Mardonios in Thessaly?). Could Hdt. have meant ὡς πρῶτα ('as soon as he reached Thebes')? Cp. ὡς τάχιστα 1. 65.

5. τῷ Ἰσμηνίῳ Ἀπόλλωνι: cp. 5. 59, a passage which proves that Hdt. himself had at some time visited this shrine. It was perhaps subsequently, and after his visit, that he added the gloss-like note immediately succeeding ἔστι δὲ . . . χρηστηριάζεσθαι. The procurement of a χρηστήριον by 'pyromancy' appears to be a special form of Divination developed by the Iamidai (cp. 9. 33 infra) of Elis; Pindar Ol. 8. 2 μάντιες ἄνδρες ἐμπύρους τεκμαιρόμενοι παραπειρῶνται Διὸς ἀργικεραύνου. Cp. Bouché-Leclercq ap. Darenberg et Saglio, Dict. ii. 298, 299. It was practised also in Thebes; cp. Sophok. O.T. 21 ἐπ' Ἰσμήνου τε μαντεῖα σποδῶ.

7. ξείνον τινὰ . . . κατεκοίμησέ: Plutarch Aristeid. 19 reports the actual dream which visited the 'Lydian,' and which exactly prefigured the death of Mardonios.

8. ἐς Ἀμφιάρεω: this oracle too figures in the list of Kroisos (cp. 1. 46, 49, 52), who, πνθόμενος αὐτοῦ τὴν τε ἀρετὴν καὶ τὴν πάθην, made presents to him, which in Hdt.'s time had been transferred to the temple of Ismenian Apollo (1. 52), perhaps to prevent their passing under Athenian dominion. The actual shrine of Amphiaraios himself was at Oropos, Pausan. 1. 34. His valour had been shown in his slaughter of Melanippos (in return for the deaths of Mekisteus and Tydeus; cp. 5. 67); his 'passion' in his terrible fate, the earth opening and swallowing him up, chariot and all, Pindar Nem. 9. 24, Aischyl. Septem 568 ff. The cult was confined practically to Peloponnesos and Central Greece, especially Boiotia (Bethe ap. Pauly-Wissowa, i. 1887), and the departed seer is really 'a chthonian deity of prehistoric Greece,' who, in the person of his son Amphilochos (cp. Thuc. 2. 68. 3), draws one step nearer to historic verisimilitude. The oracle was a dream-divination (Pausanias 1. 34. 5): the consultant, after due purification and sacrifice, sacrifices also a ram, goes to sleep upon its fell, and awaits a dream-revelation (ἀναμένοντες δῆλωσην ὀνείρατος). Amphiaraios is in some respects a replica of Trophonios (both being also distinctly of the Asklepios-type), perhaps because both are forms of chthonian Zeus.

Θηβαίων δὲ οὐδενὶ ἔξεστι: this taboo, or excommunication, is interesting. Was it restricted to Oropos (αὐτόθι dis), or were Thebans universally excluded from the cult of Amphiaraios? There was another Boiotian shrine of Amphiaraios near Potniai (Pausan. 9. 8. 3), but Pausanias does not record any divination there; at Harma, however, near Mykalessos, there was a temple (Strabo 404) in which, at least in later times, oracles were to be had (Bethe, l.c. supra). The context here might seem to imply that Thebans had once had oracles, or at least one response, of their ally.

9. διὰ τὸδε: the taboo is obviously a much more certain fact than the reason given for it. The true reason might perhaps be sought in the difference of race between the Boiotians of Thebes

- 10 ρεως διὰ χρηστηρίων ποιούμενος ὁκότερα βούλονται ἐλέσθαι τούτων, ἐωυτῷ ἢ ἄτε μάντι χρᾶσθαι ἢ ἄτε συμμάχῳ, τοῦ ἐτέρου ἀπεχομένους· οἱ δὲ σύμμαχόν μιν εἶλοντο εἶναι. διὰ τοῦτο μὲν οὐκ ἔξεστι Θηβαίων οὐδενὶ αὐτόθι ἐγκατακοιμηθῆναι.
 135 τόδε δὲ θῶμά μοι μέγιστον γενέσθαι λέγεται ὑπὸ Θηβαίων·
 ἐλθεῖν ἄρα τὸν Εὐρωπέα Μῦν, περιστρωφόμενον πάντα τὰ χρηστήρια, καὶ ἐς τοῦ Πτόου Ἀπόλλωνος τὸ τέμενος. τοῦτο δὲ τὸ ἱρὸν καλέεται μὲν Πτόον, ἔστι δὲ Θηβαίων, κείται δὲ
 5 ὑπὲρ τῆς Κωπαίδος λίμνης πρὸς ὄρεϊ ἀγχοτάτῳ Ἀκραιφίης

11 τουτέων z || μάντει α || χρῆσθαι ad: χρῆσθαι reliqui 13 κατακοιμηθῆναι BPz 135. 1 τόδε Wesseling, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>:
 τότε || θῶμά CPz, Stein<sup>1</sup> 2 ἄρα: γὰρ<sup>1</sup> van H. || Εὐρωμέα Holder,
 van H., cf. c. 133 supra || Μῦν del. van H. || τὰ om. β 3 πτωίων A:
 πτώων 4 καλέεται . . ἱρὸν om. R || πτωίων α: πτωων || κείται PSV,
 Stein<sup>1</sup> 5 κοπαίδος A || ὄρει A<sup>1</sup>BS: οὐρεῖ || ἀγχοτάτῳ αP: ἀγχοτάτῳ z
 || ἀκραιφνίης C

and the pre-Boiotian population to the south, and on the Attic border. Cult is stiffer than myth: the Boiotians of Thebes might appropriate the story of Amphiaras and make him their friend and ally, but they could not get rid of the religious interdiction. They then invented this reason to account for the fact.

10. διὰ χρηστηρίων ποιούμενος: per oraculum cum iis agens, Baehr: apparently a spontaneous act. τούτων refers irregularly to the following alternatives.

12. ἀπεχομένους is strong middle. ἐγκατακοιμηθῆναι = μαντεύεσθαι supra.

135. 1. τόδε: cp. App. Crit. τότε would mean in 479 B.C.

θῶμά μοι μέγιστον: μοι, à mon avis (Larcher); but not exactly maxime mirum (Baehr), rather miraculum, me jūdice, maximum.

γενέσθαι, 'to have taken place.'

λέγεται ὑπὸ Θηβαίων: the citation of the source seems to suggest a doubt, or at least to decline a responsibility. ἄρα continues the note of admiration, or marks an advance, a heightening, of the action. (Cp. Index sub v.)

2. περιστρωφόμενον πάντα τὰ χρ.: περιστρωφάσθαι, a frequentative of περιτρέφωμαι, itself a word suggesting a rather hurried procedure, is perhaps hardly complimentary to Mys, whose methods all through are somewhat summary: is the word supplied by the

'Theban' source? The construction resembles περιπλέοντες τὰς νήσους 6. 99. Should not πάντα include Delphi?

3. τοῦ Πτόου Ἀπόλλωνος τὸ τέμενος, 'the close of Ptoian Apollon,' i.e. the Apollo of Mount Ptoos, the god being apparently named from the mount, not the mountain from the god. Mythologically Ptoos was a son of Athamas and Themisto (Asios ap. Pausan. 9. 23. 6), perhaps an afterthought. On the connexion of Athamas with this district cp. 7. 197 supra. The meaning of the word is obscure: Grasberger (Gr. Ortsnamen, p. 279) suggests 'Schreckenbergr' (cp. Schreckhorn in Bernese Oberland); cp. Φρίκων <Φρίκωνις?>, etc. Hdt.'s precise description of the site in the quasi-note τοῦτο δὲ . . πόλιος suggests autopsy; the note may be an addition. The force of the antithesis καλέεται μὲν . . ἔστι δὲ is not obvious, but perhaps the sense that the name was older than the Theban (Boiotian) invasion and conquest underlies it.

5. τῆς Κωπαίδος λίμνης: this is the only express mention in Hdt. of the Kopais lake which occupied so large a space in W. Boiotia, at least in the winter months. The Κωπαῖς or men of Κῶπαι, the township which gave its name to the lake, are mentioned by Thucyd. 4. 93. 4. Strabo 410-11 says that the lake had been called partially after the various cities on its edge until the name of (the insignificant) Kopai

πόλιος. ἐς τοῦτο τὸ ἶρόν ἐπέιτε παρελθεῖν τὸν καλεόμενον τοῦτον Μῦν (ἔπεσθαι δέ οἱ τῶν ἀστῶν αἰρετοὺς ἄνδρας τρεῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ κοινοῦ ὡς ἀπογραφόμενους τὰ θεσπιεῖν ἔμελλε), . . .
καὶ πρόκατε τὸν πρόμαντιν βαρβάρῳ γλώσση χρᾶν. καὶ τοὺς μὲν ἐπομένους τῶν Θηβαίων ἐν θώματι ἔχεσθαι ἀκούοντας<sup>10</sup> βαρβάρου γλώσσης ἀντὶ Ἑλλάδος, οὐδὲ ἔχειν ὃ τι χρήσονται τῷ παρόντι πρήγματι· τὸν δὲ Εὐρωπεία Μῦν ἐξαργάσαντα παρ' αὐτῶν τὴν ἐφέροντο δέλτον, τὰ λεγόμενα ὑπὸ τοῦ προφήτεω γράφειν ἐς αὐτήν, φάναι δὲ Καρίῃ μιν γλώσση
χρᾶν, συγγραψάμενον δὲ οἴχεσθαι ἀπὸντα ἐς Θεσσαλίην.<sup>15</sup>

7, 8 (ἔπεσθαι . . . ἔμελλε) cancellos pos. Stein<sup>3</sup> || δέ om. Bz, Holder, van H. || θεσπιεῖν B, Stein<sup>1 2</sup> || lacunam indic. Stein<sup>3</sup> 9 τὴν z ||
μάντιν Ppr.S 10 θώματι B, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder || ἐνέχεσθαι Krueger
11 οὐδ' B || χρήσονται aPcorr.: χρήσονται 12 χρήματι C || Εὐρω-
μεία? vide 2 supra || Μῦν del. van H. 13 αὐτέων z 14 γράφην B
|| γλώσση: φωνῇ B

prevailed: κοιλότατον γὰρ τοῦτο τὸ χωρίον, that place being deepest in the vale (and so never dry).

'Ακραίφνης: Akraiphia ('Ακραίφριον Pausan. 9. 23. 5) was apparently an unimportant township belonging to Thebes (though to judge by the coinage
"it must have enjoyed intervals of autonomy," Head, Hist. Num. p. 292), and is described by Pausanias (l.c.) as standing some fifteen stades to the left of the temple. Dr. Frazer's note (Pausanias v. 97 ff.) deals with the whole situation fully from personal observation. The precise site of the temple (which has been archaeologically explored) is described (ib. p. 100) as a steep slope, elaborately terraced, high up on the chief mountain in the Ptoan range. On the highest or sixth terrace there is a spring; the temple actually stood on the fifth; lower down the hill is an artificial cavern, connected with the spring above by an earthenware conduit; the oracles were perhaps delivered in this cavern by the prophet, who had previously drunk of the water of the spring (an act paralleled by the procedure of the prophet of the Clarian Apollo, Frazer l.c.).

6. ἐπέιτε παρελθεῖν: the oratio obliqua
is resumed for the Theban narrative, after the interposed note in Hdt.'s own person. One must understand that the Theban government had appointed three commissioners to wait upon Mys. The subject of ἔμελλε must be ὁ θεός.

9. καὶ πρόκατε: there is an apparent
parataxis, but if the text is correct, Hdt.
must have forgotten the ἐπέιτε above,
and the result is an anakoluthon.
Stein<sup>3</sup> supposes some words to have fallen out, e.g. ἔπεσθαι τε ἐς τὸ μέγαρον.
The seer is here a man (τὸν πρόμαντιν),
not a woman as at Delphi.

χρᾶν: as in 1. 55, 4. 155.

10. ἐν θώματι ἔχεσθαι, 'were spellbound'; cp. below.

11. Ἑλλάδος: (as always) an adjective.
οὐδὲ ἔχειν, 'were at a complete loss'; cp. 5. 12.

13. τὴν ἐφέροντο δέλτον: on the imperf. cp. note c. 132 supra.

τὰ λεγόμενα ὑπὸ τοῦ προφήτεω γράφειν: it is tantalizing to think that this precious tablet was carried off by Mys to Thessaly, without even a copy being left behind! Nor does it appear that Hdt. had seen the original. There is no hope of recovering it now.

14. Καρίῃ μιν γλώσση χρᾶν: sc. τὸν προφήτην = τὸν πρόμαντιν. Unless Mys was a Karian the selection of the Karian language would have been rather point-less. The story may be substantially true; it would not have been difficult to arrange that the prophet should babble a few words of Karian to the man of Euromos, or Europos. One need not

- 136 Μαρδόνιος δὲ ἐπιλεξάμενος ὃ τι δὴ λέγοντα ἦν τὰ χρηστήρια, μετὰ ταῦτα ἔπεμψε ἄγγελον εἰς Ἀθήνας Ἀλέξανδρον τὸν Ἀμύντεω ἄνδρα Μακεδόνα, ἅμα μὲν ὅτι οἱ προσκηδέες οἱ Πέρσαι ἦσαν*, Ἀλεξάνδρου γὰρ ἀδελφεὴν Γυγαίην, Ἀμύντεω δὲ θυγατέρα, Βουβάρης ἀνὴρ Πέρσης ἔσχε, ἐκ τῆς οἱ ἐγγόνες Ἀμύντης ὁ ἐν τῇ Ἀσίῃ, ἔχων τὸ οὐνομα τοῦ μητροπάτορος, τῷ δὴ ἐκ βασιλέως τῆς Φρυγίης ἐδόθη Ἀλάβανδα πόλις

136. 1 ἦν λέγοντα Pz 3 οἱ R 4 ἔσαν z 6 τὸ om. C
 || ὄνομα van H. || τοῦ: τὸ BP: 'fortasse ἔχων ὄνομα τὸ τοῦ' van H.
 7 τῷ: τὸ B || Ἀλάβαστρα Steph. Byz. quod verum opin. Stein, in text. rec.
 Holder: cf. comment. infra summon up the 'subliminal consciousness' to explain this miracle.

136. 1. ἐπιλεξάμενος ὃ τι δὴ λέγοντα ἦν τὰ χρηστήρια, 'after reading what the oracles were saying, whatever it was,' a good illustration of the deceptive character of the formulae of the vox viva when used to establish the nature of Hdt.'s sources; cp. Introduction, § 10.

2. μετὰ ταῦτα: i.e. 'after doing so.' ἄγγελον = πρεσβέα (cp. 7. 1), and is predicative.

Ἀλέξανδρον τὸν Ἀμύντεω ἄνδρα Μακεδόνα: the mere occurrence of the patronymic would not surprise, even though Alexander has been introduced at great length in Bk. 5, and mentioned before in these Books; but the precise repetition of the formula of 7. 173 supra is a little perplexing, and that formula is in itself remarkable. The repetition is, perhaps, to be explained by the hypothesis that the present passage is of earlier composition, and the passage in Bk. 7 a later insertion. The peculiar formula itself, which ignores the fact that Alexander was at this time king in Macedonia, is more difficult to away with. Blakesley suggests that "out of delicacy to democratic feelings" Hdt. omits reference to Alexander's true position—an explanation which sounds a little thin: more probably Hdt. takes over the phrase from his source, whatever it was; an explanation which, it must be admitted, only puts the difficulty one step backwards: perhaps the recognition of this passage as relatively early in Hdt.'s composition may ease his apparent oversight. The complete independence of the present passage is shown by a reference to c. 34 supra, where Alexander is acting as king or commander of ἄνδρες Μακεδόνες.

3. Hdt. gives two co-ordinate reasons (ἅμα μὲν . . ἅμα δέ) for the selection of Alexander as ambassador to Athens: (i.) his special relation to the Persians on the one side; (ii.) his special relation to the Athenians on the other.

προσκηδέες: affinitate coniuncti, cp. Pollux 3. 5 ff. (ὅσοι τὴν οἰκείότητα τὴν πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἐκ συνθήκης ἄλλ' οὐκ ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἔχουσι ib. 6; προσκηδεῖς καθ' Ἡρόδοτον ib. 30).

4. Γυγαίην . . Βουβάρης . . ἔσχε, 'had to wife' (cp. 7. 61. 13). The story of this marriage is told in Bk. 5. 21. This match was a precedent for the Great Alexander, had he needed one. The absence of any reference here to that passage is significant for the problem of composition, and points to the priority of the present passage. Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8. The name Γυγαίη in Macedonia (cp. 1. 93 for Lydia) is remarkable; cp. c. 138 infra. On Bubares cp. 7. 22 supra.

5. ἐγγόνες Ἀμύντης: this Amyntas, son of Bubares and Gygaia, had no doubt long been born (ἐγγόνες) in 480 B.C., the marriage of his parents having taken place at least a quarter of a century before; but the date of his establishment as a bey or grandee in Asia Minor is not so clear, nor whether it was due to Dareios or to Xerxes: probably the latter.

6. μητροπάτορος: 6. 131.

7. τῆς Φρυγίης . . Ἀλάβανδα: there is a double difficulty here: (i.) Alabanda was under a native tyranny apparently, cp. 7. 195. But as the tyrant was taken by the Greeks in 480 B.C. (l.c.) Amyntas might have been appointed to succeed him. (ii.) But Alabanda was, and is there correctly described as being, in Karia. Rawlinson observes that geographical μεγάλη νέμεσθαι· ἅμα δὲ ὁ Μαρδόνιος πυθόμενος ὅτι πρόξεινός τε εἴη καὶ εὐεργέτης ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος ἔπεμπε. τοὺς γὰρ Ἀθηναίους οὕτω ἐδόκει μάλιστα προσκτῆσθαι, λεών τε πολλὸν ἰο ἄρα ἀκούων εἶναι καὶ ἄλκιμον, τὰ τε κατὰ τὴν θάλασσαν

8 δὲ Wesseling e cod. Ask.: τε || πρόξενός codd. s 9 εὐεργέτης
 Ἀθηναίων Reiske: 'an σφι εἴη?' Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H. 10 ἐδόκει van H. ||
 προσκτῆσθαι BPrp. || ληόν van H.

limits were not always strictly defined; still, it would be rather curious to find Hdt. putting a large city into Karia in one Book, and into Phrygia in the next, without a word of explanation; though the difference of sources, and the historian's indifference to their disharmony, will doubtless account for a good deal; cp. Introduction, § 11. Stein approves of Steph. B. Ἀλάβαστρα, πόλις Φρυγίας. Ἡρόδοτος. But unfortunately the other authorities, Ptolemy 4. 5. 59, Pliny 5. 9. 61, place Alabaster in Egypt (cp. 3. 20).

8. νέμεσθαι: epexegetical infinitive.
 πρόξενός τε . . . καὶ εὐεργέτης: on the προξενία cp. 6. 57, 9. 85. What beneficium Alexander conferred, or can have conferred on the Athenian democracy before 480 B.C. (unless his action recorded 7. 173 supra were to be so accounted), is unknown: Blakesley suggested that the connexion was with the Peisistratids, not with the Athenian democracy; cp. 5. 94. But there may have been some approximation during the period of the Ionian Revolt. The story here is doubtless tinged with afterthought and anachronism; following the Persian war there must have been friendly relations between Athens and Makedon for a time, or off and on, during Alexander's reign. Athenian aggression in the north, culminating in the foundation of Amphipolis in 436 B.C. (Busolt III. i. 558), must have strained these relations; and it is quite clear from Thucydides that the hostility of Perdikkas, son of Alexander, precipitated the (so-called) 'Peloponnesian' war (Thuc. 1. 56. 2, 57. 2 etc.).

The structure of the passage Μαρδόνιος ἔπεμπε is not elegant or quite correct: oratio turbata, Baehr. It runs: Μαρδόνιος δὲ ἐπιτελέζων . . . ἔπεμπε . . . ἅμα μὲν ὅτι . . . long parenthesis . . . ἅμα δὲ ὁ Μαρδόνιος πυθόμενος ὅτι εἴη . . . ἔπεμπε. Perhaps it marks Hdt.'s less accomplished and earlier style.

9. τοὺς γὰρ Ἀθηναίους: his object was to obtain the alliance, or the allegiance, of the Athenians, whereto his motive was simply the desire to win command of the sea.

Hdt. fully endorses this calculation (τά περ ἂν καὶ ἦν): alliance with Athens would have given Mardonios, and Persia, a vast superiority at sea.

Mardonios can hardly have failed to understand (what Hdt. appears in this place to miss) that the predominance at sea would ipso facto carry predominance by land too—not merely by withdrawing the Athenian land-force from the confederate army, and completely localizing resistance in the Peloponnese, but by opening wide the doors into the Peloponnese itself—as Hdt. elsewhere and afterwards implies (9. 9 infra, cp. 7. 139 supra). In this passage command of the sea is treated as a purely negative condition, however important, and Mardonios having obtained it, by alliance with Athens, is to finish the struggle on land simply with his own land-forces.

The passage also runs into a somewhat verbose testimonial to Athenian prowess, ex hypothesi apparently now conveyed to Mardonios by word of mouth (ἀκούων) for the first time. As a matter of fact Mardonios must long have known all this and much more about the Athenians, cp. 7. 6 supra. Hdt. is here perhaps the victim of his Attic sources.

11. ἄρα, 'to his surprise' (rather than 'of course'): perhaps there is a touch of irony in the word.

τά τε κατὰ θάλασσαν . . . ἐπίστατο. The verb is co-ordinate with ἐδόκει, and in its Herodotean use not of much stronger import (cp. c. 132 supra): the co-ordinate sentence, however, extends from τοὺς γὰρ to καὶ ἄλκιμον, and the material considerations in the mind of Mardonios are, ex hypothesi, (i.) the number and valour of the Athenians, (ii.) their recent achievements at sea.

συντυχόντα σφί παθήματα κατεργασαμένους μάλιστα Ἀθηναίους ἐπίστατο. τούτων δὲ προσγενομένων κατήλπιζε εὐπετέως τῆς θαλάσσης κρατήσιν, τὰ περ ἂν καὶ ἦν, πεζῇ τε ἐδόκεε πολλῶν 15 εἶναι κρέσσων, οὕτω τε ἐλογίζετο κατύπερθε οἱ τὰ πρήγματα ἔσεσθαι τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν. τάχα δ' ἂν καὶ τὰ χρηστήρια ταῦτά οἱ προλέγοι, συμβουλευόντα σύμμαχον τὸν Ἀθηναῖον ποιεῖσθαι τοῖσι δὴ πειθόμενος ἔπεμπε.

137 Τοῦ δὲ Ἀλεξάνδρου τούτου ἑβδομος γενέτωρ Περδίκκης

12 σφίσι? van H. 13 ἐπίστατο B: ἡπίστατο z || τοντέων z
 14 ἂν: ἦν z || ἐδόκει van H. 15 κρέισσων B 16 τῶν om. C || ἑλλήνων. τάχα δὲ τὰ B 17 προλέγουσι B: προλέγει z 18 ποιεῖσθαι van H.: οἱ ποιήσασθαι B 137. 1 περδίκης BOB

12. The παθήματα may include Artemision as well as Salamis (but hardly the disasters due to the storm!): in any case the view ascribed to Mardonios differs from the official Greek view, c. 93 supra, though it represents exactly the Athenian view, cp. Thucyd. 1. 74.

15. κατύπερθε . . ἔσεσθαι: cp. c. 19 supra.

16. τάχα δ' ἂν καὶ τὰ χρηστήρια ταῦτά οἱ προλέγοι: Hdt. opines that Mardonios may have been urged to the above course (ταῦτα) by the oracles (consulted by Mys). Rawlinson observes that the Theban "and Phokian" oracles may very well have done so (well, hardly Abai, cp. c. 134 supra—but perhaps Delphi?). The ἀκούων above suggests that Mardonios was being worked upon: his Theban advisers below (9. 2) have still a card in reserve. The construction with the opt. present (and a suppressed protasis) is observable: the explanation by the res praeterita which is diuturnior vel saepius repetita (Baehr) is hardly applicable: Stein calls it 'a potential present' and cps. 1. 70 τάχα δὲ ἂν καὶ οἱ ἀποδόμενοι λέγοιεν κτλ., certainly a more difficult case, for here the opt. pres. might seem to accord with the phrase used above, ἐπιλεξάμενος δ τι δὴ λέγοντα ἦν τὰ χρηστήρια.

137. 1. τοῦ δὲ Ἀλεξάνδρου τούτου ἑβδομος γενέτωρ. An excursus follows (cc. 137–139) on the origin of the Macedonian monarchy. That this story is given in these Books rather than in Bk. 5. 22, yea, actually there promised, is strong evidence in favour of the hypothesis that Bks. 7, 8, 9 are of earlier composition; cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8: that it is given here rather than at 7. 173 is perhaps in favour of regarding that passage as of later insertion; cp. Introd. § 9.

The Makedonian pedigree could hold its own with the Achaimenid (7. 11 supra), to say nothing of its affiliation, through Temenos, with Herakles (cp. c. 139 infra). The 'seven' are reckoned inclusively, notwithstanding γενέτωρ (pro-genitor: an hapazlegomenon in Hdt.).

Περδίκκης. Did Alexander himself emphasize the founder's name by giving it to his own son and successor (c. 454 B.C.)? Is the legend, in its Herodotean form, older than the accession of Perdikkas II. (c. 454 B.C.)? See below. In any case Hdt. was hardly the first author to reduce it to writing, or even to prose: that had surely been done already at the Makedonian Court. Thucydides in 2. 99. 3 asserts the Argive and Temenid descent, in 2. 100. 2 gives the same number of kings (without the names), adding Perdikkas and Archelaos his own contemporaries; and in 5. 80 supplies a practical illustration of the force of the Argive claim (alliance in 417 B.C.). Another and perhaps later saga made Karanos (Κάρανος), son or brother of Pheidon of Argos, found the dynasty, to be succeeded by Koivos, Τυρίμας, Περδίκκας. This version was first given vogue by Theopompos; cp. Vell. Pat. 1. 6. 5 Circa quod tempus (sc. Carthag. cond.) Caranus, vir generis regii, sextus decimus ab Hercule (!), profectus Argis, regnum Macedoniae occupavit: a quo magnus Alexander quum fuerit septimus decimus, iure materni generis Achille auctore, paterni Hercule gloriatus est. Cp.

ἐστὶ ὁ κτησάμενος τῶν Μακεδόνων τὴν τυραννίδα τρόπῳ τοιῷδε. ἐξ Ἀργεος ἔφυγον ἐς Ἰλλυριοὺς τῶν Τημένου ἀπογόνων τρεῖς ἀδελφοί, Γανάνης τε καὶ Ἀέροπος καὶ Περδίκκης, ἐκ δὲ Ἰλλυριῶν ὑπερβαλόντες ἐς τὴν ἄνω Μακεδονίην ἀπίκοντο ἐς Λεβαίην πόλιν. ἐνθαῦτα δὲ ἐθήτεον ἐπὶ μισθῷ παρὰ τῷ βασιλεῖ, ὃ μὲν ἵππους νέμων, ὃ δὲ βοῦς,

3 Ἰλλυριοὺς B 5 περδίκκης CS || ἰλλύρων R || ὑπερβαλλόντες BV
 6 δὲ: καὶ z 7 βασιλεῖ AB

Pompeius Trogus 7. 1. 7 ff., Theopompus Frag. 29, 30 (Mueller i. 283). A third variant was supplied by Euripides' Ἀρχέλαος, cp. Nauck<sup>1</sup> p. 339, Hyginus Fab. 219 (quoted in full by Nauck and by Stein). This story was more romantic. Archelaos, a son of Temenos, exiled by his brethren, took refuge in Makedonia, and having won a victory for the king, demanded his promised reward (regnum et filiam): the king, however, sought his benefactor's life: the plot was betrayed: Archelaos took his would-be slayer in the pit prepared for him: inde profugit ex responso Apollinis in Macedoniam capra duce oppidumque ex nomine caprae Aegae constituit. As this story was obviously adopted by Euripides in compliment to the reigning Archelaos, so the version in Hdt. is probably a compliment to Perdikkas, devised on his accession (the precise circumstances of which are obscure; cp. Busolt, III. i. 558, ii. 792).

2. τῶν Μακεδόνων τὴν τυραννίδα: the phrase is remarkable: had Hdt. not yet acquired his horror of the τυραννίς, or does he mean to condemn Perdikkas I. and his whole descent, or does he take the phrase over from his source, or does he design to prepare the way for the Spartan epigram (c. 142 infra), or does calling the Makedonian principality a tyranny assimilate it to Greek conditions, or is τυραννίς used here as it might be of the Lydian, or any foreign monarchy? Cp. 7. 52 supra.

3. ἐξ Ἀργεος. There existed an Ἀργεος Ὀρεστικόν in the Orestis (cp. Thuc. 2. 80. 6), a district round the sources of the Haliakmon, in Upper Makedonia; Strabo 326 reckons the Orestis to Epeiros, and records the foundation of this Argos by Orestes: obviously an etymological fallacy. Probably the Makedonian royal house had as little real connexion with Peloponnesian Argos as had Orestes with the Orestis in Upper Makedonia. ἐς Ἰλλυριοὺς perhaps gives the real ὄθεν ὁρμώμενοι. Cp. I. 5 infra.

4. Γανάνης: Stein takes the name as = βουκόλος, cp. Sansk. gā = βοῦς, γῆ. If so, Hdt. has got the translations or interpretations just below in reverse order.

Ἀέροπος: the name appears in its Ionic form 9. 26 infra; the preservation of the proper form here will be due to the source. The name might perhaps be applicable to the herder of horses, 'swift as air,' but there was a mountain bordering on the Aous of that name, Livy 32. 5. 11, and Hesychios has the gloss Ἀέροπος, ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ γένος τι, an indication of the real significance of the three names as divisions of the Makedonian folk, or perhaps of the Ἀργεάδαι, Strabo 329 (cp. the tripartition of the Skyths 4. 5 etc.) (Stein). The name Aepos as a proper name recurs, however, in the list of Makedonian kings in the fourth century B.C. Cp. c. 139.

5. Περδίκκης: he looks after τὰ λεπτὰ τῶν προβάτων, a true shepherd, or goat-herd. The expression suggests that Hdt. might use πρόβατα of larger animals; cp. 9. 93 infra.

ἐκ δὲ Ἰλλυριῶν ὑπερβαλόντες looks like a genuine reminiscence of the origin of the Makedonian Ἀργεάδαι. The route indicated would be over Mt. Skardos, presumably by the line of the later Egnatian Way. ὑπερβ. 7. 168 in a somewhat different sense.

ἐς τὴν ἄνω Μακεδονίην: cp. 7. 128. Λεβαίη is nowhere else mentioned, nor identifiable; a problem of the same order as Kritalla, 7. 26.

6. ἐθήτεον ἐπὶ μισθῷ: Homeric (not to say feudal); cp. Od. 4. 644. The μισθός included board and lodging.

7. παρὰ τῷ βασιλεῖ: Pausan. 9. 40. 8 gives his name as Κισσεύς. So too Hyginus (Euripides); cp. note, I. 1 supra.

ὁ δὲ νεώτατος αὐτῶν Περδίκκης τὰ λεπτὰ τῶν προβάτων.
 ἡ δὲ γυνὴ τοῦ βασιλέως αὐτὴ τὰ σιτία σφι ἔπασσε· ἦσαν 10 γὰρ τὸ πάλαι καὶ αἱ τυραννίδες τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἀσθενέες χρήμασι [οὐ μούνον ὁ δῆμος]. ὅκως δὲ ὀπτῶν, ὁ ἄρτος τοῦ παιδὸς τοῦ [θητὸς] Περδίκκew διπλήσιος ἐγένετο αὐτὸς ἑωυτοῦ.
 ἐπεὶ δὲ αἰεὶ τῶντὸ τοῦτο ἐγένετο, εἶπε πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα τὸν
 ἑωυτῆς· τὸν δὲ ἀκούσαντα ἐσῆλθε αὐτίκα ὡς εἴη τέρας καὶ 15 φέροι μέγα τι. καλέσας δὲ τοὺς θήτας προηγόρευέ σφι ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι ἐκ γῆς τῆς ἑωυτοῦ. οἱ δὲ τὸν μισθὸν ἔφασαν δίκαιοι εἶναι ἀπολαβόντες οὕτω ἐξίεναι. ἐνθαῦτα ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ μισθοῦ πέρη ἀκούσας, ἦν γὰρ κατὰ τὴν καπνοδόκην ἐς τὸν οἶκον ἐσέχων ὁ ἥλιος, εἶπε θεοβλαβῆς γενόμενος “μισθὸν 20 δὲ ὑμῖν ἐγὼ ὑμέων ἄξιον τόνδε ἀποδίδωμι,” δέξας τὸν ἥλιον.

8 αὐτέων z || περδίκης CS 9 ἡ δὲ . . ἔπασσε sedem hab. infra
 post δῆμος, huc retrax. Stein || βασιλέως R: βασιλῆος z || σφι τὰ σιτία S
 || ἦσαν z 10 γὰρ: δὲ B, Holder, van H.: verba ἦσαν . . δῆμος ut emblema a sciolo quodam addito del. van H.: οὐ μούνον ὁ δῆμος damn.
 Stein<sup>13</sup>, Holder. Nonne verba ἦσαν γὰρ . . χρήμασι inter βασιλέως et αὐτῆς potius inserenda? 11 μούνον α: μόνον || ὀπτῶν AB: ὀπτῶτο
 (Holder, van H.) 12 τοῦ θητὸς Περδίκκew damn. Stein<sup>1</sup>, secl. van H.:
 θητὸς tantum Stein<sup>8</sup>: τοῦ περδίκκew Pz, Holder, van H.: τοῦ περδίκew B
 || ἑωυτῶ z 13 ἐπέειπε? van H. || ἐγένετο R || τὸν ante ἑωυτῆς om. z
 14 ὡς δὲ ἤκουσε Paris. 1635 z || ἐπῆλθέ οἱ z 15 φέροι ἐς Bz
 16 γῆς om. Bd || ἔφασαν τὸν μισθὸν B 17 δίκαιοι AC: δίκαιον ||
 εἶναι post μισθὸν B || ἀπολαβόντας Rz || οὕτως B 20 τόδε C || δέξας
 Holder, van H. || <ἐς> τὸν? Stein<sup>(2)</sup>, van H.

9. ἡ δὲ γυνή: was the ἀρτοκόπος of Kroisos a queen, l. 51? Hardly; the circumstances here are more primitive. Cp. the story of the Molossian queen, Thuc. 1. 136.

ἦσαν γὰρ . . χρήμασι: a note worthy of Thucydides' Archaiologia! The use of αἱ τυραννίδες after βασιλεὺς (bis) is significant; cp. l. 2 supra. For textual critique cp. App. Crit. Does the note explain why the queen was cook, or why the herds were provided for in the house (or both)? The story is all in one genre, making it easier for the herd to turn king, that he has had a queen a-baking for him. Blakesley cites Nausikaa a-washing (Od. 6) and the brothers of Andromache tending herds, Il. 6. 422. Cp. Psalm 78, elegit David servum suum et sustulit eum de gregibus ovium.

11. ὁ ἄρτος . . διπλήσιος . . αὐτὸς

ἑωυτοῦ, 'the loaf of the laddie became twice its own proper size.' The 'double portion' was a portent (τέρας) indicating kingship; cp. 6. 57, 7. 103. διπλήσιος is treated as a comparative; cp. also 2. 25.

15. φέροι μέγα τι: of great significance, portentous.

17. οὕτω: i.e. ἀπολαβόντες: they declined to depart until they had received their wages; the nominatives δίκαιοι . . ἀπολαβόντες are nicely idiomatic. κατέ, 'down.'

18. καπνοδόκη: cp. 4. 103, probably a simple aperture in the roof, or dome. The construction of the Balkan house or palace is in question! It had only a clay floor. Was it more than a domed hut?

19. ἐσέχων, 'streaming in,' yet not quite like one river into another, as in 1. 193, nor as a canal into a sea, 2. 158, nor as a bay of the sea into the land, 2. 11. But cp. ἀρυσάμενος ἱσθρῶ.

ὁ μὲν δὴ Γαυάνης τε καὶ ὁ Ἀέροπος οἱ πρεσβύτεροι ἕστασαν ἐκπεπληγμένοι, ὡς ἤκουσαν ταῦτα· ὁ δὲ παῖς, ἐτύγχανε γὰρ ἔχων μάχαιραν, εἶπας τάδε "δεκόμεθα ὦ βασιλεῦ τὰ διδοῖς," περιγράφει τῇ μαχαίρῃ ἐς τὸ ἔδαφος τοῦ οἴκου τὸν ἥλιον, περιγράφας δέ, ἐς τὸν κόλπον τρις ἀρυσάμενος τοῦ ἡλίου, 25 ἀπαλλάσσετο αὐτός τε καὶ οἱ μετ' ἐκείνου. οἱ μὲν δὴ 138 ἀπήσαν, τῷ δὲ βασιλεῖ σημαίνει τις τῶν παρέδρων οἷον τι χρῆμα ποιήσειε [ὁ παῖς] καὶ ὡς σὺν νόῳ κείνων ὁ νεώτατος λάβοι τὰ διδόμενα. ὁ δὲ ταῦτα ἀκούσας καὶ ὀξυνθεὶς πέμπει ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἰππέας ἀπολέοντας. ποταμὸς δὲ ἐστὶ ἐν τῇ χώρῃ 5 ταύτῃ, τῷ θύουσι οἱ τούτων τῶν ἀνδρῶν <τῶν> ἀπ' Ἀργεος ἀπόγονοι σωτήρι· οὗτος, ἐπεὶ τε διέβησαν οἱ Τημενίδαι, μέγας οὕτω ἐρρύνῃ ὥστε τοὺς ἰππέας μὴ οἴους τε γενέσθαι διαβῆναι. οἱ δὲ ἀπικόμενοι ἐς ἄλλην γῆν τῆς Μακεδονίης οἴκησαν πέλας τῶν κήπων τῶν λεγομένων εἶναι Μίδεω τοῦ Γορδίου, ἐν τοῖσι 10

21 καὶ Ἀέροπος B, Holder || οἱ πρεσβύτεροι del. van H., Holder: οἱ πρεσβύτατοι B 23 ὦδε δεκόμεθα αC || βασιλεὺς C 24 τοῦδαφος z 25 ἀρυσάμενος van H. 26 ἐκείνω B: αὐτοῦ z 138. 2 ἀπήσαν C: ἀπῆσαν P: ἀπίσαν Bz || βασιλεῖ AB || σημαίνει S || τῶν τις Krueger, van H. 3 ὁ παῖς secl. Stein<sup>3</sup> || συνόω C: συνόω B || ἐκείνων BPz: κακείνων C: ἐκείνων ὁ νεώτατος secl. van H. 4 δεδομένα Pz 5 <ὡς> ἀπολέοντας Naber 6 τουτέων z || <τῶν> ? van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἀπ' Ἀργεος: ἀπ' ἀρχῆς Krueger: nonne potius cum van H. deleveris ? 7 σωτήρια z 8 οὕτως α || τε om. B 10 τοῦτοισι B

22. ἐτύγχανε . . ἔχων μάχαιραν: how did he come by it? If the truth were told, probably this μάχαιρα had a good deal to say to the sequel! Was it of iron? Was it a claymore? Or merely a serving man's dirk?

23. δεκόμεθα ὦ βασιλεῦ τὰ διδοῖς: exactly the same motif appears in the anecdote, c. 114 supra; and with the corresponding motifs οἷας ἐκείνοισι πρέπει, ὁμῶν δέον.

25. τρις ἀρυσάμενος, 6. 119, as though it had been water, a symbolical action, repeated, symbolically, thrice: for 'three' and its multiples are significant numbers; cp. 1. 86, 5. 105, and countless illustrations in all literatures, rituals, games and formulae.

138. 2. παρέδρων: i.e. 'councillors,' as in 7. 147, rather than boon-companions, as in 5. 18. ἰππέας, 'horsemen.' The political and military institutions of this king seem more advanced than the domestic.

3. σὺν νόῳ, 8. 86. The Sun-rite appears to have more than a single purpose: Perdikkas symbolically takes possession of the Hearth and Home of the giver, and takes the Sun to witness his claim. Stein quotes Grimm, Rechtsalt. 278, on the Sun as the source of real property: the story of Dareios' accession is also to be cited, 3. 86. Cp. also 7. 8, II. 37 ff. supra.

5. ποταμὸς δὲ ἐστὶ . . σωτήρι: the name of the river is unfortunately not given; it could hardly have been missing if Hdt. had himself culled this story at the Makedonian court. It would probably be the Erigon or Haliakmon; Stein prefers the former, as Hdt. nowhere mentions it by name, though he has the Axios (of which it is a tributary) and the Haliakmon. σωτήρια would be very agreeable; cp. App. Crit. Stein thinks ἐτι καὶ νῦν has dropped out after θύουσι.

9. ἐς ἄλλην γῆν τῆς Μακεδονίης: no doubt Μακεδονίης proper, cp. 7. 127.

10. τῶν κήπων . . Μίδεω τοῦ Γορδίου. Midas, son of Gordias, is, of course, a φύεται αὐτόματα ῥόδα, ἐν ἑκαστον ἔχον ἐξήκοντα φύλλα, ὁδμῇ τε ὑπερφέροντα τῶν ἄλλων. ἐν τούτοισι καὶ ὁ Σίληνος τοῖσι κήποισι ἤλω, ὡς λέγεται ὑπὸ Μακεδόνων. ὑπὲρ δὲ τῶν κήπων ὄρος κέεται Βέρμιον οὔνομα, ἄβατον ὑπὸ χειμῶνος.

12 ἄλλων <καὶ χροῖη> ? Stein<sup>(2)</sup> || σίληνος R: σιληνός S: σήληνος V: δηλινός Paris. 1635 13 τοῖσι κήποισι del. Cobet 14 οὔρος CPz || κείται α, van H. || βέρβιον B || ὄνομα van H.

'Phrygian' (cp. 1. 14, 35), and 'Silenos' has already met us on the Marsyas, cp. 7. 26 supra, but it does not therefore follow that the Midas and Silenos myths have been transported from Asia, from Phrygia, into Europe, into Makedonia. Did not the Bryges, or Phryges, go from the Axios to the Marsyas? Do they not represent a folk perhaps pressed out by the advancing 'Makedonians' or even the antecessors of the Makedonians? Cp. 7. 73 supra.

11. ἐν ἑκαστον: in apposition to ῥόδα. Hdt. nowhere else mentions the rose.

φύλλα: apparently here 'petals'—the roses must have been 'double': do such grow wild (αὐτόματα)? And have any wild roses such a perfume? Did the Greeks greatly affect flower-gardens? Were their views on cultivation not rather utilitarian, after auctumno carpere pomis, than vere rosam? The garden of Alkinoos grew mainly fruit-trees; the rose is used by Homer but to paint the fingers of the Morn (ῥοδοδάκτυλος Ἥως), or to preserve the corpse of Hektor withal (II. 23. 186): a utility. The simple word first occurs in the Hymn to Demeter, 6.

12. ὑπερφέροντα: cp. c. 44 supra, 9. 96 infra.

ὁ Σίληνος . . ἤλω: cp. 7. 26 supra; the article here might possibly be in reference to the 'Silenos' of that passage, but is more probably used on more general grounds, 'the notorious.' The 'capture' this time is not made by Apollo, but by Midas, who caught Silenos and conversed with him (Plutarch l.c.). Theopompus ap. Aelian, V.H. 3. 18, puts a long fable on the Happy Land into the mouth of Silenos; Aristotle represented him as something of a pessimist (Plutarch Mor. 115) and very reluctant to answer the question of Midas, τί ποτέ ἐστι τὸ βέλτιον τοῖς ἀνθρώποις; Cp. Cicero, Tusc. Dist. 1. 48 Afferitur etiam de Sileno fabella quaedam: qui quum a Mida captus esset, hoc ei

muneris pro sua missione dedisse scribitur; docuisse regem non nasci homini longe optimum esse; proximum autem quam primum mori. That melancholy doctrine was 'Trausic' or 'Thracian' according to Hdt. 5. 4 (cp. my note ad l.).

13. ὡς λέγεται ὑπὸ Μακεδόνων. The citation of the authority, or source, implies a misgiving, but does not prove that Hdt. had the story from headquarters, or was not drawing on literature. The version given was obviously 'Makedonian' in origin; cp. 7. 73.

ὑπὲρ: higher up the country, further inland.

14. ὄρος . . Βέρμιον: cp. Strabo 330 (Z 25) τὸ Βέρμιον ὄρος δὲ πρότερον κατεῖχον Βρίγες Θρακῶν ἔθνος ὧν τινες διαβάντες εἰς τὴν Ἀσίην Φρίγες μετωνομάσθησαν. ib. 26 ἡ Βέρμοια πόλις ἐν ταῖς ὑπωρεῖαις κείται τοῦ Βερμίου ὄρους. The wealth of Midas is traced (Strabo 680) to the mines περὶ τὸ Β. δ. The mountain is identified with the range between the Haliakmon and the Lydias, the highest point of which now bears the name of Dhoxá. The exact position of the Rose Garden is more in dispute. Hdt. here places it in the neighbourhood of the city of Beroia (without naming it); i.e. in Makedonia proper, 7. 127. Abel (Makedonien, pp. 110 ff.) would place it further north, in the neighbourhood of Edessa, or Aigai, the more ancient cradle of the Makedonian folk. Kortüm (ap. Baehr ad l.) very happily relegates the Rose Garden to the same mythical region as Kriemhilt's Rosengarten zu Worms am Rhin (Rin), but instead of Kriemhilt and Brunhilt, Gunther and Siegfried, we have here only Midas and Silenos—the romantic interest is wanting!

ἄβατον ὑπὸ χειμῶνος, 'inaccessible by reason of the climate'—the which notwithstanding it was ascended, "in defiance of the assertion of Herodotus," by Leake (cp. Northern Greece, iii. 295 f.), who indeed describes it as an im-

ἐνθεῦτεν δὲ ὀρμώμενοι, ὡς ταύτην ἔσχον, κατεστρέφοντο καὶ 15
τὴν ἄλλην Μακεδονίην. ἀπὸ τούτου δὴ τοῦ Περδίκκεω 139
'Αλέξανδρος ὧδε ἐγένετο. 'Αμύντεω παῖς ἦν 'Αλέξανδρος,
'Αμύντης δὲ 'Αλκέτεω, 'Αλκέτεω δὲ πατὴρ ἦν 'Αέροπος, τοῦ δὲ Φίλιππος, Φιλίππου δὲ 'Αργαῖος, τοῦ δὲ Περδίκκης ὁ κτησάμενος τὴν ἀρχήν. 5

15 ὀρμώμενοι Cz: ὀρμώμενοι Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. || ὡς ταύτην ἔσχον del.
Cobet 139. 1 περδίκκεω SV: περδίκαιω R 2 ὦδε P || ἐγεγόνεε
Bz || 'Αλέξανδρος . . ἦν om. R 4 ἀργαῖος B: ἀραῖος Paris. 1635 z:
ἀρουραῖος Marc.: αρραιος A: ἀρραῖος || περδίκης BB: περιδίκης C

portant pass between Lower and Upper Macedonia.

15. ἐνθεῦτεν δὲ ὀρμώμενοι: three or rather four stages in all are indicated in the advance of the Makedonians, or Argeadae. I. Argos (Orestikon) or Orestis may be taken as the starting-point, or cradle, far up the Haliakmon, and about its sources, Upper Macedonia, the (unknown) city of Lebaia. II. The parts under Mount Bermion, Edessa, Beroia, the ἄλλη γῆ τῆς Μακεδονίης, near the Rose-gardens of Midas; which might be called Middle Macedonia, as no part of it touches the sea, but is generally included in Lower Macedonia. III. Lower Macedonia, τὴν ἄλλην Μακεδονίην, down to the sea; cp. 7. 127 supra: τὴν παρά θάλασσαν νῦν Μακεδονίαν Thuc. l.c. Thucydides 2. 99 gives a more matter-of-fact account of the process, and in a somewhat different stratification, including the further stage, the advance to the Strymon: the two representations are not at hopeless variance. I. The tribes of the first region, the Lynkestai, Elimiotai (+ Orestai 2. 80. 6) and others ἐπάνωθεν, high up the country, were under native kings or chiefs, though owning the suzerainty of the 'Temenids.' II. III. This overlordship was perhaps only acquired, or reasserted by Perdikkas, the son of Alexander; cp. Thuc. 4. 83. (Aigai, Beroia,) Pieria, Bottia, were the especial acquisition of the Temenids, and the strip of Paionia along the Axios, as well as Eordaia, Almopia: in short, all the territory between the Haliakmon and the Axios, together with the sea-coast. IV. Mygdonia and the territory of the Edonians, as far as the Strymon. This region is not yet 'Makedonian' in Hdt. and was the especial acquisition of Alexander I. Cp. further, notes to 7. 127. 5 supra.

139. 2. 'Αλέξανδρος ὧδε ἐγένετο, 'the generation of Alexander was on this wise.' The pedigree of Alexander compares favourably with the Achaimenid, Perdikkas the founder ranging exactly with Achaimenes, while by the affiliation on to the Temenid and Herakleid genealogies it leaves the Achaimenid far behind. If the Makedonian genealogy be placed side by side with that of the Spartan Herakleids, Perdikkas appears almost contemporary with the kings Polydorus (Agid) and Theopompos (Eurypontid), at the epoch of the Messenian war, or circa 730 B.C. (7 names = circa 230 years). Eusebius (Chron. p. 169 = Diodor. 7. 16) gives only 199 years from the accession of Perdikkas to the death of Amyntas, but prefixes 101 years for the three predecessors of Perdikkas, and so reaches about 800 B.C. as the epoch of the Makedonian monarchy instead of 700 B.C.; see below. The figures in Clinton Fasti ii.<sup>3</sup> 274 work out rather differently.

'Αμύντεω: cp. 5. 17 supra, where Amyntas I. has something of a distinctive character, in contrast to his hot-headed son. Before him the kings, back to Perdikkas, are mere names. He is given a reign of 49 years: ob. circa 498 B.C.

3. 'Αλκέτεω: the name ('Αλκίας, 'Αλκίτης) appears Greek enough, and is not confined to the Makedonian pedigree, in which it frequently recurs; a Lakdaimonian of the name in Xenoph. Hell. 5. 4. 56. The king is given a reign of 18 years.

'Αέροπος: on the name cp. c. 137 supra. He is given a reign of 20 years by the Chronicon. The name recurs as that of a reigning king in the fourth century, who, according to Polyain. 2. 1. 17, attempted to bar the return of Agesilaos (in 394 B.C.).

4. Φίλιππος is given a reign of 33

- 140 Ἐργεγόνεε μὲν δὴ ὧδε ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Ἀμύντεω· ὡς δὲ ἀπίκετο εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας ἀποπεμφθεὶς ὑπὸ Μαρδονίου, ἔλεγε τάδε, “ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, Μαρδόνιος τάδε λέγει. ἐμοὶ ἀγγελίη ἦκει παρὰ βασιλέος λέγουσα οὕτω. Ἰθὺν Ἀθηναίοισι τὰς ἀμαρτάδας τὰς ἐς ἐμὲ ἐξ ἐκείνων γενομένας πάσας μετήμι. νῦν

140. 1 ὧδε: οὕτω? van H. || ὁ ante Ἀλέξανδρος om. Apr. Bz, Holder, van H. 2 πεμφθεὶς = 4 παρὰ βασιλέος ἦκει S || ἦκε = || βασιλέος = || οὕτως B: ὧδε? van H. 5 ἐξ ἐκείνων ἐς ἐμὲ Bz, Holder || μετήμι C

years. The name occurs in the family during the fifth century, cp. Thuc. 1. 57. 3 etc. (a son of Alexander), and was not uncommon elsewhere (cp. 5. 47). In the fourth century it was destined to be eclipsed only by the name Alexander itself.

Ἀργαῖος is given a reign of 31 years (Euseb. l.c.). The name is Greek enough, and comes near the Ἀργεάδαι, Ἀργαῖοι, or Ἀργεῖοι, who play so important a part in the whole story (cp. c. 137 supra). It recurs as the name of an authentic king in the fourth century: Diodor. 14. 92. 4 ἐνιοὶ δὲ φασὶ μετὰ τὴν ἐκπτώσιν τοῦ Ἀμύντου (383 B.C.) διετῆ χρόνον Ἀργαῖον βασιλεῦσαι τῶν Μακεδόνων, τότε δὲ Ἀμύνταν ἀνακτῆσθαι τὴν βασιλείαν.

Περδίκκης: on the name cp. c. 137 supra. He is given a reign of 48 years, which would make the epoch of the kingdom 697 B.C., or circa 700 B.C. To this date the Chronicon, following the story as given in Theopompus (see c. 137 supra), adds 101 years (= 798 B.C., or circa 800 B.C.), allowing Tyremmas 43 years, Koinos 28, and Karanos, the founder according to that story, 30. The pedigree here given is doubtless official, and was, perhaps, constructed for Alexander I., though the prominence of the name Perdikkas might tempt one to depress the genealogical essay to a date after the accession of Perdikkas II. The pedigree may, nevertheless, be authentic, at least in its later members. Alexander must have produced a pedigree before he was admitted to compete at Olympia (cp. my notes to 5. 22), not later than 500 B.C. But the legendary apotheosis of Perdikkas may be an afterthought; or else Alexander gave his (eldest?) son the name of the reputed Founder of the House, in order the better to publish his claims.

140. 1. ἐργεγόνεε practically = ἐγένετο c. 139 supra.

2. ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας: Hdt. throughout represents the Athenians as having re-occupied the city during the winter of 480-79 B.C.

ἔλεγε τάδε: it is not quite clear whether the scene is laid in the Ekklesia or in the Boule; but the ambassador will have addressed Council before addressing Assembly. The different meanings, or shades, in ἔλεγε (of the actual audible speech), λέγει (of the sense, or message conveyed by the speaker, at second hand), and λέγουσα (of the substance of a despatch or letter), are noticeable; add λέγω below where Mardonios speaks in person by the lips of Alexander. ἀγγελίη is no doubt in this case a written despatch; cp. ἀγγελιηφόρος.

4. τὰς ἀμαρτάδας . . μετήμι: there is a distinctly oriental, not to say sacerdotal ring about this phrase, and indeed the whole letter. The offer comprises six items: (i.) forgiveness, i.e. no (further) penalties or reprisals against Athens; (ii.) restoration of their land, i.e. secure tenure; (iii.) additional territory (at the expense of the Peloponnesians!); (iv.) αὐτονομία—no restoration of tyrants; (v.) rebuilding of the temples; (vi.) alliance (ὁμολογέειν: cp. ὁμαιχλίην ἀνευ τε δόλου καὶ ἀπάτης ἰνῆτρα; and φίλος).

Whether any such despatch had been received by Mardonios or not is another question. Up above he has been represented as acting on his own initiative, or by the advice of oracles. Again, whether Alexander really delivered just this (τάδε) speech, or anything like it, is questionable. Baehr, while regarding the mission of Alexander as historical, says that the speeches, as reported, εἰς ῥητορικὴν αἰκίαν σοφιστικῶν φαιδρῶν; cp. 3. 40, 3. 80 etc.

5. μετήμι: cp. 6. 59 ἐν δ' αὖ Πέρσῃσι ὁ κατιστάμενος βασιλεὺς τὸν προσφειλόμενον φόρον μετεῖ. But ἀμαρτάδες are τε ὧδε Μαρδόνιε ποίει· τοῦτο μὲν τὴν γῆν σφί ἀπόδος, τοῦτο δὲ ἄλλην πρὸς ταύτῃ ἐλέσθων αὐτοί, ἥντινα ἂν ἐθέλωσι, ἐόντες αὐτόνομοι· ἱρά τε πάντα σφί, ἣν δὴ βούλωνταί γε ἐμοὶ ὁμολογέειν, ἀνόρθωσον, ὅσα ἐγὼ ἐνέπρησα· τούτων δὲ ἀπιγμένων ἀναγκαίως ἔχει μοι ποιεῖν ταῦτα, ἣν μὴ <sup>10</sup> τὸ ὑμέτερον ἀντίον γένηται. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν τάδε. νῦν τί μαίνεσθε πόλεμον βασιλείῃ ἀειρόμενοι; οὔτε γὰρ ἂν ὑπερβάλουσθε οὔτε οἱοί τε ἐστὲ ἀντέχειν τὸν πάντα χρόνον. εἴδετε μὲν γὰρ τῆς Ξέρξεω στρατηλασίης τὸ πλῆθος καὶ τὰ ἔργα, πυνθάνεσθε δὲ καὶ τὴν νῦν παρ' ἐμοὶ ἐούσαν δύναμιν· <sup>15</sup> ὥστε καὶ ἣν ἡμέας ὑπερβάλουσθε καὶ νικήσητε, τοῦ περ ὑμῖν οὐδεμία ἐλπίς εἴ περ εὖ φρονέετε, ἄλλη παρέσται πολλὰ πλησίη. μὴ ὦν βούλεσθε παρισύμενοι βασιλείῃ στέρεσθαι

6 μαρδόνιε ὧδε B || ποίει V (S): ποίει R: ποίει α, Holder, van H. 7 θέλωσι(ν V) B 9 τούτων z 11 ἀντίον Valckenaer, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: αἰτίον || τάδε νῦν· τί Bekker, van H. 12 βασιλεῖ αB || ἀνταειρόμενοι Bz, Holder, van H. || οὔτοι γὰρ ἂν ὑπερβάλλουσθε C 14 τό <τε> πλῆθος coni. Stein<sup>12</sup>, adsc. van H. 15 παρ' ἐμοὶ ἐούσαν P: παρ' ἐμὲ ἐούσαν τε καὶ? Stein<sup>1</sup> || καὶ νικήσητε del. Cobet, van H. 16 τοῦ z: τὸ 17 οὐδεμὴ z || φρονέοιτε z || <ἀλλ'> ἄλλη Cobet, Holder || παρέστε B || παραπλησίη S 18 βούλεσθαι B: βούλουσθε Pz || παρισύμενοι B || βασιλεῖ AB || ἐστερησθαι maleb. van H.

not exactly equivalent to arrears of tribute! The debt-metaphor does not quite work: but the king 'remits' the penalties owing to him; and from the remission of penalties to the remission of 'sins' the transition is easy.

9. τούτων: sc. ἀγγελιών, ἐπιστολῶν, ἐντολῶν, or rather, in the neuter abstract, referring back generally to the king's orders: just like ταῦτα immediately below.

10. ἀναγκαίως ἔχει μοι, 'necessity is laid on me'—Mardonios.

ἣν μὴ τὸ ὑμέτερον ἀντίον γένηται, 'unless you should interpose an obstacle': in which case ἀντίον is predicative. But cp. App. Crit. The vulgate αἰτίον has, perhaps, been too lightly discarded: it would mean 'unless you should cause me to fail in my endeavour.' The predicative force of the possessive, and the idiomatic use of αἰτίον (cp. c. 7. 125. 5 supra) would then be noticeable.

11. λέγω δέ: Mardonios is still the speaker, reported by Alexander.

12. πόλεμον βασιλείῃ ἀειρόμενοι: π. ἀείρεσθαι, cp. 7. 132, 156—in both places with a dative. The tense here is remarkable: is the fresh campaign regarded as a fresh war, or warfare? Is not the door diplomatically opened for the Athenians to drop their arms, by the insinuation that they have not yet quite concluded taking them up?

ὑπερβάλουσθε, 'prove superior'; 7. 163, 168, c. 24 supra.

13. ἀντέχων κτλ., 'to withstand'—hold out against—'for ever.'

τὸν πάντα χρόνον: here future, cp. 3. 65, (4. 187, 9. 73, 106): in some cases the past, 6. 123, 9. 27 (Stein).

14. τῆς Ξέρξεω στρατηλασίης τὸ πλῆθος καὶ τὰ ἔργα: στρατηλασίης appears to=στρατοῦ. The στρατηλασίη of Xerxes is one thing, that of Mardonios another. Mardonios may be supposed to be referring to Thermopylai, and the destruction of Athens by Xerxes: he cannot be supposed to have in view the naval στρατός. He apparently compares the immense size, and success, of Xerxes' army (πεῖθ' στρατός) with his own reduced numbers and possible, though not probable, defeat.

μὲν τῆς χώρας, θέειν δὲ αἰεὶ περὶ ὑμέων αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ 20 καταλύσασθε· παρέχει δὲ ὑμῖν κάλλιστα [καταλύσασθαι], βασιλέος ταύτῃ ὀρμημένου· ἔστε ἐλεύθεροι, ἡμῖν ὁμαιχμίην συνθέμενοι ἄνεν τε δόλου καὶ ἀπάτης. Μαρδόνιος μὲν ταῦτα ὦ Ἀθηναῖοι ἐντεῖλατό μοι εἰπεῖν πρὸς ὑμέας· ἐγὼ δὲ περὶ μὲν εὐνοίης τῆς πρὸς ὑμέας εἰούσης ἐξ ἐμεῦ οὐδὲν λέξω, οὐ 25 γὰρ ἂν νῦν πρῶτον ἐκμάθοιτε, προσχρηρίζω δὲ ὑμέων πείθεσθαι Μαρδονίῳ. ἐνορῶ γὰρ ὑμῖν οὐκ οἰοῖσιν τε ἐσομένοισιν τὸν πάντα χρόνον πολεμέειν Ξέρξῃ· εἰ γὰρ ἐνῶρων τοῦτο ἐν ὑμῖν, οὐκ ἂν κοτε ἐς ὑμέας ἦλθον ἔχων λόγους τούσδε· καὶ γὰρ
 δύναμις ὑπὲρ ἀνθρώπων ἢ βασιλέος ἐστὶ καὶ χεὶρ ὑπερμήκης.
 30 ἦν ὧν μὴ αὐτίκα ὁμολογήσητε, μεγάλα προτείνοντων ἐπ' οἷσι ὁμολογέειν ἐθέλουσι, δειμαίνω ὑπὲρ ὑμέων ἐν τρίβῳ τε

19 ἐωντέων z 20 καταλλάσσεσθε z || καταλύσασθαι secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>,
 Holder, van H.: καταλύσασθε V 21 . βασιλέος P: . βασιλῆος z ||
 ὀρμημένου CPz || , ἐστὲ Pz: . ἐστὲ R 22 δόλου τε van H. 23
 εἶται z, van H. 24 ἐξ ἐμεῦ εἰούσης B 25 προσχρηρίζω aP:
 προσχρηρίζω BC: προσχρηρίζω z 26 ἐνορῶ ACP, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder: ἐνορέω Bz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ἐνορῶν B<sup>1</sup>: ἐνορῶν B<sup>2</sup> 27 ἐνῶρων S: ἐνῶρεον
 van H. || [τοῦτο ἐν ὑμῖν]? van H. || ἐν: ἐνδον z 28 τοιούτους z
 29 βασιλῆος z 30 ὧν: οὖν C: om. B || ἐπ' οἷσι: ἐποίσει B

19. θέειν: cp. πολλάκις ἀγῶνας δραμέονται c. 102 supra.

21. ταύτῃ ὀρμημένου, 'having taken the initiative in that way,' as aforesaid.
 (Cum haec regis sit voluntas, Baehr.)

ὁμαιχμίην: cp. 7. 145 supra.
 The offer is of distinct alliance, with liberty intact (ἔστε ἐλεύθεροι).

22. ἄνεν τε δόλου καὶ ἀπάτης: a standing formula of Hellenic or international diplomacy; cp. 1. 69, and in actual treaty texts ap. Thuc. 4. 118. 1 (ἀδόλως καὶ ἀδεῶς κατὰ τοὺς πατρίους νόμους); 5. 18. 9 (δικαίως καὶ ἀδόλως);
 5. 23 ibis (δικαίως καὶ προθύμως καὶ ἀδόλως); 5. 47. 8 (δικαίως καὶ ἀβλαβῶς καὶ ἀδόλως). δόλος must be the same word as the Latin dolus; cp. L. & S.
 The proceedings for 'striking a treaty'
 as reported in Livy 1. 24 (sine fraude mea, sine dolo malo, etc.) might suggest that the formula was very ancient.

23. ἐγὼ δέ: Alexander, propria persona.

24. εὐνοίης: a thoroughly Attic formula; cp. complimentary decrees passim.

οὐ γὰρ ἂν νῦν πρῶτον ἐκμάθοιτε must mean, not 'I have often spoken of it before,' but 'you have had many practical proofs of it.' As to the fact cp.

 note above, c. 136.

26. ἐνορῶ γὰρ ὑμῖν: the construction appears to be determined by the preposition; cp. just below εἰ γὰρ ἐνῶρων τοῦτο ἐν ὑμῖν. Cp. συνειδέναι.

29. χεὶρ ὑπερμήκης: the youngest son, the successor of Xerxes, was known to later tradition as μακρόχειρ, i.e. the word is found in Plutarch Artax. 1 μακρόχειρ ἐπεκαλεῖτο τὴν δεξιὰν μείζονα τῆς ἐτέρας ἔχων. But the statement perhaps rests merely on a metaphor misunderstood: χεὶρ = δύναμις, e.g. 4. 155.
 Ovid Her. 17. 166 *an nescis longas
 regibus esse manus?* Pollux 2. 151 ἐκα-τόνχειρ, μακρόχειρ, εἶτε κατὰ Πολύκλειτον
 ὁ Τσάσπου Δαρείος, εἶτε κατὰ Ἀντιλέοντα Ξέρξης, εἶτε κατὰ τοὺς πλείστον Ὡχος ὁ ἐπικληθεὶς Ἀρταξέρξης ἦτοι τὴν δεξιὰν ἔχων προμηκεστέραν ἢ τὴν ἀριστερὰν ἢ ἀμφοτέρας· οἱ δὲ ὅτι καὶ τὴν δύναμιν ἐπὶ πλείστον ἐξέτεινεν.

30. μεγάλα, 'advantageous to you.'

προτείνοντων: sc. τῶν Περσέων.

31. ἐν τρίβῳ τε κτλ. Alexander is made to describe the Athenians as (i.) dwelling on the highway (ἐν τρίβῳ), that is, in the most exposed situation; (ii.)

μάλιστα οἰκημένων τῶν συμμάχων πάντων αἰεὶ τε φθειρομένων μούνων, ἐξαίρετον μεταίχμιόν τε τὴν γῆν ἐκτημένων. ἀλλὰ πίθεσθε· πολλοῦ γὰρ ὑμῖν ἄξια ταῦτα, εἰ βασιλεύς γε ὁ μέγας μούνοισι ὑμῖν Ἑλλήνων τὰς ἀμαρτάδας ἀπιεὶς ἐθέλει 35 φίλος γενέσθαι."

Ἀλέξανδρος μὲν ταῦτα ἔλεξε, Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ πυθόμενοι 141
ἤκειν Ἀλέξανδρον ἐς Ἀθήνας ἐς ὁμολογίην ἄξοντα τῷ βαρβάρῳ Ἀθηναίους, ἀναμνησθέντες τῶν λογίων ὥς σφεας

33 μούνων C: 'post hoc in libris non dividitur' Stein || ἐξαίρετον μεταίχμιόν τε CV, Stein, Holder: ἐξαίρετον· μεταίχμιόν τε ABP: ἐξαί-ρετον· τὲ μεταίχμιον R: ἐξαίρετον, μεταίχμιόν τε S: μεταίχμιον tantum
Marc.: ἐξαίρετόν τι μεταίχμιον z, van H. || ἐκτημένων z: κεκτημένων
34 πίθεσθε Cobet 35 ἀφιεὶς P: ἀφείς αC || θέλει B 141. 1
τοσαῦτα B 2 ἐς Ἀθηναίους C 3 ὥς σφεας R, van H.

bearing (or likely to bear) all the brunt of the war alone; (iii.) their territory being the natural battle-field, or debatable ground, between the contending armies (Persian, Peloponnesian). The description applies fairly well to Attica, which during this war was twice invaded and devastated, and had been the scene of the great naval battle, to say nothing of Marathon, ten years earlier; but in a general way, and throughout Greek history, Boiotia would better answer to the description (cp. 9. 2. 3 infra), and even in this war it was north of Kithairon that the ἐξαίρετον μεταίχμιον was to be found. The phrase here perhaps expresses the Athenian sense of their special sufferings in the common cause (τῶν συμμάχων πάντων).

33. ἀλλὰ: with the imperative, to cut short the question; cp. L. & S. sub v. II. 2.

34. ταῦτα might seem to refer to what follows (εἰ βασιλεύς γε κτλ.), which, however, reproduces the preceding offers. ὁ μέγας is an unusual addition, but a (lesser) king is speaking.

141. 1. Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ κτλ. If any part of the story of Alexander's embassy could have come from other than an Athenian source, it is not this chapter, which positively reeks Atticism. The solidarity of the story as a whole carries the Attic source for every part.

πυθόμενοι: who let them know? Their friends in Athens? Themistokles?

2. τῷ βαρβάρῳ with ὁμολογίην. Baehr op. 7. 169 τὰ Μεγαλέφ τιμωρήματα.

3. ἀναμνησθέντες τῶν λογίων: what oracles were these which they now recalled to mind? Blakesley detects herein the oracles found by Kleomenes in the Akropolis (in 511 B.C.) 5. 90, and further suggests that they were fabrications by Onomakritos (cp. 7. 6 supra). But was such a prediction, as is here reported, likely to have been formulated so early as that? Or is the added motive, based upon these supposed oracles, required to account for the action of the Lakedaimonians on this occasion? Onomakritos may have been the author of these λόγια, but, if so, their fabrication was probably of later date, and they were perhaps part of the artillery brought to bear upon the Athenians to procure their medism, not Lakedaimonian reminiscences of discoveries thirty years old.

In any case this prediction is precious: prophecies fulfilled are sweet, but those unfulfilled are sweeter, to the historian; their authenticity is so much more obvious. The unfulfilled prediction, besides, makes room for some fulfilment of prediction. The extreme precision of the present instance raises it to the level of a maxim of policy, cp. c. 62 supra.

The expulsion of the Lakedaimonians and all the other Dorians to boot from the Peloponnesos by the Medes and Athenians, i.e. the complete reversal of the Dorian conquest and its effects, was not a bad idea to conjure with, and has rather a Themistoklean touch about it: perhaps it was not an offer made by Mardonios to attract the Athenians, but a bogle devised in Athens to terrify the Spartans. It might at least suggest χρεόν ἐστι ἅμα τοῖσι ἄλλοισι Δωριεῦσι ἐκπίπτειν ἐκ Πελο-5 ποννήσου ὑπὸ Μήδων τε καὶ Ἀθηναίων, κάρτα τε ἔδεισαν μὴ ὁμολογήσωσι τῷ Πέρσῃ Ἀθηναῖοι, αὐτίκα τέ σφι ἔδοξε πέμπειν ἀγγέλους. καὶ δὴ συνέειπτε ὥστε ὁμοῦ σφῶν γίνεσθαι τὴν κατάστασιν· ἐπανεμείναν γὰρ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι διατρίβοντες, εὖ ἐπιστάμενοι ὅτι ἔμελλον Λακεδαιμόνιοι 10 πεύσεσθαι ἤκοντα παρὰ τοῦ βαρβάρου ἄγγελον ἐπ' ὁμολογίῃ, πυθόμενοι τε πέμψειν κατὰ τάχος ἀγγέλους. ἐπίτηδες ὦν

 ἐποίουν, ἐνδεικνύμενοι τοῖσι Λακεδαιμόνιοις τὴν ἐωυτῶν 142 γνώμην. ὥς δὲ ἐπαύσατο λέγων Ἀλέξανδρος, διαδεξάμενοι ἔλεγον οἱ ἀπὸ Σπάρτης ἄγγελοι "ἡμέας δὲ ἔπεμψαν Λακεδαιμόνιοι δεησομένους ὑμέων μήτε νεώτερον ποιέειν μηδὲν κατὰ τὴν Ἑλλάδα μήτε λόγους ἐνδέκεσθαι παρὰ τοῦ βαρβάρου.
 5 οὔτε γὰρ δίκαιον οὐδαμῶς οὔτε κόσμον φέρον οὔτε γε ἄλλοις Ἑλλήνων οὐδαμοῖσι, ὑμῖν δὲ δὴ καὶ διὰ πάντων ἦκιστα πολλῶν εἵνεκα. ἡγείρατε γὰρ τόνδε τὸν πόλεμον ὑμεῖς οὐδὲν

4 χρεών CPz, van H. || ἐκ: ἀπὸ B 5 τε post κάρτα om. S(V)
 6 δὲ σφι(ῖν V) B || ἔδοξεν AB ap. Stein<sup>1</sup>: ἔδοξε α: ἔδοξεν B ap. Holder
 7 σφέων BCz 10 ἐπομολογίῃ C 11 πειθόμενοι R 142. 5
 φέρον R || οὔτι γε Werfer: γε om. B ('locus vix sanus' van H.) 6 δὴ
 om. S 7 ἡγείρατε z || τὸν πόλεμον τόνδε B: (πόλεμον τόνδε absque τὸν S ap. Gaisf.) || ἡμεῖς οὐδὲν ὑμέων C possibilities in the future: but what of Argos as the king's best friend? 7. 150 ff. Perhaps the whole notion really belongs to the later date, and the time of Themistokles' medism. The patriotic (i.e. Attic) aspects of that gran risiuto were never allowed to emerge in the Themistoklean legend; and Athenian tradition was quite capable of ignoring the true and original connexion of this prophecy, and utilizing it in the present connexion, where it is materially and even grammatically de trop.

6. ἔδοξε: here of a formal decision.

7. ἀγγέλους = πρέσβεις: cp. 7. 1.

καὶ δὴ: each particle has its full and ordinary sense.

συνέειπτε ὥστε: cp. c. 15 supra; it was a coincidence, but not an undesignated one: ἐπίτηδες ἐποίουν just below. This latter verb may represent ἐπανεμείναν (so Stein), an abstract idiom, corresponding to the use of our verb 'do,' 'did' (which would, however, require an express object, however abstract: 'this they were doing').

8. κατάστασιν: in the same sense 3. 46; in a different one, c. 83 supra.

12. ἐνδεικνύμενοι, 'displaying'; cp. Thuc. 4. 126. ὁ τὸ εὐψυχον ἐν τῷ ἀσφαλεῖ δεῖξις ἐνδείκνυνται.

142. 1. διαδεξάμενοι: exactly as in Plato Rep. 576 b Ἀνάγκη, ἐφη διαδεξάμενος τὸν λόγον ὁ Ἰλαόκων. Cp. διάδοχος, διαδοχή.

2. ἡμέας δέ: the conjunction is noticeable; here it might almost suggest a suppressed clause: Ἀλέξανδρον μὲν κτλ. Cp. 5. 109 ἡμέας δὲ ἀπέπεμψε.

3. νεώτερον ποιέειν (cp. 5. 35), to do something newer, too new, outrageous, etc., perhaps not a mere euphemism, but an implicit plea for the maxim stare super antiquas vias; and so probably in the first instance referring not to foreign but to domestic affairs. Its use here might be taken to hint that a schism in the Greek ranks would be of the nature of στάσις (cp. c. 3 supra).

4. λόγους ἐνδέκεσθαι: 7. 236 supra.

5. κόσμον φέρον: cp. c. 60 supra.

6. διὰ πάντων: cp. c. 37 supra.

7. ἡγείρατε . . . οὐδὲν ὑμέων βουλομένων: a statement quite inconsistent with the alleged outrage at Sparta upon the Persian heralds, 7. 133 supra. If ἡμέων βουλομένων, καὶ περὶ τῆς ὑμετέρας ἀρχῆθεν ὁ ἀγὼν ἐγένετο, νῦν δὲ φέρει καὶ ἐς πᾶσαν τὴν Ἑλλάδα· ἄλλως τε τούτων ἀπάντων, αἰτίους γενέσθαι δουλοσύνης τοῖσι Ἑλλησι<sup>10</sup> Ἀθηναίους οὐδαμῶς ἀνασχετόν, οἷτινες αἰεὶ καὶ τὸ πάλαι φαίνεσθε πολλοὺς ἐλευθερώσαντες ἀνθρώπων. πιεζυμένοισι μέντοι ὑμῖν συναχθόμεθα, καὶ ὅτι καρπῶν ἔστερήθητε διξῶν

8 βουλομένων AB ap. Stein<sup>1</sup>: βουλομένων α: βουλομένων B ap. Holder || ἀρχῆθεν Wesseling, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἀρχὴν Schaefer: ἀρχῆς 9 ἄλλως τε: ἄλλως τε ἄνευ Reiske: πάρεξ τε vel χωρὶς τε conl. Stein<sup>2</sup>: αἰτίους, αἰτίαως Pauw: Ἀν delenda verba τούτων ἀπάντων? van H. 10 τούτων Bz || πάντων B: ἀπαντώντων Schaefer, Schweighauser 11 καὶ: κατὰ z 12 πιεζόμενοισι BCz, van H. 13 ἐστερήσθε z

we are to go back to the Athenian challenge in 5. 96, why not to the Spartan 'Hands off' message in 1. 152?

8. περὶ τῆς ὑμετέρας ἀρχῆθεν ὁ ἀγὼν ἐγένετο: sc. γῆς. Cp. the words of Themistokles to the Ionians c. 22 supra: ἀρχῆθεν ἢ ἐχθρῇ πρὸς τὸν βάρβαρον ἀπ' ἡμέων ἡμῖν γέγονε. The Athenian responsibility is probably conceived as going back to 498 B.C. and the despatch of the twenty ships to Sardes, which were ἀρχὴ κακῶν Ἑλλησι τε καὶ βαρβάροις 5. 97. The beautiful anachronism ἀρχῆς can hardly be maintained, or it would be extremely serviceable. Blakesley and Rawlinson indeed would maintain it on the ground that one anachronism is already involved in ascribing to the Athenians in 479 B.C. such services on behalf of freedom as are predicated of them in the context: "up to this time they had never taken any part in liberating any nation." But the Athenians would have cited the cases of (1) Plataea, (2) the Ionians, (3) Marathon, to say nothing of more legendary exploits. Cp. 9. 27 infra; and αἰεὶ καὶ τὸ πάλαι in any case refutes R.'s argument. Baehr also defends ἀρχῆς, quod ipsa sententia loci requirere . . . videtur. Cp. App. Crit. If maintained, it would of course be an afterthought tending to bring down the composition of this speech after the Thirty Years' Truce: a date before which the term ἀρχῆς will hardly have been used of the Athenian Symmachia.

9. φέρει . . . ἐς, reaches, is threatening, concerns, affects.

ἄλλως τε τούτων ἀπάντων: a desperate crux. Stein<sup>3</sup> boldly takes ἄλλως as = χωρὶς, though such a use of ἄλλως (he admits) is unprecedented; in

3. 8 (which he cites) ἀμφοτέρων αὐτῶν seems to be constructed with ἐν μέσῳ rather than with ἄλλος. For the various emendations, none of them satisfactory, cp. App. Crit. If the prepositional use of ἄλλως is rejected, τούτων ἀπάντων might be taken 'of all Hellenes' (that the Athenians, etc.), τούτων referring to πᾶσαν τὴν Ἑλλάδα just before; but τοῖσι Ἑλλησι just after rather militates against this rendering. The repetition of αἰτίους is very neat; but τούτων ἀπάντων would involve tasteless exaggeration in that case. ἀπαντώντων makes a very poor sense. The insertion of ἄνευ or χωρὶς (as in 9. 26, 3. 82) gives a good sense, and an Herodotean formula, but the omission is not easy to account for palaeographically.

11. ἀνασχετόν: cp. 7. 163, and ἀνέχεσθαι tolerare 7. 87, 149 etc. οἷτινες causal, 'seeing that ye . . .'

12. ἀνθρώπων is here used 'without prejudice'; for instances see 8 above.

13. συναχθόμεθα, 'we sympathize with'; the word is common in Xenophon and the orators of the fourth century, but this appears to be the only place where it is found in any earlier writer. The double καὶ ὅτι gives an air of precision to the statements, which are not in reality exact co-ordinates; cp. below.

καρπῶν ἔστερήθητε διξῶν ἤδη. This assertion raises a slight chronological difficulty: the scene is laid at Athens in the winter or early spring of 479 B.C. How have the Athenians already lost two harvests? Are they the harvests of two years, or the two harvests of one year? Presumably the former: but if so, the years being 480, 479 B.C., how had the Athenians already lost the harvest

ἤδη καὶ ὅτι οἰκοφθόρησθε χρόνον ἤδη πολλόν. ἀντὶ τούτων 15 δὲ ὑμῖν Λακεδαιμόνιοί τε καὶ οἱ σύμμαχοι ἐπαγγέλλονται γυναῖκάς τε καὶ τὰ ἐς πόλεμον ἄχρηστα οἰκετέων ἐχόμενα πάντα ἐπιθρέψειν, ἔστ' ἂν ὁ πόλεμος ὅδε συνεστήκη. μηδὲ ὑμέας Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Μακεδὼν ἀναγνώσῃ, λήνας τὸν Μαρδονίου λόγον. τούτῳ μὲν γὰρ ταῦτα ποιητέα ἐστί·
 20 τύραννος γὰρ ἐὼν τυράνῳ συγκατεργάζεται. ὑμῖν δὲ οὐ

14 τούτων :: 15 οἱ λοιποὶ σύμμαχοι B 16 γυναῖκάς
 τε καὶ secl. van H. || πάντα οἰκετέων ἐχόμενα P<sup>1</sup> 17 ἐστὶν AB ||
 συνέστηκε S || μὴ δὲ libri 20 <ἀρχὴν> συγκατεργάζεται? van H.
 || δὲ: δέ γε B, Holder of 479! Had they failed to follow the directions of Themistokles σπόρον ἀνακῶς ἔχειν c. 109 supra, and so lost a harvest by anticipation? Or is not the expression here really a slight anachronism, the two harvests which the Athenians ultimately lost, one in 480 B.C. by the devastation of Xerxes, the other in 479 B.C. by the devastation of Mardonios, having been 'telescoped' by the writer (or his source) in the light of later events, from the point of view of the hypothetical orator? (The anachronism remains the same if Archontic years are understood; or, for that matter, Spartan.) The apparent co-ordination of the aorist (ἐσπερήθητε) and the perfect (οἰκοφθόρησθε) is grammatically interesting; yet a shade of difference belongs to them. The καρπῶν στέργεις is a precise and limited fact; the οἰκοφθορία is a process, which, though now perfectly complete, has been a long time going on. Thus the tenses of the two verbs here could not be simply interchanged without a loss of significance.

14. ἀντὶ τούτων δέ: the δέ is emphatic; cp. l. 2 supra, 'in return therefor'—to compensate or console you.

15. Λακεδαιμόνιοί τε καὶ οἱ σύμμαχοι: i.e. the Peloponnesians; it may include Aigina and Megara, but at least the Athenians are conceived as excluded from the title: this is a symmarchy within the symmarchy ἐπὶ τῷ Μήδῳ.

ἐπαγγέλλονται, 'make you this offer'; cp. 7. 1.

16. γυναῖκάς τε καὶ . . . οἰκετέων ἐχόμενα: οἰκ. ἐχ. = οἰκέτας c. 144 infra; cp. cc. 44, 106 supra. This phrase here is an elaborate periphrasis; cp. 1. 120, 193. The children are of course included, as ἐπι-θρέψειν would also suggest.

17. ἔστ' ἂν ὁ πόλεμος ὅδε συνεστήκη: for the phrase (συστῆναι) cp. 7. 144, 225, 'while, so long as, this war obtain.' The perfect subjunctive is noticeable, but the word is only 'perfect' in grammatical form, and practically present, or rather aoristic, in sense.

18. λήνας: cp. 7. 10 supra.

20. τύραννος γὰρ ἐὼν τυράνῳ συγκατεργάζεται: an obvious gnome, probably much older than the ostensible occasion, and perhaps even inherited from 'the age of the Despots.' Not but what tyrant at times would work not with but against his fellow. 'Birds of a feather fly together,' 'thieves work in pairs,' etc. etc., were proverbs a little hard on Alexander and Mardonios. Alexander was not a 'tyrant' in the proper sense (cp. c. 137 supra), and Mardonios was not technically a 'tyrant' at all. The gnome might have worked better, especially as illustrating the co-operation of the tyranny and the Mede, if applied to the Ionians on the Ister (4. 137 f.), or Hippias at Sardes (5. 96), or the Greek exiles in the train of Xerxes (7. 6 supra). The point here, however, put forward is not primarily the connexion of 'medism' and 'tyranny,' but the tendency of tyrant to stand by tyrant against the Republics. The Republics, Sparta herself, did not go into this matter with clean hands: she had worked for the restoration of Hippias (5. 91), she would have accepted the aid of Gelon upon conditions (7. 157 supra), as she was afterwards glad to accept the aid of Dionysios, or for that matter of Persia itself. But there is a certain amount of truth in the solidarity of constitutional sentiment. All states are forced from time to time into strange ποιητέα, εἴ περ εὖ τυγχάνετε φρονέοντες, ἐπισταμένοισι ὡς βαρβάροις ἐστὶ οὔτε πιστὸν οὔτε ἀληθὲς οὐδέν." ταῦτα ἔλεξαν οἱ ἄγγελοι,

Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ πρὸς μὲν Ἀλέξανδρον ὑπεκρίναντο τάδε, 143
 "καὶ αὐτοὶ τοῦτό γε ἐπιστάμεθα ὅτι πολλαπλησίη ἐστὶ τῷ Μήδω δύναμις ἢ περ ἡμῖν, ὥστε οὐδὲν δέει τοῦτό γε ὀνειδίζειν. ἀλλ' ὅμως ἐλευθερίας γλιχόμενοι ἀμυνέμεθα οὕτω ὅπως ἂν καὶ δυνώμεθα. ὁμολογήσαι δὲ τῷ βαρβάρῳ μήτε σὺ ἡμέας πειρῶς ἀναπείθειν οὔτε ἡμεῖς πεισόμεθα. νῦν τε ἀπάγγελλε Μαρδονίῳ [ὡς Ἀθηναῖοι λέγουσι], ἔστ' ἂν ὁ ἥλιος τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν ἔη τῇ

21 τυγχάνεται R: τυγχάνεσθε P 22 βαρβάροις ἐστὶ P, Stein<sup>2</sup>:
 βαρβάροισι ἐστὶ α, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H.: βαρβάροισιν ἐστὶν R (βαρβάροισιν ἐστὶν B ap. Holder) 143. 1 τοιαύδε B 2 γε om. R || τῶν μήδων B 4 ἐλευθερίην σκεπτόμενοι BP (in marg. corr.) ≈ || ἀμύνεσθαι C || οὕτως AB ap. Stein: οὕτω α: οὕτως B ap. Holder || καὶ
 om. B 6 ἡμέας ≈ || τε: δὲ RSV 7 ὡς Ἀθηναῖοι λέγουσι del.
 Cobet, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἐστὼν AB || τῇ: τὴν Cobet, van H.

or unnatural alliances by necessity or interest: nor is identity of constitution between neighbours any great security for peace. Monarchy will war against Monarchy, Republic against Republic, for the sake of territory, or commerce, or honour, or adventure, or existence, and will seek or accept any alliance that may serve its turn; but still all the same one form of constitution has an 'elective affinity' for its like, and other things being equal, tolerates or co-operates with it more easily. A Bundesstaat could never arise between states of diverse constitution, and it may be doubted whether diversely constituted units can permanently maintain a Staaten-Bund.

22. βαρβάροις ἐστὶ οὔτε πιστὸν οὔτε ἀληθὲς οὐδέν. Is this monstrous utterance in place here as a common Hellenic sentiment? Or is it put into the mouth of the speaker as a satirical sample of Spartan philosophy? Does it simply prepare the way for the magnificent pan-Hellenism of the Athenian reply? Does it reflect upon the subsequent duplicity and bad faith of the Spartans themselves? It is certainly not the opinion of the historian, whether he has taken it over from his source or dramatically devised it to give point to the piece: his whole work belies it, and in particular his account of Persian παιδεία, 1. 136.

143. 3. οὐδὲν δέει, 'thou needest not.' The form (midd. indic. pr. 2nd person) is not noticed by L. & S.

4. γλιχόμενοι: cp. γλίχεται (ὡς . .) 7. 161; γλιχομένοις περὶ τῆς ἐλευθερίας 2. 102. The participial construction is here equivalent to a dependent sentence: quia etc.

ἀμυνέμεθα is, of course, future; ὅπως ἂν after οὕτω appears not as a final but rather as a relative, to which οὕτω is antecedent. The correlation is "frequent in poetry, but less so in prose," Madvig § 310. Cp. Plato Phaed. 115 ο ταῦτα μὲν τοίνυν προθυμηθήσόμεθα, ἔφη, οὕτω ποιεῖν· θάπτωμεν δὲ σέ τινα τρόπον; Ὅπως ἂν, ἔφη, βούλησθε, ἐάνπερ γε λάβητέ με καὶ μὴ ἐκφύγω ὑμᾶς.

5. μήτε . . οὔτε: the forms of the negative are determined by the moods; so below mḗποτε follows the imperative.

7. ἔστ' ἂν ὁ ἥλιος τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν ἔη τῇ περ καὶ νῦν ἔρχεται: is the path from east to west (and vice versa) or from south to north (and vice versa), or, more generally, both the daily and annual paths intended! When Hdt. came to write 'the Egyptian Logoi' he had ceased to regard the sun as a safe fixture, and could hardly have taken its annual course as a symbol of τὰ μὴ ἐνδεχόμενα ἄλλως ἔχειν. Cp. 2. 24-26. He would rather, perhaps, have taken the rising and setting of the sun as a perfect certainty; yet cp. 2. 142. In any case, περ καὶ νῦν ἔρχεται, μήκοτε ὁμολογήσειν ἡμέας Ξέρξη· ἀλλὰ θεοῖσί τε συμμάχοισι πίσυνοί μιν ἐπέξιμεν ἀμυνόμενοι καὶ το τοῖσι ἥρωσι, τῶν ἐκείνος οὐδεμίαν ὅπιν ἔχων ἐνέπρησε τοὺς τε

8 περ οἱ. αC 9 πίσυνοί B 10 οὐδὲ μίαν ὅπιν α: ὅπιν
οὐδεμίαν B: οὐδεμίαν ὅπιν = || ἐνέπρησέ τε τοὺς S

however, this proverbial appeal to the Uniformity of Nature would remain dramatically available: Hdt. is not speaking propria persona. Stein<sup>9</sup> happily cps. Sophokl. Philokl. 1329 ff.:

καὶ παῦλαν ἴσθι τῆσδε μή ποτ' ἐντυχεῖν νόσου βαρείας, ὥς ἂν αὐτὸς ἥλιος ταύτη μὲν αἶρη, τῇδε δ' αὖ δόνη πάλιν—

and as another symbol of eternal fixity, the relative position of earth and stars, from Euripides, Fr. 688 (Nauck):

πρόσθε γὰρ κάτω
γῆς εἰσαν ἀστέρα, γῇ δ' ἀνείσ' ἐς αἰθέρα πρὶν ἐξ ἐμοῦ σοι θῶπ' ἀπαντῆσαι λόγον.

Herodotus makes a Korinthian orator employ a less dignified symbol, with a similar point, 5. 92.

This grand boast of the Athenians belongs to the pre-Periklean period: it would have sounded rather silly within sight of 'the Treaty of Kallias,' cp. 7. 151 supra, even though that ὁμολογία was not concluded with Xerxes, or not concluded at all. War à outrance is still the mot d'ordre of the day when Hdt. first drafted this history; cp. 7. 11 supra.

9. θεοῖσί τε συμμάχοισι . . καὶ τοῖσι ἥρωσι: not the Spartans, etc. (συμμάχοισι predicative). The gods and heroes figure but to a small extent in the actual story of the Great Invasion. The legend of Marathon was more deeply saturated with the supernatural motif, or at least with its symbolical outcome in actual epiphanies (cp. Hdt. IV.—VI. App. X.). No doubt at the time the Athenians looked for divine assistance, according to their lights (cp. 7. 140, 189, c. 64 supra), and afterwards believed themselves to have received it in large measure (cc. 13, 65, 109, 121 supra); but the actual battles of the war go off without much active interposition (c. 94 supra unique) from above: the great gods of Themistokles were Persuasion and Force (c. 108 supra); the supernatural machinery of the story, so far as it exists, is mainly an afterthought (7.

12 etc.), or an apology (cc. 35 ff. supra). Cp. Introduction, § 11.

μιν ἐπέξιμεν ἀμυνόμενοι. Is μιν acc. with the participle (as Stein and Sitzler take it) or with the primary verb? The construction of ἐπέξιμι is very various. ἐπέξισαν 7. 223 supra is used absolutely: where a personal object is expressed it is usually in the dative, whether the verb be used in the martial or in the legal sense, but an accus. of the person is found e.g. Antiphon 1. 11 ἀπηγγέλλθι ἐπεξίλοιμι τοῦ πατρὸς τὸν φορέα, cp. also Eurip. Androm. 735 τήνδ' (sc. πόλιν) ἐπεξελεῖν θέλω, and therefore cannot be pronounced impossible here. The accus. rei is more common; e.g. Hdt. 1. 5 ὁμοίως σμικρὰ καὶ μεγάλα δόρεα ἀνθρώπων ἐπεξίων: Plato Rep. 437 πάσας τὰς τοιαύτας ἀμφισβητήσεις ἐπεξιώντες (Thuc. 1. 84. 3, 3. 82. 8 are not conclusive). A sole reference of μιν to the participle here is harsh, considering the order of the words; but the participle and verb may be conceived as coalescing into a single idea ('we shall resolutely resist him'), and the accus. may be taken as governed by the whole verbal phrase. Strictly speaking ἐπέξ. ἀμ. is an oxymoron, or a precise formula for 'the offensive defensive.'

10. τῶν . . τὰ ἀγάλματα. The relative τῶν may be constructed both with ὅπιν and with οἴκους κτλ. ὅπιν, a strictly poetic word, recurs 9. 76 infra. (Homer uses the word only of the divine action, vengeance, punishment, θεῶν, more frequently in the Od., and even absolutely, his, 14. 82, 88.) Pindar employs the word for the favourable regard of the gods for man (Pylh. 8. 101), but also for human regard (not for the gods but for humanity), Ol. 2. 6, Isth. 4. (5.) 58. The acc. ὅπιν is also found (e.g. Od. 20. 215).

On the Persian destruction of holy places and objects cp. cc. 33, 35, 53, 109 supra; the Athenians were naturally very sore on this subject (though their losses turned out a blessing in disguise), οἶκους καὶ τὰ ἀγάλματα. σύ τε τοῦ λοιποῦ λόγους ἔχων τοιούσδε μὴ ἐπιφαίνοο Ἀθηναίοισι, μηδὲ δοκέω χρηστὰ ὑπουργεῖν ἀθέμιστα ἔρδειν παραίνεε· οὐ γὰρ σὲ βουλόμεθα οὐδὲν ἄχαρι πρὸς Ἀθηναίων παθεῖν ἔοντα πρόξενόν τε καὶ φίλον." πρὸς μὲν Ἀλέξανδρον ταῦτα ὑπεκρίναντο, πρὸς δὲ 144 τοὺς ἀπὸ Σπάρτης ἀγγέλους τάδε. "τὸ μὲν δεῖσαι Λακεδαιμονίους μὴ ὁμολογήσωμεν τῷ βαρβάρῳ, κάρτα ἀνθρωπήιον ἦν· ἀτὰρ αἰσχρῶς γε οἴκατε ἐξεπιστάμενοι τὸ Ἀθηναίων φρόνημα ἄρρωδῆσαι, ὅτι οὐτε χρυσὸς ἐστὶ γῆς οὐδαμῶτι τοσοῦτος οὔτε 5, χώρα κάλλει καὶ ἀρετῇ μέγα ὑπερφέρουσα, τὰ ἡμεῖς δεξάμενοι ἐθέλομεν ἂν μηδίσαντες καταδουλώσαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα. πολλὰ

12 μὴ δὲ ABPz 13 ἀθέμιτα Marc. || ἔρδειν A : ρέζειν B : ἔρδειν z, van H. 14 παθεῖν B 144. 1 ὑπεκρίνατο RV 3 κάρτα μὲν B 4 γε om. Apr. 6 χώρα B || κάλλει AB || μεγάλη S and take no account of the offer to restore at the king's expense.

11. τοῦ λοιποῦ: sc. χρόνου.

13. ὑπουργεῖν: sc. ἡμῶν, cp. c. 110 supra, and 7. 38.

ἀθέμιστα ἔρδειν has a poetical ring; cp. 7. 33 supra. ἄχαρι, an Herodotean euphemism, cp. 7. 36.

14. πρόξενόν τε καὶ φίλον: cp. c. 136 supra. The phrase here has, of course, no more evidential value than there. It would be odd for the Athenians to be recognizing not merely the προξενία but the φιλία of Alexander under such circumstances. The φιλία probably dated after the war, when Alexander turned against the Persians (ps.-Dem. 12. 21). But Lykurgos, the orator, c. Leocr. § 71, in representing Alexander on this occasion as having narrowly escaped death by stoning at the hands of the Athenians, has confused this affair with that of Lykidas 9. 4 infra.

144. 3. ἦν: the imperfect here is idiomatic. ἐστὶ would obviously be admissible.

4. ἀτάρ, or αὐτάρ (Homer), a strong adversative; comparatively rare in prose, outside Hdt. (Xenoph., Plato). In 4. 188, 5. 66, as here, it answers to a preceding μέν.

αἰσχρῶς with ἄρρωδῆσαι, and ὅτι after φρόνημα. The further construction is not quite regular: τοσοῦτος would naturally be accompanied by οὕτω (ἀρετῇ ὑπερφέρουσα) and followed by ὥστε, with infinitive. The place of the final sentence is taken by the relative (τά) and conditional (ἂν). The neuter relative is also observable, the antecedents being χρυσὸς and χώρα. κάλλος and ἀρετή of the land refer to its appearance and its inherent virtues; cp. 7. 5 supra. In Plato Charm. 157 π the same collocation of words referring to an οἰκία (family) is based upon the beauty and valour of the members. It would have been interesting to have had κάλλος here more fully defined.

6. ὑπερφέρουσα, 'surpassing'; cp. c. 138 supra. μέγα, adverbial ('far').

7. μηδίσαντες καταδουλώσαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα: there is only too much point in the participle; the Athenian ἀρχή was originally based upon opposition to Persia, but opposition to Persia did not preclude καταδουλώσαι τὴν Ἑλλάδα—rather it furnished the means and excuse therefor. This passage reads so naïvely that it looks early; not like an apology on the part of the τυραννὸς πόλις of the age of Perikles, but rather like a bid for the hegemony of a free Hellas. According to Plutarch (Aristeid. 10) it was Aristides who dictated this answer; the ascription is at least ben trovato. Themistokles would hardly have 'given away' the actual situation so completely. He is, indeed, conspicuous by his absence on this occasion. He would hardly have dismissed the Spartans with an official inventory of τὰ διακωλύοντα and a simple request στρατιὴν ὡς τάχιστα ἐκπέμψαι. Plutarch (l.c.) also records a further act of Aristides calculated to make Sparta's assurance doubly sure: ἐτι δὲ ἀρὰς θέσθαι τοῖς ἱερεῖς ἔγραψεν, εἰ τις ἐπικηρυκεύσαιο Μήδοις ἢ τὴν συμμα-

τε γὰρ καὶ μεγάλα ἐστὶ τὰ διακωλύοντα ταῦτα μὴ ποιέειν
μῆδ' ἣν ἐθέλωμεν, πρῶτα μὲν καὶ μέγιστα τῶν θεῶν τὰ 10 ἀγάλματα καὶ τὰ οἰκήματα ἐμπεπρησμένα τε καὶ συγκεχω-σμένα, τοῖσι ἡμέας ἀναγκαίως ἔχει τιμωρέειν ἐς τὰ μέγιστα μᾶλλον ἢ περ ὁμολογέειν τῷ ταῦτα ἐργασαμένῳ, αὐτὶς δὲ τὸ

9 μὴ δ' ABP || θέλωμεν S || τὰ τε? conl. Stein<sup>1</sup> 2, adsc. van H. 10
ἐμπεπρημένα αC || τε καὶ συγκεχωσμένα om. Marc. 11 μάλιστα
Marc. 12 τοῖσι ταῦτα ἐργασαμένοιςιν B χίαν ἀπολίποι τῶν Ἑλλήνων. That act might be held to regularize the 'lynching of Lykidas,' cp. 9. 5.

9. πρῶτα μὲν: the first place is assigned to the κῶλυμα θεῶν (cp. Thuc. 5. 30. 1), arising from the sacrilegious destruction of holy places and objects. The constant recurrence to this consideration assures us that this grievance bulked very largely in Athenian memories and may have deeply affected their feelings at the time, cp. c. 143 supra; it also supports a relatively early date for the speech: after the glories of Periklean Athens had more than restored the works destroyed by the Mede, the sharp edge of these feelings was abated. But the further inference that the Persian war was in any special sense a religious war, or that the Persians were inflamed by puritanical and iconoclastic zeal against the idolatry of Hellas, is an exaggeration; cp. c. 109 supra. τὰ ἀγάλματα καὶ τὰ οἰκήματα: cp. τοὺς τε οἴκους καὶ τὰ ἀγάλματα c. 143. It is a question whether the Persian incendiaries or the Athenian restorers wrought the more havoc on the old Akropolis and its contents: the ancient wooden image of Athena, still to be seen in the days of Pausanias (1. 26. 6), had been transported to Salamis (Plutarch Themist. 10) and so preserved. Cp. Frazer ii. 340 f.; Hitzig-Bluemner, note ad l.c.

It is tolerably certain that the actual destruction by the Persians was exaggerated afterwards: in any case, at the ostensible date of this speech, their work of destruction was not yet fully accomplished; cp. 9. 13 infra. Blakesley remarks that after the battle of Plataia it became the popular view at Athens that the war had been waged against the Persians in revenge for the destruction of Hellenic temples: it is a far cry from the field of Plataia to the (fictitious) oath, which according to Lykurgos (c. Leocr. 82) was taken by the collective allies just before the battle of Plataia; cp. 7. 132 supra. But that the Athenian legend was well under way in the generation after the battle is proved by this very passage. (Cp. Plutarch Perikl. 17, and note to c. 109 supra.)

11. τοῖσι ἡμέας ἀναγκαίως ἔχει τιμωρέειν ἐς τὰ μέγιστα. This formula goes beyond the case of merely defensive warfare, and anticipates, or reproduces, the πρόσχημα of the Delian alliance (Th. 1. 96.). τοῖσι is masc. The Athenian view differs from the Delphian, cp. c. 36 supra (both no doubt ex post facto), as also from the 'vengeance is mine' of the Hebrew God (cp. Romans 12. 19 and reff.). But then Delphi had not been destroyed by the Persians.

12. αὐτὶς δέ: the second κῶλυμα is 'political,' in the highest sense; it is the unity and solidarity of Hellenic culture, and what is perhaps implied rather than stated, its superiority to barbarism, the obligation to defend and to preserve it, the iniquity of betraying it: 'the cause of civilization itself is at stake.' The passage is, indeed, the locus classicus on 'the unity of Hellas,' and Curtius' great chapter under that title, Gr. Gesch. i.<sup>6</sup> (1887) pp. 458-551, Die griechische Einheit, a brilliant commentary thereon.

τὸ Ἑλληνικόν: sc. ἔθνος, γένος, or simply a collective neuter=οἱ Ἕλληνες, in their potential union. Undoubtedly in the historic period, and for a good while before the fifth century, over the Greek peninsula, and around the Aegean coasts, to say nothing of Greater Greece and the outlying colonial regions, there was spread a dominant population, more or less homogeneous and national in character, and with a distinctive type of civilization of its own. Divided under various ethnic or tribal names (chiefly Aiolian, Dorian, Ionian, Achaian, cp. Hdt. 1. 56-58, 142-151); divided geographically into distinct territorial units (Thessalians, Boiotians, Athenians, Peloponnesians, Italiotes, Sikeliotes, etc. etc.); divided politically into separate and independent city-states innumerable; yet all claiming and recognizing each other as belonging to one communion, one organic system, one people—Greeks, as we say; Hellenes, as they preferred to name themselves.

Ἑλληνικὸν ἐὼν ὁμαίμον τε καὶ ὁμόγλωσσον, καὶ θεῶν ιδρύματά

13 ἐὼν om. Pz

Non-Hellenic elements were not unknown, or unrecognized, within the Hellenic area. There were sects, or strata, on the borders or even in the midst of Hellas, whose character was doubtful or even non-Hellenic, e.g. Aitolians, Epirotes, Makedonians, Pelasgoi, Leleges, Kaukonas, etc. There were perhaps foreign intruders (Phoenician, etc.). There were more certainly survivals from a pre-Hellenic population. But these elements were in the main overcome, absorbed, assimilated, expelled, or reduced to insignificance, albeit their presence must be reckoned with, partly as enriching, partly as disturbing, the ideal homogeneity of the Hellenic type. The Hellenic name apparently originated in Thessaly (Homer, Il. 2. 683, 9. 395), and spread with the Achaeans (or, less probably, the Dorians) over the whole aggregate (cp. J. B. Bury, 'History of the names Hellas, Hellenes,' J.H.S. xv. (1895) pp. 217 ff.). The Greek name, in itself every bit as ancient and authentic, originated in Italy as a collective name, having been brought thither by the Chalkidic colonies (cp. Busolt 1.<sup>2</sup> 198; Ed. Meyer, G.d.A. ii. (1893) 302), or more probably—as giving an earlier date—from Epeiros and that neighbourhood (Helbig in Hermes xi. (1876) 257); cp. Aristot. Meteor. 1. 353 α αὕτη δ' (sc. ἡ Ἑλλάς ἡ ἀρχαία) ἐστὶν ἡ περὶ Δωδώνην καὶ τὸν Ἀχελῷον . . . ὥκουν γὰρ οἱ Σελλοὶ ἐνταῦθα καὶ οἱ καλούμενοι τότε μὲν Γραικοὶ νῦν δ' Ἕλληνες.

13. ὁμαίμον, 'of one blood.' The expression here, this 'note' or 'test' of Hellenism, assumes the national pedigree, which traced the four main divisions of the Hellenic aggregate to the three sons of Hellen, Aiolos, Doros and Xuthos (through his sons Ion and Achaïos). This pedigree cannot be much older than Hesiod, in whom it first meets us (Frag. 25=Rzach 7: an entirely different ethnology rules in the Homeric poems), but its existence is implied in Herodotus (1. 56, 7. 94, 8. 44) and Thucydides (1. 3), and is fully given (from the logographs, etc.) in Strabo 383, 397, Apollodoros 1. 7. 3. In point of fact this note or test of Hellenism is but an explanation, in ethnological terms, of the historic fact of nationality, and is not itself a datum to start from, but a theorem to be proved. For it plainly means, not that in course of time by intermarriage there was brought about such a fusion in the aggregate that all Hellenes might be regarded as related to one another (in any case a highly disputable theorem): but it means that there really was a strict descent and genealogy in the Hellenic stock, ab initio. The pedigree in any case took little or no account of women: the theory belongs to a strictly 'patriarchal' stage or type of culture. A dominant race, a dominant strain, and that ultimately of 'Aryan' or 'Indo-European' origin, in the Hellenic aggregate, is proved by the remaining tests, and by the further one, the physical type, of which Hdt. takes here no specific account; but a veritable fusion and confusion of races and stocks probably underlies the Hellenic nationality.

ὁμόγλωσσον, 'of one tongue.' Language, including literature, is undoubtedly a strong mark of racial identity, especially in the earlier stages of a nation's evolution. The prevalence of the Greek language (and its purity) is perhaps the most remarkable fact, and coefficient, in the Hellenic communion. But language is in itself by no means a certain test of nationality, or of race, nor are those who speak one and the same language to be regarded as descendants of one and the same stock (the cases of Latin, of English, of Greek itself are evidential). But the predominance of a language in a given area proves certain conclusions, applicable to the case of the prevalence of Greek in the Hellenic area. (i.) The presence and prevalence (numerical, or political, or both) of the people whose language it is. Moreover, the relative purity of the Greek language points to the early and effective occupation of the given area by Hellenic tribes or folks.

τε κοινὰ καὶ θυσίαι ἡθεὰ τε ὁμότροπα, τῶν προδότας γενέσθαι

14 τῶν θ: ὦν καὶ ε: ὦν

(ii.) Philology proves that the people whose native language was Greek belonged to the Indo-European (or Eurasian) stock, an observation which makes it certain that the Greeks themselves were immigrants into the region which became the theatre of Hellenic history. There is some evidence, however, of the persistence of non-Hellenic tongues within the Hellenic area, e.g. Hdt. 1. 57, and the non-Hellenic inscriptions (in Greek characters) found in Lemnos and in Krete. Perhaps also the varieties of Greek dialect may have been encouraged by the presence of pre-Hellenic elements in the population. The linguistic frontier is tolerably well defined round Greece proper: in the East, Karian is a foreign language, c. 135 supra, and the same is true of the Asianic languages generally. In the West the Epeirote and Illyrian are non-Hellenic (in the historic period), Thuc. 2. 68, 80, 81. In the North the position of Makedonian is rather doubtful, but though akin to Greek, it differs by more than merely dialectal variation, while Thracian is distinctly 'barbarous.' In the South the Kretans of historic times speak Greek, but the non-Hellenic tongue survives in the east of the island (cp. 7. 171 supra).

θεῶν ἰδρύματά τε κοινὰ καὶ θυσίαι, 'common foundations, common sacrifices to gods'—that is, a common religion: common cults, a common theology. The great national centres of religion, with their cults, oracles, and festivals—Olympia, Delphi, Dodona (perhaps Delos), Eleusis—must be chiefly in the speaker's (or writer's) mind: the theology is not expressly mentioned, but may be assumed; cp. 2. 53. Perhaps nothing would more clearly show the genetic or non-primitive character of the Hellenic national communion than the history of Hellenic religion. The Hellenic and pan-Hellenic significance of Olympia and of Delphi (to take the most conspicuous examples) was comparatively recent. The pan-Hellenic Agon of Delphi has the year 585 B.C. as its epoch, and it was established by Kleisthenes of Sikyon and Solon of Athens (cp. J. B. Bury, The Nemean Odes of Pindar, 1890, Appendix D). The Olympian Agon was dated conventionally two centuries earlier (776

B.C.), but this is a 'prochronism'; the founder of the Agon was Pheidon of Argos, and the date of the foundation was probably 668 B.C. (Ol. 28; cp. Hdt. IV.-VI. i. 383, note to 6. 127). Delphi gave up to mankind what was intended for Hellenes; but the Hellenic character of the Olympian Agon is attested by two striking facts: (a) the title of the stewards, ἑλλανοδίκαί, which must be associated with the establishment by Pheidon (the same title was used at Nemea). The adoption of this title presupposes the extensive recognition of 'Hellenes,' and 'Hellas.' (b) The inclusion of all Hellenes (2. 160) and the exclusion of 'barbarians' (5. 22) in the competition, which give it a truly 'national' character. But the common theology (θεοὶ κοινοί 9. 90 infra, θεοὶ οἱ Ἕλληνοί 5. 49) carries back further than the great festivals. There is apparent in Greece, even in the historic period, a wondrous variety of local cults and of local myths; but there is also apparent a large community of belief and worship: of this community the Homero-Hesiodic 'theology' (including the Hymns) may be taken as typical. This theology is, indeed, comparatively late (cp. Hdt. 2. 53), but its middle and latest ages imply a long past, a long process, a genesis; and the systematization, the general reception of the Homeric Pantheon, imply a large common stock of ideas and of practices, original or acquired, which in turn implies a long history, a long occupation of the area, over which this religious complex is recognizable.

14. ἡθεὰ τε ὁμότροπα, 'a uniform moral and political culture.' Under this head might be comprised: (i.) the city-state, with its republican constitutions of one kind or another; (ii.) the family and domestic institutions, marriage, paternal descent, etc.; (iii.) the usages in peace and war, προξενία, κῆρυκες, etc.; (iv.) the ethical ideals in the fullest sense. But no one knew better than the Athenian Thucydides that this culture was itself a gradual growth, and not a primitive or intrinsic possession of the Hellenes: that primitive 'Hellas' was itself barbarous (τὸ παλαιὸν Ἕλλη-νικὸν ὁμοίотροπα τῇ νῦν βαρβαρικῇ διατῶ-μενον 1. 6. 6).

Ἀθηναίους οὐκ ἂν εὖ ἔχοι. ἐπίστασθέ τε οὕτω, εἰ μὴ πρό- 15
 τερον ἐτυγχάνετε ἐπιστάμενοι, ἔστ' ἂν καὶ εἰς περιῇ Ἀθηναίων, μηδαμὰ ὁμολογήσοντας ἡμέας Ξέρξῃ. ὑμέων μέντοι ἀγάμεθα τὴν προνοίην τὴν πρὸς ἡμέας ἐοῦσαν, ὅτι προεΐδετε ἡμέων οἰκοφθορημένων οὕτω ὥστε ἐπιθρέψαι ἐθέλειν ἡμέων τοὺς οἰκέτας. καὶ ὑμῖν μὲν ἡ χάρις ἐκπεπλήρωται, ἡμεῖς μέντοι 20

15 μὴ καὶ B, van H. 17 μηδαμὰ R<sub>2</sub> 18 πρὸς: εἰς R, Holder: ἐς SV, Gaisford, van H. || ὑμέας B<sup>1</sup> || ἔχουσιν B, Holder, van H.
 19 οἰκοφθορημένων R || ἡμῖν S marg. 20 ἡμεῖς B<sub>2</sub>

It is not the business of the speaker in this passage to qualify or to correct the extreme and enthusiastic assertion of 'the unity of Hellas'; but it is worth while for us to observe that under each of the four great tests, or factors, of Hellenism here propounded, history has significant exceptions and contrary instances to notice. Blood, Dialect, Religion, Ethos, were dividing lines in Hellas, though space here precludes further illustration.

16. ἔστ' ἂν καὶ εἰς . . Ξέρξῃ: this dotting of i's and crossing of t's (if it took place) was very unwise from a diplomatic point of view; to give such assurances to Alexander (c. 143 supra) was bad enough; to pledge themselves thus to Sparta was almost suicidal. It looks downright foolish in the light of the sequel: not alone the γνώμη of Lykidas (9. 5), who was one Athenian, but the formal declaration of Athenian representatives in Sparta, οἱ σύμμαχοι βασιλεὺς γνώμεθα (9. 11). Hdt. appears quite unconscious of the satire he thus levels against Athens. The two narratives are from independent sources, and more suo he gives them both, without adjustment, for what they are worth.

17. ὑμέων μέντοι. Hitherto they have been speaking of themselves. The position of the words is emphatic. ἀγάμεθα appears to be used in a good sense, as in 4. 46, rather than in an ironical sense, as in 4. 157. Stein<sup>2</sup> detects, indeed, a politely satirical (höflich höhnisch) tone in this speech, and finds in that tone, and in the large scale on which the whole story of the negotiations is narrated, evidence for two conclusions: (i.) that it was committed to writing at the beginning of the Peloponnesian war (i.e. 431 B.C.), and (ii.) that Hdt. takes sides with Athens against her ungrateful foes. As to the first point: (a) it assumes (as is too often assumed) that Sparta and Athens quarrelled for the first time in 431 B.C. As a matter of fact the direct feeling between Sparta and Athens was probably not so bitter in 431 B.C. as it had been in 446 B.C. or in 461 B.C.; (b) it ignores the bearing of the Makedonian question. The war in 431 B.C. was largely brought about by Perdikkas, who seems to have had a genuine and legitimate grievance against Perikles and Athens (cp. Thuc. 1. 57). It would be a strange way of taking sides with Athens at the outbreak of the war in 431 B.C. to make so much of the εὐνοία, εὐεργεσία, προξενία, φιλία of Alexander of Makedon. Possibly Hdt. sympathizes with Athens rather than with Sparta in this passage, but if so, it is an ideal sympathy, projected into the situation of 479 B.C., not an obscure and partisan commentary upon the outbreak of hostilities in 431 B.C. The Atticizing tone of the whole passage may be due to the Attic or phil-Athenian sources, from which Hdt. has drawn it. So far as Atticism illuminates the problem of composition, the passage is most easily intelligible as belonging to the earlier, perhaps to the earliest, draft of these Books. The slight suspicion of persiflage is, perhaps, misleading, for it ill accords with the heroics of the immediate context. The Spartan offer bore, indeed, rather too near a resemblance to inviting a colossal pledge, or hostage, from the Athenians; but an Athenian migration to Sparta had not been suggested; probably only Peloponnesos was intended, and for that move there was a precedent (cp. cc. 41 and 36 supra).

18. προνοίην . . ὅτι προεΐδετε, 'providence,' provision, provide; cp. προνοή in a different sense, c. 87 supra. The verb in this sense is more generally in the middle (L. & S. sub v. προεΐδω).

19. τοὺς οἰκέτας: cp. c. 142 supra.

20. ἡ χάρις ἐκπεπλήρωται, 'your λιπαρήσομεν οὕτω ὅπως ἂν ἔχωμεν, οὐδὲν λυπέοντες ἡμέας.

 νῦν δέ, ὥς οὕτω ἐχόντων, στρατιὴν ὥς τάχιστα ἐκπέμπετε.
 ὥς γὰρ ἡμεῖς εἰκάζομεν, οὐκ ἐκὰς χρόνου παρέσται ὁ βάρβαρος ἐσβαλέων ἐς τὴν ἡμετέραν, ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴν τάχιστα πύθεται τὴν 25 ἀγγελίην ὅτι οὐδὲν ποιήσομεν τῶν ἐκείνος ἡμέων προσεδέετο.
 πρὶν ὧν παρεῖναι ἐκείνον ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν, ἡμέας καιρὸς ἐστὶ προβοθῆσαι ἐς τὴν Βοιωτίην." οἱ μὲν ταῦτα ὑποκριναμένων Ἀθηναίων ἀπαλλάσσοντο ἐς Σπάρτην.

21 λιπαρήσομεν Marc.

23 ἡμέας B || οἰκάζομεν Marc. || εἰς

χρόνον C 24 ἐσβαλέων Naber, Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἐσβαλὼν || ἐπειδὴν: ἐπεὶ

Abicht, Holder || ἐπειδὴν πύθεται τάχιστα malit van H. 25 προσεδέκετο C. 26 ἡμέας Wesseling, van H. 27 προβοθῆσαι R, van H.: προβοθῆσαι SV, Gaisford || οἱ . . Σπάρτην in principio libri

noni Pz: utrobique ceteri

ΗΡΟΔΟΤΟΥ Η | ΧΧΗΗΗΔΔΗ α:

ἡροδότου ιστοριῶν η' CR: τέλος ἡροδότου ιστοριῶν ὀγδότης Marc.

kindness leaves nothing to be desired'—is full to overflowing—is far more than we had any right to expect. χάρις is here better taken as the 'gracious act' (an offer) on the part of Sparta than as 'the feeling of gratitude' on the part of Athens. The perf. pass. is not so much temporal as qualitative in significance.

ἡμεῖς μέντοι: contr. ὑμῶν μέντοι just above.

21. λιπαρήσομεν, 'we shall continue to hold out'; cp. 9. 45 (μένοντες), 5. 19 (τῇ πόσει).

οὕτω ὅπως ἂν ἔχωμεν, 'as best we may'; cp. c. 143 supra. λυπέοντες, 'causing annoyance to.'

22. στρατιὴν ὥς τάχιστα ἐκπέμπετε: the conference at Athens is quite at the end of the winter. Mardonios is, however, represented as still in Thessaly 9. 1. If the story just told, the speeches reported, be true, or anywhere near the truth, the Athenians had themselves to thank for the Spartan delay in responding to this demand; they have given away their diplomatic weapons in a fit of pan-Hellenic generosity.

23. οὐκ ἐκὰς χρόνου, 'before long.' ἐκὰς is generally a local adverb; it is, however, used absolutely of time, Pindar Pyth. 2. 98 (54), Aischyl. Agam. 1650. For the use of the adv. with the generic genitive Stein compares Aischyl. Suppl. 597 εἰσὶν χρόνου.

25. προσεδέετο: like the simple verb, constructed with the double genitive, pers. et rei, τῶν . . ἡμῶν, cp. cc. 3, 8, 26. 2 supra. (Stronger than taking τῶν as genitive by attraction = τοῖσιν A, 6. 35 notwithstanding; cp. 5. 40 σευ τῆς ἐξέσιος, 3. 157 ἐπιτρέπεσθαι ἔτοιμοι ἦσαν τῶν ἐδέετο σφῶν.)

26. ἡμέας, 'you and us,' us both. So Schweighauser.

27. ἐς τὴν Βοιωτίην: this rendezvous could not be thus treated as a matter of course, except as the result of preliminary deliberations and a definite plan of campaign, perhaps the original one; cp. c. 40 supra.

οἱ μὲν κτλ. The corresponding sentence opens the ninth Book: there is no grammatical break. Cp. the transition between Bks. 7 and 8.

ΗΡΟΔΟΤΟΥ

ΚΑΛΛΙΟΠΗ

Μαρδόνιος δέ, ὥς οἱ ἀπονοστήσας Ἀλέξανδρος τὰ παρὰ <sup>1</sup> Ἀθηναίων ἐσήμηνε, ὀρμηθεὶς ἐκ Θεσσαλίας ἤγε τὴν στρατιὴν σπουδῇ ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀθήνας. ὅκου δὲ ἐκάστοτε γίνοιτο, τούτους παρελάμβανε. τοῖσι δὲ Θεσσαλίας ἡγεομένοισι οὔτε τὰ πρὸ τοῦ πεπρηγμένα μετέμελε οὐδὲν πολλῶ τε μᾶλλον ἐπήγον τὸν <sup>5</sup>
Πέρσην, καὶ συμπροέπεμφέ τε Θῶρηξ ὁ Ληρισταῖος Ξέρξην

ΚΑΛΛΙΟΠΗ Θ Α: ΚΑΛΛΙΟΠΗ Β: καλλιόπη θ' C: καλλιόπη R: καλλιόπη ἡροδότου ἱστοριῶν ἐννάτη Marc. 1. 1 παρ' B 5
μετέμελλεν B 6 τε: τῷ R: om. CP || ληρισταῖος BPz || ξέρξεα Bz

1. 1. Μαρδόνιος δέ, corresponding with οἱ μὲν in the preceding sentence, the last of Bk. 8. There is not merely no material break between Bks. 8 and 9, but not even a formal or grammatical division. ἀπονοστήειν, 8. 33 etc.

τὰ παρ' Ἀθηναίων, 'the Athenian answer,' an ellipse of ἐπη or λεχθέντα:
cp. Thuc. 8. 48. 3 τὰ ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀλκιβιάδου.

2. ὀρμηθεὶς, of a physical act; cp.
δρμα 8. 106. ἐκ Θεσσαλίας: that Mardonios wintered in Thessaly seems a fairly well-established fact (cp. 8. 113 f., 131), but does not involve the supposition that he abandoned all hold on Central Greece: were not the Makedonian garrisons, perhaps, in occupation of Boiotia throughout the winter? Cp. 8.
34.

3. ὅκου . . παρελάμβανε: for the constr. cp. 8. 115. The statement prepares us for the estimate in c. 32 infra of 50,000 Greeks under arms in the forces of Mardonios. Diodor. 11. 28 raises the figure to 500,000 by levies on Thrakians, Makedonians and Greeks!

Cp. Appendix VIII. § 2 (iv.).

4. τοῖσι . . Θεσσαλίας ἡγεομένοισι:
the Aleuadai, cp. 7. 6, 130, their chief man being Thorax of Larisa, named just below. The victory of Salamis had apparently done little to convince the Thessalian cavaliers that the Greek was the winning side. Stein observes that Hdt. sees in the Aleuadai the most active promoters of the war, and is glad to emphasize their guilt (cp. 7. 130, 172).
παρήκε here in particular involves a gross exaggeration: the roads and passes were not in the hands of Thorax; Thermopylai, for example, was doubtless held by a Persian force; and so on. Dem-aratos and the Athenian exiles cut no figures in the camp of Mardonios: have they retired in the king's suite?

6. Θῶρηξ is named again in c. 53 infra with his brethren; before the end of the sixth century he had given a commission to Pindar, evidence of which we have in the poet's earliest extant work (Pyth.
10, anno 502 B.C.), in which also Thorax

φεύγοντα καὶ τότε ἐκ τοῦ φανεροῦ παρήκε Μαρδόνιον ἐπὶ
 2 τὴν Ἑλλάδα. ἐπεὶ δὲ πορευόμενος γίνεταί ὁ στρατὸς ἐν Βοιωτοῖσι, οἱ Θηβαῖοι κατελάμβανον τὸν Μαρδόνιον καὶ συν-εβούλευον αὐτῷ λέγοντες ὡς οὐκ εἴη χῶρος ἐπιτηδεύ-ἐνστρατοπεδεύεσθαι ἐκείνου, οὐδὲ ἔων ἰέναι ἑκαστέρῳ, ἀλλ'
 5 αὐτοῦ ἰζόμενον ποιέειν ὅπως ἀμαχητὶ τὴν πᾶσαν Ἑλλάδα καταστρέψεται. κατὰ μὲν γὰρ τὸ ἰσχυρὸν Ἕλληνας ὁμο-

7 παρείκε :: 2. 1 ἐπείτε? van H. 2 τὸν om. B || καὶ συνεβούλευον αὐτῷ del. Cobet, van H. 3 ἐπιτηδεύτερος CPz, van H.
 4 ἐνστρατεύεσθαι C || ἑκαστέρῳ α: ἑκατέρῳ B 6 καταστρέφεται
 Steger: καταστρέφεται codd.: καταστρέψητε ::

is named (l. 64). Thorax may have been Tagos of Thessaly: whether the Skopadai (cp. 6. 127) were acquiescent or co-operating is not quite clear; cp. 7. 172.

7. φεύγοντα: Xerxes' νόστος is a φυγή; cp. 8. 97, 103, 115, 120.

2. 2. οἱ Θηβαῖοι κατελάμβανον τὸν Μ., 'the Thebans tried to stay Mardonios...'

3. οὐκ εἴη χῶρος κτλ.: these representations were not ultimately lost upon Mardonios, who had at least no intention of risking a pitched battle in Attica. The physiographical merits of Boiotia, from a military point of view, made it again and again the scene of important battles both in Greek and in Roman times (Plataia, Tanagra, Delion, Haliartos, Koroneia, Leuktra, Orchomenos, Chaironeia); but it was apparently not so much on its advantages as fighting ground that the Thebans laid stress, as on the advantages it offered (1) for supplies, (2) as a headquarters and base of negotiations. He was to halt there (αὐτοῦ) and work for obtaining possession of Greece ἀμαχητὶ. ἀμαχητὶ by itself would not necessarily imply that the Thebans apprehended a Persian defeat in the event of battle: the Persian conqueror stood to lose by the losses he might inflict, as well as by those he incurred; but the next sentence suggests the graver alternative. συνεβούλευον must be repeated after ἀλλά (brachylogy).

4. οὐδὲ ἔων ἰέναι ἑκαστέρῳ, 'and were for hindering his further advance.' The two reasons given for their advice are scarcely cognate, the one suggesting an appeal to arms, the other a recourse to intrigue; but cp. next note.

6. κατὰ μὲν γὰρ... ἀπασιν ἀνθρώποισι:

a remarkable sentence both in a material and in a formal sense. Materially it recognizes the power of a united Hellas especially for resistance; cp. Hdt.'s own judgement upon 'a united Thrace,' 5. 3, or Aristotle's upon the Greek race, Pol. 4 (7). 7. 3 = 1327 B δυνάμενον ἀρχεῖν πάντων μᾶς τυγχάνον πολιτείας. Formally there are some disputable points in the sentence: (a) κατὰ τὸ ἰσχυρὸν is taken by Baehr (followed by Stein) vi armisue; cp. 1. 76 ἐπειρώτο κατὰ τὸ ἰσχυρὸν ἀλλήλων ('they made trial of each other in respect of strength'; or 'they made trial of each other with might and main'!) The words might be taken (as by Gail) with ὁμοφρονίοντας ('united heart and soul'): Blakesley, again, renders, 'in point of actual force,' taking them as qualifying the whole sentence. (b) οἱ περ καὶ πάρος ταῦτα ἐγίνωσκον may refer to the actual members of the Hellenic Symmachy, 'those, to wit, who were previously of one mind,' or, more generally, those who should agree previously (before being attacked). πάρος does not occur elsewhere in Hdt. (c) For the reading χαλεπούς see App. Crit. (d) περιγίεσθαι, not so much 'to survive' as 'to get the upper hand'; the construction is curious, as the verb seems to govern the accusative. (e) Ἕλληνας ὁμοφρονίοντας, as though περγ. = νικᾶν. But the acc. may better perhaps be taken as an acc. pendens (with Baehr). Blakesley explains the anacoluthon as due to the difficulty of expressing the sentiment politely (a difficulty not arising from Boiotian stupidity, but from the nature of the case!). (f) καὶ ἀπασιν ἀνθρώποισι is collective, 'even all the world together,' not distributive, 'any men in existence.' A united φρονέοντας, οἳ περ καὶ πάρος ταῦτα ἐγίνωσκον, χαλεποὺς εἶναι περιγίνεσθαι καὶ ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποισι. "εἰ δὲ ποιήσεις τὰ ἡμεῖς παραινόμεν," ἔφασαν λέγοντες, "ἔξεις ἀπόνως ἅπαντα τὰ ἐκείνων ἰσχυρὰ βουλευμάτα· πέμπε χρήματα ἐς τοὺς δυνα- 10 στεύοντας ἄνδρας ἐν τῇσι πόλεσι, πέμπων δὲ τὴν Ἑλλάδα διαστήσεις· ἐνθεῦτεν δὲ τοὺς μὴ τὰ σὰ φρονέοντας ῥηιδίως μετὰ τῶν στασιωτέων καταστρέψαι." οἳ μὲν ταῦτα συν- 3 ἐβούλευον, ὃ δὲ οὐκ ἐπείθετο, ἀλλὰ οἱ δεινὸς ἐνέστακτο ἴμερος

7 ταῦτα RV || χαλεποὺς conl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: χαλεπὰ ('quod ferri nequit, nisi forte ante περιγίνεσθαι exciderunt verba νικᾶν τε καὶ' van H.: haec eadem in textum recep. Holder) 8 περιγίνεσθαι B || ποιήσεις z 9 ἔξεις: 'an σχίσεις?' Kallenberg || πάντα aCP, Stein<sup>2</sup> 10 κείνων z || ἰσχυρὰ om. aC, van H. 13 μετὰ στρατιωτέων B || καταστρέψαι BC 3. 2 ἐπείθετο R || δεινὸς τις B, Holder, van H.

Hellas, which knew its own mind (even if only comprising the actually existing confederacy), could hold its own against a world in arms.

9. ἔξας, 'thou shalt be in possession of . . .'. If ἰσχυρά were to stand, it would favour taking κατὰ τὸ ἰσχυρόν just above with ὁμοφρονέοντας. But cp. App. Crit.

10. πέμπε χρήματα ἐς τοὺς δυναστεύοντας. . ., 'divide Hellas by bribery —of the men in power in the cities.' Prima facie this might be taken to imply that the masses, the ἄσπετος, were more anti-Persian than the 'dynasts,' the δυνατοί. Something of that sort is urged by the Theban orator in Thucydides, 3. 62. 3, and the term δυναστεύοντας here is illuminated by the words there used to describe the condition of Thebes in 480 B.C.: δυναστεία ὀλίγων ἀνδρῶν εἶχε τὰ πράγματα. But perhaps Athens is not included in the Theban programme, and Sparta with the Peloponnesian cities may be mainly in view (cp. Diodor. l.c. infra). The proposal is not so much to overthrow democracies by medizing oligarchs, as to divide the Hellenic confederacy, separating the partisans of Persia (τῶν στασιωτέων, 'your partisans') from τοὺς μὴ τὰ σὰ φρονέοντας. The two points are not perhaps clearly distinguished in this passage; and even among the Athenians (it must be admitted), just before Plataea, there was a strong medizing faction, if the story told by Plutarch, Arist. 13, is true. Cp. Appendix VIII. § 2 (iii.).

11. τὴν Ἑλλάδα διαστήσεις, 'thou shalt divide Hellas against itself'; cp. διαστάντας 4. 11, 'dividing into two bodies'—κατὰ πόλεις δὲ διέσταμεν Thuc. 4. 61. 1. The advice is repeated by Artabazos c. 41 infra.

3. 2. 8 δὲ οὐκ ἐπείθετο: yet just below, c. 5, Hdt. himself suggests that Lykidas, the Athenian, had perhaps received money from Mardonios. Diodor. 11. 28. 3 asserts that Mardonios τῶν ἐν Πελοποννήσῳ πόλεων ἐπειράτῳ τινας ἀφιστάνειν, χρήματα διαπεμπόμενος τοῖς προεστηκόσι. He was, of course, en rapport with Argos; cp. c. 12 infra. The mission of Arthemios of Zela (Plutarch, Themist. 6) cannot be referred with confidence to this precise point (as by Duncker vii.<sup>5</sup> 318), but it is hardly likely that Mardonios omitted to employ so obvious a weapon as bribery. Rawlinson points out (iv.<sup>3</sup> 374) that Mardonios was very late in reoccupying Athens, and thinks that he spent the spring in efforts to win over some of the Greek states by bribery. The Atticizing source speaks in the next words of Hdt. and accounts for the supposed folly of Mardonios.

ἀλλά: i.e. δεινὸς γὰρ οἱ κτλ. ἐνέστακτο: the simple verb occurs 6. 74, and in the literal sense; and with the preposition uncompound, Pindar, Pyth. 9. 110 νέκταρ ἐν χεῖλεσσι καὶ ἀμβροσίαν στάξοι. Here, of course, as there, it is a brilliant metaphor (as of poison?), the pluperfect pointing rather to the depth than to the date of his passion. This passage is, however, more probably a reminiscence of Od. 2. 271 εἰ δὲ τοι σοῦ

τὰς Ἀθήνας δεύτερα ἐλεῖν, ἅμα μὲν ὑπ' ἀγνωμοσύνης, ἅμα δὲ πυρσοῖσι διὰ νήσων ἐδόκεε βασιλεῖ δηλώσειν ἔοντι ἐν Σάρδισι 5 ὅτι ἔχοι Ἀθήνας· ὃς οὐδὲ τότε ἀπικόμενος ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν εὗρε τοὺς Ἀθηναίους, ἀλλ' ἐν τε Σαλαμῖνι τοὺς πλείστους ἐπυνθάνετο εἶναι ἐν τε τῇσι νηυσί, αἰρέει τε ἔρημον τὸ ἄστυ. ἡ δὲ βασιλέος αἵρεσις ἐς τὴν ὑστέρην τὴν Μαρδονίου ἐπιστρατήϊν δεκάμηνος ἐγένετο.

4 Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐν Ἀθήνησι ἐγένετο ὁ Μαρδόνιος, πέμπει ἐς Σαλαμῖνα Μουρυχίδην ἄνδρα Ἑλλησπόντιον φέροντα τοὺς

3 ἐλέειν V, Schaefer, Gaisford 4 βασιλεῖ AB || δηλώσει R: δηλω cum σ superscr. V 5 τὰς Ἀθήνας B || ὃς: ὁ δὲ Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 7 τε post ἐν om. B || ἐρήμον CPz 8 βασιλῆος z || ὑστεραίην CPz || τὴν: τοῦ Marc. 4. 1 ἐπέιτε? van H. || ἐν om. B || ὁ om. z 2 βουρυχίδην C: μουριχίδην Rz παρὸς ἐνέστακται μένος ἢ (a passage which might have suggested to Pindar the use of the simple verb in Nem. 10. 82).

3. δεύτερα, 'a second time'; not τὸ δεύτερον—for Mardonios had not 'captured' it the first time; cp. c. 4 infra.

ἅμα μὲν . . ἅμα δέ: the two cola are not strictly correlative. ἀγνωμοσύνη, vanity, arrogance, obstinacy—cause for effect; cp. c. 41 infra: the same word is used of the Athenians c. 4 infra.

4. πυρσοῖσι διὰ νήσων: cp. 7. 183 on this method of signalling, and the opening of the immortal Agamemnon, which Stein suggests was a grand anachronism, based upon this historic Mardonograph. But Mardonios did not at this time control the 'islands'; his only line of communication was by the mainland. The king is in Sardes; cp. c. 108 infra. Perhaps then Hdt. has borrowed from Aischylos (the Oresteia was presented in 458 B.C.).

6. ἐν τε Σαλαμῖνι: was there in truth a second complete evacuation of Attica and Athens? i.e. had the Athenians in fact reoccupied their city and houses? Had they already begun the rebuilding to which Themistokles exhorted them 8. 109 supra? They may have attempted to raise a harvest, perhaps, in Attica, or in the parts nearest Salamis; but there is fair room for doubt whether they undertook the rebuilding of the city until they were assured that they should not see the Persian army any more in the land. Hdt. is, indeed, explicit on the point c. 6 infra; but he might have been mistaken. A large number of the Athenians may have wintered in Salamis. Their occupation, or reoccupation, of the island implies a confidence in their superiority by sea.

7. ἐν τε τῇσι νηυσί: the only Attic ships for which Hdt. accounts at this time are those with the Hellenic fleet at Aigina, which numbers but 110 in all; 8. 131 supra. Where were the rest? Had they been left on the Attic side Mardonios would certainly have used or have destroyed them. A goodly Attic fleet must have been in and around Salamis itself, and have counted for something in the whole plan of campaign, though completely ignored by Hdt.

9. δεκάμηνος: ten—or rather nine—months earlier. This date is doubtless correct, and reckoned by the Attic Calendar, but unfortunately it is only approximate. Rawlinson places the reoccupation of Athens in June, and remarks even so upon the waste of time (above accounted for): this chronology would allow both occupations to the same Archontic year. Stein brings Mardonios to Athens "after the middle of July" (Xerxes having reached Athens "after the middle of September"), that is, places the two events in different Archontic years. Busolt ii.<sup>2</sup> 722 f. dates the event to the second half of June (in Skirophorion). Hdt.'s term, if anything, favours the view that the two events belong to the same official year; otherwise, too, he would perhaps have added the Archon; cp. 8. 51.

4. 2. Μουρυχίδην ἄνδρα Ἑλλησπόντιον. The proper name appears in Attic as Μορυχίδης and Μυριχίδης; cp.

αὐτοὺς λόγους τοὺς καὶ Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Μακεδὼν τοῖσι Ἀθηναίοισι διεπόρθμευσε. ταῦτα δὲ τὸ δεύτερον ἀπέστειλλε προέχων μὲν τῶν Ἀθηναίων οὐ φιλίας γνώμας, ἐλπίζων δὲ 5 σφέας ὑπήσειν τῆς ἀγνωμοσύνης ὡς δοριαλώτου εἰούσης τῆς Ἀττικῆς χώρας καὶ εἰούσης ὑπ' ἐωυτῶ. τούτων μὲν εἵνεκα 5
ἀπέπεμψε Μουρυχίδην ἐς Σαλαμῖνα, ὃ δὲ ἀπικόμενος ἐπὶ τὴν

3 οὗς αC 5 προέχων: προσδοκῶν Krueger: (προσδοκῶν? van H.)
|| ἐλπίσας B || δὲ σφέας R, Stein<sup>2</sup>: δέ σφεας 6 δοριαλώτου z || πάσης τῆς RSV, Gaisford, Holder 7 καὶ εἰούσης ἤδη RSV, Gaisford, Holder:
καὶ . . . ἐωυτῆ secl. van H. 5. 1 τούτων z || ἐνεκα αC: εἵνεκεν B
2 Μουριχίδην z

Μουρυχίων and Μόρυχος, a tragic poet, the butt of sundry Aristophanic gibes (Acharn. 887, Wasps 506, 1142, Peace 1008). Μόρυχος was also an epithet of Dionysos, 'in Sicily,' his face 'soiled' with wine-lees (cp. μορύσσειν), and there was a proverb μωρότερος Μορύχου or Μωρόχου (Photius, Lex., et al.). This Hellespontine with his proposals was surely 'a son of the foul fiend' to Athens! There is a want of precision about his habitat; Ἑλλησπόντιοι have, indeed, been mentioned collectively as furnishing 100 ships to the Persian fleet (7. 95), and an anonymous 'Hellespontian' is credited with a crude remark, 7. 56; was this Morychides the man? How does a 'Hellespontine' come to be with Mardonios? Was he the nearest thing to an 'Ionian,' or an Athenian, that the Persian could employ? Was he perhaps an ex-Athenian Kleruch?

φέροντα τοὺς αὐτοὺς λόγους κτλ.: cp. 8. 140. Some of the λόγοι would suit the present situation better than the former; e.g. the order from the king τὴν γῆν σφί ἀπόδος κτλ., which have a direct bearing on Mardonios' fiery message οἱ ἔχου Ἀθήνας c. 3 supra. φέροντα is but slightly metaphorical; indeed, if the λόγοι were in writing (a despatch), not even slightly. διεπόρθμευσε is very highly metaphorical, though less highly if the Athenians had already been in Salamis when 'Alexander the Makedonian' visited them. The word is elsewhere by Hdt. always used of actually crossing water; cp. 8. 130 supra, 1. 205, 4. 141, 5. 52.

4. τὸ δεύτερον: cp. c. 3 supra.

5. προέχων μὲν τῶν Ἀθηναίων οὐ φιλίας γνώμας, 'though already in possession of the hostile mind (or resolutions) of the Athenians' (against himself). This simple use of προ- in comp. (=πρότερον, so Wesseling) is observable; cp. προφειλομένη in 5. 82. Blakesley somewhat perversely takes προέχων as 'putting forward,' φίλιος (λόγος) 7. 163, and in the comparative 7. 151.

6. ὑπήσειν τῆς ἀγνωμοσύνης: the verb used intrans. as in 1. 156 ὑπείς τῆς ὀργῆς (cp. also 7. 162 supra abs.); in the middle vid. 2. 121, 4. 181. The substantive as in c. 3 supra; here used from Mardonios' point of view (ἐλπίζων, not, by the way, 'hoping,' but 'expecting'). δοριαλώτου, as in 8. 74 supra.

7. εἰούσης ὑπ' ἐωυτῶ: the preposition with the dat. is no doubt very strong, but the participle, especially in repetition, is rather thin; it would be strengthened by omission the first time. Cp. App. Crit.

5. 2. ἀπικόμενος ἐπὶ τὴν βουλὴν. The Athenian βουλὴ, the Athenian ἐκκλησία, are working in Salamis; this is a 'record' in its way—for Salamis was not strictly a part of Attica (cp. 8. 11, 13 supra); it marks again a stage in the education of the Athenians, who grasp the principle that where the Athenians are there is Athens. It is especially remarkable that the probouleutic office is discharged by the Boule of 500 (not by the Strategoi, for example, as at Samos in 412 B.C.) notwithstanding the state of war. It is just, however, conceivable that the Boule here in action was not the 500 but the Areiopagos which performed some vague services in the Persian war; cp. Aristotle, Pol. 8. 4. 8=1304 A, Ab. π. 23, Plutarch, Them. 10, ἐπελθὼν (cp. c. 7 infra) or παρελθὼν (cp. 8. 81) might have been expected here in place of the less technical ἀπικόμενος.

βουλὴν ἔλεγε τὰ παρὰ Μαρδονίου. τῶν δὲ βουλευτέων
 Λυκίδης εἶπε γνώμην ὡς ἐδόκεε ἄμεινον εἶναι δεξαμένους τὸν
 5 λόγον, τὸν σφί Μουρυχίδης προσφέρει, ἐξενεῖκαι ἐς τὸν δῆμον.
 ὁ μὲν δὴ ταύτην τὴν γνώμην ἀπεφαίνετο, εἴτε δὴ δεδεγμένους χρήματα παρὰ Μαρδονίου, εἴτε καὶ ταῦτά οἱ ἔάνδανε. Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ αὐτίκα δεινὸν ποιησάμενοι οἳ τε ἐκ τῆς βουλῆς καὶ οἱ ἔξωθεν ὡς ἐπίθοντο, περιστάντες Λυκίδην κατέλευσαν βάλλοντες,

5 Μουρυχίδης z || προσφέρει Krueger, Cobet, van H., Stein<sup>a</sup>: προφέρει ||
 ἐξενεῖκαι B 7 οἱ ante καὶ z 9 λυκίδια Bz || βάλλοντες del.
 van H.

4. Λυκίδης εἶπε γνώμην, 'Lykidas moved a resolution . . .' The phrase is technically correct, γνώμην being generally dropped in the documents. Hdt. does not know, or at least does not give, the man's patronymic or Demotikon. The name Lykidas was, or became, very rare in Athens; it occurs twice in Demosthenes, (1) of a slave belonging to Chabrias, (2) of a miller (cp. Orat. Att., Baiter and Sauppe, Index ii. 91). The odd thing is that Demosthenes, de Coron. 204, tells this story, but with two important variations: (1) the traitor's name is Kyrtilos, (2) the date is before Salamis; cp. Cicero de Off. 3. 11. 2. Thirlwall (ii. 363 n.) attempts to harmonize by supposing Kyrtilos a nickname of Lykidas; but Kyrtilos is a good proper name; cp. Strabo, 530 (a Pharsalian), and C.I.G. ii. 2347 (a Naxian). Moreover, the discrepancy of date remains. Rawlinson reconciles the two stories by accepting them both as true! Grote (iv. 249 n.), while recognizing the Herodotean as the more probable of the two stories, shows the improbability of both being true; it would indeed be easier to believe that they are both fictitious—an hypothesis more creditable to the constitutional morality of the Athenians and the common humanity of their wives. The proposal ascribed to Lykidas would be 'accursed' (anathema) under the act of Aristides above cited; cp. notes to 8. 144.

ἐδόκεε ἄμεινον εἶναι, 'it seemed good . . .' (not ἐδοξε, 'it was decided.' But Hdt.'s imperfections are not always to be rigidly pressed).

δεξαμένους: cp. 8. 115 supra.

5. προσφέρει, not like the Pythia, cp. 4. 151, 5. 63 (a divine revelation or behest), still less like the Persian writers,

1. 3 (a reproach), but more simply, 'brings forward . . .' But cp. App. Crit.

ἐξενεῖκαι ἐς τὸν δῆμον: i.e. 'lay before the Ekklesia,' exactly as in 5. 79.

6. εἴτε δὴ δεδεγμένους χρήματα, the more plausible alternative, εἴτε καὶ the less. δεδεγμένοι, perhaps merely to avoid repeating δεξαμένους (from just above), albeit δεδεγμένοι could not be used above without a change of sense. (The passive form of p.p. with middle sense is noticeable.) Does Hdt. overlook the inconsistency of this alternative with his own statement, cc. 2, 3 supra? or has Mardonios now, being in possession of Athens, thought better of the Thebans' advice?

7. ἔάνδανε: cp. c. 19 infra.

8. οἳ τε ἐκ τῆς βουλῆς καὶ οἱ ἔξωθεν: these two classes, or groups, are comprised in 'Ἀθηναῖοι just before. By οἱ ἐκ τῆς βουλῆς Hdt. might have meant simply οἱ βουλευταί, 'the members of the Council.' Baehr's senatores qui e senatu egressi etc. goes beyond the necessary meaning of the words (though perhaps not beyond the actual facts of the case). Nor need οἱ ἔξωθεν mean 'those outside the Council-chamber,' but only those outside the Bar (δρόφακτοι), exactly described by Demosthenes: ἰ.ε. τοὺς περιστήκοντας ἔξωθεν καὶ ἀκρωμένους, i.e. persons within hearing of the proceedings in the Council (Baehr unfortunately equates ἀκρωμένους there with ὡς ἐπίθοντο here!). Hdt. himself, indeed, by adding ὡς ἐπίθοντο (which of course refers only to οἱ ἔξωθεν) shows that he does not understand the Attic source, which intended οἱ ἔξωθεν περιστάντες to be taken together.

9. Λυκίδην κατέλευσαν βάλλοντες: to Hdt. this execution is apparently a wild act of irregular justice, an instance of 'Lynch-law.' On the face of it this

τὸν δὲ Ἑλλησπόντιον Μουρυχίδην ἀπέπεμψαν ἄσινέα. γενο- 10
μένου δὲ θορύβου ἐν τῇ Σαλαμῖνι περὶ τὸν Λυκίδην, πυνθάνονται τὸ γινόμενον αἱ γυναῖκες τῶν Ἀθηναίων, διακελευσαμένη δὲ γυνὴ γυναικὶ καὶ παραλαβοῦσα ἐπὶ τὴν Λυκίδεω οἰκίην ἦσαν αὐτοκελές, καὶ κατὰ μὲν ἔλευσαν αὐτοῦ τὴν γυναῖκα κατὰ δὲ τὰ τέκνα.

Ἐς δὲ τὴν Σαλαμῖνα διέβησαν οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι ὧδε. ἕως 6
μὲν προσεδέκοντο ἐκ τῆς Πελοποννήσου στρατὸν ἤξειν τιμωρήσοντά σφι, οἱ δὲ ἔμενον ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ· ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ μὲν μακρότερα καὶ σχολαίτερα ἐποίεον, ὁ δὲ ἐπιὼν καὶ δὴ ἐν τῇ

10 μουρυχίδεα RV: μουρυχίδεα S: Μουρυχίδην z: del. van H. 11
ἐν . . Λυκίδην del. van H. || λυκίδεα BPz 12 τῶν Ἀθηναίων αἱ γυναῖκες τὸ γινόμενον z 13 ἦσαν α: ἦσαν BPz: ἦσαν C 6. 1 οἱ om.
Pz || ὦιδε CP 2 τὸν ἐκ z 3 σφι: σφίσι? van H. 4 τε
καὶ z || σχολαίτερα S || ἐς τὴν βοιωτίην BPz

view is unsatisfactory. Was the execution of Lykidas an instance of that summary jurisdiction which the Boule formerly possessed (cp. Ἀθ. π. 41. 2, 45), or was the Boule here in question the Areiopagos? Was Lykidas stoned as 'Anathema' under the psephism of Aristides (cp. 8. 144, and c. 2 supra), or, again, was there a formal psephism condemning the traitor? Lykurg. contr. Leocrat. 122 ἄξιον τοίνυν ἀκούσαι καὶ τοῦ περὶ τοῦ ἐν Σαλαμῖνι τελευτήσαντος γενομένου ψηφίσματος, ὃν ἡ βουλὴ, ὅτι λόγῳ μόνῳ ἐνεχείρει προδιδόναι τὴν πόλιν, περιελόμενῃ τοῖς στεφάνους αὐτοχειρὶ ἀπέκτεινεν. Or was this psephism passed ex post facto, to whitewash and justify the illegal execution? (Of all the orators Lykurgos is the worst as a historical authority: he even by anticipation makes the mistake, not uncommon nowadays, of confounding Pausanias 'the King' with Pausanias 'the Regent'; cp. c. 128 infra.)

κατέλευσαν, c. 120 infra.

10. τὸν δὲ . . ἄσινέα: a remarkable illustration of their respect for law, the law of nations; cp. 7. 133 supra.

12. αἱ γυναῖκες τῶν Ἀθηναίων: the only record of any active service by the Attic women in the war, who appear in general passive as sheep, shipped and shifted about from one place to another. It recalls the action reported on another occasion, 5. 87, of which Hdt. records: Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἐπὶ τοῦ πάθεος δεινότερόν τι δόξαι εἶναι τὸ τῶν γυναικῶν ἔργον.

διακελευσαμένη: cp. 7. 16 supra.

13. παραλαβοῦσα: sc. γυνὴ γυναῖκα,

cp. παρελάμβανε c. 1. supra. The whole construction is a kind of σχῆμα καθ' ὅλον καὶ μέρος.

τὴν Λυκίδεω οἰκίην: the scene is laid in Salamis: had Lykidas the Councillor a house there? Or was his house in Athens, or in Attica, and is this a slip? Should the scene have been laid in Athens, and earlier? Or, in fact, is Demosthenes right that the scene was before the battle of Salamis? It would be easier to account for the 'Hellepontine' in that case. But the whole story is unsatisfactory. Within a few days of this heroic scene—with its 'No surrender' and 'As long as the Sun keeps his path in Heaven, or one single Athenian citizen survive'—the Athenians sent to Sparta threatening to make terms with the king, cc. 6, 11 infra.

14. αὐτοκελές is an Harazlegomenon = αὐτοκέλευστοι (L. & S.).

κατὰ μὲν . . κατὰ δέ, a violent tmesis; cp. 8. 33.

6. 1. ὧδε gives the material, or rather ideal grounds, for the move, not the physical method or means (e.g. νηυσί).

ἕως μὲν is answered by ἐπεὶ δὲ . .

3. τιμωρήσοντα, to support, to assist; cp. 8. 169.

οἱ δὲ presents a δέ in apodosis, and also with resumed subject; cp. 7. 61.

οἱ μὲν: sc. οἱ Πελοποννήσιοι.

4. ἐποίεον, 'were acting, behaving in too long and leisurely a fashion'; cp. δεινότερα ἐποίεε 7. 1 supra.

8 δέ: sc. ὁ Πέρσης.

καὶ δὴ = ἤδη. Cp. Index.

5 Βοιωτῇ ἐλέγето εἶναι, οὕτω δὲ ὑπεξεκομίσαντό τε πάντα καὶ αὐτοὶ διέβησαν ἐς Σαλαμίνα, ἐς Λακεδαίμονά τε ἔπεμπον ἀγγέλους ἅμα μὲν μεμφομένους τοῖσι Λακεδαιμονίοισι ὅτι περιεῖδον ἐμβαλόντα τὸν βάρβαρον ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν ἀλλ' οὐ μετὰ σφέων ἠντίασαν ἐς τὴν Βοιωτὴν, ἅμα δὲ ὑπομνήσοντας
10 ὅσα σφι ὑπέσχετο ὁ Πέρσης μεταβαλοῦσι δώσειν, προεῖπαί τε ὅτι εἰ μὴ ἀμυνέσσι Ἀθηναίοισι, ὥς καὶ αὐτοὶ τινα ἀλεωρὴν
7 εὐρήσονται. οἱ γὰρ δὲ Λακεδαιμόνιοι ὄρταζόν τε τοῦτον τὸν χρόνον καὶ σφι ἦν Ἰακίνθια, περὶ πλείστου δ' ἦγον τὰ τοῦ

5 τε: τότε P 6 ἐς Σαλαμίνα del. Cobet || ἔπεμψαν S, Schaefer, Bekker 7 μεμφομένους B: μεμφομένους 8 ἐσβάλλοντα C: ἐσβαλόντα z 10 σφι: σφίσι? van H. || προεῖπέ τε C: προεῖπεται R 11 ὥς del. van H. 7. 1 ὄρταζόν CPz 2 δὲ B

5. Ἐλέγето, 'was being reported'; the evacuation of Attica might seem to have commenced as soon as Mardonios reached Chaironeia (the frontier town of Boiotia; cp. Plutarch, Kimon 1). But Mardonios may have negotiated from Thebes. In any case there is a chronological return in this c. to a point before that reached in c. 3 supra.

οὕτω δὲ, tum demum.

ὑπεξεκομίσαντο: cp. 8. 4 ὑπεκτίθεσθαι, 8. 41, 60 ὑπεκκέεσθαι.

6. ἐς Λακεδαίμονά τε ἔπεμπον, 'sending at the same time to L. . .'

7. ἅμα μὲν . . . ἅμα δέ, strictly correlative; but προεῖπαί τε follows, with a change of construction (anacoluthon): (ἔπεμπον) ἀγγέλους προεῖπαι = ἀγγέλεστας.

8. περιεῖδον: cp. c. 41 infra, 7. 16 supra.

ἀλλ' οὐ, 'instead of . . .'

10. ὑπέσχετο must be from ὑπέχειν, ὑπέχεσθαι or ὑπίσχεσθαι, cp. ὑπίσχοντο 7. 168, though Hdt. also uses the forms from ὑπισχνέομαι as in c. 109 infra; cp. ὑπέσχε 2. 151, ὑπέχουσι 4. 72, ὑπίσχομαι 7. 104, and ὑπέσχετο 2. 28 in a somewhat different and stricter sense.

μεταβαλοῦσι, 'if they changed sides': predicative and conditional participle.

11. ὅτι . . . ὥς, "quarum altera abundat," Baehr; cp. 3. 71. Cp. App. Crit.

ἀλεωρή: found in Homer both of an act (Il. 24. 216) and of an object (21. 57, 15. 533); and in Aristophanes in the latter sense, Wasps 615.

7. 2. Ἰακίνθια: a three days' celebration, apparently common like the Karneian, to all Dorians, but certainly of pre-Dorian origin in the Peloponnese: Schoemann-Lipsius ii. (1902) 473. For the texts bearing upon the festival see Wide, Lakonische Kulte (1893) 285 ff. The feast was held during the Lakonian month Hekatombeus (Hesych. s.v. Ἐκατομβεύς) (not necessarily = Attic Hekatombaion: perhaps = Thargelion, ref. ap. Busolt ii.<sup>2</sup> 722). The cult implies a spring festival. The celebration lasted three days; on the first day the death of Hyakinthos was bewailed (Pausan. 3. 19. 3); on another day the women of Sparta brought a Chiton as an offering to the god of Amyklai (Pausan. 3. 16. 2); on another day (Athenaeus 139 τῇ δὲ μέσῃ τῶν τριῶν ἡμερῶν—but, if so, he omits to say what was done on the third) there was a great and joyous festival, with songs and dances, with sacrifice and banquet: presumably in honour of the apotheosis of Hyakinthos (τὸν θεὸν ἄδουσιν), whom by that time it was very difficult to distinguish from his destroyer (Apollon). (Rawlinson seems to think the Hyakinthia lasted only one day, and that Midsummer-day.) Thucyd. 5. 23. 4 might favour an earlier date, in spring; but that would quite discredit the chronology of this story in Hdt., not indeed in itself a very strong objection. Busolt l.c. argues from Xenophon Hell. 4. 5. 1 ff. that the Hyakinthia were celebrated 'a few weeks at most' after the Isthmia, which he places in Μουνιχιῶν (tenth Attic month); but Xenophon's intervals are very ill-reckoning, nor does he say how long after the Isthmia or how long before θεοῦ πορσύνειν· ἄμα δὲ τὸ τεῖχος σφι <ἤνετο>, τὸ ἐν τῷ Ἴσθμῳ ἐτείχεον, καὶ ἤδη ἐπάλξις ἐλάμβανε. ὥς δὲ ἀπίκοντο ἐς τὴν Λακεδαιμόνα οἱ ἄγγελοι οἱ ἀπ' Ἀθηνέων, ἄμα ἀγόμενοι 5 ἔκ τε Μεγάρων ἀγγέλους καὶ ἐκ Πλαταιέων, ἔλεγον τάδε ἐπελθόντες ἐπὶ τοὺς ἐφόρους. “ἐπεμψαν ἡμέας Ἀθηναῖοι λέγοντες ὅτι ἡμῶν βασιλεὺς ὁ Μήδων τοῦτο μὲν τὴν χώραν ἀποδιδόι, τοῦτο δὲ συμμάχους ἐθέλει ἐπ' ἴσῃ τε καὶ ὁμοίῃ ποιήσασθαι [ἄνευ τε δόλου καὶ ἀπάτης], ἐθέλει δὲ καὶ ἄλλην 10 χώραν πρὸς τῇ ἡμετέρῃ διδόναι, τὴν ἂν αὐτοὶ ἐλώμεθα.

3 <ἤνετο> Stein<sup>3</sup> 4 ἤδη: δὴ Schaefer, van H. || ἐπάλξις α: ἐπάλξεις 5 Ἀθηνέων αP, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἀθηναίων 7 ἐς τοὺς β 10 ἄνευ . . ἀπάτης secl. Stein, repugn. Cobet, van H., Holder

the Hyakinthia the Amyklaians started home for the latter celebration in 390 B.C. (al. 392).

περὶ πλείστου δ' ἦγον, 'they considered it of utmost importance'; cp. ἄξω (μέζονος) 7. 150 supra. Cp. 5. 63 τὰ γὰρ τοῦ θεοῦ πρεσβύτερα ἐποιεῦντο (ἢ τὰ τῶν ἀνδρῶν). The Hyakinthia again and again brought Spartan armies, or regiments, home from the field; cp. Xenoph. Hell. 4. 5. 11, Pausan. 3. 10. 1, 4. 19. 4.

3. πορσύνειν [**πῶρω* or πῶρω=πῶρω, to 'further'!]: an epic, poetic, and solemn word; 'never found in comedy,' L. & S. The god is of course Hyakinthos, or Apollon.

ἄμα δέ: there is no antecedent ἄμα μὲν to correspond; but the phrase, echoing as it does the terms of the Athenian message just above, makes a humorous appearance, perhaps undesignated.

τὸ τεῖχος. This wall at the Isthmos has been a most unconscionable time a-building, if it is only now, about midsummer, receiving the finishing touches, in the shape of its battlements (ἐπάλξις). Cp. 8. 71 supra. It had been begun immediately after (if not before) the disaster of Thermopylai, and the work had been pushed on at high pressure. It could not have taken longer to finish than the double wall all round Plataia, with battlements and towers to boot, erected in 429 B.C. in the course of the summer (Thuc. 2. 78, 3. 21). Had the Peloponnesians left this wall unfinished, on the retirement of the Persians, and only renewed and completed it on the advance of Mardonios in the spring of 479 B.C.?

5. οἱ ἀπ' Ἀθηνέων: an inaccuracy, or perhaps again an undesigned indication that this embassy is dated too late, if placed after the reoccupation of Athens by Mardonios. We can hardly discriminate by aid of the prepositions ἀπό and ἐκ: the Megarians and Plataians were doubtless in Salamis with the Athenians, or at any rate not at home in their own cities; or, if they were, then this embassy to Sparta took place in the early spring.

7. ἐπελθόντες ἐπὶ τοὺς ἐφόρους: ἐπελθεῖν the correct term; cp. c. 5 supra. If they address the Ephors it is because the question is not of alliance, of peace or war, but merely a question of the mobilization, apparently a function of the Ephoralty; cp. Xenoph. Hell. 3. 2. 23, etc. At the same time the Ephors were the presidents both of the Gerousia and of the Apella, and no doubt our authorities, Hdt. in primis, may speak sometimes of the Ephors acting, where they acted really with Senate or Assembly; cp. Xenoph. l.c. Leotychidas, by the way, would appear to have been by this time at Aigina, or even Delos (8. 131-133), unless, indeed, it was in response to this spring embassy that the fleet was mobilized.

8. βασιλεὺς . . ἀποδιδόι κτλ.: this suits the early message of Mardonios 8. 140 supra, and would have been no news to the Spartans. If it is supposed to refer to the same offer, repeated by Morychides, c. 5 supra, Athens had rejected it again. But this repetition of the terms from 8. 140 is very tell-tale and inconsequent.

τοῦτο μὲν . . τοῦτο δέ: cp. Index.

ἡμεῖς δὲ Δία τε Ἑλλήνιον αἰδεσθέντες καὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα δεινὸν ποιούμενοι προδοῦναι οὐ καταινέσαμεν ἀλλ' ἀπειπάμεθα, καίπερ ἀδικούμενοι ὑπ' Ἑλλήνων καὶ καταπροδιδόμενοι, 15 ἐπιστάμενοί τε ὅτι κερδαλεώτερον ἐστὶ ὁμολογῆσαι τῷ Πέρσῃ μᾶλλον ἢ περ πολεμέειν· οὐ μὲν οὐδὲ ὁμολογήσομεν ἐκόντες εἶναι. καὶ τὸ μὲν ἀπ' ἡμέων οὕτω ἀκίβδηλον νέμεται ἐπὶ τοὺς Ἑλληνας· ὑμεῖς δὲ ἐς πᾶσαν ἀρρωδίην τότε ἀπικόμενοι
 μὴ ὁμολογήσωμεν τῷ Πέρσῃ, ἐπείτε ἐξεμάθετε τὸ ἡμέτερον 20 φρόνημα σαφέως, ὅτι οὐδαμὰ προδώσομεν τὴν Ἑλλάδα, καὶ διότι τεῖχος ὑμῖν διὰ τοῦ Ἰσθμοῦ ἐλαυνόμενον ἐν τέλει ἐστὶ, καὶ δὴ λόγον οὐδένα τῶν Ἀθηναίων ποιέεσθε, συνθέμενοί τε
 ἡμῖν τὸν Πέρσῃ ἀντιώσεσθαι ἐς τὴν Βοιωτὴν προδεδώκατε,

13 ἀλλὰ πάντα τε :: 14 ὑπὸ B 15 πέρσει R 16 εἴπερ C
 17 ἀπ' ἡμέων: ἡμέτερον Pz || ἀκίβδηλον ἐν CPz 19 ἐμάθετε R
 20 οὐδαμὰ Rz 21 ὅτι B, Holder, van H. || τὸ διὰ? Stein<sup>12</sup> || ἐν
 τέλει ἐστι Stein<sup>1</sup>: ἐν τέλει ἐστὶ AB: ἐντελές ἐστι :: 22 δὴ: δεῖ C 23 τῷ Πέρσῃ Reiske: τὸν Πέρσῃ del. Krueger, Holder, van H.

12. Δία . . Ἑλλήνιον looks rather like an anachronism: the Zeus Hellenios or Panhellenios known at this period is the Aiginetan; cp. Pindar, Nem. 5. 15 (composed before the date of the battle of Salamis, cp. Mezger, Pindars Siegerslieder, p. 332). Were the Aiginetans represented in this embassy too (cp. 8. 60 supra), or have the Athenians generously adopted the Aiginetan title? cp. Farnell, Cults, i. (1896) 63. Anyway, the appeal from the local or Dorian cult to a pan-Hellenic deity (cp. 8. 144) is effective.

αἰδεσθέντες: cp. 7. 141 supra.

13. οὐ καταινέσαμεν ἀλλ' ἀπειπάμεθα, 'we did not consent but refused'—a sort of Hendiadys! καταινέειν, cc. 33, 34 infra. ἀπείπασθαι, 7. 14 supra.

15. κερδαλεώτερον, in earlier Ionic 'shrewd', 'crafty' (Homer, Archilochos); in Attic (Aristoph., Thucyd.), as here, 'advantageous', 'profitable' (cp. L. & S.). μᾶλλον is de trop. The sentiment expressed is observable: the Athenians are still in heroic mood.

16. οὐ μὲν οὐδέ, 'not indeed that . . ' ἐκόντες εἶναι: cp. 7. 164 supra.

17. τὸ μὲν ἀπ' ἡμέων, 'our conduct, our policy.' ὑμεῖς δὲ supplies the contrast. κίβδηλος, 1. 66, 75, 5. 91, of oracles (Delphic), not as 'spurious' but as 'misleading', 'deceitful'.

νέμεται ἐπὶ τοὺς Ἑλληνας, 'is (being) exercised, conducted, towards the Hellenes' (with perfect honesty, without ambiguity); or ἐπὶ, distinctly locative, as in c. 95 infra, 'throughout Hellas'; or coram, 8. 79, cp. ἐπὶ τοῖς ἐφόροις supra.

18. τότε prima facie refers back to the scene laid at Athens in 8. 140-144, when the Lakedaimonians κάρτα ἔδεισαν μὴ ὁμολογήσωσι τῷ Πέρσῃ Ἀθηναῖοι.

20. καὶ διότι gives a further reason, parallel to ἐπείτε just above.

21. ἐν τέλει, 'complete,' or 'near completion'; cp. πρὸς τέλει c. 8 infra (and contr. ἐν τέλει c. 106 infra).

22. καὶ δὴ: Stein follows Baehr in remarking that these words introduce the apodosis: no doubt—but why not = ἤδη (with Krüger)? Cp. c. 6 supra.

λόγον οὐδ. π.: cp. 7. 13, 57, 218 supra.

συνθέμενοι . . τὴν Βοιωτὴν: an express agreement (σύνθημα or συνθήκη) to this effect has not been actually recorded, but has been taken for granted; cp. 8. 144 ad f.

23. προδεδώκατε is rather strong language, both in matter and tense: a perfect, the effects of which are not past. περιεῖδτε: a particular act, on a particular occasion, the occasion being apparently the present invasion of Attica by Mardonios (not the previous occupation by Xerxes, to which the remark might have applied, cp. 8. 40 supra). These Athenian ambassadors, however, have περιείδετέ τε προεσβαλόντα ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν τὸν βάρβαρον. ἐς μὲν νῦν τὸ παρεὼν Ἀθηναῖοι ὑμῖν μνηΐουσι· οὐ γὰρ 25 ἐποιήσατε ἐπιτηδέως. νῦν δὲ ὅτι τάχος στρατιὴν ἅμα ἡμῖν ἐκέλευσαν ὑμᾶς ἐκπέμπειν, ὡς ἂν τὸν βάρβαρον δεκώμεθα ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἡμάρτομεν τῆς Βοιωτίας, τῆς γε ἡμετέρης ἐπιτηδεύτατον ἐστὶ μαχέσασθαι τὸ Θριάσιον πεδίον." ὡς δὲ ἄρα ἤκουσαν οἱ ἔφοροι ταῦτα, ἀνεβάλλοντο ἐς τὴν 8 ὑστεραίην ὑποκρινέεσθαι, τῇ δὲ ὑστεραίᾳ ἐς τὴν ἐτέρην· τοῦτο

24 προεσβαλόντα Stein: ἐσβαλόντα BCP, Holder, van H.: προσβαλόντα α: προσβάλλοντα C 28 ἐπεὶ γὰρ C 29 ἐπιτηδεύτατον α: ἐπιτηδέστατον β: ἐπιτηδεύτατον ceteri || ἐμμαχέσασθαι β, Holder, van H. 8. 1 ἤκουσαν z || ἀνεβάλλοντο BCP, Holder 2 ὑποκρινέεσθαι Cobet, Stein<sup>8</sup>: ὑποκρινέσθαι van H.: ὑποκρίνασθαι BCP, Stein<sup>12</sup>, Holder: ὑποκρίνεσθαι α

left Athens (or Salamis) for Sparta before Mardonios had actually entered Attica (cp. c. 6 supra); and if they here rhetorically treat the invasion of Attica by Mardonios as a fait accompli, it is rhetoric, not strict history: how else could they proceed to call upon the Spartans to send an army back with them ὡς ἂν τὸν βάρβαρον δεκώμεθα ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ, to 'receive' the barbarian in Attica?

25. ἐς μὲν νῦν τὸ παρεὼν . . νῦν δέ: the antithesis between τὸ παρεὼν and νῦν is not prima facie a sharp one; but νῦν is purely temporal, τὸ παρεὼν is circumstantial. Again, ἐς might be taken 'down to' the present=ἐς τὸ νῦν (cp. ἐς τὸδε 7. 29, but ἐς τὸ παρεὼν ibid., not so): νῦν δέ is then distinct. νῦν qualifies ἐκπέμπειν rather than ἐκέλευσαν.

μνηΐου: cp. 7. 229.

26. (οὐκ) ἐπιτηδέως is a meiosis; leniter dicta (Schweighauser).

ὅτι τάχος=ὡς τάχος 5. 106. Cp. Thuc. 7. 42. 3.

ἅμα, simul, simul cum=σύν but stronger.

27. δεκώμεθα: cp. 8. 28 supra.

28. ἡμάρτομεν τῆς Βοιωτίας: they were too late to 'receive' him in Boiotia, but there was still time to 'receive' him in the Thriasian plain. This argument likewise points to an earlier date for the embassy.

29. τὸ Θριάσιον πεδίον: cp. 8. 65 supra. If Mardonios was already at Athens the Peloponnesian forces could not count on getting into the Thriasian plain, for Mardonios would doubtless be in possession of Eleusis; unless, indeed, he had entered Attica by Dekeleia or Phyle, and omitted to use or occupy the pass of Dryoskephalai: not a very probable hypothesis.

The advantages of the Thriasian plain as a battle-field, from the Peloponnesian point of view, are open to discussion: if the Greeks could have encountered Mardonios as he emerged from the pass of Eleutheraí-Eleusis they might have scored a local success, but they would have had to hold the sacred way by Daphne and the route between Aigaleos and Parnes (crossed by Archidamos in 431 B.C., Thuc. 2. 19. 2), while on the plain itself the Persian cavalry would have ridden round them. This plain was never one of the great battle-fields of Greece. The Greek fleet could not have been of much service in the case.

8. 1. ἄρα, 'well,' not without surprise; cp. Index. Abicht regards the particle here as marking an advance in the action (or inaction!).

ἀναβάλλεσθαι, differre, 6. 86 etc.

2. τοῦτο καὶ ἐπὶ δέκα ἡμέρας ἐποίησαν: i.e. for a whole (Greek) week; cp. c. 40 infra. There is an Asyndeton. The next words, ἐξ . . ἀναβαλλόμενοι, are not otiose (pace Stein), for, without them, the sentence might mean (in spite of the imperf. ἐποίουν) that they postponed the answer 'for a week' (i.e. twelve days in all). Meanwhile they were working away at the wall across the Isthmos; cp. c. 7 supra (dis), which is even yet not quite finished! If πάντες Πελοποννήσιοι (i.e. Π. πανδημί)

καὶ ἐπὶ δέκα ἡμέρας ἐποίεον, ἐξ ἡμέρης ἐς ἡμέρην ἀναβαλλόμενοι. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ τὸν Ἴσθμόν ἐτείχεον σπουδῇν
 5 ἔχοντες πολλὴν πάντες Πελοποννήσιοι, καὶ σφί ἦν πρὸς τέλει. οὐδ' ἔχω εἰπεῖν τὸ αἴτιον διότι ἀπικομένου μὲν Ἀλεξάνδρου τοῦ Μακεδόνα ἐς Ἀθήνας σπουδῇν μεγάλην ἐποιήσαντο μὴ μηδίσαι Ἀθηναίους, τότε δὲ ὥρην ἐποιήσαντο οὐδεμίαν, ἄλλο γε ἢ ὅτι ὁ Ἴσθμός σφί ἐτετείχιστο καὶ 10 ἐδόκεον Ἀθηναίων ἔτι δέεσθαι οὐδέν· ὅτε δὲ Ἀλέξανδρος ἀπύκετο ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν, οὐκ ἔπαυσε τετετεχίστο, ἐργάζοντο δὲ 9 μεγάλως καταρρωδηκότες τοὺς Πέρσας. τέλος δὲ τῆς τε ὑποκρίσεως καὶ ἐξόδου τῶν Σπαρτιητέων ἐγένετο τρόπος τοιοῦτος. τῇ προτεραίᾳ τῆς ὑστάτης καταστάσεως μελλούσης ἔσσεσθαι Χίλως ἀνὴρ Τεγεήτης, δυνάμενος ἐν Λακεδαίμονι
 5 μέγιστον ξείνων, τῶν ἐφόρων ἐπύθετο πάντα λόγον [τὸν

6 εἶπαι Bz, van H.

8 ὥρην CPz

9 οὐδὲ μίαν α: οὐδὲ μίην B:

οὐδεμίαν z

10 δέεσθαι αCPz, Holder, van H. || οὐδενός B || ὁ ἀλέ-

ξανδρος CPz

11 οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν εἰ ἐτετείχιστο Marc.

9. 4

χίλως Marc.: Χείλως Plutarch. Mor. 871: Χίλως οὐνόματι z || τεγεήτης R

5 ἐφόρων ἕνα z || τὸν . . ἔλεγον secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder were at the Isthmos, building or no building, they surely had arms with them. The building operations at this point may be put down to Hdt. They are not required to keep the Peloponnesians at home, but he seems to think the action of the Peloponnesians to have been determined simply by the state of the building.

6. οὐδ' ἔχω εἰπεῖν τὸ αἴτιον διότι κτλ., 'I cannot state the reason why . . . αἴτιον: cp. 7. 125.

8. ὥρην here is plainly = σπουδή (cp. 1. 4, 3. 155), a poetic word; cp. ὀλιγωρία.

9. ἐτετείχιστο: a strictly temporal pluperfect, reinforced in ἀπετετείχιστο.

10. δέεσθαι οὐδέν, 'to have no need of . . . (μηδέν was possible here, but not obligatory, as the governing verb is not itself in a form or construction which requires μή for its negation, Madvig § 205.)

12. μεγάλως καταρρωδηκότες: the abject and utter terror of the Peloponnesians is expressed in fourfold fashion: (a) by the strong word ὀρρωδέω (ἀρρ-); (b) by the preposition in comp.; (c) by the 'perfect' tense; (d) by the adverb. Probably Hdt. found all this in the Attic Sources.

9. 1. τέλος δέ: adverbial, 'at last.'

2. ὑπόκρισις = Attic ἀπόκρισις; cp. 1.

116. Aristot. Eth. N. 3. 10. 4 = 1118 a clearly shows the Attic meaning. Hdt. never uses the word ὑποκρίτης.

ἔξοδος is practically a technical military term; cp. cc. 19, 26 infra, 7. 223 supra; Thuc. 2. 10. 1, Xenoph. Hell. 1. 2. 17.

ἐγένετο τρόπος τοιοῦτος, 'took the following turn,' 'occurred on this wise.'

3. κατάστασις: as in 3. 46, not as in 8. 141 supra.

4. Χίλως: the name appears in Plutarch de Hdti. m. 41 (Mor. 871), Themist. 6, as Χείλως, in Polyain. 5. 30 as Χίλιος, a form (Chilius) used by Cicero (ad Att. 1. 9. 2, 12. 2, 16. 15) of a later poet. What Chileos was doing in Sparta neither Hdt. nor Plutarch nor Polyainos reports. His critique of the ephoral policy was notorious; but who first let it out? The situation demanded is really a meeting of the Symmachoi at Sparta—there may very well have been one in the winter or spring, or about the Feast of the Hyacinthia—and the remarks of Chileos were made in that Synod; if the Ephors were specially addressed, it was merely as the presiding magistrates.

δυνάμενος: of power, influence; cp. 7. 5 supra.

5. ξέλων: not used in the Spartan sense, given c. 11 infra.

δὴ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι ἔλεγον]· ἀκούσας δὲ ταῦτα ὁ Χίλεος ἔλεγε ἄρα σφί τάδε. “οὕτω ἔχει, ἄνδρες ἔφοροι· Ἀθηναίων ἡμῖν ἐόντων μὴ ἀρθμίων τῷ δὲ βαρβάρῳ συμμάχων, καίπερ τείχεος διὰ τοῦ Ἰσθμοῦ ἐληλαμένου καρτεροῦ, μεγάλαι κλισιάδες ἀναπεπτάται ἐς τὴν Πελοπόννησον τῷ Πέρσῃ. ἀλλ’ ἐσακού- 10 σατε, πρὶν τι ἄλλο Ἀθηναίοισι δόξαι σφάλμα φέρον τῇ Ἑλλάδι.” ὁ μὲν σφί ταῦτα συνεβούλευε· οἱ δὲ φρενὶ 10 λαβόντες τὸν λόγον αὐτίκα, φράσαντες οὐδὲν τοῖσι ἀγγέλοισι τοῖσι ἀπυγμένοισι ἀπὸ τῶν πολλῶν, νυκτὸς ἔτι ἐκπέμπουσι πεντακισχιλίους Σπαρτιητέων καὶ ἑπτὰ περὶ ἕκαστον τάξαντες

6 ταῦτα om. B<sup>Pz</sup>, Holder, van H. || ὁ Χίλεος del. van H., Holder
7 οὕτως α || ἡμῖν <μέν> van H., Holder 8 μὴ ἐόντων B || τῷδε τῷ βαρβάρῳ R: (τῷδε τῷ β. S: τῷ δὲ τῷ β. V ap. Gaisf.) 9 κρατεροῦ α
10 ἀναπεπτάται A<sup>1</sup>B || ἐσακούετε B 11 πρὶν <ἢ> τι van H. || τῇ
Ἑλλάδι φέρον Pz 10. 1 ἐν φρενὶ Bz 3 ἀπυγμένοισι B 4
πεντακισχιλίων B || καὶ . . εἰλώτων om. B, expung. Wesseling, van H.

πάντα λόγον, 1. 21.

7. ἄρα: much to their surprise; cp. c. 8 supra.

8. ἐόντων μὴ ἀρθμίων: cp. 7. 101 (tot. verb.), and καὶ ὥν μὴ Μηλιεύς 7. 214.

9. μεγάλαι κλισιάδες ἀναπεπτάται, '(the) doorways stand wide open'—lit. large 'shutters' have been unfolded; μ. may well be predicative; the tense is, of course, without temporal prejudice, and essentially present. The verb occurs with gates, gateways of the Samian akropolis, 3. 147 ἀναπετάσας τὰς πύλας, and of Babylon 3. 158, and well describes the operation of opening double or folding doors, gates. Cp. Iliad 12. 120 ff. where (πύλων) σάνιδες ἀναπεπταμένοι are contrasted with ἐπικεκλιμένοι. In 21. 531 the simple verb occurs (πεπταμένας πύλας ἔχετε). κλισιάδες, or κλισιάδες, might be street-doors (as in Plutarch, Poplic. 20) or chamber-doors, like the κλισιαὶ σάνιδες πυκνῶς ἀραρυῖαι διακλίδες in the ὑψόροφος θάλαμος of Odysseus (Od. 2. 344). The significance of the metaphor ('the Open Door') here is obvious, its force undeniable. Blakesley points out that Plutarch copies it three times (Aristeid. et Cat. Comp. 2, Alcibiad. 10, de Isid. 23 = Mor. 360 A), as St. Paul twice, 1 Cor. 16. 9, 2 Cor. 2. 12.

10. ἐσακούειν, c. 60 infra. ἄλλο is euphemistic. σφάλμα φ., cp. 7. 6. δόξαι, 'be decreed.'

As Rawlinson points out, there is nothing new in the remarks of Chileos to the Ephors (except the metaphor!); the Athenians themselves have more than hinted it above, c. 7. Placed in the high summer of 479 B.C. the remarks of Chileos are sadly belated; but placed at a meeting either of the Spartan Symmarchy in the winter 480-79 or even at the Hyakinthia in the (late) spring, they are much to the point, as giving an Arkadian's view of the relative value of the wall at the Isthmos and the alliance of the chief sea-power.

10. 1. φρενὶ λαβόντες τὸν λόγον: cp. νόῳ λαβών 3. 41. φρήν (or φρένες) is unusual in prose; in 3. 134 Hdt. directly contrasts αἱ φρένες with τὸ σῶμα.

2. αὐτίκα . . νυκτὸς ἔτι: their ἐξοδος by night appears to be treated as part of the sudden and secret change of policy; it is more likely to have been a wise precaution to get over as much ground as possible in the cool (hardly to get start of the Argives; but cp. c. 11 infra).

3. ἀπυγμένοισι, 'still in Sparta.' τῶν πολλῶν: sc. ἀπ' Ἀθηνῶν, ἐκ Μεγάρων, ἐκ Πλαταιῶν c. 7 supra; yet the 'cities' are ex hypothesi in the hands of Mardonios. But ubi cives ibi civitas! Cp. c. 5 supra.

4. πεντακισχιλίους Σπαρτιητέων: 5000 did not exhaust the total available citizen-force; cp. 7. 234 supra; but it is virtually the levy πανδημί, of two-thirds (from twenty to forty-five years of age). The figure here is no doubt a round one, but may be accepted as

5 τῶν εἰλώτων, Πausanίῃ τῷ Κλεομβρότου ἐπιτάξαντες ἐξάγειν. ἐγένετο μὲν ἡ ἡγεμονίη Πλειστάρχου τοῦ Λεωνίδεω· ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν ἦν ἔτι παῖς, ὁ δὲ τούτου ἐπίτροπός τε καὶ ἀνεψιός. Κλεόμβροτος γὰρ ὁ Πausανίεω μὲν πατὴρ Ἀναξανδρίδεω δὲ

5 ἐπιτρέψαντες B, Holder, van H.

6 ἐγένετο α, Stein<sup>1</sup> || μὲν νυν

ἡ B, Holder, van H.

7 ἀνεψιός κλεόμβροτος· κλεόμβροτος γὰρ R

8 Πausανίω van H.

substantially correct; what cannot be allowed to pass is the assertion that they took 35,000 Helots with them, seven Helots in attendance on (περί) each Spartiate, by special order (τάξαντες). There may be some sense in this figure, but not as here stated. Pausanias was not well-supplied with ψαλοί, cp. c. 60 infra (but cp. c. 28 infra), so these Helots are probably not fighting men, badly as such were wanted; doubtless large numbers of Helots were employed on the commissariat service, cp. c. 39 infra—roughly speaking some 30,000—and this Army Service Corps is here represented as all accompanying the citizen-militia. Or, again, the figure may represent an estimate of the total number of Helots employed in any capacity during the campaign, or during the war (in ships etc.), which Hdt. has misunderstood and misapplied; cp. Appendix VIII. § 2 (iv.).

5. Πausanίῃ τῷ Κλεομβρότου: the question of command was not settled by the Ephors but by the Apella; cp. Xenoph. Hell. 4. 2. 9. Pausanias, son of Kleombrotos (mentioned 8. 3 supra without patronymic; perhaps therefore in a passage added afterwards; but cp. note ad l.), cannot have been an old man at this time; but the fact that he is of age to be Regent, and to command a Spartan army in the field, rather supports the view that his father, Kleombrotos, and his uncle, Leonidas, were twins; cp. 7. 205 supra and note to l. 8 infra. The relationship of the persons here mentioned may be accurately exhibited:—

Dorieus	Leonidas	Kleombrotos
Euryanax	Pleistarchos	Pausanias

Dorieus, Leonidas and Kleombrotos being full ἀδελφοί and being the younger brothers of Kleomenes, the son of their father's (Anaxandridas) second wife; cp. l.c. supra.

6. ἐγένετο μὲν ἡ ἡγεμονίη: i.e. by custom or prescriptive right the actual king would have had the command, the leading. Leotychidas was already in command of the fleet; cp. 8. 131 supra; if Pleistarchos had been in command of the army, the arrangement would apparently have conflicted with the 'law' reported by Hdt. 5. 75, albeit the 'law' might refer to one and the same force only, and even so, was hardly quite strictly observed (cp. Xenoph. Hell. 5. 3. 10). But Hdt. in this passage is not concerned with any such scruples, and Bk. 5 is probably of later composition than this passage; cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

Πλειστάρχου τοῦ Λεωνίδεω: Pleistarchos was the son of Leonidas and Gorgo, and so the grandson of Kleomenes on the spindle side. Anaxandridas was both his grandfather and his great-grandfather. His exact age is a matter of doubt, but he was still apparently a minor at the time of the fall of Pausanias = 472-1 B.C., Thuc. 1. 132. 1.

7. ἐπίτροπός τε καὶ ἀνεψιός: Baehr has here made a curious blunder from misunderstanding Pausan. 3. 5. 1; he says, successerat nimirum Pleistoanax Pleistarcho qui regno initio abierat. Why, Pleistoanax was the son of Pausanias, and could only succeed in his father's right! Pausanias himself was never king (nor is he called so by Aristotle, pace Clinton Fasti ii.<sup>2</sup> 261, though so described sometimes by orators, lexicographers, and modern scholars; cp. c. 5 supra). Pleistarchos was still king in 472 B.C.; cp. previous note. ἐπίτροπος, cp. 7. 170 supra, and for the meaning here l. 65. ἀνεψιός, 'first cousin' here; cp. 7. 82.

8. Κλεόμβροτος . . ἀπέθανε, 'Kleombrotos (had) died shortly after leading home the army which (had) built the wall at the Isthmos.' He was no doubt in the first instance 'Regent,' or guardian to Pleistarchos. The much debated wall here appears as a fait accompli before παῖς οὐκέτι περιῆν, ἀλλ' ἀπαγαγὼν ἐκ τοῦ Ἰσθμοῦ τὴν στρατιὴν τὴν τὸ τεῖχος δείμασαν μετὰ ταῦτα οὐ πολλὸν <sup>10</sup> χρόνον τινὰ βιοὺς ἀπέθανε. ἀπῆγε δὲ τὴν στρατιὴν ὁ Κλεόμβροτος ἐκ τοῦ Ἰσθμοῦ διὰ τόδε· θυομένῳ οἱ ἐπὶ τῷ Πέρσῃ ὁ ἥλιος ἀμαυρώθη ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ. προσαίρεται δὲ ἑωυτῷ Πausanias Εὐρύνακτα τὸν Δωριέος, ἄνδρα οἰκίης ἐόντα τῆς αὐτῆς.

Οἱ μὲν δὴ σὺν Πausanίῃ ἐξεληλύθεσαν ἔξω Σπάρτης· οἱ <sup>15</sup> <sup>11</sup> δὲ ἄγγελοι, ὡς ἡμέρῃ ἐγεγόνεε, οὐδὲν εἰδότες περὶ τῆς ἐξόδου

10 τὴν om. BC || πολλὸν τινὰ χρόνον B, Holder, van H.: εἴ τι con. Stein 11 ἀπῆγαγε Cobet, van H. 13 προσερέεται B 14 ὁ παυσανίης B || ἄνδρα del. van H. 11. 1 ἐξεληλύθησαν Oz 2 ἰδόντες C

Kleombrotos returned to Sparta in 480 B.C. ! In c. 8 supra it is still being hurried on in the spring—or, as some would have it, after midsummer of 479 B.C. See note ad l.

13. ὁ ἥλιος ἀμαυρώθη ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ. Zech attempted to make out that ἀμαυρώθη did not imply an eclipse. Nothing short of an eclipse (not necessarily total) would account for the act of Kleombrotos. Plutarch, Caesar 69, uses ἀμαύρωμα similarly. Petavius dated this eclipse 2nd Oct. 480; Hoffmann and Lamp ap. Busolt ii. 2 715 n. 1 agree in the date, and time the maximum obscuration at Korinth to 2.20 P.M. (a partial eclipse). Stein very ingeniously suggests that the θυσιή was made, after Salamis, on the question of intercepting the retreat of the Persian land-forces from Attica.

With οὐ πολλὸν χρόνον τινὰ βιοὺς cp. 5. 48 οὐ (γάρ) τινὰ πολλὸν χρόνον ἤρξε ὁ Κλεομένης. The sense best taken is that Kleombrotos died comparatively young. He can hardly have been less than fifty, or his son could scarcely have succeeded him as ἐπίτροπος and ἡγεμών. But the statement suggests that Pausanias was about as juvenile as a Regent could be.

προσαίρεται δὲ ἑωυτῷ: there is something very curious in this arrangement. The Spartans will scarcely have allowed the ἡγεμών to select a colleague at his own free will. Perhaps Pausanias was barely of age to assume the great responsibilities of his position, and an older man, of the Herakleid lineage, was associated with him in virtual command, though nominally Pausanias had the supreme honours; perhaps the great victory, for which Pausanias claimed (Thuc. 1. 132. 2) and obtained (c. 64 infra) all the credit, was more due to the intelligence of his cousin; if, indeed, there was not a still greater intelligence in the background. Cp. Appendix VIII. § 9.

14. Εὐρύνακτα τὸν Δωριέος appears again in cc. 53, 55; as Dorieus was the eldest of the three brothers, Euryanax was probably senior to Pausanias. Why had he not succeeded Leonidas, or, for that matter, Kleomenes, as son of the next eldest son? Dorieus may have renounced, or forfeited, the right of succession; or a king's son (Leonidas, Pleistarchos) may have succeeded in preference to a privatus; cp. 7. 3, where Demaratos lays down a law, which may be illustrated by, or generalized from, the case of Euryanax.

Rawlinson has an erroneous but very instructive note on this passage. He attempts to prove that the Dorieus here mentioned cannot be Dorieus son of Anaxandridas for two reasons: (1) Had Dorieus left a son in Sparta "he would undoubtedly have succeeded to the throne"—but no! see above. (2) "The words of Hdt. imply a more distant relative." Nay, the saddle is on the wrong horse! Hdt. in Bks. 5 and 9 follows different sources; had he known the story of Dorieus when he wrote this passage he must have guarded his readers against the error into which Rawlinson has fallen; in other words, this passage makes strongly for the earlier composition of Bks. 7, 8, 9. Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

11. 1. ἐξεληλύθεσαν: before any one, the Athenians for example, knew of it.

2. ἐγεγόνεε: not until after daybreak.

ἐπῆλθον ἐπὶ τοὺς ἐφόρους, ἐν νόῳ δὴ ἔχοντες ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐπὶ τὴν ἐωυτοῦ ἕκαστος· ἐπελθόντες δὲ ἔλεγον τάδε.

5 “ὕμεις μὲν ὧ Λακεδαιμόνιοι αὐτοῦ τῇδε μένοντες Ἰακίνθιά τε ἄγετε καὶ παίζετε, καταπροδόντες τοὺς συμμάχους· Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ὡς ἀδικεόμενοι ὑπὸ ὑμέων χήτει τε συμμάχων καταλύσονται τῷ Πέρσῃ οὕτω ὅκως ἂν δύνωνται· καταλυσάμενοι δέ, δήλα γὰρ ὅτι σύμμαχοι βασιλέος γινόμεθα, συστρατευσόμεθα ἐπ’ ἣν

4 ἐπὶ τῆς Pz 7 χήτει z: χήτει αR: χήτι CPSV, van H. || τε om. B 8 οὕτως α 9 γὰρ δὴ z || ὅτι εἰ S || βασιλῆος z || γενόμεθα BC || ἐπ’ ἣν: ἐπὶ ἣν ABC: ἐπὶ τὴν PRVz, Holder, van H.

These pluperfects are temporal. The ambassadors, or convoys, must include those from Megara and Plataia; but the spokesman is plainly Athenian.

3. ἐπῆλθον: cp. c. 7 supra.

ἐν νόῳ δὴ ἔχοντες, ‘intending at last’ (Blakesley).

4. καὶ αὐτοὶ as well as the army, though of its departure they knew nothing; or, as well as the representatives of the various allies assembled in Sparta, Chilois, and the rest?

ἐπὶ τὴν ἐωυτοῦ ἕκαστος: was there only one ambassador from each city? Plutarch (Arist. 10) makes Aristides the Athenian one, but gives very good evidence (‘the psephism of Aristides’) that Athens had three representatives, Kimon, Xanthippos, Myronides. The mention of Xanthippos dates the embassy before the muster of the fleet at Aigina, 8. 131.

5. αὐτοῦ τῇδε, ‘here on the spot.’

Ἰακίνθιά τε ἄγετε καὶ παίζετε.

The title of the festival is anarthrous, idiomatically; cp. Κάρνεια 7. 206, Ὀλύμπια δὲ καὶ Κάρνεια 8. 72. ἄγεω celebrare 8. 26, etc. παίζειν here can hardly be used as a scoff (cp. 4. 77), but as in Pindar Ol. 13. 86 ἐνόπλια χαλκωθεὶς ἐπαίζειν (orchestic); or Ol. 1. 16 μουσικᾶς ἐν ᾧ τῳ, οἷα παίζομεν. Cp. Aristoph. Frogs 407 παίζειν τε καὶ χορεύειν, 442 παίζοντες οἱ μετ’ οὐσίας θεοφίλους ἐορτῆς etc.; cp. 5. 4 supra.

7. ὡς quippe, 7. 22 supra.

χήτει, from χήτος (the form χῆτις, χῆτι also read), a strictly Homeric word; cp. χατέω, χατίζω.

καταλύσονται τῷ Π. οὕτω ὅκως ἂν δύνωνται: for καταλύεσθαι cp. 7. 6, 8. 140 supra. Even in such phrases as these the reference of οὕτω is not of necessity forwards, but might rather be carried backwards. The sequence here, future indic. followed by pres. subj., is observable. Cp. just below συστρατευσόμεθα . . . ἂν ἐξηγέωνται . . . μαθήσεσθε . . . ἂν ἐκβαλεῖν, the last of which is the most remarkable; the construction is perhaps attracted by the preceding instances.

9. σύμμαχοι βασιλέος γινόμεθα (N.B. the tense). This threat and announcement comes with startling rapidity after the ‘lynching of Lykidas’ in c. 4 supra, and puts both the Athenians and the Spartans in a very unfortunate and probably false position. The notion that the Peloponnesian forces were only mobilized at the eleventh hour under threat of ‘medism’ on the part of Athens is highly improbable. (i.) If Mardonios is in Attica, or even in Boiotia, then in all probability a Spartan-Peloponnesian force is already at the Isthmos—if only to defend the wall. (ii.) The threat here is entirely subversive of the heroics in 8. 144, and even in c. 7 supra. (iii.) The more probable date of the Hyakinthia, in spring, militates against this ultimatum. (iv.) The subsequent relations of Athenians and Spartans during the campaign are against it. (v.) The ultimatum is in itself an absurdity: the point at issue is really one of detail, as to the exact modus operandi; the Athenians could not doubt the substantial bona fides of the Spartans, with the king in command of the fleet at Aigina. (vi.) The notion is too comic that 5000 Hoplites and 35,000 Helots had mobilized and marched without any of the Athenian, Plataian, or Megarian envoys getting wind of it, or having a single friend in Sparta to inform them. Probably there was a good deal of friction and misgiving between Athens and Sparta during the winter and spring after Salamis and before Plataia: it cannot be said that ἀν ἐκείνοι ἐξηγέονται. ἡμεῖς δὲ τὸ ἐνθεύτεν μαθήσεσθε ὁκοῖον 10

 ἂν τι ὑμῖν ἐξ αὐτοῦ ἐκβαίνη." ταῦτα λεγόντων τῶν ἀγγέλων, οἱ ἔφοροι εἶπαν ἐπ' ὄρκου καὶ δὴ δοκέειν εἶναι ἐν Ὀρεσθείῳ στείχοντας ἐπὶ τοὺς ξείνους. ξείνους γὰρ ἐκάλεον τοὺς βαρβάρους. οἱ δὲ ὡς οὐκ εἰδότες ἐπειρώτων τὸ λεγόμενον, ἐπειρόμενοι δὲ ἐξέμαθον πᾶν τὸ ἐόν, ὥστε ἐν θώματι γενομένοι 15
 ἐπορεύοντο τὴν ταχίστην διώκοντες, σὺν δὲ σφί τῶν περιοίκων

10 ἐξηγέονται B 11 ἐκβαίνει C: ἐκβαίη B || ταῦτα δὲ B 12
 ἐφόρκον α || ὀρεστίῳ R: ὀρεστίῳ SV: ὀρεστίῳ Marc. z 13 στί-
 χοντας B || ξείνους . . . βαρβάρους, nonne tollenda? cf. comment. || ἐκάλουν
 B 14 οἱ δὲ Stein<sup>1</sup>: om. C || ἐπειρώτων α, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder: ἐπειρώτεον
 B, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ἐπηρώτων CP: ἐπηρώτεον z 15 ἐπηρόμενοι (C)z ||
 θώματι (C)S, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: θώματι V: θύματι αR, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder either party comes very well out of this story, which is told more or less at the expense of both parties, perhaps by this or that ally—Arkadian, Epidaurian, Megarian, Aiginetan, or so forth! Cp. further Appendix VIII. § 3.

10. ἐκείνοι: sc. of Πέρσαι.

11. ἐξ αὐτοῦ: sc. βασιλέος? But, as ἐκείνους has intervened, perhaps αὐτοῦ is used more vaguely 'thereout': sc. of our alliance with the Persian.

ταῦτα λεγόντων τῶν ἀγγέλων: the speech just delivered only takes account of the case of Athens; Plataia and Megara being ignored—as also the mobilization of the fleet!

12. ἐπ' ὄρκου = σὺν ὄρκῳ very unusual; and the more remarkable as ἐπιόρκειν means 'to forswear' (4. 68), though ἐπορεύονται (8. 5) not so.

καὶ δὴ δοκέειν εἶναι: the subject of εἶναι will be τοὺς σφετέρους ἀνδρας or sim. καὶ δὴ with εἶναι = ἦδη. Cp. c. 6 supra. στείχων is an eminently Ionic, or Epic, or poetic word.

ἐν Ὀρεσθείῳ. Pausanias 8. 3. 2 gives Ὀρεσθασίον as the original name of this place, Ὀρεστέων τε ἀπὸ Ὀρέστου κληθεῖσα τοῦ Ἀγαμέμνονος. The change of name may belong to the same 'movement' and date as discovered the bones of 'Orestes' in Tegea for the benefit of the Spartans, l. 67 f. Orestes was henceforward the canonized founder of 'Oresteion' (cp. Eurip. Orest. 1647, Electr. 1273). In reality Orestasion was the capital town or village of the Oresthis (cp. Thuc. 4. 134. 1), itself a portion of the Mainalia (Thuc. 5. 64. 3; cp. Pausan. 8. 27. 3) or mountainous region between the plains of Tegea and the later Megalopolis, the watershed between Alpheios and Eurotas. The remains of the city lay to the right of the route from Megalopolis to Tegea (Pausanias 8. 44. 2), and quite off the direct road from Sparta to the Isthmos (via Tegea, Mantinea, etc.). Rawlinson suggests that this roundabout route was selected in order to effect a junction with a contingent from the Lepreatis, surely an unnecessary arrangement. Perhaps all the forces from Sparta did not take one and the same route: those that started first may have been sent by the longer road. Or could it be that they took the longer way round to avoid the Argives? Cp. next c. (In days of yore the Oresthasioi had done 'yeoman's' or rather 'heroic service' in the wars between Arkadia and Sparta; cp. Pausan. 8. 39. 3 ff., 41. 1.)

13. ξείνους γὰρ ἐκάλεον τοὺς βαρβάρους. This appears to me to be a gloss, introduced from c. 55 infra: the imperfect ἐκάλεον suits. Stein observes that the Spartans applied the term not merely to βάρβαροι but to all foreigners (cp. ξηνηλασία), as the Romans hostis.

14. ἐπειρώτων τὸ λεγόμενον, 'inquired their meaning . . .', cp. 3. 22. εἰρωτᾶν, εἰρεσθαι are the Ionic forms; cp. ἐπειρώτησις c. 44 infra.

15. πᾶν τὸ ἐόν: 7. 209 supra. ὥστε . . . ἐπορεύοντο, Madvig § 166.

ἐν θώματι γενομένοι, 'after recovering from their astonishment.' (The aorist seems to have almost perfect or pl.p. force.)

16. ἐπορεύοντο τὴν ταχίστην διώκοντες: cogn. acc. Their object was to overtake the Van; they were accompanied Λακεδαιμονίων λογάδες πεντακισχίλιοι ὀπλῖται [τῶντὸ τοῦτο ἐποίουν].

- 12 Οὐ μὲν δὴ ἐς τὸν Ἴσθμὸν ἠπειγόντο· Ἀργεῖοι δὲ ἐπεῖτε τάχιστα ἐπύθοντο τοὺς μετὰ Πausανίῳ ἐξεληλυθότας ἐκ Σπάρτης, πέμπουσι κήρυκα τῶν ἡμεροδρόμων ἀνευρόντες τὸν ἄριστον ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν, πρότερον αὐτοὶ Μαρδονίῳ ὑποδεξάμενοι σχήσειν τὸν Σπαρτιήτην μὴ ἐξιέναι· ὃς ἐπεῖτε ἀπίκετο ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας ἔλεγε τάδε. “Μαρδόνιε, ἔπεμψάν με Ἀργεῖοι

17 Λακεδαιμονίων del. van H., Holder || ὀπλῖται om. B, Holder, van H. || τῶντὸ τοῦτο ἐποίουν secl. Stein, Holder, van H. 12. 4 αὐτῷ B 5 ἐπεῖτε: ἐπεὶ B: om. C

by 5000 picked hoplites of the Lakedaemonian Perioikoi, who tried to keep up with them and overtake the Van.

17. τῶντὸ τοῦτο ἐποίουν — rather a bathos! Cp. App. Crit.

It is not asserted that the Rear overtook the Van at Orestheion: probably not, for they would go the shorter and more direct route (τὴν ταχίστην supra).

12. 1. Ἀργεῖοι δέ. The medism of the Argives was a serious matter for Sparta, and helps to account for the apparent weakness of her policy and action in this campaign. It cannot, however, have been very ardent, or the Argives would have made more of their opportunity, when the Spartans actually did leave the Peloponnesos; cp. 8. 73 supra. It was even a service in disguise to Greece, sealing the Spartans more surely to the good cause!

ἐπεῖτε τάχιστα ἐπύθοντο: how soon was that? Had they Proxenoí, or friends in Sparta, to inform them, or was it only when the Spartan army was marching past their own borders? ἐξεληλυθότας ἐκ Σπάρτης might perhaps mean ‘had crossed the border’; cp. c. 17 infra.

2. τοὺς μετὰ Π., ‘Pausanias and his men.’

3. κήρυκα (not ἀγγελον, cp. 7. 1). ἡμεροδρόμων: cp. 6. 105. The story would be more convincing if the name of this crack runner had been preserved; cp. 6. 105.

4. ἐς τὴν Ἀττικὴν . . ἐς τὰς Ἀθήνας: while the Athenian, Plataian, and Megarean envoys have been kicking their heels in Sparta, Mardonios has ex hypothesi reoccupied Athens, c. 3 supra.

πρότερον αὐτοὶ Μαρδονίῳ ὑποδεξάμενοι: according to this story the Argives were pledged to Mardonios to keep the Spartans at bay. If true, this pledge implies previous negotiations between the Persian and the Argives, of which nothing further has transpired. It was a very pretty plan, or a very pretty commentary on a want of plan. Had the Argives really been co-operating with the Persian to that extent they might have made it impossible for Sparta to send 10,000 Hoplites and 40,000 Helots beyond the Isthmos. Argos observed neutrality, perhaps a neutrality benevolent towards the ‘barbarian’; but Sparta must have been well assured that a real neutrality would be observed before she denuded Lakonia of fighting men. A forgotten chapter in Greek diplomacy might have recorded the pourparlers between Athens, Argos and Sparta during the winter, or spring, which convinced the Greeks that they had no active hostility to expect from Argos: Salamis made a deeper impression upon Argos than upon Thessaly and Boiotia, powers which took their cue from the fiasco at Thermopylai. The embassy, whose absurd and pitiful record has just been given above, may have been better employed in squaring Argos than in denouncing Sparta.

αὐτοὶ may best be taken with σχήσειν.

6. ἔλεγε τάδε. How this ἡμεροδρόμος got past the Isthmos wall, which was no doubt guarded from sea to sea. Hdt. does not say: the problem does not exist for him. The message is desperate: Mardonios would have had something to say in reply, before he allowed the messenger to depart, on Argive impotence and breach of faith; except, indeed, φράσσοντά τοι ὅτι ἐκ Λακεδαίμονος ἐξελήλυθε ἡ νεότης, καὶ ὥς οὐ δυνατοὶ αὐτὴν ἔχειν εἰσὶ Ἀργεῖοι μὴ οὐκ ἐξίεναι. πρὸς ταῦτα τύγχανε εὖ βουλευόμενος." ὁ μὲν δὲ εἰπας ταῦτα 13 ἀπαλλάσσετο ὀπίσω, Μαρδόνιος δὲ οὐδαμῶς ἔτι πρόθυμος ἦν μένειν ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ, ὥς ἤκουσε ταῦτα. πρὶν μὲν νυν ἡ πυθέσθαι ἀνεκώχευε, θέλων εἰδέναι τὸ παρ' Ἀθηναίων, ὅκοίον τι ποιήσουσι, καὶ οὔτε ἐπήμεινε οὔτε ἐσίνετο γῆν τὴν Ἀττικὴν, 5 ἐλπίζων διὰ παντὸς τοῦ χρόνου ὁμολογήσειν σφέας· ἐπεὶ δὲ οὐκ ἔπειθε, πυθόμενος πάντα λόγον, πρὶν ἢ τοὺς μετὰ

7 σοι αC (τε S) || ἐλήλυθεν C 8 αὐτοὶ B || ἴσχειν B, Holder, van H.: σχεῖν? Stein || Ἀργεῖοι secl. van H. 13. 3 ἤκουε C || μὲν γὰρ? van H. || ἡ om. BPz: ἡ α 4 ἀνεκώχευε van H. || παρὰ α 5 ἐπήμεινε <αὐτοῖς> van H. || ἐσίνετο B 6 τοῦ χρόνου del. Cobet, van H. 7 τὸν πάντα BP, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H. || πρὶν ABR: πρηνὶ S that Mardonios' chief wish must have been to draw the Peloponnesians into Boiotia, which is not the point of view of the anecdote.

7. ὅτι ἐκ Λακεδαίμονος ἐξελήλυθε ἡ νεότης, 'the Lakedaimonian militia has crossed the border'—a frequent formula, perhaps, in Peloponnese! νεότης, a collective term, here apparently includes all men liable for service abroad; cp. Thuc. 2. 8. 1 etc. and 7. 13 supra.

8. ὥς οὐ δυνατοὶ αὐτὴν ἔχειν . . μὴ οὐκ ἐξίεναι: a genuine example of the double negative μὴ οὐ: cp. Index. ἔχειν (the strong) = 'hold,' 'with - hold,' 'prevent' (cp. Index), itself a negation! just before, σχήσειν . . μὴ ἐξίεναι, where, however, the action is contingent and future, while here it is present, or, indeed, if the Argive would only confess it honestly, past: a consideration which may help to account for the positive οὐκ.

9. τύγχανε εὖ βουλευόμενος, 'hit upon a good plan (by yourself!)': if true, could any message be more fatuous, under the circumstances! With the expression cp. 8. 101 ὁκότερα ποίειν ἐπιτύχω εὖ βουλευσάμενος. The imperative here is a rude or peremptory optative.

13. 2. Μαρδόνιος δὲ had no mind to stay in Attica once he was assured that the Peloponnesians would cross the Isthmos; that assurance can hardly have been conveyed to him by the Argives, unless, indeed, the Spartans had taken them into the secret; he convinced himself, perhaps, by becoming aware of movements from the Isthmos (cp. c. 14 infra), perhaps by pourparlers

with the Athenians, perhaps by information obtained through Greeks in his camp, that a large force was under arms; and he apparently retired in hopes that the Greeks would follow him into Boiotia, where the ground was more favourable to cavalry, his base nearer, and an attack on the Greeks, as they emerged from the passes into the plain, feasible. He may, not to say must, have made sure of their debouching by the pass of Dryoskephalai.

3. πρὶν . . ἡ πυθέσθαι ἀνεκώχευε: πρὶν ἢ with infin. just below again, as in c. 68 infra; without ἢ 8. 144 supra, c. 101 infra. ἀνεκώχευεν is used trans. 7. 36 supra (of ropes), 6. 116 (of ships); here apparently intransitively: 'stayed, held his hand,' or possibly 'refrained from acts of hostility'='observed an armistice'; cp. Thuc. 1. 40. 4 Κορινθίοις μὲν γε ἐνσπονδοὶ ἐσσι, Κερκυραῖοι δὲ οὐδὲ δι' ἀνοκωχῆς πάποτ' ἐγένεσθε, 5. 32. 7 Κορινθίοις δὲ ἀνοκωχῇ ἀσπονδοὶ ἦν πρὸς Ἀθηναίους, 5. 25. 3 μετ' ἀνοκωχῆς οὐ βεβαίον ἐβλαπτον ἀλλήλους τὰ μάλιστα.

4. εἰδέναι . . ὅκοίον τι ποιήσουσι: the normal prose construction; cp. c. 11 supra.

τὸ παρ' Ἀθηναίων: ellipse; cp. c. 7 supra.

5. οὔτε ἐπήμεινε οὔτε ἐσίνετο: the former word is poetical, the latter prosaic.

7. πάντα λόγον: cp. c. 9 supra. πρὶν ἢ . . ἰσβαλεῖν looks like an approximately precise date. Hdt. seems to assume that the wall was undefended, the Isthmos ungarrisoned—that is incredible. If Mardonios retired

Παυσανίῳ ἐς τὸν Ἴσθμὸν ἐσβαλεῖν, ὑπεξεχώρει ἐμπρήσας τε τὰς Ἀθήνας, καὶ εἴ κού τι ὀρθὸν ἦν τῶν τειχέων ἢ τῶν 10 οἰκημάτων ἢ τῶν ἱρῶν, πάντα καταβαλὼν καὶ συγχώσας.
 ἐξήλανε δὲ τῶνδε εἵνεκεν, ὅτι οὔτε ἱππασίμη ἢ χώρα ἦν ἢ
 Ἀττική, εἴ τε νικῶτο συμβαλὼν, ἀπάλλαξις οὐκ ἦν ὅτι μὴ

8 ἐσβαλεῖν. B, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἐμβαλεῖν || τε: δὲ Apr. C
 11 δὲ om. αCz || εἵνεκα z || ἢ post ἦν om. C before Pausanias reached the Isthmos, it was perhaps inferred that he retired because he had heard that Pausanias was on the march, and so, again, that the Argives must have told him.

8. ὑπεξεχώρει: sc. αὐτοῖς: he went out of Attica to avoid them; cp. Plato, Phaid. 103 D προσιόντος τοῦ θερμοῦ ἢ ὑπεκχωρήσειν αὐτῷ ἢ ἀπολεῖσθαι (sc. τὴν χιόνα).

ἐμπρήσας τε . . . καὶ . . . πάντα κτλ., 'but not until he had fired Athens, and thrown down and demolished (συγχώσας, cp. 7. 225) every morsel whether of the (city) walls, the (private) houses, or the (holy) temples, which was still standing upright'—i.e. plainly after the previous demolition by Xerxes, 8. 50–53 supra; for ὀρθόν cp. Thuc. 5. 42. 2. Hdt. says nothing of any rebuilding in the meanwhile. τῶν τειχέων might be taken to support the view that Athens was a walled town in 480 B.C. (cp. E. Gardner, Ancient Athens (1902) pp. 46 ff., who does not, however, cite this instance); but of course it only proves at most that Hdt. thought so; nor does it even prove that, for 'the walls' here might be those of the Akropolis; or even if the city-walls, would not prove that the circuit was complete in 480 B.C. or that a siege of Athens was a military possibility; cp. further Appendix VI. § 1.

Rawlinson well remarks that this account of the destruction of Athens by Mardonios is exaggerated; Thuc. 1. 89. 3 leaves some of the houses (οἰκίαι) standing, and even portions of the city-wall (τοῦ περιβόλου βραχέα). Pausanias (1. 18. 1, 20. 2) mentions temples older than the Persian war. Col. Leake (Athens and the Demé, i. 12) points out the great difficulties of such total destruction as Hdt. asserts. More recent excavations have shown that even on the Akropolis a good deal was left standing when the Persians departed. Mardonios had neither time nor zeal for such wholesale annihilation; it was only a 'Restoration' that could make away with the past so utterly! Cp. 8. 50–53 supra.

11. τῶνδε εἵνεκεν. Hdt. surpasses himself, and gives the military reasons for the evacuation of Attica with the precision of a professor of the Sach-Kritik! The reasons are three in number, and admit of development.

(i.) The Persian's strength lay in his cavalry; Boiotia was better adapted than Attica to cavalry operations (Hdt. says nothing of a great superiority in infantry).

(ii.) Attica was difficult to evacuate in case of defeat. The point is not fully or very clearly put; but at any rate Mardonios is not counting on success as a foregone conclusion.

(iii.) He wished to be nearer his base in Thebes. The reason is not quite clearly put; speaking generally it is better to fight in your enemy's than in your friend's territory. Mardonios, however, was thinking of his commissariat, and also perhaps of the loyalty, or potential disloyalty, of Greece in his rear; in case of defeat a position north of Kithairon was better from this point of view. Artabazos might never have effected his masterly retreat (c. 89 infra) if the great battle had been fought on the Thriasian or even on the Athenian plain. The argument as a whole was purely strategic, and Hdt. does well not to ascribe to Mardonios the policy of limiting the Persian frontier of the Hellenic satrapy in posse to the Kithairon-Parnes line (pace G. B. Grundy, Great Persian War, p. 450).

ἦν: the tense carries back to the historic situation.

12. εἴ τε νικῶτο . . . οὐκ ἦν, 'should he be defeated . . . there was no . . .' The construction is irregular but clear, and even more forcible than stricter grammar would have been.

ἀπάλλαξις is very rare; Hdt. uses

κατὰ στεινόν, ὥστε ὀλίγους σφέας ἀνθρώπους ἴσχειν. ἐβουλευέτο ὦν ἐπαναχωρήσας ἐς τὰς Θήβας συμβαλεῖν πρὸς πόλιν τε φιλήν καὶ <ἐν> χώρῳ ἱππασίμῳ.

15

Μαρδόνιος μὲν δὴ ὑπεξεχώρεε, ἤδη δὲ ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ἔοντι 14
αὐτῷ ἦλθε ἀγγελίῃ πρόδρομον ἄλλην στρατιὴν ἡκεῖν ἐς
Μέγαρα, Λακεδαιμονίων χιλίους· πυθόμενος δὲ ταῦτα ἐβουλευέτο [θέλων] εἰ κὼς τούτους πρῶτον ἔλοι. ὑποστρέψας δὲ τὴν

13 καὶ ὀλίγους Bz, Holder, van H. 15 ἐν Schweighauser, van H.,
Stein<sup>3</sup> || χώρῳ Stein<sup>(1)</sup>, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: χώρῳ 14. 1 ὑπεχώρεεν B
|| τῇ abesse malit van H. 2 πρόδρομον Schweighauser: πρόδρομος
4 θέλων om. cod. unus et alter, del. Reiske, Schaefer, Cobet, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> ||
δὲ Stein<sup>3</sup>, Holder: δὲ ἀπαλλαγὴ in 7. 207, 8. 39, 118 supra,

'(means of) getting away.'

ὅτι μὴ κατὰ στενόν, except by a strait, a narrow pass. There are really three passes from Attica into Boiotia:
(1) Dekeleia-Oropos, (2) Phyle-Panakton,
(3) Eleusis-Eleutherai-Erythrai. Taking in the whole Boiotian frontier from sea to sea, two further passes may be added: (4) the direct road or route from Megara to Plataia, and (5) the route round the end of Kithairon via Aigosthena-Kreusis. Cp. Grundy, G.P.W. pp.
445 ff., and 8. 113. 2 supra. The route by Eleutherai has a fork, the left prong of which goes to Plataia, so that from the Boiotian side the number of apparent passes would be raised to six. This fact is of importance on the battle-field of Plataia; but, if defeated in the Thriasian plain, the invaders could not use (3) at all, and if defeated east of Aigaleos could only use (1). In any case (2) was very difficult; cp. Xenoph. Mem. 3. 5. 25
ὅτι πρόκειται τῆς χώρας ἡμῶν ὁρη μεγάλη, καθήμεντα ἐπὶ τὴν Βοιωτίαν, δι' ὧν εἰς τὴν
χώραν εἰσοδοὶ στεναὶ τε καὶ προσάνταις εἰσὶ, καὶ ὅτι μέση διδύσται ὁρεσιν ἐρυμνοῖς.

13. ἀνθρώπους, not even ἀνδρας.

15. ἱππασίμῳ refers merely to the space for evolutions (not to the grass for fodder); cp. 2. 108.

14. 2. ἦλθε ἀγγελίῃ: who brought this intelligence? Doubtless his own scouts and cavalry. Probably the arrival of this information, or perhaps an ineffectual attempt to capture Megara—no doubt a well-walled city—encouraged Mardonios to hope that the Greeks would follow him into Boiotia; the next news, that they were in full force at the Isthmos, convinced him.

πρόδρομον ἄλλην στρατιὴν ἡκεῖν ἐς Μέγαρα Λακεδαιμονίων χιλίους. This may not have been the whole force;

there had been but 300 'Spartans' at Thermopylai; perhaps this was really the avant-garde of the whole army, and Mardonios would feel that unless he was prepared to do battle in Attica,
the time had come to retire. πρόδρομον
and ἄλλην are not quite consistent;
ἄλλην is relative to the previous message of the Argives; πρόδρομον is a bit of information which might or might not have been reported to Mardonios, but at any rate shows that the force at Megara was not a tertium quid, but a portion of the levée en masse. See, however, App. Crit. Mardonios is next credited with a wish, a plan, and an attempt to catch or capture this force (Θοι, Homeric; cp. Il. 2. 37 Πριάμῳ πόλιν, 13. 42 νῆας Ἀχαιῶν, 21. 102 πολλοὺς ζωοῖς). To do so he returns apparently on his tracks (ὑποστρέψας)
and leads his whole force against Megara. Such conduct is inconsistent with his deliberate intention to withdraw into Boiotia, for the good and sufficient reasons set forth in the previous chapter. Possibly Mardonios fought a 'rear-guard action,' or sought to retard the advance of the Peloponnesians, while he evacuated Attica. He could not view with equanimity the penetration of Boiotia by the Peloponnesian army (via Dryoskephalai) before he had evacuated Attica, even though Thebes was probably held, and held strongly, by a Persian (or Makedonian) garrison; nor did he desire to fight the great battle in Attica at all. His cavalry, or a few squadrons of cavalry, employed in harrying the Megarid, doubtless retired either by Dryoskephalai or even

5 στρατιὴν ἤγε ἐπὶ τὰ Μέγαρα· ἡ δὲ ἵππος προελθοῦσα κατιππύσατο χώραν τὴν Μεγαρίδα. ἐς ταύτην δὴ ἐκαστάτω τῆς Εὐρώπης τὸ πρὸς ἡλίου δύνοντος ἡ Περσικὴ αὕτη στρατιή 15 ἀπύκετο. μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα Μαρδονίῳ ἦλθε ἀγγελίη ὡς ἀλέες εἶσαν οἱ Ἕλληνες ἐν τῷ Ἰσθμῷ. οὕτω δὲ ὀπίσω ἐπορεύετο διὰ Δεκελῆς· οἱ γὰρ βοιωτάρχαι μετεπέμφαντο τοὺς προσ-

5 προελθοῦσα B: προσελθοῦσα 6 δὲ B || ἐκαστάτῳ αP 7
στρατιὴ αὕτη α 15. 1 ταῦτα del. van H. || ἦκε Pz 3 δεκελῆς
RS: δεκελείης || βοιώτάρχαι? van H.

by Aigosthena into Boiotia, while the main column marched by the eastern pass or passes; see next chapter.

5. ἐπὶ τὰ Μέγαρα: apparently Megara, unlike Athens, was fully fortified, and strongly held. No previous attack upon it has been mentioned; and the Megarid had escaped a Persian visitation in the previous year, improbable as such immunity may in itself appear, cp. 8. 70. The loss of Megara was treated by Themistokles, 8. 60, as the certain consequence of the evacuation of Salamis: per contra, the victory at Salamis may have saved the city. Even now only the χώρα suffers. That would practically be the plain lying between the Kerata, Geraneia, and the two seas. The city itself possessed two citadels (Pausan. 1. 39. 5, 42. 1): hence perhaps the plural form of the name.

6. ἐς ταύτην δὴ . . ἀπύκετο. "Here was the furthest point in Europe towards the setting sun to which this Persian army ever penetrated," Rawlinson. "This was the furthest point [not 'the westernmost'] of Europe, looking westward, which was reached" (by this army of Persians), Blakesley. "This was the furthest land in Europe towards the sun-setting to which this Persian army came," Macaulay. Blakesley is no doubt right in saying that the emphasis is not on the exact orientation, but on the distance; nevertheless the orientation is given, and involves Hdt., or his cartographer, unwittingly in error. Hdt. evidently conceives of Central Greece as running approximately north and south (cf. his orientation of Thermopylai 7. 176). It did not occur to him, when he wrote this passage, that not merely was Delphi (visited ex hypothesi by the Persians, 8. 35) far to the west of the Megarid, but that the whole route of the Persian forces in Central Greece, Mardonios' march from Thessaly in this very spring, had lain west of the point here marked as the furthest point of Europe in the west reached by the Persian arms. The orientation, then, breaks down equally whether Hdt. meant by the words αὕτη στρατιή the army (cp. 6. 12 where it is used absolutely for πεῖδος στρατός) of Xerxes or the army of Mardonios; and this passage evidently belongs to a composition to be dated before Hdt.'s own visit to Europe, to Delphi, Thebes and Central Greece, and was left standing, perhaps by oversight, after he must have known better (perhaps like the Thermopylai orientation). Cp. Introduction, § 9. Hdt. certainly did not mean that another Persian army had penetrated further, i.e. further westwards, into Europe; but he may have had in his mind the possibilities that other Persian armies had penetrated further into Europe, to wit, northward, or north-eastwards (having regard to his conception of the continent); and he probably has no special intention of distinguishing here the army of Mardonios from the army of Xerxes.

15. 1. ἦλθε ἀγγελίη: counting the Argive in c. 12, this is the third express message that reaches Mardonios; his own intelligence department, or the medizing Greeks, will have procured it. This message is not quite correct: the Athenians only joined the 'Hellenic' army at Eleusis c. 19 infra; but it marks probably the union of the rest of the Peloponnesians with the Spartans (ib.) or vice versa.

3. διὰ Δεκελῆς. Dekeleia (δημος τῆς Ἰπποθωννίδος φυλῆς Steph. B. sub v.) is placed by Thuc. 7. 19. 2 at 120 stades from Athens, and a very little more from Boiotia: its position is further defined by this passage, as on the eastern

χώρους τῶν Ἀσωπίων, οὗτοι δὲ αὐτῷ τὴν ὁδὸν ἡγέοντο ἐς Σφενδαλέας, ἐνθεύτην δὲ ἐς Τάναγραν· ἐν Τανάγρῃ δὲ νύκτα 5 ἐναυλισάμενος, καὶ τραπόμενος τῇ ὑστεραίῃ ἐς Σκῶλον, ἐν γῇ

5 ἐς τανάγρην RSV, Gaisford, Palm || ἐν ταναγόρῃ C
Paris. 1635, z

6 κῶλον

road from Athens into Boiotia, and its exact position (modern Tatōi) is proved by Inscript. and by remains in situ. A chapter in its legendary history is given below, c. 73.

βοιωτάρχαι: this is the earliest express mention of the 'Boiotarchs,' a body which reappears in Thucydides (4. 91. 1, cp. 2. 2. 1), Xenophon (Hell. 3. 4. 4 βοιωτάρχαι, sic), and the later writers. They were evidently important, probably superior officers of the Boiotian League, and their existence is synchronous therewith: the number of the Board is doubtful (Eleven in Thuc. l.c., Seven in Diodor. 15. 52, =371 B.C. Leuktra, etc.) and may have varied at different times; they were elected annually (entering on office in winter). Cp. G. Gilbert, Gr. Staatsalt. ii. (1885) 54 f., to which later efforts (e.g. Pauly-Wissowa sub v.) have added little. These officers, or some of them, were now in attendance on Mardonios, as they 'sent for' men from the Asopos valley to act as guides (Athenians were either not to be found, or not to be trusted: the Athenian émigrés were apparently not with Mardonios). Guides might have been needful on the Phyle-Panaktos route: were they needed for the routes by Dekeleia and by Eleutheraí? And how had Mardonios and his men found their way into Attica? Or had they learnt nothing of the routes in the previous year?

4. Ἀσώπιοι: an Hapaxlegomenon? = Παρασώπιοι, Strabo 409, who also uses the term Παρασωπία for the land either side the upper and middle Asopos (cp. infra), but does not appear to carry the term so far down as Tanagra.

5. Σφενδαλέας: Steph. B. sub v. Σφενδάλη, δῆμος Ἰπποθωντίδος φυλῆς. ὁ δημότης, Σφενδαλέης. Sphendale does not play much part in Attic history, and its exact position has been disputed. Leake (Athens and the Demí, ii. 123) placed it "near" Hagios Merkurios, but "at" Malakasa, on the road from Aphidna to Tanagra, apparently in agreement with Finlay, cp. op. c. p. 124 n. Pauly,

R.E. vi. (1852) i. 1375, appears to be in error on this point. Bursian i. (1862) 336, "near Kakosialesti" (which Leake l.c. describes as "the only site that could compete with Malakasa as the site of Sphendale") "at the foot of an isolated and extensive hill, the Hyakinthos (now Kotroni), on which the Ῥακινθίδες παρθένοι (cp. Suidas s.v. Παρθένοι) were worshipped, Attic maidens who had voluntarily taken their own lives to secure victory for Athens against Boiotia." (This position Leake regards as beyond the Attic frontier.)

Τάναγραν: the position of Tanagra, on the left bank of the Asopos, near the junction of the Thermodon (c. 43 infra) is quite certain; Leake, N.G. ii. 463, Bursian i. 222. Some of the natives believed the old name of the city to be Graia, cp. Hom. Il. 2. 498, until the still older name was 'restored' to it; cp. Strabo 404, Pausan. 9. 20. 2, Steph. B. sub v., who also gives Ποιμανδρία as a former name. The population was 'Gephyraian,' cp. 5. 57, and was never perhaps wholly 'Boiotized': are not the charming terra-cottas, that have popularized the city's name in our day, rather Ionic than 'Boiotian'? After the humiliation of Thebes Tanagra apparently "aspired for a time to the leadership of the Boiotian confederacy," B. Head, Hist. Num. 295; cp. Coinage of Boiotia, p. 20. That ambition was foiled by the restoration of Thebes after the great battle in 457 B.C., Thuc. 1. 108. 1-3; but Tanagra survived most of the members of the Boiotian League, cp. Strabo 410.

νύκτα ἐναυλισάμενος: 1. 181.

6. τραπόμενος τῇ ὑστεραίῃ ἐς Σκῶλον: cp. Strabo 408 ἐστὶ κώμη τῆς Παρασωπίας ὑπὸ τῷ Κιθαिरῶνι, δυσολκῆτος τόπος καὶ τραχύς, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ ἡ παροιμία εἰς Σκῶλον μῆτ' αὐτὸς ἵναι (ἴμεν) μῆτ' ἄλλω ἐπεσθαι. Its ruins were seen (?) by Pausanias (9. 4. 4) "about 40 stades" below the bridge across the Asopos. The town is named in the Catalogue (Il. 2. 47, 496), and figures in the Spartano-Theban wars of the fourth century; Xen. Hell. 5. 4. 49, Agés. 2. 22.

τῇ Θηβαίων ἡν. ἐνθαῦτα δὲ τῶν Θηβαίων καὶ περ μηδιζόντων ἔκειρε τοὺς χώρους, οὗτι κατὰ ἔχθος αὐτῶν ἀλλ' ὑπ' ἀναγ-καίης μεγάλης ἐχόμενος ἔρυμά τε τῷ στρατοπέδῳ ποιήσασθαι, 10 καὶ ἡν συμβαλόντι οἱ μὴ ἐκβαίνειν ὁκοῖόν τι ἐθέλοι, κρησ-φύγετον τοῦτο ἐποιέετο. παρῆκε δὲ αὐτοῦ τὸ στρατόπεδον

7 θηβαίῳ ἦν B 8 οὔτε Bekker || αὐτέων z 9 ἐχόμενος
βουλόμενος B<sup>PM</sup>, Holder: βουλόμενος Cobet, van H. || στρατῶι B<sup>2</sup>CP
10 οἱ: οὐ C || θέλει B: ἐθέλει z 11 τοῦτο ἐποιέετο del. Cobet, van H.

Strabo 409 reckons all the Παρασώπιοι (to wit, the men of Σκῶλος, Ἐπεινός, Ἐρυθραί, Ὑσιαί) as subject to Thebes; in that sense, when Mardonios turned (if he did turn) up the river, and recrossed it to Skolos, he would there be ἐν γῇ τῇ Θηβαίων. Hdt., however, does not keep him long at Skolos, but passes him on to the camp or Laager described below, which was not at Skolos, nor even on the same side of the river as Skolos. Possibly there is some error or confusion in the account of the retirement of Mardonios from Attica; or rather, is it possible there should not be? Hdt. apparently assumes that Mardonios takes all his forces into Attica—not a probable assumption—and that Mardonios takes them all in, and all out, by one route, and one route only—a still less probable assumption (cp. 8. 113). Skolos evidently lies at the Boiotian end of the middle or direct route from Athens to Thebes. If Mardonios found himself at Skolos it was probably because he himself came out of Attica by this route. More than one, perhaps all three routes out of Attica, may have been used—not to say the route by Aigosthena from Megara, c. 14 supra. That the Ἀσοπιοί acted as guides favours this suggestion. If Mardonios himself came by the easier route from Dekeleia to Tanagra, he probably went on to Thebes, or else to the Laager, by the left bank. The only diarial hint for the march is the night spent in Tanagra, and the next day. Probably nights were also spent at Dekeleia (12 miles from Athens), at Sphendale (7–8 miles from Dekeleia), as well as at Tanagra (11–12 miles from Sphendale). (Skolos would be about 9 miles up the Asopos.)

7. τῶν Θηβαίων. . . ἔκειρε τοὺς χώρους: probably not the Thebais proper, but the 'places' on the Asopos, the Parasopia, in ditione Thebanorum; cp. supra. "Agros Thebanorum vastavit," Schweig-haeuser; so too Stein, cp. 3. 58. κείρειν, 7. 131, 8. 32, 65 supra.

8. ὑπ' ἀναγκαίης μεγάλης ἐχόμενος, 'with absolutely no free will in the matter.' The construction at this point is a little faulty. Stein apparently takes ποιήσασθαι as dependent on ἔπ' ἀναγ. ἐχόμενος = ἀναγκαζόμενος. Some inf. codd. (followed by some editors; cp. App. Crit.) insert βουλόμενος—a very sorry device. I should be inclined to take the infinitive as pendent, or telic, or exegetical (cp. Index, for parallels); in any case the transition to ἐποιέετο is harsh, and perhaps the omission of ποιήσασθαι would be the simplest remedy. ἐποιέετο is repeated below in a different construction and sense; here middle ('was having made,' or perhaps 'looked upon,' 'considered'): there passive ('was being constructed').

9. ἔρυμα: cp. 7. 223 supra.

10. ἡν . . . μὴ ἐκβαίνειν ὁκοῖόν τι ἰθὺλοι τοῦτο ἐποιέετο: a notable sequence for a conditional sentence. The apprehension of a disaster has already received expression c. 13 supra.

κρησφύγετον: 5. 124. The actual construction of this Laager is not so precisely described as that of the ἔρκος and τείχος at Mykale, cc. 97, 102 infra.

11. τὸ στρατόπεδον: plainly the Laager, which was much more extensive than the τείχος, ἔρυμα, κρησφύγετον. 'This Laager reached (παρῆκε) from Erythrai (where it began) along past Hysiai, and extended (κατέτανε, cp. 8. 31) into the territory of Plataiai, stretching (or 'posted' if τεταγμένον be retained) along the Asopos river. The fortified part of it was of less extensive construction, being about ten stades to each front.'

This passage makes it clear that the Laager was much larger than the fortified Practorium, and that the fortified portion had a measurement of upwards of a square mile; but the exact size

ἀρξάμενον ἀπὸ Ἐρυθρέων παρὰ Ῥσιᾶς, κατέτεινε δὲ ἐς τὴν Πλαταιίδα γῆν, παρὰ τὸν Ἀσωπὸν ποταμὸν τεταμένον. οὐ

12 Ερυθραίων  $\approx$  13 περὶ τὸν  $\approx$  || τεταμένον Reiske, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: τεταγμένον

and appearance of the camp are not described, and a large number of other problems are left unresolved.

(1) Was the τεῖχος square? Hdt. may perhaps mean this, for otherwise he should have given the measurements of the other sides, or flanks; and prima facie each side of a fort is a μέτωπον. Elsewhere in similar cases he is more particular to specify quadrature, e.g. of Babylon, I. 178 εἶσα μέτωπον ἑκαστον εἰκοσι καὶ ἑκατὸν σταδίων εὐρύτητος τετραγώνου: 2. 124 of a pyramid, τῆς ἐστὶ πανταχῇ μέτωπον ἑκαστον ὀκτὼ πλέθρα εὐρύτητος τετραγώνου.

(2) Was the Laager on one side, or on both sides the Asopos; and in what part of the Laager was the Fort? The Fort was on the left bank of the Asopos, for the Persians cross the river to reach the Greeks c. 59 infra; and the wooden Fort is ἐν μολῇ τῇ Θηβαῖδι, c. 65 infra u.v.; but cp. I. 6 supra. Stein<sup>3</sup> places the Fort south of Asopos in the neighbourhood of Skolos, but Skolos has nothing to say to the camp as described by Hdt. nor to the battle; the mention of Skolos above is to be otherwise accounted for. Probably the fortified camp was close to the river, and to the bridge across the Asopos, the tête du pont on the south side being no doubt strongly fortified and held; the rest of the Persian lines would lie behind, and away from the river, and no part of the Laager proper would be on the right bank of the river. The main road to Thebes will have passed through the camp, possibly dividing it in half; the 10 stades may be the measurement of the river front, which was all palisaded; the palisading probably went all round the 'Fort,' and the Fort may have been square.

(3) It is quite certain that no part of Mardonios' Laager or Fort actually touched the towns of Erythrai and Hysiai, for these places are presently in possession of the Greeks cc. 19, 25 infra. The description here given of the extent of the Persian camp must be understood either (a) to be based upon a report of the appearance of the Persian camp as seen from the Greek lines above, which enclosed Erythrai, and afterwards Hysiai; or (b) to mean that the Laager (though north of Asopos) occupied ground belonging to the two townships named, and extended further into Plataian territory north of Asopos. But for two reasons the former explanation is to be preferred: (1) the contrast here between the names of the towns and the specification of Πλαταις γῆ; (2) the doubt whether the territory of Erythrai and Hysiai did extend to the further bank of the stream, which was probably all Theban. The first reason may be further enforced by the supposition that the name of Plataiai is avoided because Plataiai was in ruins; the second, by the observation that the Thebans had only been driven across the Asopos by the Athenians in or about 509 B.C., the river being then made the frontier between the Thebais on the one side and the Plataeis and Hysiais on the other; 6. 108 supra.

12. ἀπὸ Ἐρυθρέων παρὰ Ῥσιᾶς: there is little room for doubt that Leake, N.G. II. 329, located these towns much too far east, and that they occupied sites in close proximity to the main roads from Eleusis-El-eutheraî to Thebes and to Plataia; Erythrai probably commanded the main road to Thebes, while Hysiai, about a mile further west, commanded the branch to Plataia; cp. cc. 22, 25 infra, and G. B. Grundy, G.P.W. pp. 458 ff.

13. τὸν Ἀσωπὸν ποταμὸν: to be distinguished from the Malian stream of the same name (7. 199, etc.), as also from a river by Sikyon (Ἀσωπὸς δὲ παρὰ τῶν Σικυνίων καὶ ποιεῖ τὴν Ἀσωπίαν χώραν, μέρος οὖσαν τῆς Σικωνίας, Strabo 382). There was also an Asopos in Paros, ibid. The Boiotian Asopos rises near Leuktra and flows eastwards into the sea near Oropos (δὲ παρὰ Θήβας ῥέων καὶ Πλαταιᾶς καὶ Τάναγραν, Strabo, ib.) along the skirts of Kithairon (Strabo 409), a relatively large and fertilizing stream (Ἀσωπὸν δ' ἱκόντο βαθύσχοινον λεχέπολην II. 4. 383) liable to sudden floods in spring (δὲ γὰρ Ἀσωπὸς ποταμὸς ἐρρήνι μέγας καὶ οὐ ραδίως διαβατός ἦν Thuc. 2. 5. 2), for ever a φίλον πιάσμα Βοιωτῶν χθονί (Aeschyl. Pers. 806).

μέντοι τό γε τεῖχος τοσοῦτο ἐποιέετο, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐπὶ δέκα
15 σταδίου μάλιστά κη μέτωπον ἕκαστον.

16 Ἐχόντων δὲ τὸν πόνον τοῦτον τῶν βαρβάρων, Ἀτταγίνος
ὁ Φρύωνος ἀνὴρ Θηβαῖος παρασκευασάμενος μεγάλως ἐκάλεε ἐπὶ ξείνια αὐτὸν τε Μαρδόνιον καὶ πεντήκοντα Περσέων τοὺς λογιμωτάτους, κληθέντες δὲ οὗτοι εἶποντο· ἦν δὲ τὸ δείπνον
5 ποιεῦμενον ἐν Θήβῃσι. τάδε δὲ ἤδη τὰ ἐπίλοιπα ἡκουον
Θερσάνδρου ἀνδρὸς μὲν Ὀρχομενίου, λογίμου δὲ ἐς τὰ πρῶτα

14 τοσοῦτον CPz: οὕτω R 16. 2 μεγαλωστὶ malit van H.
4 εἶποντο z 5 τὰ δὲ δὴ R: τὰ δὲ ἤδη SVz 6, 7 Ἐρχομενίου et Ἐρχομένῃ suadent tituli van H.

16. 1. ἐχόντων δὲ τὸν πόνον τ.: i.e. while engaged on the labour of making the fortified camp.

Ἀτταγίνος ὁ Φρύωνος: of the father, Phrynon, nothing is recorded; the name was not very uncommon: at Athens it appears in the war with Mytilene for Sigeion in the days of Pittakos, cp. Plutarch, de Hdti. Malig. 15 = Mor. 858, cp. 5. 95 supra. Attaginos reappears in c. 86 infra, without patronymic, as one of the leading 'dynasts' of Thebes, whose extradition was demanded by the Hellenes after their victory. This observation supports the view that the present passage belongs to the original draft of the work; see lower down. According to Plutarch (op. c. 31) he was a hospes of Demaratos, and had by him been introduced to the king during the previous year: Δημάρατος ὁ Σπαρτιάτης διὰ ξένιαν εὐνοῦς ὦν Ἀτταγίνῳ τῷ προστώτῳ τῆς ὀλιγαρχίας, διεπράξατο φίλον βασιλέως γενέσθαι καὶ ξένον. (The name is curious: from ἄτταγᾶς, a partridge; Aristoph. Bds. 247, 761; while φρόνη, φρύνος, is a toad; cp. Φρόνιχος, Kuropatkin, etc.)

2. μεγάλως, magno apparatu; cp. 6. 70 (ὑποδέχεσθαι), 1. 167 (ἐναγίζω) etc.

ἐκάλεε ἐπὶ ξείνια, 'invited (or, was inviting) to a banquet'; cp. 5. 18. πεντήκοντα: perhaps 'covers were laid' for 100 in all, or else for 102. λογιμωτάτους, cc. 24, 37 infra: λόγιμος c. 64 infra. κληθέντες δὲ οὗτοι εἶποντο: this specific record of the acceptance of the invitation is curious: is it matter of surprise that Persian grandees should accept the invitation of a Greek? Or was Theban cookery of ill repute? Athenaeus, p. 148 E, reconstructs the menu: θρία, καὶ ἐψητοὺς, καὶ ἀφύας, καὶ ἐγκρασικόλους, καὶ ἀλλᾶντας, καὶ σχελίδας καὶ ἔτνος—very paltry fare, and enough to account for the defeat of the Persians, ἀπολωλότες ἤδη ὑπὸ τῶν τοιοῦτων τροφῶν, but still luxury compared with the Λακωνικὸν δείπνον c. 82 infra.

4. ἦν . . . ποιεῦμενον ἐν Θήβῃσι: not in the Persian camp, cp. infra; the difference between ἦν ποιεῦμενον and ἐποιέετο is rather fine.

5. τάδε δὲ ἤδη τὰ ἐπίλοιπα ἡκουον. The 'banquet of Attaginos' was apparently celebrated, and a part of general tradition; Hdt. has, however, a particular anecdote to relate about it, which he owes to a special source of information—a source full of possibilities! Probably the general report in regard to the banquet was very different from the pessimism of this anecdote, which Hdt. had apparently heard not once, but again and again (ἡκουον, cp. ἡκουσα 7. 55).

6. Θερσάνδρου . . . Ὀρχομενίου. Why does not Hdt. give a patronymic to this prince of Orchomenos? Thersandros occurs as the name of the son of Polyneikes 4. 147, 6. 52. The Orchomenos here named is of course the Boiotian; cp. 8. 34. (On the coinage the all but constant form of the name is Erchomenos; cp. Head, H.N. 294 and c. 28 infra.) Had this Orchomenian paid for his medism with exile? Had Hdt. as a boy heard the story from the exile's lips? Where or when had they met? Perhaps in Hdt.'s own Halikarnassian home. The Orchomenian will not have been quite a young man in 479 B.C., and there is not the slightest necessity to delay the intercourse between Thersandros and Hdt. until the latter's visit to Boiotia (of which we have conclusive evidence in 5. 59): the imperfect ἡκουον also militates

ἐν Ὀρχομενῷ. ἔφη δὲ ὁ Θέρσανδρος κληθῆναι καὶ αὐτὸς ὑπὸ Ἀτταγίνου ἐπὶ τὸ δεῖπνον τοῦτο, κληθῆναι δὲ καὶ Θηβαίων ἄνδρας πεντήκοντα, καὶ σφῶν οὐ χωρὶς ἑκατέρους κλίνειν, ἀλλὰ Πέρσῃν τε καὶ Θηβαίων ἐν κλίνῃ ἐκάστη. ὥς δὲ ἀπὸ 10 δείπνου ἦσαν, διαπινόντων τὸν Πέρσῃν τὸν ὁμόκλινον Ἑλλάδα γλῶσσαν ἰέντα εἰρέσθαι αὐτὸν ὀποδαπὸς ἐστὶ, αὐτὸς δὲ ὑποκρίνασθαι ὥς εἴη Ὀρχομενίος. τὸν δὲ εἰπεῖν "ἐπεὶ νῦν ὁμοτράπεζός τέ μοι καὶ ὁμόσπονδος ἐγένεο, μνημόσυνά τοι γνώμης τῆς ἐμῆς καταλιπέσθαι θέλω, ἵνα καὶ προειδῶς αὐτὸς 15 περὶ σεωντοῦ βουλευέσθαι ἔχῃς τὰ συμφέροντα. ὁρᾷς τούτους τοὺς δαινυμένους Πέρσας καὶ τὸν στρατὸν τὸν ἐλπίομεν ἐπὶ

7 κληθῆναι Reiske, van H.: κλινῆναι Dindorf 11 ἔσαν z 12
 ἰέντα Cs || ποδαπὸς B: ὁκοδαπὸς Bekker 13 εἴπαι z, van H. || Ἐπεὶ
 νῦν van H. 14 ἐγένετο R || τοι: τε CS 15 ἐθέλω B 16
 ἔωντοῦ C 17 τοὺς om. A<sup>1</sup>C

against that. Thersandros is memorable as one of the three men whom Hdt. actually names among his informants (cp. 3. 55, 4. 76—the scribe at Sais is anonymous 2. 28). The pseudo-antithesis ἀνδρὸς μὲν Ὀρχομενίου, λογίμου δὲ ἐν Ὀρχομενῷ is curious; or, perhaps, in contrast to his position as an exile in Asia: otherwise it were a stylistic infelicity. Was the exile of Orchomenos reduced to keeping a school, like Διονύσιος ἐν Κορίνθῳ (Cicero ad A. 9. 9. 1, ad F. 9. 18. 1)? Was he one of Hdt.'s tutors? His doctrine is thoroughly Herodotean! τὰ πρῶτα: cp. c. 78 infra, 7. 134 supra; rather differently in 7. 13.

8. Θηβαίων. Rawlinson understands 'Boiotians' generally: there would be more Thebans perhaps than from any other city, but probably all the cities of the Boiotian Confederacy would be represented. Was the banquet rigidly confined to 'Boiotians' and 'Persians'? Were no Makedonians, no Medes, no Thessalians present?

9. οὐ χωρὶς ἑκατέρους κλίνειν. Attaginus hospes (dicitur) κλίνει, cp. 1. 126 τοὺς Πέρσας κατακλινὰς ἐς λειμῶνα εὐώχῃ. Quare haud opus scribere κλινῆναι (Baehr). Cp. App. Crit. ἑκατέρους, each set, both sets, i.e. Greeks and 'barbarians.' A Greek couch held two, a Roman three persons. Attaginos evidently wished the 'Thebans' and 'Persians' to fraternize.

10. ὥς δὲ ἀπὸ δείπνου ἦσαν: when they were done eating; cp. ἀπὸ δ. ἐγίνοντο 6. 129, 5. 18. Thersandros and his companion seem to have preserved silence during the eating, and only thawed on the arrival of the wine: διαπίνειν i.e. supra. The 'Persian' could speak Greek Ἑλλάδα γλῶσσαν ἰέντα, cp. 1. 57.

12. ὀποδαπὸς: qua ex terra, cuius; 5. 13, 7. 218. The Orchomenian does not appear to have emulated the curiosity of his ὁμόκλινος (an Homazlegomenon). The idea is, perhaps, that the Persian would not have been so frank to a 'Theban' proper.

14. ὁμοτράπεζος . . ὁμόσπονδος: the one referring to eating, the other to libations; the tables had no doubt been taken away before the drinking began; ὁμοτρ. 3. 132.

ἐγένεο: a perfect might have been expected; but the aorist emphasizes the fact that they were ἀπὸ δείπνου and that the σπονδαί had taken place.

μνημόσυνα, 6. 109. The Persian speaker apparently treats his own death as a foregone conclusion, though he assumes that his boon-companion will survive (ὄψεαι infra); his γνώμη is to be found less in his prophecy than in his philosophy. The word γνώμη is used here in the more abstract sense, unusual with Hdt.

15. ἵνα . . ἔχῃς: Thersandros might have acted on this hint at once; perhaps afterwards he wished that he had done so. ἔχειν is here 'to be able.'

16. ὁρᾷς . . τὸν ἐλπίομεν: only possible to 'the mind's eye'; so that there is a kind of zeugma.

17. δαινυμένους, middle, 'to have a τῷ ποταμῷ στρατοπεδευόμενον· τούτων πάντων ὄψαι ὀλίγον τινὸς χρόνου διελθόντος ὀλίγους τινὰς τοὺς περιγενομένους.” 20 ταῦτα ἅμα τε τὸν Πέρσην λέγειν καὶ μετιέναι πολλὰ τῶν δακρύων. αὐτὸς δὲ θωμάσας τὸν λόγον εἰπεῖν πρὸς αὐτὸν “οὐκῶν Μαρδονίῳ τε ταῦτα χρεόν ἐστι λέγειν καὶ τοῖσι μετ’ ἐκείνων ἐν αἴῃ ἐοῦσι Περσέων;” τὸν δὲ μετὰ ταῦτα εἰπεῖν “ξείνε, ὃ τι δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ ἀμήχανον ἀποτρέψαι 25 ἀνθρώπων· οὐδὲ γὰρ πιστὰ λέγουσι ἐθέλει πείθεσθαι οὐδεῖς.

 ταῦτα δὲ Περσέων συχνοὶ ἐπιστάμενοι ἐπόμεθα ἀναγκαίῃ

18 ἐστρατοπεδευόμενον malit van H. || τουτέων z 19 τοὺς del.
 Cohet, van H. 20 ταῦτά τε ἅμα B, Holder, van H. || πολλοὺς z
 21 θωυμάσας Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup> || εἶπαι z, van H. 22 χρεών BPz, van H. ||
 μετὰ α 23 εἶπαι z, van H. 25 πείθεσθαι θέλει B feast prepared for one'; cp. 1. 211; active, 1. 162—a poetic word.

18. ὄψαι . . ὀλίγους τινὰς, predicative, 'few will be the survivors thou shalt see.'

20. ἅμα τε . . καί: a strong parataxis. μετιέναι πολλὰ τῶν δακρύων, emittere; cp. γλῶσσαν μετεῖς 6. 29 (elsewhere demittere, dimittere, omittere, remittere; cp. Schweig. Lex.) 'his tears were many'—though his words were few. This lachrymose gentleman is a faithful copy, or perhaps model, of the weeping despot at Abydos, 7. 46, but he combines in his own person the weeping of Xerxes with the wisdom of Artabanos! Thersander's instructions were not lost on Herodotus; this anecdote appears to be the nucleus of that more elaborate and rhetorical scene.

22. οὐκῶν Μαρδονίῳ τε κτλ. The astounding naïveté of this remark leads one to doubt whether Thersander, or Herodotus, has reported the conversation quite fully. Stein indeed suggests that the Persian must have known of the treacherous intrigues against Mardonios headed by Artabazos; cp. c. 66 infra: but are they proven?

τοῖσι μετ' ἐκείνων ἐν αἴῃ ἐοῦσι II. would include Artabazos imprimis, to whom it would be useless or dangerous to say much! ἐν αἴῃ εἶναι 8. 112; Περσέων with τοῖσι.

24. ὃ τι δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ κτλ. This Persian not only speaks good Greek but has drunk deeply—at the wells of Greek wisdom. In a less pious expression the same fatalism appeals to Amasis as the moral of the story of Polykrates'

Ring, 3. 43; in a still higher region it rules the gods themselves, as the Pythia informed Kroisos 1. 91 τὴν πεπραμένην μοῖραν ἀδύνατα ἐστὶ ἀποφυγεῖν καὶ θεῶ. There is no such pessimistic quietism on the Achaemenid monuments, which breathe glad confidence in the patronage and providence of Ahura-mazda (τοῦ θεοῦ); but it must be admitted that Mazdeism sought to overcome its inherent dualism by tracing Good and Evil to a common Antecedent, Space, Time, Fate, or such-like. Such monism existed in the fourth century, if not in the fifth; though if Darmesteter be right, no direct trace of such a system is to be found in the Avesta (cp. Sacred Bks. of the East, iv. p. lxxxii.). But surely fatalism as a belief, or sentiment, the recognition of the unappeasable Power behind the benignant Person, is not the special product of any nation, or of any creed, but allgemein menschlich. It is less Hebraic than Hellenic, less Persian than Anglian. Boiotian Hesiod and Wessex Hardy are as deeply tinged therewith as Ecclesiastes or Omar Khayyam; and the Greek are here the older sources. Cp. 5. 4 with my notes ad l.

26. ταῦτα δὲ Περσέων συχνοὶ κτλ.: not so much the pious generalization, which has immediately preceded, as (a) the approaching destruction of the army, (b) the uselessness of addressing Mardonios and those in authority. This anecdote may perhaps be taken for evidence that a Persian victory was by no means regarded in the Persian camp as a foregone conclusion; many other hints point to the same inference: (1) ἐνδεδεδεμένοι. ἐχθίστη δὲ ὀδύνη ἐστὶ τῶν ἐν ἀνθρώποισι αὐτῇ, πολλὰ φρονέοντα μηδενὸς κρατεῖν." ταῦτα μὲν τοῦ Ὀρχομενίου Θερσάνδρου ἤκουον, καὶ τάδε πρὸς τούτοις, ὡς αὐτὸς αὐτίκα λέγει ταῦτα πρὸς ἀνθρώπους πρότερον ἢ γενέσθαι ἐν 30 Πλαταιῇσι τὴν μάχην.

Μαρδονίου δὲ ἐν τῇ Βοιωτίῃ στρατοπεδευομένου, οἱ μὲν 17 ἄλλοι παρείχοντο ἅπαντες στρατιὴν καὶ συνεσέβαλον ἐς Ἀθήνας

27 ἐστὶ del. Holder: om. P: ἔστιν post ἀνθρώποις B 28 κρατεῖν C, van H. || τοῦ ὀρχομενίου Bz, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ὀρχομενίου 29 Θερσάνδρου secl. van H., Holder 30 ἀνθρώπους: ἄλλους Valckenaer || ἐν om. R 31 πλαταιῇσι AB: πλαταιῇσι R 17. 1 στρατευομένου B: ἐστρατοπεδευμένου malit van H. 2 συνέβαλον C: συνέβαλλον PS: συνεσέβαλλον P<sup>m</sup> (συνέβαλον B ap. Holder) || ἐς Ἀθήνας secl. Krueger, van H.

the advice of the Thebans, c. 2 supra; (2) the repeated efforts of Mardonios to win over the Athenians, cp. c. 4 supra, 8. 136; (3) the probable tampering with the Peloponnesians, cp. cc. 12 f. supra; (4) the evacuation of Attica and the reasons therefor, c. 13 supra; (5) the formation of the fortified camp, c. 15 supra; (6) the other suggestions in this very anecdote; (7) these indications are reinforced later, cp. c. 42 infra.

ἀναγκαίῃ ἐνδεδεδεμένοι: cp. 1. 11 ἀναγκαίῃ ἐνδέειν of a choice—of evils! Cp. ὑπ' ἀναγκῆς ἐχόμενοι 7. 233, and c. 15 supra; (κατεξυγμένοι) 8. 22. The compulsion is ideal and in the present case would arise from (a) loyalty, (b) military discipline, (c) the double certitude of disaster in case of στάσις, (d) cowardice, or faintheartedness.

27. ὀδύνη: a poetical word for pain of body as well as of mind, and frequently in the plural. (Found also in Xenoph., Plato.)

τῶν ἐν ἀνθρώποις: sc. ὀδυνῶν, or, perhaps, more generally, 'in the wide world.'

28. πολλὰ φρονέοντα μηδενὸς κρατεῖν, 'to have much wit and little weight'; cp. Sophokles O.T. 316 (Teiresias loq.) φεῦ φεῦ φρονεῖν ὡς δεινὸν ἐνθα μὴ τέλη λάβει φρονούντι. The two passages are hardly independent. Sophokles owes something, perhaps, to Hdt. Cp. Baehr, Commentatio § 5 (iv.<sup>2</sup> 416 ff.). The poet, however, has a more genial word in store, Antig. 1347 πολλῶ τὸ φρονεῖν εὐδαιμονίας πρῶτον ὑπάρχει κτλ., and also a useful caveat for any would-be Cassandra, Aias 1418 ἢ πολλὰ βροτοῖς ἐστιν ἰδοῦσαν γινῶναι: πρὶν ἰδεῖν δ' οὐδεὶς μάντις τῶν μελλόντων ὅ τι πράξει.

29. ἤκουον: as above. Orchomenian Thersander used to add that he (had) made no secret of the matter at the time, but mentioned it to several persons (ἀνθρώπους: his wife, perhaps, among others?) before the fulfilment of the Persian's dismal boding in the battle of Plataia. It is plain that Thersander, and Herodotus, were much concerned to refute criticism of this anecdote as a vaticinium post eventum. But were any of these persons ever produced as witnesses? How much of the anecdote as here related is Thersander's, and how much is due to the art and language of Hdt.? Or was the Orchomenian one of Hdt.'s mentors? Cp. 1. 6 supra.

30. ἐν Πλαταιῇσι: as the battle certainly did not take place in the city of Plataia, which had been destroyed (8. 50), and the site of which was at some distance from the actual battlefield, cc. 52 ff. infra, it is clear that ἐν Πλαταιῇσι here = ἐν τῇ Πλαταιῇ.

17. 1. ἐν τῇ Βοιωτίῃ = ἐν τῇ Θηβαϊδί, but here used probably from the reference to Attica on the one side and to Phokis on the other.

2. καὶ συνεσέβαλον ἐς Ἀθήνας: not content with taking all the 'Persian' forces into Attica (cp. 8. 50) Hdt. here takes about 50,000 Greek soldiers in also. Hdt.'s strategy is like some modern Political Economy; it assumes the infinite mobility of Labour (and Capital)! τῶν ταύτῃ οἰκημένων excludes probably those in Peloponnesos, Asia, the islands, etc. The next sentence as ὅσοι περ ἐμῆδιζον Ἑλλήνων τῶν ταύτῃ οἰκημένων, μούνοι δὲ Φωκέες οὐ συνεσέβαλον (ἐμῆδιζον γὰρ δὴ σφόδρα καὶ οὐτοῦ 5 οὐκ ἐκόντες ἀλλ' ὑπ' ἀναγκαίης), ἡμέρησι δὲ οὐ πολλῇσι μετὰ τὴν ἄπιξιν τὴν ἐς Θήβας ὕστερον ἦλθον αὐτῶν ὀπλίται χίλιοι, ἦγε δὲ αὐτοὺς Ἀρμοκύδης ἀνὴρ τῶν ἀστῶν δοκιμώ-τatos. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀπικάτο καὶ οὗτοι ἐς Θήβας, πέμψας ὁ Μαρδόνιος ἱππέας ἐκέλευσε σφέας ἐπ' ἐαυτῶν ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ 10 ἵζεσθαι. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐποίησαν ταῦτα, αὐτίκα παρὴν ἵππος ἢ ἅπανσα. μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα διεξήλθε μὲν διὰ τοῦ στρατοπέδου

4 συνέβαλον S: συνέβαλλον Marc.: συνεσέβαλλον PR (συνεσέβαλλον
 B ap. Holder) || γὰρ σφόδρα BC: γὰρ μεγάλως z: σφόδρα del. Letronne, Holder: γὰρ ἦδη σφόδρα? Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 5 οὐ <σφόδρα> ἐκόντες Gomperz, Holder 6 αὐτέων Bz 7 δυνατώτατος aC 8 ἐπέιτε? van H.
 || ἀπικάτο Pz || ἐς τὰς B 9 ἱππέας ὁ Μαρδόνιος ἐκέλευε B, Holder || ἱππέας secl. Kallenberg, Holder || ἀπ' B 10 ἐπεὶ: ὡς B, Holder, van H. || ἢ ἵππος ἅπανσα B, Holder, van H. 11 ταῦτα del. van H.

it stands is not clear; σφόδρα makes the difficulty; it would go better with the preceding ἐμῆδιζον, or out altogether; Stein makes the sentence: μούνοι δὲ Φωκέες οὐ συνεσέβαλον . . οὐκ ἐκόντες ἀλλ' ὑπ' ἀναγκαίης, perhaps intending the last five words to be taken with the first καὶ συνεσέβαλον ἐς Ἀθήνας—rather a remote reference. And would it have been true that the Thebans, for example, invaded Attica οὐκ ἐκόντες? (Yes, perhaps, in view of c. 2 supra.)

5. ἡμέρησι δὲ οὐ πολλῇσι. Hdt.'s conventionalized journal of Plataia has not yet begun; if the arrival of the Phokians at the Persian camp preceded the arrival of the Hellenes at Erythrai (c. 19 infra) the Greeks were rather slow in crossing Kithairon.

6. τὴν ἄπιξιν τὴν ἐς Θήβας: not the visit to Thebes for the banquet of Attaginos, c. 16 supra, but the arrival of the forces out of Attica at the Laager, c. 15 supra. The name of the city is put for the name of the country, as ἐς Ἀθήνας just above; cp. ἐν Πλαταιῇσι c. 16 supra.

7. χῆλοι: the same number had served in the army of Leonidas 7. 203, 212, 217 f., and no doubt very much the same men. The anecdote here has the 'tendency,' the intention, to whitewash the Phokian Chiliad, whose reputation had been somewhat blasted by the Spartan (Peloponnesian) story of Thermopylai.

Ἀρμοκύδης: the name appears to be unique; no patronymic is given;

the leader's name at Thermopylai is suppressed.

It is not easy to establish much difference between δοκιμώτατος (δέχομαι) and λόγιμος ἐς τὰ πρῶτα οἱ λογιμώτατοι (c. 16), but perhaps δόκιμος is less obviously relative also to posterity.

8. ἀπικάτο . . ἐς Θήβας, pl. p., 'were come' = ἦσαν ἀπικμένοι. ἐς Θ. = ἐς τὴν Θηβαΐδα: cp. above.

9. ἐπ' ἐωντῶν ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ ἵζεσθαι: the active ἵζω is used of the act of sitting, literally understood, 5. 25, 6. 57—so is the middle, 5. 18—which is, however, constantly used of this military operation, 8. 71, c. 2 supra, c. 26 infra, etc.

ἐπ' ἐωντῶν, 'by themselves,' separately; cp. c. 38 supra. This use of ἐπὶ is primarily locative, as ἐπὶ τῆς γωνίης, 1. 51, 'in the corner'; cp. 8. 32 ἡ κορυφή κατὰ Νέωνα πόλιν ἐπ' ἐωντῆς—differing from the temporal force in ἐπ' ἐμοῦ, ἐπὶ Ξανθίππου, etc.; 'on the plain' need not be taken to imply that any part of the forces, or the camp, was on the mountain, it merely prepares the way for the ensuing cavalry development.

10. αὐτίκα παρὴν ἵππος ἢ ἅπανσα: the exact number of chiliads, or myriads, would here be acceptable; but the phrase will in any case be an over-statement—unless, indeed, there were far fewer of the cavalry than Hdt. seems throughout to assume.

11. διεξήλθε μὲν . . φήμη: there seems to be nothing supernatural in this

τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ τοῦ μετὰ Μήδων ἐόντος φήμη ὡς κατακοντιέει σφεας, διεξήλθε δὲ δι' αὐτῶν Φωκέων τὸν τοῦτο. ἔνθα δὴ σφι ὁ στρατηγὸς Ἀρμοκύδης παραίνει λέγων τοιάδε. "ὦ Φωκέες, πρόδηλα γὰρ ὅτι ἡμέας οὗτοι οἱ ἄνθρωποι μέλλουσι 15 προόπτῳ θανάτῳ δώσειν, διαβεβλημένους ὑπὸ Θεσσαλῶν, ὡς ἐγὼ εἰκάζω· νῦν ἄνδρα πάντα τινὰ ὑμέων χρεόν ἐστι γενέσθαι ἀγαθόν· κρέσσον γὰρ ποιεῦντάς τι καὶ ἀμνησμένους τελευτῆσαι τὸν αἰῶνα ἢ περ παρέχοντας διαφθαρῆναι αἰσχίστῳ μόρῳ. ἀλλὰ μαθέτω τις αὐτῶν ὅτι ἐόντες βάρβαροι ἐπ' Ἑλλήσι 20 ἀνδράσι φόνον ἔρραψαν." ὁ μὲν ταῦτα παραίνει· οἱ δὲ 18 ἱππέες ἐπεὶ σφεας ἐκυκλώσαντο, ἐπήλαυνον ὡς ἀπολούντες, καὶ δὴ διετείνοντο τὰ βέλεα ὡς ἀπήσοντες, καὶ κού τις καὶ

12 Μήδων S 13 σφεας ABz: σφέας || αὐτέων z || Φωκέων om. S || ταυτὸ τοῦτο C || δέ S 14 Ἀρμοκύδης del. van H. || τάδε B 16 προδῶσιν Suidas s.v. πρόοπτος 17 νῦν ὦν B, Holder || ἄνδρα πάντα τινὰ α: πάντα τινὰ ἄνδρα B, (Holder): ἄνδρα τινὰ πάντα CPz: ἄνδρα post ἐστι transpos. Cobet, van H. || χρεόν CPz, van H. || γίνεσθαι B 20 αὐτέων z 18. 1 μὲν <ὦν> H. Stephanus, van H. 2 ἐπεῖτε Holder, van H.: ἐπεὶ τέ B || ἀπολούντες B 3 δὴ: δὴ καὶ B: om. C || ἀφήσοντες αC

φήμη (cp. c. 100 infra), even when it, or one to exactly the same effect, passes right through the Phokians themselves.

στρατοπέδου here apparently = στρατοῦ or στρατιῆς. Cp. c. 51 infra etc.

12. μετὰ Μήδων. This story (τὰ περὶ Φωκέων), which is in the nature of a Rettung, will hardly have come from a Peloponnesian or from a 'medized' source. It might be of Phokian or of Attic origin. Hdt., who distinguishes Medes and Persians from the first, will probably have taken over the phraseology of his source.

κατακοντιέει (κατακοντίζειν): sc. ἡ ἱππός. The weapon is noticeable, and implies close proximity.

13. τὸν τοῦτο: sc. ὡς κ. σφεας. Baehr cps. Thuc. 8. 108. 4 for the story of the fate of the Delian exiles in Atramyttion, who were treacherously surrounded and shot down at their morning meal by Arsakes the Persian, Sept. 411 B.C. (So too Stein.)

15. πρόδηλα: this pl. is a favourite construction with Hdt.; cp. 1. 91 ἀδύνατα, 3. 35 δῆλα, 3. 109 βιώσιμα, etc. Kuehner, Ausf. Grammt. § 386, explains it as derived from the use of the abstract pl. demonstrative ταῦτα, τάδε etc. to denote one idea, or thing.

ἄνθρωποι, of course contemptuous

VOL. I PT. II

(cp. 7. 210) and making ἄνδρα just below more significant.

16. διαβεβλημένους ὑπὸ Θεσσαλῶν: cp. 8. 27-31, for the Thessalo-Phokian feud.

17. πάντα τινὰ with the second person, Kuehner op. c. § 371. 4 γ. The subject is indefinite, yet conceived as present, and capable of being addressed directly.

18. κρέσσον γάρ κτλ. It is a pity these worthy sentiments had not inspired the Phokians on the mount above Thermopylai; cp. 7. 218. But that was another (a Peloponnesian) story!

19. τὸν αἰῶνα, 'life'; cp. 7. 46.

παρέχοντας, 'without opposition,' like our 'yield.' There is perhaps an ellipse (ἐαυτοῖς); cp. L. & S. sub v. II. 2 and passages there quoted, which show (as Stein observes) that the word is used of submitting to medical examination, surgical operations, etc. (Xenophon, Plato).

20. ἐπ' Ἑλλήσι ἀνδράσι: Ἑλλην adj. (φόνον) ῥάπτειν is poetic; not as in 6. 1. Cp. Od. 16. 379 φόνον αἰπὸν ἐράττομεν. But the metaphor here is rather pointless, unless it were referred to the διαβολή of the Thessalians, whom the Phokian could not mean to describe as βάρβαροι.

18. 3. καὶ δὴ διετείνοντο τὰ βέλεα ὡς

T

ἀπήκε. καὶ οἱ ἀντίοι ἔστασαν πάντη συστρέψαντες ἐωντοὺς 5 καὶ πυκνώσαντες ὡς μάλιστα. ἐνθαῦτα οἱ ἱππῶται ὑπέστρεφον καὶ ἀπήλυνον ὀπίσω. οὐκ ἔχω δ' ἀτρεκέως εἰπεῖν οὔτε εἰ ἦλθον μὲν ἀπολέοντες τοὺς Φωκέας δεηθέντων Θεσσαλῶν, ἐπεὶ δὲ ὦρων πρὸς ἀλέξῃσιν τραπομένους, δέισαντες μὴ καὶ
 σφίσι γένηται τρώματα, οὕτω δὴ ἀπήλυνον ὀπίσω· ὡς γάρ 10 σφι ἐνετείλατο Μαρδόνιος· οὐτ' εἰ αὐτῶν πειρηθῆναι ἠθέλησε εἴ τι ἀλκῆς μετέχουσι. ὡς δὲ ὀπίσω ἀπήλασαν οἱ ἱππῶται, πέμψας Μαρδόνιος κήρυκα ἔλεγε τάδε. “θαρσέετε ὦ Φωκέες· ἄνδρες γὰρ ἐφάνητε ἐόντες ἀγαθοί, οὐκ ὡς ἐγὼ ἐπυνθανόμην.
 καὶ νῦν προθύμως φέρετε τὸν πόλεμον τοῦτον· εὐεργεσίησι 15 γὰρ οὐ νικήσετε οὐτ' ὦν ἐμὲ οὔτε βασιλέα.” τὰ περὶ Φωκέων μὲν ἐς τοσοῦτο ἐγένετο·

19 Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ ὡς ἐς τὸν Ἴσθμὸν ἦλθον, ἐν τούτῳ

4 ἀφῆκε αC: ἀπήκετο z || καὶ οἱ Δz: καὶ οἱ BCP(SV): καὶ R ||
 ἔστασαν Pz, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἔστασαν C, Marc.: ἔστησαν || πάντες S ||
 στρέψαντες αC 5 κυκλώσαντες B 6 δὲ B || εἶπαι z, van H.
 7 εἰ om. CR 8 ὦρων αC 9 τρώμα Naber || ὡς ABC: ὡς R
 10 οὔτε B || αὐτῶν z 11 ἔχουσι duo Paris. prob. Valckenaer 15
 οὔτε ἐμὲ οὔτε βασιλῆα z 16 τοσοῦτον Bz

ἀπ.: καὶ ἤδη δ. τὰ τόξα ὡς ἀπῆσαντες τὰ βέλεα would be more correct.

4. πάντη συστρέψαντες ἐωντοὺς: cp.
 Livy 8. 11. 5 cum se in unum conglo-bassent (Valckenaer). But the tactical manoeuvre here described is really at closer quarters; just as 1. 101 Δηϊόκης τὸ Μηδικὸν ἔθνος συνέστρεψε is on a larger scale. Cp. συστροφὴ 7. 9, συστραφέντες 6. 6. ὑποστρέφειν just below gives a different result; cp. ὑποστροφή c. 22
infra.

6. οὐκ ἔχω δ' ἀτρεκέως εἰπεῖν. Hdt.
 thinks that if the intention really was to destroy the Phokians, it must have been dictated by the Thessalians; and this view is evidently a datum of his source or authority; but he himself suggests another alternative, viz. that Mardonios merely meant to put their mettle to the proof (ἀλκή, cp. cc. 70, 102 infra). A third alternative he does not face, viz. that the whole story was an exaggeration, or even based upon a misunderstanding, of what was intended for a complimentary reception!

7. οὔτε is, of course, the idiomatic doubling of the negative, after οὐκ ἔχω.
 εἰ ἦλθον . . . εἰ ἠθέλησε . . .: the two alternatives put as strict co-ordinates.

8. πρὸς ἀλέξῃσιν τραπομένους: cp.

πρὸς ἀλκὴν τραπέσθαι c. 102 infra and Hesych. sub v. ἀλκή· δόναμις ἰσχύς ἢ ἀλέξεις ἢ μάχη. The word is an ἀπαξ
 λ. in Hdt., and Schweighauser overlooked this passage in his Lexicon.

9. ὡς=οὕτω, as often with δὲ καὶ but only here with γάρ (Krueger).

13. ἐπυνθανόμην: of course from the Thessalians.

14. π. φέρετε: cp. c. 40 infra: like the Thebans.

15. ὦν emphasizes his own case.

16. ἐς τοσοῦτο ἐγ., 'went no further.'

19. 1. Λακεδαιμόνιοι δέ: if τὰ περὶ Φωκέων, cc. 17, 18, should be judged an addition, second hand (cp. Introduction, § 9), these words would correspond with ταῦτα μὲν Ὀρχομενίου κτλ. at the end of
 c. 16. The exact point of time at which 'the Lakedaimonians' reached the Isthmos has not been previously indicated. The 5000 'Spartiates' have started in c. 10, followed by 5000 Περιοῖκοι in c. 11; these forces are under way in c. 12; but the Spartiatai have not reached the Isthmos in c. 13 when Mardonios decided and began to evacuate Attica (πρὶν ἢ τοὺς μετὰ Παισάνειον ἐς τὸν Ἴσθμὸν ἐσβαλεῖν). The arrival of 1000 'Lakedaimonians,' apparently an advanced guard, at Megara is recorded ἐστρατοπεδεύοντο. πυνθανόμενοι δὲ ταῦτα οἱ λοιποὶ Πελοποννήσιοι τοῖσι τὰ ἀμείνω ἐάνδανε, οἱ δὲ καὶ ὀρώντες ἐξιόντας Σπαρτίτης, οὐκ ἐδίκαιεν λείπεσθαι τῆς ἐξόδου [Λακεδαιμονίων]. ἐκ δὲ ὧν τοῦ Ἰσθμοῦ καλλιερησάντων [τῶν ἱρών] ἐπορεύοντο 5 πάντες καὶ ἀπικνέονται ἐς Ἐλευσίνα· ποιήσαντες δὲ καὶ ἐνθαῦτα ἱρά, ὥς σφί ἐκαλλιέρεε, τὸ πρόσω ἐπορεύοντο,

19. 2 λοιποὶ om. S      3 ὀρέοντες CP<sup>z</sup>, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.      4
ἐδίκαιον van H. || nomen secl. Stein      5 τῶν ἱρών secl. Krueger, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.      7 ἐκαλλιέρεε, τὸ Suevern: ἐκαλλιρέετο, R:
ἐκαλλιερέετο || ἐπορεύετο R

in c. 14, and Mardonios is apparently still in Attica; in c. 15 intelligence reaches Mardonios that ἀλλές εἰσαν οἱ Ἕλληνες ἐν τῷ Ἰσθμῷ. Only then does he finally clear out of Attica. οἱ Ἕλληνες there covers more than Λακεδαιμόνιοι here (esp. ἀλλές), and anticipates the junction of οἱ λοιποὶ Πελοποννήσιοι τοῖσι τὰ ἀμείνω ἐάνδανε with the Lakedaemonians, which is recorded here immediately below. The position of the πρόδρομοι στρατῆ, Λακεδαιμονίων χίλιοι (c. 14) at Megara is a little obscure; but there is a moment apparently before Mardonios has evacuated Attica when 1000 Lakedaemonians are in Megara, and some 9000-10,000 at the Isthmos, or on the way thither, to say nothing of the Helots. At the Isthmos they are joined by the rest of the confederate forces from Peloponnese, but only after Mardonios has heard of this mobilization and concentration does he evacuate Attica; and only after he has evacuated Attica do the confederate forces advance to Eleusis. It is just conceivable that the arrival of the πρόδρομοι στρατῆ in Megara is not quite correctly chronologized in c. 14, and that it was not separated by so large an interval as is there implied from the advance of the confederate forces from the Isthmos to Eleusis. Probably the last of the Persian cavalry had ridden down the northern slopes of Kithairon, and the construction of the camp on the Asopos was reported at Eleusis, before the sacrifices proved favourable to an advance into Boiotia.

3. τοῖσι τὰ ἀμείνω ἐάνδανε, 'which were (being) pleased with the better'—part, or policy? Is it the same as οἱ τὰ ἀμείνω φρονέοντες (cp. 7. 145)? Cp. 8. 29. The ones unrepresented were Argives, and some of the Achaian and Arkadian towns; with the exception of the Lepreatai all the states enumerated below, c. 28, had sent men to Thermopylai and Salamis (7. 202, 8. 1, 43).

οἱ δὲ καὶ ὀρώντες ἐξ. Σπ. seems to be a qualification of the immediately preceding, 'but only when they saw'—or even perhaps but 'some of them only when they saw . . .' Others may have been at the Isthmos before, or all along. The 'seeing' is not perhaps to be taken quite literally; cp. c. 16 supra.

4. ἐδίκαιεν: cp. 8. 126.

λείπεσθαι, to miss, remain behind; cp. 7. 168, 8. 44, 113.

5. καλλιερησάντων: for the constr. cp. 7. 134. In the previous year the sacrifices had proved unfavourable, cp. c. 10 supra, and the Peloponnesians had not advanced beyond their wall. Even now, they are only favourable when Mardonios is already out of reach, or clearly not remaining in Attica; or at least not in occupation of the Thriasian plain.

7. ὥς σφί ἐκαλλιέρεε: why was there a fresh sacrifice? There was a fresh frontier to be crossed. Even if the sacrifice at the Isthmos might have carried the Peloponnesians to Erythrai (no express sacrifice is recorded in the Megarid, but there may have been one) there were the Athenians to be considered. Had Mardonios remained about Athens there could have been no fresh διαβατήρια, but no doubt there would have been daily θυσίαι ἐπὶ τῷ Πέλαγῳ until the opportune moment arrived for forward action; cp. cc. 33, 38, 61 f. infra.

Is it at all likely that the Peloponnesians expected to find the Persians on the Thriasian plain (as Stein suggests)? The Athenians in Salamis, to say nothing of their own πρόδρομοι and ἡμεροσκόποι, will have kept them better informed than that. It appears, on the contrary,

Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἅμα αὐτοῖσι, διαβάντες μὲν ἐκ Σαλαμίνος, συμμιγέντες δὲ ἐν Ἐλευσίνι. ὥς δὲ ἄρα ἀπίκοντο τῆς
 10 Βοιωτῆς ἐς Ἐρυθράς, ἔμαθόν τε δὴ τοὺς βαρβάρους ἐπὶ τῷ
 Ἀσωπῇ στρατοπεδευομένους, φρασθέντες δὲ τοῦτο ἀντετάσ-

11 ἐστρατοπεδευμένους expectaret van H. || δὲ : τε Schaefer, van H.

obvious that the sacrifices became favourable to an advance only when the road was known to be clear.

9. ὥς δὲ ἄρα ἀπίκοντο τῆς Βοιωτῆς ἐς Ἐρυθράς: there was something a little surprising in this movement, which certainly marks a new departure in the action (ἄρα); nothing like it has been attempted on land since the fiasco at Thermopylai; and the Persians might have been holding the pass. No doubt the junction with the Athenians is the decisive factor, and the Athenians are the driving force, in the advance into Boiotia. The advance to Eleusis was not definitely what the move into Boiotia is, a resumption of the offensive: perhaps at the same time the fleet leaves Salamis for Aigina, or Aigina for Delos, not to say Delos for Ionia.

Erythrai has been given, c. 15 supra, as the terminus a quo for the construction or measurement of the Persian στρατόπεδον. If the Persians were really at Erythrai, the Greeks could not have arrived there without first clearing the Persians out: that would have entailed a fight. Stein says there must here be a gap in Hdt.'s narrative. The Hellenes must have forced the pass of Eleutherai, and driven the enemy eastward on to the fortified camp at Skolos, and north, into the plain. But is that convincing? The forcing of the pass of Eleutherai-Erythrai, i.e. Dryoskephalai, would have been a colossal affair; imagine its having made not the faintest impression upon the traditions of the Persian war! The holding of the pass would not have been good strategy on Mardonios' part, nor in accord with his general plan, as given in c. 13 supra. Moreover, as above shown, the fortified camp was not at Skolos, and had it been so, the sight presented to the Greeks, when they took up their quarters at Erythrai, would not have been that described in this chapter. Finally, Erythrai was not included in the Persian lines, cp. notes to c. 15 above.

The position of Erythrai has been determined by G. B. Grundy against Leake, cp. The Great Persian War (1901) pp. 458 ff. It is on the higher ground, above Kriekouki, in the gorge through which issued the direct road from Eleutherai to Thebes: ἐπὶ τῆς ὑπώρεως τοῦ Κισθαιῶνος. The exact site of the town matters little, as the name is here doubtless used for the χώρα, cp. c. 17 supra.

10. ἔμαθόν . . τοὺς β. ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῇ στ.: the whole army would, on arriving at Erythrai, and taking up its position in the Erythraïis, see the Persian encampment below; but of course the generals at least knew what to expect before they sighted it. The building of a huge fortified camp, and the settlement of the Persian lines in front of the Erythraian, Hysian, and (in part) Plataian ὑπώρη, were doubtless reported at Eleusis before the Greek army advanced up the pass. ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῇ would be an appropriate expression whether the camp was all in front of the river, or all behind the river, or partly on one side and partly on the other. The third alternative is to be preferred, but not to the extent of putting the τεῖχος far away to the east, on the S. side of the river, at Skolos. The object of Mardonios was to bring the Greeks down on to the lower ground, and even to draw them across the river; but in the first instance at least he would probably retain at least the lête du pont on the Erythraian side of the bridge.

Stein's text gives an anakoluthon ἔμαθόν τε δὴ . . φρασθέντες δὲ κτλ. which he defends as an Herodoteism, referring to 1. 108 οὕτε . . παρείδεις . . φυλασσόμεθα δέ (instead of τε). 153 ἐπ' οὓς ἐπέχχε τε στρατηγάρειν αὐτός, ἐπὶ δὲ Ἴωνας ἄλλον πέμπειν στρατηγόν. 2. 126 τὴν δὲ τὰ τε . . πρήσσεσθαι ἰδίῃ δὲ κτλ. 3. 38 πολλοῖσι τε . . ἐν δὲ δὴ καὶ τῷδε. 4. 76 μήτε τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλληνικοῖσι δὲ καὶ ἥκιστα. 8. 142 οὕτε γε ἄλλοις . . ὑμῖν δὲ δὴ καὶ διὰ πάντων ἥκιστα.

στοντο ἐπὶ τῆς ὑπώρεως τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος. Μαρδόνιος δέ, ὡς οὐ 20
κατέβαινον οἱ Ἕλληνες ἐς τὸ πεδῖον, πέμπει ἐς αὐτοὺς πᾶσαν τὴν ἵππον, τῆς ἱππάρχεις Μασίστιος εὐδοκιμῶν παρὰ Πέρσῃσι,

12 ὑπώρεϊς codd. z

20. 2 ἐπ' αὐτοὺς Marc. z

3 ἵππαρχε R

12. Κιθαιρώνος: the mighty mountain chain which divides Attica from Boiotia, Parnes being but an eastward extension, while a southern ridge ("Oveia), terminating in the Képara, divided Attica from Megaris; cp. 7. 141 supra and Strabo 380 (the view from the Akrokorinthos), 393 (the "Oveia), 405 (the western end, above the Krisaian gulf, and the continuity of Kithairon, the Megaric and the Attic mountains), 408-9 (the relation of Kithairon to the Asopos and the Parasopia), 411 (Plataia). But after all the identity of Kithairon is sufficiently attested by this very Book.

Hdt. takes the Greek forces over Kithairon in this chapter rather easily. No doubt the main body will have marched by the Eleutherai road; but some may have found their way over by the pass from Megara, cp. c. 13 supra, or even by the Aigosthena route; cp. ibid. The Hellenes are now in 'the first position,' or busily engaged in getting into it (ἀντιτάσσοντο ἐπὶ τῆς ὑπώρεως τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος); but in what order they deploy thereinto, by what manoeuvres the various contingents take up their stations, what their line of battle, or of encampment, opposite the Persian, Hdt. does not describe, or indicate; but presently the Megarians are exposed to the brunt of the cavalry attack: they were therefore perhaps athwart the main road. In the absence of further positive indications we must either (i.) carry back the line of battle, described below for 'the second position,' and make it hold good for the first also; or else (ii.) post the Megarians simply at the head of the marching column, with the Athenians immediately behind them, so naturally coming to their support, while the Peloponnesians bring up the rear of the agmen. Cp. Appendix VIII. § 7.

20. 1. ὡς οὐ κατέβαινον οἱ Ἕλ. ἐς τὸ πεδῖον. Mardonios wished to induce the Greeks to come down from the higher ground about or above Erythrai, and Hysiai, on to the lower ground nearer the Asopos. Later on they did so, with disastrous results to themselves in the first instance.

2. πᾶσαν τὴν ἵππον τῆς ἱππάρχεις Μ., 'all the cavalry commanded by Masistios' is not of necessity all the cavalry in Laager, nor necessarily identical with ἵππος ἡ ἅπασα of c. 17 supra. But it is arguable that Masistios was in fact supreme Hipparch in the corps d'armée of Mardonios, and commanded a myriad of mounted men. In the army of Xerxes there had been three 'hipparchs' (one for each corps d'armée; cp. 7. 88), of whom Masistios was certainly not one. Had the cavalry now on service in Greece under Mardonios been cut down to one-third, and a new hipparch appointed? Or is he one hipparch of two, or three, in the whole forces of Mardonios? Cp. c. 69 infra.

3. Μασίστιος . . τὸν Ἕλληνας Μακίστιον καλέονσι. What Hellenes are these? Stein answers, Greek authors, writers; cp. 1. 7, 216, 2. 16. The sentence, unless athetized as a gloss, is good evidence that Hdt. had some written authorities before him for the history he is writing. But these authors are hardly poets, Simonides, (still less) Choirilos, as Stein suggests, but probably prose writers, such as Dionysios of Miletos, and possibly others; cp. Introduction, § 10.

Α Μασίστιος ὁ Σιρομίτρεω appears 7. 79 as ἀρχων of the Ἀλαρόδιοι and Σάσπειρες. He may be the same man on promotion; but Hdt. is evidently unconscious of any such identity. This was a clear case for a patronymic, but none is forthcoming. Why did Greek authors call him Makistios if his name was Masistios? Was it to distinguish him from the son of Siromitres? Or was it to guard against that very confusion of Μασίστιος with Μακίστης, the full brother of Xerxes and one of the six chief Strategoi, 7. 82 (cp. c. 107 infra), into which Tzetzes actually fell; cp. Wesseling ad l. Or were the Greek authors perhaps right? Oddly enough Μακίστιος was an Eleian ἐθνικόν (cp. Μάκιστον 4. 148), and this Masistios was μάκιστος (as they might say in Elis, and elsewhere, for μήκιστος); his corpse even ἦν θύης ἀξίος μεγάλῃος εἵνεκα c. 25 infra.

τὸν "Ελληνας Μακίστιον καλέουσι, ἵππον ἔχων Νησαῖον 5 χρυσοχάλινον καὶ ἄλλως κεκοσμημένον καλῶς. ἐνθαῦτα ὡς προσήλασαν οἱ ἱππῶται πρὸς τοὺς "Ελληνας, προσέβαλλον κατὰ τέλεα, προσβάλλοντες δὲ κακὰ μεγάλα ἐργάζοντο καὶ
 21 γυναικας σφέας ἀπεκάλεον. κατὰ συντυχίην δὲ Μεγαρέες

4 Μακίστιον  $\approx$  || νισαῖον Marc. 5 καὶ cum τε superse. P: τε καὶ B,
 Holder, van H. 6 τοὺς om. C || προσέβαλον BP 7 προσ-βάλλοντες V: προσβαλόντες

4. ἵππον ἔχων Νησαῖον: riding—
 having under him—a Nesaian horse;
 cp. 7. 40.

5. ἄλλως, even apart from the gold bridle; in fact, 'in all respects.'

6. προσήλασαν . . . προσέβαλλον:
 two distinct manoeuvres are indicated.
 The whole cavalry under Masistios—perhaps a myriad, nominal—advanced together, and then (having halted) delivered a succession of charges κατὰ τέλεα, squadron by squadron, perhaps chiliads, nominal; cp. c. 22 infra.
 These attacks inflicted considerable damage upon the Greek ranks. An ἵππομαχία is quite en règle as a preliminary to hoplite or infantry engagements; cp. c. 49 infra, and 1. 80
 (Sardes 547 B.C.), 5. 63 (Phaleron 512 B.C.), Xenoph. Hell. 3. 4. 22 ff. (Paktolos 395 B.C.), 6. 4. 10 ff. (Leuktra 371 B.C.), Arrian, Anab. 1. 14. 5 ff. (Granikos, 334 B.C.), etc. But at Plataia in 479 B.C.
 the Greeks had no cavalry, and therefore the fighting was not a true ἵππομαχία.

8. γυναικας σφέας ἀπεκάλεον: they added insult to injury by calling them
 'women,' cowards! (for not coming down into the plain); this was the poisoned arrow in a Persian's quiver! cp. c. 107
infra. Had these riders learnt to speak Greek? or just picked up the word wanted? Or did they speak their own language? ἀποκαλέειν 3. 53, 'to recall';
 here 'to reproach'; cp. Plato Gorg.
 512 c, Aristot. Eth. N. 9. 8. 1=1168 b 30, but without dyslogism; ib. 2. 9. 7=
 1109 b 18.

21. 1. κατὰ συντυχίην δὲ Μεγαρέες.
 Hdt. apparently treats the Megarians as occupying a post in line with the rest of the forces, which by this time,
 according to him, are perhaps drawn up,
 or drawing up, along the ὑπωρῆ of Kithairon; but he is not explicit upon the point, and gives no account of the respective positions of the various contingents. ἀντετάσσοντο above may well be an imperfect of the veriest type ('were falling into line,' or 'were taking up positions'). Hdt. first describes the line formation of the Greeks for the second position below, when there is even a dispute over a question of precedence, which must have been settled for the first position, if in the first position the Greeks were in line formation. I therefore suggest that in this first position the Greeks were still in column, emerging down the pass, headed by the Megarians (and Athenians?), who were to hold Erythrai and the roadway, which it commanded, while the remainder of the forces deployed from behind them only or mainly to the left,

 so as to take up positions ἐπὶ τῆς ὑπωρῆς τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος, the Spartans to the right (but cp. 1. 12 infra), the Athenians to the left, towards Hysiai and Plataia.
 This development may or may not have been finally accomplished; meanwhile Mardonios attacks the head of the column as it emerges from the pass.
 (Perhaps, if the Athenians headed the column, they had already deployed on to the ground to the left.) He seems to have struck a little too soon, though not, perhaps, until convinced that the Greeks were not coming down into the plain. How it happened that 'the Megarians,' 3000 strong, were at the head of the column, if that was their position, who can say? Possibly the Lakedaemonian χιλιαι (c. 14 supra) were still with them, though the strongly 'atticizing' tradition forgets them; they may have headed the column from Megara to Eleusis, and so onwards; or they may even have come across Kithairon by the direct route from Megara, and so arrived at the head of the forces, while the Athenians may have led the column from Eleusis by Eleutherai. Of course there was no accident in the matter;
 all had been arranged.

ἐτυχον ταχθέντες τῇ τε ἐπιμαχώτατον ἦν τοῦ χωρίου παντός, καὶ πρόσσδος μάλιστα ταύτῃ ἐγένετο τῇ ἵππῳ. προσβαλλούσης ὧν τῆς ἵππου οἱ Μεγαρέες πιεζόμενοι ἔπεμπον ἐπὶ τοὺς στρατηγούς τῶν Ἑλλήνων κήρυκα, ἀπικόμενος δὲ ὁ 5 κῆρυξ πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἔλεγε τάδε. "Μεγαρέες λέγουσι· ἡμεῖς, ἄνδρες σύμμαχοι, οὐ δυνατοὶ εἶμεν τὴν Περσέων ἵππον δέκεσθαι μούνοι, ἔχοντες στάσιν ταύτην ἐς τὴν ἔστημεν ἀρχήν· ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐς τόδε λιπαρίῃ τε καὶ ἀρετῇ ἀντέχομεν καὶ περ πιεζόμενοι. νῦν τε εἰ μὴ τινας ἄλλους πέμψετε διαδόχους 10 τῆς τάξις, ἵστε ἡμέας ἐκλείψοντας τὴν τάξιν." ὁ μὲν δὴ σφί ταῦτα ἀπήγγελλε, Πausanias δὲ ἀπεπειράτο τῶν Ἑλλήνων

21. 2 τῇ τε Bekker: ἡ τε B: ἡι τὸ αCPz 3 καὶ ἡ B || προσβαλλούσης α: προσβαλοῦσης 6 τάδε. <ᾧδε> Μεγαρέες Schenkl, Holder: ἔλεγε· Τάδε vel ἔλεγε τάδε. Τάδε? van H. 8 στάσιν: aut τάξιν scribend. aut ἐς versu sq. delend. censet van H. || ἐς τὴν: ἐπ' ἦν B 9 ἀντέχομεν Naber 10 πιεζόμενοι B || διαδόχους πέμψετε B 11 τῆς τάξις del. van H. 12 ἀπήγγελλε Cz: ἀπήγγελε V, Marc.

2. τῇ τε ἐπιμαχώτατον . . τῇ ἵππῳ. This description would apply to the roadway running up the pass; of course, even so, the position, τὸ χωρίον, was not as much exposed as 'the second position,' c. 25 infra, and the cavalry could not attack en masse, but only on a narrow front, κατὰ τέλεα: ἐπίμαχος, cp. 1. 84, 6. 133 (in both places of fortifications, liable to assault); πρόσσδος, as in 7. 212, 223.

5. τοὺς στρατηγούς τῶν Ἑλλήνων. Where were they? and were they all together in one place? Are only Pausanias and Euryanax (c. 10 supra) covered by the term? Below, as the result of the message, Pausanias appears in sole authority. The message seems to imply a standpoint for the Strategoi, or Strategos, at some distance, and hardly in sight of the situation, which could hardly have been the case if the Greek lines had been already deployed ἐπὶ τῆς ὑπώρεως. The Megarian message was carried back up the pass; they call for support and relief. μούνοι denies the presence of any other contingent (so the Athenians ignored the presence of the Plataians at Marathon c. 27 infra). ἔχοντες στάσιν . . ἀρχήν suggests an advanced post, or post some time in occupation. στάσις, 'station'; cp. c. 26 infra. ἀρχήν, adv., 'to begin with,' 'in the first instance'; cp. 7. 220, 8. 128.

9. λιπαρίῃ τε καὶ ἀρετῇ: cp. c. 70 infra, a sort of hendiadys; for the verb λιπαρεῖν, perseverare, cp. cc. 45, 111 infra, 8. 144 supra.

ἀντέχειν, resistere, abs., 8. 68.

10. διαδόχους τῆς τάξις, 'to take our post,' to succeed us in our position. ἐκλείπειν τ. τ., cp. 8. 24. In actual battle λιποταξία (-ιον) was a capital crime; and mere failure to serve, λιποστρατία (-ιον), might have serious consequences (cp. 5. 27, Thuc. 1. 99. 1, 6. 76. 3).

12. Πausanias δὲ ἀπεπειράτο. This ἀπόπειρα (cp. 8. 9) τῶν Ἑλλήνων, in which they all prove wanting but the Athenians, is a transparent Atticism. The first brush with the Barbarians is presented as a forlorn hope, calling for valiant volunteers; Thermopylai is forgotten, or only remembered to be eclipsed; instead of sending forward some of his own men, out of his 10,000 hoplites and 40,000 light-armed, Pausanias asks for volunteers; and Athenians, a bare 300, step lightly forward into the breach: it is enough!—300 Athenians save the situation at Erythrai; 300 Spartans at Thermopylai could only die! Probably the Athenians were next to the Megarians, whether in the column or in the line, and were ordered forwards as a matter of course, especially as they had a corps of archers. The Megarians

εἴ τινες ἐθέλοιεν ἄλλοι ἐθελονταὶ ἰέναι τε ἐς τὸν χῶρον
 τοῦτον καὶ τάσσεσθαι διάδοχοι Μεγαρεῦσι. οὐ βουλομένων 15 δὲ τῶν ἄλλων Ἀθηναῖοι ὑπεδέξαντο καὶ Ἀθηναίων οἱ τριηκόσιοι λογάδες, τῶν ἐλοχῆγεε Ὀλυμπιόδωρος ὁ Λάμπωνος.
 22 οὗτοι ἦσαν οἱ τε ὑποδεξάμενοι καὶ οἱ πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων τῶν παρόντων Ἑλλήνων ἐς Ἐρυθρὰς ταχθέντες, τοὺς τοξότας προσελάμενοι. μαχομένων δὲ σφέων ἐπὶ χρόνον τέλος τοιόνδε ἐγένετο τῆς μάχης. προσβαλλούσης τῆς ἵππου κατὰ τέλεα,
 5 ὁ Μασιστίου προέχων τῶν ἄλλων ἵππος βάλλεται τοξέματι

14 μεγαρεῦσι (C) 16 λάμπωνος R 22. 1 ἦσαν ε || τε om. B
 3 προσελάμενοι B 4 ἐγένετο BP: ἐγένετο ἐπὶ αC: ἐγένετο ἐπὶ P<sup>m</sup>,
 Marc. || προσβαλλούσης αC: προσβαλούσης

(with the 1000 Spartans perhaps) presumably remained at their post; even among the Athenians, it was probably not the 300 hoplites but the archers—'perhaps 3000 in number' (Rawlinson)—who kept the Persian cavalry at bay; meanwhile the rest of the Greek column was passing forward, behind Erythrai, westwards towards Hysiai and Plataia, deploying to the left. When this manoeuvre was accomplished, the Athenians, Megarians (and Lakedaemonian Chiliad?) might be on the extreme right of the Greek line, and the Lakedaemonian main body on the extreme left, towards Plataia.

15. ὑπεδέξαντο: sc. ἰέναι τε κτλ.
 οἱ τριηκόσιοι λογάδες: this corps d'élite in the Athenian army is remarkable. At this time Athens had little or no cavalry: does this body constitute the aristocratic nucleus of the later institution? Are they like οἱ καλούμενοι ἱππεῖς at Sparta? (Cp. 8. 124.) These men are plainly hoplites; 30 from each tribe? 10, perhaps, from each Tritty? under a λοχαγός (hardly an Attic term; cp. c. 53 infra).

16. Ὀλυμπιόδωρος ὁ Λάμπωνος: (1) a Samian Lampon meets us in c. 90 infra; (2) a better known Aiginetan in c. 78 infra; (3) the Athenian here named may be conjecturally regarded as the grandfather of Lampon the diviner (Plutarch, Perikl. 6), who was concerned in the foundation of Thurioi (Diodor. 12. 10. 3), figures as author of a rider in the celebrated Eleusinian Decree (C.I.A. iv. 276, Dittenberger<sup>1</sup> No. 13, Michel No. 71), and was something of a butt for the Old Comedy (Aristoph. Bds. 521 Λάμπων δ' ὁμνυσ' ἐτι καὶ νυνὶ τὸν χῆν' ὅταν ἐξαπατᾷ τι): his patronymic is not preserved, but Olympiodoros may have been his father (or his uncle). Of this Olympiodoros (a high-sounding but not uncommon name) nothing further is known. Hdt. might have read or heard of his fame long before joining the colony at Thurioi, and there is nothing in this passage to lead us to postdate its composition. The story is an integral portion of the Attic legend of Plataia.

22. 1. πρὸ in double sense, local and causal, 'in front of,' 'in defence of' (ὕπερ), and almost 'instead of' (ἀντὶ), cp. 7. 152; quite an Athenian formula, cp. c. 27 infra.

τῶν παρόντων is remarkable, and looks rather like a gloss. There is not much point here in a reference to medizing Greeks; and for those on the right side, wherever they were, the Athenians were fighting. If genuine, the words might convey an unconscious hint that the whole army was not yet 'present,' i.e. in position; bearing out the hypothesis above formulated.

2. ἐς Ἐρυθρὰς: not necessarily, or only, the actual town; cp. c. 16 supra.

τοὺς τοξότας προσελάμενοι: these 'Archers' are an important element in the Athenian forces; cp. c. 60 infra. Rawlinson places their number at 'perhaps 3000.' But cp. c. 29 l. 5 infra. It was no doubt they and not the 300 Heavies that proved a match for the Persian cavalry (cp. τοξέματι just below).

5. προέχων: perhaps literally 'in advance of'; cp. προέχοντας τῶν Περσέων 4. 120; prae aliis longius proVectum, Wesseling. But the horse of Masistios was no doubt conspicuous not merely as leading, but as of superior excellence

τὰ πλευρά, ἀλγήσας δὲ ἴσταται τε ὀρθὸς καὶ ἀποσείεται τὸν Μασίστιον· πεσόντι δὲ αὐτῷ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι αὐτίκα ἐπεκέατο. τὸν δὴ ἵππον αὐτοῦ λαμβάνουσι καὶ αὐτὸν ἀμνύμενον κτείνουσι, κατ' ἀρχὰς οὐ δυνάμενοι. ἐνεσκεύαστο γὰρ οὕτω· ἐντὸς θώρηκα εἶχε χρύσειον λεπιδωτόν, κατύπερθε δὲ τοῦ 10 θώρηκος κιθῶνα φοινίκεον ἐνεδεδύκεε· τύπτοντες δὲ ἐς τὸν θώρηκα ἐποίεον οὐδέν, πρὶν γε δὴ μαθῶν τις τὸ ποιούμενον παῖει μιν ἐς τὸν ὀφθαλμόν. οὕτω δὴ ἔπεσέ τε καὶ ἀπέθανε. ταῦτα δὲ κως γινόμενα ἐλελήθεε τοὺς ἄλλους ἰππέας· οὔτε

6 τε om. BPz 7 ἀπεκέατο R 8 τὸν δὴ αC: τόν τε δὴ R, Holder, van H.: τὸν δὲ Pz (τὴν δὲ δὴ) S ap. Gaisford: τὴν τε δὴ V ap. Holder) 9 καταρχὰς Pz || ἐσκεύαστο? van H. || οὕτως B 11 χιτῶνα B || ἐνδεδύκεε B 12 θώρηκα αὐτοῦ z

(προέχειν 1. 1, 56, 2. 136, 3. 82). προέχειν in different senses, c. 4 supra, c. 27 infra. τὰ πλευρά, accus. of reference, or limitation, cp. Index: the plural = 'his side.'

6. ἴσταται τε ὀρθὸς καὶ ἀποσείεται: cp. 7. 88 στὰς ὀρθὸς ἀπεσείεσθαι τὸν Φαρναύχεια (his predecessor!).

8. ἀμνύμενον, an imperfect, 'trying to defend himself.'

9. οὐ δυνάμενοι: sc. κτείνειν μιν. ἐνεσκεύαστο . . οὕτω: the perfect here has no particular temporal force; nor again just below ἐνεδεδύκεε, which looks a little poetic: the action for the state.

οὕτω referring to what follows = ᾧδε: cp. 8. 98. 4, 109. 12 supra.

10. εἶχε, 'he was wearing,' he had on: (1) a scarlet tunic; cp. 7. 61 (φ. 7. 76); (2) underneath, just such a cuirass as is given to all the Persian cavalry (7. 76) except that his was (not plain steel rings but) gilt. Hdt. unfortunately omits to describe his headgear (perhaps his fec fell off, when he slipped from his horse!) The omission has serious consequences, for Plutarch (Ephoros?) Aristeid. 14 invests him with a helmet, and the blow that ends him is dealt through the eye-hole! The cuirass of Masistios was still to be seen among the ἀσθῆματα in the shrine of the Polias, on the Akropolis, in the days of Pausanias, 1. 27. 1. (Its genuineness would be more indubitable if it had not been associated with the ἀκινάκης of Mardonios—the acquisition of which by Athens naturally puzzled Pausanias. He might have been still more puzzled had he remembered that the ἀκινάκης had been stolen in the days of Demosthenes, cp. c. Timocrat. 129; it was then valued at, or 'weighing,' L. & S., 300 darics.) Hdt. shows no sign in this passage of having seen these σκῦλα Μηδικά (Thuc. 2. 13. 4) before writing this passage; which thus appears of early composition.

11. τύπτοντες δὲ . . ἐποίεον οὐδέν, 'their blows on the cuirass were unavailing, till some one perceives the reason (τὸ ποιούμενον) and gives him a prod in the eye.' There is a distinct difference between τύπτειν and παλεῖν, the latter corresponding to the Homeric πλήσσειν (πληγή); cp. J. H. H. Schmidt, Synonymik i. (1879), 283. An exact illustration of this incident is to be found on the slab in the left corner of the frieze, south-side temple of Athene Nike, on the Akropolis; Furtwaengler, Masterpieces, p. 446, Fig. 181.

13. οὕτω δὴ ἔπεσε: he had fallen from his horse once already (πεσόντι supra); this is a fresh and final fall; he must have risen from the ground, and defended himself awhile, till the nameless one smote him in the eye (which eye? Hdt. does not say; and the state of the monument, which he, of course, could not have seen, does not enable us to say for certain: probably the right).

14. ἐλελήθεε: it was all over before any of the Persians discovered it; they saw neither the fall from his horse (πεσόντα), nor the death-wound being dealt; nor when they retired and then turned (ὑποστροφῇ, cp. c. 14 supra) did they perceive what was happening (τὸ γινόμενον); it was only when they halted (ἔστησαν, cp. c. 23 infra ἀποστήσαντες, which supports 1st aor., sc. τοὺς ἵππους)

- 15 γὰρ πετόντα μιν εἶδον ἀπὸ τοῦ ἵππου οὔτε ἀποθνήσκοντα, ἀναχωρήσιός τε γινομένης καὶ ὑποστροφῆς οὐκ ἔμαθον τὸ γινόμενον. ἐπεῖτε δὲ ἔστησαν, αὐτίκα ἐπόθεσαν, ὥς σφεας οὐδεὶς ἦν ὁ τάσσω· μαθόντες δὲ τὸ γεγονός, διακελευσάμενοι ἤλαυνον τοὺς ἵππους πάντες, ὥς ἂν τὸν νεκρὸν ἀνελοῖατο.
- 23 ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι οὐκέτι κατὰ τέλεα προσελαύνοντες τοὺς ἱππέας ἀλλ' ἅμα πάντας, τὴν ἄλλην στρατιὴν ἐπεβώσαντο. ἐν ᾧ δὲ ὁ πεζὸς ἅπας ἐβοήθει, ἐν τούτῳ μάχῃ ὀξεία περὶ τοῦ νεκροῦ γίνεται. ἕως μὲν νυν μούνοι ἦσαν οἱ 5 τριηκόσιοι, ἔσσουντό τε πολλὸν καὶ τὸν νεκρὸν ἀπέλειπον· ὥς δέ σφι τὸ πλήθος ἐπεβοήθησε, οὕτω δὴ οὐκέτι οἱ ἱππότεαι

17 γινόμενον R: γενόμενον Gaisford || ἔστησαν Marc., z 18
τάξων? van H. 19 τὸν γε B, Holder, van H. 23. 2 ἀλλ' ἅμα
B, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἀλλὰ 3 ἐβώθει(ν V) B: ἐπεβώθει van H.
|| ὀξεία codd. z 4 ἐγίνετο B || ἔσαν z 5 ἀπέλειπον z 6 ἐπε-βώθησε van H.

that they missed him at once, when there was no one to dress them; then they perceived what had taken place, and with a shout to encourage each other, they all put spurs to their horses and charged to recover the dead body.

17. ἐπόθεσαν Blakesley regarded as corrupt; cp. ἐπόθησε 3. 36, ἐπιποθήσειν 5. 93, but the variants ἐπόθεσα, ποθέσμαι are admissible; cp. Goodwin Gr. Gr. p. 352, L. & S. sub v.

ὥς σφεας οὐδεὶς ἦν ὁ τάσσω: this might be taken to imply that the cavalry unit commanded by Masistios was a very small one, or a very large one: very small, if there was no officer in command but Masistios; very large, if no provision existed to fill a vacancy in the supreme command. If Masistios was sole Hipparch, or even one of two or three, there must have been many subordinate officers in his division: did none of them pro tempore assume the command?

19. ἤλαυνον of 'riding' is not common in Hdt.; but cp. 5. 111.

ὥς ἂν, like ὅπως ἂν, followed by the optative is frequent in Hdt. (In Homer the opt. with ἵνα and ὅπως is always pure; with ὥς it takes ἂν in a few places "where there is clear reference to a single occasion," Monro, Hom. Gram. § 306.)

23. 1. οὐκέτι κατὰ τέλεα . . ἀλλ' ἅμα πάντας: there is a development in the tactics of the Persian cavalry, not necessarily for the better; it is indeed a result of 'there being no one to order them.' The phrase can hardly mean that the distinction of τέλεα was disregarded, the horsemen charging simply pêle-mêle; but rather that now all the τέλεα charged together. Nor, again, does this involve a more extended formation, or front; they may have charged en masse, almost in column. In any case the description tends to reduce the actual numbers engaged.

2. ἐπεβώσαντο: the Megarians, a while before in somewhat similar straits, had to send a message; the Athenians have only to call, to cry aloud, for support. But to whom do they call? In c. 25 below οἱ Ἕλληνες appear to be given the credit of the victory in the ἱππομαχίῃ, but even there the phrase is not unambiguous, while here it is not made quite clear that τὴν ἄλλην στρατιήν and ὁ πεζὸς ἅπας refer to more than the Athenian forces, which in any case would presumably be nearest at hand. However that may be, there is here distinctly a second tactical moment, or development, in the Greek position, finally culminating in the retirement of the Persian cavalry, leaving the body of Masistios in the hands of the Athenians.

4. ἕως μὲν νυν μούνοι ἦσαν οἱ τριηκόσιοι: if the τεῖοςται can be ignored in this fashion, why not the Megarians, Lakedaemonians, and others? In any case τὸ πλήθος could not come up as one man, and least of all if it means not merely τῶν Ἀθηναίων but τῶν Ἑλλήνων.

ὑπέμενον οὐδὲ σφί ἐξεγένετο τὸν νεκρὸν ἀνελέσθαι, ἀλλὰ πρὸς ἐκείνῳ ἄλλους προσαπόλεσαν τῶν ἵππέων. ἀποστήσαντες ὦν ὅσον τε δύο στάδια ἐβουλεύοντο ὅ τι χρεὸν εἴη ποιεῖν, ἐδόκεε δὲ σφί ἀναρχίης εὐούσης ἀπελαύνειν παρὰ Μαρδόνιον. ἀπικο- 24 μένης δὲ τῆς ἵππου ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον πένθος ἐποιήσαντο Μασιστίου πᾶσά τε ἡ στρατιὴ καὶ Μαρδόσιος μέγιστον, σφέας τε αὐτοὺς κείροντες καὶ τοὺς ἵππους καὶ τὰ ὑποζύγια οἰμωγῇ τε χρεώμενοι ἀπλέτῳ· ἅπασαν γὰρ τὴν Βοιωτὴν κατεῖχε ἡχώ 5

7 ἐπέμενον = 8 προσαπόλεσαν B || τῶν ἵππέων del. van H., Holder || ἀποστάντες Reiske, Cobet, van H. 9 δύο : δέκα ? Krueger || χρεῶν CP., van H. 24. 2 ἐποιήσατο R 5 χρεώμενοι P, van H.

7. ἐξεγένετο : cp. 5. 51.

8. ἀποστήσαντες : they halted (their horses) at a distance ; cp. 5. 51 ἀποστάς 'he retired'—passages which might tempt the inference that even the aor. 1. of ἵστημι came dangerously near being used intransitively. Blakesley regarded this use of ἀποστήσαι as quite 'technical' ; Kuehner, Ausf. Gramm. p. 1069, as simply a case of brachylogy, where a substantive is to be understood 'out of a cognate substantive, or adjective, or adverb, or out of the general context' (aus dem Zusammenhange der Rede) ; cp. also App. Crit. and l. 14 supra.

9. ὅσον τε δύο στάδια, 'about four hundred yards'—say, quarter of a mile ; this halt might leave them still a couple of miles from the tête du pont on the Asopos.

ἐβουλεύοντο : the officers, of course. Each τέλος must have had a leader, to say nothing of dekarches, etc. But as far as Hdt. is concerned the consultation might be conducted by the entire number, rank and file.

ἐδόκεε might surely be ἐδοξε, but cp. c. 5 l. 4 supra.

10. ἀναρχίης εὐούσης : their ἀρχων was gone—they had no commander, for which reason they decided to ride back (ἀπελαύνειν) to headquarters (παρὰ Μαρδόνιον). These statements will have been based rather on the observations and inferences made on the Greek side than on authorities (Greek or other) in the Persian camp (Thersander, for example, c. 16 supra).

24. 2. πένθος ἐποιήσαντο Μασιστίου . . . μέγιστον, 'made a very great mourning for Masistios' ; cp. 2. 1 τῆς . . . Κύρος αὐτὸς τε μέγα πένθος ἐποιήσατο καὶ τοῖσι ἄλλοις προεῖπε πᾶσι τῶν ἡρχε πένθος

ποιέσθαι. Their grief would be increased by their failure to recover the body. It was shown partly by the shaving and hair-cutting of man and beast, and partly by wailing, the sound of which was heard throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Was there anything especially 'barbarous' in this style of mourning (τρόπος ὁ σφέτερος c. 25) ? Just in like manner the Lakonians bewailed the death of a king 6. 58 ; cp. οἰμωγῇ διαχρέωνται ἀπλέτῳ ib. ; though that, indeed, Hdt. regards as Asiatic and barbarous ; cp. also 8. 99 supra, 3. 66. Hair-cutting as a sign of grief Hdt., 2. 36, reports as a custom to which Egypt supplies the only exception. Blakesley quotes Eurip. Alk. 428 to prove that cutting the manes of the horses was a Thessalian practice ; Larcher shows that it was done by Greeks, and it is recorded in the case of the death of Pelopidas (Plutarch Pelop. 33), but perhaps the higher culture tended to discountenance it. Aischylos in the Persai (1055) seems to mark it as 'barbarous,' like Hdt. ; and Alexander Magnus was evidently much censured for the extravagance of his grief and mourning (πένθος) for Hephaestion ; cp. Arrian, Anab. 7. 14. 2. But letting the hair grow abnormally may have much the same significance, though it takes longer to operate ; cp. Suetonius, Julius 67.

5. κατεῖχε ἡχώ. Blakesley rationally understands this to mean merely that wailing was heard wherever troops were posted. That is hardly adequate to the phrase : Boiotia echoed with the sound of lamentation, and mourning and woe. L. & S. is prosier still : 'all Boeotia rang with the news !' (ὥς !)

ὡς ἀνδρὸς ἀπολομένου μετὰ γε Μαρδόνιον λογιμωτάτου παρὰ τε Πέρσησι καὶ βασιλεί.

- 25 Οἱ μὲν νυν βάρβαροι τρώῃ τῷ σφετέρῳ ἀποθανόντα ἐτίμων Μασίστιον· οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες ὡς τὴν ἵππον ἐδέξαντο προσβάλλουσιν καὶ δεξάμενοι ὥσαντο, ἐθάρρησάν τε πολλῶ μᾶλλον καὶ πρῶτα μὲν ἐς ἄμαξαν ἐσθνέντες τὸν νεκρὸν παρὰ

6 γε om. B

7 βασιλεῖ AB

25. 1 ἐτίμων ἀποθανόντα B

3 προσβαλοῦσαν SV: προβαλοῦσαν R || ἐθάρρησάν Pz || τε om. punct. post μᾶλλον pos. B, Holder, van H., alii

4 ἄμαξαν R

6. ὡς ἀνδρὸς . . βασιλεί. That Masistios, son of Siromithres, took precedence of every one save Mardonios (Artabazos, for example) in the king's eyes might support the error of Tzetzes, cp. c. 20 supra; but it is not conceivable that Hdt. should not have known it had Masistios been an Achaimenid, or nearly related to the king. His value to the king is perhaps but an inference from his position in the army and the mourning made for him. It also heightens the Athenian achievement; cp. c. 64 infra.

25. 2. οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες. This sentence appears to give credit to 'the Hellenes' for repulsing the cavalry, i.e. to interpret τὸ πλῆθος, ὁ περὶ ἅπας in c. 23 supra as meaning the whole army. Even if that were the intention of Hdt. the fact would still be disputable: the idea that the whole forces available upon the Greek side were deployed and brought into action before the cavalry skirmish round the body of Masistios was terminated in favour of the Greeks is on the face of it improbable; nor is it easy to understand how such forces could have operated in the given position and locality. But (i.) quod facit per alium facit per se; (ii.) the advantage benefited the Greek side as a whole; (iii.) the Greeks had repulsed the Persian cavalry, even if only the Athenians, the Megarians, and possibly the Lakedaemonian πρόδρομοι were actually engaged in what was an affair of Vorposten, or, at most, of the head of the column, debouching through the pass.

4. πρῶτα μὲν . . παρὰ τὰς τάξεις ἐκόμίζον. This proceeding seems to imply (1) that there was a road along which the wagon was drawn by horses (oxen, or mules); (2) that the Greek army was posted in tactical array of some kind. Only one of two roads can well be in question: (a) the road from Erythrai past Hysiai to Plataia; (b) the road up the Pass to Eleutherai, etc. If the Greek army was already in extended formation, in lines running east and west, as is apparently assumed by Plutarch, Aristeid. 11 ad init., and universally assumed for 'the first position' by modern authorities, the Megarians and Athenians would apparently occupy the extreme right wing, and the rest of the army would be to the left of them towards Hysiai and Plataia; or else the Athenians are already on the left wing, the rest of the forces having debouched to the right of them. Two considerations appear to me to favour the former supposition:—(i.) Had the Athenians already been in occupation of the left wing, the question so hotly disputed in the next chapter could hardly have arisen at that point. (ii.) Strategically and tactically the debouchure of the army towards the west is the natural one. If Erythrai was at the foot, or near the foot of the pass, the Greek van would seize on that position, and hold it, while the rest of the army moved from behind out of the pass. There is hardly room for such a development towards the east side, where the pass is flanked by the great mass of rock named by Dr. Grundy 'The High Bastions'; moreover, such a movement would have thrown the Greek front away to the east of the Persian encampment, down stream, exposing them to be outflanked (on their left) by the Persian cavalry. Again, the development of the Greek first position westwards accords with the subsequent movement reported in this chapter, and also places the rear of the column, when developed, in front of the two other roads, or passes, crossing Kithairon (to Eleutherai and to τὰς τάξεις ἐκόμιζον· ὁ δὲ νεκρὸς ἦν θέης ἄξιος μεγάλθεος εἵνεκα<sup>5</sup> καὶ κάλλεος, τῶν δὴ εἵνεκα καὶ ταῦτα ἐποίουν· ἐκλείποντες τὰς τάξεις ἐφοίτων θεησόμενοι Μασίστιον. μετὰ δὲ ἔδοξε σφι

5 τάξεις C || ἐκομίζοντο B || ἦν z || μεγάλθεός τε coni. Stein, adm.
van H. 6 τῶν δὴ Krueger, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: τῶν δὲ codd.,
Stein<sup>1</sup>: τῶνδε z || ταῦτα ἐποίουν· del. Krueger, van H. (ἐποίουν PRS)
|| ἐκλείποντες B, van H. 7 τάξεις BC || ἐφοίτεον B, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.:
καὶ ἐφοίτων z

Megara). Finally, as, upon the above supposition, the Lakedaimonians in the first position come to stand on the extreme left, and the Athenians on the right, not only is there some excuse for the controversy in the next chapter, when the army moves down-hill to 'the second position,' but also a clue is perhaps found to the real or recorded exchange of positions between the Athenians and the Lakedaimonians in the second position (cc. 46, 47 infra), though for that exchange, or supposed exchange, other fair explanations may also be forthcoming. It is possible, then, that the body of Masistios was conveyed upon a wagon along the road running from Erythrai towards Plataia, no doubt mostly behind the Greek lines, as finally developed in 'the first position.' It is also, however, possible that the wagon was taken simply up the road through the pass to the rear, the sight of it mightily encouraging the rear ranks of the column, which had not yet fully emerged on to the ὑπωρῆ. What the ultimate destination of the wagon, or what became of the corpse, Hdt. unfortunately does not inform us; presumably he did not know. The θώρηξ found its way to Athens; cp. c. 22 supra.

5. ὁ δὲ νεκρὸς ἦν θέης ἄξιος. Hdt. writes as though he had seen it; but of course he had not. Tall and comely as the corpse was, Masistios does not seem to have been 'heroized' like Artachaies at Akanthos, 7. 117, or Philip of Kroton at Segesta, 5. 47. Cp. c. 20 supra. Hdt. also omits to specify what became of his noble Nesaian charger: was he led to his master's grave, and perhaps sacrificed thereon? Or did he escape with the squadron, after his master's fall? Or die of his wound on the field?

6. ταῦτα ἐποίουν. The difficulty may be surmounted (a) by deleting ταῦτα ἐποίουν with Krüger; (b) by bracketing ἐκλείποντες . . . Μασίστιον as a gloss; (c) by understanding, with Stein, ταῦτα=τάδε. Cp. οὕτω=ὥδε c. 22 supra.

7. ἔδοξε σφι ἐπικαταβῆναι ἐς Πλαταιάς: this is a formal decision of the council of war, cp. c. 51 infra, or of the commander-in-chief. That it was taken at this moment may not be strictly correct. Hdt. does not say for how long the Greeks occupied 'the first position,' whether for days, or only for hours. The process by which the advance was effected may have been as follows:—The Megarians (or perhaps οἱ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας κτλ., cp. c. 69) had seized and occupied Erythrai, until relieved by the Athenians, who in their turn have been supported by more and more of the forces, until ὁ πεζὸς ἄσας has gradually arrived on the scene. The Athenians and Megarians may have moved out of Erythrai, westwards towards Hysiai first, and then beyond, Erythrai being occupied in succession by the various contingents, without further fighting, and the position being constantly developed westwards, until finally the Athenians and Megarians have pushed along the ὑπωρῆ far enough to the west to allow of the Lakedaimonians in the rear occupying Erythrai on the extreme right of the position. If this was the process, then the question of precedence between the Athenians and Tegeatai was virtually settled beforehand. But it seems more probable that, as above suggested, the head of the column, composed of the Megarians (and the Spartan Chilaii?) supported by the Athenians continued to hold Erythrai, while the rest of the army deployed behind Erythrai to the west, along the high ground, in front of Hysiai and towards Plataia. This movement would be facilitated by the ἐπικαταβῆναι ἐς Πλαταιάς· ὁ γὰρ χώρος ἐφαίνετο πολλῷ ἐὼν ἐπιτηδεύτερός σφι ἐνστρατοπεδεύεσθαι ὁ Πλαταικὸς τοῦ Ἐρυ-10 θραίου τά τε ἄλλα καὶ εὐνδρότερος. ἐς τοῦτον δὴ τὸν χώρον καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν κρήνην τὴν Γαργαφίην τὴν ἐν τῷ χώρῳ τούτῳ εἶδον ἔδοξε σφι χρὸν εἶναι ἀπικέσθαι καὶ διαταχθέντας στρατοπεδεύεσθαι. ἀναλαβόντες δὲ τὰ ὅπλα ἤσαν διὰ τῆς ὑπάρους τοῦ Κιθαιρῶνος παρὰ Ὑσιὰς ἐς τὴν Πλαταιίδα γῆν,

9 ἐπιτηδεύτερος CPz, van H. || πλαταικὸς α 10 εὐνδρότερος <έων>
Krueger 12 χρὸν Pz, van H. 14 ὑπάρους V: ὑπώρεις || περὶ ε
|| ὑσιὰς R

existence of the roads from Erythrai to Plataia, and from Dryoskephalai to Plataia.

8. ἐπικαταβῆναι gives two characteristics of the movement: (a) it was down-hill, from higher to lower ground; (b) it was a forward, or offensive movement; cp. 8. 38. ἐς Πλαταιάς gives a third: (c) it was into Plataian territory (cp. c. 16 supra). This might involve not merely a northerly, but a north-westerly direction; that it was not due west, or on to Plataia itself, or its ruins, is abundantly clear both from the immediately ensuing topography, and from the subsequent narrative (cp. c. 52 infra).

ὁ γὰρ χώρος κτλ. The reasons given for the move are admittedly incomplete (τά τε ἄλλα καί); the only one emphasized is the water supply, no doubt a reason of supreme importance, especially with a view to encamping (ἐνστρατοπεδεύεσθαι), less important, however, with a view to pure fighting (ἐμμάχεσθαι c. 7 supra) which must have been under consideration. If the Greeks did not want to provoke a battle they would have remained in their first position, or moved at once to the 'Island' (c. 51 infra). The fact that the battle was not finally fought exactly in the second position has, perhaps, led to the 'offensive' or at least provocative character of this forward movement being ignored. Any one could appreciate the reason given, which was manifest to the merest tiro (ἐφαίνετο ἐών). τὴν Γαργαφίην, see below.

12. διαταχθέντας στρατοπεδεύεσθαι: before the new position was occupied, before the Laager there was formed, and presumably either in the first position itself, or in the process of moving from the first position to the second, a διάταξις was to be effected, i.e. the existing arrangement and order of the τάξις was to be modified, or at any rate the army was to be put in battle-array; it had not therefore previously been in battle-array, but in marching order, or at least not in the order of battle approved by the commanders. (Cp. 8. 70 παρεκρίθησαν διαταχθέντες, of the movement of the Persian fleet into line of battle; διέτασσε 6. 107, ὡς δὲ σφι διετάκτο 6. 112 αἰεὶ ὀρίναται; cp. also 1. 80 ὡς δὲ οἱ πάντες διετάκχατο with the context.) But perhaps Hdt. is getting a little out of his depth here; the Greeks can hardly have intended to encamp for any length of time on the advanced position 'on the Asopos.'

13. ἀναλαβόντες δὲ τὰ ὅπλα: cp. cc. 53, 57 infra. The heavy arms (shields, etc.) were piled for the halt, or in camp, and 'taken up' again before moving. The army had probably bivouacked at least one night in the position at Erythrai —though Hdt. does not actually say so.

ἤσαν διὰ τῆς ὑπάρους τοῦ Κιθαιρῶνος: nothing in these words proves this a down-hill march; that idea must be borrowed from the ἐπικαταβῆναι above, and from the real topography or chorography; otherwise the words might describe the movement of a column direct on Plataia, or of a series of contingents extending themselves en échelon in that direction.

14. παρὰ Ὑσιὰς. Strabo 404 ἐνταῦθα δὲ τὰς Ὑσιὰς Τρίτην λέγεσθαι φασί, τῆς Παρασωπίας οὖσαν ὑπὸ τῷ Κιθαιρῶνι πλησίον Ἐρυθρῶν ἐν τῇ μεσσηνίᾳ. It was 'a little to the right' of the road from Eleutherai to Plataiai; Pausan. 9. 2. 1. There was a road running from Thebes to Eleutherai via Hysiai (or rather via Erythrai?), Pausan. 9. 1. 6, by which the Thebans circumvented the Plataians in 373 B.C. The position of Hysiai was plainly west of Erythrai and east of Plataia; cp. c. 15 supra ad f.; but whether Hysiai was higher up hill, or on lower ground than Erythrai, is not so evident. Tradition (cp. G. B. Grundy, G.P.W. p. 464) identifies the site with that of the existing village of Kriekouki: Dr. Grundy himself places it outside the area of the existing village, and higher up the hill to the south. I think it probable that just as Erythrai commanded the Dryoskephalai Pass, and the direct road from Thebes to Eleutherai-Eleusis-Athens, so Hysiai commanded the loop-road from Plataia which struck into the main road behind the ridge, by a second pass; while Plataia itself might be taken to command the third road and pass across the ridge of Kithairon, that leading direct to Megara. These three passes cross the ridge at intervals of about a mile (roughly); but Plataia lay somewhat further in advance (and to the west) of Pass III. than Hysiai and Erythrai of Passes II. and I. respectively.

ἀπικόμενοι δὲ ἐτάσσοντο κατὰ ἔθνεα πλησίον τῆς τε κρήνης 15

ἐς τὴν Πλαταιίδα γῆν. The territory of Plataia extended northwards right down to the Asopos (cp. c. 15 supra); how far it extended eastwards is not so clear. Hysiai (Strabo 404) and Erythrai (Strabo 409) were both in the Παλαστωρία, and their territories (whether independent or not) reached down to the river-course. It may be conjectured that the whole water-system of the Oëroë (c. 51 infra) belonged to Plataia, while lower down, and to the north, stream A. 4 among the tributaries of the Asopos, descending from Kithairon, may have formed a boundary between the Παλαίς and the Τοιαίς. This would place Gargaphia, on every theory, within the Platais, as also the Heroon of Androkrate; it would leave the Demetrium (c. 62 infra) and the 'Long Ridge' in the Hysiais. The boundary between the territory of Hysiai and that of Erythrai might perhaps be found in the considerable stream A. 6 which Dr. Grundy conjecturally identifies with the Moloeis (c. 57 infra). This identification would suit the position suggested above, on the Plataia-Athens pass, for the site of Hysiai very well, and would lead to the inclusion of the Argiopeion (c. 57 infra) in the territory of Hysiai.

15. ἀπικόμενοι δὲ ἐτάσσοντο κατὰ ἔθνεα. This assertion generates two difficulties. (1) Were not the Greeks already τεταγμένοι κατ' ἔθνεα? Most certainly, the various τάξεις, the various contingents in the first position, Megarians, Athenians, etc., were 'ethnic.' (2) Did the Greeks all arrive at the new position and then proceed to the διάταξις? Such an operation is practically incredible. The order in which the ethnic τάξεις should stand, or laager, in the new (i.e. 'second,' or more strictly third) position must have been determined, in the main, before the position was occupied; the Greeks could neither have arrived there in a confused mass, with all the various ἔθνη indiscriminately mixed up, as though the proceeding were a pêle-mêle fight, not a forward movement in the face of the enemy; nor, again, could the various ethnic contingents, each in itself compact, have advanced and taken up a station at random round the fountain of Gargaphia. Whatever the order in which the Greeks had bivouacked in the first position, by Erythrai (or in the second position, west thereof), the order of battle, and the order of the stations in the Asopos position, must have been decided before the forces moved forward to occupy it. But if, as above suggested, the Athenians, in the final development of the first position, occupied the extreme right, at Erythrai, while the Tegeatai were on the left, next the Spartans, there might be a question whether, when the Spartans moved forward to the right, the Tegeatai should follow them, or simply move forward into position so as to form the extreme left of the Greek line in 'the second (i.e. third) position.'

πλησίον τῆς τε κρήνης τῆς Γαργαφίης: the position and identity of Gargaphia have been disputed.

(i.) It was identified by Squire (ap. Walpole, Memoirs, 338 ff.) and by Clarke (Travels, ii. 3, p. 83) with the spring now called Vergutiani. Blakesley unfortunately acquiesced in this identification, which is quite hopeless, Vergutiani being high up on the ὕψις, and belonging to the water-system of the Oëroë. (The apparent 'second' position of the Greeks is described below, c. 30, as ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ. Perhaps in the true second position Vergutiani was within, or just behind, their lines.)

(ii.) Leake (N.G. ii. 332, 343) and Vischer (Erinnerungen, p. 549) accept the traditional identification of Gargaphia with a spring now known as Apotripi, τῆς Γαργαφίης καὶ τοῦ τεμένεος τοῦ Ἀνδροκράτεος τοῦ ἥρωος, διὰ ὄχθων τε οὐκ ὑψηλῶν καὶ ἀπέδου χάρου.

17 δι' PR<sup>z</sup> || χωρίου CP<sup>z</sup>, Gaisford, alii

just north of and below the (ruined) Church of St. John on the 'Asopos Ridge': the head-waters in fact of stream A. 1 in G. B. Grundy's Maps. This identification is prima facie valid.

(iii.) Grote (followed by Rawlinson and Stein) regarded Gargaphia as non-existent at the present day, or, what comes to the same thing, unidentifiable. Grote unfortunately never visited the scenes with which his great work is concerned. No one who has actually seen the battle-field of Plataia, or considered its problems in loco, will easily acquiesce in this non possumus.

(iv.) Dr. G. B. Grundy identifies the spring of Gargaphia with an extant spring some three-quarters of a mile, or less, east (slightly by north) of Apotripi, and virtually in the same hollow ground, or trough, as Apotripi, surrounding the Asopos Ridge. This spring is one of the head-waters of the stream A. 4 forming the east boundary of the Asopos Ridge, and possibly, as above suggested, the frontier between the Plataeis and the Hysiaiis. Not much is gained by this shift of Gargaphia one-half to three-quarters of a mile eastward: as a matter of fact both springs in question will have been within the Greek lines; but Dr. Grundy's suggestion tends to put the spring on the extreme right of the Greek army, which might appear an advantage, especially to those who take Gargaphia and the Androkrateion as making two termini; see next note.

Hdt. himself makes Gargaphia 10 stades from the Island, c. 51 infra, and 20 stades from the Heraion, c. 52 infra. These measurements are obviously mere round numbers, and of very little value except as making (i.) supra more than ever impossible. The distance to the 'Island' (as identified by Dr. Grundy) would suit either spring; the distance to the Heraion (whatever its exact site) is in either case an over-estimate. If the Island had been where Leake and Vischer put it, the distance would have suited Apotripi better than the alternative.

(v.) Goettling, Gesam. Abh. p. 136, identified Gargaphia with a spring near Plataia: the same objections are fatal to this proposal as to (i.). The name Gar-

gaphia = Platanisti, 'Poplar-well.' γάρφα = αργειρος, Hesych. γάρκα, 'Macedonian,' a rod, ib. We may suppose the well-head shaded with a grove of poplars, or plane-trees.

16. τοῦ τεμένεος τοῦ Ἀνδροκράτεος τοῦ ἥρωος. Thuc. 3. 24. 1 places τὸ τοῦ Ἀνδροκράτους ἥρων on the right of the direct road from Plataia to Thebes; cp. Plutarch, Aristeid. 11 αὐτοῦ δ' ἦν καὶ τὸ τοῦ Ἀνδροκράτους ἥρων ἐγγὺς ὁδοῦ πυκνῶν καὶ συσκιῶν δένδρων περιεχόμενον. These, with Hdt., are the only authorities on the exact site, and they leave much to be desired. αὐτοῦ in Plutarch does not mean (pace Rawlinson) ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ but simply ἐν τῇ Πλαταίδι. As far as Thucydides goes, the Heroon is anywhere, within reach, on the right of the road from Plataia to Thebes. There is no evidence that Thucydides himself ever visited Plataia, and the '5 or 6 stades' mentioned in the context need not be used to prejudice the position of the Hero's house. Little is known of Androkrates, but he was plainly the greatest of the local Heroes of Plataia, of the ἀρχηγέται Πλαταίων, seven in number, mentioned in the 'oracle' ap. Plutarch, Aristeid. 11; cp. Rohde, Psyche (1890) p. 161. A conspicuous site may be posited for his Heroon. If such a site is forthcoming, and fits in well with 'the second (i.e. third) position' of the Greeks before Plataia in 479 B.C., it cannot be sacrificed to an obiter dictum in Thucydides. I have therefore no hesitation in accepting the Church of St. John (first proposed by W. J. Woodhouse, J.H.S. xviii. (1898) 38 ff.) as marking the Androkrateion as surely as the Church of St. Demetrios on the neighbouring ridge to the east marks one of the temples of Eleusinian Demeter (as proposed by Dr. Grundy; cp. c. 57 infra).

There is nothing to show that Hdt. in this passage conceived Gargaphia as marking the extreme right of the Greek position, and the Androkrateion as marking the extreme left, a point on which Rawlinson rightly demurs to Grote. The Church of St. John occupies the lower of two summits (300 and 360 ft. respectively above the Asopos Bridge)

Ἐνθαῦτα ἐν τῇ διατάξει ἐγένετο λόγων πολλῶν ὠθισμὸς 26
Τεγεατῶν τε καὶ Ἀθηναίων· ἐδικαίουν γὰρ αὐτοὶ ἑκάτεροι
ἔχειν τὸ ἕτερον κέρας, καὶ καινὰ καὶ παλαιὰ παραφέροντες

26. 1 διατάξει Pz: διατάξει || πολλὰς B, Holder, van H. 2
ἐδικαίουν α, van H. || αὐτῶν z

which are both alike comprised in the 'Asopos Ridge.' The Greeks, now offering battle, will have occupied both these summits, directly in advance of the two springs, or well-heads, (ii.) and (iv.) above, which dispute the name Gargaphia, and both sources will have been used by the troops: Dr. Grundy's Gargaphia by the right wing, Apotripi by the centre, while the Athenians and left wing may have had to draw from the stream A. 1 (not wholly dependent on Apotripi for its water). This position suits the description διὰ δὲ ὄχθων τε οὐκ ὑψηλῶν καὶ ἀπέδου χώρου. It was an ἀπέδου χώρος though not a πεδῖον. Dr. Grundy places the Greeks to the south, just above the trough between streams A. 1 and A. 4 and with the wells in front of them.

26. 1. Ἐνθαῦτα ἐν τῇ διατάξει. If Hdt. means that the dispute between the Tegeatans and Athenians took place in the Asopos position, and before the forces are disposed in position, he means what is manifestly absurd. What then does he suppose the order to have been in the previous position? Hdt. has not concerned himself to realize the conditions of his own story; but the story, however fantastic, doubtless has some ground in actual occurrences. Some time or other, at some place or other, it was discussed and decided what the order of battle should be on the Greek side. In Attica the Athenians might conceivably have claimed the post of honour on the right wing, though such a claim had hardly been consistent with the Hegemonia of the Spartans; but it appears that the Athenians with the Megarians actually formed the head of the marching column (agmen) from Eleusis to Erythrai. In a Spartan army the king commanded from the centre; cp. Thuc. 5. 72. 4 (but Kleombrotos apparently commanded the right wing at Leuktra, Plutarch, Pelop. 23). It is conceivable that the question of the exact order of battle was not fully resolved before the Greeks reached Erythrai; or, again, that the turn taken by the 'Hippomachy' and the development of the first Greek position, brought about an order and a situation which had not been distinctly foreseen. The Greek ethnic contingents must have extended along the ὑπωρέη in some definite order, whether the Athenians were then on the extreme left or on the extreme right. In the latter case the manœuvre described below in c. 46 may have taken place, or have been anticipated, and so brought the Athenians on to the left wing, the Lakedaimonians on to the right; or this result may have been obtained by an advance en échelon down the ὑπωρέη and on to the Asopos Ridge. If (as appears to me less probable) the Athenians had evacuated Erythrai and moved to the left, along the ὑπωρέη, making room for the remainder of the marching column to form up in line, the Lakedaimonians being on the extreme right; then, this order had probably been already decided on, and it was too late for the Tegeatai to enter a claim; but the story of the dispute may come to have been associated with the transition from the agmen to the acies, and that transition itself to be confounded with the advance on to the Asopos. Hdt., for whom the problem of the conversion of the marching column, or columns, into the fighting line simply does not exist, has placed the record as an appendix to a description of the (second) position, in which the disposition of the forces in fighting array, in actual line of battle, was effected, or made effective.

λόγων πολλῶν ὠθισμὸς: cp. 8. 78.

2. Τεγεατῶν τε καὶ Ἀθηναίων: 500 Tegeatai had been in the army of Leonidas, 7. 202; there are 1500 present on this occasion. (The city has been mentioned 7. 170, but in a passage of later composition.)

ἐδικαίουν: cp. 8. 126.

αὐτοὶ ἑκάτεροι: Baehr cps. 3. 82 αὐτὸς γὰρ ἕκαστος κτλ., 5. 13 αὐτὰ ἕκαστα (v.l. ταῦτα). For the plural cp. 7. 1. 7.

3. ἔχειν τὸ ἕτερον κέρας: a strong ἔχειν. Rawlinson's translation is right, 'one of the wings,' following Schweighaeuser, who refuted Valckenaer's interpretation of the term as a euphemism

ἔργα. τοῦτο μὲν οἱ Τεγεῆται ἔλεγον τάδε: " ἡμεῖς αἰεὶ κοτε 5 ἀξιεύμεθα ταύτης τῆς τάξις ἐκ τῶν συμμαχῶν ἀπάντων, ὅσαι ἤδη ἔξοδοι κοινὰ ἐγένοντο Πελοποννησίοισι καὶ τὸ παλαιὸν καὶ τὸ νέον, ἐξ ἐκείνου τοῦ χρόνου ἐπεῖτε Ἡρακλεῖδαι ἐπειρώντο

4 αἰί B, Holder 5 τάξις . . ἐγένοντο om. R: στάσις z 6
ἔξοδοι ἤδη α || πάλαι B, van H. 7 ἐπεὶ Paris. 1635 z || ἐπειρώντο
van H.

for sinistrum cornu; cp. infra: ὁκοτέρου βούλεσθε κέρως ἀρχειν παρέμεν. The Lakedaimonians were, of course, sure to take the right.

παράφέροντες: used literally, of more material arguments, 3. 130 μάστιγας τε καὶ κέντρα παραφέρειν ἐς τὸ μέσον.

4. τοῦτο μὲν has here no τοῦτο δέ following, but the antithesis is supplied in more extended terms at the beginning of the next chapter.

6. ἔξοδοι κοινὰ: i.e. 'expeditions of the confederacy'; cp. c. 11 supra; this,
which is the antecedent, has been placed within the relative clause, and then attracted into the same case as ὅσαι.

καὶ . . καὶ: the strong co-ordination occurs three times in this c., ll. 3, 25.

7. τὸ νέον, more usual without the article; cp. τὰ νεώτερα 6. 35.

Ἡρακλεῖδαι ἐπειρώντο . . κατιόντες.

'The sons of Herakles attempted to effect their return from exile . . ' πειρᾶσθαι
with participle, as 7. 139. 7 supra.
Hdt., by the mouth of the Tegeatai, here makes reference to the all-important legend of the Expulsion, or Banishment, and Return of the Herakleids (ἡ καθόδοις τῶν Ἡρακλεῖδων), the sobriquet in the fifth century, as this passage among others proves, for the Dorian Conquest.
One important chapter in the story of 'the Restoration' Hdt. elsewhere (6. 55) declines to narrate, on the ground that it has already been put on record by other writers. That reason has not operated with him here to preclude his telling the story of the duel between Hyllos and Echemos, and the failure of the first attempt of the 'exiles' to return. (Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.)

The antecedents of the story of the Duel are supplied in part by the speech of the Athenians in c. 27, in part by Thucyd.
1. 9. 2 (cp. Apollod. Biblioth. 2. 8).
The story was that the 'Herakleids' or 'Perseids,' as they were in the last resort (cp. 6. 53), had been deposed by the 'Pelopids' (the Egyptian by the Asiatic!), Eurystheus, himself a Perseid, having first expelled the Herakleids and then perished in Attica, warring against them, leaving Atreus (the Pelopid) in possession at Mykenai.

To this 'sytte' succeeds the Duel of Hyllos and the 'Arkadian' king recorded in this place by Hdt. Thereafter for three generations, a century, the Hera-kleids abandon the attempt to 'return,' until, as leaders of the Dorians, and led by the one-eyed Ait-ian Oxylos, they cross from Naupaktos, and effect the conquests of the three great districts, Argolis, Laconia, Messenia.

The subjection of Herakles to Eurystheus appears in Homer (Il. 15. 639 f.), where the Hero is despatched to Hell to fetch the Hound (Il. 8. 363 ff., Od. 11.
617-627). Herakles also figures as the enemy of the Neleids (Il. 11. 689 ff.).
Is this a Dorian Herakles? The Iliad
of course will know nothing of Dorians as such. How old the 'Herakleid' legend is one can hardly say; Tyrtaios, Fr. 2, in which it appears (though not explicitly as a 'Return'), even if genuine, is not older than the middle of the seventh century B.C. The expedition of Eurystheus into Attica against Hyllos and the Herakleids was narrated by Hekataios, cp. Longinus 27. 2 (ed.<sup>2</sup> Vahlen p. 41) and Pherekydes (Anton.
Lib. Metam. c. 33, Mythogr. Gr. ed.
Westermann p. 230). Cp. Diodor. 4. 38.
Such elder writers as these are covered by Thucydides' remarkable phrase: οἱ τὰ σαφέστατα Πελοποννησίων μῆμ'η παρὰ τῶν πρότερον δεδεγμένοι i.e. Before Hdt.
wrote this passage there was undoubtedly a rich prose literature on Herakles and the Herakleids, to say nothing of the poetic development attested by Hesiod, Pindar, and the dramatists; and in regard to Hdt. it is especially to be remembered that his uncle Panyasis had composed an epic on Herakles in 9000 verses; Suidas s.v. Ἡρακλῆας. Cp.
Introduction, § 10.

μετὰ τὸν Εὐρυσθέος θάνατον κατιόντες ἐς Πελοπόννησον· τότε εὐρόμεθα τοῦτο διὰ πρῆγμα τοιόνδε. ἐπεὶ μετὰ Ἀχαιῶν καὶ Ἰώνων τῶν τότε ἔοντων ἐν Πελοποννήσῳ ἐκβοηθήσαντες ἐς 10
 τὸν Ἰσθμὸν ἰζόμεθα ἀντίοι τοῖσι κατιούσι, τότε ὦν λόγος
 "Ἄλλον ἀγορεύσασθαι ὡς χρὲν εἴη τὸν μὲν στρατὸν τῷ στρατῷ μὴ ἀνακινδυνεύειν συμβάλλοντα, ἐκ δὲ τοῦ Πελοποννησίου στρατοπέδου τὸν ἂν σφέων αὐτῶν κρίνωσι εἶναι 15
 ἄριστον, τοῦτόν οἱ μουννομαχῆσαι ἐπὶ διακειμένοισι. ἔδοξέ τε τοῖσι Πελοποννησίοισι ταῦτα εἶναι ποιητέα καὶ ἔταμον ὄρκιον ἐπὶ λόγῳ τοιῷδε, ἦν μὲν "Ἄλλος νικήσῃ τὸν Πελοποννησίον ἡγεμόνα, κατιέναι Ἡρακλείδας ἐπὶ τὰ πατρώια, ἦν δὲ νικηθῇ, τὰ ἔμπαλιν Ἡρακλείδας ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι καὶ ἀπάγειν τὴν στρατιήν, ἑκατόν τε ἐτέων μὴ ζητῆσαι κάτοδον ἐς Πελο- 20

8 μετ' ὅρῳ || εὐρυσθένης S, Marc. 9 ἐπεῖτε? van H. 10
 πελοποννήσω B ap. Holder || ἐκβοηθήσαντες van H. 11 ἀντίον B
 12 ἀγορήσασθαι C, Grashof, van H. || χρὲν CPz, van H. 13 συμβαλοντα (sic) α 14 ἂν σφῶν Δz || αὐτέων z || εἶναι om. P 16 ὄρκια BC, Schaefer 17 τῶν S 18 ἐπὶ . . Ἡρακλείδας om. B
 || πατρώια AB: πατρώα C: πατρώα z

9. εὐρόμεθα: cp. c. 6 supra, and 3. 143 εὐρήσεται τιμωρίην—neither passage, however, is quite exactly parallel with this, ἀλεωρή, τιμωρίη, being more concrete than τοῦτο. Cp. l. 24 infra.

μετὰ Ἀχαιῶν. Hdt. fully shares the fifth-century theory that the Achaeans were to be found in the Peloponnesos long before the Dorians; cp. 8. 73.

10. Ἰώνων τῶν τότε ἔοντων ἐν Πελοποννήσῳ: cp. 8. 73; most of the Ionians were supposed to have migrated into Asia via Athens, cp. l. 145. (Blakesley's idea that the Megarians are here intended is unfortunate.)

ἐς τὸν Ἰσθμόν: the scene is laid by Pausanias also (l. 44. 10 ad f.) on the frontiers of Korinthia and Megaris.

12. Ἄλλον: the son of Herakles, cp. 7. 204, as here 'goes without saying.'

ἀγορεύσασθαι: a unique instance of the middle use in this verb; edicensium curasse, Baehr; but cp. App. Crit.

14. στρατοπέδου = στρατιᾶς, στρατοῦ.

15. μουννομαχῆσαι, to engage in a μονομαχία, or 'single combat'; cp. 5. 1, 7. 104; in c. 27 infra the word is used in a somewhat different sense (if the reading is correct).

ἐπὶ διακειμένοισι: cp. ἐπὶ λόγῳ τοιῷδε just below; συγκειμένοισι would be more in accord with usage; cp. 3. 58, c.

52 infra, etc. Hesiod, Scut. Her. 20 ὡς γὰρ οἱ δέκετο θεοὶ δ' ἐπιμάρτυροι ἦσαν.

ἔδοξε: a decision, decree.

16. ἔταμον ὄρκιον: ὄρκιον is properly the neut. adj.; cp. L. & S., 'to slay the sacrificial animal for the treaty' = 'to make a solemn agreement.' So ὄρκιον, ὄρκια come to stand for the treaty itself, in such phrases as ὄρκιον ποιῆσθαι l. 141, etc. μένειν τὸ ὄρκιον κατὰ χώραν in immediate juxtaposition with τάμνοντες ὄρκια 4. 201.

17. τὸν Πελοποννησίον ἡγεμόνα turns out to be not Atreus but the Arkadian king Echemos! The term 'Peloponnesian' in any case involves no anachronism: ex hypothesi the Pelopids are in possession and the name of Pelops given to the peninsula, cp. Thuc. l.c.

18. τὰ πατρώια, sc. γέρεα.

19. τὰ ἔμπαλιν: l. 207 ἔχω γνώμην . . . τὰ ἔμπαλιν ἢ οὐτοι, c. 56 infra Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ . . . ἤσαν τὰ ἔμπαλιν ἢ Λακεδαιμόνιοι, seem to show that Schweighaeuser's e contrario, vicissim, is right (Stein takes it here = oppose with ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι—which is strong enough in itself: the position also favours the former rendering).

20. ἑκατόν τε ἐτέων: i.e. three generations, 2. 142, cp. 7. 171 (Hyllos)—(1) Kleodaios; (2) Aristomachos; (3) his

πόννησον. προεκρίθη τε δὴ ἐκ πάντων τῶν συμμάχων ἐθελοντῆς Ἐχεμος ὁ Ἡερόπου τοῦ Κηφέος στρατηγός τε ἐὼν καὶ βασιλεὺς ἡμέτερος, καὶ ἐμονομάχησέ τε καὶ ἀπέκτεινε Ἰλλων. ἐκ τούτου τοῦ ἔργου εὐρόμεθα ἐν Πελοποννησίοισι γε τοῖσι τότε 25 καὶ ἄλλα γέρεα μεγάλα, τὰ διατελέομεν ἔχοντες, καὶ τοῦ κέρεος τοῦ ἐτέρου αἰεὶ ἡγεμονεύειν κοινῆς ἐξόδου γινομένης.
 ὑμῖν μὲν νυν ὦ Λακεδαιμόνιοι οὐκ ἀντιεύμεθα, ἀλλὰ διδόντες αἵρεσιν ὁκοτέρου βούλεσθε κέρεος ἄρχειν παρίμεν· τοῦ δὲ ἐτέρου φάμεν ἡμέας ἰκνέεσθαι ἡγεμονεύειν κατὰ περ ἐν τῷ 30 πρόσθε χρόνῳ. χωρὶς τε τούτου τοῦ ἀπηγγεμένου ἔργου ἀξιονικότεροι εἰμὲν Ἀθηναίων ταύτην τὴν τάξιν ἔχειν. πολλοὶ μὲν γὰρ καὶ εὐ ἔχοντες πρὸς ὑμέας ἡμῖν, ἄνδρες Σπαρτιῆται,

21 δὴ om. S || τῶν om. BPz, Holder, van H. 22 ἡρόπου C:
 ἡροπέου Marc. || φυγέος B: Phrygis Valla: Κηφέος coni. Paulmier et Stein, recepi cum van H.: Φηγέος 23 τε: σε R 24 ἐν τοῖσι z ||
 γε Stein: τε ABC: om. reliqui 26 αἰεὶ B, Holder 29 <ἐς>
 ἡμέας Koen, van H. || ἰκνεύσθαι van H.: ἰκέσθαι C: om. S 30 πρόσθεν az 31 ἀξιονικώτεροι ἦμεν Marc. 32 γὰρ τε καὶ z

three sons, Temenos, Kresphontes, Aristodemus; cp. 7. 204, 8. 131, 137; also 6. 52. The condition 'lets the cat out of the bag,' i.e. anticipates the 'Return.' Diodor. 4. 58 gives fifty years as the limit.

21. προεκρίθη τε . . ἐθελοντῆς: this arrangement, a selection of volunteers, is perhaps necessary to explain why Hyllos was not faced by the Πελοποννησίων ἡγεμόνων—but we are left to discover for ourselves that this title could not be applied to Echemos. The 'Peloponnesian symmarchy,' be it observed, is in full swing a century before the 'Restoration.'

22. Ἐχεμος ὁ Ἡερόπου τοῦ Κηφέος: Echemos was known to Pindar, Ol. 10. 66 ὁ δὲ πάλαι κυδαίνων Ἐχεμος Τεγέαν. Diodoros l.c. adds nothing to Hdt. Pausanias, 1. 41. 2, 8. 5. 1, shows some variation in the traditions: in the former passage dating the event 'to the reign of Orestes,' in the latter correcting the date, and making Echemos son of Aeropos (son of Kepheus, son of Aleus), and successor of Lykourgos as king of Arkadia, husband moreover of Timandra, daughter of Tyndareus. Pausanias (8. 53. 10) saw at Tegea Ἀλέου οἶκον καὶ Ἐχέμου μνήμα καὶ ἐπειρασμένην ἐς στήλην τὴν Ἐχέμου πρὸς τὸν Ἰλλων μάχην. On Plutarch Thes. 32 cp. c. 73 infra. Cp. App. Crit.

25. ἄλλα γέρεα: Blakesley infers that the Tegeatai had a privileged position in the Spartan symmarchy, 'the other wing,' when the forces were purely Peloponnesian, and even in time of peace special privileges in Sparta, to which, rather than to any personal influence, he ascribes the weight of Chilon, c. 9 supra.

28. ἀρχειν (varied with ἡγεμονεύειν above and below) must be doubled for the sense, or αὐτό supplied. ἰκνεύσθαι with ἐς 6. 57, without ἐς 2. 36. With the sense cp. also 6. 84 μάλλον τοῦ ἰκνευμένου.

30. ἀπηγγεμένου: passive, cp. 1. 207.

31. ἀξιονικότεροι: cp. 7. 187, c. 27 infra.

πολλοὶ μὲν γὰρ . . ἀγῶνες ἀγωνίσταται: 1. 66 supplies the commentary on this statement, at least to some extent.

32. εὐ ἔχοντες from the speaker's point of view. In praising themselves the Tegeans are on comparatively safe ground; in depreciating the Athenians the speaker 'gives himself away.' The want of tact in this speech is quite primitive, or Pelasgian! These Arkadians (1) remind the Lakadaimonians that the Spartan Hegemony is a comparatively modern invention, (2) glorify themselves for having kept the 'Herakleids' (= Dorians) a century out of the Peloponnesos, (3) remind the Spartans of many ἀγῶνες ἀγωνίζονται, πολλοὶ δὲ καὶ πρὸς ἄλλους. οὕτω ὦν δίκαιον ἡμέας ἔχειν τὸ ἕτερον κέρας <μᾶλλον> ἢ περ Ἀθηναίους· οὐ γάρ σφι ἐστὶ ἔργα οἷά περ ἡμῖν κατερ- 35 γασμένα, οὐτ' ὦν καινὰ οὔτε παλαιά.

Οἱ μὲν ταῦτα ἔλεγον, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ πρὸς ταῦτα ὑπεκρίναντο 27 τάδε· “ἐπιστάμεθα μὲν σύνοδον τήνδε μάχης εἵνεκα συλλεγῆναι πρὸς τὸν βάρβαρον, ἀλλ' οὐ λόγων· ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Τεγεῆτης προέθηκε παλαιὰ καὶ καινὰ λέγειν τὰ ἐκατέροισι ἐν τῷ παντὶ χρόνῳ κατέργασται χρηστά, ἀναγκαίως ἡμῖν ἔχει δηλῶσαι 5 πρὸς ἡμέας ὅθεν ἡμῖν πατρώιον ἐστὶ εἶναι χρηστοῖσι αἰεὶ πρῶτοι εἶναι μᾶλλον ἢ Ἀρκάσι. Ἡρακλείδας, τῶν οὗτοι

33 ἀγῶνας z || ἄλλους: πολλοὺς B 34 δίκαιότερον Naber appr. van H.: ἡμέας δίκαιον z || <μᾶλλον> Stein<sup>3</sup> 35 σφί ἐστι ABR(SV), Holder, van H. 27. 2 σύλλογον τόνδε Naber 4 <καὶ> παλαιά? Stein, prob. van H. || καινὰ: νέα S 5 <καὶ> ἡμῖν? Kallenberg 6 πατρώιον ἐστὶ P: πατρῷον ἐστὶν Marc.: πατρῷον ἐστὶ z 7 μᾶλλον om. S, Gaisford || ἢ <περ> Naber || οὔτοι post φασὶ Pz, om. Marc.

a gallant fight successfully waged against them more recently! After such a speech it is almost an inconsequence to be content with second choice! And then to disparage the Athenians, with Marathon in memory, and the heroism of Olympiodoros under their very eyes (c. 21 supra)! But perhaps this last achievement had not taken place when the dispute for precedence arose; the Athenians make no reference thereto.

27. 1. Ἀθηναῖοι δέ. The Athenian reply is judicious and tactful, and exhibits many merits (not including modesty) which were conspicuous by their absence in the speech of 'the Tegean.' The Athenian speaker might have been Aristides (c. 29 infra); Plutarch (Aristeid. 12) says it was, but puts a different, a shorter and a still more tactful, speech into his mouth, without any Herakleids, Argives, Amazons, or Marathon in it.

2. σύνοδον . . . συλλεγῆναι: a σύνοδος may be a political and formal assembly, a periodic meeting; cp. Thuc. 1. 96, etc. In c. 43 infra Ἑλλήνων σύνοδος appears to be polemical; here there is a play on both senses.

In the following antithesis ἔργων might have been more delicate than μάχης and καὶ οὐ than ἀλλ' οὐ. The Athenian orator is a plain-spoken man. The emphasis placed on μάχη is significant. The Athenians are there not to bandy words with the brethren but to do battle with the barbarian. That is the Athenian cue all along; cp. c. 7 supra.

5. ἀναγκαίως . . . ἔχει: cp. 8. 140.

7. μᾶλλον ἢ Ἀρκάσι: the meaning is obvious, yet the phrase is ambiguous, added perhaps because without it the Athenian would be advancing a claim even against the Spartan. Taken strictly the phrase leaves the primacy of the Athenians arguable even against the Spartans. The Spartans may, however, treat the question as purely one between Arkadians and Athenians, ἡμῖν μᾶλλον ἢ Ἀρκάσι πατρώιον ἐστὶ πρῶτοι εἶναι, even though the Athenians, little more than a year before, had been claiming the lead at sea; 8. 3.

Ἡρακλείδας: cp. previous c. The Athenian service to the Herakleids is a service to the ancestors of Pausanias and Eurynax, and to the leaders of the Dorians. 'All Hellenes'—for Hellenes were already Hellenes in those days—drove them out (cp. Diodor. 4. 57, Pausan. 1. 32. 6 etc.). But the speaker can hardly mean to impugn the Hellenism of Athenians or of Herakleids. ἐς τοὺς ἀπικολάτο is in any case a saving clause, though, strictly speaking, it covers Athens.

φασὶ ἀποκτεῖναι τὸν ἡγεμόνα ἐν Ἰσθμῷ, τοῦτο μὲν τούτους, πρότερον ἐξελαυνομένους ὑπὸ πάντων Ἑλλήνων ἐς τοὺς ἀπικοῖατο φεύγοντες δουλοσύνην πρὸς Μυκηναίων, μῦνοι ὑποδεξάμενοι τὴν Εὐρυσθέος ὕβριν κατεῖλον, σὺν ἐκείνοισι μάχην νικήσαντες τοὺς τότε ἔχοντας Πελοπόννησον. τοῦτο δὲ Ἀργεῖους τοὺς μετὰ Πολυνείκεος ἐπὶ Θήβας ἐλάσαντας, τελευτήσαντας τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ ἀτάφους κειμένους, στρατευσάμενοι ἐπὶ τοὺς
15 Καδμείους ἀνελεῖσθαι τε τοὺς νεκροὺς φάμεν καὶ θάψαι τῆς

8 ἐν <τῷ> Ἰσθμῷ? Kallenberg || τοῦτο μὲν οἰν. B, Holder 9
πάντων τῶν Cz 10 <ἡμεῖς> μῦνοι? Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 11 εὐρυσθενέος P:
εὐρυσθενέος Sz || κείνοισι z 15 φάμεν τοὺς νεκροὺς S || τῆς οἰν. z

10. Μυκηναίων: Eurystheus being lord of Mykenai (cp. Thuc. 1. 9. 2), τὴν Εὐρυσθέος ὕβριν κατεῖλον: cp. notes to previous chapter. According to Diodoros l.c. Theseus, Hyllus, and Iolaos were in command and Eurystheus fell by the hand of Hyllus; all his sons also perished in the battle. (This would leave Atreus in undisturbed possession of Mykenai.) Iolaos is the son of Iphikles, twin brother to Herakles; cp. Pindar Pyth. 11. 60 etc. In Pyth. 9. 80 f. it is Iolaos who deals Eurystheus the death-blow.

12. τοὺς τότε ἔχοντας II. leaves the withers of Spartan Dorians unwrung, for eo hypothesi they were later comers. τοῦτο δέ, 'in the second place,' corresponding with τοῦτο μὲν supra; cp. 7. 6. 5 supra.

Ἀργεῖους τοὺς μετὰ Πολυνείκεος ἐπὶ Θήβας. This expedition (ἐλασις) of Polynikes and the Argives against Thebes is the story of the Septem contra Thebas which Aischylos had popularized in 472 B.C. at Athens and Sophokles assumes in the action of the Antigone, produced in 440 B.C. (?), in which, however, the heroine anticipates, so far as her brother is concerned, the pious act here ascribed to the Athenians. Amphiaraios was under ground in Boiotia; cp. 8. 134. Tydeus too was duly buried in Thebes according to the Iliad 14. 114, which places the event in the generation before the Trojan war, 4. 376 ff. Pindar (Ol. 6. 15) erects, indeed, funeral pyres to all the Seven in Thebes. The doctrine that it was the Athenians who performed the last rites for the Argive heroes, and that too by force of arms, supplies the argument to the Suppliants of Euripides.

An improved version represented the same end as effected without violence, Plutarch, Theseus 29 συνέπραξε δὲ καὶ

Ἀδράστιον τὴν ἀναίρεσιν τῶν ὑπὸ τῇ Καδμείᾳ πεσόντων, οὐχ ὡς Εὐριπίδης ἐποίησεν ἐν τραγωδίᾳ μάχην τῶν Θηβαίων κρατήσας, ἀλλὰ πείσας καὶ σπεισάμενος· οὕτω γὰρ οἱ πλείστοι λέγουσι· Φιλόχορος δὲ καὶ σπονδὰς περὶ νεκρῶν ἀναιρέσεως γενέσθαι πρώτας ἐκείνας. The rank and file were buried at Eleutherai, the leaders at Eleusis, ibid. Aischylos had apparently in his Eleusiniotai represented Theseus as effecting the arrangement peacefully, ibid., but Pausan. 1. 39. 2 appears to prove Athenian the view here followed by Hdt., while the peaceful solution was a Theban hypothesis; none doubted by that time the burial at Eleusis, where the tombs were on view. These Eleusinian tombs are here referred to, and must be part of the fifth-century argument; they must have been graves of the 'Mykenaian' type and age, such as have been discovered at Eleusis; cp. Ephemeris Archaeologike, 1898, pp. 29 ff. It would have been too much to expect the Athenian orator to admit that in the Mykenaian age Eleusis (to say nothing of Eleutherai) was quite independent of Athens. The Athenian claims in regard to the Argive heroes may (I suppose) be regarded as part of the Theseian legend, which was cultivated assiduously in Athens from the days of Peisistratos onwards. The conflict between this passage and the Antigone, compared with the notorious agreement between Ant. 905 ff. and Hdt. 3. 119, might support the theory of the prior composition of Bks. 7-9, even if the exact date of the production of the Antigone is not fully ascertained; cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

14. τὸν αἰῶνα = βίον: cp. 7. 46 supra.

15. Καδμείους: i.e. the prae-Boiotian inhabitants of Thebes; cp. Thuc. 1. 12. 3, ἡμετέρης ἐν Ἐλευσίνι. ἔστι δὲ ἡμῖν ἔργον εὖ ἔχον καὶ ἐς Ἀμαζονίδας τὰς ἀπὸ Θερμόδοντος ποταμοῦ ἐσβαλούσας κοτὲ ἐς γῆν τὴν Ἀττικὴν, καὶ ἐν τοῖσι Τρωικοῖσι πόνοισι οὐδαμῶν ἐλειπόμεθα. ἀλλ' οὐ γάρ τι προέχει τούτων ἐπιμενησθαι.

17 ἀμαζίδας α || τὰς: τὰς ἀποθήκας τὰς z || θερμόδοντος R 18
ἡρωϊκοῖσι B 19 ἐλειπόμεθα α: λειπόμεθα B || προέχει τούτων z

elsewhere by Hdt. (e.g. 5. 57) identified with 'Phoenicians,' and supposed to have been driven out by the Argive Epigonoí (cp. 5. 61).

16. ἔστι δὲ ἡμῖν ἔργον εὖ ἔχον: the third heroic achievement of the Athenians is their victory over the Amazons who had invaded Attica from the Thermodon. εὖ ἔχον, cp. c. 26 supra. The connexion of Attica with the Amazon myth, or legend, is post-Homeric, or non-Homeric (Il. 3. 184 ff., 6. 186), but is fully established in the fifth century, and like the legend of the Seven incorporated with the Acts of Theseus. Aischylos, Eumenid. 655 ff., treats the case as notorious (458 B.C.), and connects the name of the Areiopagos with the Amazonian cult of Ares:

πάγον δ' Ἀρειον τόπον Ἀμαζόνων ἔδραν σκηπὰς θ' ὅτ' ἦλθον Θησέως κατὰ φθύνον στρατηλατοῦσαι, καὶ πόλιν νεύπολιν τῆνδ' ὑψίπυργον ἀντεπύργωσαν τότε, Ἀρεὶ δ' ἔθυσον, ἐνθεν ἔστ' ἐκώρυμος
πέτρα πάγος τ' Ἀρειος.

Pindar had celebrated the wedding of Theseus and the Amazonian Queen (cp. Plutarch, Theseus c. 78; Pausan. 1. 2. 1). The archaeological evidence (ceramic) tends, however, to show that the connexion with Theseus is not really ancient: Herakles, not Theseus, appears on black figured vases with the Amazons, and his place is taken by Theseus on the red figured (cp. Graef ap. Pauly-Wissowa, i. 1773, 1777). The growing importance and expansion of the Theseus legend dates from about the middle of the sixth century. Plutarch, Thes. 27, shows that the Attidographers (Hellanikos, Kleidemos, and others) were busy on the subject, as probably the Logographers, Mythographers, before them had been; and the epic of Theseus (Θησέως, Aristot. Poet. 8=1451 A, Plut. op. c. 23) was perhaps an earlier work (cp. Bergk, Gr. Lit. ii. (1883) 72): the Amazonis, or Amazonia, ascribed to Homer by Suidas sub v. Ὀμηρος, Bergk l.c., perhaps too sceptically, regards as a literary hypothesis (might not the Amazonia be a section of the Theseis!). The battle of the Amazons was represented in the great fresco by Mikon in the Poikile Stoa (cp. Aristoph. Lysistr. 678, Pausan. 1. 15. 2), and Pheidias placed the same subject in relief upon the shield of the Virgin (E. Gardner, Anc. Ath. 349), and again on the metopes on the west front of her temple (ibid. 282).

There is nothing surprising in Hdt., or even an Athenian orator of 479 B.C., taking the story of the Amazonian war for granted. Hdt.'s other story of the Amazons (4. 110-117) involves a war of the Greeks on the Thermodon, and may be connected with the cycle of Herakles-legends at least in the first instance (cp. Pausan. 2. 1. 1): at any rate in this place no hint occurs that the Amazons in Attica were other than the aggressors. The form Ἀμαζονίδες here compared with Ἀμαζόνες there emphasizes the independence both of the sources and of the composition of the two passages, but leaves the question of priority open. (In the Proem 1. 1-4 the war with the Amazons does not rank with the causes célèbres of wars between Europe and Asia.)

17. ἀπὸ Θερμόδοντος ποταμοῦ: the river here named is the Thermodon by Themiskyra on the Pontos, 4. 86, cp. 2. 104, albeit there was a stream of the same name in Boiotia, near Tanagra; c. 43 infra. The Asianic Thermodon, or its neighbourhood, is in all ancient authorities from Aischylos to Ammianus (22. 8. 17) closely associated with the Amazons, though some authorities (e.g. Aischylos, Prom. 743 cp. 422) regarded them originally as immigrants thither, while others (e.g. Ammianus) regarded the Thermodon as their birth-place.

18. ἐν τοῖσι Τρωικοῖσι πόνοισι. The curtness of this reference to Troy is, indeed, significant. As a matter of fact the remarkable thing is what a poor figure Athens cuts in the Trojan war; cp. 7. 161.

19. προέχει: nihil proficit, Schweig.

20 καὶ γὰρ ἂν χρηστοὶ τότε ἔοντες ὧντοὶ νῦν ἂν εἴεν φλαυρότεροι, καὶ τότε ἔοντες φλαῦροι νῦν ἂν εἴεν ἀμείνους. παλαιῶν μέν νυν ἔργων ἅλις ἔστω· ἡμῖν δὲ εἰ μὴδὲν ἄλλο ἵεσσι ἀποδεδειγμένον, ὥσπερ ἐστὶ πολλά τε καὶ εὖ ἔχοντα εἰ τεοῖσι καὶ ἄλλοισι Ἑλλήνων, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐν Μαραθῶνι ἔργου 25 ἄξιοι εἶμεν τοῦτο τὸ γέρας ἔχειν καὶ ἄλλα πρὸς τοῦτῃ, οὔτινες μούνοι Ἑλλήνων δὴ μονομαχήσαντες τῷ Πέρσῃ καὶ ἔργῳ τοσοῦτῳ ἐπιχειρήσαντες περιγεγόμεθα καὶ ἐνίκησαμεν ἔθνεα ἕξ τε καὶ τεσσαράκοντα. ἀρ' οὐ δίκαιοι εἶμεν ἔχειν

20 ἂν om. z || χρηστοί τε ἔοντες τότε S || ὧντοὶ C: ὡντοὶ Pz: ἐωντοὶ B
 || φλαυρότερον R 21 ἂν εἴεν repetitum damn. van H. 22 ἐστὶ:
 cf. comment. 23 ἀποδεδειγμένον z || ὥσπερ ἐστὶ ABP 26 an προμαχήσαντες? cf. Simonid. Fr. 90 27 <τε> καὶ van H. 28 τε
 del. van H. || τεσσαράκοντα B

haeuser; haud praestat, Stein. Cp. cc.
 4, 22 supra, etc.

20. καὶ γὰρ ἂν . . ἀμείνους: the sentiment anticipates any criticism based on the obscurity of the Athenian record in the Trojan war. Converted into a maxim by the historian himself it becomes a reason for embracing all cities and societies whether great or small in his review; cp. 1. 5.

22. εἰ μὴδὲν ἄλλο ἐστὶ ἀποδεδειγμένον:
 ἐστὶ is grammatically impossible and should be ἦν or εἴη (Stein). With ἐστὶ just below (the source of the corruptela?)
subaud. ἀποδεδειγμένα (brachylogy).

24. τοῦ ἐν Μαραθῶνι ἔργου. If this speech were authentic, we should have to admit that ten years had been enough to start the Marathonian legend on a colossal scale: like the infant Herakles it strangles snakes in its cradle. The formula here has three notable points fully developed. (1) The omission of the Plataians from the muster-roll of Marathon, the 'aloneness' of the Athenians in their hour of need: not a very graceful, or probable, touch on the battlefield of Plataia, even if the Spartans could bear to be reminded that they had been conspicuous by their absence at Marathon: μονομαχήσαντες τῷ Πέρσῃ is meant to emphasize the μούνοι, not to represent the battle as a duel between Athens and the Persian; for 'the Persian' is but one of forty-six nations.
τῷ Μῆδῳ might have been expected here. But cp. App. Crit. (2) The Athenian initiative and forwardness (ἔργῳ τοσοῦτῳ ἐπιχειρήσαντες): the note which grows into the fiction: πρῶτοι

μὲν γὰρ Ἑλλήνων πάντων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν δρόμῳ ἐς πολεμοὺς ἐχρήσαντο, πρῶτοι δὲ ἀνέσχοντο ἐσθιῆτά τε Μηδικὴν ὄροντες καὶ τοὺς ἄνδρας ταύτην ἐσθιμένους, 6. 112.
 (3) "We defeated six-and-forty nations."
 The Athenian orator on the field of Plataia in 479 B.C. is already in possession of the army-list of Xerxes 7. 60-80, which enumerates just forty-six ἔθνεα κατ' ἡκείρον στρατευόμενα. The first alternative that presents itself is to choose between the authenticity of the speech and that of the list, as a list of what it professes to be: either the speech is not genuine, or the list was made long before 480 B.C. But the list may be made older than 480 B.C. without guaranteeing the authenticity of the speech. Are we in the presence of an Athenian development and gross exaggeration intended to elevate Marathon above Plataia, and the defeat of the army of Darius under Datis and Artaphernes at Marathon above the defeat of the army of Xerxes under Mardonios and Artabazos at Plataia? How came Hdt. by such a stroke as this? He certainly did not mean it as a satire upon Athenian braggartness. Had he previously written the story of Marathon, he might have been saved from such an inconsequence:
 this point supports the hypothesis of the prior composition of Bks. 7-9;
 cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8. This view of Marathon throws Salamis also completely into the shade: that too was a part of the anti-Themistoclean tendency which had long been at work when Hdt. first composed his history of the war.

28. ἀρα asks the question with some ταύτην τὴν τάξιν ἀπὸ τούτου μούνου τοῦ ἔργου; ἀλλ' οὐ γὰρ ἐν τῷ τοιῷδε τάξιος εἵνεκα στασιάζειν πρέπει, ἄρτιοι 30 εἰμὲν πείθεσθαι ὑμῖν ὧς Λακεδαιμόνιοι, ἵνα δοκέει ἐπιτηδεότατον ἡμέας εἶναι ἐστάναι καὶ κατ' οὐστυνας· πάντη γὰρ τεταγμένοι πειρησόμεθα εἶναι χρηστοί. ἐξηγέσθε δὲ ὡς πεισομένων."

Οἱ μὲν ταῦτα ἀμείβοντο, Λακεδαιμονίων δὲ ἀνέβωσε ἅπαν 35 τὸ στρατόπεδον Ἀθηναίους ἀξιονικότερους εἶναι ἔχειν τὸ κέρας ἢ περ Ἀρκάδας. οὕτω δὲ ἔσχον οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ ὑπερεβάλλοντο τοὺς Τεγεάτας.

Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ἐτάσσοντο ὧδε οἱ ἐπιφουιτώντες τε καὶ οἱ 28

29 μόνον BB 30 ἄρτι εἴομεν B 31 δοκέη z || ἐπιτηδεότατον CPz, van H. 32 πάντοι R 37 ὑπερεβάλλοντο SMarc. z 28. 1 ταῦτα om. P: del. van H. || ἐπιφουιτέοντες Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.

surprise and indignation (cp. 7. 17 supra): 'is it not right, we should like to know, for us to have this privileged position on the strength of this one achievement even if it stood alone?'—But why is no allusion whatever made to the splendid services of Olympiodoros and his 300 (cp. 21, 22 supra)? Is the sequence of events correctly reproduced by Hdt.? Did this dispute succeed that service? Did the Athenians make such a speech as is here put into their mouths? In any case Hdt. can hardly be acquitted of inconsequence.

29. ἀλλ' οὐ γὰρ κτλ. Who would not be glad to believe that the Athenian spokesman uttered these words, or words to just this effect, instinct with the spirit of loyalty, discipline, practical wisdom, sweet reasonableness, the εἰσθυσία πραότης τοῦ δήμου? Spoken, or unspoken, they represent the better temper which governed the policy and action of Athens during the whole crisis; cp. 7. 145, 8. 3, 79, 144, c. 7 supra; but 7. 161 is conceived in a less happy vein, like the earlier passages of this very speech, or the ultima ratio in c. 11 supra. The end is in better keeping with the practical result. The moral of the previous boast might have been to assign not 'the other wing' but the whole duty of quelling the foe to the Athenians. If they had once already all by themselves defeated the six and forty nations of Asia, why should they not do it again? Why had they worried the Peloponnesians to come to their aid? Why even threatened to make terms with the enemy?

30. στασιάζειν: cp. 8. 79.

ἄρτιοι: cp. c. 48 infra.

31. ἵνα: ubi, cp. 8. 115.

33. ἐξηγέσθε δὲ ὡς πεισομένων. The imperative is a little ambiguous: (1) give your interpretation, explanation, decision, verdict; or (2) give your orders, as leaders, cp. c. 11 supra, 66 infra.

35. Λακεδαιμονίων ἀνέβωσε κτλ. The Lakedaimonians κρίνουσι (sic) βοῇ καὶ οὐ ψήφῳ, Thuc. 1. 87. 2. Blakesley thinks the Spartiates were not sorry to snub the Tegeatai; but this view (a) takes the story too much au pied de la lettre; (b) is hardly consistent with the marked preference shown to the Tegeatai a little later, c. 28 infra. Such inconsistencies are frequent in Hdt. and arise from the insouciance with which he uses various sources not in complete harmony with one another. The ingenious harmonist might indeed prove his ingenuity on the present case: here ἅπαν τὸ στρατόπεδον Λακεδαιμονίων votes the other wing to the Athenians; there οἱ Σπαρτιῆται—outvoted on this occasion—take the Tegeatai to themselves—a graceful consolation! Such harmony is worse than silence. Hdt. is unconscious of the dissonance: the Spartiates no more admitted the Perioikoi and Helots to vote in the field than 'between Babyka and Knakion.'

37. ὑπερεβάλλοντο: cp. 7. 163, 8. 140.

28. 1. μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ἐτάσσοντο. For ἀρχὴν ἐλθόντες Ἑλλήνων. τὸ μὲν δεξιὸν κέρας εἶχον Λακε-

2 ἀρχὴν ἐθέλοντες B: ἄρχειν ἐθέλοντες Marc. 3

reasons above given it is not credible that the Greek forces were διακτοι (6. 93, cp. Thuc. 8. 105. 2—of ships) in the first position. They had reached Erythrai undoubtedly in some order, but necessarily in a marching order (agmen). Before descending to the position marked by the Androkrateion and Gargaphia ('second position') the column had presumably extended itself into line by a deployment westwards (cp. c. 25. 4 supra), and so developed the 'first position' fully along the ὑπωρῆ, from Erythrai past Hysiai into the Plataiai (cp. c. 15 supra). In this first position there must have been an order, with a centre (or double centre) and two wings; but whether the Lakedaimonians were as yet on the right or on the left is a disputable problem (cp. c. 21. 1 supra).

The words which here follow, in making a distinction between οἱ ἐπιφαιτῶντες and οἱ ἀρχὴν ἐλθόντες on the Greek side, suggest that in the second position, or just before reaching the second position, the Greeks received considerable reinforcements. It may have been the advent of these reinforcements, in successive contingents (ἐπιφαιτῶντες), that in part emboldened the Greeks to advance to the second position. These reinforcements, or some of them, may have reached the Greek Laager by the direct route from Megara, and may have comprised a large part of the Greek centre. The only divisions of which express mention has been made so far are (1) the Megarians, (2) the Athenians, (3) the Lakedaimonians, (4) the Tegeatai. These are the only ones who figure clearly in the first position, at Erythrai. There are, however, other motifs available for the explanation of the advance of the Greeks from the ὑπωρῆ to the Asopos-ridge: had the Persian cavalry, on the Dryoskephalai road, nothing to say to it? cp. c. 39 infra, and Appendix VIII. § 5 (7).

2. τὸ μὲν δεξιὸν κέρας: the right wing consists of 11,500 Hoplites (nominal), viz. 10,000 Lakedaimonians (5000 Spartiatai, 5000 Perioikoi) plus 1500 Tegeatai. To these Hdt. would have us add 40,000 helot ψιλοὶ (35,000 in attendance on the Spartiates, 7 helots to each citizen, with 5000 more, one for each 'Lakedaimonian'). Stein treats this proportion as the normal levy, and opines that one of the seven was special body-servant (θεράπων) of the Spartiate hoplite, and the six others members of a regiment under the king's command. But (1) where is there any other evidence of such a proportion as the normal one? (2) When were Spartan armies so well supplied with ψιλοὶ? (3) What record is there of the services of these ψιλοὶ in the actual fighting? (4) The request of Pausanias for the Athenian τοξόται, c. 60 infra—no doubt from a tainted source—still emphasizes the defect of the Spartan contingent in light troops, and exploits it, if you like. (5) The phraseology here does not suggest a closed or organized corps of 20,000–30,000 helot ψιλοὶ, but a distributive number of 35,000 ψιλοὶ θεράποντες. (6) Politically, the idea of an organization of a helot corps of 30,000 ψιλοὶ at Sparta is well-nigh inconceivable: such a corps would have effected a revolution! Even Pausanias, in his subsequent tampering with the helots, has not got such a basis as that to work on, or we should have heard of it; cp. Thuc. 1. 132. 4. (7) The normal allowance of θεράποντες appears rather to have been one per hoplite, cp. 7. 229 (and 186): the emphasis which is here laid on the number 7 suggests that it is abnormal. (8) If the numerical figures in the text are to stand, other employment must be found for the huge number of helots, and may be found, as an Army Service, engaged in forwarding supplies, cp. c. 39 infra. These reasons are sufficient to disprove the fact and figures here; but they leave Hdt. responsible for an egregious blunder. The only rescue for him would be to challenge the text: are the figures corrupt? The testimonia carry them back to Plutarch (Aristeid. 10) (but neither Diodoros nor Trogus recorded them). This assertion that there were seven helots for every Spartan is made not less than five times in this Book (cc. 10, 28, 29 (bis), 61 (implicite)): this very iteration rouses suspicion of the fact, if not of the text. Few critics will be so hardy as to expose a five-fold systematic and consistent corruptela!

δαιμονίων μύριοι· τούτων δὲ τοὺς πεντακισχιλίους ἔοντας Σπαρτιήτας ἐφύλασσαν φίλοι τῶν εἰλώτων πεντακισχίλιοι καὶ τρισμύριοι, περὶ ἄνδρα ἕκαστον ἑπτὰ τεταγμένοι. προσεχίας δὲ σφίσι εἴλοντο ἐστάναι οἱ Σπαρτιῆται τοὺς Τεγεῆτας καὶ τιμῆς εἵνεκα καὶ ἀρετῆς· τούτων δ' ἦσαν ὀπλίται χίλιοι καὶ πεντακόσιοι. μετὰ δὲ τούτους ἴσταντο Κορινθίων πεντακισχίλιοι, παρὰ δὲ σφίσι εὗροντο παρὰ Πausanίῳ ἐστάναι Ποτειδαιτέων τῶν ἐκ Παλλήνης τοὺς παρεόντας τριηκοσίους. τούτων δὲ ἐχόμενοι ἴσταντο Ἀρκάδες Ὀρχομένιοι ἑξακόσιοι, τούτων

3 τούτων z 4 εἰλωτέων Bz 6 δὲ σφίσι C: δὲ σφι(ν) ceteri
7 τούτων z || δὲ B || ἔσαν z 9 δὲ σφίσι αCz: δὲ σφιν 10, 11, 12
τούτων (ter) z

Otherwise, either καὶ τρισμύριοι . . τεταγμένοι might go, or rather, in view of c. 10 supra, πεντακισχίλιοι καὶ τρισ-, ἑπτὰ being reduced to δύο, i.e. φίλοι τῶν εἰλώτων μύριοι, περὶ ἄνδρα ἕκαστον δύο τεταγμένοι. There may have been 10,000 or 15,000 Helots on the field at Plataia; there will hardly have been 35,000-40,000. The use of φυλάσσειν here is remarkable; cp. 6. 75 ὁ φύλακος, ἦν γὰρ τῶν τις εἰλωτέων (sic), διδοὶ οἱ μάχαιραν.

5. προσεχίας δὲ σφίσι εἴλοντο. This statement that the Spartiatai chose the Tegeatai to stand next them in line of battle καὶ τιμῆς εἵνεκα καὶ ἀρετῆς, to do them honour, and because they were brave men, reads curiously in the light of the last chapter. The two passages, though in immediate juxtaposition, are evidently from wholly different sources. As σφίσι refers expressly to Σπαρτιῆται, of whom there were but 5000, Hdt. appears to say that the 1500 Tegeatai were posted next the Spartiatai, i.e. between them and the 5000 Perioikoi; but σφίσι may perhaps be generalized so as to cover the whole force from Laconia.

8. μετὰ δὲ τούτους. Hdt. is reviewing the line (acies) from right to left. The contingents from the Korinthian to the Megarian next enumerated, and comprising 18,600 Hoplites, form the centre of the army (=οἱ πολλοί, c. 52 infra); and this centre is again divided, incidentally, into the right centre, οἱ ἀμφὶ Κορινθίων, c. 69 infra, comprising 11,300 Hoplites, and the left centre, οἱ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας τε καὶ Φλασίων, ibid., comprising 7300 Hoplites, according to the muster-roll. (To them succeeds the left wing, consisting of the Athenians with the Plataians, 8600 men in all.)

Κορινθίων πεντακισχίλιοι: 5000

Hoplites is an unusually large muster for Korinth. In 435 B.C. Korinth had 3000 Hoplites ready to send to Korkyra, Thuc. 1. 27. 2, but only embarked 2000, ib. 29. 1. In 418 B.C. they contributed only 2000 to the great muster at Phleius, Thuc. 5. 57. 2. In the battle of Korinth, 394 B.C., 3000 Hoplites from Korinth took part, Xen. Hell. 4. 2. 17.

9. εὗροντο is used in an unusual sense; cp. c. 26 supra.

ἐστάναι is the syncopated perfect infin., cp. 1. 17, Soph. Ant. 640, preceded by τοῖς π. τριηκοσίοις. Pausanias has apparently, at least within certain limits, the right to determine the order of battle, and assign the various contingents their stations. This might square very well with the selection by 'the Spartiates' of the Tegeatai as their next neighbours, less well with the story of the Atheno-Tegeatan dispute.

Ποτειδαιτέων. The Korinthians obtained the grace from Pausanias to have the 300 Poteidaiaiai, who were on the spot, to stand, or laager, next them. This is another valiant 300: how they came to be at Plataia is not clear. Poteidaia was, of course, a colony of Korinth's (Thuc. 1. 56. 2), albeit Hdt. nowhere happens to say so. The town has had its own reckoning with the Persian, cp. 8. 126 ff., and how this gallant 300 got to Plataia is far from clear: presumably by sea. The addition of the words τῶν ἐκ Παλλήνης (cp. 7. 123) makes it clear what Poteidaia is meant.

11. ἐχόμενοι, quasi-geographical rather than military or tactical; cp. 7. 108. 8.

Ἀρκάδες Ὀρχομένιοι ἑξακόσιοι.

δὲ Σικυνῶνιοι τρισχίλιοι. τούτων δὲ εἶχοντο Ἐπιδαυρίων ὀκτακόσιοι. παρὰ δὲ τούτους Τροϊζηνίων ἐτάσσοντο χίλιοι, Τροϊζηνίων δὲ ἐχόμενοι Λεπρετῶν δικόσιοι, τούτων δὲ

12 δ' R || εἶχοντο del. van H.
om. R 14 Λεπραιετών :

13 δὲ om. P || τούτους . . παρὰ δὲ
14, 15 τούτων (bis) :

The men of Orchomenos are the only other Arkadians, besides the Tegeatai, present on the field, the Mantineians not having arrived in time; cp. c. 77 infra. In the previous year Ἀρκάδες πάντες had been at the Isthmos under Kleombrotos, 8. 72; and besides Tegeatai, Mantineans, Orchomenians, there had been 1000 Hoplitai ἐκ τῆς λοιπῆς Ἀρκადίης in the army of Leonidas, 7. 202. Ἀρκάδες is here introduced to distinguish Arkadian Orchomenos from Boiotian; cp. c. 16 supra. So in Thucyd. 5. 61. 3 Ὀρχομενὸν τὸν Ἀρκαδικόν. (In the Catalogue Boiotian O. is Μινύειος, II. 2. 511, Arkadian simply πολέμηνος, ib. 605.) Six hundred seems a small contingent from the third city of Arkadia: perhaps the tardy exit of the Mantineians kept some of the Orchomenians and other Arkadians at home. It is not clear what the constitution of Orchomenos was at this time. Plutarch Mor. 313 cites Theophilos Πελοποννησιακὰ β' in a way which might seem to imply that the βασιλεία lasted into the Peloponnesian war, but the term βασιλεὺς is not quite conclusive (cp. 7. 149): the constitution was certainly aristocratic, or oligarchic, in 418 B.C. (cp. Thuc. 5. 61. 4). The name appears as Ἐρχομενός ('Ερχομενίων) on the coinage of the fourth century. Orchomenos asserts, or reasserts, itself in later times; cp. Head, H.N. 377 f., and c. 16 supra. The only contingent here for which a commander's name is preserved, besides the Spartan, is the Athenian.

12. Σικυνῶνιοι τρισχίλιοι. Sikyon had supplied but 15 ships to the navy-list of Salamis, 8. 43, and had apparently been unrepresented in the army of Leonidas (7. 202), and even in that of Kleombrotos (8. 72); but Sikyonians were serving under Leotychidas, cc. 102, 105 infra. Sikyon's contingents are not as a rule numerically specified (cp. Thuc. 5. 57. 2), but in 394 B.C. it sent 1500 Hoplitai to the support of Sparta, Xenoph. Hell. 4. 2. 16. (The better form of the name is probably Σικυνών, cp. Head, H.N. 345 ff.)

Ἐπιδαυρίων ὀκτακόσιοι. Epidauros had been unrepresented at Thermopylai (7. 202), but had sent a contingent to the army of Kleombrotos (8. 72) as well as to the fleet under Eurybiades (8. 43), and was probably represented in the fleet of Leotychidas; the men ranked as Dorians, cp. 8. 43.

13. Τροϊζηνίων χίλιοι. Troizen had sent men to the army under Kleombrotos (8. 72) and a small contingent to the fleet in 480 B.C. (8. 43); in 479 B.C. they were allowed to have distinguished themselves at Mykale, c. 105 infra. They, too, now counted as Dorians (8. 43), and in 479 B.C. were presumably, like Korinth, Sikyon, Epidauros, under oligarchic government; but cp. 8. 41 supra. (The form of the name is Τροζάνιοι on the Plataian monument; cp. coinage, Head, p. 371. Τροϊζήν appears later, e.g. Dittenberger<sup>1</sup> 372.)

14. Λεπρετῶν δικόσιοι. In 418 Lepreon appears as but one city, or township of an Hexapolis in the west Peloponnesos, of 'Minyan,' or at any rate non-Dorian extraction; cp. 8. 73 Ἀγρινίων δὲ Παρωρεῖται πάντες. The Lepreatis is the territory of the leading township, but possibly the 200 Hoplitai exhibit the levy for the whole district. It was, of course, a bone of contention between Sparta and Elis; cp. Thuc. 5. 31. 2 etc. The occurrence recorded by Hdt. in 4. 148 had presumably not taken place, or was not known to him, when he first drafted Bk. 9, but Ed. Meyer (G. d. Alterth. iv. (1901) p. 413) can hardly be right in referring that passage to the same occasion as Thuc. l.c. and dating both well into the 'Attic (i.e. Archidamian) war'; Thuc. records merely an Eleian raid into Lepreatis, which is thereupon occupied by a Lakedaemonian garrison; cp. my note ad l.c. If Meyer is right that reference would be the latest, or all but the latest, in Hdt.'s work, and would confirm the argument for the priority of Bks. 7-9; in any case, however, it is prima facie of later composition than this passage; cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

Μυκηναίων καὶ Τυρινθίων τετρακόσιοι, τούτων δὲ ἐχόμενοι 15
Φλειάσιοι χίλιοι, παρὰ δὲ τούτους [ἔστησαν] Ἑρμιονέες τριηκόσιοι. Ἑρμιονέων δὲ ἐχόμενοι ἵσταντο Ἑρετριέων τε καὶ

15 ἐχόμενοι del. van H. 16 ἔστησαν B, Stein<sup>12</sup> (del. Stein<sup>3</sup>):
ἔστησαν A: ἔστησαν C: ἔστασαν (V): ἔστασαν P; ἔστασαν R(S): 17
τε om. B

15. Μυκηναίων καὶ Τυρινθίων τετρακόσιοι. These ancients, a poor remnant of the 'Perseid' and 'Pelopid' ages, might have 'medized' with a better grace than the Dorian Argives. Their hostility to Argos would seal them to the side of Sparta and of Hellas, of which they might fairly consider themselves the oldest representatives. 'Tiryns' here appears for the first time in the war;
'Mykenai' had sent 80 men to Thermo-pylai, 7. 202, unless, indeed, those and these alike are 'exiles'? It is hard to see how with Argos neutral, or malevolent, Tiryns and Mykenai could have afforded to send their fighting men to Plataia; but cp. c. 12 supra. The ruin of Mykenai was still to come or was unknown to Hdt. when he first drafted this passage; cp. 6. 83.

(An obiter dictum in J. P. Mahaffy's Survey of Gk. Civilization, 1897, p. 31, to which Hall's Oldest Civilization, 1901,
p. 291, directed my attention, treats
these Mykenaians and Tirynthians as
'of course exiles' in view of Mahaffy's theory that the destruction (final?) of Mykenai and Tiryns by Argos 'happened in the eighth or early seventh century B.C.' But the names occur upon the Plataian (and Olympian) monuments, and it is not likely that those lists included 'cityless men.' This observation cuts out my own suggestion up above, that these men were exiles from the still existing Mykenai and Tiryns.
Mahaffy's prochronism for the destruction of the two cities appears to be partly mixed up with the view that Perseids and Pelopids 'possessed neither the art of writing nor the art of coining,' plus the complementary view that Mykenaians and Tirynthians of the sixth and fifth centuries would have possessed both. Perhaps they did, even though no specimens have come down to us. As to the Perseids and Pelopids, we now know that they could write,
and it is hardly safe to assume that they had no coinage or currency. On the whole I should adhere to the dates

given in note ad loc. for the destruction of Tiryns and Mykenai. Meyer, G. d.
Alt. iii. (1901) p. 516, well remarks that a 'Tirynthian' is victor at Olympia Ol. 78=468 B.C. (Olymp. List in Oxyrhynchus Papyri, ii. p. 89): kurz nachher muss die Zerstörung fallen.

16. Φλειάσιοι χίλιοι. The Chiliad from Phleius forms the first section of the left centre, which embraces nine distinct contingents, as against eight in the right centre, but numbers only 7300 men as against 11,300. The right wing and right centre are, if the figures be at all trustworthy, very much stronger than the left centre and left wing (22,800 as compared with 15,900).
Men of Phleius (200) had served under Leonidas (7. 202) and again at the Isthmos in 480 B.C. (8. 72). Phleius was accounted a Dorian city (Pausan.
2. 13. 1 f.), and in the fifth century was anti-Argive and a loyal adherent of Sparta's (cp. Thuc. 4. 70. 1, 133. 3, 5.
57. 2 etc.); hence, perhaps, in part the enthusiasm of Xenophon for the men of Phleius, though they were conspicuous by their absence in the battle of Korinth in 394 B.C. (Hell. 4. 2. 16); but that is to be explained by inner dissensions at the time. The city is described as one of more than 5000 men in 380 B.C., ib. 5. 3. 16.

Ἑρμιονέες τριηκόσιοι: men of Hermion (cp. 8. 73) who were 'Dryopians' (ib.) had served under Kleombrotos (ib. 72) and furnished a small contingent to the fleet at Salamis, 8. 44. These particular 300 do not distinguish themselves. With this contingent the Pello-ponnesian portion of the forces comes to an end; but the divisions in the army do not follow strictly geographical order, and the two last Peloponnesian items act with the left centre and left wing, which is otherwise all drawn from exo-Peloponnesian states.

17. Ἑρετριέων τε καὶ Στυρίων ἑκατόσιοι.
Eretria had sent seven and Styra two ships to the fleet at Salamis, 8. 46. The Eretrians were 'Ionians' (ib.), and as

Στυρέων ἑξακόσιοι, τούτων δὲ Χαλκιδέες τετρακόσιοι, τούτων δὲ Ἀμπρακιητέων πεντακόσιοι, μετὰ δὲ τούτους Λευκαδίων 20 καὶ Ἀνακτορίων ὀκτακόσιοι [ἔστησαν], τούτων δὲ ἐχόμενοι Παλῆες οἱ ἐκ Κεφαλληνίης διηκόσιοι. μετὰ δὲ τούτους Αἰγινη-

18 τούτων (his) ≈ || τούτων . . τετρακόσιοι om. B 19 ἀμπρακιωτέων B, Holder 20 ἔστησαν α: ἔστησαν Cd: ἔστασαν (V):
ἔστασαν P: ἔστασαν R(S): del. Stein<sup>3</sup> || τούτων ≈ || δὲ ἐχόμενοι ≈: δὲ ἐχόμενοι ἴσταντο Marc.

such are one of the two Ionian contingents in the army (excluding the Athenians); Styra was 'Dryopian' (ib.): so this third division in the left centre might have been expected to stand well beside the second. The names here are perhaps given in the order of their importance; the Dryopians may have stood next to each other (Styreans and Hermionians), and so too the Ionians from Eretria and Chalkis.

18. Χαλκιδέες τετρακόσιοι: the men of Chalkis had supplied, or rather manned, twenty ships in 480 B.C. (8. 1, 46). At the rate allowed by Hdt. for Epibatai that might run to 600 men; but some may have been serving under Leotychidas, or they may have suffered in the war. These men of Chalkis must be natives, not Athenian kleruchs, who, if serving in the army, would surely be with the citizens, on the left wing, either as a distinct corps, or fighting each man in the ranks of his own tribe (φυλῆς); cp. provision in the Salaminian case: [παρὰ δὲ Ἀθηναίους] τε[λ]εῖν καὶ στρατ[εύ]ουσιν, Hicks' Manual<sup>2</sup> No. 4. (It is rather difficult to believe that kleruchs accustomed to act together as a garrison in loco would be distributed among the phyleic regiments on the battle-field. If the 'Chalkidians' here were Athenian kleruchs they would amount to  $\frac{1}{10}$  of the nominal total of the Attic force.)

19. Ἀμπρακιητέων πεντακόσιοι. The contingent is a considerable one, as coming ἐξ ἐσχατέων χωρέων, cp. 8. 47, and with the next might be put down in part to the credit of Korinth, of which Amprakia, Leukas, Anaktorion were colonies; cp. 8. 45. It is the more remarkable that these two contingents (v., vi. in the left centre) are not favoured like the Poteidaiai above, but placed among the outsiders.

Λευκαδίων καὶ Ἀνακτορίων ὀκτακόσιοι: probably the contingent from each state was not equal, but that from Leukas the larger, or they would have been separately enumerated. The combination may represent a section, or division, under one command. For Leukas cp. 8. 45, 47 and c. 38 ἡμεῖς. Anaktorion, not elsewhere mentioned by Hdt. (except c. 31 ἡμεῖς), was a joint foundation from Korkyra and Korinth at the mouth of the Amprakian Gulf (cp. Thuc. 1. 55. 1), and a considerable bone of contention in the first period of the Peloponnesian war (of which there is no hint here).

21. Παλῆες οἱ ἐκ Κεφαλληνίης διηκόσιοι. Kephallenia is not elsewhere mentioned by Hdt. Thucydides 2. 30. 2 makes its position clear: κεῖται δὲ ἡ Κεφαλληνία κατὰ Ἀκαρνανίαν καὶ Λευκάδα τετράπολις οὖσα, Παλῆς, Κρανίος, Σαμαίου, Προνναίου. Paleis was obviously the most important member of the Tetrapolis (cp. Thuc. 1. 27. 2), but were the 200 men here mentioned all from the one township? Kephallenia was annexed by Athens in 431 B.C. (Thuc. l.c.), a fact which Hdt. was in no way bound to notice, but of which anyway he shows no consciousness.

It is Stein's suggestion that Hdt. read ΠΑΛΕΕΣ instead of ΦΑΛΕΙΟΙ on the inscription at Olympia, described by Pausanias 5. 23. 1, as the name of the Eleians is given by Pausanias and that of the Paleis is not given. This is simply an inversion of the old suggestion of P. O. Broendsted (Bursian, G. d. class. Philol. 1048; cp. Grote, iv. 256 n. and Rawlinson iv.<sup>3</sup> 395, each spelling the name differently, and both wrongly) that Pausanias read ΦΑΛΕΙΟΙ for ΠΑΛΕΕΣ. The old suggestion is much the better of the two. In Hdt.'s time the inscription was new and clear; in the time of Pausanias it was 600 years old. The name of the Eleians was to be expected, especially at Olympia, rather than that of the small Kephallenian township. Grote adds that the Eleians

τέων πεντακόσιοι [ἐτάχθησαν]. παρὰ δὲ τούτους ἐτάσσοντο Μεγαρέων τρισχίλιοι. εἶχοντο δὲ τούτων Πλαταιέες ἑξακόσιοι.
τελευταῖοι δὲ καὶ πρῶτοι Ἀθηναῖοι ἐτάσσοντο, κέρας ἔχοντες
τὸ εὐώνυμον, ὀκτακισχίλιοι· ἐστρατήγεε δ' αὐτῶν Ἀριστείδης 25

22 πεντηκόσιοι αC || ἐτάχθησαν secl. Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἐτάσσοντο secl. van H.
23 τούτων z 25 δὲ B || αὐτέων z

might have altered the name, and that Plutarch de m. Hdti = Mor. 873 seems to have read the same inscription as Pausanias.

It remains, however, still to be proved that Hdt. had read the inscription at Olympia before writing down this list. Doubtless an official document of some kind underlies the list here, but it need not have been the precise inscription at Olympia, nor again need Hdt. have copied that document himself. The list of Hdt. differs from the list of Pausanias not merely by the point above specified, but in others: Pausanias omits Eretrians and Leukadians, and inserts five names from the Nesiote region. Again, Hdt. gives the numbers of the contingents, which were certainly not on the inscription. There is not the slightest reason to suppose that Hdt. compiled his army-list for Plataia at Olympia; it is even less likely than that he compiled his navy-list for Salamis at Delphi (cp. 8. 82). The army-list was probably part of the original draft of the work, not an addition; cp. further, Introduction, § 10.

Αἰγινητέων πεντακόσιοι: the contingent is not large for Aigina, a state which had held its own, and something more, in the recent war with Athens (cp. 7. 145); but the Aiginetans were no doubt serving on the fleet, and in any case the island would not have put a large force on the mainland.

23. Μεγαρέων τρισχίλιοι: the 3000 Megarians (a contingent six times as large as the Aiginetan) had already given a good account of themselves c. 21 supra; and besides this goodly contingent, ἐν παιδίῳ Βουρβίῳ οἵτινες ἔτλαν χεῖρας ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων ἱππομάχους λέγε: there were, if we may trust the same epigram, Megarians at Mykale (cp. Hicks' Manual<sup>2</sup> No. 17, where the services of the Megarians against the cavalry are erroneously restricted to their disaster, c. 69 infra). Like the Aiginetans (8. 46) the Megarians were Dorians; cp. 5. 76.

Πλαταιέες ἑξακόσιοι. The Plataians would certainly have put every man they could into the field. The traditional number of the Plataians at Marathon is 1000 (cp. Hdt. IV.-VI. ii. 204, 206); fifty years after 479 B.C. they are diminished to 400, Thuc. 2. 78. 3. Hdt. might here seem to class them with the Megarians as belonging to the left centre; but the title of that section in c. 69 infra and the probabilities of the case alike point to the Plataian contingent being reckoned, with the Athenian, on the left wing. Was there none on the right? Cp. c. 72 infra.

24. τελευταῖοι δὲ καὶ πρῶτοι Ἀθηναῖοι. 'last,' in reckoning from the right wing, all along the line to the left; but 'first' as the army moved westwards, or forwards; or head of the column, which had moved to Erythrai, and then out on to the ὑπωρῆ, before descending into the second position. This assertion of the πρωτείον of the Athenians comes from an Atticizing source, and would hardly have been emphasized at the Spartan headquarters; the double description τελευταῖοι . . . πρῶτοι prepares the way for the chassé in c. 46 below, by which the last become first and the first last! 8000 Hoplites, besides some light-armed troops, is a large contingent, especially considering the contemporary service of the fleet, in which the Athenians were doubtless more largely represented than any other single state (cp. 8. 131); but the figure is not incredibly large for Athens, even in 479 B.C. requiring about 800 men to each phyleic regiment, or τάξις. Cp. the estimate for 431 B.C. in Thuc. 2. 13. No doubt all ten tribes were represented in the field; and there may have been 2000 Athenian Hoplites at Mykale, or nearly so (50 x 30 = 1500), as well.

25. Ἀριστείδης ὁ Λυσιστάχων: cp. 8. 79. The occurrence of this name here, with the patronymic, suggests that the nomination of this sole Strategos was an integral part of the document, or the source, from which Hdt. drew his list, and also that the source was an 'Atticizing' one. Aristides is the

29 ὁ Λυσιμάχου. οὗτοι, πλὴν τῶν ἐπτά περὶ ἕκαστον τεταγμένον Σπαρτιήτησι, ἦσαν ὀπλίται, σύμπαντες εὐντες ἀριθμὸν τρεῖς τε μυριάδες καὶ ὀκτὼ χιλιάδες καὶ ἑκατοντάδες ἐπτά. ὀπλίται μὲν οἱ πάντες συλλεγόντες ἐπὶ τὸν βάρβαρον ἦσαν τοσοῦτοι, 5 ψιλῶν δὲ πλῆθος ἦν τόδε, τῆς μὲν Σπαρτιητικῆς τάξις πεντακισχίλιοι καὶ τρισμύριοι ἄνδρες, ὡς εὐντων ἐπτά περὶ ἕκαστον ἄνδρα, καὶ τούτων πᾶς τις παρήρητο ὡς ἐς πόλεμον οἱ δὲ τῶν λοιπῶν Λακεδαιμονίων καὶ Ἑλλήνων ψилоί, ὡς εἰς περὶ ἕκαστον ἑὸν ἄνδρα, πεντακόσιοι καὶ τετρακισχίλιοι καὶ 30 τρισμύριοι ἦσαν. ψιλῶν μὲν δὴ τῶν ἀπάντων <τῶν> μαχίμων ἦν τὸ πλῆθος ἕξ τε μυριάδες καὶ ἐννέα χιλιάδες καὶ ἑκατον-

29. 2 ἔσαν :: συνάπαντες B, Holder, van H. || τρεῖς B 3 τε om. ::
|| χηλιάδες van H. 4 ἔσαν :: 6 ὡς . . ἄνδρα del. Kallenberg
7 τούτων :: 10 ἔσαν :: 30. 1 τῶν suppl. Stein 2 καὶ
ἐννέα χιλιάδες om. B || χηλιάδες van H.

only general named: the captains or leaders of all the contingents would have been included in a document framed at headquarters. If the name were introduced as a bit of free narrative by Hdt. it might have been expected above, in c. 21, when the service of Olympiodoros must have been mediated through the Strategos, or in c. 27, where the Strategos was presumably the spokesman, or else reserved for c. 44 infra, where the Strategos appears in action. If Aristeides alone is named it is presumably because he was Strategos ἡγεμῶν if not αὐτοκράτωρ, and had a constitutional and permanent lead: the whole college of Strategoi was not present; cp. 8. 131, and Appendix VII. § 4.

29. 1. πλὴν τῶν ἐπτά: this notice of the 35,000 Helots, who reappear almost immediately below, is necessitated by their having been introduced in c. 28 above, where they have been expressly described as ψилоί. The object of this chapter is to estimate the sum total of Hoplites and ψилоί. The sum total for the Hoplites is correct, i.e. corresponds to the items, which amount to 38,700.

5. ψιλῶν δέ. Hdt. has made a mistake apparently in his estimate of the light-armed, which he over-estimates by 800 on his own showing. This apparent error may have arisen from his having got totals, not from the addition of his items, but as data, in themselves correct. The 800 de trop may in short represent an item omitted in his estimate of details. The narrative in the context suggests such an omission, for unless the highly-trained Athenian τοξῆται of cc. 22, 60, above and below, are included in the general total of ψилоί ὡς εἰς περὶ ἕκαστον ἑὸν ἄνδρα, they are omitted. The addition of an allowance of 800 for these Archers makes Hdt.'s totals correct, i.e. agree with the items (A. G. Laird, Notes on Herodotus, 1904).

7. τούτων πᾶς τις παρήρητο (pl.p.) ὡς ἐς πόλεμον. Yet of this huge mass of light infantry not a single solitary shot is recorded; and in the hour of need the Spartans send to borrow the Athenian Archers!

8. τῶν λοιπῶν = 33,700 (i.e. 38,700 - 5000 Spartiates). 33,700 + 800 = 34,500, which is the total given by Hdt. for the ψилоί other than the 35,000, seven per each Spartiate. This includes 5000 Helots for the 5000 Lakedaïmonian Hoplites. The allowance of one ψίλος per Hoplite is no doubt the normal Greek average: what is remarkable here is that Hdt. treats all these θεράποντες as μάχιμοι, and even more emphatically the 35,000 Helots as all equipped for war.

30. 2. ἕξ τε . . πέντε: 69,500 is an excess of 800 over the items in Hdt.'s calculation, as just shown, and the 800 may be the figure for the Athenian τοξῆται, cp. last c. Granting his total for the ψилоί the addition of 38,700 Hoplites gives a grand total of 108,200 men, or, as Hdt. phrases it, Eleven myriads less one thousand eight hundred men. The τάδες πέντε, τοῦ δὲ σύμπαντος τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ τοῦ συνελθόντος

 εἰς Πλαταιὰς σὺν τε ὀπλίτησι καὶ ψιλοῖσι τοῖσι μαχίμοισι ἔνδεκα μυριάδες ἦσαν, μῆς χιλιάδος, πρὸς δὲ ὀκτακοσίων 5 ἀνδρῶν καταδέουσαι. σὺν δὲ Θεσπιδέων τοῖσι παρεούσι ἐξε-πληροῦντο αἱ ἔνδεκα μυριάδες· παρήσαν γὰρ καὶ Θεσπιδέων ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ οἱ περιέοντες, ἀριθμὸν εἰς ὀκτακοσίους καὶ χιλίους· ὅπλα δὲ οὐδ' οὗτοι εἶχον. οὗτοι μὲν νυν ταχθέντες ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ ἐστρατοπεδεύοντο, 10

Οἱ δὲ ἀμφὶ Μαρδόνιον βάρβαροι ὥς ἀπεκήδευσαν 31
 Μασίστιον, παρήσαν, πυθόμενοι τοὺς Ἑλληνας εἶναι ἐν Πλαταιῇσι, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀσωπὸν τὸν ταύτην ῥέοντα.

3 σύμπαντος στρατοῦ? Stein: τοῦ ante Ἑλληνικοῦ om. B, Holder, van H. 4 ὀπλίταισι S 5 ἔσαν s: del. van H. 6 ἀνδρῶν
 om. B 8 ἐς om. RS 9 οὐδ': οὐκ C 10 ἐστρατεύοντο S
 31. 1 δ' CPz || ἀμφὶ περὶ C 3 πλαταιῇσι B || τὸν ταύτην ῥέοντα suspect. habet Kallenberg

full 110,000 was just made up by 1800
 Thespians, all that survived of that city,
 but they were without arms.

There would be little or no sense in Hdt.'s adding the 1800 Thespians to the sum total of μάχμοι unless they had served at least as ψιλοὶ (raising the total of that branch to 71,300 as against 38,700 Heavies). Panoplies might, however, have been found for them, from the men slain and wounded in the course of the fighting in Boiotia; but perhaps no Greek state would find panoplies for another.

Thespians had lost 700 men at Thermopylai, 7. 222; the city had been subsequently destroyed, the population
 having fled into the Peloponnesos, 8. 50.
 Are we to understand that except for these disasters Thespians might have put 2500 Hoplites into the field at Plataia?

On the subsequent restoration of Thespians cp. 8. 75.

10. ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ: this phrase is of importance. The second position, as described in c. 25 supra πλησίον τῆς τε κρήνης τῆς Γαργαφῆς καὶ τοῦ τεμένους τοῦ Ἀνδρόκρατος, is here described as 'on the Asopos.' The river could at least be seen from the Laager (which would not be the case from the first position); in other words, the Laager was on the ridge north of Gargaphia, sloping down to the river; but of course the Greeks could not water from the Asopos proper.
 G. B. Grundy, G.P.W. pp. 470 f., argues that by 'Asopos' in this passage is to be understood not the main stream (north of the position) but one of its tributaries, A<sup>1</sup>, "the brook which has its rise in the springs of Apotripi." The point is neat, but does not (me indice) make any substantial difference in our conception of the Greek position. That position is marked by the Androkrateion, Gargaphia, and the Asopos; i.e. it was south of the main stream, and east of A<sup>1</sup>; but there is no need to infer that by the Asopos here Hdt. definitely means A<sup>1</sup>. He more probably means the main stream in front; the river is near enough to define the position: they had been ἐπὶ τῇ

 ὑπαρῇ, they are now ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ.
 Cp. next c.

31. 1. ἀμφὶ: cp. c. 69 infra; or for a more exact parallel 8. 25 οἱ ἀμφὶ Ξέρην,
 'Xerxes and his men.'

ἀπεκήδευσαν, 'were done with mourning,' cp. 2. 40 ἀποτίψονται, 2. 73 ἀποκείρηθῃ, cp. Thuc. 2. 61. 4 ἀπαλγῆ-σαντας δὲ τὰ ἴδια.

2. ἐν Πλαταιῇσι: sc. ἐν τῷ χώρῳ τῷ
 Πλαταικῷ, cp. c. 25 supra; in Plataia,
 as the city itself had been destroyed, cp.
 8. 50, they could not be.

3. τὸν Ἀσωπὸν τὸν ταύτην ῥέοντα:
 this expression is a remarkable one,
 coming as it does after the Asopos has just been mentioned without qualification
 (c. 30), and after the Persian encampment has been described as παρὰ τὸν Ἀσωπὸν ποταμὸν τεταγμένον c. 15 supra. Is τὸν

ἀπικόμενοι δὲ ἀντετάσσονται ὧδε ὑπὸ Μαρδονίου. κατὰ μὲν
5 Λακεδαιμονίους ἔστησε Πέρσας. καὶ δὴ πολλὸν γὰρ περιῆσαν

4 ἐτάσσοντο B || ὦδε P
περίεσαν B, Gaisford

5 περιῆσαν Matthiae: περίεσαν αC:

ταύτη ρέοντα merely a periphrasis for ποταμὸν? But why then ταύτη? And why ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ simpliciter, in c. 30? Is it that the various passages are from various sources, and that Hdt. does not very strictly co-ordinate them? That may be so, yet hardly explains the introduction of τὸν ταύτη ρέοντα. The locative adverb is strictly relative to ἐν Πλαταιῇσι, and seems to imply that the Persians moved from the Asopos, where it was not ἐν Πλ., to the Asopos where it was. But, even so, a difficulty is left, as the Laager is described in c. 15 supra as reaching ἐς τὴν Πλαταιίδα γῆν. That is, however, the Laager: here he is speaking of the line of battle. We must suppose that Mardonios moves out of his camp into battle-line, formed up along the higher course of the Asopos. It is clear in the sequel that the Persians are on the left bank of the river. Is Mardonios aiming to circumvent the Greek position by turning its left flank, or simply offering battle if they will cross the river?

G. B. Grundy, G.P.W. p. 470, cp. Topography p. 19, suggests that the phrase here in question denotes the main stream of the Asopos, or even 'the Thespian Asopos,' as distinguished from the Plataian Asopos, though he clearly sees that ταύτη refers to ἐν Πλαταιῇσι. If anything but the main stream were here meant, it would be, not the branch from Leuktra, but the branch from Plataia, i.e. A<sup>1</sup>. But the contrast is not between two branches of the river, but between the main stream, in the neighbourhood of the Persian camp, and the same main stream a little higher up, in the neighbourhood of the Greek position.

Stein, who leaves the Persians and the Persian camp on the right bank of the river all this time, thinks there must be a lacuna in the narrative. No doubt there are many gaps in the narrative, and many omissions, but Hdt. has duly taken the Persians across the Asopos long ago (c. 15 supra), and Mardonios has not had to cross the river in order to take up the position here described.

We may, perhaps, paraphrase the phrase τὸν Ἀσωπὸν τὸν ταύτη ρέοντα, 'the Asopos, in this part of its course,'

i.e. where it flows through the land of Plataia: emphasis is perhaps laid on the ρέοντα to show that there was water in the river-bed.

4. ἀντετάσσοντο ὧδε ὑπὸ Μαρδονίου.

This account of Mardonios' battle-array may be in part at least drawn from a source (or sources) on the Persian side; for example, Hdt.'s friend from Orochomenos (c. 16 supra); but it is hardly based on authoritative and documentary sources, or it would be fuller and more precise in regard to numbers, names of commanders, and so forth: more, in fact, like the army-list in Bk. 7. Mardonios' men are arranged in five ethnic divisions, Persians, Medes, Baktrians, Indians, Sakians (the medized Greeks not included). If each of these divisions represents a myriad, he had 50,000 men under his command (with perhaps an additional myriad (?) of cavalry); if two myriads, 100,000; or with the army corps of Artabazos, approximately 150,000: further it is hardly necessary to go. The infantry and cavalry are not distinguished from each other in the description here given. The cavalry might have been all in front of the infantry (as at the battle of the Granikos in 334 B.C.) or on the wings; it can scarcely have been in the rear, much less mixed up with the infantry. As the Persian forces all freely crossed the river, the cavalry was probably on the wings; and further, the Persian cavalry was now on the left, and the Boiotio-Thessalian on the right. Hdt. describes the divisions of the Persian army with reference to the ethnic divisions on the Greek side, already enumerated, but with the remarkable result of suggesting a somewhat different ordering of the two wings and the centre, especially of the centre and the left wing, the whole Greek army now falling, like the Persian, into six corps, four in the centre, two on the wings, and the constituent items of these corps—except in the case of the right wing—being varied as against the previous army-list. This slight inconsequence again points to a difference in the sources for the two army-lists at Plataia.

5. Πέρσας: the 'Persians' properly

πλήθει οἱ Πέρσαι, ἐπὶ τε τάξεις πλεῦνας ἐκεκοσμέατο καὶ ἐπέειχον τοὺς Τεγεάτας. ἔταξε δὲ οὕτω· ὃ τι μὲν ἦν αὐτῶν δυνατώτατον πᾶν ἀπολέξας ἔστησε ἀντίον Λακεδαιμονίων, τὸ δὲ ἀσθενέστερον παρέταξε κατὰ τοὺς Τεγεάτας. ταῦτα δ' ἐποίηε φραζόντων τε καὶ διδασκόντων Θηβαίων. Περσέων δὲ 10 ἐχομένους ἔταξε Μήδους· οὗτοι δὲ ἐπέσχον Κορινθίους τε καὶ Ποτιδαίητας καὶ Ὀρχομενίους τε καὶ Σικυνώνιους. Μήδων δὲ ἐχομένους ἔταξε Βακτρίους· οὗτοι δὲ ἐπέσχον Ἐπιδαυρίους τε

6 οἱ om. Pz || ἐπὶ B || τάξεις C 7 καὶ τοὺς B, Holder, van H. ||
οὕτως R || αὐτῶν de Pauw, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: αὐτοῦ 9 δ': δὲ B

so called are stationed over against the Lakedaimonians, who, reckoning only Hoplites, counted ex hypothesi one myriad. There are besides 40,000 ψιλοί, whose exact station on the battle-field is not clearly defined. Greatly to outnumber these 50,000 the Persians must have exceeded a fifth of the whole forces of Mardonios. (That in itself is not impossible!) If only Hoplites are considered, a myriad Persians, or at most two, would serve. If the cavalry is on the extreme left, Persian footmen might easily out-flank a myriad Lakedaimonians, drawn up not less than eight deep, and possibly deeper; but Hdt., starting, of course, with a belief in the immense numerical superiority on the side of Mardonios, not only makes the 'Persians' overlap the Tegeatai, but gives them an extra deep formation.

6. ἐπὶ τε τάξεις πλεῦνας ἐκεκοσμέατο: the pluperfect has hardly a strict temporal force, at least from the point of view of the objective course of events. πλεῦνας means not more than the Lakedaimonians but 'more than he would otherwise have done,' or 'than was usual.' At Marathon, where the Athenians, according to Hdt., formed up for battle after the Persians, in order to draw out a line as long as the Persian, Kallimachos had to diminish his centre ἐπὶ τάξιας (sic) δόλγας 6. 111. In the present case Mardonios is represented as drawing up in battle-array after the Greeks, but he has no apparent desire to out-flank them, so having men to spare he deepens his ranks. Oddly enough, the order was the same on the Greek side: the wings are much stronger, and probably much deeper than the centre; the tactics of Marathon were repeated—or the legend of Marathon was composed in the light of Plataea.

7. ἐπέειχον τοὺς Τεγεάτας: Schweig-haeuser (with whom Sitzler agrees) takes this phrase to mean, they had the Tegeatai "stationed over against them" (gegenüberstehen), and inserts a καί, but cp. κατὰ just above; Stein appears to be correct in rendering the phrase: 'extended so as to cover the Tegeatai'—who, no doubt, as a matter of fact are stationed opposite (κατέχουσι); in other words, the part left over (τὸ ἐπέειχον), after the Lakedaimonians are fully covered, covers the Tegeatai. Cp. Xenoph. Hell. 4. 2. 21. The Lakedaimonian and Tegeatan Hoplites, taken together, form the right (east) wing of the Greek army, 11,500 strong. This passage looks as though the Tegeatai were not standing next the Spartiatai but next the Perioikoi, cp. c. 28 supra, but the words which follow here are not magisterial, but a homage to the reputation of Lakedaimonians, Spartiatai included: the Theban dictation, or inspiration, is perhaps only inferential.

11. Μήδους: the Medes (one, or two myriads?) are opposed to and co-extensive with Korinthians, Poteidaians, Orchomenians, Sikyonians, that is with the first four divisions, right centre, of the Greek line, numbering 8900 Hoplites.

13. Βακτρίους. The Baktrian division (including, perhaps, other Iranians, and numbering one, or possibly two 'myriads'!) has opposite to it, and extends over, the right middle centre of the Greeks, and somewhat more; the Epidaurians, Troizenians, Lepreatai and Mykeno-Tirynthian contingents taken together comprise but 2400 Hoplites, and with the Tirynthians we reach what afterwards appears as the end of the right centre (c. 69 οἱ ἀμφὶ Κορινθίους): the addition of the Phleisians here, 1000 strong, raises the opponents of the Baktrian myriad to 3400, but encroaches

καὶ Τροιζηνίους καὶ Λεπρηήτας τε καὶ Τιρυνθίους καὶ
 15 Μυκηναίους τε καὶ Φλειασίους. μετὰ δὲ Βακτρίους ἔστησε
 Ἰνδούς· οὗτοι δὲ ἐπέσχον Ἑρμιονέας τε καὶ Ἐρετριέας καὶ Στυρέας τε καὶ Χαλκιδέας. Ἰνδῶν δὲ ἐχομένους Σάκας ἔταξε, οἱ ἐπέσχον Ἀμπρακικήτας τε καὶ Ἀνακτορίους καὶ Λευκαδίους καὶ Παλέας καὶ Αἰγινήτας. Σακέων δὲ ἐχομένους ἔταξε ἀντία 20 Ἀθηναίων τε καὶ Πλαταιέων καὶ Μεγαρέων Βοιωτούς τε καὶ

14 λεπριήτας α: λεπρήτας Marc.: Λεπραιήτας z || τε om. α || τυρινθίους B<sup>1</sup> 15 φλιασίους B, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder 18 ἀμβρακιώτας B, Holder || λευκαδίους τε καὶ B 19 παλαίας B: παλλίας Marc. ||
 ἀντίον B

on the first section of the left centre of c. 69.

16. Ἰνδοίς: the contingent of the furthest east was opposed to the Greek contingents from Hermion, Eretria, Styra, Chalkis, a group numbering but 1300 Hoplites. If the 'Indian' levy was reckoned at a myriad, it would hugely outnumber the force immediately opposed to it here.

17. Σάκας: the Sakai or 'Scyths of Asia' (cp. 7. 64) are drawn up over against five Greek ethnic divisions, Amprakiotēs, Anaktorians, Leukadians, Paleis, Aiginetans, numbering all told but 2000 Hoplites. The division on the Persian side represents perhaps a 'myriad'—not necessarily all composed of Sakai, properly so called! These five Greek sections carry us to the extreme left of the centre, as conceived in c. 28 above, and more certainly in c. 69 below (οἱ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας τε καὶ Φλειασίους), except that in the list here given the Phleisians have been attached to the right centre, and the Megarians are now divorced from the centre altogether, and apparently reckoned to the left wing. Such inconsistencies imply that Hdt. has used various 'Sources,' without comparing or co-ordinating them, and has no one clear and consistent conception of the battle-array.

19. ἀντία Ἀθηναίων τε κτλ.: cp. ἀντίον Λακεδαιμονίων above. The variation from κατὰ to ἀντία is noticeable and emphatic; the neuter (s. and pl.) of the adj. is used adverbially, or as a preposition, cp. 7. 209; also with the dative, 7. 236. This use is not Attic. The plural form is here perhaps preferred, as the corps opposed to the Athenians was composed of a number of Greek contingents. The order of the names on the Greek side too is here varied; proceeding consistently from Mardonios' left to right they would run, Megarians, Plataians, Athenians. Again, the formula is further varied by introducing the names on the Greek side before the name, or names, on the Persian. Among other results, the exact order in which the various sections of Greeks on the Persian side stood opposed to the left wing of the Greeks, including the Megarians, remains problematic.

20. Βοιωτούς τε κτλ.: the extreme right of Mardonios' line, his right wing in fact, is composed of medizing Greeks, to wit, Boiotians, Lokrians, Melians, Thessalians and Phokians, 1000 strong, the only figure given for an individual contingent. Hdt. below estimates the total of this sixth division at 50,000, an absurd exaggeration, suggested to him perhaps by the assumption that each of the six divisions, like the division of Artabazos, which is not here brought into line, consisted approximately of 50,000 men. That would involve an average twelve thousand each for Boiotia, Lokris, Malis, Thessaly! The Boiotians might have brought 5000-6000 Hoplites (cp. Thuc. 5. 57. 2, Xenoph. Hell. 4. 2. 17); the Thessalians will have been chiefly mounted men; the Lokrians and Malians may have raised 1500-2000 Hoplites between them: all told, the Greek Hoplites on the Persian right wing will not have numbered more than one myriad, and they are here opposed to the Athenians, Plataians and Megarians, who number together 11,600 men. But there are the Thessalian and

Δοκροὺς καὶ Μηλιάς τε καὶ Θεσσαλοὺς καὶ Φωκίων τοὺς χιλίους· οὐ γὰρ ὦν ἅπαντες οἱ Φωκῆες ἐμήδισαν, ἀλλὰ τινὲς αὐτῶν καὶ τὰ Ἑλλήνων ἠῦξον περὶ τὸν Παρνησσὸν κατειλημένοι, καὶ ἐνθεύτεν ὀρμώμενοι ἔφερόν τε καὶ ἦγον τήν τε Μαρδονίου στρατιήν καὶ τοὺς μετ' αὐτοῦ ἐόντας Ἑλλήνων. 25 ἔταξε δὲ καὶ Μακεδόνας τε καὶ τοὺς περὶ Θεσσαλίην οἰκημένους κατὰ τοὺς Ἀθηναίους. ταῦτα μὲν τῶν ἐθνῶν τὰ 32 μέγιστα ὀνόμασται τῶν ὑπὸ Μαρδονίου ταχθέντων, τὰ περ ἐπιφανέστατά τε ἦν καὶ λόγου πλείστον· ἐνήσαν δὲ καὶ

21 τε om. BP, Holder 22 πάντες B || οἱ om. R: οἱ Φωκῆες om. SV
23 αὐτῶν z || παρνησσὸν Marc. z || κατειλημένοι CP: κατειλημμένοι 24
ὀρμώμενοι P, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ὀρμώμενοι C<sup>z</sup> 26 λακεδαίμονας CMarc.
|| Θεσσαλίην . . . ἐθνῶν om. R || οἰκωμένους z 32. 2 ὀνόμασται z
3 τε om. CS || ἦσαν RSV corr.: ἦνεσαν Vpr.

Boiotian cavalry to be reckoned with, on which see c. 32 ad f. infra; as well as the Makedonians, just below.

21. Φωκίων τοὺς χιλίους: the article is important; this is that Chiliad which had shortly before arrived in camp, c. 17 supra, and had covered itself with dishonour at Thermopylai, 7. 217. It may fairly be concluded that this regiment had 'medized' there and then. Not so all the nation: a remnant, remaining in the land, gained credit for more patriotism.

23. τὰ Ἑλλήνων ἠῦξον, sc. πρήγματα, favoured the Greek side, were for its growing. Cp. 3. 39 τοῦ Πολυκράτους τὰ πρήγματα αἰξέτο, 6. 132 τότε μᾶλλον αἰξέτο (sc. ὁ Μιλτιάδης). Cp. also 8. 30 supra.

περὶ τὸν Παρνησσὸν κατειλημένοι: cp. 8. 27 κατειλήθησαν ἐς τὸν Παρνησσὸν (sic) οἱ Φωκῆες (on another and previous occasion). Parnassos was naturally the refuge of the Phokians, whether from Thessalians, Persians, or others; cp. 8. 32. Hdt. may have varied in spelling; cp. the singular 'Plataia' in 8. 50 supra.

24. ἐνθεύτεν ὀρμώμενοι: cp. 8. 133, 'from that, as their headquarters.'

ἔφερόν τε καὶ ἦγον, 'kept on looting.' φέρειν would primarily suggest portable commodities, ἄγειν living beasts, etc. The assistance rendered by the 'loyal' Phokians does not appear to have amounted to very much. A really large force of confederate Greeks on Parnassos, in the rear of the Persian position in Boiotia, might have been of considerable strategic importance: but perhaps less than justice is done to the services of the Phokians.

26. Μακεδόνας: the Makedonian contingent was probably in the main cavalry, which was the chief strength of Makedonian armies, from the one Alexander to the other; though the great development in this respect is put down by Thucydides (2. 100. 2) to Archelaos (413 B.C.), it is doubtful whether any 'hoplite' organization existed in the Makedonian army before Philip II.; cp. Kaerst ap. Pauly-Wissowa, ii. 447. There may also have been some Makedonian ψιλοί. On the previous service of the Makedonians cp. 8. 34, 140, c. 1 supra.

τοὺς περὶ Θεσσαλίην οἰκημένους. As Θεσσαλοὶ have already been specified, this phrase is to be understood of 'dwellers in the parts about Thessaly,' other than Thessalians proper, e.g. 'Achaians.' Cp. the list of medizing Greeks in 7. 132, and more especially the list of contingents 7. 185 (including Perrhaiboi, Enienes, Dolopes, Magnetes, Achaians).

32. 1. τὰ μέγιστα ὀνόμασται, that is, the five divisions named above, Persians, Medes, Baktrians, Indians, Sakans, were not exclusively composed of men drawn respectively from the nations named, but each division, while containing men of various nations, has been named from the greatest and most conspicuous nationality comprised in it.

ἄλλων ἐθνέων ἄνδρες ἀναμεμιγμένοι, Φρυγῶν τε καὶ Μυσῶν
 5 καὶ Θρηίκων τε καὶ Παιόνων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων, ἐν δὲ καὶ
 Αἰθιοπῶν τε καὶ Αἰγυπτίων οἳ τε Ἑρμοτύβιες καὶ οἱ Καλασίριες καλεόμενοι μαχαιοφόροι, οἳ περ εἰς Αἰγυπτίων μῦνοι μάχιμοι. τούτους δὲ ἔτι ἐν Φαλήρῳ ἔων ἀπὸ τῶν

4 τε om. van H. || Μυσῶν hic pos. B, Holder, van H.: ap. cet. cum Θρηίκων locum mutaverat: id conservat Stein 5 θρηικῶν ACP:
 θρηικῶν B: θρηικῶν B 8 ἔων ἐν Φαλήρῳ z

4. Φρυγῶν τε καὶ Μυσῶν: Phrygians and Mysians may be taken to represent the Asianic levies. On the Phrygians cp. 7. 73; on the Mysians cp. 7. 74. Stein<sup>5</sup> recognizes that the order of the text in R (B) is sachrichtig; cp. App. Crit.

5. Θρηίκων τε καὶ Παιόνων. Thracians and Paionians may be taken to represent European levies drawn from the countries east of the Axios. On the Thracians cp. 7. 110; Paionians, 7. 113, 124; and on both 7. 185. (Were these mainly in the division of Artabazos?)

6. Αἰθιοπῶν τε καὶ Αἰγυπτίων: the Ethiopians and Egyptians represent the Libyan levies as a whole. Ethiopians have been described in the army-list of Xerxes 7. 69. Egyptians are, however, a new feature in the land-forces; their levy and armature have been described, 7. 89, in the navy-list. Their presence at Plataea calls for explanation, which Hdt. proceeds to offer, not without involving himself in some remarkable discrepancies.

οἳ τε . . . μάχιμοι. This note on the Ἑρμοτύβιες and the Καλασίριες is a gloss, or a later insertion by the author's hand, for (i.) it can only refer to the Egyptians, yet here it must also be referred to the Ethiopians! (ii.) The grammar of the whole passage is faultless without it, the genitives Αἰθ. τε καὶ Αἰγ. being strictly co-ordinate with τῶν ἄλλων etc. and following ἄνδρες. (iii.) As a note on Αἰγυπτίων the sentence would have come in much better in 7. 89. (iv.) The absence of a reference to 2. 164 ff. is remarkable. This note appears to be a reminiscence of that disquisition on the Egyptian castes (γένεα) in general, and the warrior caste, or castes, in particular. Whether gloss, or addition by the author's hand, this observation points to the later composition of the Egyptian Logoi, and the prior composition of the story of the Persian war, by our author; but the four reasons above given marks the sentence rather as a gloss than as an author's addition. Cp. Introduction, §§ 7-9.

7. μαχαιοφόροι: cp. 7. 89, where their arms are much more fully described, the description ending μαχαίρας δὲ μεγάλας εἶχον.

8. τούτους δὲ ἔτι ἐν Φαλήρῳ ἔων κτλ. The Egyptian fleet of 200 ships might have mustered 6000 Epibatai (cp. 7. 184) while intact; but then, were they 'Egyptians'? Cp. 7. 96. The statement that Mardonios, while still in Phaleron, debarked these Epibatai for his own purpose deserves attention. What becomes of the hasty flight of the fleet from Salamis (8. 107)? What becomes of the διάκρισις of the forces in Thessaly (8. 113)? It might be argued from the presence of Egyptians in the forces of Mardonios that the fleet, or some portion of it, the Egyptian squadron at least, accompanied the king on his retirement. The assertion that Mardonios selected the Egyptian Epibatai at Phaleron is obviously the translation into narrative of the reason, which immediately follows (οὐ γὰρ ἐτάχθησαν κτλ.), in the light of the supposed departure of the fleet straight from Salamis, 8. 107. It is true that, according to l.c., Xerxes before the departure of the fleet καλέσας Μαρδόνιον ἐκέλευσέν μιν τῆς στρατιῆς διαλέγειν τοὺς βούλεται, and to fulfil his engagement. But nothing is there said of taking any men from the fleet, and Mardonios himself, only a few hours before, has been inveighing against the cowardice of the Egyptians, etc. (8. 100), in a way hardly consistent with his including them in his select force!

The fair inference, however, is not that there were Egyptians all along in the land-forces, but that Hdt. in various contexts preserves various stories and νεῶν ἀπεβιβάσατο ἔοντας ἐπιβάτας· οὐ γὰρ ἐτάχθησαν ἐς τὸν πεζὸν τὸν ἅμα Ξέρξῃ ἀπικόμενον ἐς Ἀθήνας Αἰγύπτιοι. 10 τῶν μὲν δὴ βαρβάρων ἦσαν τριήκοντα μυριάδες, ὥς καὶ πρότερον δεδήλωται· τῶν δὲ Ἑλλήνων τῶν Μαρδονίου συμμαχῶν οἶδε μὲν οὐδεὶς ἀριθμόν, οὐ γὰρ ὧν ἡριθμήθησαν·

9 νηῶν β: 10 ἐς τὰς Marc. z 11 ἔσαν z 12 πρότερον
μοι z 13 ἡρίθησαν β

statements from various sources, often contradictory or more or less contrary to each other, without staying to criticize, to harmonize, to reduce all to self-consistency.

11. τριήκοντα μυριάδες: 300,000 is the figure which Hdt. consistently maintains for the fighting men of Mardonios. This figure, however, in 8. 113 appears to include the ἱππεῖς. Here the ἱππεῖς appear not to be included. It also includes the 60,000 (infantry and cavalry) of the division of Artabazos, 8. 126. This division is given as only 40,000 below (c. 66), and though the difference may be accounted for by the supposed loss of 20,000 before Poteidaia, and in Thrace (cp. 8. 126-129), yet Hdt. fails to subtract these two myriads from the estimate of Mardonios' forces in this place.

The army of Mardonios consists of five divisions, above described, together with a sixth of 'Greek allies,' which Hdt. computes at 50,000 men (making 350,000 in all). Probably the division of Artabazos may be considered here to be absent, and the five divisions of barbarians may be taken as each consisting ex hypothesi of 50,000, or 250,000 in all; that is, each division consists of five myriads (nominal), each under a myriarch (and each myriarch again is subdivided into 10 chiliads, nominal, each led by a chiliarch). The division perhaps consists of 4 myriads of foot, and 1 myriarch of cavalry. If Artabazos had really 60,000 men in his division, he may have had an extra myriarch, perhaps cavalry, for the king's escort; or the figure may have been reached by reckoning his division as 50,000 πεζοί, and adding a myriarch ἱππεῖς—in fact, counting the myriarch of cavalry twice over; the 40,000 men in c. 66 infra represents his normal number of πεζοί.

But this army of Mardonios, in six divisions of 50,000 each, viz. 40,000 πεζοί + 10,000 ἱππεῖς, is none other than the original army of Xerxes, the organization of which has been quite clearly, not quite consciously, indicated in Bk. 7, where the numbers have been vastly exaggerated.

Either, then, Mardonios retained the whole army τὸν ἅμα Ξέρξῃ ἀπικόμενον, and was in command of a (nominal) 300,000, a very improbable alternative; or he did indeed only command a selection, or a section, of the grand army, perhaps the very division, 50,000 strong, of which he had been all along in command, while Artabazos commanded a second division of equal strength, the army of 479 B.C. numbering in all 100,000—exclusive of the European allies; or possibly Mardonios commanded two divisions, which with the division under Artabazos might raise the total Asiatic forces in Europe to 150,000, or thereabouts. See further, Appendices II. § 5, and VIII. § 2. ὥς καὶ πρότερον δεδήλωται: the reference is clearly to Bk. 8, cc. 100, 113, but the verb is much too strong; εἴρηται (as elsewhere) would meet the case: a δήλωσις should have included the items! The words may be a gloss, especially without μοι. Cp. App. Crit.

12. τῶν Μαρδονίου συμμαχῶν: among the 'allies' of Mardonios must be included the Makedonians, whom Hdt. perhaps would not deny as 'Hellenes,' as well as the Boiotians, Lokrians, Malians, Phokians, Thessalians, and dwellers in the parts about Thessaly; cp. c. 31 supra. If these peoples were allies of 'Mardonios' especially, that would be a source of strength to him against Artabazos. But the phrase, perhaps, merely substitutes Mardonios, as commander-in-chief, for the king; or the king's subjects might be 'allies' of Mardonios; cp. 8. 24.

13. οἶδε μὲν οὐδεὶς ἀριθμόν: this would indeed be a rash statement unless Hdt. had literary and documentary evidence to go on. He evidently believes himself to be in control of relatively com-

ὡς δὲ ἐπεικάσαι, ἐς πέντε μυριάδας συλλεγῆναι εἰκάξω. οὗτοι 15 οἱ παραταχθέντες πεζοὶ ἦσαν, ἡ δὲ ἵππος χωρὶς ἐτέτακτο.
 33 Ὡς δὲ ἄρα πάντες οἱ ἐτετάχατο κατὰ ἔθνεα καὶ κατὰ
 τέλεα, ἐνθαῦτα τῇ δευτέρῃ ἡμέρῃ ἐθύνοντο καὶ ἀμφότεροι.

14 ἐπεικάσαι ἐστὶ αC: ἀπεικάσαι ἐστὶ Pz: ἀπεικάσαι B, Holder 15
 ἔσαν z 33. 1 πάντες om. B, Holder || ἐτέτακτο (πάντες omisso)
 Gomperz || κατὰ τε ἔθνεα B, Holder, van H.: καὶ τὰ ἔθνεα B

plete sources on the war; none of his authorities supplied an exact figure for the number of the Greek allies of Mardonios, and he is therefore left to conjecture on his own account. Some of his authorities may also have indulged expressly in conjectures, but he prefers his own.

οὐ γὰρ ὦν ἡριθμήθησαν: this statement, given as the reason, is probably itself an inference from the fact, that there was no positive tradition on the subject. οὐ γὰρ ὦν cp. c. 31 supra. Hdt.'s own conjecture of 50,000 is perhaps relative to the figure already given, at least implicitly, for each of the other five divisions of the army of Mardonios. Hdt. makes no attempt to distribute the total among the items. The chiliad of Phokians is the only detailed figure given. It is not likely that the Boiotians, Lokrians, Malians, Thessalians, and dwellers in the parts about Thessaly, with the Makedonians, put 49,000 men into the field of Plataia. Hdt. is speaking of fighting men. He only allows at most 11,600 Hoplites in the Greek left wing, opposed to this the sixth corps in the Persian line; cp. 31 supra. A 'myriad' for the Greek allies of Mardonios would be a fair estimate.

15. ἡ δὲ ἵππος χωρὶς ἐτέτακτο: the pluperfect can hardly be pressed into meaning that the cavalry had previously been drawn up and assigned a different position; it is only = ἦσαν χωρὶς τεταγμένοι (οἱ ἱππεῖς). Cavalry certainly formed part of the battle-array. The words may, however, fairly be taken to mean that the cavalry had a distinct position, the infantry being in continuous formation. But all the cavalry was not in one place. Most probably the Greek cavalry was on the extreme right, and the Persian cavalry on the extreme left of the position. This conjecture is borne out by the subsequent narrative, notably the exploit of the Persian cavalry in c. 39, and that of the Hellenic c. 69 infra. ἡ δὲ ἵππος χωρὶς curiously anticipates a phrase which became current in connexion with the legend of Marathon (cp. Hdt. IV.-VI. ii. 231).

It is not quite clear in this passage whether Hdt. means to exclude the cavalry from the numerical computations just given. Prima facie he excludes it only from the παράταξις. Moreover, cavalry must surely be included in his computation of the 50,000 allies. Again, in 8. 113 the Persian cavalry appears to be expressly included in the 300,000. All which considered, it may be concluded that the cavalry is not here to be reckoned separately, difficult as it remains on that plan to account for the figures 60,000 assigned to the corps d'armée under Artabazos 8. 126 (and to Tigranes c. 69 infra, or rather Masistes, vide notes in l.).

33. 1. ἐτετάχατο: their formation in battle-array had been accomplished—a fresh development, or stage (ἄρα); the pluperfect is temporal.

κατὰ ἔθνεα καὶ κατὰ τέλεα: both terms refer alike to the infantry and to the cavalry; cp. 7. 81.

2. τῇ δευτέρῃ ἡμέρῃ, i.e. the day after the one on which the Greeks had advanced and taken up the position near the Androkrateion and Gargaphia, and on which Mardonios had moved out, and somewhat westwards, to face them. With these words the Journal, or Diary, of Plataia may be said to begin, but unfortunately implicit reliance cannot be placed on the data (cp. Appendix VIII. § 2). Both sides (καὶ ἀμφότεροι, you might not have expected it of the barbarians) had sacrifices offered, with a view to ascertaining whether they should deliver the attack; on each side the signs were unfavourable to the offensive; cp. c. 36 infra. Ancient armies approached each other very nearly before a shot could be loosed, or a blow dealt. It must often have been necessary to devise some plan for restraining the impatience of the men in such close proximity to the foe from breaking line

"Ελλησι μὲν Τεισαμενὸς Ἀντιόχου ἦν ὁ θυόμενος*, οὗτος γὰρ δὴ εἶπετο τῷ στρατεύματι τούτῳ μάντις· τὸν ἔοντα Ἥλειον καὶ γένεος τοῦ Ἰαμιδέων [Κλυτιάδην] Λακεδαιμόνιοι 5 ἐποιήσαντο λεωσφέτερον. Τεισαμενῷ γὰρ μαντευομένῳ ἐν and charging forward. The necessity for a 'sign' could obviously be utilized. In the present case, with the deep Asopos bed, not dry either, between them, a great advantage lay with the side which could induce the other to cross the stream.

3 Τεισαμενὸς van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: τισαμενὸς (et sic passim) 5 Κλυτιάδου S: Κλυτιάδην del. Valckenaer 6 λεὼ σφέτερον α: νεωστὶ σφέτερον Naber: πολίτην σφέτερον Cobet, van H.

3. Τεισαμενὸς Ἀντιόχου. The proper name Antiochos was both heroic and of common occurrence. One of the Attic tribes (φύλαι) was named the Antiochis, from an enchorial hero or ἀρχηγέτης: that Antiochos was a 'Herakleid' (ps.-Demosth. Epitaph. 31), and the name recurs at Athens in the fifth century (e.g. Xenoph. Hell. 1. 5. 11). It is found also in Makedonia, Thuc. 2. 80. 6 (a source from which it was destined to spread far and wide), and occurs throughout Hellas (Messenia, Pausan. 4. 4. 4; Arkadia, Xenoph. Hell. 7. 1. 33, etc. etc.). This Eleian (of whom nothing more is known) is not included in the list of twenty Antiochi, antecedent to Antiochos Soter, in Pauly-Wissowa, i. 2449f. The name Teisamenos is first found applied to the son of Orestes, son of Agamemnon, who succeeded his father as king of Lakadaimon, and was driven out by the Herakleids on their 'restoration,' Pausan. 2. 18. 6; cp. c. 26 supra. A second Teisamenos, son of Thersandros, son of Polyneikes, appears among the heroic kings of Thebes; cp. 4. 147, 6. 52 supra. A Trachinian of the name appears in Thucydides 3. 92. 2 as an envoy to Sparta in the year 427-426 B.C., and the name was in use at Athens (cp. C.I.A. vol. i. pp. 52, 72, No. 133, 414-3 B.C.). Of the one here in question little is known except what Hdt. records—for Plutarch, Arist. 11, adds nothing, and Pausanias, 3. 11. 5-8, 6. 14. 13, only some details not affecting the story of Plataia; e.g. his son's and grandson's names, Agelochos and Agias. This Agias was diviner to Lysandros at Aigospotami (405 B.C.), and the diviner Teisamenos, who was implicated in the conspiracy of Kinadon (397 B.C., Xenoph. Hell. 3. 3. 11), was presumably his son, or brother.

5. Ἰαμιδέων: cp. Pausan. 6. 2. 5 οἱ δ' Ἰαμίδαι καλούμενοι μάντις γεγόνασιν ἀπὸ Ἰάμου· τὸν δὲ εἶναι παῖδα Ἀπόλλωνος καὶ λαβεῖν μαντικὴν φησὶν ἐν ἄσματι Πίνδαρος. The reference is to Ol. 6. 43-51. (Perhaps the clan were 'medicine-men,' cp. ἰάομαι, followers of Apollo ἱατρὸς, or πατήρων, before they were 'soothsayers.') The Iamids, though at home perhaps in Elis, were to be found far and wide throughout Hellas; the Pindaric Ode cited was composed in honour of Agesias, an Iamid of Syracuse (diviner to Hieron), whose branch of the family was rooted in Arkadia (Stymphalos). There were two other mantic families or clans in Elis, the Telliadae, cp. c. 37 infra, and the Κλυτιάδαι; cp. Cicero, de Div. 1. 41. Κλυτιάδην here must be a gloss, and an error. Blakesley's note is ingenious. "Κλυτιάδην was originally an alternative, both families claiming Teisamenos: Κλυτιάδου was an harmonistic improvement in S. or the archetype of S." cp. App. Crit.

6. λεωσφέτερον: an hapaxlegomenon absolutely. Two etymologies have been proposed: (1) λέως, leōs, Ion. adv. = τελέως, 'completely their own'; cp. L. & S. (2) λεώς (Attic) = λαός populus, popularis. The Ionic form points to (1), though λεώς is found in Hdt. (e.g. 8. 136). In neither case is the word in form a laconism. On leōs cp. Weir Smyth, Ionic, § 716, p. 614.

γάρ: digressive. Hdt. here inserts a pure digression on the biography of Teisamenos, which, though interrupting the story of Plataia, contains very important matters bearing upon Laconian law, the history of the Pentekontaetis, the date of the composition of his own work, and other matters.

μαντεύσθαι is used by Hdt. differently (a) of the consultant as here, cp. 8. 36, etc.; (b) of the diviner, c. 35

Δελφοῖσι περὶ γόνου ἀνείλε ἡ Πυθίη ἀγῶνας τοὺς μεγίστους ἀναιρήσεσθαι πέντε. ὃ μὲν δὴ ἀμαρτῶν τοῦ χρηστηρίου προσεῖχε γυμνασίοισι ὡς ἀναιρησόμενος γυμνικούς ἀγῶνας, 10 ἀσκέων δὲ πεντάεθλον παρὰ ἐν πάλαισμα ἔδραμε νικᾶν Ὀλυμπιάδα, Ἱερωνύμῳ τῷ Ἀνδρίῳ ἐλθὼν ἐς ἔριν. Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ μαθόντες οὐκ ἐς γυμνικούς ἀλλ' ἐς ἀρήιους ἀγῶνας

7 γόνου: ἀγῶνος sive ἀγώνων? Krueger 9 τοῖσι γυμνασίοισι: 10 πένταθλον B 11 ἀνδρείῳ C || μαθόντες δὲ Λακεδαιμόνιοι: 12 ἀρκίους Marc. z

infra, etc.; and even (c) of the god, as in 1. 65.

ἐν Δελφοῖσι: the notice suggests a possible source, and, if the story was picked up by Hdt. in Delphi, the digression might well belong to the second draft of the work, and be an insertion after his visit to Greece. The last date involved in the story is the year of the battle of Tanagra, 457 B.C. See below.

7. περὶ γόνου: cp. 5. 92 ἐστάλη ὦν ἐς Δελφούς περὶ γόνου. Schweighauser doubted the reading here. The answer looks like a bad pun (γόνου, ἀγῶνα). Teisamenos had a son Agelochos, Pausan. 3. 11. 5.

ἀνείλε: ἀναιρεῖν edere (responsum), cp. 1. 13 τὸ χρηστήριον (subj.), 2. 52 τὸ μαντήριον, 6. 69 οἱ μάντιες.

8. ἀναιρήσεσθαι: cp. c. 64 infra νίκην ἀναιρέεται καλλίστην, and with ἀγῶνα per metonymiam, 6. 70, 103, cp. 5. 102 (active).

10. ἀσκέων δὲ πεντάεθλον: cp. 6. 92 ἀνὴρ πεντάεθλον ἐπασκῆσας. The five-fold contest consisted of 'Jump, Race, Quoit, Javelin, Wrestling' according to the epigram ascribed to Simonides, 153 (Bergk iii. 4 500):

Ἴσθμια καὶ Πυθοὶ Διοφῶν ὁ Φίλωνος ἐνίκα, ἄλλα ποδωκίην δίσκον ἄκοντα πάλην, perhaps in the order of the said pentameter. Pausan. 5. 8. 3 dates its introduction at Olympia to Ol. 18.

παρὰ ἐν πάλαισμα ἔδραμε: an odd combination, 'he only missed running an Olympic victory in the Pentathlon by one bout, or fall, in the wrestling.' One may take ἔδραμε as mere metaphor ('scoring,' cp. 7. 57). παρὰ, 'exclusive'; cp. Thuc. 7. 2. 4 παρὰ τοσούτων ('by so little') μὲν αἱ Συράκονσαι ἦλθον κινδύνου (of being surrounded and taken). Teisamenos had presumably scored victories in two out of the five events, but was thrown twice in the final event by one of the other competitors. It surely was never necessary for victory in the Pentathlon to win all five events: three out of the five must have scored a win. Thus it would not always be necessary to hold all five, cp. Plutarch, Symp. 9. 2. 2 ταῖς τρισίν, ὥσπερ οἱ πένταθλοι, περίεσι καὶ νικᾷ. Cp. also Aischyl. Agam. 151 τριακτῆρος οἴχεται τυχῶν and note ad l. ap. Wecklein, Orestie (1888); esp. Pollux, 3. 30 ἐπὶ πεντάθλου τὸ νικῆσαι ἀποτριάξει λέγουσι. Cp. further the next note.

11. Ἱερωνύμῳ τῷ Ἀνδρίῳ: the name Hieronymos was in use at Athens (cp. Aristoph. Ach. 386, Ecol. 201), Elis (Xenoph. Anab. 3. 1. 34), Syracuse (Diod. 26. 15. 1-2), and elsewhere. The Andrian too had perhaps claims to a sacral character. Pausanias (6. 14. 13) saw a statue of him at Olympia, where his victory over Teisamenos was memorable; and also (3. 11. 6) mentions that he was defeated by the Eleian in running and leaping, though successful in the wrestling; he omits the disk and the javelin, in which also he must have been victorious; cp. the previous note.

The Pentathlon must have been conducted in 'heats,' and the heats in wrestling, from the nature of the case, κατὰ λόγον μονομαχίης, but we need not conclude that Hieronymos was the only other competitor on this occasion.

The Olympiad of Teisamenos and Hieronymos is not specified; it can hardly have been so recent as the 75th (=430 B.C.), but as Plataia is the first of the μέγιστοι ἀγῶνες it may have been the 74th=484 B.C.

Λακεδαιμόνιοι δέ: the overtures apparently come from the Spartan side, inspired perhaps by Delphi, or by friends of the Eleian himself.

φέρον τὸ Τεισαμενοῦ μαντήιον, μισθῷ ἐπειρῶντο πείσαντες Τεισαμενὸν ποιεέσθαι ἅμα Ἡρακλειδέων τοῖσι βασιλεῦσι ἡγεμόνα τῶν πολέμων. ὃ δὲ ὀρέων περὶ πολλοῦ ποιευμένους 15 Σπαρτιήτας φίλον αὐτὸν προσθέσθαι, μαθὼν τοῦτο ἀνέτιμα, σημαίνων σφί ὥς, ἦν μιν πολιήτην σφέτερον ποιήσονται τῶν πάντων μεταδιδόντες, ποιήσει ταῦτα, ἐπ' ἄλλῳ μισθῷ δ' οὐ. Σπαρτιήται δὲ πρῶτα μὲν ἀκούσαντες δεινὰ ἐποιεῦντο καὶ 20 μετίεσαν τῆς χρησμοσύνης τὸ παράπαν, τέλος δὲ δείματος μεγάλου ἐπικρεμαμένου τοῦ Περσικοῦ τούτου στρατεύματος καταίνεον μετιόντες. ὃ δὲ γνούς τετραμμένους σφέας οὐδ'

13 Τεισαμενοῦ abesse malit van H. || σπείσαντες C 15 πολεμίων Marc. z || ὀρέων α, Holder 16 προθέσθαι R 17 ποιήσονται R 18 ποιήσιν S, Schaefer 19 δεινὰ τε? Stein<sup>2</sup> || ἐποιεῦντο B, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder: ἐποίησαν τε (δεινὰ τε ἐποίησαν van H.) 20 μετίεσαν Marc. 22 μετιόντες B, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: μετιέντες || οὐδὲ οὕτως α: οὐδὲ ὥς malit van H.

13. φέρον ἐς, 'bearing on,' as we say; cp. 6. 19 τὸ χρηστήριον ἐς τοὺς Ἀργεῖους φέρον.

ἐπειρῶντο πείσαντες: i.e. μισθῷ πείσαντες ἐπειρῶντο ποιεέσθαι . . ἡγεμόνα τῶν πολέμων. These words need not be taken to imply a limitation of the royal prerogative, least of all in the actual conduct of war operations. The phrase comes not from an official Spartan source, and Xenophon (Lac. Rep. 13) takes no account of any infringement of the king's functions in war as λεπὲς μὲν τὰ πρὸς τοὺς θεοὺς . . στρατηγὸς δὲ τὰ πρὸς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους. But the king was not a μάντις, and this position in the royal suite was no doubt offered to the Eleian.

14. Ἡρακλειδέων: there were of course many Heracleids in Sparta beside the two kings (which accounts for the genitive), but the introduction of the word here is curious: it can hardly be a limitation, an emphatically partitive genitive, but must rather have been meant to suggest that the Iamidae and the Heracleidae were, so to speak, in one class; or the Iamids even a step higher, as co-ordinate with those of the Heracleids who were actually in the royal office.

15. ὀρέων: not so much a case of literal vision, ὄψις, as of perception by various channels, cp. μαθὼν just below. Hdt. does not always employ the terminology of sense perceptions with prosaic literalness or scientific accuracy; cp. 8. 12. 6, 88. 9, etc.

περὶ πολλοῦ ποιευμένους: cp. 7. 181, 8. 40; also δεινὰ ἐποιεῦντο just below.

16. Σπαρτιήτας: i.e. citizens of Sparta.

φίλον προσθέσθαι: cp. 3. 74.

ἀνέτιμα, 'kept putting the price up,' a good imperfect; the word is rare in literature (as the language of the market!), but cp. Pollux 3. 125 ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν πολλοῦ πιπρασκόντων εἰποῖς ἂν ἐπιτιμῶσιν, ἀνατιμῶνται, ἐπιτείνουσι τὰς τιμὰς, ὥς τὸ ἐναντίον ἐκταννίζουσιν, ἀξία πιπράσκουσιν.

19. δεινὰ ἐποιεῦντο καὶ μετίεσαν τῆς χρησμοσύνης: the text is in some doubt; καὶ μετίεσαν appears to me de trop, without it τῆς χρ. were plainly 'his demand.' χρησμοσύνη is a curious word. Schweighauser misunderstood it as = μαντοσύνη. It has nothing to do with χρησμός, but was used by Herakleitos (Bywater, No. xxiv. p. 11) as opposed to κόπος. Cp. χρηρίζειν. The form χρημοσύνη is found in Tyrtaios and Theognis; cp. L. & S. sub v.

μετίεσαν τῆς χρησμοσύνης must mean 'abandoned their desire, or request'—relaxed (of) their need—the usual construction being with the accus. rei, but the gen. being also found; e.g. Il. 6. 330 ὃν τινὰ πον μετιέντα ἴδοις στυγεροῦ πόλεμοιο. The occurrence of μετιόντες just below makes an inelegancy by 'unconscious iteration': καταίνεον μετιόντες, 'they went after him and agreed,' consented (imperf.): though μετιέντες would be worse.

22. γνούς: cp. μαθὼν, ὀρέων above.

οὕτω ἔτι ἔφη ἀρκέεσθαι τούτοις μόνουσι, ἀλλὰ δεῖν ἔτι τὸν ἀδελφεὸν ἑωυτοῦ Ἥγιν γίνεσθαι Σπαρτιήτην ἐπὶ τοῖσι
 34 αὐτοῖσι λόγοις τοῖσι καὶ αὐτός [γίνεται]. ταῦτα δὲ λέγων οὗτος ἐμίμετο Μελάμποδα, ὡς εἰκάσαι βασιλὴν τε καὶ

23 ἔφη ἔτι :: ἔτι καὶ ::
 cens. Krueger, van H. || γένεσθαι ::

24 αὐτοῦ P: aut τὸν aut ἑωυτοῦ delend.
 25 γίνεται del. van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>

τετραμμένους σφέας, 'their change of mind'; repeated c. 34 infra, cp. 7. 15 τετραμμένῳ γὰρ δὴ καὶ μετεγνωκότι κτλ.

23. οὕτω . . τούτοις μόνουσι looks pleonastic; cp. ταῦτα οὕτω 8. 119.

ἀρκέεσθαι, pass. 'to be satisfied with' is observable; cp. Aristot. Elh. N. 2. 7. 5=1107 B ἀρκομένοι αὐτῷ τούτῳ.

τὸν ἀδελφεὸν ἑωυτοῦ Ἥγιν. Stein seems to think that the man's childlessness led him to secure for his brother (and family) a position in Sparta. But the Delphian response περὶ γόνου may have been as favourable in his case as in that of Eëtion, 5. 92. Pausanias reports descendants of his in Sparta (l.c. supra); they may, of course, have been his brother's (or his own by adoption). The form Hegias is Ionic (and Attic) for Ἀγίας or Ἀγίας, a name perhaps identical with Ἄγης. (It cannot even in this family be connected with ἄγιος, Ἀγίων, the α in which is short.) The name recurs in the pedigree, Teisamenos, Agelochos, Agias, Pausan. 3. 11. 5.

24. Σπαρτιήτην, 'a full citizen'; cp. πολίτην σφέτερον and λεωσφέτερον above.

34. 2. οὗτος ἐμίμετο Μελάμποδα, 'Teisamenos was copying Melampús.' The story of Melampús here is a digression within a digression, but may be of the same date in the composition of Hdt.'s work as the story of Teisamenos; see, however, below, and Introduction, § 9. 'Teisamenos did but follow the example of Melampús' (Hdt. is great on plagiarists; so Kleisthenes of Athens copied his grandfather of Sikyon, 5. 67) 'with a difference.' ὡς εἰκάσαι βασιλὴν τε καὶ πολίτην αἰτεμένους (cp. App. Crit.), 'if we may compare men together who were demanding respectively kingship and citizenship.' Melampús was even more exigent than Teisamenos. Melampús had still reputed descendants in Greece; a descendant of his was with Leonidas at Thermopylai, cp. 7. 221. His death perhaps created the vacancy filled by the Eleian. Hdt. gives the name of the father of Melampús as Amytheon, 2. 49 (i.e. Ἀμυθάων), and if the patronymic always proved the earliest notice, that passage would be of earlier composition than this, and this digression on Melampús (probably) of later composition (third hand) than the digression on Teisamenos (second hand) in which it is embedded. Amythaon apparently belongs (in Homer) to the south Thessalian cycle; his mother is Tyro, his father Kretheus, his brothers are Aison and Phereus, the Poseidonian Pelias and Neleus are his uterine brethren; Od. 11. 253 ff. A part of Elis was named Ἀμυθαονία, Steph. B. sub τ. ('perhaps the territory of Triphylian Pylos,' Hirschfeld ap. Pauly-Wissowa i. 2014). Amythaon himself has been traced to a chthonian source, as 'a personification of Hades' (cp. Wernicke, ibid.). Melampús is the μάντις ἀμύμων who won the daughter of Neleus 'for his brother,' Od. 11. 291, a story more fully set forth Od. 15. 226 ff., where Pylos is given as his proper home, whence he passes to Argos, ναίμεναι πολλοῖσιν ἀνάσσουσιν Ἀργείοισιν, without the process being further explained — which, however, hardly proves that 'Homer' did not 'know' the explanation.

Diodoros 4. 68 gives the story in rationalized form; Apollodoros 2. 2. 2 more clearly supplies the part played by the women, in the first instance the daughters of Proitos; Pausanias 2. 18. 4 adds the duration of the dynasties. Five kings succeeded Bias (in four generations) and six succeeded Melampús (in six generations, down to Amphilochos; cp. 7. 91 supra), i.e. the dynasty of Melampús outlasted that of Bias, while the native dynasty of the house of Anaxagoras, son of Argos, outlasted both the others, but was displaced by Orestes, son of Agamemnon.

The connexion with the Dionysiac orgies ascribed to Melampús in 2. 49 does not at first sight square with the πολιτήν αἰτεομένους. καὶ γὰρ δὴ καὶ Μελάμπους τῶν ἐν Ἄργεϊ γυναικῶν μανεισέων, ὥς μιν οἱ Ἄργεῖοι ἐμισθοῦντο ἐκ Πύλου παῦσαι τὰς σφετέρας γυναῖκας τῆς νόσου, μισθὸν 5 προτείναιο τῆς βασιλῆως τὸ ἥμισυ. οὐκ ἀνασχομένων δὲ τῶν Ἄργείων ἀλλ' ἀπιόντων, ὥς ἐμαίνοντο πλεῦνες τῶν γυναικῶν, οὕτω δὴ ὑποστάντες τὰ ὁ Μελάμπους προτείναιο ἦσαν δώσοντες οἱ ταῦτα. ὁ δὲ ἐνθαῦτα δὴ ἐπορέγεται ὀρέων 10 μεταδώσει τὸ τριτημόριον τῆς βασιλῆως, οὐ ποιήσιν τὰ βούλονται. οἱ δὲ Ἄργεῖοι ἀπειληθέντες ἐς στεινὸν καταίνουσι καὶ ταῦτα. ὥς δὲ καὶ Σπαρτιῆται, ἐδέοντο γὰρ δεινῶς τοῦ 35

34. 3 αἰτεομένους Stein: αἰτεόμενον Reiske, Holder, van H.: αἰτεόμενος 4 ἄργειν R || μανασέων 5 νόσου BC Marc., Stein<sup>3</sup> 6 προτείναιο 7 ἀλλὰ α || πολλῶ πλεῦνες Bz, Holder, van H. 8 προτείναιο C 9 ἦσαν Marc. || ἐπορέγεται 10 ὀρέων α, Holder 10 ἦν καὶ μὴ B 11 μεταδώσει RV: μεταδώσειν S 35. 1 ὥς ABRz: ὥς van H. || καὶ om. B

therapeutic agency here ascribed to him; but the diviner may possibly have cast out Beelzebub by the aid of Beelzebub on homeopathic principles.

8. ὑποστάντες, not understanding, but 'undergoing,' undertaking, agreeing to; cp. δίκας ὑποστῆναι c. 94 infra.

προτείνεσθαι (bis) may be used of a proposal from either side; cp. 7. 160.

9. ἦσαν δώσοντες, daturi erant, Stein (or rather datum ibant). But here, in view of ἀπιόντων just before, ἦσαν is not to be taken as a mere auxiliary, but means 'they went,' to Pylos, a second time.

ὀρέων . . . τετραμμένους = γνοὺς τετραμμένους c. 33 supra; otherwise it might have been taken in a more literal and physical sense.

10. Βίαντι. Bias is not actually named in Homer, and the winning of a bride for 'his brother' (Od. 15. 237) is all that is ascribed to Melampus in this connexion. That Saga is told in Pausan. 4. 36. 3 and more fully by Apollodoros 1. 9. 12 (from which place it appears that the cunning of 'Blackfoot' was of more value than the strength of 'Bias').

11. τὸ τριτημόριον τῆς βασιλῆως. He had demanded τὸ ἥμισυ, in the first instance, for himself; the other half—as 'goes without saying'—to be left to the native king (i.e. Anaxagoras). How much did he now demand for his brother? How much did he keep for himself? How much was he asking for in all? If he was to have one-half and his brother one-third, he was asking now for five-sixths, which is hardly credible, especially as his demand was granted. He may have been demanding still one-half for himself and one-third of the remaining half for his brother, i.e. one-sixth of the whole for his brother, their shares amounting together to two-thirds of the whole. Schweighauser takes it in this sense. The ancient authorities all take the division as into three equal thirds. (So Diodor., Pausan., Schol. to Pindar, Nem. 9. 30.) There is this much to be urged for the second alternative: (a) nothing is said by Hdt. of the withdrawal of the previous condition; (b) it corresponds more nearly with the relative duration of the two dynasties, in Pausanias six and four generations respectively; (c) the diviner would presumably keep the lion's share for himself. (The proportions would then have been Melampus one-half, Anaxagoras one-third, Bias one-sixth.)

12. ἀπειληθέντες ἐς στεινόν: στεινόν must be properly an adjective; the substantive is στεῖνος: cp. c. 13 supra. For ἀπειλ. cp. 8. 109, and cp. κατελημένοι c. 31 supra.

35. 1. ὥς = οὕτως, cp. 8. 126. 12 etc. ἔδειντο γὰρ δεινῶς τοῦ Τ., 'for they were terribly in want of Teisamenos.'

Τεισαμενοῦ, πάντως συνεχώρεόν οἱ. συγχωρησάντων δὲ καὶ ταῦτα τῶν Σπαρτιητέων, οὕτω δὴ πέντε σφί μαντεύμενος ἀγῶνας τοὺς μεγίστους Τεισαμενὸς ὁ Ἥλεις, γενόμενος 5 Σπαρτιήτης, συγκαταίρει. μῦνοι δὲ δὴ πάντων ἀνθρώπων ἐγένοντο οὗτοι Σπαρτιήτησι πολιῆται, οἱ δὲ πέντε ἀγῶνες οἶδε ἐγένοντο, εἰς μὲν καὶ πρῶτος οὗτος ὁ ἐν Πλαταιῆσι, ἐπὶ δὲ ὁ ἐν Τεγέῃ πρὸς Τεγεήτας τε καὶ Ἀργείους γενόμενος, μετὰ δὲ ὁ ἐν Διπαιεύσι πρὸς Ἀρκάδας πάντας πλὴν Μαντι-

2 πάντα Schaefer, van H.: μάντιος, conl. Stein<sup>2</sup> 3 τῶν Σπαρτιητέων del. van H. 7 ἐπεὶ C 8 ἐν τῇ γῇ R || τε om. BPz
9 ὁ ἐν . . δὲ ὁ om. C

2. πάντως has exercised the commentators; cp. App. Crit.

συνεχώρεον: cp. 7. 161.

3. μαντεύμενος, 'acting in the capacity of μάντις.' Cp. βουλεύων, στρατηγῶν, etc.

4. ἀγῶνας τοὺς μεγίστους, repeated from (the oracle in) c. 33 supra.

Τεισαμενὸς ὁ Ἥλεις γεν. Σπ. is stylistically observable; it marks the solemnity of the occasion with a quasi-heraldic flourish.

5. συγκαταίρει: cf. ἀναίρειν in fut. midd., ibid.

μῦνοι δὲ δὴ . . πολιῆται. This remark destroys the sequence, and is probably a gloss. It would have come in better after συνεχώρεόν of above. That it is inconsistent with the story of the Minyai 4. 145 would be no objection to it, for Hdt. might not have been acquainted with that story when he penned this remark, if authentic; besides, the Minyai were afterwards disfranchised; nor is Hdt. so careful to avoid inconsistencies. The statement, however, rules out the case of Tyrtaios (Plutarch, Mor. 230), the writer perhaps never having heard of him, or else considering him a Spartiate von Haus aus. The exclusiveness of the Spartan franchise was the ruin of the Spartan state; the Lakonic praetorians had as great an objection to Uitlanders as any people on record.

7. ὁ ἐν Πλαταιῆσι: that the battle 'in Plataia' (cp. cc. 16, 25 supra) is the first of the five ἀγῶνες seems to show that Teisamenos had not long been a citizen of Sparta in 479 B.C. Cp. c. 33 supra.

ἐπὶ δὲ ὁ ἐν Τεγέῃ: the adverbial use of ἐπὶ (local and temporal) is less common than that of μετὰ (temporal); οὕτω may be understood. Cp. 7. 219, 8. 93, 113, etc.

No distinction is drawn in this place between the relative magnitude or importance of the five ἀγῶνες, they are all μέγιστοι perhaps simply as ἀρχαί (cp. c. 33 supra), but also, perhaps, from any point of view, even without unduly depreciating the magnitude and importance of the first, which is here 'first' purely in time.

The battle of Tegea, against the Tegeatai and Argives, like the two which succeed it, was an episode in those πόλεμοι οἰκεῖοι which, according to Thuc. 1. 118. 2, preoccupied the Spartans, during the period of the growth of the power of Athens, but of which unfortunately very few details have been preserved for us. Cp. Strabo 377 μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἐν Σαλαμῖνι ναυμαχίαν Ἀργεῖοι μετὰ Κλεωναίων καὶ Τεγεατῶν ἐπελθόντες ἄρδην τὰς Μυκήνας ἀνείλον καὶ τὴν χώραν διενέμναντο. This passage exhibits the Tegeatai in alliance with Argos, and of course opposed to Sparta, at the time of the destruction of Mykenai; cp. c. 23 supra; but that was after the outbreak of the Helot war (Busolt, III. i. 121 n.). The battle of Tegea probably falls some years earlier, perhaps while the exiled Leotychidas was in residence there, 6. 72 supra (and Themistokles already in Argos?). It was evidently a victory, but not a decisive victory, for Sparta, as it was followed by a second great battle in Arkadia. Busolt (l.c.) refers the Epigram of Simonides (Bergk iii. 460, No. 102) to the Tegeatai who fell in this fight, and dates the event 473 B.C.

9. ὁ ἐν Διπαιεύσι: Pausanias (who is the chief authority) makes Dipaia a νέων, ἐπὶ δὲ ὁ Μεσσηνίων ὁ πρὸς Ἰσθμῷ ὕστατος δὲ ὁ ἐν 10 Τανάγρῃ πρὸς Ἀθηναίους τε καὶ Ἀργεῖους γενόμενος [οὗτος δὲ ὕστατος] κατεργάσθη τῶν πέντε ἀγώνων.

Οὗτος δὲ τότε τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι ὁ Τεισαμενός, ἀγόντων τῶν 36
Σπαρτιητέων, ἐμαντεύετο ἐν τῇ Πλαταιίδι. τοῖσι μὲν νυν

10 ὁ ante Μεσσηνίων om. z || τῷ Ἰσθμῷ Bz: Ἰθώμῃ Paulmier, Stein<sup>12</sup>, Holder, van H. 11 οὗτος δὲ ὕστατος del. Stein<sup>3</sup>: οὗτος . . ἀγόντων
secl. Krueger, van H. 36. 1 δὲ S || ἀγών R(V) || τῶν om. S

town on the river Helisson (8. 31. 1) in the Arkadian district of Mainalia (3. 11. 7, cp. c. 11 l. 12 supra); it was one of the townships afterwards absorbed in Megalopolis (8. 27. 3). No details of the battle have been preserved, but it was a contest between the Spartans and all the Arkadians (less the Mantineians) and resulted in a victory for Sparta. The Argives are this time conspicuous by their absence; Busolt (III. i. 121 ff.) conjectures that they were engaged in the war with Tiryns, places the battle of Dipaia in 471 B.C., and ascribes the union of Arkadia to the intrigues of Themistokles.

Curtius, Peloponnesos i. 315, incidentally dates the battle 469 B.C., cp. Gr. Ges. ii.<sup>6</sup> (1888) 164, 829 (without precise date). The exact emplacement of Dipaia (Dipaieis) is disputed, notwithstanding the fact that the name survives in the district (village, Dabia).

(Polyainos 1. 41 = Xenoph. Hell. 7. 1. 28 ff., and has no bearing on this passage.)

10. ὁ Μεσσηνίων ὁ πρὸς Ἰσθμῷ. Stein reverts to the reading of the codd. on the ground that Pausanias must have read Ἰσθμῷ here, as he attempts to harmonize this passage with Thuc. 1. 101-3. That is, supposing the text of Pausanias 3. 11. 8 to run: τέταρτον δὲ ἠγωνίσαντο πρὸς τοὺς ἐξ Ἰσθμοῦ ἐς Ἰθώμην ἀποστάνας τῶν Εἰλωτῶν. That is the vulgate, and is maintained by Hitzig-Bluemner as by Schubart, who says: inepta haec verba (ἐξ Ἰσθμοῦ) reddidi Pausanias e corrupto Herodoti libro (9. 35) ea transcribenti. The ingenious emendation ἐκ τοῦ σεισμοῦ has been frequently advocated. Paulmier (Palmerius) changed the Ἰσθμῷ here to Ἰθώμῃ. Those who adhere to the MS. reading are hard bested to explain it. Stein<sup>3</sup> says there was an old Messenian king named Ἰσθμῖος (Pausan. 4. 3. 10) and that there must have been a place in Messenia of the name Ἰσθμός. This is better than Rawlinson and Blakesley, who think that the Isthmos of Korinth is intended (which would certainly be τῷ Ἰσθμῷ): a battle between the Spartans and Messenians at 'the Isthmos' is hardly conceivable. The Helot war broke out in 464 B.C. and lasted ten years, Thuc. 1. 101-103, Busolt, III. i. 242. Busolt's idea that Μεσσηνίων here qualifies Ἰσθμῷ and distinguishes it thereby from the Korinthian Isthmos appears to be inadmissible. To give this sense the text should run: ἐπὶ δὲ ὁ πρὸς Ἰσθμῷ Μεσσηνίων. The text is in fact corrupt, ὁ Μεσσηνίων not being co-ordinate with the formula for the four other ἀγῶνες.

ὁ ἐν Τανάγρῃ: cp. Thuc. 1. 107. 3 ff. For the texts bearing on the battle cp. Hill, Sources, pp. 103 ff. The date of the battle is 457 B.C. (458-7); cp. Busolt, III. i. 311 ff. The regent Nikomedes was in command of the Lakedaimonians and allies; hence the presence of Teisamenos. The object of the expedition was the restoration of Theban power in Central Greece, as a makeweight against Athens, but the expedition was not an unqualified success from the Spartan point of view. This battle, as the last of the five ἀγῶνες, gives us an important term for the date of Hdt.'s own composition; cp. Introduction, § 9. Teisamenos was not present at the problematical battle of Oinoia! (cp. Hill, op. c. p. 298).

36. 1. ἀγόντων τῶν Σπαρτιητέων. The Spartans brought (led) him, not he them (notwithstanding their wish to make him their ἡγεμόνα τῶν πολέμων c. 33 supra); and as their μάντις he performed that office (ἐμαντεύετο: cp. μαντεύμενος c. 35 supra) for the Confederates (τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι).

2. ἐν τῇ Πλαταιίδι, more correct than ἐν Πλαταιῇσι c. 35 supra; cp. cc. 15, 25 supra.

"Ελληνσι καλὰ ἐγίνετο τὰ ἱρά ἀμυνομένοισι, διαβᾶσι δὲ τὸν 37 Ἀσωπὸν καὶ μάχης ἄρχουσι οὖ. Μαρδονίῳ δὲ προθυμομένῳ μάχης ἄρχειν οὐκ ἐπιτήδεα ἐγίνετο τὰ ἱρά, ἀμυνομένῳ δὲ καὶ τούτῳ καλὰ. καὶ γὰρ οὗτος Ἑλληνικοῖσι ἱροῖσι ἐχράτο, μάντιν ἔχων Ἡγησίστρατον ἄνδρα Ἡλείον τε καὶ τῶν Τελλιαδέων

3 ἱερά A 37. 1 προθυμομένῳ CP, van H.: προθυμένῳ B
 3 οὗτω C || ἐχρέετο Pz: ἐχρέατο αC 4 τελλιαδέων B

3. καλὰ ἐγίνετο τὰ ἱρά: the imperfect is significant, and is followed by the conditions above stated. The phrase is the best paraphrase of the term καλλι-ρεῖν, cp. c. 19. 5 supra.

ἀμυνομένοισι, 'if and so long as they acted on the defensive, and refrained from crossing the Asopos, and delivering an attack.' The participle here is equivalent to a conditional sentence. The Asopos clearly was between the two armies; cp. c. 30 supra. The Hellenic forces had advanced down from the ὑπωρέη, putting themselves in battle-array, into 'the second position,' with the object of inducing the Persian forces to cross the Asopos, a manœuvre which they could hardly carry out without some disorder. In their actual position the Greeks were probably not directly exposed to the cavalry; it was with the barbarian foot that they wished to engage. To cross the Asopos would have exposed them to the Persian cavalry, and would probably have been absolutely fatal. Teisamenos understood that well enough.

37. 1. προθυμομένῳ μάχης ἄρχειν. This assertion may rest on a genuine tradition, and the fact remains that Mardonios did finally begin the decisive battle. Good reasons for his desire are not far to seek:—(i.) He was the aggressor, the invader, and the initiative naturally lay with him. (ii.) His own reputation was at stake, and there was opportunity for great distinction. (iii.) A victory in the field was desirable, (1) to impress his allies, (2) to secure his rear and communications, (3) perhaps to ease the situation in Asia and especially to recall the Greek fleet. (iv.) A Persian victory at Plataia would virtually cancel Salamis, disrupt the Greek alliance, and probably lead to the submission of the Hellenes. (v.) He had succeeded in drawing the Peloponnesians beyond the Isthmos, and on to a terrain of his own selection (cp. c. 13 supra). (vi.) Delay was in their favour, and they were receiving reinforcements daily; thus a quick decision was desirable from his point of view. Mardonios, however, evidently respected his adversaries, and wished to fight the battle on his own terms. He was all but as unwilling as the Greeks themselves to cross the Asopos, at the point which they had selected for defence—τὸν Ἀσωπὸν τὸν ταύτῃ ρέοντα c. 31—and having drawn them beyond the Isthmos, and over Kithairon, and even down to the river bank, he may well have hoped to induce them to cross the stream. In the sequel, indeed, he seems to have attempted to push, or sweep them over it from behind, by sending his cavalry round the hills, on which they were posted, and cutting them off from their water-supply in the rear. Their retreat surprised him, far more than their further advance would have done; and finally lured him across the river, with disastrous results.

2. ἐπιτήδεα, 'suitable thereto,' i.e. to beginning battle. The adverb is used c. 7 supra in a more absolute way.

3. Ἑλληνικοῖσι ἱροῖσι ἐχράτο: an admission which goes to show how little the Persian war was a religious crusade against the idolatrous Greeks! Cp. 8. 109. 15 supra. Mardonios is especially philhellenic in these respects, cp. 8. 133.

4. Ἡγησίστρατον: a name of good omen on either side, and strangely enough, at this same moment, in full operation in the Greek fleet, cp. c. 91 infra. Like Teisamenos, the diviner on the Greek side c. 33 supra, Mardonios' diviner is an Eleian, but of another mantic family or clan, the Telliads, founded or represented by that Tellias who had wrought the Thessalians woe, in the service of the Phokians, 8. 27. There was probably a very pretty rivalry between the Iamid on the national side and the Telliad on the Persian.

έοντα λογιμώτατον, τὸν δὴ πρότερον τούτων Σπαρτιῆται 5
λαβόντες ἔδησαν ἐπὶ θανάτῳ ὡς πεπονθότες πολλά τε καὶ ἀνάρσια ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. ὁ δὲ ἐν τούτῳ τῷ κακῷ ἐχόμενος, ὥστε τρέχων περὶ τῆς ψυχῆς πρό τε τοῦ θανάτου πεισόμενος πολλά τε καὶ λυγρά, ἔργον ἐργάσατο μέζον λόγον. ὡς γὰρ δὴ ἐδέδετο ἐν ξύλῳ σιδηροδέτῳ, ἐσενειχθέντος κως σιδηρίου ἐκράτησε, 10 αὐτίκα δὲ ἐμηχανᾶτο ἀνδριώτατον ἔργον πάντων τῶν ἡμεῖς
ἴδμεν· σταθμισάμενος γὰρ ὅκως ἐξελεύσεται οἱ τὸ λοιπὸν τοῦ

6 <τὴν> ἐπὶ Werfer, van H. || τε om. R 7 ὑπ': πρὸς malit Kallenberg 8 πεισόμενος Marc. z 9 ἐδέετο R(V) 10 ἐσενε-χθέντος B || κω C 11 δὴ B (αὐτίκαδὲ S) || ἀνδριώτατον Marc.: ἀνδριώ-
τατον ceteri (ἀνδριώτατον van H.) || πάντων ἔργον B

5. πρότερον τούτων. Hdt. expressly dates the origin of the feud between Hegesistratos and the Spartans before τὰ Πλαταιά, but he does not explain its origin, nor how Hegesistratos came to leave Tegea for the Persian camp; nor what became of him between the battle of Plataia and his arrest in Zakynthos. Hdt. possibly starts this story with an anachronism; the great enmity of the Spartans for Hegesistratos may only date from his medism, and his capture at Plataia, his escape from Sparta, have been subsequent to that event. If he was following his father's career in central Greece, there is no difficulty in understanding how he came to be diviner to Mardonios. Could he ever have given the Spartans greater cause of offence?

6. ἔδησαν ἐπὶ θανάτῳ: cp. 3. 119 ἔδωκε τὴν (sc. δέσιν) ἐπὶ θ. There would be some form of trial before sentence was actually pronounced, or carried out (was the Gerousia the court? Cp. Aristot. Pol. 2. 9. 25=1270n, 3. 1. 10=1275n, of course under presidency of the Ephors).

ὡς πεπονθότες . . ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. It is a weak point in the story that the injuries inflicted by Hegesistratos upon the Spartans are not specified. The conjecture that he had acted as diviner to the Tegeatai in a war with Sparta (Stein) assumes that there had just been such a war, and also that it would have been lawful to put him to death on such a charge, which is hardly tenable. A charge of 'medism' would be another matter, cp. 7. 214. But his offence was manifold (πολλά)!

7. ἀνάρσια: c. 110 infra.
ὑπό, with a neuter verb, as often; cp. 5. 61 ὑπὸ Βοιωτῶν ἀναχωρέουσι, etc.

ἐν τούτῳ τ. κακῷ ἐχόμενος: cp. ἐν θώματι ἐνέχεσθαι infra, and ἀπορήσει ἐνέχεσθαι 8. 52. Here, however, the situation is more definitely material.

ὥστε = ἄτε: cp. 5. 101 ὥστε τὰ περίεργα νεμομένου τοῦ πυρός, 6. 44 ὥστε γὰρ θηριωδεστάτης εἰούσης τῆς θαλάσσης ταύτης κτλ.

8. τρέχων περὶ τῆς ψυχῆς: cp. 8. 102 δραπεύοντα περὶ σφένος αὐτῶν, 7. 57 περὶ ἐνωτοῦ τρέχων.

πρό τε τοῦ θανάτου: i.e. he was prepared to undergo a good deal rather than die, to escape death; before, instead of death: on this cp. cc. 139, 157 supra.

9. λυγρός is a decidedly poetical word.

μέζον λόγον, 'beyond description,' 'too great for words'—as we too say, when about to describe anything!

10. σιδηροδέτῳ: which explains why he could not cut the stocks to pieces. Cp. story of Kleomenes 6. 75, which may also suggest how Hegesistratos managed to possess himself of a knife. σιδηρίον: 7. 18 in a somewhat different sense.

11. πάντων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν: a mere formula; cp. 8. 105, 124, c. 64 infra, etc.

12. σταθμισάμενος (σταθμέομαι, or -άομαι: on the form σταθμισάμενος cp. Veitch, Verbs, sub v.): he might in this case actually 'measure,' or merely 'calculate'; 'weigh' he could not.

ἐξελεύσεται: of course 'out of the stocks.'

- ποδός, ἀπέταμε τὸν ταρσὸν ἑωυτοῦ. ταῦτα δὲ ποιήσας, ὡς φυλασσόμενος ὑπὸ φυλάκων, διορύξας τὸν τοῖχον ἀπέδρη ἐς
 15 Τεγέην, τὰς μὲν νύκτας πορευόμενος, τὰς δὲ ἡμέρας καταδύνων ἐς ὕλην καὶ αὐλιζόμενος, οὕτω ὡς Λακεδαιμονίων πανδημί διζημένων τρίτῃ εὐφρόνῃ γενέσθαι ἐν Τεγέῃ, τοὺς δὲ ἐν θώματι μεγάλῳ ἐνέχεσθαι τῆς τε τόλμης, ὀρώντας τὸ ἡμίτομον τοῦ ποδὸς κείμενον, κακείνον οὐ δυναμένους εὔρεῖν. τότε μὲν οὕτω
 20 διαφυγὼν Λακεδαιμονίους καταφεύγει ἐς Τεγέην ἐοῦσαν οὐκ ἀρθμίνην Λακεδαιμονίοισι τοῦτον τὸν χρόνον· ὑγιῆς δὲ γενόμενος καὶ προσποιησάμενος ξύλινον πόδα κατεστήκεε ἐκ τῆς

13 αὐτοῦ? Stein<sup>2</sup>: del. Krueger, van H. || ὥστε B, Holder, van H.
 16 ὥστε BP, Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H. || πανδημί BCPs, Stein 17
 θώματι Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup> 18 τε: τότε B || ὀρόντας Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.:
 ὀρέωντας C 19 τοῦτο κείμενον z 20 καταφεύγειν R(V) 22
 ἐκ: ἐπὶ C

13. τὸν ταρσὸν would, strictly speaking, be only the flat or fore-part of the foot, cp. 8. 12, but he must have cut off rather more than that. Did he not amputate his foot at the ankle? And had he only one foot in the stocks? Or did the liberation of one foot enable him to withdraw the other also? These diviners were perhaps not merely 'medicine-men,' but something of 'surgeons' (as well as comparative anatomists, from their extispications!).

14. διορύξας τὸν τοῖχον: no doubt merely a mud wall, or built of adobes. He might use the same knife as he had used for the operation on his foot.

16. αὐλιζόμενος: sc. ἐν αὐτῇ. For the verb cp. c. 93 infra.

πανδημί διζημένων: there was a hue and cry raised after him; πανδημί does not necessarily imply an expedition under arms. The verb διζημαι is of frequent occurrence in Hdt. and is not to be confounded with the rarer διζω, διζομαι.

17. τρίτῃ εὐφρόνῃ. Tegea is only about thirty miles from Sparta, but Hegesistratos will have had to go a good deal out of the direct road, travel only in the dark, and with a bad wound.

τοὺς δὲ, as though αὐτὸν μὲν had preceded, which must indeed be understood before γενέσθαι.

18. ἐνέχεσθαι: cp. l. 7 above. Not quite exact is the co-ordination of the two points, or causes, of their astonishment, viz. his hardihood in amputating his foot, and his success in escaping. τὸ ἡμίτομον: cp. 7. 39. (But would he have surprised them less if he had not left it about?)

20. ἐοῦσαν οὐκ ἀρθμίνην Λακεδαιμονίοισι. Tegea was at war with Sparta not so very long after τὰ Πλαταιαῖα: cp. c. 34 supra, and in some ways, as already shown, the later feud between Tegea and Sparta would suit very well the story of Hegesistratos, except so far as the words πρότερον τούτων up above may be held to bar the way. If Tegea was at war with Lakedaimon before the Persian invasion, of which no other record survives, then this feud should have been noticed in 7. 145 as one of those composed in 481 B.C. If so, the reconciliation did not extend to the Eleian diviner; the Spartans were already provided with Teisamenos. Might they not have had Hegesistratos on easier terms? Was Teisamenos himself at all responsible for their implacable hostility to the Telliad?

22. προσποιησάμενος ξύλινον πόδα: he did not make his wooden foot with his own hands, but probably employed a statuary. Artificial limbs were apparently unusual (except as ex voto offerings).

κατεστήκεε . . πολέμιος: he took his stand, took up a hostile attitude; or simply 'became'; for the verb cp. c. 70 infra.

ἐκ τῆς ιδέης, 'openly,' palam; sc. ὁδοῦ or τέχνης: cp. c. 57 infra. Had he ever pretended friendship for them?

ιθέης Λακεδαιμονίοισι πολέμιος. οὐ μέντοι ἔς γε τέλος οἱ συνήνεικε τὸ ἔχθος τὸ ἐς Λακεδαιμονίους συγκεκυρημένον· ἤλω
γὰρ μαντεύομενος ἐν Ζακύνθῳ ὑπ' αὐτῶν καὶ ἀπέθανε. 25

Ὁ μέντοι θάνατος ὁ Ἡγησιστράτου ὕστερον ἐγένετο τῶν 38
Πλαταικῶν, τότε δὲ ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ Μαρδονίῳ μεμισθωμένος
οὐκ ὀλίγου ἐθύετό τε καὶ προεθυμέετο κατὰ τε τὸ ἔχθος τὸ Λακεδαιμονίων καὶ κατὰ τὸ κέρδος. ὥς δὲ οὐκ ἐκαλλίερε ᾧστε μάχεσθαι οὔτε αὐτοῖσι Πέρσι·σι οὔτε τοῖσι μετ' ἐκείνων 5 ἐοῦσι Ἑλλήνων (εἶχον γὰρ καὶ οὗτοι ἐπ' ἑωυτῶν μάντιν Ἰππόμαχον Λευκάδιον ἄνδρα), ἐπιρρεόντων δὲ τῶν Ἑλλήνων

23 ιθέης codd. = || γε ἐς B, Gaisford 24 συγκεχωρησμένον R :
συγκεχωρημένον SV : συγκεκρημένον Reiske, Holder, van H. 38. 1
μέντοι : μέν νυν B, Holder 2 δ' CPs, van H. || τῷ Μαρδονίῳ =
3 ὀλίγῳ S || προεθυμέετο αC (προεθυμείτο van H.) || τε τὸ : τὸ BPz || τὸ :
τῶν R 4 ἐκαλλίερε van H. 7 ἐπιρρεόντων α, Holder

23. ἐς τέλος, 'finally,' 'at last.'

24. συνήνεικε: sc. ἐς τὸ ἀμεινον, 'went well,' was successful; cp. 8. 87 where the word is used absolutely, as here; followed in c. 88 by συνήνεικε αὐτῇ ἐς εὐτυχίην.

† συγκεκυρημένον: the passive form is unique and constitutes a difficulty; it can hardly be right, though Schweighauser ingeniously gets the idea of 'mutuality' (mutuum odium) out of it. Eltz thought that the reading of S was a correction of the true reading συγκεκρημένον which Reiske conjectured afterwards; cp. App. Crit.

25. μαντεύομενος, 'acting as diviner' (cp. c. 36. 2 supra), but not necessarily in battle; it was this assumption of mantic functions apparently which gave such great offence in Sparta: that he had prostituted his art in the service of Persia might be his chief offence.

ἐν Ζακύνθῳ: what would be the date of his arrest in Zakynthos? Schoell dated it to the second summer of the Peloponnesian war, cp. Thuc. 2. 66, which would give Hegesistratos indeed a long life! Bosolt, iii. 1. 123, places it with more probability just after the battle of Dipaia. Fugitives from Sparta naturally went west; Demaratos had been overtaken in Zakynthos (6. 70 supra) but not extradited; Themistokles started in the same direction, Thuc. 1. 136.

ἀπέθανε: sc. ὑπ' αὐτῶν; cp. 1. 7 supra.

38. 2. ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ: cp. c. 30 supra. Mardonios and the Greeks are both 'on the Asopos,' but on different sides of it.

μεμισθωμένος οὐκ ὀλίγου: there was nothing peculiar in this circumstance; no doubt all the diviners were largely remunerated, though to the discredit of Hegesistratos alone is it mentioned that he prostituted the diviner's office for 'hate and greed.'

4. οὐκ ἐκαλλίερε ᾧστε μάχεσθαι: i.e. οὐκ ἐγένετο καλὰ τὰ ἱρά, cp. c. 36 supra; μάχεσθαι must here = μάχης ἀρχεῖν, otherwise there is a slight discrepancy between c. 37 ad init. and this place. Perhaps the signs as divined by Hippomachos were against fighting simpliciter; while Hegesistratos modified his divination to the extent above implied.

6. ἐπ' ἑωυτῶν: cp. c. 17 supra.

7. Ἰππόμαχον Λευκάδιον ἄνδρα. Hippomachos of Lenkas is the least distinguished of the diviners, and Hdt. has nothing to tell of him. His fellow-citizens are fighting in the ranks of the confederate Greeks; cp. c. 28 supra. (The name is not as common as might be expected, appearing first as that of a Trojan, Il. 12. 189, and again as one of the Thirty at Athens in 404 B.C., Xenoph. Hell. 2. 3. 2, 2. 4. 19.)

ἐπιρρεόντων: cp. Il. 11. 724 ἐπέρρεον ἐθνεα πεζῶν.

καὶ γινομένων πλεύνων, Τιμηγενίδης ὁ Ἑρπυος ἀνὴρ Θηβαῖος συνεβούλευσε Μαρδονίῳ τὰς ἐκβολὰς τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος φυλάξαι, 10 λέγων ὡς ἐπιρρέουσι οἱ Ἕλληνες αἰεὶ ἀνὰ πᾶσαν ἡμέρην καὶ 39 ὡς ἀπολάμψοιτο συχνοῦς. ἡμέραι δὲ σφὶ ἀντικατημένοισι ἤδη ἐγεγόνεσαν ὁκτώ, ὅτε ταῦτα ἐκείνος συνεβούλευε Μαρδονίῳ.
 ὁ δὲ μαθὼν τὴν παραίνεσιν εὖ ἔχουσαν, ὡς εὐφρόνη ἐγένετο, πέμπει τὴν ἵππον ἐς τὰς ἐκβολὰς τὰς Κιθαιρωνίδας αἱ ἐπὶ

8 καὶ <αἰ> γινομένων Naber, Holder: καὶ γινομένων <αἰεῖ> van H.
 || τιμηγενίδης αC(Ps) 9 κιθαιρώνας α 10 ἐπιρρέουσι α, Holder ||
 αἰεὶ del. van H. 11 ἀπολάμψαιτο β 39. 3 εὐέχουσαν A 4 ἐσβολὰς R: ἐμβολὰς SMarc.

8. Τιμηγενίδης ὁ Ἑρπυος: this man appears below, cc. 86, 87, with Attaginos, as leader of the medizing faction in Thebes; he doubtless held the post of 'Boiotarch', cp. c. 16 supra. The name appears as Τιμηγενίδας in Pausan. 7. 10. 2 (who has nothing new to say of him); the proper form was presumably Τιμαγενίδας (or Τειμαγενίδας?). The name Τιμαγένης is not uncommon, but Timagenidas is only borne by the Theban traitor. His father's name, Herpys (Reptile!), is no less unique.

The notion that Mardonios was put up to employing his cavalry on the Greek flank and lines of communication by Timagenidas is probably a popular fiction. The Persian was, indeed, unworthy of his position, if he had to be coached in the very rudiments of warfare by a Boiotian.

9. τὰς ἐκβολὰς τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος. Hdt. nowhere betrays any clear consciousness that there was more than one pass over Kithairon; but cp. next chapter. The plural ἐκβολαί is without prejudice, as Hdt. uses the plural (e.g. 7. 176) of a single route. ἐσβολή, not ἐκβολή, is, however, the usual term; the word here seems appropriate from the supposed speaker's point of view. Neither Timagenidas nor Mardonios could have any pass now in view but the main route over Kithairon to Eleutherai. The Eleutherai-Plataia road was merely a branch of this; the Plataia-Megara road was high on the mountain, very rough and inaccessible for cavalry, and doubtless, like the previously named one, covered by the Greeks. But in moving from their first position at Erythrai the Greeks had opened up the main road (Thebes-Erythrai-Eleutherai), perhaps relying upon their supplies coming via Hysiai and Plataia. The Persian cavalry could now ride freely up the hill past Erythrai; and once up there might even sweep to the west along the road to Hysiai, to Plataia, and so on. If Mardonios had moved west with a view to out-flanking the Greek left, he seems now preparing a diversion on their right.

It is conceivable that the advance of the Greeks from the position 'at Erythrai' to the position 'on the Asopos' was encouraged or enforced by the pressure of the Persian cavalry. It is even conceivable that Hdt.'s chronology, or sequence of events, is here at fault, and that it was this very exploit of the cavalry, here recorded, which induced the Greeks to advance down from the ὑπωρῆγ on to the Asopos-ridge.

φυλάξαι, 'to occupy in force.'

11. ἀπολάμψοιτο: an unusual form; cp. 3. 146 ἀπολάμψεσθαι.

39. 1. ἡμέραι δέ σφὶ . . ὁκτώ. Prima facie this means that eight days had elapsed since the two armies came into position opposite one another ἐπὶ τῇ Ἀσωπῷ or in the second position; cp. cc. 30, 31 supra. The δευτέρῃ ἡμέρῃ in that position has been already noted, c. 33 supra. So long a delay as that without any exchange of hostilities or any attempt on the part of the Persian cavalry either to cut off supplies or to harass the Greeks in this advanced position, seems improbable. The situation would be eased if we might substitute or add the (indefinite) number of days spent in the first position, and its development. It may, however, fairly be doubted whether the Diary of Plataia is to be taken quite seriously in its numbering of days; cp. Appendix VIII. § 2.

4. τὰς ἐκβολὰς τὰς Κιθαιρωνίδας αἱ ἐπὶ Πλαταιῶν φέρουσι, 'the pass over

Πλαταιέων φέρουσι, τὰς Βοιωτοὶ μὲν Τρεῖς κεφαλὰς καλέουσι, 5 Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ Δρυὸς κεφαλὰς. πεμφθέντες δὲ οἱ ἱππῶται οὐ μάτην ἀπίκοντο· ἐσβάλλοντα γὰρ ἐς τὸ πεδῖον λαμβάνουσι

7 ἐσβαλόντα B || εἰς R

Kithairon leading in the direction of Plataia.' Only one pass is indicated; but it is one leading, not to Erythrai, or Thebes, nor to Hysiai, but 'towards Plataia.' Where it leads from Hdt. does not expressly signify; ultimately no doubt from the Peloponnesos, but by which route? It is hardly conceivable that exactly the same route is signified by this description as the route by which in c. 19 supra the confederate forces marched from Eleusis to Erythrai. But the route to Plataia from Eleusis (and so from Athens, or the Peloponnese) is virtually the same, except in its last stage, where it breaks away to the west before descending the gorge to Erythrai, skirts the further side of the ridge for a short distance, and comes out through a distinct gap, possibly covered by Hysiai, and so down over the ὑπωρεῖη to Plataia. It may be this loop to the west which is here intended. The Persian cavalry could gain it by riding up the road past Erythrai into the hills, and then turning to the right. That would be the pass leading from Eleutherai (etc.) to Plataia.

The mere words in the text would also apply to the pass leading direct to Plataia from Megara, west of the pass just described; but that pass was a difficult one, entirely unsuited to cavalry operations, or even to the Greek commissariat service. Stein<sup>5</sup> thinks that de facto this was the pass here in question, though he does not identify it with Dryoskephalai. If so Hdt. would have used this term quite wrongly.

The further designations for the pass in question may be held to support the view above adopted.

5. Τρεῖς κεφαλὰς . . Δρυὸς κεφαλὰς. The Boiotians had one name for the pass, the Athenians another; it was a pass then used by Athenians, which rules out the Megara-Plataia pass. Moreover Thucydides proves the point: 3. 24. 1 ἐώρων τοὺς Πελοποννησίους τὴν πρὸς Κιθαιρῶνα καὶ Δρυὸς κεφαλὰς τὴν ἐπ' Ἀθηνῶν φέρουσαν μετὰ λαμπάδων διώκοντας. The Peloponnesians in that case had started from their lines round Plataia. (Even if τὴν ἐπ' Ἀθ. φ. were a gloss, the argument remains, and the identification of Dryoskephalai with the pass to Megara cannot be entertained. Baehr, note ad l., ascribes this identification to Leake and Vischer, and Leake's map of Plataia, though not his text, lays him open to the charge, of which Vischer, Erinnerungen pp. 533, 540, appears innocent, as he certainly identifies the 'Three Heads' pass with the route from Eleutherai. An explanation of the term 'Three Heads' may be found in the supposition that it applied primarily to the meeting-place, or junction of the three roads, from Eleutherai, from Erythrai (Thebes), from Plataia. Goettling suggested that the spot was marked by a triceps Hermes, hence the Τρεῖς κεφαλὰι: cp. Baehr in l. Vischer's idea that the name is due to the appearance of three mountain tops (Kuppen) from the Boiotian side overhanging the pass is less happy. Why the Athenians preferred the term 'Oak's Heads' is not recorded; Baehr suggests that it applied to the route from the Athenian side, which wound up through forests of oak (till it reached the top, or 'head'?).

7. ἐς τὸ πεδῖον: this term cannot be quite accurately used in this place, even if ἐσβάλλοντα is given a highly inceptive or imperfect sense; for the objective of the commissariat train would hardly be τὸ πεδῖον.

Five hundred beasts of burden would be a fairly large train: they were no doubt sumpter, not draft animals. They were coming from Peloponnesos, for Attica and Megara could furnish nothing after their devastation, cc. 13, 14 supra; but they were coming, not by the difficult Megara-Plataia route, but by the better road via Eleusis and Eleutherai. The attendants may have been Helots, at least in part. The story implies that there was no armed convoy, and no resistance (but some of the Agogiates would surely have escaped). The train may have been approaching Plataia at night (see above) to escape notice from the Persians, and it may have been this device, or practice, that was reported to Mardonios by his Theban friends. The terms in which Hdt. records this exploit ὑποζύγιά τε πεντακόσια, σιτία ἄγοντα ἀπὸ Πελοποννήσου ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον, καὶ ἀνθρώπους οἱ εἶποντο τοῖσι ζεύγεσι·

 10 ἐλόντες δὲ ταύτην τὴν ἄγρην οἱ Πέρσαι ἀφειδέως ἐφόνεον, οὐ φειδόμενοι οὔτε ὑποζυγίου οὐδενὸς οὔτε ἀνθρώπου. ὥς δὲ ἄδην εἶχον κτείνοντες, τὰ λοιπὰ αὐτῶν ἤλανον περιβαλλόμενοι παρά τε Μαρδόνιον καὶ ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον.

40 Μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον ἐτέρας δύο ἡμέρας διέτριψαν, οὐδέτεροι βουλόμενοι μάχης ἄρξαι· μέχρι μὲν γὰρ τοῦ Ἀσωποῦ ἐπήσαν οἱ βάρβαροι πειρώμενοι τῶν Ἑλλήνων, διέβαινον δὲ οὐδέτεροι. ἡ μέντοι ἵππος ἡ Μαρδονίου αἰεὶ προσέκειτό τε
 5 καὶ ἐλύπεε τοὺς Ἑλληνας· οἱ γὰρ Θηβαῖοι, ἅτε μηδίζοντες μεγάλως, προθύμως ἔφερον τὸν πόλεμον καὶ αἰεὶ κατηγέοντο

9 οἱ R 11 οὐ om. Bz, van H.: num glossema οὐ . . ἀνθρώπου deleveris? 12 ἄδην: ἄδε S || αὐτῶν z || περιβαλλόμενοι Marc. z (παραβαλλόμενοι C) 13 παρά τε om. C: τε om. α 40. 3 ἐπήσαν Marc. || πειρούμενοι van H. 6 προθύμως <τε>? Stein<sup>2</sup> || ἐφέροντο πόλεμον C

by the cavalry are not very 'convincing': the Persians would hardly have killed the beasts for pure love of slaughter, like a mad Aias, but presumably captured as many as possible, with the stores.

10. ἄγρην is rather a sporting word; cp. 1. 73, 2. 70, 3. 129.

11. οὐ φειδόμενοι . . ἀνθρώπου looks like a gloss: ἀφειδέως is used without explanation in 1. 163, 207, but I will not argue from that to the earlier composition of this passage!

12. ἄδην εἶχον: an adverbial construction, cp. Plato Rep. 541 B. (Schweighaeuser's Lex. treats ἄδην as a subst.)

περιβαλλόμενοι: cp. 8. 8.

40. 1. ἐτέρας δύο ἡμέρας: i.e. 9th and 10th. The ἔργον, or furious slaughter of slave and beast (not without misplaced irony!) had taken place on the night of the 8th.

διέτριψαν, 'wasted'—a little hard upon them, especially on the Persian cavalry, which, though neither side wished μάχης ἄρξαι (a pitched battle), did some useful skirmishing, as is immediately admitted.

2. μέχρι . . τοῦ Ἀσωποῦ ἐπήσαν. Mardonios apparently drew out his men, day by day, on the left bank of Asopos, opposite the Greek Laager, and by sending his cavalry round their position tried to draw and drive them north across the Asopos.

5. οἱ γὰρ Θηβαῖοι κτλ. The passage exhibits a manifest animus against the Thebans, who were medizing 'wholesale' (μεγάλως). Hdt., following no doubt a vicious source, Attic or phil-Attic, represents the Thebans as heading 'Persians and Medes,' until it came to actual fighting (μέχρι μάχης), and then leaving it to the 'barbarian' cavalry to do all the derring deeds (ἀρετάς). In reality no doubt the Theban, Thessalian and Makedonian cavalry on the right of the Persian line rode round the Athenians on the left wing, even as the Medo-Persian cavalry on the left rode round the Lakedaimonians on the Greek right, and the two may have met about the springs of Gargaphia; it is possible, however, that the Greek left, on higher ground, or less concerned for Gargaphia, suffered less from the medizing Greeks than the Greek right from the Persians. Only the Thebans are mentioned here: with Thessalians and Makedonians the Athenians were afterwards on better terms.

It is not very likely that the Greeks had been eight days in the second position ('on the Asopos') before Mardonios adopted these very obvious tactics; not again very likely that he owed their adoption to Theban suggestion.

6. ἔφερον τὸν πόλεμον: cp. α. 18 supra.

κατηγέοντο: sc. τῇ ἵππῳ. Cp. ε. 104 infra, 7. 183 supra.

μέχρι μάχης, τὸ δὲ ἀπὸ τούτου παραδεκόμενοι Πέρσαι τε καὶ Μῆδοι μάλα ἔσκον οἱ ἀπεδείκνυντο ἀρετάς.

Μέχρι μὲν νυν τῶν δέκα ἡμερέων οὐδὲν ἐπὶ πλεῦν ἐγίνετο 41 τούτων· ὡς δὲ ἐνδεκάτῃ <σφι> ἐγεγόνεε ἡμέρῃ ἀντικατημένοισι ἐν Πλαταιῇσι, οἳ τε δὴ Ἕλληνες πολλῶ πλεῖνες ἐγεγόνεσαν

8 μάλιστα Β: καλὰ C
3 ἐν: ἀλλήλοισι ἐν z

41. 2 τούτων z || <σφι> Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 3

7. μέχρι μάχης κτλ. is not inconsistent with οὐδέτεροι βουλόμενοι μάχης ἀρξαι: above, which plainly refers to a general or pitched battle.

τὸ δὲ ἀπὸ τούτου παραδεκόμενοι: in a somewhat different sense 1. 18 παραδεξάμενοι παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς τὸν πόλεμον προσεῖχε ἐντεταμένως. Still more, 2. 186 τὰ ἐς πόλεμον ἐπασκέουσι μούνα παῖς παρὰ πατρὸς ἐκδεκόμενος. Cp. also 1. 102 παρεδέξατο τὴν ἀρχήν. In all those cases the predecessor has done what the successor is doing. ἐκδέσθαι is the commoner verb with Hdt. Cp. 7. 211. 2 (ὁποδέσθαι c. 21. 15 al. sens.).

8. μάλα ἔσκον: the verb has the frequentative form; cp. 7. 119. μάλα is the positive of μάλλον and μάλιστα, and seems here to have a corrective, adversative, or intensive signification, differentiating still more emphatically the action of the Persians from that of the Thebans. It is comparatively rare with verbs: 1. 93 θώματα δὲ γῇ ἢ Λυδῇ ἐς συγγραφὴν οὐ μάλα ἔχει, 1. 134 οἱ δὲ (sc. ἀρχοῦσι) μάλα τῶν ἐχομένων, 1. 181 ἐπὶ τούτῳ τῷ πύργῳ ἄλλος πύργος ἐπιβέβηκε, καὶ ἕτερος μάλα ἐπὶ τούτῳ, where it very nearly = αὐθις or πάλιν. Cp. also 7. 11, 186, etc.

ἀρετάς: a significant plural; not a number of different virtues, but a number of cases of one virtue (courage): 'derring deeds.' Cp. 1. 176 Λύκιοι δὲ . . . ἐπειζόντες καὶ μαχόμενοι ὀλίγοι πρὸς πολλοὺς ἀρετὰς ἀπεδείκνυντο.

41. 1. τῶν δέκα ἡμερέων: viz. the eight days specified in c. 39 and the two days specified in c. 40 supra. With 'ten days,' however, we reach the suspicious Hellenic 'week,' out of which the previous smaller items may have been extracted! A good deal had happened on the eighth, ninth, tenth, and even on the second (c. 33 supra). It is hardly credible that from the third to the eighth (at sundown) the Greeks had been allowed to occupy their (second) position absolutely unmolested, or that, if molested, as on the ninth, tenth, and twelfth (the eleventh is dropped by Hdt. from this point of view, and devoted to the conference between Mardonios and Artabazos), they could have held out, without either crossing the Asopos to do battle, or retreating to some third position, better protected from the cavalry. In other words, it is very unlikely that so many days elapsed in 'the second position' as Hdt. asserts.

οὐδὲν . . . τούτων is a formula; cp. 9. 121, 6. 42.

2. ὡς δὲ ἐνδεκάτῃ ἐγεγόνεε ἡμέρῃ, 'when the eleventh day was come' (not 'was past'): sc. the eleventh day on which the two armies were facing each other ἐν Πλαταιῇσι, i.e. no doubt according to Hdt.'s conception 'in the second position,' ἐν τῇ Πλαταιίδι, ἐπὶ τῷ Ἄσωπῳ, cp. cc. 25, 30, 31, 36 supra. But, even if the chronological index is to be taken quite strictly, the topographical or enchorial index may admit of being stretched a little further, so that ἐν Πλαταιῇσι should not merely equal ἐν τῇ Πλαταιίδι, but cover the ground of all the operations in Boiotia antecedent to the battle. The word, indeed, as here used, ἀντικατημένοισι ἐν Πλαταιῇσι, applies to the Persians equally with the Greeks, yet the Persians were on the other side of the Asopos, which was not even Plataian land.

3. πολλῶ πλεῖνες ἐγεγόνεσαν: this assertion cannot be taken to mean that the numbers given above in c. 30 had by this time been largely exceeded. Hdt. was bound in his muster-roll to give the maximal estimates, and the figures there given must be taken to cover the accessions here recorded. But the apparent inconsequence shows that strict order of time or argument cannot be assumed in Hdt.'s methods of exposition, and entitles his readers to a certain liberty of readjustment, whether in the logical or in the chronological interest.

καὶ Μαρδόνιος περιημέκτεε τῇ ἔδρῃ, ἐνθαῦτα ἐς λόγους ἦλθον
 5 Μαρδονίος τε ὁ Γοβρύεω καὶ Ἀρτάβαζος ὁ Φαρνάκεος, ὃς ἐν ὀλίγοισι Περσέων ἦν ἀνὴρ δόκιμος παρὰ Ξέρξῃ. βουλευομένων δὲ αἶδε ἦσαν αἱ γινώμαι, ἡ μὲν Ἀρταβάζου ὡς χρεὼν εἶη

4 περιημέκτεε . . Μαρδόνιος om. R 5 γοβρύεω P Marc., Stein:
 Γωβρύω van H.: γωβρύεω 6 βουλομένων B 7 ἔσαν = || μὲν
 γὰρ B || χρεὼν CPz, van H.

4. Μαρδόνιος περιημέκτεε τῇ ἔδρῃ: for the verb cp. 8. 109; for the construction rather 4. 154. ἔδρῃ is a quasi-military term; cp. ἀντικατήσθαι above, Thuc. 5. 7. 2. But here it means perhaps little more than 'delay' (διατριβή, cp. διέτριψαν c. 40).

ἐς λόγους ἦλθον, 'had a conversation,' or conference together. The parties to such a proceeding would be more or less co-ordinate (like two Roman consuls commanding different armies); nevertheless, on the present occasion, it appears that in some way or other the authority of Mardonios was superior to that of Artabazos; moreover the conference is not a private dialogue, but apparently a council of war, at which all the chief officers in the army, or armies, are present—though Hdt. is not clear or explicit on this point. How purely rhetorical or stylistic the use of the patronymic may be is clearly shown in the present case; cp. 7. 11 etc. For Gobryas cp. 7. 2, 5 etc.; for Pharnakes 8. 126.

5. ἐν ὀλίγοισι: cp. 4. 52.

6. βουλευομένων, not merely the two Persians just named, but all those present at the Council, who have two γινώμαι laid before them, that of Artabazos, supported by the Thebans, and that of Mardonios (which probably commended itself to his Persian officers).

7. ἡ μὲν Ἀρταβάζου. The plan of Artabazos is to abandon operations in the field, to evacuate the fortified camp, to retire behind the walls of Thebes, and from there—whither it might be expected the Greek army would follow—to attempt by bribery and corruption the realization of the Persian hopes. This record is remarkable for several reasons.

(i.) It implies that there were serious misgivings on the Persian side as to the issue of a battle.

(ii.) It suggests that the forward movement of the Greeks and their occupation of the second position gave them some advantage, perhaps threatened the Persian position more directly than Hdt. appears to realize. As against this, however, it seems improbable that the tradition, so favourable to the Greeks, and especially to the Athenians, should have quite forgotten, or missed, so important a point in their favour.

(iii.) Artabazos cannot be exonerated from the suspicion of viewing Mardonios with jealousy, and subordinating the Persian interest to personal schemes and rivalries. The story of his subsequent action or inaction is astounding. The technical relation between the two generals is obscure; see below; but, whatever it was, Artabazos comes badly out of the affair in the sequel, notwithstanding a pretty evident bias in his favour.

(iv.) The plan proposed by Artabazos, as far as negotiations, bribery and so forth are concerned, had already been tried; cp. notes to c. 4 supra. It is said to be supported by the Thebans; it is indeed their own original idea, cp. c. 2 supra; but the time has surely gone by for it now, with the confederate army in position before them. If there was a medizing party in the Athenian camp (Plutarch Arist. 13) there was an Atticizing section on the other side of the Asopos! cp. c. 44 infra.

(v.) The idea of retiring into Thebes is not a sound one, though the proposal is valuable as implying comparatively small numbers on the Persian side. Artabazos might, indeed, have acquired a respect for Greek fortifications from his own failure before Poteidaia (8. 126-9), but a siege of Thebes could hardly have been to the advantage of the besieged: the Persian cavalry would have been lost; the abandonment of the Persian camp on the Asopos was morally tantamount to a defeat.

(vi.) Hdt. places this debate on the 11th day. But this date may be merely a dramatic ruse. The difference of ἀναξεύξαντας τὴν ταχίστην πάντα τὸν στρατὸν ἵεναι ἐς τὸ τείχος τὸ Θηβαίων, ἐνθα σίτον τέ σφι ἐσενηγείχθαι πολλὸν καὶ χόρτον τοῖσι ὑποζυγίοισι, κατ' ἡσυχίην τε ἰζομένους δια- 10

πρήσσεσθαι ποιεύντας τάδε· ἔχειν γὰρ χρυσὸν πολλὸν μὲν ἐπίσημον πολλὸν δὲ καὶ ἄσημον, πολλὸν δὲ ἄργυρόν τε καὶ ἐκπώματα· τούτων φειδομένους μηδενὸς διαπέμπειν ἐς τοὺς
Ἕλληνας, Ἕλλήνων δὲ μάλιστα ἐς τοὺς προεστώτας ἐν τῇσι

8 ἀναξεύξαντες C 9 θηβαίων RV || τέ om. S || ἐνηγείχθαι RS :
συνενηγείχθαι Cobet 10 διαπρήσσεσθαι C 12 δὲ καὶ ἄργυρόν
CPz || τε om. S : 'τε καὶ ἐκπώματα suspecta' Stein<sup>2</sup> 13 τούτων ::
τούτων δὲ B

opinion between Artabazos and Mardonios will not then first have occurred, or come to light. It was probably of longer standing. What line had Artabazos taken when the policy was originally proposed by the Thebans, c. 3 supra? Hdt. may have crystallized and misdated a long standing feud and difference of opinion. Or has Artabazos and his corps d'armée only just joined Mardonios? He has had the whole summer for his march from Poteidaia, and Mardonios has already offered battle.

(vii.) At this point there are perhaps two alternatives recognizable, one or other of which Artabazos might have advocated. (a) A tactical stratagem. Mardonios himself was anxious to draw the Greeks across the Asopos: why not retire on Thebes, abandoning even the camp, with its plate and spoil, for the nonce, in order to get the Greeks across the river, and to bring about a general engagement (cp. Hannibal's ruse, Livy 22. 41 f.)? (b) A strategic coup. Artabazos may have proposed what he himself afterwards carried out, retreat, the evacuation of Boiotia, perhaps of Greece, the preservation of their two armies intact for the king's service. Artabazos has a special loyalty to Xerxes. Events in Asia (movement of the Greek fleet, revolt of Babylon, etc.) may already have been reported at Persian headquarters in Boiotia. Such tactics or such strategy Mardonios rejected: the first might easily prove a failure; the second was failure confessed. The time for political and diplomatic manœuvring had gone. Under the circumstances, with the available evidences, one's sympathies in this debate must be with Mardonios.

8. ἀναξεύξαντας: cp. 8. 60; but the verb here governs π. τ. στρατὸν, if the words are genuine.

τὴν ταχίστην: sc. ὁδόν. The phrase suggests a longer march than just back to Thebes; but it may well be taken with ἀναξεύξαντας and = ὡς τάχιστα. Still, where was the need of hurry?

τὸ τεῖχος τὸ Θηβαίων. Thebes was a walled city; cp. c. 86 infra. If the whole army was going to find accommodation in Thebes it cannot have numbered 300,000. Even 150,000 men would have strained the accommodation! But perhaps the northern Greeks were expected to go home; Artabazos himself may also have no intention of remaining in Boiotia. Thebes might have accommodated 50,000 men—Mardonios' corps d'armée—as well as its own population.

The statement that there was abundance of food for man and beast (σίτος, χόρτος) will be contradicted, within twenty-four hours, by Alexander of Makedon, c. 45 infra; but it is probably true for all that. Cp. notes ad l.

9. ἐσενηγείχθαι is of course pl.p.

10. διαπρήσσεσθαι: obviously of political intrigue; the active is used, not so very differently, c. 94 infra.

13. φειδομένους μηδενός, 'without stint' (Macaulay), i.e. = ἀφειδέως; cp. c. 39 supra.

διαπέμπειν: distributively. Why suspect the plate? Rather than that insert πολλά—it was no doubt of gold and silver. Cp. 3. 148, and c. 80 infra.

14. τοὺς προεστώτας: not necessarily the formally appointed magistrates, or commanders, but the political leaders; προστάται, cp. 5. 23, 49, etc.

15 πόλιν, καὶ ταχέως σφέας παραδώσειν τὴν ἐλευθερίην· μηδὲ ἀνακινδυνεύειν συμβάλλοντας. τούτου μὲν ἡ αὐτὴ ἐγένετο καὶ Θηβαίων γνώμη, ὡς προειδότος πλεῦν τι καὶ τούτου, Μαρδονίου δὲ ἰσχυροτέρη τε καὶ ἀγνωμονεστέρα καὶ οὐδαμῶς συγγνωσκομένη· δοκέειν τε γὰρ πολλῶ κρέσσονα εἶναι τὴν σφετέρην
20 στρατιὴν τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς, συμβάλλειν τε τὴν ταχίστην μηδὲ περιορᾶν συλληγομένους ἔτι πλεῦνας τῶν συλληλεγμένων, τὰ τε σφάλματα τὰ Ἡγησιστράτου εἶναι χαίρειν μηδὲ βιάζεσθαι,
42 ἀλλὰ νόμῳ τῷ Περσέων χρεωμένους συμβάλλειν. τούτου δὲ οὕτω δικαιοῦντος ἀντέλεγε οὐδεὶς, ὥστε ἐκράτεε τῇ γνώμῃ· τὸ

15 προδύσειν Naber 16 ἀνακινδυνεύσειν idem, van H. || συμβάλλοντας S || μὲν νυν α || ἐγένετο α || 18 τε om. B: τε καὶ ἀγνωμονεστέρα om. C || συγγνωσκομένη α: συγγινωσκομένη van H. 19 κρέσσονας apr: κρέσσον CV 20 στρατιήν RS 21 πλεῦνας γίνεσθαι α || συλληγομένων A<sup>1</sup>P: 22 βιάσθαι van H. 23 χρεωμένους P, van H.

15. παραδώσειν: euphemistically for προδύσειν.

16. ἡ αὐτὴ ἐγένετο καὶ Θηβαίων γνώμη: (his opinion) was the same as that of the Thebans—i.e. as expressed above in c. 2. Hdt. does not mean to say that the Thebans now expressed their opinion.

17. ὡς προειδότος πλεῦν τι: it is rather insight than foresight, perhaps, which the phrase is meant to suggest.

Μαρδονίου δέ: sc. ἡ δὲ γνώμη Μαρδονίου ἦν (ellipse, or brachylogy). It follows in orat. oblig. Hdt. apparently means to condemn it, as 'stark, obstinate, uncompromising'—i.e. utterly devoid of reasonableness, of the spirit of compromise. On ἀγνωμοσύνη cp. c. 3 supra. πολλῶ κρέσσονα corresponds with the figures as given by Hdt. (350,000 v. 110,000), but if true of the real numbers would somewhat have mitigated the apparently 'foolish obstinacy' of Mardonios. If tradition had been content to state the figures of Mardonios' force more accurately, his obstinacy might have seemed less reasonable.

20. συμβάλλειν may be constructed with ὡς χρεὼν εἶναι or such like, understood out of ἡ γνώμη ἦν, but a looser construction, or apposition, were no less idiomatic.

τὴν ταχίστην=ὡς τάχιστα: sc. συμβολήν, δόξιν, or sim.; cp. l. 8 supra.

21. περιορᾶν: i.e. pati, cp. 7. 16.

τὰ τε σφάλματα . . . εἶναι χαίρειν: this sentiment sounds, and is intended to sound, very impious and shocking, though as coming from a Persian it might be less offensive than in the mouth of a Greek; but then, Mardonios should not have had recourse to Hellenic divination if he was going to flout it in this fashion! χ. εἶναι, cp. c. 45 infra, 4. 112 supra.

22. βιάζεσθαι: vim inferre auspicibus, Baehr; permittere ut victimae sibi vim afferant, Matthiae: the one taking the verb as deponent trans., the other as passive. Both uses are found: Soph. Antig. 66 βιάζομαι τὰδε (pass.), Thuc. 8. 53. 2 τοὺς νόμους βιασάμενος (as here τὰ σφάλματα). So also with personal object. In a rather different sense, which might however work here, Thuc. 4. 11. 4 βιαζόμενος τὴν ἀπόβασιν, 7. 72. 3 βιάσασθαι . . . τὸν ἐκπλοῦν. Stein notes that ἐκβιάζεσθαι would have been clearer.

23. νόμῳ τῷ Περσέων: i.e. it was not the Persian custom to submit military tactics to the chances of divination. There is something of a problem here. Persians were probably as superstitious, to say the least of it, as Greeks. The (apparent) absence of the Magi in the army of Mardonios is remarkable. He himself is represented as the special fautor of Greek religion. He here appears in the character of a 'free-thinker,' like Claudius Pulcher in 249 B.C. before the battle of Drepana; cp. Suetonius, Tib. 2.

42. 2. δικαιοῦντος: a favourite word with Hdt. =ἀξιοῦν, cp. 8. 126.

γὰρ κράτος εἶχε τῆς στρατιῆς οὗτος ἐκ βασιλέως, ἀλλ' οὐκ Ἀρτάβαζος. μεταπεμψάμενος ὦν τοὺς ταξιάρχους τῶν τελέων καὶ τῶν μετ' ἐωυτοῦ ἐόντων Ἑλλήνων τοὺς στρατηγούς εἰρώτα 5 εἴ τι εἰδεῖεν λόγιον περὶ Περσέων ὥς διαφθερέονται ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι. σιγῶντων δὲ τῶν ἐπικλήτων, τῶν μὲν οὐκ εἰδόντων

42. 3 ἐκ βασιλέως C: ἐκ βασιλῆος =: om. B, Valla: 'nec fortasse genuina' van H.

4 τοὺς τε ταξιάρχους τῶν μετ' ἐωυτοῦ ἐόντων Ἑλλήνων καὶ malit Stein<sup>5</sup> 5 ἡρώτα CP= 6 εἰδοῖεν = || διαφθερέονται P: διαφθορεῦνται B: διαφθερέοντας Paris. 1635 =: διαφθαρέονται ὥστε, 'and so,' cp. 7. 118.

τὸ γὰρ κράτος εἶχε κτλ.: the statement that Mardonios but not (ἀλλ' οὐ) Artabazos was commander-in-chief of the army by the king's commission (ἐκ), still leaves the exact relations of Mardonios and Artabazos an obscure problem. (a) 8. 126 supra looks as though Artabazos held a post directly subordinate to Mardonios, inasmuch as he was in command of 60,000 of Mardonios' own select soldiers; but that passage is not convincing, and if 300,000 is really the figure, not for the force of Mardonios but for the king's grand army itself (cp. c. 32 supra), the passage must really tell quite the other way. (b) The service on which Artabazos is there engaged points to an independent command, as does also (c) his subsequent conduct towards Mardonios c. 66 infra, and (d) the reception which he afterwards enjoys at home; had he been in a position actually subordinate to Mardonios his reception could hardly have been so good. Moreover (e) this passage itself, closely considered, lends weight to the supposition that the two commanders were independent of each other; Hdt. at any rate has avoided saying that Artabazos had to take his orders from Mardonios. Is it not possible that the exact position of neither general is fully or clearly stated? Was the command of Artabazos primarily a command in Thrace, and the command of Mardonios a command in Hellas, south of Olympus? Was Mardonios at least more than mere 'commander'? Was he governor, or satrap of Hellas, for the time being? His Greek 'allies' (cp. cc. 31, 32 supra) were certainly the king's subjects. It was only their presence which gave the army of Mardonios its numerical superiority to that of Artabazos. Mardonios is perhaps to be thought of as defending his own province from an Hellenic invasion!

4. μεταπεμψάμενος ὦν: so far the two Persian commanders have been having a private conversation; but that implication is in itself improbable, and conflicts with other indications in the text, viz. (a) the set speech ascribed to Artabazos; (b) the term βουλευομένων above; (c) the purely inadequate and dummy rôle assigned to the ἐπικλητοί when now at last summoned; (d) the obvious probability, and indeed certainty, that the commander would confer with his officers. We may fairly conclude that the Council has really been sitting through c. 41, or at least that the arguments already given represent speeches made at the Council, even if the two chiefs had previously held a private colloquy.

τοὺς ταξιάρχους τῶν τελέων: the term τελάρχοι (cp. τελάρχης) is hardly found; the 'taxiarchs,' or captains, of the τέλη, or squadrons, are here apparently the Persian and other native officers, cp. 8. 67, the ἀρχοντες of the army-list in Bk. 7, cp. 7. 81, as distinguished from the Strategoi of the Greeks, i.e. the Boiotarchs, the Aleuadai, Alexander of Makedon, Harmokydes the Phokian, and so forth.

5. εἰρώτα εἴ τι κτλ.: this inquiry by Mardonios would have been singularly tactless in form and in substance, if it had really been addressed to the officers above indicated, Persian as well as Greek, summoned ad hoc. 'Know ye any prediction that we Persians are to be utterly destroyed here in Hellas?' Stein<sup>6</sup> accordingly would emend the passage, cp. App. Crit. But did Hdt. reason so closely?

7. τῶν ἐπικλήτων: well rendered by Macaulay, 'those summoned to council,' cp. 7. 8, 8. 101. The general, or

τοὺς χρησμούς, τῶν δὲ εἰδότην μὲν ἐν ἀδείῃ δὲ οὐ ποιευμένων τὸ λέγειν, αὐτὸς Μαρδόνιος ἔλεγε "ἐπεὶ τοίνυν ὑμεῖς ἢ ἴστε 10 οὐδὲν ἢ οὐ τολμάτε λέγειν, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐρέω ὡς εὖ ἐπιστάμενος·
ἔστι λόγιον ὡς χρεόν ἐστι Πέρσας ἀπικομένους ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα

8 ἀδείαι P 9 αὐτός τε B: αὐτός γε Gomperz, Holder || Μαρδόνιος ἔλεγεν· ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐρέω ὡς εὖ ἐπιστάμενος, ἐπεὶ δὴ ὑμεῖς ἢ ἴστε κτλ. S ||
ἡμεῖς C 11 χρεών CPz || ἔστι: τι B

governor, has his ἐπικλητοί, like the king. (The word cannot here be evacuated of meaning, or reduced to ἐπικληθέντων or ἐπικλήτων γενομένων.) The Persians (τῶν μὲν) would mostly be ignorant of the Greek oracles, the Greeks (τῶν δέ) might know them, but 'did not consider it safe' (ἐν ἀδείῃ δὲ οὐ ποιευμένων) to say so.

9. αὐτὸς Μαρδόνιος ἔλεγε: did he speak in Persian, or in Greek? The speech ascribed to him still further complicates the situation. 'There is a prophecy to the effect that the Persians after coming to Greece must sack the temple in Delphi, and thereafter perish to the last man. We shall not sack the temple: as far as that is concerned, then, we are safe enough.' Mardonios might have gone on to show some positive cause for expecting a victory; he has done that (privately!) already to Artabazos, viz. (1) the Persian army is superior to the Greek; (2) there is no time to be lost, for the Greek army is increasing day by day; (3) it is the Persian way to assume the offensive, to deliver the attack.

The present anecdote has very little to say to the situation at Plataia; it is not so much part of the story of Plataia, as part of the Apology of Delphi. It explains the fact—a fact so very awkward for Delphi by and by—that Delphi escaped pillage at the hands of the Persians. The explanation is good in itself, but it is completely at variance with the other and more brilliant explanation and apology already given, viz. the story of the Persian attack on Delphi, and the miraculous preservation of the temple and its contents, 8. 35–39. Both stories cannot be true, though both may be false. To suppose that if the Persians, a year before, had done their best to plunder Delphi, Mardonios would have urged this line of argument, in order to cheer and encourage his Council of War, is absurd (the rather, as the Delphic god takes the will for the deed, 6. 86). But this critique might only be one point more against the story in Bk. 8, in itself already incredible. Is the story here true? It is improbable. Its apologetic tendency condemns it. The improbability of the Persian commander-in-chief urging such a line of argument in any case remains. Hdt. himself adds that there was no such oracle: the oracle cited he refers to another connexion. Last, not least, considering the real situation in 480–79 B.C., there is hardly room or occasion for such an oracle, much less for such a scene in the Persian camp as this anecdote involves; it is, in the truest sense, a huge anachronism. Delphi, if not actually on the Persian side, was on the side of the Greeks who were on the Persian side, cp. 7. 132. The question of a Persian sack of Delphi can hardly have been a real question at the time; Xerxes and Mardonios were more likely to be making offerings at Delphi—like Datis at Delos in 490 B.C., cp. 6. 97—than plundering the shrine. It may fairly be concluded that this anecdote, though not involving physical impossibilities, is not more true, in a strictly historical sense, than the other.

11. λόγιον is prima facie a prose utterance (yet cp. πεποιημένον in next c.); the oracle, then, will hardly be a Delphic response. It cannot, however, be (as Stein suggests) due to Onomakritos (cp. 7. 6), for he communicated no oracle σφάλμα φέρον τῷ βαρβάρῳ. Mardonios might be supposed to have had it through Mys his commissioner. Cp. 8. 133 ff. Baehr points out that Euripides, Bakch. 1336, has this oracle (or this anecdote?) in view: ὅταν δὲ Λαῖον χρηστήριον διαρπάσῃσι, νόστον ἄθλιον πάλιν σχήσουσι (sc. οἱ βάρβαροι). If so, he has 'harmonized' it with the story in 8. 35 ff. Here there is no νόστος.

χρεόν ἐστι after ἔστι λόγιον is a little curious and clumsy: if maintained, διαρπάσαι τὸ ἱρὸν τὸ ἐν Δελφοῖσι, μετὰ δὲ τὴν διαρπαγὴν ἀπολέσθαι πάντας. ἡμεῖς τοίνυν αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἐπιστάμενοι οὔτε ἴμεν ἐπὶ τὸ ἱρὸν [τοῦτο] οὔτε ἐπιχειρήσομεν διαρπάζειν, ταύτης τε εἵνεκα τῆς αἰτίας οὐκ ἀπολεόμεθα. ὥστε ὑμέων 15 ὅσοι τυγχάνουσι εὐνοοὶ ἔοντες Πέρσῃσι, ἤδεσθε τοῦδε εἵνεκα ὡς περιεσομένους ἡμέας Ἑλλήνων." ταῦτά σφι εἶπας δεύτερα ἐσήμαινε παραρτέεσθαι τε πάντα καὶ εὐκρινέα ποιέεσθαι ὡς ἅμα ἡμέρη τῇ ἐπιούσῃ συμβολῆς ἐσομένης.

Τοῦτον δ' ἔγωγε τὸν χρησμόν, τὸν Μαρδόνιος εἶπε ἐς 43 Πέρσας ἔχειν, ἐς Ἰλλυριοὺς τε καὶ τὸν Ἑγχελέων στρατὸν οἶδα πεποιημένον, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐς Πέρσας. ἀλλὰ τὰ μὲν Βάκιδι ἐς ταύτην τὴν μάχην [ἐστὶ] πεποιημένα,

12 ἀρπαγὴν B 13 οὔτοι τε z 14 τοῦτο Stein, van H.:
om. B, Holder: seclusi 15 ταύτη C 17 περιεσομένους R:
περιεσομένους SV 18 ἐσήμεινε R: ἐσήμεινε SV || εὐρικρινέα B:
εὐκρινέα S 19 συμβουλῆς R 43. 2 τῶν B || ἐγχελέων R:
ἐγχέλεον B: ἐγχέλεων 3 τάδε μὲν B 4 ἐστὶ post Βακίδι z:
om. C, Gaisford, van H.: secl. Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder it would show that the original significance of χρεῖων was virtually forgotten. But alas for thee, Mardonios! οὐτε ἐς τὸ μετέπειτα οὐτε ἐς τὸ παρόντι καὶ νῦν καταπρόξεται ἀποτράπων τὸ χρεὼν γενέσθαι (cp. 7. 17).

15. ταύτης τε εἵνεκα τῆς αἰτίας seems to admit that there might be other grounds for apprehension—which Mardonios would of course, if this story were true, have proceeded to remove. Cp. τοῦδε εἵνεκα just below.

18. εὐκρινέα ποιέεσθαι: apparently in a physical, not a merely psychological sense. Our naval order 'to clear the decks for action' is superficially analogous. Xenophon, Oikn. 8. 19, makes Ischomachos say that 'there should be a place for everything and everything in its place,' ὅτι καὶ χύτρας φημί εὐρυθμον φαίνεσθαι εὐκρινέως κειμένας.

19. ἡμέρη τῇ ἐπιούσῃ: i.e. the 12th. Cp. c. 41 supra.

43. 1. ἐς Πέρσας ἔχειν, 'to apply to the Persians'; cp. 6. 19.

2. ἐς Ἰλλυριοὺς τε καὶ τὸν Ἑγχελέων στρατὸν οἶδα πεποιημένον, 'I know to have been composed (in verse) with reference to Illyrians, that is to say, the Enchelean host.' 'Encheleus' was apparently (according to Appian, Illyr. 2) the eldest son of Illyrios. The 'Encheleis' are mentioned 5. 61 as a folk among whom the 'Kadmeians' took refuge when driven out of Thebes by the Argives, 'in the days of Laodamas son of Eteokles.' Pausanias too (9. 5. 3) represents Kadmos himself as having retired to dwell among the Illyrian tribe of Encheleians, leaving the Theban throne to his son Polydoros. Strabo 326 places the 'Ἑγχελεῖοι, οὗς καὶ Σαρπηθίου καλοῦσι, in the Hinterland of Epidamnus and Apollonia, and adds that ἐν τοῖς Ἑγχελείοις οἱ Κάδμου καὶ Ἀρμονίας ἀπόγονοι ἦρχον καὶ τὰ μυθεύμενα περὶ αὐτῶν ἐκεῖ δέκνυνται. Apollodoros (3. 5. 4) gives the story of Kadmos. The 'Encheleis' were at war with the 'Illyrians,' and had an oracular promise of victory if they took Kadmos and Harmonia as leaders: they obeyed and obtained victory. Subsequently, however, Kadmos and Harmonia were metamorphosed into serpents. This is the story utilized by Euripides, where he shows acquaintance with the oracle as interpreted by Hdt. in this place; cp. Bakchai (ed. Sandys) 1330-1339. For οἶδα here see below.

3. τὰ μὲν Βάκιδι: sc. ἐπη. On Bakis cp. 8. 20. The μὲν here has no corresponding δέ. So too ταῦτα μὲν just below.

4. ταύτην τὴν μάχην is curious, as it apparently refers to the battle of Plataia, still to come.

5 τὴν δ' ἐπὶ Θερμώδοντι καὶ Ἀσωπῷ λεχεποίῃ Ἑλλήνων σύνοδον καὶ βαρβαρόφωνον ἰνγὴν, τῇ πολλοὶ πεσέονται ὑπὲρ λάχεσιν τε μόρον τε τοξοφόρων Μήδων, ὅταν αἰσιμον ἡμαρ ἐπέλθῃ,— ταῦτα μὲν καὶ παραπλήσια τούτοις ἄλλα Μουσαίῳ ἔχοντα 10 οἶδα ἐς Πέρσας, ὁ δὲ Θερμώδων ποταμὸς ῥέει μεταξὺ Τανάγρας τε καὶ Γλίσσαντος·

44 Μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἐπειρώτησιν τῶν χρησμῶν καὶ παραίνεσιν τὴν ἐκ Μαρδονίου νύξ τε ἐγένετο καὶ ἐς φυλακὰς ἐτάσσοντο.
 ὥς δὲ πρόσω τῆς νυκτὸς προελήλατο καὶ ἡσυχίη τε ἐδόκει

5 θερμόδοτον R 7 πολλῇ B (πολλῇ ap. Gaisf.) || λάχεσιν RV
 8 ἔσιμον B 9 τούτοις om. S || Μουσαίον Bekker 44. 1
 ἐπειρώτησιν C 2 ἐγένετο Sz 3 προσελήλατο B || ἡσυχίη τε B, Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἡσυχίη B: ἡσυχίη

5. λεχεποίη of the Asopos is Homeric: Il. 4. 383.

6. σύνοδον: cp. c. 27 supra.

ινγὴ is a rare word, found also ap. Soph. Philok. 741; cp. verb ἰνγεῖν Tr. 784. The Homeric form is ἰνγός, Il. 18. 572.

7. ὑπὲρ λάχεσιν τε μόρον τε, 'beyond what destiny and fate decree.'—'Lachesis' does not appear in Homer; but ὑπὲρ μόρον is Homeric, Od. 1. 34.

8. αἰσιμον ἡμαρ: Homerum quoque redolet, Baehr; cp. Il. 8. 72, etc.

9. Μουσαίῳ: cp. 7. 6 supra.

10. οἶδα: cp. l. 3 supra. The two are remarkable, the rather as they hardly refer to exactly the same kind of knowledge. Had Hdt. in his hands a ms. copy of the poems and prophecies of Musaios, or whence his assurance of personal knowledge in this case? His assertion that the prediction (said to have been) referred by Mardonios to the Persians in truth referred not to them but to the Encheleians is a question of interpretation. Here we may suppose an antecedent visit to Delphi, and even the correction of a previous error. This chapter has many marks of being an insertion, an interpolation: if from the author's own hand, then not as part of the first or original draft of the work; cp. Introduction, § 9. Two further points are of special interest in regard to the λόγιον. (1) It is an 'unfulfilled' prophecy; a prophecy, indeed, designed to defeat its own fulfilment. (2) It exhibits the possibility and the practice of transferring predictions from one event to another as might suit.

ὁ δὲ Θερμώδων κτλ.: the geographical gloss is added to explain the name in the oracle above. On the river cp. c. 27 supra. Plutarch (Dem. 19, cp. Theseus 27) shows that the 'Sibylline' verse τῆς ἐπὶ Θερμώδοντι μάχης ἀπάνεσθαι γενομένην could be interpreted of the battle of Chaironeia, in 338 B.C. On Tanagra cp. c. 15 supra.

11. Γλίσσαντος. Glisas appears in the Catalogue (Il. 2. 504) in one line with Plataia. Its ruins are placed by Pausanias (9. 19. 2) off the road from Thebes to Chalkis, seven stades to the north of Teumesos, under Mount Hypatos. It was famous as the scene of a battle between the Argives, i.e. Epigonoí, and the Thebans (1. 44. 4 etc.). Pausanias names the Thermodon beside it. Cp. Strabo 412 Γλίσσαντα δὲ λέγει κατοικεῖν ἐν τῷ Ἰπιάτῳ ὄρει . . . πλησίον Τευμησσοῦ . . . ὃ ὑποπίπτει τὸ Ἀόνιον καλούμενον πεδῖον.

44. 1. τὴν ἐπειρώτησιν τῶν χρησμῶν: a curious expression, for 'inquiry about, or after, the oracles'—referring to Mardonios' inquiry in c. 42 supra. For the word cp. 6. 67. The παραίνεσις is also to be found in c. 42 supra.

2. νύξ τε . . . καὶ . . . : a very simple parataxis, cp. 7. 21.

ἐς φυλακὰς ἐτάσσοντο apparently applies to both sides, and means practically that they retired to quarters, bivouacked, instead of continuing in battle-array, φυλακή being guard-duty, etc. Cp. also c. 51 infra, and here just below. On the division of the watches see note to c. 51 below.

3. πρόσω τῆς νυκτὸς προελήλατο: a εἶναι ἀνὰ τὰ στρατόπεδα καὶ μάλιστα οἱ ἄνθρωποι εἶναι ἐν ἵπνῳ, τηνικαῦτα προσελάσας ἵππῳ πρὸς τὰς φυλακὰς τὰς 5 Ἀθηναίων Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Ἀμύντεω, στρατηγός τε ἐὼν καὶ βασιλεὺς Μακεδόνων, ἐδίλζητο τοῖσι στρατηγοῖσι ἐς λόγους ἐλθεῖν. τῶν δὲ φυλάκων οἱ μὲν πλεῖνες παρέμενον, οἱ δ' ἔθεον ἐπὶ τοὺς στρατηγούς, ἐλθόντες δὲ ἔλεγον ὡς ἄνθρωπος ἥκοι ἐπ' ἵππου ἐκ τοῦ στρατοπέδου τοῦ Μήδων, ὃς ἄλλο μὲν 10 οὐδὲν παραγυμνοῖ ἔπος, στρατηγούς δὲ ὀνομάζων ἐθέλειν φησὶ ἐς λόγους ἐλθεῖν. οἱ δὲ ἐπεὶ ταῦτα ἤκουσαν, αὐτίκα εἵποντο 45

5 τὰς Ἀθηναίων: τῶν Ἀθηναίων Pz 8 δ': δὲ B 10 ἥκει Marc. z
11 ἐθέλειν σφι C: ἐθέλει σφίσιν Marc.: ἐθέλει φησὶ z 45. 1
ἔποντο CPz

neuter construction, with a correct temporal pluperfect: multum noctis processerat. Cp. 2. 121 ὡς δὲ πρόσω ἦν τῆς νυκτός. Copied by Sallust, Iug. 21 ubi plerumque noctis processit. The whole phrase ὡς δὲ . . . ἐν ἵπνῳ is a paraphrase for 'the second watch,' cp. c. 51 infra.

5. τὰς φυλακὰς τὰς Ἀθηναίων: the feminine φυλακή may be either collective (cp. ἡ ἵππος) or local; the plural here suits the latter meaning: the outposts, vedettes. Cp. 1. 2 supra.

6. Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Ἀμύντεω κτλ. If the patronymic might have been employed here for the sake of clearness and style, yet the full description added is rather de trop, after the many previous accounts of Alexander (7. 173-5, 8. 34, 136 ff., cc. 1, 4, 8 supra), and points rather to the independent Attic, or phil-Attic source, from which this part of the narrative is obviously derived. The Makedonians were posted on the Persian right, opposite the Athenians; cp. c. 31 supra.

7. ἐδίλζητο: cp. c. 37 supra.

τοῖσι στρατηγοῖσι: in spite of c. 28 supra Alexander knows that there is more than one Strategos in the Athenian quarters. Stein says, 'probably all ten were in camp, cp. 6. 103'—but what then of Xanthippos, and his probable colleague, or colleagues, on the fleet? (cp. c. 114 infra). And was there no Strategos left in Salamis?

ἐς λόγους ἐλθεῖν: he wishes to communicate, to converse with them, but there is no question of a discussion or a debate, cp. c. 41 supra.

8. τῶν δὲ φυλάκων: the good, efficient, vigilant, shrewd Athenian picket! Most of them stay—to keep an eye on Alexander (whom they did not recognize), while two or three ran (ἔθειν) to headquarters with the message. Probably there was an officer who gave the proper directions, and the action was not all quite so spontaneous and democratic as it reads.

9. ἄνθρωπος is not complimentary to the king: it suggests a barbarian. Perhaps οἱ ἄνθρωποι up above has a special reference to the same side, whose vigilance Alexander had of course ex hypothesi to avoid; or it might contrast with the beasts, who were perhaps awake, but did not matter.

11. παραγυμνοί: cp. 8. 19.

στρατηγούς δὲ ὀνομάζων: certainly not all ten of them, but a selection! If only Hdt. had done as much! The only Strategoi for this year whom he names are Aristides (c. 28 supra) and Xanthippos (c. 114 infra). Plutarch (Aristeid. 20) adds for Plataia two names, Leokrates and Myronides. It is hardly likely that Aristides was but τρίτος αὐτός with so large a force under arms. The Athenian democratic theory was that all battles were soldiers' battles, and that generals did not count for much, and needed not to be remembered, unless they were killed. Where was Themistokles, for example, all this time? Was he with Xanthippos on the fleet? Thuc. 1. 90 disproves it. Was he with Aristides in the camp? Was he in Salamis with the women and children? The Athenians forgot to say—forgot even to say whether he was one of the Strategoi this year at all.

45. 1. οἱ δὲ: the two, three, or more, 'named' by Alexander. It is not said

ἐς τὰς φυλακάς· ἀπικομένοισι δὲ ἔλεγε Ἀλέξανδρος τάδε.
 “ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, παραθήκην ὑμῖν τὰ ἔπεα τάδε τίθεμαι, ἀπόρρητα ποιούμενος πρὸς μηδένα λέγειν ὑμέας ἄλλον ἢ
 5 Πανσανίνην, μή με καὶ διαφθείρητε· οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἔλεγον, εἰ μὴ μεγάλως ἐκδηδόμην συναπάσης τῆς Ἑλλάδος. αὐτὸς τε γὰρ “Ἕλλην γένος εἰμὶ τῶρχαῖον καὶ ἀντ’ ἐλευθέρης δεδουλωμένην οὐκ ἂν ἐθέλοιμι ὀρᾶν τὴν Ἑλλάδα. λέγω δὲ ὦν ὅτι Μαρδονίῳ τε καὶ τῇ στρατιῇ τὰ σφάγια οὐ δύναται καταθύμια γενέσθαι· 10 πάλαι γὰρ ἂν ἐμάχεσθε. νῦν δὲ οἱ δέδοκται τὰ μὲν σφάγια
 ἔαν χαίρειν, ἅμ’ ἡμέρη δὲ διαφωσκούσῃ συμβολὴν ποιέεσθαι·

2 δὴ S      3 τάδε τὰ ἔπεα B || τίθημι Marc.      5 καὶ om. CPz
 || οὐ δὲ γὰρ =      7 ἐλευθέρης Marc.      8 ἔλοιμι B || δὴ Krueger
 10 δέ οἱ om. R || μὲν τὰ RV (μὲν om. S ap. Gaisf.)      11 ἅμα B, Holder, van H. || διαφωσκούσῃ A<sup>2</sup>: διαφασκούσῃ A<sup>1</sup>B: διαφανσκούσῃ reliqui,
 Holder || συμβουλὴν B

they had to be roused. Everything is wide-awake in the Athenian camp.

2. τὰς φυλακάς is practically here locative, and feminine, cp. cc. 44. 2, 93. 22.

ἔλεγε Ἀλέξανδρος τάδε. Alexander's address is given in orat. recta. It appears to be made up in essentials out of Mardonios' in orat. obliq., c. 41 supra; the change is purely stylistic, and the one speech doubtless as unauthentic as the other. If there were anything to choose, it would not be in favour of this one. Alexander is the only speaker at this interview with the Strategoi; they supply a passive audience; it is not a conference, it is a monologue. Alexander may have spoken good Greek, with a Makedonian brogue: a few solecisms in his reported language would have lent it verisimilitude.

3. ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι: strictly correct, had he been addressing the Boule or Ekklesia, as in 8. 140. The ἄνδρες gains point from the ἄνθρωπος in the previous chapter.

παραθήκην τίθεμαι, 'I deposit,' 'I entrust,' perhaps without recall; cp. 6. 73 π. παρατίθενται.

4. ἀπόρρητα ποιούμενος: sc. τὰ ἔπεα, 'as a solemn secret'; cp. c. 94 infra. πρὸς μηδένα λέγειν is exegetical.

ἢ Πανσανίνην: Pausanias is here recognized as the sole commander-in-chief. The need for this strict secrecy is not apparent: so long as no one on his own side knew, Alexander was safe. When this story came up Pausanias had been called to his account and was beyond further inquiry (except by necromancy); and as none of the other Greeks had been told of the matter, owing to this solemn precaution, it was no use their saying they had never heard of it! Thus the story provides its own Apologetics!

6. συναπάσης τῆς Ἑλλάδος, 'of Hellas collectively': no mere geographical expression, cp. 7. 157.

αὐτὸς τε γὰρ Ἕλλην γένος εἰμὶ: according to the story in 8. 137 and the judgement of the Hellenodikai 5. 22. Cp. notes ad U.c.

7. τῶρχαῖον: i.e. 'originally'; cp. 1. 56 τὸ ἀρχαῖον, 1. 173 τῶρχαῖον, etc. Here = τὰ ἀνεκάθεν.

8. (λέγω) δὲ ὦν resumes or emphasizes the point at which he is driving; cp. 7. 145.

Μαρδονίῳ τε καὶ τῇ στρατιῇ, 'to Mardonios and his army.'

9. οὐ δύναται, 'refuse,' 'will not,' 'cannot be got to . . .'; cp. 7. 134. A strictly sacred non possunt.

καταθύμια: cf. 5. 39, of the heart's desire. An intimate word, warmer than the καλὰ, ἐπιτήδεα of c. 37 supra.

10. γὰρ, '(for) otherwise.'

δέδοκται: the perfect of absolute resolution, determination.

11. ἅμ' ἡμέρη δὲ διαφωσκούσῃ: i.e. at dawn of day—the 12th day; cp. 3. 86 and c. 42 supra ad f.

συμβολὴν ποιέεσθαι: i.e. μάχης ἀρξαι, or ἀρχειν.

καταρρώδηκε γὰρ μὴ πλεῦνες συλλεχθῆτε, ὥς ἐγὼ εἰκάζω. πρὸς ταῦτα ἐτοιμάζεσθε. ἦν δὲ ἄρα ὑπερβάλῃται τὴν συμβολὴν Μαρδόνιος καὶ μὴ ποιήσεται, λιπαρέετε μένοντες· ὀλίγων γὰρ σφι ἡμερέων λείπεται σιτία. ἦν δὲ ὑμῖν ὁ πόλεμος ὅδε κατὰ 15 νόον τελευτήσῃ, μνησθῆναι τινὰ χρὴ καὶ ἐμεῦ ἐλευθερώσιος πέρι, ὃς Ἑλλήνων εἵνεκα οὕτω ἔργον παράβολον ἔργασμαι ὑπὸ προθυμίας, ἐθέλων ὑμῖν δηλῶσαι τὴν διάνοιαν τὴν Μαρδονίου, ἵνα μὴ ἐπιπέσσωσι ὑμῖν ἐξαίφνης οἱ βάρβαροι μὴ προσδεκο-

12 καταρρώδηκε P: καταρρωδῆκε B || συλλεγῆτε B: συναχθῆτε ≈ 13 ἄρα AB 14 καὶ μὴ ποιήσεται del. van H.: ποιῆται B, Holder || ὀλίγα S: ὀλίγων ceteri 16 ἐμὲ C 17 ἔργον οὕτω, Holder, van H.: τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον οὕτω ≈ 19 ἐξαίφνης om. B (οἱ βάρβαροι ἐξαίφνης P<sup>1</sup>) || μὴ cum rasura P: μὴ δὲ Marc.

12. καταρρώδηκε γὰρ κτλ.: a clear assertion or admission of the formidable number of the Greek forces. There was no need for conjecture about the view of Mardonios; he has expressly stated it c. 41 supra (ex hyp. to Artabazos!).

13. ἄρα, 'as is not likely': of the less probable alternative cp. 7. 10, etc.

14. μὴ ποιήσεται: the negative here seems to coalesce with the verb to form a single idea, the conditional ἦν being remote (but not so clearly as in cases where οὐ might be used).

λιπαρέετε: a word put again into Alexander's mouth, 5. 19.

ὀλίγων γὰρ σφι ἡμερέων λείπεται σιτία. If this statement were true, it would supply another good ground for the impatience of Mardonios to do battle. It is contrary, and even contradictory, to the statement in c. 41 supra, and looks like either a deliberate lie on the part of Alexander (hardly in the spirit of the piece), or an oversight on the part of Hdt. Rawlinson thought this statement could not be true. Stein limits it to 'the magazines on the Asopos,' but admits there was plenty in Thebes. Blakesley refuted this point of contrast by anticipation: "With the superiority in cavalry . . . it would have been perfectly easy to maintain uninterrupted communication between Thebes and the army in camp."

15. ἦν δὲ . . . τελευτήσῃ: an end to the war acceptable to the Greeks was in sight; on the Persian side victory was anything but assured. This is the fifth clear admission of the fact as recognized before the event; cp. cc. 41-42 supra.

The 'hedging' of Alexander, as a fact, is the real evidence.

16. τινά: cp. 8. 109.

ἐλευθερώσιος πέρι: this suggestion that Alexander pleaded beforehand with the Athenians for deliverance from the Persian at their hands is in the true style of Attic afterthought. The Athenians are the 'liberators' from the Persian, and not from the Persian alone, cp. 8. 142. (But in Makedon, or at least in Thrace, the Spartans are by and by to bring 'liberty' from the Athenians; cp. Thuc. 4. 85.)

17. Ἑλλήνων εἵνεκα: Alexander is moved by the best motives, thinking mainly of the general interests.

οὕτω Stein takes with παράβολον, cp. 7. 46, where, however, no word intervenes between οὕτω (bis) on the one hand and the adjective (and subst.) on the other.

παράβολον: bold, hazardous, reckless. Also of persons, Aristoph. Wasps 192, Diodor. 19. 3. 2 φιλοκινδυνος . . . καὶ παράβολος ἐν ταῖς μάχαις.

ἔργασμαι ὑπὸ προθυμίας: cp. c. 37.

18. διάνοιαν (cp. 8. 97): the plan to attack on the following morning.

19. ἵνα μὴ κτλ. The concern of Alexander lest the Greeks should be taken unawares is a doubtful compliment, and an inconsequence. According to the context, they had been for ten days facing the Persians in battle-array, and anxious that the enemy should cross the Asopos and attack them; on the morrow they were to have their wish at last.

ἐξαίφνης is (1) a doubtful form for ἐξαπίνης, as in l. 74, 87; (2) omitted in 20 μένοισί κω. εἰμὶ δὲ Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Μακεδών." ὁ μὲν ταῦτα εἶπας ἀπήλυνε ὀπίσω ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον καὶ τὴν ἑωυτοῦ τάξιν, 46 Οἱ δὲ στρατηγοὶ τῶν Ἀθηναίων ἐλθόντες ἐπὶ τὸ δεξιὸν κέρας ἔλεγον Πανσανίῃ τά περ ἤκουσαν Ἀλεξάνδρου. ὁ δὲ τούτῳ τῷ λόγῳ καταρρωδήσας τοὺς Πέρσας ἔλεγε τάδε. "ἐπεὶ τοίνυν ἐς ἡῶ ἡ συμβολὴ γίνεται, ὑμέας μὲν χρεὼν ἐστὶ

5 τοὺς Ἀθηναίους στήναι κατὰ τοὺς Πέρσας, ἡμέας δὲ κατὰ τοὺς Βοιωτοὺς τε καὶ τοὺς κατ' ὑμέας τεταγμένους Ἑλλήνων, τῶνδε εἵνεκα· ὑμεῖς ἐπίστασθε τοὺς Μήδους καὶ τὴν μάχην

21 ἀπέλυνεν B
abesse malit van H.
στασθαι BR

46. 4 χρεών CPz, van H.
6 τε om. αC

5 τοὺς Ἀθηναίους
7 εἵνεκεν Marc. = || ἐπί-

one group of mss.; (3) tautologous and gloss-like in this passage.

20. εἰμὶ δὲ Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Μακεδών: Alexander in thus announcing himself appears to forget that Aristides and the men of Athens were thoroughly familiar with his appearance, if only from his embassy to Athens in the previous winter; cp. 8. 136 ff. The two stories are of course from independent sources (though both Atticist).

The historical credibility of this interview is not high. Certainly, if any such interview or communication took place between Alexander of Makedon and the Athenian Strategoi, the gist and purport of it were widely different from this report. Possibly there was at Plataia some kind of understanding between the Makedonian and the Athenians. He had been to Athens, or to Salamis, a while before, and may have seen reason to think that Mardonios had anything but an easy task before him. To play off the Greeks and the Persians against each other was the obvious policy of Makedon. The Athenians may have used the opportunity to come to an understanding with the king. He may have had information of the troubles in Asia (revolt of Babylon, etc.). The remarkable success with which, in the subsequent battle, the Athenians dispose of 50,000 men opposed to them, and their comparative immunity during the occupation of 'the second position,' suggest the idea that matters were not pressed against them. For that they may have had to thank Alexander, who was posted on the Persian right.

46. 1. οἱ δὲ στρατηγοὶ τῶν Ἀθηναίων: i.e. Aristides and his colleagues—or so many of them as were present—went to the right wing, the army bivouacking in order of battle. They have cut a very poor figure in the previous interview, acting the part of mere dummies.

2. Πανσανίῃ: no account being taken of Euryanax, in spite of c. 10 supra. Pausanias is terror-struck at the report! Not a Laconian touch. His speech, like that of Alexander just before, is given in orat. recta.

4. ἐς ἡῶ ἡ συμβολὴ γίνεται: cp. 3. 85 τῆς ἐπιούσης ἡμέρης ὁ ἀγὼν ἡμῖν ἐστὶ. The present is rhetorical. In this case the argument is double: that the battle is to take place (at dawn) is a reason for the tactical move; that it is not to take place until dawn gives time to execute the proposed manœuvre.

6. τοὺς . . Ἑλλήνων: including the Makedonians, whose medism throughout is minimized as much as possible.

7. τῶνδε εἵνεκα: the reasons given for the change of front, or exchange of positions, are incredible. The experience of the Μαραθωνομάχαι, as a taunt, might have come very well from a Spartan after the vainglorious boasting of the Athenians in c. 27 supra (cp. notes ad l.), but as a serious argument by a Spartan commander for such a manœuvre as proposed here, it is virtually inconceivable. Nor, on the other hand, could a Spartan have practically ignored the Spartan achievement at Thermopylai as Pausanias here does. True, the Spartans at Thermopylai had all perished (Aristodemos who is at αὐτῶν ἐν Μαραθῶνι μαχεσάμενοι, ἡμεῖς δὲ ἄπειροί τε εἰμὲν καὶ ἀδαεῖς τούτων τῶν ἀνδρῶν. Σπαρτιητέων γὰρ οὐδεὶς πεπειρήται Μήδων, ἡμεῖς δὲ Βοιωτῶν καὶ Θεσσαλῶν ἔμπειροι 10 εἰμὲν. ἀλλ' ἀναλαβόντας τὰ ὄπλα χρεόν ἐστι ἵεναι ὑμέας μὲν ἐς τόδε τὸ κέρας, ὑμέας δὲ ἐς τὸ εὐώνυμον." πρὸς δὲ ταῦτα εἶπαν οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι τάδε. "καὶ αὐτοῖσι ἡμῖν πάλαι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ἐπεῖτε εἶδομεν κατ' ὑμέας τασσομένους τοὺς Πέρσας, ἐν νόφ' ἐγένετο εἰπεῖν ταῦτα τὰ περ ὑμεῖς φθάντες 15 προφέρετε· ἀλλὰ ἀρρωδέομεν μὴ ὑμῖν οὐκ ἡδέες γένωνται οἱ λόγοι. ἐπεὶ δ' ὦν αὐτοὶ ἐμνήσθητε, καὶ ἡδομένοισι ἡμῖν οἱ λόγοι γεγόνاسι καὶ ἔτοιμοι εἰμὲν ποιέειν ταῦτα." ὥς δ' 47

8 αὐτέων z || ἐν; ἐπὶ Pz 9 τουτέων z || τῶν ἀνδρῶν (-έων V)
τουτέων B 10 δὲ; τε α 11 ἀλλὰ α || χρεόν CPz, van H.
13 εἶπαι z, van H. 15 ταῦτα van H. 16 προσφέρετε Cobet, van H. || ἀλλὰ γὰρ B, Holder, van H. || γίνονται RV: γίνονται S 17
ὑμῖν RVz 18 ἐτοίμοι CPz

Plataia, alone excepted, c. 71 infra), but in so doing had shown how immensely superior they were to the best Persian troops. The story here is pure Atticism. Not content with having bested the Arkadians, the Athenians must make Sparta too confess her inferiority. There may have been some tactical manoeuvre on which this fable was hung (cp. next c.), but as it stands it is a transparent fiction.

The main contrast throughout the speech is between the Athenians (ὑμέας μὲν . . . ὑμεῖς . . . ὑμέας μὲν) and the Spartans (ἡμέας δὲ . . . ἡμεῖς δὲ (bis) . . . ἡμέας δέ).

τοὺς Μήδους καὶ τὴν μάχην αὐτῶν: 'Medes' here equals or covers 'Persians.' μάχη, 'style of fighting'; cp. 5. 49.

8. ἐν Μαραθῶνι: this homage to Marathon, beside which Thermopylai is not worth mentioning, comes with double effect from a Spartan's lips!

9. ἀδαεῖς with gen. rei, 2. 49, 5. 90; cp. ἀδαήμων 8. 65; the gen. pers. is apparently unique. Pausanias uses ἀνδρῶν, not ἀνθρώπων. The speaker becomes a little involved in his anxiety to make the utter inferiority of the Spartans clear; the second ἡμεῖς δὲ is virtually the δὲ with resumed subject, a false antithesis (the real being Μήδων μὲν ἄπειροι Βοιωτῶν δὲ ἔμπειροι); but the running antithesis between ὑμεῖς and ἡμεῖς helps to determine the phraseology.

Σπαρτιητέων . . . Μήδων: this statement not only ignores the story of Thermopylai, but implies that any fighting so far in Boiotia has not been done by the Spartans; and moreover that their observation has taught them nothing of the Persian warfare. How, then, has their experience of Boiotians and Thessalians been gained? What fighting had any dead or living Spartan done with Boiotians? The only recorded engagement with Thessalians (5. 63, 64) was rather an unfortunate precedent! Of course, if Pausanias really said all this, it might show how desperately hard up he was for an excuse.

13. αὐτοῖσι ἡμῖν . . . ἐν νόφ' ἐγένετο εἰπεῖν ταῦτα: i.e. to make the proposal you have just made. (The formula carries further, and may serve to hint that the story stands, almost self-confessed, an Attic fabrication.) φθάντες προφέρετε, 'have anticipated us in proposing.'

πάλαι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, rather redundant; and the date only goes back at most ten days.

16. ἀρρωδέομεν μὴ . . . οὐκ ἡδέες γένωνται is not a true case of the double negative idiom μὴ οὐ, the οὐ in this case simply coalescing with ἡδέες into a single idea = ἀηδέες (cp. οὐ φίλος c. 4 supra). δ' ὦν, much as in c. 45 supra. καὶ . . . καὶ, the strong co-ordination, cp. c. 26 supra. ἡδομένοισι ἡμῖν, cp. 8. 101. 10 supra.

ἤρεσκε ἀμφοτέροισι ταῦτα, ἡὼς τε διέφαινε καὶ διαλλάσσοντο

47. 2 ἡ ὥστε R || διάλασον R: διάλασσον SV

47. 2. ἡὼς τε διέφαινε καὶ διαλλάσσοντο τὰς τάξεις: the dawn of the twelfth day, according to the Journal, cp. cc. 41, 44 supra. The grammatical parataxis is observable, cp. 7. 217 ἡὼς τε δὴ διέφαινε καὶ οἱ ἐγένοντο ἐπ' ἀκρωτηρίῳ τοῦ δρεος. The tenses are important; it does not appear that the exchange of positions was ever fully carried out between the Spartans and Athenians: dawn broke and found them still engaged in the manœuvre. τὸ ποιούμενον, too, is imperfect. (Blakesley's trans. is misleading: "with the very break of day they changed their respective positions.") Hdt. indeed does not expressly say that the manœuvre was not carried out; he leaves, however, the impression that it was not fully carried out, but was arrested, by the rapid counter-development on the Persian side, which showed Pausanias that his purpose had been discovered.

This chapter perhaps conceals a great mystery. Presumably there was an excuse in fact for the story of the exchange of positions. Some manœuvre, some development in the position of the Greeks took place, which lent colour to the Athenian version of the affair. Speeches and motivation with Hdt. are in a different category to acts and events: the reported order, the chronological succession of acts and events, is often less acceptable than the bare acts or events themselves; they, in turn, seldom present a complete series, and frequently undergo a transfiguration, for better or for worse; but Hdt. is nevertheless not a mere novelist, not even a mere historical novelist. All this justifies considerable freedom in the hypothetical reconstruction of a story, which in its traditional form is inadequate and incredible; and it makes reconstruction inevitable. The exchange of positions, according to Hdt., is to take place on the twelfth day of the occupation by the Greeks of the position 'on the Asopos' marked by the Androkrateion and Gargaphia. Is it credible that for eleven days the Greeks occupied this position unmolested? Why then suddenly on the twelfth day is the cavalry loosed upon them, and the position immediately rendered untenable? Again, why is so much stress laid on the fact that it was a man on horseback that came to the Athenian lines on the night of the eleventh, if the Greek and Persian armies were then in close contact, only separated by the Asopos? If the Macedonian came on a horse, it was because he had a good deal of ground to cover; in other words, the Greeks were not ἐν τῷ Ἀσωπῷ on the eleventh, or any of the preceding days. Hdt. has apparently antedated the occupation by the Greeks of the position 'on the Asopos,' that is, round the Androkrateion, with Gargaphia in their rear; and has underestimated and misconceived the 'first position' and its developments, in front of Hysiai and Plataiai. It was only on the twelfth that the Greeks descended to the 'second' position, i.e. the hills in front of Gargaphia 'on the Asopos'—probably counting on the Persians crossing the river to attack them. In the process of advancing a tactical manœuvre, or series of manœuvres, is performed, which is misunderstood, parodied, and converted ad maiorem gloriam Atheniensium in this passage at the expense of the Spartans; exactly as in a previous passage the move from the position at Erythrai to the position at Hysiai had been similarly exploited, at the expense of the Tegeatai. The exact nature of the manœuvre may be a matter of dispute. Hdt. treats the μετὰταξις, or μετακίνησις, as purely a question between the two wings, the centre taking no part in it. In reality the whole line was doubtless involved. There was an advance en échelon, which Atticizing tradition interpreted as an attempt on the part of the Lakēdaimonians to get into the Athenian position. There was perhaps more than that, an actual development, whereby the Lakēdaimonians came to stand where the Athenians had been standing, on the extreme left of the line; and again the Athenians finally, when Gargaphia was passed, were again standing on the extreme left of the line. This was the manœuvre by which the position ἐν τῷ Ἀσωπῷ was actually occupied. Whether it had the appearance of an attempt to outflank the Persians, or not, may be questioned; such can hardly have been its real purpose. With their hopeless inferiority in mounted men the Greeks τὰς τάξεις. γνόντες δὲ οἱ Βοιωτοὶ τὸ ποιούμενον ἐξαγορεύουσι Μαρδονίῳ. ὁ δ' ἐπέτε ἤκουσε, αὐτίκα μετιστάνας καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπειράτο παράγων τοὺς Πέρσας κατὰ τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους. 5 ὥς δὲ ἔμαθε τοῦτο τοιοῦτο γινόμενον ὁ Πανσανίης, γνούς ὅτι οὐ λανθάνει, ὀπίσω ἦγε τοὺς Σπαρτιήτας ἐπὶ τὸ δεξιὸν κέρας· ὥς δὲ αὐτως καὶ ὁ Μαρδόνιος ἐπὶ τοῦ εὐωνύμου.

Ἐπεὶ δὲ κατέστησαν ἐς τὰς ἀρχαίας τάξεις, πέμψας ὁ 48 Μαρδόνιος κήρυκα ἐς τοὺς Σπαρτιήτας ἔλεγε τάδε. “ὦ Λακεδαιμόνιοι, ὑμεῖς δὴ λέγεσθε εἶναι ἄνδρες ἄριστοι ὑπὸ τῶν

3 τάξεις CRV || δ' RV 4 δὲ RV 6 τοιοῦτον B || γινόμενον Pz 7, 8 utrum τοὺς Σπαρτιήτας genuina sint an post Μαρδόνιος exciderint τοὺς Πέρσας dubit. van H. 8 ὥς Stein: ὥς van H.: ὥς || δ' CPz || αὐτως καὶ: καὶ αὐτὸς B || <τοὺς Πέρσας> ἐπὶ (van H.), Holder || τὸ εὐώνυμον B, Holder, van H. 48. 1 τάξεις CR || ὁ om. B 2 κήρυκας C 3 λέγεσθαι R would have been courting certain destruction in moving, or attempting to move, on Thebes, by the Plataia-Thebes road. Mardonios draws out his line of battle on the north bank of the Asopos; he deploys to the west. The medizing Greeks, occupying the extreme west of the Laager, may have been potentially opposite the Greek right for a while, until they pushed up the river westwards, their places being taken by the Medes and Persians. Mardonios has now drawn the Greeks down to the Asopos; he hopes to draw or drive them across. He gives them no peace all this day: the cavalry ride round the position freely, harass them extremely, and destroy and cut off the water-supply. For but one single day do the Greeks maintain themselves in this position; they have been disappointed of their expectation that Mardonios would send his infantry across the Asopos to do battle, and they determine to retreat (or to return!) to the position on 'the island' (c. 51 infra), or the position of which the island was the most prominent feature.

8. ὥς δὲ αὐτως καὶ ὁ Μαρδόνιος: sc. ἦγε τοὺς Πέρσας.

48. 1. τὰς ἀρχαίας τάξεις: i.e. the order, or positions, 'originally occupied' before the changes, or attempted changes, recorded in c. 47.

2. κήρυκα . . . ἔλεγε τάδε: the exact words of Mardonios' message! The speaker must have been a Greek, or a 'diglott.' The herald apparently comes across the river (with a flag of truce!) to the Spartan quarters; but the story was never so told in Sparta! The speech is an Athenian Appendix to the previous Athenian self-glorifications. It contains some sarcastic reflexions on Spartan reputation, and an extremely sporting offer, or challenge, on Mardonios' part. Grote discredits the anecdote; Rawlinson defends the 'Homeric' (sic!) taunt as quite agreeable to the practice of primitive and specially oriental races (rather contradictory terms), but even he admits that the challenge is less probable. Here again we may fairly conjecture that there was some foundation in fact for the fiction. The object of Mardonios must still have been to induce the Greeks to cross the river. Did he really offer them a free and unmolested passage? Or did he offer to come across if they would give him time to reform on their side? Such offers are not made in war à outrance; but the Persians were cavaliers and sportsmen, and Mardonios may have thought of the Greeks as his own future subjects. (Cp. the Assyrian challenge to Hezekiah, 2 Kings 18. 23.)

3. δὴ is sarcastic; cp. l. 115. The first of four such in the speech, to which add ἄρα, νῦν ὦν, δ' ὦν, καὶ, δέ, ἀλλά, all of which heighten the effect, to say nothing of the blunter satire in the more material phrases and propositions.

τῇδε ἀνθρώπων, ἐκπαγλεομένων ὥς οὔτε φεύγετε ἐκ πολέμου
 5 οὔτε τάξιν ἐκλείπετε, μένοντές τε ἢ ἀπόλλυτε τοὺς ἐναντίους ἢ αὐτοὶ ἀπόλλυσθε. τῶν δ' ἄρ' ἦν οὐδὲν ἀληθές· πρὶν γὰρ
 ἢ συμμεῖξαι ἡμέας ἐς χειρῶν τε νόμον ἀπικέσθαι, καὶ δὴ φεύγοντας καὶ στάσιν ἐκλείποντας ὑμέας εἶδομεν, ἐν Ἀθηναίοισι 10 ἡμετέρων τασσομένους. ταῦτα οὐδαμῶς ἀνδρῶν ἀγαθῶν ἔργα, ἀλλὰ πλείστον δὴ ἐν ὑμῖν ἐψεύσθημεν. προσδεκόμενοι γὰρ
 κατὰ κλέος ὥς δὴ πέμψετε ἐς ἡμέας κήρυκα προκαλούμενοι καὶ βουλόμενοι μούνοισι Πέρσῃσι μάχεσθαι, ἄρτιοι ἐόντες ποιέειν ταῦτα οὐδὲν τοιοῦτο λέγοντας ὑμέας εὔρομεν ἀλλὰ
 15 πτώσσοντας μᾶλλον. νῦν ὦν ἐπειδὴ οὐκ ὑμεῖς ἤρξατε τούτου

4 ἐκπαγλεομένων B      6 δὲ α      7 συμμεῖξαι libri, Stein<sup>12</sup>,
 Holder || ὑμέας B      8 στάσιν: τάξιν B, Holder || ἐκλείποντας RV
 9 πείραν B || ἀντὶ B      10 ταῦτα δὲ z      11 προσδεκόμενοι C      13
 μούνοι z: μούνοι μούνοισι Koen, Holder, van H.      14 τοιοῦτον B || ὑμέας om. B      15 πτώσσοντας SMarc.

The contrast in ἀνδρες: ἀνθρώπων is intentional. τῇδε, 'in these parts.'

4. ἐκπαγλεομένων: cp. 7. 181. Mardonios was no doubt with Xerxes at Thermopylai, cp. 7. 209, and had heard Demaratos' testimonials to his countrymen! The reputation of the Spartans ὥς ἀπολέμενοι τε καὶ ἀπολέοντες (l.c.)
 was unshaken in Greece down to 425 B.C.; cp. Thuc. 4. 40. 1. (The notion that this speech dates after that disillusionment will not do; the point, the irony of the passage, lies in its barbarous insolence.)

6. τῶν δ' ἄρ' ἦν οὐδὲν ἀληθές. Mardonios, like the Athenians throughout, ignores the lesson of Thermopylai. But that story had not yet reached the classic development which it exhibits in Bk. 7 supra, a form which illustrates the effects of dialectic on the genesis of tradition, partly in answer to the charge of blundering, and partly, no doubt, in answer to other Athenian criticisms.
 ἄρα gives a touch of ironic surprise, and the irony is also continued in the tense.

7. συμμεῖξαι: of hostile congress, cp.
 8. 94, so that ἐς χειρῶν τε νόμον ἀπικέ-σθαι (cp. 8. 89) is somewhat tautologous.
 ἡμέας: us and you?

καὶ δὴ=ἤδη: cp. 8. 94. 11 supra.

8. στάσιν=τάξιν: cp. c. 21 supra.

ἐν Ἀθηναίοισι τε τὴν πρόπειραν ποιουμένους: the phrase betrays the source. For πρ. ποιέσθαι cp. Thuc. 3.

86. 4 πρόπειραν τε ποιούμενοι εἰ σφίσι δυνατὰ εἴη τὰ ἐν τῇ Σικελίᾳ πράγματα ὑποχείρια γενέσθαι. Here the Athenians would remember that they had already furnished a πρόπειρα at Erythrai, c. 21
supra, to say nothing of Marathon c. 46
supra. Athenian tradition fully exploited this motif; cp. Plutarch, Aristeid.
 16.

9. ἀντὶ δούλων τῶν ἡμετέρων:
 pleasant hearing, or reading, for Thebans,
 and other medizers! ἀντὶ, plural; cp.
 c. 31 supra.

11. ἐν ὑμῖν, 'in your case.'

12. κατὰ κλέος, ob vestram gloriam, Baehr; cp. c. 38 supra.

προκαλέσθαι, 'to challenge'
 (Homeric, but also legal Attic).

13. ἄρτιοι: cp. c. 27 supra.

14. εὔρομεν: cp. c. 28 supra. The tense is observable; we might render it in the perfect, 'we have found'; so too ἤρξατε just below.

15. πτώσσοντας: like timid birds;
 an Homeric word and metaphor passim,
 e.g. Il. 7. 129. Oddly enough Tyrtaios (a Spartan!) uses it without any suggestion of fear: 11. 36 (Bergk il. 4 17)
 ὑμεῖς δ' ὦ γυμνήτες, ὅπ' ἀσπίδος ἄλλοθεν ἄλλος πτώσσοντας μεγάλοις βάλλετε χει-μαδίοις.

νῦν ὦν: here too the speaker
 comes to the point; cp. c. 45 supra.

ἐπειδὴ . . . ἀλλὰ: cp. c. 42 supra
 ἐπεὶ . . . ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐρέω.

τοῦ λόγον, ἀλλ' ἡμεῖς ἄρχομεν. τί δὴ οὐ πρὸ μὲν τῶν Ἑλλήνων ὑμεῖς, ἐπεῖτε δεδοξώσθε εἶναι ἄριστοι, πρὸ δὲ τῶν βαρβάρων ἡμεῖς, ἴσοι πρὸς ἴσους ἀριθμὸν ἐμαχεσάμεθα; καὶ ἦν μὲν δοκέη καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους μάχεσθαι, οἳ δ' ὦν μετέπειτα μαχέσθων ὕστεροι· εἰ δὲ καὶ μὴ δοκέοι ἀλλ' ἡμέας μούνοιν 20 ἀποχρᾶν, ἡμεῖς δὲ διαμαχεσώμεθα· ὁκότεροι δ' ἂν ἡμέων νικήσωσι, τούτους τῷ ἅπαντι στρατοπέδῳ νικᾶν." ὃ μὲν 49 ταῦτα εἶπας τε καὶ ἐπισχὼν χρόνον, ὥς οἱ οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν ὑπεκρίνατο, ἀπαλλάσσετο ὀπίσω, ἀπελθὼν δὲ ἐσήμαινε Μαρδονίῳ τὰ καταλαβόντα, ὃ δὲ περιχαρὴς γενόμενος καὶ ἐπαερθεὶς ψυχρῇ νίκῃ ἐπήκε τὴν ἵππον ἐπὶ τοὺς Ἕλληνας. 5

16 ἄρχομεν B || τί δὴ οὐ ὦν R: τί δὴ ὦν V: τὸ δὴ ὦν S 17
 ἐπεὶ vel ἐπεὶ περ malit van H. 18 μαχεσώμεθα S, Wesseling, Gaisford 19 δοκῇ αC: δοκεῖς Marc. 20 ὕστερον B 21 διαμαχεσώμεθα B:
 49. 2 οἳ om. C 3 ὑπεκρίνετο B, Holder, van H. || ἐσήμηνε B 5
 ἐπαρθεὶς libri

16. τί δὴ οὐ . . ἐμαχεσάμεθα; this 'Attic' form of challenge, 'mostly with the aorist,' is only found in this one place in Hdt. (Stein). Cp. Madvig, § 111, R. c; 141, R. 3.

17. δεδοξώσθε: cp. 7. 135, 8. 124; the perfect is both more magniloquent and also slightly suggestive of a temps passé. It is time they did something κατὰ κλέος δῆ.

πρὸ δὲ τῶν βαρβάρων ἡμεῖς. Hdt. gives himself, his source, his herald, and Mardonios away in this phrase; it is a sheer impossibility. When Plautus uses barbarus for Roman it is by the mouth of a dramatis persona who would use the word naturally, as even in his prologues: 'Demophilus scripsit, Marcus vortit barbare!' Trinum. 19, Asin. 10. If this grated on a Roman ear, it was after all a comedy. Here the noble Persian commander by the mouth of his herald taunting the premier Greeks writes himself down—just at a Greek's valuation! That the messenger in the Persai of Aischylos does the like (187, 225, 337) emphasizes the unhistorical character of this speech put by Hdt. into the mouth of Mardonios.

18. ἴσοι πρὸς ἴσους. Xerxes had among his guards men prepared to engage three Greeks at a time, 7. 103; in his own playful vein he had suggested to Demaratos that as a Spartan king he should be prepared to tackle a score of Persians. Mardonios proposes the strictest λόγον μουνομαχίῃ. Such proposals in the eyes of the Spartans of the fifth century might be magnificent but were not war; cp. Thuc. 5. 41. 3.

19. ἦν μὲν δοκέη . . εἰ δὲ καὶ μὴ δοκέοι: the first gives the more probable, the second the less probable alternative.

οἳ δ' ὦν seems to combine (1) δὲ with resumed subject, (2) δὲ in apodosis, (3) δ' ὦν as a significant admission. ἡμεῖς δὲ combines (1) and (2).

21. ἀποχρᾶν: cp. c. 94 infra. νικᾶν, 'be victors'; cp. cc. 69, 100 infra.

49. 2. ἐπισχὼν χρόνον, 'after pausing a while'; cp. 5. 16, 1. 175, and c. 93 infra.

οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν ὑπεκρίνατο. The Athenian or phil-Attic concocters of the story did not venture to devise a reply for the Spartans, who could only have referred Mardonios to Thermopylai for proof of their mettle; that was their πρόπειρα. This haughty silence (for the story now begins in the hands of Hdt. to round somewhat to the Spartan side) recalls the indifference of the Spartans at Thermopylai to the curious Persian scout, 7. 208.

4. τὰ καταλαβόντα: sc. ἐαυτὸν: cp. cc. 93, 104 infra.

8 δὲ περιχαρὴς κτλ.: "an Hellenic view of Mardonios' sentiments, with no foundation of truth," Blakesley. περιχ. 3. 35.

5. ἐπαερθεὶς ψυχρῇ νίκῃ: for the participle cp. 5. 81, 6. 132, 7. 38. ψ. ν., inani victoria, cp. 6. 108.

ἐπήκε τὴν ἵππον ἐπὶ τοὺς Ἕλληνας.

ὥς δὲ ἐπήλασαν οἱ ἱππότες, ἐσίνοντο πᾶσαν τὴν στρατιὴν τὴν Ἑλληνικὴν ἐσακοντίζοντες τε καὶ τοξεύοντες ὥστε ἱπποτοξόται τε ἔοντες καὶ προσφέρεισθαι ἄποροι τὴν τε κρήνην τὴν Γαργαφίην, ἀπ' ἧς ὑδρεύετο πᾶν τὸ στράτευμα τὸ
 10 Ἑλληνικόν, συνετάραζαν <τε> καὶ συνέχωσαν. ἦσαν μὲν

6 ἐσίνοντο B 7 ἐστοξεύοντες B, Holder, van H. || ὥσγε Marc. : ὥστε καὶ B || ἱπποτόξαι V 8 τε om. BC || εὔποροι z 9 γαρ-
 σαφίην S 10 <τε> (van H.), Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἔσαν z

If little or nothing has been heard of the Persian cavalry for twelve days, it must be because the Greeks were in a position where the cavalry could not get at them, or else because the services of the cavalry have been suppressed. The cavalry, however, had at least cut the Greek lines of communication by Dryoskephalai, c. 39 supra. If they had not also already destroyed Gargaphia, and rendered the Greek position at Gargaphia untenable, it must be because that position had not been occupied by the Greeks until this very day, to wit, the twelfth. On this day the Greeks were reduced to the necessity of advancing across the Asopos, or else retiring and giving up the position.

6. ἐσίνοντο πᾶσαν τὴν στρατιήν: the Persian cavalry, and perhaps the Boiotian, Thessalian, Makedonian, could now ride completely round the Greek position, and especially could harass the Greeks in the rear. The horsemen evidently did not attempt to ascend the hill-slopes and sides, but swept safely through the trough in the hills, in which Gargaphia and its neighbouring wells lay, and lie. A detachment of Lakedaimonians may have been posted near the wells, in the vain attempt to save them: these men must have been beaten back northwards on to the 'Asopos Ridge.' What were the hosts of ψιλοί about on the Greek side? They should, were they in being, have kept the Persian cavalry off. It is this situation which makes it difficult to believe in the 69,500 Greek ψιλοί of c. 30 supra, or even a tithe of that number.

7. ὥστε ἱπποτοξόται τε ἔοντες καὶ προσφέρεισθαι ἄποροι: ὥστε = ἄτε, cp. c. 37 supra. With προσφ. ἀπ. cp. ἀποροι προσμίσγειν 4. 46. The meaning is evidently that it was difficult to come to close quarters with them. Blakesley renders "impossible to bring to close fight"—as though προσφέρεισθαι were passive, or, if not, as if αὐτοὺς were to be understood. The verb is better taken as middle, or deponent, ἐς αὐτοὺς or αὐτοῖς being understood, the construction being the personal instead of the neuter: ἀπορον ἦν προσφέρεισθαι ἐς αὐτοὺς (αὐτοῖς), 'it was impossible to come to close quarters with them.'

The difficulty affects hoplites, not ψιλοί, τοξόται, ἀκοντισταί, σφενδοῦνται, κτλ., who should have shot down the horses and men, eminus, at least if they had been decently trained; but they were probably πτώσσοντες among the hoplites! On the superiority of the Persian still at the end of the fifth century cp. Xenoph. Anab. 3. 3. 7.

ἱπποτοξόται: a form of service afterwards familiar in Athens (cp. Thuc. 2. 13. 8), though a corps of 200 could not hope to effect very much. The Persian cavalry, Hdt. says (7. 84), had the same equipment as the infantry (described in 7. 61) including bows and arrows, and short spears, i.e. throwing spears, javelins. Rawlinson argues from Arrian 1. 15 (the Granikos) and 3. 15 (Arbela) that in Alexander's day the favourite weapon of the Persian cavalry was the javelin (jereed). Cp. c. 17 supra.

8. τὴν τε κρήνην τὴν Γαργαφίην: cp. c. 25 supra for its identity and position. The statement here that the whole Greek force under arms (στράτευμα, not στρατόπεδον) depended on this one source for water-supply might have warned Hdt. that the position could hardly have been occupied for twelve days! What? 110,000 men, for twelve days, watered from one spring? It would needs have been a copious one. Now at any rate in the course of a few hours the Persian cavalry renders it quite useless—as they could have done on any one of the preceding eleven days!

10. συνετάραξαν καὶ συνέχωσαν: the first verb describes the condition of the water-supply after the Persian cavalry

ὦν κατὰ τὴν κρήνην Λακεδαιμόνιοι τεταγμένοι μῦνοι, τοῖσι δὲ ἄλλοισι Ἑλλήσι ἡ μὲν κρήνη πρόσω ἐγίνετο, ὡς ἕκαστοι ἔτυχον τεταγμένοι, ὁ δὲ Ἀσωπὸς ἀγχοῦ ἐρυκόμενοι δὲ τοῦ

11 μῦνοι τεταγμένοι ≈ || τοῖσι . . . τεταγμένοι om. B
Marc. || ἐγένετο ≈ 13 ἀπὸ τοῦ CPz

12 ἄλλησι

has been riding over it and through it; the second the absolute dilapidation of the troughs, basin, stone-work, and so forth (cp. c. 13 supra) which they must have dismounted to effect. Pausan. 9. 4. 2 has little independent value, but may be just worth quoting: τὴν δὲ κρήνην τὴν Γαργαφίαν Μαρδόνιος καὶ ἡ Ἰππος συνέχευεν ἡ Περσῶν, ὅτι τὸ Ἑλλήνων στράτευμα τὸ ἀντικαθήμενόν σφισιν ἀπ' αὐτῆς ἔπινεν ὕστερον μὲντοι τὸ ὕδωρ ἀνεσώσαντο οἱ Πλαταιεῖς.

ἦσαν μὲν ὦν . . . Λακεδαιμόνιοι: ὦν marks the gravity of the situation. That Lakedaemonians and Lakedaemonians alone (μῦνοι) were posted opposite, or 'over against' the fountain, suggests several inferences. (1) The main body of the Lakedaemonians form the Greek right wing, stationed apparently on the high ground immediately north of the spring, or well (Grundy's 'Gargaphia'); but (2) doubtless a detachment would have been on guard in the immediate vicinity of the water. If so, that detachment cannot have maintained its ground.

If Apotripi be Gargaphia, the Greek left would have to be moved a little, but only a little, westward. In reality the centre probably watered from Apotripi, which no doubt was equally destroyed by the Persian cavalry. The centre was posted immediately in and about the Androkrateion (the Church of St. John).

The left wing may have been expected to get its water from the stream A<sup>1</sup> running down from Apotripi into the Asopos proper, or failing that from Apotripi.

11. τοῖσι δὲ ἄλλοισι Ἑλλήσι: i.e. the right centre (οἱ ἀμφὶ Κορινθίους c. 69), the left centre (οἱ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας τε καὶ Φλασιῶν ib.) and the left wing (Athenians and Plataians). The Tegeatai are probably lumped with the Lakedaemonians above. |

12. ἡ μὲν κρήνη πρόσω ἐγίνετο: πρόσω is the antithesis of ἐγγύς, cp. Plato,

Protag. 356. There is no need to expand ἡ κρήνη into ἡ εἰς τὴν κρήνην ὁδὸς (Sitzler), but the next words, ὡς ἕκαστοι ἔτυχον τεταγμένοι, introduce an element of relativity or comparison into πρόσω, to which the imperfect ἐγίνετο is also adapted: the well was not equi-distant from all; it was not near to any, but it was further from some (the Athenians) than from others (the centre), according to their places in the line of battle.

13. ὁ δὲ Ἀσωπὸς ἀγχοῦ: ἀγχοῦ = ἐγγύς. Used with a dat. 3. 85 ἀγχοῦ τῇ Ἰππῳ. The assertion that the Asopos was near any of the Greeks, or any of the Greeks near the Asopos, is puzzling. The whole position, indeed, has been described above, c. 30, as ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ, but that is relatively to the previous position ἐπὶ τῇ ὑπώρεῃ, and not from the point of view of the actual water-supply. The Greek position along the tops of the Asopos Ridge was not, from the army-service point of view, near the Asopos, if by Asopos is meant the main stream (as in c. 30, and passim). Hdt. has here probably made a mistake, owing to his ignorance of the ground: that the parts of the army which were not near Gargaphia were near the Asopos may be a blind inference from the general (and not, broadly speaking, incorrect) description of their position as ἐπὶ τῷ Ἀσωπῷ. It is possible, however, that Dr. G. B. Grundy's suggestion (for a phrase in c. 31 supra, q.v.) is here applicable, and that 'Asopos' is here used of stream A<sup>1</sup>, though not with conscious knowledge or discrimination on the historian's part. The Greek left, in particular the Athenians, were certainly in the vicinity of this streamlet, but were no doubt unable to use it ὑπὸ τῶν ἰππέων καὶ τοξευμάτων. They may erroneously have spoken of it as the Asopos, or the Plataian Asopos; but Hdt., had he known the real state of the case, would surely have distinguished expressly between the main stream and this comparatively insignificant affluent. ἐρυκόμενοι: passive; cp. 5. 15.

Ἀσωποῦ οὕτω δὴ ἐπὶ τὴν κρήνην ἐφοίτων· ἀπὸ τοῦ ποταμοῦ
 15 γὰρ σφί οὐκ ἐξῆν ὕδωρ φορέεσθαι ὑπὸ τε τῶν ἱππέων καὶ
 50 τοξευμάτων. τούτου δὲ τοιοῦτον γινομένου οἱ τῶν Ἑλλήνων στρατηγοί, ἅτε τοῦ τε ὕδατος στερηθείσης τῆς στρατιῆς καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς ἵππου ταρασσομένης, συνελέχθησαν περὶ αὐτῶν τε τούτων καὶ ἄλλων, ἐλθόντες παρὰ Πανσανίην ἐπὶ τὸ δεξιὸν
 5 κέρας. ἄλλα γὰρ τούτων τοιούτων ἔοντων μᾶλλον σφέας ἐλύπεε· οὔτε γὰρ σιτία εἶχον ἔτι, οἳ τε σφέων ὀπείωνες

14 ἐφοίτεον C: ἐφοίτεον Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. 15 ὕδωρ om. B
 50. 1 γινομένου Marc. 3 αὐτέων τε τουτέων z 4 Πανσανίην
 ἐπὶ om. z 5 ἄλλα A<sup>2</sup>SMarc.: ἀλλὰ || τουτέων z || μᾶλλον σφέας AB,
 Stein<sup>2</sup>: μᾶλλον σφέας 6 ἐπελύπεε CP || τέ σφέων vulgo || ὀπείωνες R:
 ὀπαῶνες S: ὀπάωνες Schaefer

14. οὕτω δὴ: here not temporal but modal, or even causal.

15. ὑπό: cp. c. 45. 17 supra.

50. 1. τούτου δὲ τοιοῦτον γινομένου, 'such coming to be the state of the case,' 'things getting to this pass' (cp. 5. 109)—a somewhat vague phrase, repeated below in more positive or substantial form, τούτων τοιούτων ἔοντων, but explained as referring to the two serious inconveniences, (1) the ruin of the water-supply, (2) the harassing fire from the cavalry. Nor was this all! (3) The army was without rations, and (4) completely cut off from its base: (3) and (4) were vexing them all the more (μᾶλλον σφέας ἐλύπεε) owing to the sudden development of (1) and (2)! The admissions made in this chapter are notable; but the logical and chronological sequences are not acceptable.

οἱ τῶν Ἑλλήνων στρατηγοί: other than Pausanias (and Euryanax), who no doubt summoned them to the Council of War, which is held on the right wing. The position of the Greek force is highly precarious. The question before the Council must have been whether to advance and cross the Asopos, or to retreat. The third alternative, remaining where they are, is impossible.

6. οὔτε γὰρ σιτία εἶχον ἔτι. This had been probably one of the chief reasons for their advance to the position on the Asopos Ridge, in which they were offering battle to the Persian, if only he would come across the Asopos with his infantry. Mardonios had perhaps turned them out of their position at Hysiai by seizing and occupying Dryoskephalai, and forced them to come down to the Asopos and offer battle; he is still, no doubt, even hoping to draw or drive them across the Asopos. Hdt., who keeps the Greeks twelve days on the Asopos Ridge, for eleven of which they are absolutely unmolested and allowed to water freely from Gargaphia, now at last admits that battle or retreat is a necessity, owing to the complete breakdown of the commissariat; that breakdown being due to the complete command attained by the Persian cavalry of the main route to the rear of the Greek forces. The difficult Plataia-Megara pass remains indeed open; and it is just upon that they resolve to fall back, for even that pass was no use to them in their present position.

οἳ τε σφέων ὀπείωνες ἀποπεμφθέντες ἐς Πελοπόννησον: the ὀπείωνες = the φίλοι τῶν εἰλωτέων, περὶ ἀνδρα ἑκαστῶν ἐπτὰ τεταγμένοι (c. 28 supra) and the φίλοι, ὡς εἰς περὶ ἑκαστῶν εἰὼν ἀνδρα (c. 30 supra), whatever their total numbers. The Peloponnesian portion of them has been sent away, to bring up supplies (ὡς ἐπισιτιεύμενοι, cp. 7. 176), to manage the ἐπισιτισίς of their masters, and cannot get back, the Greek army being completely isolated in its present position by the Persian cavalry.

This passage goes to show that the only ὀπείωνες, or φίλοι, in camp, or with the army, at this crisis, would be those in attendance on the Athenians, Megarians, Plataians. The presumption is, however, that the Athenian and Megarian ὀπείωνες were also absent (though the Athenian τοξόται were of course on the spot, cp. c. 60 infra). The army was practically a purely hoplite force at this moment.

ἀποπεμφθέντες ἐς Πελοπόννησον ὡς ἐπισιτιεύμενοι ἀπεκεκληῖατο ὑπὸ τῆς ἵππου, οὐ δυνάμενοι ἀπικέσθαι ἐς τὸ στρατοπεδον. βουλευομένοισι δὲ τοῖσι στρατηγοῖσι ἔδοξε, ἣν ὑπερβάλωνται 51 ἐκείνην τὴν ἡμέρην οἱ Πέρσαι συμβολὴν ποιεύμενοι, ἐς τὴν

7 ἀπεκεκληῖατο Dindorf, Stein, Holder: ἀποκεκληῖατο van H.: ἀποκεκῆατο B: ἀπεκεκῆατο 8 ὑπὸ: ἀπὸ C || ἀπικέσθαι R 51. 2 κείνην z || μὴ ποιεύμενοι B, Holder, van H.

But, perhaps, we should allow still the regulation attendant on each hoplite.

7. ἀπεκεκληῖατο, 'were utterly and had for some time previously been shut off,' from returning. Ionice pro αποκεκλεισμένοι ἦσαν, Schweighaeuser (but cp. Veitch, Gk. Verbs s.v. κλείω). Cp. ἀποκλησθέντες τῆς ὀπίσω ὁδοῦ 3. 55, in a somewhat different connexion.

8. ὑπὸ: cp. c. 37 supra. The Persian cavalry completely dominates the situation. On the night of the 8th (c. 39 supra) they have seized Dryoskephalai, the junction of the Eleutherai-Erythrai and Eleutherai-Hysiai-Plataia roads, in the rear of the Greek position, at Hysiai. The Persians have, of course, maintained their hold on that position. In consequence the Greeks are cut off from their base (except by the difficult Plataia-Megara route), and on the 11th (no doubt) come to the determination to go down to a position ἐπὶ τῇ Ἀσωπῷ, and offer battle to the Persian. This manœuvre is carried out upon the 12th (perhaps not without some loss) and Mardonios moves into position opposite them, with the Asopos still between, c. 47 supra.

Still, neither side will cross the river; but all that day, the 12th, the Greeks are harassed by the cavalry, cut off from the water-supply on all sides, cut off from their bases, not merely via Erythrai and Hysiai, but even via Plataia; the rations they have with them are giving out—battle or retreat becomes an absolute necessity.

51. 1. βουλευομένοισι δὲ τοῖσι στρατηγοῖσι ἔδοξε: a council of war never fights; but this time the council was right. The two alternatives for the Persians are here presented by tradition—(a) that the Persians should come across the river and attack them (διαβῆναι τὸν Ἀσωπὸν καὶ μάχης ἄρξαι); (b) that the Persians should not do so, but postpone for that day, or indefinitely, delivering the attack (ἣν ὑπερβάλωνται . . οἱ Πέρσαι συμβολὴν ποιεύμενοι). Here συμβολὴν ποιέσθαι has nothing to say to the cavalry skirmishing which was going on, but of course means to bring on a general engagement, to deliver the attack, μάχης ἄρξαι. The participial construction is noticeable. Only one course is treated as open to the Greeks, viz. to retreat. But there was another, viz. to advance, to cross the Asopos, to assume the offensive. That was what Alexander did at the Granikos; but then, Alexander's army was not composed simply of hoplites. To have crossed the Asopos must have meant annihilation to the army of Pausanias. He had no cavalry. He had practically no ψιλοί, or none worth counting. Crossing the stream would have broken the Greek ranks. Once across the Persian cavalry could have ridden round and round them on the comparatively level and open plain. On a smaller scale the situation would have anticipated Arbela, with no cavalry, no light infantry, no developed tactics, no Alexander, on the Greek side; the issue would have been the annihilation of the Greek army, the hot victory of Mardonios. The Asopos stream was a Rubicon indeed; the Greek determination to remain south of it was their salvation; Mardonios crossed it to his ruin. Had he crossed on the 12th the result would have been the same. The Council of War was only summoned by Pausanias (and Euryanax) when it became fairly obvious that the Persian infantry was not coming across, and that the present position was untenable.

2. ἐς τὴν νῆσον ἵναι: this was to retreat (perhaps to the position previously occupied). A third alternative besides advancing and retreating was logically possible, viz. to stay where they were, and as they were, in hopes the Persian might still deliver an attack. But why should he grant to-morrow what he refuses to-day? Or how are they to remain, without water, without rations? Where is the island to be located? And how? The measurements given

νήσον ἵεναι. ἡ δὲ ἐστὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀσωποῦ καὶ τῆς τῆς Γαρφαφίης, ἐπ' ἣ ἑστρατοπεδεύοντο τότε, δέκα σ 5 ἀπέχουσα, πρὸ τῆς Πλαταιέων πόλιος. νήσος δὲ οὕτω
ἐν ἡπείρῳ· σχιζόμενος [ὁ] ποταμὸς ἄνωθεν ἐκ τοῦ Κιβ

3 δ' ἔστιν R 4 γαρσαφίης S || ἐπ' ἣ B: ἐς τὴν z: ἐπ' ἣν
ἔχουσα B || νήσος . . ἐς τὸν τό del. Krueger || δ' ἂν B 6 ὁ sec
Holder, van H.

by Hdt. are not the most important evidence in determining the site. His measurements are only round numbers, approximative, in decimals. The important factors are:—(i.) The island was πρὸ τῆς Πλαταιέων πόλιος. (ii.) The island was formed not by the Asopos, or its tributaries, but by the Oëroë. These two factors were, indeed, used by Leake and Vischer in fixing the island away to the west, beyond the main road from Plataia to Thebes. (iii.) The strategic and tactical necessities of the case must be met. From this point of view the objections to Leake's location are overpowering. On such an island the Greeks (a) would still have been exposed to the attacks of the Persian cavalry, (b) would not have been in a better position as regards supplies. The island must be sought up on the ὑπωρέη, and it must be backed by the only remaining pass through which the Greeks could draw supplies, viz. the difficult Plataia-Megara route; and there must be a water-supply. The position proposed by Dr. Grundy meets these requirements: (i.) it is in front of Plataia (and perhaps also Hysiai?); (ii.) it is formed by the Oëroë; (iii.) it is inaccessible to cavalry, backed by the route to Megara, and well supplied with water (Oëroë, Vergutiani spring); and also (iv.) accords rather better with the measurements given by Hdt., such as they are, than the position assigned by Leake and Vischer. Cp. G. B. Grundy, G. P. W. pp. 480 ff.

3. ἡ δὲ ἐστὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀσωποῦ κτλ.: how vague are the distances as expressed by Hdt. in stades is shown by his pairing the Asopos and Gargaphia together as 'ten stades' from the 'island.' Unless Gargaphia and the Asopos are identical they can hardly have been so exactly the same distance from a third point. Again, if by 'the Asopos' were here meant the main stream, we should either have to fall back on Leake's location of the island, or to confess that Hdt.'s measure is valueless. If the Asopos it approximates sufficiently to allow Hdt.'s measure to pass, refer to Dr. Grundy's 'island.'

κρήνη is a fountain, with pipes, outlet, and so forth, as from φρέαρ, a well, 1. 68 (cp. 4. πηγῇ, a spring, source, 1. 189,

4. ἐπ' ἣ ἑστρατοπεδεύοντο apparent exclusion of the Asopos from the purview of the Hellenic council; but (a) the singular relative may have been determined by the proximity of the feminine antecedent; (b) the council was based on the right wing of the Greek army, and the right wing was in the proximity to the fountain; Asopos just above has been omitted more or less near the position of the Greek contingents, and so perhaps the grammatical construction strained, so as to carry back to the Asopos too, κατὰ σύνεσιν.

5. πρὸ τῆς Πλαταιέων πόλιος 'island' between O<sup>2</sup> and O<sup>3</sup> is entirely 'in front of the city of Plataians' to any one approaching Plataia by the road from Athens; might also, however, be so described, as the point of view of the position by the Greek forces 'on Gargaphia' νήσος δὲ οὕτω ἂν εἴη ἐν τῇ ἡπείρῳ the adverb οὕτω here = ὥδε, re what follows; cp. 8. 98. 4 (140. 34).

6. σχιζόμενος, being rent (i.e. 'dividing itself'; cp. 7. 31. 2 also 2. 17. Hdt. evidently the Oëroë as first starting in a channel, or stream, then parting and re-uniting, so as literally an island; cp. 2. 17 μέγαρα Κερκασῶρου πόλιος ῥέει εἰς ἐὼν τὸ δὲ ἀπὸ ταύτης τῆς πόλιος τριφασίας ὁδοῦς. Such (i.e.

ῥέει κάτω ἐς τὸ πεδῖον, διέχων ἀπ' ἀλλήλων τὰ ῥέεθρα ὅσον περ τρία στάδια, καὶ ἔπειτα συμμίσγει ἐς τὸ αὐτό. οὐνομα δέ οἱ Ὀερόη· θυγατέρα δὲ ταύτην λέγουσι εἶναι Ἀσωποῦ οἱ ἐπιχώριοι. ἐς τοῦτον δὴ τὸν χώρον ἐβουλεύσαντο μεταναστῆναι, ἵνα καὶ ὕδατι ἔχῃσι χρᾶσθαι ἀφθόνως καὶ οἱ ἱππέες

7 ὅσον περὶ Marc. : ὅσον τε Krueger : ὅσον ἐπὶ? Stein<sup>2</sup> 8 τοῦτο B
9 οἱ pr. loc. : ὁ RV 10 μεταστῆναι SV

ὁδοὺς σχίζεται) is not the case with the Oëroë, and probably never was. Hdt. is not writing from autopsy, or even from a cartographical survey! But such an eminent and conspicuous hill or mound between two streams, as Ridge 4 now is, might easily be named an 'island' though not quite strictly speaking surrounded by water. Even the 'Pelopo-nesos' is only a peninsula; cp. 'Chersonese,' etc.

7. ἐς τὸ πεδῖον: if Hdt. meant by these words to imply that 'the island' was down on 'the plain,' he would be giving further evidence of his ignorance of the ground. But need the phrase be so closely pressed? The river in any case is flowing down to the flat land.

διέχων, 'holding apart . . .'; cp. προέχων c. 4 supra. τὰ ῥέεθρα may here mean 'channels,' cp. 7. 130, and L. & S. sub v. ρεῖθρον, but ῥέει above and συμμίσγει just below rather suggest 'streams'; and dry channels would not have been enough for the Greeks on this occasion.

ὅσον περ τρία στάδια: the measurement given is very exact (ὅσον περ, cp. ὅκως περ c. 120 infra), but only in one direction! How, then, is the distance of 3 stades reckoned, in latitude or in longitude? Is the island 3 stades long, or 3 stades broad? Unless the island were a rectangle, a square, it would seem that it must be its length that is given, and rectangular it could not be. On the other hand, a plot of land only 3 stades long (and probably not 3 stades wide) would have been far too small to receive the army. Not indeed that the whole forces need have been actually on 'the island' in the strictest sense. Dr. Grundy's island is considerably less than 3 stades wide, and indefinitely more than 3 stades long, but the actual mound might be about 3 stades long, which is perhaps what Hdt. would have said, had he measured, or even seen, the ground before writing.

9. Ὀερόη. Oëroë is a word of four syllables, and more than that! 'The men of those parts' in Hdt.'s time regarded Oëroë as 'a daughter of Asopos.' Hdt. need not have gone to Plataia to learn that. He might have met an ἐπιχώριος elsewhere. Thersander of Orchomenos (c. 16 supra) might have been his informant; or he might have read the statement in a geographical or mythological work; but it was probably the last thing a Plataian would have admitted. What was the sense of calling Oëroë a daughter of Asopos? Much the same as of saying that Thebe and Aigina were daughters of Asopos (cp. 5. 80). There is policy in it; the Oëroë region is claimed as part of the Περαιώτις (cp. c. 15 supra). If this myth were intended for science, the hydrography is against it. Oëroë, the identity of which is certain, belongs to a different land-system to that of the Asopos, and sheds its waters to the west, down into the bay of Kreusis, not eastward to the Euboean sea.

The names of rivers are seldom feminine in Greek. Wesseling remarked that Oëroë is not included in the twelve daughters of Asopos by Diodoros 4. 72; cp. Apollod. 3. 11. 5. Only two of the names, Περρήνη, Ἀσωπίς, could apply to springs, or streams. The latter perhaps might be the Oëroë (but that the Asopos with twelve daughters is the Phleiasian or Sekyonian, cp. c. 15. 13 supra).

10. ἐβουλεύσαντο μεταναστῆναι, 'they resolved after deliberation to migrate'; cp. μετανίστημι in Thuc. 1. 12. 1, 3. 114. 3; also the substantive μετανάστασις 1. 2. 1, 2. 16. 1.

Three motives for this move are given: (1) need of water-supply; (2) avoidance of the cavalry; (3) the relief of the commissariat-train, which was cooped up on Kithairon. All three reasons are so much homage to the dominance of the Persian cavalry, as is also further the determination to carry out the move under cover of night.

11. ἵνα . . . ἔχῃσι . . . καὶ . . . μὴ

σφέας μὴ σινοίατο ὥσπερ καθὺ ἐόντων· μετακινέεσθαι δὲ ἐδόκεε τότε ἐπεὰν τῆς νυκτὸς ἢ δευτέρῃ φυλακῇ, ὡς ἂν μὴ

12 δὲ Stein<sup>3</sup>: τε

σινοίατο: a more immediate and a more remote, a more certain and a less certain, purpose or result, are indicated by the modal variation, cp. ἦν μὲν δοκέη . . . εἰ δὲ καὶ μὴ δοκέοι c. 48 supra.

12. ὥσπερ καθὺ ἐόντων, "as they did when they were directly exposed to them" (Blakesley); "as now, when they were right opposite" (Macaulay); "as when it was drawn up right in their front" (Rawlinson). καθὺ, or κατ' ἰσθμῶ, can hardly mean anything but 'right opposite.' To what subject is ἐόντων to be referred: ἱππέων out of ἱππείας, or σφέων out of σφέας? The material result, or argument, will be the same in either case—which perhaps accounts for the formal ambiguity. The argument is obscure. A. If Hdt. means that the cavalry was making frontal attacks upon the Greeks in their position (II.) 'on the Asopos,' the lie of the land is prima facie against him. It is not likely that the cavalry crossed the Asopos in front of the Greek position, and charged up the hill, halting and discharging their missiles, and then retired to a safe distance; for (a) this would require that bridges should have been laid across the river in many places, a proceeding of which there is no record; (b) this frontal attack would have no connexion with the destruction of Gargaphia and the water-supply in rear of the Greek position. B. If Hdt. means that frontal attacks by the cavalry were more to be dreaded than attacks on flank, or on rear (κατὰ νότου), he would be saying what is manifestly absurd, and in contradiction with his own context. The frontal attacks at Erythrai failed; the flank and rear attacks by the Persian cavalry upon the Greek positions since the advance from Erythrai have been successful. C. Is it possible that ὥσπερ καθὺ ἐόντων here practically means that the Greeks were completely surrounded, and open to direct attack on all sides, though Hdt. himself may have repeated the phrase of his authority, or source, imperfectly and without fully understanding it? The actual fact was as suggested. In the position 'on the Asopos,' the position associated with the Androkrateion and Gargaphia, the Persian cavalry could attack the Greeks on all sides, more or less. The destruction of Gargaphia proves that the cavalry ranged freely behind the Greek position; the same fact is proved by the admission that the Greek connexions were cut, and that supplies could not reach them. In such a situation the Greeks cannot have maintained a formation on a single front, facing Asopos (north). The Greek army must necessarily have formed either in two lines back to back (φάλαγξ ἀμφίστομος Arrian Tact. 29) or in a hollow square, or parallelogram, round the Androkrateion; otherwise the Persian Hippotoxotai would have shot them down from the rear. (Though the south side of the 'Asopos Ridge' is steeper than the north slope, it is not inaccessible.) Especially the detachment told off to guard Gargaphia must have had such a formation. It is possible that the expression ὥσπερ καθὺ ἐόντων covers these facts. The Negos was practically quite inaccessible for cavalry. D. Last, and least likely: the words might, ungrammatically, have reference to the new position about to be taken—they are in any case more or less incorrect—or may represent words in Hdt.'s source originally intended to mean that in the new position, ἐν καθὺ ἐσομένων (sc. ἀμφοτέρων τῶν στρατ.), only frontal, and therefore less formidable, attacks will be possible. The grammatical obstacle to this interpretation is threefold: (1) the genitive absolute remains objectionable, as on every hypothesis; (2) ὥσπερ has to be made = ὥστε, ἄτε; (3) the present participle has to be taken as loosely equivalent to a future participle. These objections, fatal to this interpretation of the words as they stand, do not convince me that the phrase, as originally used by Hdt.'s authority, may not have had reference to the new position to be occupied, viz. the νῆσος.

13. δευτέρῃ φυλακῇ. The Romans certainly divided the night into four vigiliae; cp. Caesar, B.G. 1. 40, and Lewis & Short, sub v. vigilia. The Greek division is not so clear. Pollux 1. 70 is the main authority and might be taken to limit it to three (περὶ πρώται

ἰδοῖατο οἱ Πέρσαι ἐξορμωμένους καὶ σφεας ἐπόμενοι ταρασσοῖεν
οἱ ἱππῶται. ἀπικομένων δὲ ἐς τὸν χώρον τοῦτον, τὸν δὴ ἡ 15

14 ἐξορμωμένους Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ἐξορμωμένους CMarc., Gaisford φυλακὰς καὶ δευτέρας καὶ τρίτας). Suidas ἐν δὲ ν. φυλακῇ· τὸ τέταρτον μέρος τῆς νυκτός· τετραχῇ γὰρ διήρηται, has been assumed to be referring to the Roman system exclusively; but I think it more probable that the Greek system was practically identical with the Roman:

thus in Pollux l.c. I. νυκτὸς ἀρχή, περὶ πρώτης νύκτα, νυκτὸς ἀρχομένης = prima nocte, prima vigilia. II. περὶ πρώτου ὕπνου = nocte concubia (Tac. Ann. 1. 39), secunda vigilia. III. μεσοῦσης νυκτός, μέσων νυκτῶν = nocte media, tertia vigilia.
IV. περὶ ἀλεκτρυόνων φθόας, ἀλεκτρυόνων φθόντων, ὑπὸ τὸν φθόν δριθα = gallicinium, noctis gallicinium. The words καὶ δευτέρας καὶ τρίτας in Pollux l.c. are out of place, and should not prejudice the question. The 'second watch' is very elaborately paraphrased in c. 44
συγρη, ὑβί ν., and 'the first watch' perhaps in 7. 215, ὑβί ν. The exact length of the watch depended on the length of the night between sunset and sunrise, but was roughly two to three hours. The 'watches' in Ev. Marc. 13.
35 (ἡ ὀψὲ ἡ μεσονυκτίον ἡ ἀλεκτοροφωνίας ἡ πρωὶ) seem to exclude the prima. Is it not some confirmation of this fourfold division of the night, that the five terms in 4. 181 by which the time of day is marked give likewise a fourfold division?
Obviously in the present case 'the first watch' was not dark enough for the intended movement of the Greeks: they meant to start about 10 P.M. apparently.

14. ἐξορμωμένους, 'starting,' in the act of moving out of position; cp. 7. 37, and esp. 7. 215 ὁρμέατο . . ἐκ τοῦ
στρατοπέδου.

ταράσσοιεν: as they had been doing most of the day; cp. c. 50 τῆς
στρατιῆς ὑπὸ τῆς Ἰππου ταρασσομένης etc.
The confusion (ταραχῇ) was only confounded (συνετέραςαν) in the case of the fountain, c. 49 συγρη, or perhaps in the immediate vicinity of the fountain.
There is here fresh admission of the efficiency of the Persian cavalry.

15. ἀπικομένων δὲ ἐς τὸν χώρον τοῦ-τον: genitive absolute and participle keep up the mystery of the preceding crux, ἐόντων συγρη; the asorist here must be conditional, i.e. virtually future: in the dative (with ἐδόκει) it would, of course, record their actual arrival at the island;

in the genitive, it only continues the report of the council's decisions, to the effect that, 'on arrival at the island,
they should still, under cover of night,
despatch a division to Kithairon, etc.
etc.' Whether this report be correct is,
of course, another question.

τὸν δὴ ἡ Ἀσωπίς [Ἰσπερ] περι-σχίζεται. There is no difficulty in a verb, neuter or passive, compounded with περι taking the accusative (cp. περιρρέω, περιρρήγνυμι). The peculiarity here, however, arises from the preposition apparently having a sense in connexion with τὸν χώρον τοῦτον, which is not strictly compatible with the meaning of the verb. Thus περι τὸν ἡ Ἀσωπίς σχίζεται would mean simply that at this point the Asopis divides, or is split, into two streams; cp. Plato, Tim. 21 π. ἔστι τις κατ' Ἀγυπτον, ἥ δ' ὅς, ἐν τῷ Δέλτα, περὶ δὲ κατὰ κορυφὴν σχίζεται τὸ τοῦ Νείλου
ρεῖμα, Σαΐτικὸς ἐπικαλούμενος νομός κτλ.
σχίζεσθαι περὶ τι marks a point, not a region; but here the idea of 'surrounding' seems suggested: the νῆσος is not a point, or a κορυφή, on which the Asopis splits, but an oblong figure, or χώρος, which it surrounds. Had περιρ-ρεῖν been the verb here, no one would have felt a difficulty. Thus 7. 214 περιγηγασμένοι τὸ δρος τοῖσι Πέρσῃσι: 1.
84 περινευχθέντος τοῦ λέοντος τὸ τεῖχος: 4.
180 παρθένον . . περιάγουσι τὴν λίμνην do not clear this case, the difficulty lying not in the περι but in the σχίζεται. If Hdt. had written σχιζομένη or σχισθεῖσα περιρρεῖ, instead of βέουσα περισχίζεται, the phrase would have been unimpeachable. Hdt. is here a little befogged in his phraseology (like the man who 'boiled an icicle' instead of 'oiling a bicycle,' yet not so badly as that!); cp. c. 55 ἡν/ρα.
Polybios, 3. 42. 7, shows a much clearer
head: οἱ ποιεσάμενοι τὴν πορείαν ἀντίοι τῷ ρεύματι . . παραγενόμενοι πρὸς τῶα τόπον, ἐν ᾧ συνέβαινε περὶ τι χωρίον νησίζον περισχίζεσθαι τὸν ποταμόν, ἐνταῦθα κατέμειναν (Hannibal's crossing of the Rhône).

Ἄσωπις [Ἠλερόη] περισχίζεται ῥέονσα ἐκ τοῦ Κιθαιρώνας, ὑπὸ τὴν νύκτα ταύτην ἐδόκεε τοὺς ἡμίσεας ἀποστέλλειν τοῦ στρατοπέδου πρὸς τὸν Κιθαιρῶνα, ὡς ἀναλάβοιεν τοὺς ὀπείωνας τοὺς ἐπὶ τὰ σιτία οἰχομένους· ἦσαν γὰρ ἐν τῷ Κιθαιρῶνι 20 ἀπολελαμμένοι.

16 nomen seclusi || σχίζεται S || ἐκ τοῦ Κιθαιρώνας del. Gomperz, Holder 18 ὀπείωνας R: ὀπαῶνας S 19 ἦσαν z

16. ὑπὸ τὴν νύκτα ταύτην: i.e. apparently 'before daybreak'; yet ὑπὸ νύκτα is generally taken to mean 'about nightfall,' towards night, as night comes on. The temporal indication must qualify not ἐδόκεε (for the date of which see above) but ἀποστέλλειν.

17. ἐδόκεε repeats the ἐδόκεε just above; but the change to the imperfects, after ἐβουλεύσαντο and ἐδοξε, in the report of the proceedings of one and the same council, looks as though (1) the precise time of departure, (2) the operations projected for the ἀπόστολοι στρατός (so to speak, cp. τοὺς ἡμίσεας ἀποστέλλειν infra), were less clearly, less definitely resolved, expressed, understood, than the previous question of retreat, and retreat to the 'island' as a new halting-place. Anyway, these imperfects introduce resolutions which were very imperfectly realized.

τοὺς ἡμίσεας ἀποστέλλειν τοῦ στρατοπέδου πρὸς τὸν Κιθαιρῶνα: a most curious statement: it was resolved, or was in a way to be resolved, that after the whole army had reached the island, the half of the army should be further despatched to Kithairon, in order to convoy, relieve, the attendants who had gone away to fetch supplies (cp. c. 50 supra). Which half of the army was to be despatched on this service? To what part of Kithairon was it to go? Was it really proposed to bisect the army? One half would have comprised (presumably) either (a) the right wing and right centre, 22,800 men; or (b) the left wing and left centre, 15,900 men; or (c) the two wings together, 20,100 men; or (d) the right and left centre, 18,600 men. Cp. the tactical disposition and figures as given and annotated c. 28 supra. There is no clear indication which of these four alternatives is intended. But as in the sequel the whole centre moves back far beyond the two wings, while the two wings attempt to form up in one, though unsuccessfully, it is best to understand by τοὺς ἡμίσεας in this passage the right and left centre (cp. cc. 52, 69 infra) (or else, one half only of the centre!). The whole plan, then, is apparently that the two divisions of the centre should retire πρὸς τὸν Κιθαιρῶνα, while the right and left wings, i.e. the Lakedaimonians with the Tegeatai and the Athenians with the Plataians, should concentrate back on to the island. To what point on Kithairon was the centre to retire? Were they to go back on to the Plataio-Megarian pass, and to protect and convoy the ὀπείωνες and the σιτία down the pass, and to the island? The Persian cavalry was in command and possession of Dryoskephalai and the two routes, or passes, therefrom on to the plain, or the ὑπαρτή. Was the centre to attempt the recovery, or the reopening of the loop from 'Three Heads' to Plataia? The centre was to be detached upon a service apparently which was the less hazardous; they were to retire first, they were to retire furthest, they were to retire in a compact body, leaving the two wings in the dark to find or keep touch of each other, and to concentrate back on to the island, from their isolated positions at the two extremities of the existing line. It showed some confidence in the virtues of the centre to charge them with that service, as they might have gone clean off (like Artabazos on the other side!) from the battle-field: in the sequel they did good service. One thing is manifest: Hdt. has not fully conceived the precise meaning of the traditions which he reports; but, as often, the report is sufficiently full and faithful to yield the facts to a critical reconstruction.

18. ἀναλάβοιεν: a remarkable use of this flexible word; cp. 7. 231, 8. 109.

19. ἦσαν γὰρ ἐν τῷ Κιθαιρῶνι ἀπολελαμμένοι, 'they were on Kithairon unable to make further progress.' ἀπολαμβάνειν: cp. c. 38 supra, etc. Hdt. uses perf. pass. ἀπολέλαμαι (not ἀπέ-

Ταῦτα βουλευσάμενοι κείνην μὲν τὴν ἡμέρην πᾶσαν προσ- 52
κειμένης τῆς ἵππου εἶχον πόνον ἄτρυτον· ὥς δὲ ἡ τε ἡμέρη ἔληγε καὶ οἱ ἱππῆες ἐπέπαινον, νυκτὸς δὲ γινομένης καὶ εἰσόδου τῆς ὥρης ἐς τὴν συνέκειτό σφι ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι, ἐνθαῦτα ἀερθέντες οἱ πολλοὶ ἀπαλλάσσοντο, ἐς μὲν τὸν χῶρον ἐς τὸν 5 συνέκειτο οὐκ ἐν νόφ' ἔχοντες, οἱ δὲ ὥς ἐκινήθησαν ἔφευγον

52. 1 ἐκείνην B || προκειμένης (C)RS 2 ἔχον 3 νυκτὸς τε
vel νυκτὸς τε δὴ? Stein<sup>1</sup> 4 θεούσης aC || τὴν δὲ B, Holder, van H.
5 ἀπαλλάσσοντο om. Marc. || ἐς ὃν aC 6 ὥς: ἐς C λημμαί). ἦσαν is here more than a mere auxiliary, and ἦσαν ἀπολελαμμένοι more than merely ἀπελελάμφατο (!). Hdt. does not specify upon what part of Kithairon the supply train was arrested, or cut off, or prevented from advancing —by the Persian cavalry, or the fear thereof. He nowhere shows any clear knowledge of a pass direct from Plataia to Megara.

52. 1. ταῦτα βουλευσάμενοι . . πᾶσαν: the natural inferences from this sequence were that the Council took place early, and that the cavalry assaults continued for the whole day after. But that inference would be inconsistent with cc. 49, 50 supra where the Council is only summoned τοῦτων τοιοῦτων ὄντων, or at least τοῦτων δὲ τοιοῦτων γινομένων. 'All the day' means (a) 'all the rest of that day,' or (b) simply 'all day,' to signify that after the Council, as before, the ταραχὴ ὑπὸ τῶν ἱππέων continued. The day is still the 12th, which dawned in c. 47 supra. There has been nothing to justify the insertion of one or more days between the dawn there and the night here. κείνην, indeed, places the πόνον ἄτρυτον and the βουλὴν upon the same day. ἄτρυτος is a poetic word, with a intensive; Pindar, Pyth. 4. 174, has the same phrase, ἄτρυτος πόνος, but not in quite the same sense (πέμπε δ' Ἑρμῆς χρυσόραπις διδόμενος νιόεις ἐπ' ἄτρυτον πόνον).

2. ἡ τε ἡμέρη ἔληγε, 'towards evening on the 12th.' λήγειν here of time, as of space 7. 216; cp. 4. 39. Xenoph. Anab. 7. 6. 6 has αὕτη μὲν ἡ ἡμέρα οὕτως ἔληξε. οἱ ἱππῆες ἐπέπαινον: sc. προσκείμενοι, or προσβάλλοντες, or ταρασσόντες τὴν στρατὴν, as they have been doing all day. The use of the pluperfect after the imperfect is noticeable; the cavalry attacks came to an end before the daylight. But Hdt. uses a material auxiliary, and not the pure pluperfect (προσεβλήκεσαν, or possibly προσεβέβλεατο, cp. 6. 24) to signify the cesser of the attacks.

3. νυκτὸς δὲ γινομένης would serve to mark the first watch, νυκτὸς ἀρχή, καὶ περὶ πρώτῃν νύκτα, καὶ νυκτὸς ἀρχομένης καὶ περὶ πρώτας φυλακάς, Pollux, 1. 70, cp. c. 51 supra.

4. εἰσόδου τῆς ὥρης ἐς τὴν συνέκειτο: i.e. δευτέρας φυλακῆς c. 51 supra, sc. περὶ πρώτον ὕπνον Pollux l.c., cp. c. 44 supra. The word ὥρη here comes very near to our word 'hour,' τὸ δωδεκατὸν μέρος τῆς ἡμέρας (sc. νυκτὸς), cp. 2. 109.

5. ἀερθέντες οἱ πολλοὶ ἀπαλλάσσοντο: the participle and the subject both strike a depreciatory, a dyslogistic, a sarcastic note, which is immediately followed by still more damnable clauses. ἀερθέντες (ἀείρειν, αἰρεῖν) is used in 1. 165, 170 (also in 4. 150 βαρὺς αἰρέσθαι) in a technical way of sea-faring, starting on a sea-voyage, νηυσὶ perhaps, or ἱστίοις, being understood; or even τὰ ἱστία, cp. 8. 56, 94. Here, then, 'the masses' or 'the mass' of the army departs under full sail! (This might be an Athenian touch.) οἱ πολλοὶ here presumably corresponds exactly to τοὺς ἡμίσεας in c. 51 supra. They are not, strictly speaking, in the majority: the whole centre numbers 18,600 as compared with 20,100 for the two wings; as compared with either wing alone, however, and especially the left (8600), the centre has a large plurality.

ἐς τὸν συνέκειτο repeats with a touch of persiflage the ἐς τὴν συνέκειτο just above; the construction is, of course, neuter. (Contr. προσκειμένης higher up. Hdt. is not over careful to avoid such inconcinnities, or 'unconscious iterations'.)

6. οὐκ ἐν νόφ' ἔχοντες marks their duplicity (like the Spartans c. 54), 'hav-

ἄσμενοι τὴν ἵππον πρὸς τὴν Πλαταιέων πόλιν, φεύγοντες δὲ ἀπικνέονται ἐπὶ τὸ "Ηραιον· τὸ δὲ πρὸ τῆς πόλιος ἐστὶ τῆς

8 ἡραῖον RS || δὴ B || τῆς: τῶν Marc.

ing no intention'—not having it in their minds, sc. ἀπαλλάσθαι (or even ἀπικνέσθαι) to the rendezvous, the appointed place; i.e. no doubt in the view of Hdt. himself, as of his source, the island. But the previous chapter shows that the division, or divisions, here in question were to retire πρὸς τὸν Κιθαιρῶνα—much further than the island. They probably did exactly what had been agreed upon at the Council of War.

οἱ δέ: the subject repeated with the δέ which might more usually go with the verb, to emphasize their action: 'but they . . .' Cp. 7. 51.

ὥς ἐκινήθησαν ἔφευγον, 'were no sooner in movement than they took to their heels, leaving to their joy the Persian cavalry far behind!'

The representation of this ἀπάλλαξις (cp. c. 13 supra) as a φύγη (bis) is the clearest indication of the animus of Hdt.'s source, and of his own simplicity, in reproducing his authority.

7. πρὸς τὴν Πλαταιέων πόλιν: the city of Plataia was no doubt in ruins (cp. 8. 50 supra), though its site and its remains might offer some cover (on the morrow) from the dreadful Persian cavaliers. The story, however, goes on to relate that in the course of their flight (φεύγοντες δέ), and before they actually reached the (ruins of) the city of Plataia, they arrived at the temple of Hera (perhaps in ruins too), and there, in front of the temple, they halted, with the utmost precision! Had they been in 'flight' they would not have stopped there, nor do fugitives pile arms and take laager: they throw their arms away, and bolt. The division which halted (presumably according to orders) at the Heraion, perhaps comprised only the left centre, οἱ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας τε καὶ Φλεισίου c. 69 infra, 7300 strong; at the Heraion the left centre was perhaps in a better position ἀναλαβεῖν τοὺς ὀπίενας, cp. c. 51 supra. Further, the right centre, in this case, οἱ ἀμφὶ Κορυθίου c. 69 infra, 11,300 strong, may either have gone higher up Kithairon, in order to bring forward the σιτία, or have been posted on the road leading from Plataia to Dryoskephalai, to protect both the rear of the forces on the island and the flank of the baggage-train, coming down the pass from Megara. In that position they may subsequently have had some fighting to do.

8. τὸ "Ηραιον: the temple of Hera was in front of the πόλις, i.e. the Akropolis of the Plataians, 20 stades from the fountain of Gargaphia. The site of the Heraion has been fixed with high probability by the excavations of Mr. Henry S. Washington; see Papers of the American School at Athens, vi. (1897), pp. 40–54. Its position is almost in the very centre of the plateau of Plataia, the southern end of which alone constituted the πόλις even in 429 B.C. Even at that date there were perhaps no other buildings on the site. The restored Plataia of Makedonian, Roman, and later times covered the whole plateau, as the extant remains of the city-walls demonstrate (cp. Papers of the A.S.A. v. (1892) pp. 253 ff.), and must have enclosed the Heraion, the site of which, in 479 B.C., was certainly outside the city-walls, lower down on the larger northern portion of the table. Any one from the north side would describe the site as πρὸ τῆς πόλιος, and the Plataians themselves, or any one following their terminology, would use the same language (cp. 8. 53), which would also be not unsuitable from the point of view of the supposed 'fugitives' in this story. It is very doubtful, however (to my mind), whether the Heraion was standing in the year 479 B.C., or even at the time when Hdt. was writing. The Persians had probably destroyed it in 480 B.C. (cp. 8. 50). If so, it was in ruins at the time of the battle. At the second destruction of Plataia by the Thebans, in 426 B.C., it is not recorded that they destroyed the Heraion, but it is recorded that they built a great inn, or khan, round a courtyard 200 feet square (for the reception of pilgrims), dedicating it and its furniture to Hera, καὶ νεὼν ἐκατόμπεδον λίθινον ὠκοδόμησαν αὐτῇ Thuc. 3. 68. 3. This was probably the very temple (ναός) which Pausanias (9. 2. 7) found within the restored and enlarged city of his time, θέας ἄλλας μεγέθει τε καὶ ἐς τῶν ἀγαλμάτων τὸν κοσμῶν.

Πλαταιέων, εἴκοσι σταδίους ἀπὸ τῆς κρήνης τῆς Γαρφαφίης ἀπέχον· ἀπικόμενοι δὲ ἔθεντο πρὸ τοῦ ἱεροῦ τὰ ὄπλα. καὶ οἱ 53 μὲν περὶ τὸ Ἡραῖον ἐστρατοπεδεύοντο, Πανσανίης δὲ ὁρῶν σφεας ἀπαλλασσομένους ἐκ τοῦ στρατοπέδου παρήγγελλε καὶ

9 γαρφαφίης S
3 παρήγγελε s

53. 2 ἱερὸν B || ὁρέων CPz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.

But though a Hekatompedon, and built on or over the foundations discovered by Mr. Washington, the restored temple was perhaps not so long as the earlier (sixth century) building, to judge by the measurements. It is not likely that the Thebans destroyed a temple which had been restored since the Persian war; nor is any account of a temple in such a position made by Thucydides in his stories of the siege in 429-7 B.C. Probably the Heraion had not been restored, but was purposely left in ruins, as an eternal protest against the Persian spoiler (and his Greek allies; hence the Theban restoration of 426 B.C.). The temple built by the Plataians out of the spoil of the battle of 479 B.C. was a temple to Athene (the Thebans did not destroy that), Plutarch, Aristeid. 20, Pausan. 9. 4. 1. Hdt. in this connexion too shows no sign of having visited Plataia before writing his account of the battle.

9. εἴκοσι σταδίους: these distances in decimals are quite unconvincing, but might pass for rough estimates, say, 2½ miles. By mere map measurement the Heraion is about 15 stades from Apotripi, and 18 from Dr. Grundy's Gargaphia, and would be a good 20 stades from the Greek position round the Androkrateion. Why is Gargaphia here specified as the terminus a quo? that was rather the Spartan post and point of departure. ἀπέχων, intrans. with acc. of distance, is of course a sufficiently common construction, cp. 1. 179 ἄλλη πῶλος ἀπέχουσα ὅκτῳ ἡμερέων ὁδὸν ἀπὸ Βαβυλῶνος, 3. 26 ἀπέχουσι δὲ ἐπτά ἡμερέων ὁδὸν ἀπὸ Θηβέων.

10. ἔθεντο πρὸ τοῦ ἱεροῦ τὰ ὄπλα, 'they piled arms in front of the temple'—an admission in itself sufficient to disprove the insinuation of φυγή. The Greek centre, or perhaps only the left centre, must now be conceived as posted περὶ τὸ Ἡραῖον, on the lower or northern end of the Plataian plateau, with the heavy shields piled πρὸ τοῦ ἱεροῦ. In this position they are unassailable by cavalry; they are in proximity to water (at least four springs or brooks in the immediate vicinity of the plateau, cp. Papers A.S.A. v. 1892, p. 269); they are covering to a greater or less extent the road from Plataia to Megara. They are also apparently on the extreme left of the 'third' Greek position, which is to be when the whole manœuvre shall have been successfully carried out. But they are not actually conveying the baggage-train, ὀπλίως and σιρία, nor in any way covering the line from Plataia to Dryoskephalai, through which the Persians might possibly circumvent the supplies. That particular duty may have been entrusted to the right centre; cp. note to l. 7 above.

53. 2. Πανσανίης δὲ ὁρῶν. Hdt. speaks as though Pausanias himself had not issued, or agreed to, the order for retirement; as though οἱ πολλοὶ were stampeding out of laager, or station; as though in consequence he issued orders to the Lakedaimonians to retreat. ὁρῶν, however, need not be pressed against Hdt., cp. c. 34. 9 supra (=μαθὼν). Pausanias could hardly have 'seen' the movement, in the literal sense of the word.

3. παρήγγελλε καὶ τοῖσι Λακεδαιμονίοισι: the Spartan method of the παράγγελσις has been immortalized by Thucydides, 5. 66. 3: βασιλέως γὰρ ἀγοντος ὑπ' ἐκείνου πάντα ἄρχεται, καὶ τοῖς μὲν πολεμάρχοις αὐτὸς φράζει τὸ δέον, οἱ δὲ τοῖς λοχαγοῖς, ἐκείνοι δὲ τοῖς πεντηκοντήρῃσιν, αὐτοῖς δὲ οὗτοι τοῖς ἐνωμοτάρχαις, καὶ οὗτοι τῇ ἐνωμοτίᾳ. καὶ αἱ παραγγέλσεις, ἣν τι βούλωνται, κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ χωροῦσι καὶ ταχέαι ἐπέρχονται· σχέδον γὰρ τι πᾶν πλὴν ὀλίγου τὸ στρατόπεδον τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων ἄρχοντες ἀρχόντων εἰσὶ, καὶ τὸ ἐπιμελὲς τοῦ δρωμένου πολλοῖς προσήκει. On the present occasion, however, as the whole movement had been discussed and determined in the Council of War hours before (cp. c. 51 supra), one must suppose that all the necessary orders had already been given, at least to the officers. Pausanias may still have had to give the word for the actual moment of departure.

τοῖσι Λακεδαιμονίοισι ἀναλαμβάνοντας τὰ ὅπλα ἰέναι κατὰ τοὺς 5 ἄλλους τοὺς προϊόντας, νομίσας αὐτοὺς ἐς τὸν χῶρον ἰέναι ἐς τὸν συνεθήκαντο. ἐνθαῦτα οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι ἄρτιοι ἦσαν τῶν ταξιάρχων πείθεσθαι Πανσανίῃ, Ἀμομφάρετος δὲ ὁ Πολιάδew λοχηγέων τοῦ Πιτανητέων λόχου οὐκ ἔφη τοὺς ξείνους φεύ-

6 ἔσαν :: 7 ταξιάρχων B : ταξιηρχέων :: Ἀμομφάρετος δὲ om. C
 8 λοχηγετέων :: om. Marc. || Πιτανήτεω Koen, Holder, van H.

4. ἀναλαμβάνοντας τὰ ὅπλα : the shields were piled, but of course there must have been some men under arms, if only those on the watch.

ἰέναι κατὰ τοὺς ἄλλους can hardly have been the precise form of the commander's order, but rather gives the effect of the order, as the writer conceived that effect. With the expression cp. c. 89 infra, κατὰ πόδας ἐμεῦ ἐλαίνων.

5. νομίσας αὐτοὺς . . ἐς τὸν συνεθήκαντο, 'for he believed the others to be going to the place agreed upon,' i.e., according to Hdt., the island: συνεθήκαντο, sc. ἰέναι. The 'agreement' had been made at the Council of War, c. 51 supra. Hdt. describes (i.e. follows an authority which conceived) the movements of the Greek army in the field of battle as the results of compacts, agreements, bargains, argument, persuasion, but not of definite orders, originating from headquarters or the commander-in-chief. In any case the result of his παράγγελμα to the 'Lakedaimonians' (10,000 strong) must have been to set Λακεδαιμονίων ἅπαν τὸ στρατόπεδον in motion, unless indeed the order was addressed only to a portion of the forces.

6. οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι . . τῶν ταξιάρχων : not ταξιάρχων. ταξιάρχος is the usual Attic form of the word. The term is not a Spartan one at all. All but one of these good Spartan officers, whatever their proper title, were willing and ready (ἄρτιοι, cp. c. 27 supra) to obey their commander! No very astonishing circumstance in an army where πειθαρχία was so sedulously enforced as in the Spartan (cp. Xenophon, Lac. Rep. 8).

7. Ἀμομφάρετος δὲ ὁ Πολιάδew : Amompharetos is hardly a mere Ehrenname (Stein); a Spartan of the name appears as one of the five arbitrators in the early Megaro-Athenian dispute about Salamis, Busolt ii.<sup>3</sup> (1895) 248; cp. Plutarch, Solon 10. The younger might be a grandson, or descendant, of the elder Amompharetos. But those are the only two known wearers of the name. The (father's) name Poliades is found elsewhere, but not again at Sparta. If Pape-Benseler sub v. is correct in deriving it from Athene Πολιάς, the Spartan might have been named by his father in compliment to Athens; cp. the case of the Spartan Σάμιος 3. 55. Was there even perhaps an Athenian ξενία or προξενία in the family?

8. λοχηγέων, 'occupying the rank of a Lochagos,' or commander of a Lochos, a strictly Spartan office and command. But the exact duty and rank of a Lochagos are not so clear. In Xenophon Rep. Lac. 11. 4 a λόχος is one-quarter of a μόρα, and there are six μόραι in the army, each apparently under the command of a Polemarchos. That would give a total of 24 Lochoi. In an army of 5000 that total allows about 292 men to the Lochos. But Xenophon is writing in the fourth century, when a Spartan army in the field never approached a strength of 5000. The numerical strength of Spartan divisions varied with the levy probably. The Spartan Mora destroyed in the Korinthian war numbered 600 men, Xenoph. Hell. 4. 5. 11-12. If it consisted of four Lochoi, the Lochos was numbering 150 men, but there may have been six Lochoi of 100 men each in it. Thucydides, writing of the battle of Mantinea (418 B.C.), with the air of an eye-witness, expressly notices the difficulty of ascertaining the exact number of men in a Spartan force. He uses the term λόχος apparently for the division commanded by a Polemarch (perhaps only under exceptional circumstances), and makes the army of Agis on that occasion consist of 7 Lochoi, exclusive of the Skiritai 600 strong. It is obvious that the Lochos in that passage corresponds to the Mora of Xenophon, a term not employed by Thucydides (cp. Hell. 2. 4. 31, earliest case); the number 7 remains a problem, which Arnold in-ξεσθαι οὐδὲ ἐκὼν εἶναι αἰσχυνέειν τὴν Σπάρτην, ἐθώμαζέ

9 ἐθώμαζέ Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup>

geniously solves by the hypothesis that the army really consisted of six divisions, together with the corps of Βρασιδαιοὶ and Νεωδαμώδεις. (Gilbert, Gr. Staatsalt. i.<sup>2</sup> 77, 1893, apparently identifies this corps with the Skiritai, and gives up the number of Lochoi as hopeless.) In the Lochos at Mantinea there were four πεντηκοστίες, each consisting in turn of four ἐνωμοτιαί. If the numerical strength of the Pentekostys necessarily and always corresponded to its name, that would give but 200 men to the Lochos, and (roughly) but 12 to the Enomotia; but on the possibility of variations in the numbers of men composing the various subdivisions, Arnold's note to Thucydides in I. (of which G. Gilbert, for example, took no account) is still worth consulting. The normal number of the Enomotia is not really quite certain, it may have been 15 (cp. Gilbert, op. c. 75, n. 4), it may have been 24, besides the captain, as Arnold supposes; but it is certain that the tactical organization of the Spartan army underwent modification not merely between the time of Thucydides and of Xenophon, but between the time of Herodotus and of Thucydides; nor is it to be supposed that the indications of the narrative in Hdt. will correspond exactly with the traditions of the Lykurgian system. An army of 5000 men might very well consist of 5 Lochoi of 1000 men each; and as a matter of fact 5 is the number of Lochoi suggested by some of the authorities for the older period (say, sixth century), cp. Gilbert, op. c. p. 76. A Lochos of 1000 men would probably have been subdivided into 10 companies of 100 each, possibly 'double Pentekostyes,' such as Arnold speaks of (possibly even, though to my thinking less probably, also called Lochoi as he suggests). Amompharetos is emphatically not one of the 'Polemarchs' (cp. 7. 173), but may have been in command of 1000 men. He was no mere 'centurion,' or the story that follows could hardly have been told about him.

τοῦ Πιτανητῶν λόχου. Thucydides, still in this respect employing the same terminology as Hdt., goes out of his way to assert that it was an error to say that there was, 'or ever had been,' a Πιτανάτης λόχος (cp. just below) in the Spartan army, 1. 20. 3. Whether Thucydides is contraverting the source from which Hdt. gets this story, or, as seems likely enough, Hdt. himself, the express assertion of the Athenian on this matter is final, if rightly understood. But what does Thucydides exactly mean? Not that the Spartan army was not organized κατὰ λόχους, for that would contradict his own text elsewhere, but either that the λόχοι had not territorial designations, or that no λόχος derived its designation from Πιτάνη (cp. 3. 55). The recorded names of Lochoi are territorial, at least in part, e.g. Μεσodάτης (cp. Gilbert, op. c. p. 76 n. 3); so that we may conclude in favour of the latter alternative. If Amompharetos was a δημότης of Pitana, a Πιτανάτης, and commanded one of the Lochoi in the Spartan army, an Athenian source might very probably speak of the division under his command as the Πιτανάτης λόχος, especially if, as above argued, the family of this Pitane was likely to be known and popular in Athens.

Hdt. himself calls Πιτάνη a δῆμος, rather an Atticism than a Laconism, 3. 55. Pausanias (3. 16. 9) seems to put Pitane and Mesoa in juxtaposition (οἱ ἐκ Μεσodά τε καὶ Πιτάνης θύοντες τῇ Ἀρεμίδι: and the mistake censured by Thucydides may lie in calling the Μεσodάτης λόχος the Πιτανάτης. Pitana itself was evidently a considerable place: Pausanias (3. 14. 2) mentions a λέσχη Κροτανῶν in the vicinity of the Royal Tombs of the Agiadae, adding εἰσὶ δὲ οἱ Κροτανοὶ Πιτανάτων μοῖρα. This makes Pitane in the west end of Sparta: the Artemis above named is Artemis Issoria, Pausan. l.c. (cp. Wide, Lakonische Kulte, 1893, p. 109). Close by were the tombs of Leonidas and Pausanias the Regent, and the monument to the 300 who fell at Thermopylai (cp. 7. 224).

The story of Amompharetos may well belong to the first draft of Hdt.'s work. It is a superficial inference that Hdt. got this story of Amompharetos in Pitane, during his visit to Sparta: the story is plainly not a Spartan story, it is almost as plainly an Athenian. There is nothing in the story to show that

- 10 τε ὄρων τὸ ποιούμενον ἄτε οὐ παραγενόμενος τῷ προτέρῳ λόγῳ.
ὁ δὲ Πανσανίης τε καὶ ὁ Εὐρύναξ δεινὸν μὲν ἐποιεῦντο τὸ μὴ πείθεσθαι ἐκείνον σφίσι, δεινότερον δὲ ἔτι, κείνου ταῦτ' ἀναινομένου, ἀπολιπεῖν τὸν λόχον τὸν Πιτανήτην, μὴ ἦν ἀπολίπωσι ποιεῦντες τὰ συνεθήκαντο τοῖσι ἄλλοισι Ἕλλησι,

10 ὄρων Stein<sup>12</sup>, van H.
νεωμένον B, Wesseling, Gaisford

12 δ' ἔτι ACz || ἐκείνου B || ταῦτα
13 πιτανήτην C

Hdt. had been in Sparta before writing it down, rather the reverse. If Hdt. afterwards made friends in Pitane it was perhaps because he took introductions from Athens; but he either did not discover his mistake about the Πιτανάτης λόχος, or he failed to correct it. If the emperor Caracalla (211-217 A.D.) before starting for the east sent for a body-guard from Sparta and called it the Πιτανάτης λόχος (Herodian 4. 8. 3), that only shows how hard an error dies which has once attained classic expression in literature. If Photius, Lex. sub v. Πιτάνη, has φυλὴ καὶ τόπος τῆς Λακωνικῆς, that is because in the Roman period the name had been adopted for a local tribe; cp. C.I.G. 1425-6.

τοὺς ξείνους: cc. 11 supra, 55 infra.
9. ἐκὼν εἶναι: cp. 7. 164.

10. ὄρων τὸ ποιούμενον: cp. 1. 2 supra. Amompharetos could hardly 'see' in the dark; he no doubt received certain orders (probably to stay where he was, or to cover the retreat).

ἄτε οὐ παραγενόμενος τῷ προτέρῳ λόγῳ: the πρότερος λόγος in this case is the Council of War in cc. 50 f. supra. The phrase does not necessarily imply that there was any fresh council or discussion now taking place. If Amompharetos was really absent from the previous Council it was not because he was not a sufficiently high officer to be present, but for some other reason. Stein suggests that he was in command of an important outpost; but which? And had he retired from it? The army had been ex hypothesi all together, and in battle-array. How also does Amompharetos now come to be back in the Laager? A statement of this sort, explanatory or rather assertorial of his absence from the Council, is very suspicious; it is argumentative, and apologetic, to meet the obvious objection to the story, that Amompharetos must have known all about the intended movement from having been present at the Council earlier in the day. (It is just conceivable that a Spartan Lochos, under Amompharetos, or some other, might have been posted in or about the church of St. Demetrios; but the position would have been a dangerously isolated one, as the detachment could not have kept touch of the forces on the Asopos Ridge, with the Persian cavalry riding up and down the valleys or combs between the ridges; or he might have been holding or trying to hold Gargaphia: in which case he had retired before the strangers already.)

11. ὁ δὲ Πανσανίης τε καὶ ὁ Εὐρύναξ: why Euryanax (c. 10 supra) here suddenly comes by his apparent rights it is not easy to say; down below, c. 55, he even takes precedence. Does this 'Attic' story tend to discredit both Spartan commanders at the expense of Amompharetos? The Spartan commanders were shocked at his insubordination, but still more horrified at the idea of abandoning him to his fate.

δεινὸν ποιέσθαι, a mental process, or condition; cp. 7. 1.

12. κείνου ταῦτ' ἀναινομένου: i.e. so long as Amompharetos refused to retire: ἀναλαμβάνοντας τὰ ὅπλα λέναι . . . ἐς τὴν νῆσον. The verb ἀναίνομαι is common in Homer, and not unknown even in Attic prose. (Cp. App. Crit.)

13. τὸν λόχον τὸν Πιτανήτην: see above.

ἦν ἀπολίπωσι: sc. τὸν λόχον.

14. ποιεῦντες τὰ συνεθήκαντο τ. ἄλ. Ἕλλησι, 'in carrying out their agreement with all the other Greeks.' But the centre, if the Spartans had only known it, had, as already recorded, been guilty of a gross and dastardly breach of faith; the only other Greeks, therefore, now worth considering are—as the reader knows—the Athenians.

ἀπόληται ὑπολειφθεὶς αὐτός τε Ἀμομφάρετος καὶ οἱ μετ' 15
αὐτοῦ. ταῦτα λογιζόμενοι ἀτρέμας εἶχον τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ Λακωνικόν, καὶ ἐπειρῶντο πείθοντές μιν ὥς οὐ χρεὸν εἶη
ταῦτα ποιεῖν. καὶ οἱ μὲν παρηγόρεον Ἀμομφάρετον μῦνον 54 Λακεδαιμονίων τε καὶ Τεγεατέων λελειμμένον, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἐπόλεον τοιάδε· εἶχον ἀτρέμας σφέας αὐτοὺς ἵνα ἐτάχθῃσαν, ἐπιστάμενοι τὰ Λακεδαιμονίων φρονήματα ὥς ἄλλα φρονεόντων

15 ὑποληφθεὶς RV
χρεῶν CPz, van H.
3 ἀτρέμα α

17 ἐπειρώτων SMarc.: ἐπειρέοντο van H. ||
54. 1 παρηγορέοντο Bekker, van H. || μύνων B

16. ἀτρέμας εἶχον τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ
Λ. As the order to march had already been issued, the modus operandi here is not quite clear. Either the order to march had not yet taken effect, and was countermanded; or the van, or a portion of the line, had indeed started, and was arrested by a message from headquarters. It is, of course, not impossible that the army was falling back en échelon, Lochos by Lochos; and that the 'Mesoate' Lochos, or the Lochos under the command of the Pitanate Amompharetos, being at the extremity of the Spartan wing, was the last to retire. The process would be a pretty slow one, carried out, as it was being carried out, in the dark; and daylight might overtake them (c. 56 infra)
before the whole manœuvre had been fully executed.

ἀτρέμας εἶχον: cp. 7. 8.

17. ἐπειρῶντο πείθοντες: c. 26 supra.

54. 2. Ἀθηναῖοι δέ. The previous chapter has witnessed the Greek centre in full 'flight'—to the Heraion: ex hypothesi a disgraceful 'breach of contract.' The Spartans have equally broken faith, by not retreating at all,
so far: the commanders being involved in a dispute with a refractory Lochagos, whom they would not abandon, with his men, to fate. μῦνον . . . λελειμμένον
just here is a rhetorical exaggeration:
the participle, passive and perfect in form, must be middle and present, or imperfect, in sense; cp. 7. 153. The tense at least marks his obstinacy.
Meanwhile what of the Athenians?
Were they keeping their contract, were they true to their word? The story goes on to admit (it is an Athenian story) that they were forsworn; but,
then, they had a good excuse—the notorious duplicity of their neighbours!

3. εἶχον ἀτρέμας σφέας αὐτοὺς ἵνα ἐτάχθῃσαν. These good democrats act as one man, and do not require, apparently, orders, like the Spartans, just up above. Or is the story tender to the fame of Aristides, the commander-in-chief, and so refrains from directly implicating him? iva, ubi, cp. Index.
The aorist is practically = a pluperfect.

4. ἐπιστάμενοι τὰ Λακεδαιμονίων φρονήματα. The participle ἐπιστάμενοι is used purely from the Athenian point of view, nor does it necessarily involve more than 'belief,' cp. 8. 132 supra. With φρονήματα cp. 8. 144, and c. 7 supra.
It would be unfair to Hdt. to cite him as endorsing or accepting even, as his own, the utterance of Athenian prejudice which follows: to wit, that Lake-daimonians were men who thought one thing and said another, men whose words, agreements, promises, pledges, could not be relied on as representing their intentions, much less their conduct, when the time for action arrived.

Lakedaimonian perfidy was a popular topic at Athens: Aristophanes (who had another axe to grind) satirizes the commonplace, cp. Acharn. 300 ff., Peace 1063 ff. Blakesley compared the Roman view of Punica fides and continental opinion of 'perfidious Albion': one might perhaps add Albion's opinion of certain continental states. Rawlinson more innocently observed that the sore-ness caused by recent disappointment (in 479 B.C.) might have produced, at Athens, a distrust of the Spartans.
Stein's observation that Hdt. in this passage stands ganz auf athenischer Seite is more to the point, but hardly carries us quite far enough. Hdt. himself is probably as innocent as Rawlinson in the matter; but if the Athenian story goes out of its way to charge the Spartans

5 καὶ ἄλλα λεγόντων. ὥς δὲ ἐκινήθη τὸ στρατόπεδον, ἔπεμπον σφέων ἵππεία ὀφόμενόν τε εἰ πορεύεσθαι ἐπιχειροῦσιν οἱ Σπαρτιῆται, εἴτε καὶ τὸ παράπαν μὴ διανοεῖνται ἀπαλλάσσε-55 σθαι, ἐπειρέσθαι τε Πausανίην τὸ χρεὼν εἴη ποιεῖν. ὥς δὲ ἀπῖκετο ὁ κῆρυξ ἐς τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους, ὥρα τε σφέας κατὰ χώρην τεταγμένους καὶ ἐς νείκεα ἀπιγμένους αὐτῶν τοὺς

5 δ' α 6 ἐπιχειροῦσιν α, Holder 7 τοπαράπαν Pz 8
χρεὼν CPz, van H. 55. 2 τε σφέας R: τέ σφέας 3 αὐτέων :

with duplicity, it is because the Athenian source has some perfidy, or incompetence, or failure on the Athenian side to excuse or to disguise.

5. ὥς δὲ ἐκινήθη τὸ στρατόπεδον refers back to ὡς ἐκινήθησαν in c. 52 supra. The movement of the centre had, of course, for the time being, placed the Athenians in isolation on the left wing.

6. ἵππεία. The Athenians had no proper cavalry at this time (cp. c. 21 l. 15 supra), but they may have had mounted aides-de-camp or kήρυκες. The Spartan commander has apparently a mounted aide-de-camp too; c. 60 infra. The double construction ἐπεμπον ὀφόμενον and (ἐπεμπον) ἐπειρέσθαι is noticeable: ἐπειρέσθαι apparently refers to one only of the two alternatives covered by ὀφόμενον, so that ἐπειρησόμενον would have conveyed a different and inappropriate sense. The temptation is strong to read εἰ τε for τε εἰ, as that would soften the strict co-ordination between participle and verb; cp. a somewhat similar case c. 6 supra. The variation εἰ πορεύεσθαι ἐπιχειροῦσιν (opt. for the less probable alternative) and εἰ (τε) . . . μὴ διανοεῖνται ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι (for the move to be expected) is observable; cp. 8. 106 ὅσα . . . ἔχοι . . . ὅσα ποιήσει. The second construction is, of course, different from the εἰ μὴ ἀμνησθαι of the partially parallel passage in c. 8 supra.

8. ἐπειρέσθαι τε κτλ.: and in that case 'to ask Pausanias what they ought to do'—on the whole, these good Athenians are still ready to take their directions from the commander-in-chief; cp. c. 27 supra ad f. ἐξηγέσθε ὡς πεισομένων. They cannot trust the Spartan's word, but they are ready to obey the Spartan's orders! It is as though, in some way or other, the Spartans would take a mean advantage of the Athenians, in getting these to go, while they themselves remained at their post! That is an idea belonging to the Athenian theory of the Persian war, which represented it as a race between Athens and Sparta, which should first crush out the invader—a race in which Marathon for ever secured the prize of valour for Athens! (Cp. Hdt. IV.—VI. vol. ii. p. 194.)

Perhaps this (mounted man) episode is only a reply to, or refutation of, the (Spartan) assertion that in the stress of battle the Spartans had sent to ask for assistance, which the Athenians failed to render, c. 60 infra. If there is any truth in it, that truth may underlie the question τὸ χρεὼν εἴη ποιεῖν, 'what are we to do?' The Athenians were in difficulties, but not on account of the retreat of the centre, if it be true that a general retreat had been agreed on, and ordered; for they could not yet know that the centre had not retreated but fled (even if that was true!). But in what difficulties were the Athenians? Perhaps the message was to the effect that the centre was retreating so slowly that the Athenians had not yet been able to start, and to request Pausanias to hurry the centre's movements. Cp. l. 14.

55. 2. ὥρα τε: the τε is not in its logical place (τεταγμένους τε), unless it were meant to suggest a zeugma, καὶ (ἤκουε), or such. The herald (κῆρυξ = ἱππεύς) 'saw,' or found them, κατὰ χώρην, cp. 8. 73, 108. The Spartans were in proper array (τεταγμένους). It was, of course, still night. He saw, or heard, the first men among them openly quarrelling, τοὺς πρώτους, not apparently first in order of march, but first in order of rank; not, however, referring to 'Euryanax and Pausanias,' who appear to be on one side, but to them on the one part and Amompharetos on the other.

πρώτους. ὥς γὰρ δὴ παρηγορέοντο τὸν Ἀμομφάρετον ὃ τε Εὐρύαναξ καὶ ὁ Πausanίης μὴ κινδυνεύειν μένοντας μούνοιν 5 Λακεδαιμονίων, οὐ κως ἔπειθον, ἐς δ' ἐς νεϊκέα τε συμπεσόντες ἀπίκατο καὶ ὁ κῆρυξ τῶν Ἀθηναίων παρίστατό σφι ἀπιγμένους.
νεϊκέων δὲ ὁ Ἀμομφάρετος λαμβάνει πέτρον ἀμφοτέρῃσι τῇσι χερσὶ καὶ τιθεὶς πρὸ ποδῶν τῶν Πausανίω ταύτῃ τῇ ψήφῳ ψηφίζεσθαι ἔφη μὴ φεύγειν τοὺς ξείνους, λέγων τοὺς βαρ- 10 βάρους. ὃ δὲ μαινόμενον καὶ οὐ φρενήρεα καλέων ἐκείνον, πρὸς τε τὸν Ἀθηναίων κήρυκα ἐπειρωτῶντα τὰ ἐντεταλμένα λέγειν ὁ Πausanίης ἐκέλευε τὰ παρεόντα σφι πρήγματα, ἐχρήμζε τε τῶν Ἀθηναίων προσχωρήσαι τε πρὸς ἑωυτοὺς καὶ

4 παρηγόρεον BPr, Holder 5 καὶ om. C 6 Λακεδαιμονίων Paris. fr., Schaefer, Wesseling, Gaisford, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: Λακεδαιμονίους || οὐκων? Stein<sup>1</sup>: οὐκουν Paris. fr. 7 ἀπικέατο Pz || ὁ om.
Marc. 9 τῶν: τὸν B: τοῦ Paris. fr. 10 λέγων: ξείνους λέγων B, Holder: ξείνους λέγων τοὺς βαρβάρους del. Werfer, Naber, van H.: aut ξείνους legendum aut λέγων τοὺς βαρβάρους tollenda censeo 11 μαινό-μενόν <τε> van H. || οὐ: ὡς B: om. Marc. || καλέων . . ἐπειρωτῶντα om. R
12 πρὸς τε del. Krueger, van H.: τραπόμενός τε πρὸς conl. Stein<sup>2</sup> || τὸν:
τῶν S || ἀθηναίων α || κήρυκα τραπόμενος conl. Stein<sup>1</sup> || ἐπειρωτῶντα codd.
(ἐπειρωτῶντα C), Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder: ἐπειρωτόντα Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. 13 ὁ Πausanίης del. Krueger, van H. 14 ἐχρήζε RSMarc. z: ἐχρήξε V ||
τε om. B || καὶ ποιεῖν . . ἑωυτοὺς om. R

4. παρηγορέοντο: in the previous chapter the same word is used in the active; the imperfect remains in full force. A further variation is obtained by the substitution of μούνοιν ('he and his men') for μοῖνον there.

6. ἐς νεϊκέα τε συμπεσόντες ἀπίκατο καὶ . . παρίστατό σφι ἀπιγμένους. There is here (a) a simple and obvious parataxis; cp. c. 47 supra. (b) But why συμπεσόντες and ἀπιγμένους? Why not ἐς νεϊκέα τε ἀπίκατο (cp. ἐς νεϊκέα ἀπιγμένων just above) καὶ ὁ κῆρυξ ἀπίκτο, or ἀπιγμένους ἦν, or ἐστὶ, or even ἀπίκτο? Well, there are limits to the baldness of phraseology tolerable to Hdt., though he is not over-careful to avoid verbal repetitions and clash. (c) But συμπε-σόντες with ἀπίκατο seems de trop; the phrase here is ἐς νεϊκέα ἀπίκατο (cp. ἐς ν. ἀπιγμένους). In 3. 120 ἐκ λόγων ἐς νεϊκέα συμπεσόντες is not 'from words to come to blows,' but 'to fall a-quarrelling in the course of conversation.' Here too συνέπεσον without ἀπίκατο would have done. The participle here is used (I cannot but think) with a confused sense of anticipating the 'coincidence,' the 'synchronism,' recorded in the bare parataxis. Hdt. is not invariably lucid in point of expression; cp. c. 51 supra, 7. 152 (confusion in οἰκία κακά).

8. πέτρον . . ψήφῳ: in marked contrast: 'boulder,' and 'pebble.'

11. 8 δέ κτλ. The agitation of the scene seems to communicate itself to the narrative of the historian. 8 is, of course, Pausanias; ἐκείνον is Amompharetos. The τε in πρὸς τε is perhaps merely displaced, and co-ordinates the sentence ἐκέλευε τὰ κτλ. with ἐχρήμζε τε κτλ. The displacement has led to a reintroduction of the subject ὁ Πausanίης.

οὐ φρενήρεα: non compotem sui; cp. 3. 25.

12. τὰ ἐντεταλμένα: sc. τί χρεόν ἐστι ποιεῖν; τί ἡμῖν ποιητέον; c. 54 ad f.

13. τὰ παρεόντα σφι πρήγματα, 'the business (trouble) on which they were engaged,' or 'in which they were involved.'

14. προσχωρήσαι τε πρὸς ἑωυτοὺς καὶ ποιεῖν περὶ τῆς ἀπόδου τὰ περ ἄν καὶ σφέας. So far as this request in-

56 ποιέειν περὶ τῆς ἀπόδου τὰ περ ἂν καὶ σφέας. καὶ ὁ μὲν ἀπαλλάσσετο εἰς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους· τοὺς δὲ ἐπεὶ ἀνακρινομένους πρὸς ἑωυτοὺς ἡὼς κατελάμβανε, ἐν τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ κατήμενος ὁ Πausanίας, οὐ δοκέων τὸν Ἀμομφάρετον λείψεσθαι τῶν
5 ἄλλων Λακεδαιμονίων ἀποστειχόντων, τὰ δὲ καὶ ἐγένετο, σημήνας ἀπῆγε διὰ τῶν κολωνῶν τοὺς λοιποὺς πάντας· εἶποντο δὲ καὶ Τεγεῆται. Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ταχθέντες ἦσαν τὰ

56. 2 [ἀνα]κρινομένους van H.

5 ἀποστειχόντων αβ || καὶ om. β

6 κωλῶν S

7 ἦσαν AB: ἦσαν C: om. Marc.

volves any modification of the original decision of the Council of War to retire, c. 51 supra, the modification may simply amount to this, that, whereas by the original plan the two wings were to concentrate independently on the Island, by this modification they were to effect an earlier junction, the delay in the movement of the centre having altered the conditions unfavourably. But this interpretation is not inevitable. The formula above may simply represent the original plan for concentration back on to the Island by the two wings. If that plan had broken down now, its collapse may have been due, not to the insubordinate obstinacy of Amompharetos (which Athenians might regard as heroic) nor to the 'flight' of the centre, but to the failure of the Athenians to start soon enough, perhaps because prematurely engaged on the left. περ, 'exactly'; ἑωυτοὺς perhaps because 'Eurynax and Pausanias' have been mentioned; or else = Σπαρτιέτας, and to avoid σφέας with σφέας immediately following. Its use is quite in keeping with this oratio non nihil turbata (Baehr).

56. 2. τοὺς δὲ . . ἡὼς κατελάμβανε: the dawn of the 13th, cp. c. 52 supra; the very day of battle, or of the supreme battle. ἀνακρινομένους, 'quarrelling'; the verb is apparently used with this meaning only in this one passage; the subst. ἀνάκρισις in 8. 69 may be compared though used in a different sense; but cp. App. Crit. ἑωυτοὺς here seems = ἀλλήλους.

3. ἐν τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ might better be taken of the point of dawn than of the much enduring night, now over.

κατήμενος: perhaps not literally 'sitting,' cp. c. 72 infra, but 'without moving.'

4. οὐ δοκέων . . λείψεσθαι: nothing has been recorded in the story previously to justify this belief that Amompharetos will not remain behind.

5. ἀποστειχόντων is a rather grand and poetical word; the simple verb is never used in prose.

6. σημήνας: sc. τῇ σάλπιγγι, cp. 8. 11 (c. 42 supra, the case is not so clear). The operations at night had doubtless been carried out with all possible silence and secrecy; but it was now daylight, and the movement of the Greek forces no doubt observed; there could be no reason for not employing the usual signals.

ἀπῆγε διὰ τῶν κολωνῶν: the statement is precise to the effect that Pausanias was retiring; what are the κολωνοὶ in question? Presumably the ridges descending from Kithairon, as is more fully indicated in the next chapter. Unfortunately Hdt. does not specify the point of the compass towards which Pausanias was moving.

7. εἶποντο: as the Tegeatai had been standing to the west of the Spartans, if they really 'followed' them now, the Spartans would have moved first, and presumably in an easterly direction (however otherwise qualified); but it is possible that εἶποντο is not to be pressed, and that the Spartans really bring up the rear. The action of Amompharetos looks like that. If so, the retreat was probably in a SW. direction. But see further, below.

Ἀθηναῖοι δέ κτλ. Neither is the movement and direction of the Athenians indicated or described so precisely as could be wished.

ταχθέντες points to the movement being in accordance with orders, presumably the orders of Pausanias; τεταγμένοι would signify that they were in actual battle-array (as no doubt they were). Stein cps. c. 104 infra, and 1. 121, 169, 8. 7, 13.

ἦσαν τὰ ἑμπαιν ἢ Λακεδαιμόνια. In 7. 58 the king's fleet goes from Abydos τὰ ἑμπαιν πρήσσαν τοῦ περὶ ἐμπαλιν ἢ Λακεδαιμόνιοι· οἱ μὲν γὰρ τῶν τε ὄχθων ἀντείχοντο καὶ τῆς ὑπωρέης τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος φοβεόμενοι τὴν ἵππον, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ κάτω τραφθέντες ἐς τὸ πεδίον. Ἀμομφάρετος δὲ 57

9 ὑπωρέης libri

10 τραφέντες B: στραφθέντες C

(i.e. ἢ ὁ πεῖός), which Hdt. explains as meaning in that case that the fleet was going west while the army was going east; i.e. he does not there mean that the fleet went on water while the army went on land; the point of difference is purely one of direction, of orientation. Yet in the present passage Stein maintains that τὰ ἐμπαλιν denotes not a difference of direction, but simply and solely the difference of the surface over which the two bodies were moving; this appears an improbable and inadequate explanation, not in accordance with the meaning of ἐμπαλιν, with the other clear instance in Hdt., or finally, with the context here. For here Hdt. says not merely that the Spartans were moving διὰ τῶν κολωνῶν (τῶν τε ὄχθων καὶ τῆς ὑπωρέης τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος ἀντεχόμενοι) and the Athenians ἐς τὸ πεδίον (not by the way διὰ τοῦ πεδίου, or κατὰ τὸ πεδίον); he also expressly describes the Athenians as τραφθέντες or κάτω τραφθέντες (sc. ἦσαν ἐς τὸ πεδίον).

There has, therefore, been a turn, a wheel, in the line, in the orientation of the Athenians. Whether there has also been a turn in the orientation of the Lakedaimonians Hdt. does not say. What amount of wheel would constitute or justify the use of τὰ ἐμπαλιν may be a question; the words obviously might be used of a movement, or double movement, much short of being in contrary directions. In the present case Hdt. need not mean that Athenians and Spartans were moving in diametrically opposite directions, starting, as it were, back to back; he may mean no more than that 'they were moving in anything but the same direction.' Whether he is right or not is a widely different question. If Spartans and Athenians were under orders to fill up the gap and concentrate, while at the same time retiring, 'on the Island,' that movement might have been effected by the wings falling back, Lochos by Lochos, from the east and the west ends of the previous line to a common point south, or south-west, of the position at starting; and even such a manoeuvre, with reference to the termini a quibus, might be described as movements τὰ ἐμπαλιν. But the movement here predicated of the Athenians may go far beyond this. By τὸ πεδίον might be understood not merely the trough of Gargaphia and A<sup>1</sup>, but the more genuine plain north of Plataia. If so, the movement of the Athenians was westward, more or less by south, and its object may have been to balk the approach of the medizing Greeks on the Persian right, with whom the Athenians are presently engaged. Had the Greeks previously been in a hollow square, or with a φάλαγξ ἀμφίστομος round the church of St. John (Androkrateion), then the Athenians, to the north, might have wheeled round, till they were facing west, or even south-west, while the Spartans may have either remained, facing south (by west) as they had been all the previous day, or may even have turned, have been obliged to turn, until they were facing east, or north-east.

8. τῶν τε ὄχθων ἀντείχοντο. It is not by any means self-evident what actual ground is here denoted by the ὄχθοι, cp. 8. 52, 4. 203 (not ὄχθαι, 'river-banks'), to which the Lakedaimonians were 'holding on,' clinging, keeping close, or anxious to do so: are they identical with τῆς ὑπωρέης τοῦ Κιθαιρώνος? Are the Spartans already thereon, and wishing to stay thereon, or are they striving to get thereon? Are the ὄχθοι generally the ridges running down from Kithairon to the Asopos, as distinguished from τὸ πεδίον? Or are they the ridges north of the trough in which Gargaphia was situate?—in fact, the 'Asopos Ridge' and 'Long Ridge' of Dr. Grundy's map?

9. φοβεόμενοι τὴν ἵππον: the Lakedaimonians are 'afraid of the cavalry' according to this story, and that is given as the reason for their line of retreat: a genuinely Attic touch. Oddly enough, when it comes to action, the Lakedaimonians, who are on more or less high ground, are apparently assaulted by the cavalry, while the Athenians are not expressly recorded to have encountered any cavalry below! (cp. c. 67 infra).

ἀρχὴν γε οὐδαμὰ δοκέων Πausανίην τολμήσειν σφέας ἀπολιπεῖν, περιείχετο αὐτοῦ μένοντας μὴ ἐκλιπεῖν τὴν τάξιν·
προτερέοντων δὲ τῶν σὺν Πausανίῃ, καταδόξας αὐτοὺς ἰδέε
5 τέχνη ἀπολείπειν αὐτόν, ἀναλαβόντα τὸν λόχον τὰ ὅπλα ἦγε βάδην πρὸς τὸ ἄλλο στίφος· τὸ δὲ ἀπελθὼν ὅσον τε δέκα στάδια ἀνέμενε τὸν Ἀμομφαρέτου λόχον, περὶ ποταμὸν Μολόεντα

57. 2 γε Schweighaeuser, Stein, van H.: τε (del. Krueger) 4 καταδόξαντες B: κάρτα δόξας Marc. || θείη B: ἰθείμ ceteri: ἰθέη μὴ τέχνη coni. Madvig, adm. Holder 5 ἀπολιπεῖν BP || τὸν λόχον om.:
6 ἄλλο om. B || στίφος CR 7 παρὰ Marc. || μούεντα B: μελόεντα
Marc.

57. 2. ἀρχὴν γε οὐδαμὰ δοκέων, 'originally at least never dreaming (that Pausanias would go so far as to abandon them).' ἀρχήν, 7. 220, 8. 128. οὐδαμὰ might more logically have gone with τολμήσειν. The γε serves here in contrast to προτερέοντων δέ: but cp. App. Crit.

3. περιείχετο . . . μὴ ἐκλιπεῖν: the construction is peculiar, as περιέχεσθαι (mid.) naturally takes a genitive, even as ἀντίχεσθαι just above; cp. 7. 39, 160; 8. 60. αὐτοῦ is of course a local adverb, 'on the spot.' περιέχεσθαι as a passive, and in a strictly physical sense in 8. 10, 79, 80 supra, here is plainly middle, but is it purely psychological in sense? cp. the various renderings: (a) "he was urgent with them that they should stay and not leave him," L. & S.; "he stuck to it that they should stay there and not leave their post," Macaulay; "setzte sich darauf dass sie (alle)," Krueger; "beharrete darauf hier zu bleiben," Baehr; (b) "remained firm in his resolve," Rawlinson; "hielt sich an den Gedanken, dass sie," Sitzler. As the statement is qualified by ἀρχήν, and the mentality of Amompharetos is set forth in δοκέων, and his contrasted action is purely physical (ἦγε), I do not hesitate to take περιείχετο as belonging to the external order and descriptive of the action, i.e. utterance of the man: 'he kept on insisting that they should stay where they were, and not desert their post,' as in the (a) group (but L. & S. give rather a paraphrase than a translation).

4. προτερέοντων δὲ τῶν σὺν Πausανίῃ, 'as Pausanias and his men were getting further and further off . . . convinced (καταδόξας) that they were really abandoning him, he led his Lochos, after the men had taken up their shields, at a slow step towards the main body.'

προτερέειν, cp. c. 66 infra; καταδόξαι, cp. 8. 69.

ἰθέη τέχνη: cp. c. 37 supra.

5. αὐτόν is remarkable: it is generally referred to the man=ἑωυτόν; it might more correctly refer to τὸν λόχον. Krueger renders it "ihn und seinen Lochos."

6. βάδην, contrasted with δρόμῳ; cp. c. 59 infra, Xenophon Anab. 4. 6. 25, Hell. 5. 4. 53.

στίφος: cp. c. 70 infra. This 'main body' is awaiting 'the Lochos of Amompharetos' (sic) at a distance of 10 stades; i.e. exactly the distance given above, c. 51, as the distance separating the Island, to which the Council of War had agreed and determined to retreat, from the position of the Greek forces at Gargaphia; yet the Lakedaimonians are not at the Island, as the next words go on to say!

7. περὶ ποταμὸν Μολόεντα. There is no third river, beside the Asopos with its tributaries, and the Oëroë with its tributaries, to which the name Μολόειν can be applied: it follows that the name must be applied to some stream belonging to one or other of the two systems. No ancient authority clearly indicates the right identification; modern travelers and commentators are divided on the subject. Thus the Moloeis has been identified with O<sup>1</sup> (so by Vischer, p. 547, cp. Bursian, Geogr. v. Griechenland. i. 247), while Dr. Grundy, who adopted A<sup>2</sup> in his Topography of the Battle of Plataea, 1894, p. 33, in his Great Persian War, 1901, p. 495, now prefers A<sup>2</sup>. These (O<sup>1</sup>, A<sup>2</sup>) are respectively the two most considerable affluents, the one of Oëroë, the other of Asopos; Ridge 2, forming the watershed east and west, lies between them. Thus, as far as the R. Moloeis ἰδρυμένον Ἀργιόπιόν τε χῶρον καλούμενον, τῇ καὶ Δήμητρος

8 ἀργιόπτον Marc.

goes, the geographical indication comes to much the same thing, and might point to Ridge 2 as the halting-place of Pausanias.

8. Ἀργιόπιόν τε χῶρον καλούμενον. The Ἀργιόπιος χώρος, possibly τὸ Ἀργιόπιον, is not elsewhere mentioned. A nymph Argiope is known to Pausanias (4. 33. 3), but she belongs to Parnassos, not to Kithairon: more in place here were Argiope, wife of Agenor, and mother of Kadmos; Pherekydes, Frag. 40. She is a water-nymph, for she is a daughter of Neilos: her name should perhaps be Ἀργιόπη rather than Ἀργιόπη. (Cp. Hyginus, Fab. vi. ed. Th. Muncker, 1681.) In any case, the Argiopion rather leans towards Oëroë. The attempt to connect the 'place' with a 'White Rock' (W. Irving Hunt, Papers of Am. Sch. at Athens, v. 1892, p. 276) is not satisfactory; cp. Grundy, p. 495; nor need Pape now be cited as authority for that etymological effort. Dr. Grundy was divided (in 1894) between 'Long Ridge' and 'Plateau'; he has now decided for the latter. But Ridge 2, the watershed between Oëroë and his own Moloeis, has clearly as good a right as either.

Δήμητρος Ἐλευσινίης ἱρόν. One of the indications, which make it difficult to believe that Hdt. had been over the ground, is the fact that there were at least two temples of Eleusinian Demeter within the area of the operations he is describing, viz. (1) at Plataia, Pausanias 9. 4. 2; (2) at Hysiai, Plutarch, Aristeid. 11. To these Dr. Grundy adds (3) one at Erythrai, on the strength of the discovery of inscribed stones on the traditional site of Erythrai, Topography (1894), p. 34. (The ναὸς at Skolos, Pausan. 9. 4. 3, and the ἄλσος at Potniai, Pausan. 9. 9. 1, which would raise the Demetria to five in number, may be ignored for present purposes.) Of these three temples, the Plataian, if it were inside the city, on no possible theory of the battle could be employed to define the position of the Spartans; nor would a site in Plataia in any sense accord with the other indications so far as they have been provisionally identified above, viz. the river Moloeis and the Argiopion, or Ἀργιόπιος χώρος. But if it were outside the city, though in Plataian territory, the case would be altered. See further, below.

The third, the Erythraian Demetria, was located high up the ὕπωρην, considerably more than 10 stades from either Gargaphia, and, what is still more against it, would indicate that the Spartans were making back to Erythrai, and to the first position (1<sup>a</sup>), from which they had advanced originally, and where the Greeks had been especially open to attack from the Persian cavalry, and also in want of water. These considerations rule out the Erythraian shrine in this place.

There remains the Hysiatan, which, from the position of Hysiai and its territory, would necessarily in some sense lie between the Demetria of Plataia west, and that of Erythrai east. Such a position obviously suits the general requirements of the story, as well as the provisional identifications of the Argiopion and the river Moloeis above. The question remains of the exact site of the Hysiatan Demetria. Was it actually in the town of Hysiai, i.e. high up on the ὕπωρην, in front of the middle pass, on the road from Plataia to Athens, where it entered the mountain; or was it lower down the slopes, in Hysiatan territory?

Plutarch, Arist. 11, describes it as τῶν Ὑσιῶν πλησίον, ὑπὸ τὸν Κιθαῖρωνα. It was near Hysiai, therefore, not inside Hysiai; it was 'close under Kithairon'—a description which might be applied to any spot south of Asopos, especially by a visitor coming from the north (Thebes or Chaironeia). It is not probable that there were two temples of Eleusinian Demeter in the Hysiatia. If then, as Dr. Grundy has ingeniously suggested (Topography, p. 33; Persian War, pp. 495 f.), the modern church of St. Demetria marks the site of an ancient temple of Demeter, that would be the Hysiatan Demetria, outside and to the north below the city.

But this identification will not suit at all either Plutarch or Herodotus. In Plutarch the Demetria marks the position near Hysiai to which the Athenians advanced in the first instance, a position high up on the ὕπωρην and

Ἐλευσινίης ἱρὸν ἦσται. ἀνέμενε δὲ τοῦδε εἵνεκα, ἵνα ἦν μὴ
 10 ἀπολείπη τὸν χώρον ἐν τῷ ἐτετάχατο ὁ Ἀμομφάρετός τε καὶ ὁ λόχος, ἀλλ' αὐτοῦ μένωσι, βοηθείῃ ὀπίσω παρ' ἐκείνους.
 καὶ οἱ τε ἀμφὶ τὸν Ἀμομφάρετον παρεγίνοντό σφι καὶ ἡ

9 ἵστα R: ἵσται S (Gaisf.): ἴζαι V: ἐστι conl. Krueger || εἵνεκεν B
 10 ἀπολείπη: αPMarc.: ἀπολίπη ceteri, van H. || ὧι αCMarc. 11
 βοηθεί Marc. 12 παρεγίνοντό z nowhere near the church of St. Demetron. In Hdt. the Demetron here marks the position to which the Spartans retreated, 10 stades back, from Gargaphia: that might very well coincide with the original position of the Athenians on the extreme left of the Greek position, which was now become the extreme right of the position; but it is nowhere near the church of St. Demetron. Thus, if Dr. Grundy is right, Plutarch and Hdt. are wrong in relation to the Demetron.

Mr. W. Irving Hunt, op. c. p. 276, places the Plataian Demetron "on high ground south-east of Plataia at a point where are now the foundations of a large Byzantine church." He further defines the position as "about six minutes' walk east of the spring Vergoutiani." This position might do for the Plataian Demetron, but Plutarch professes to be dealing with the Hysiatan; Mr. Hunt has not marked the difference. It appears to me that Dr. Grundy has really hit upon the position of the Hysiatan Eleusinion; but that it was the Plataian Eleusinion (if Mr. Hunt is right in regard to its site), of which Plutarch ought to have spoken in that passage, and Hdt. in this. It is quite obvious that if the church of St. Demetron marks the site of the Hysiatan Demetron, that site, and that edifice, can have nothing to say to the former position of the Athenians (Plutarch) nor to the latter position of the Lakedaemonians (Hdt.). The wonder recorded by Hdt., c. 62 below, if occurring in the Persian rout, however, might suit with the site of the church. The cause of all the confusion is Hdt.'s ignorance that there could be more than one Demetron in question. By a somewhat unusual infelicity Hdt. here applies ἱδρυμένον to the army (στῖφος) and uses the term ἦσται of the temple (ἱρὸν). ἡμένον, or κατημένον of the army, ἱδρυσται of the temple, would have been more natural. Buttmann (ap. Baehr) even said that ἦσται for ἱδρυσται was inadmissible: cp. c. 51 supra (περισχίζεται βένουσα). (If ἱδρυμένον was to be used of the man, and ἡμένον of the temple, Amompharetos, rather than Pausanias, would seem to be the proper man. As far as the word goes it might here agree, not with τό (sc. τὸ ἄλλο στῖφος) but with τὸν Ἀμομφάρετον λόχον, in which case it would be easier to identify the Demetron with the church of Demetron. But the argument demands that Pausanias' position should be the one described; the position of Amompharetos is ex hypothesi near Gargaphia, and this would be a curiously late point at which to be describing it; cp. c. 53 supra.)

9. ἀνέμενε δὲ τοῦδε εἵνεκα: the fact that he waited for Amompharetos, or at any rate halted and was afterwards joined by Amompharetos, is much more likely to be true (in accordance with a constant canon of Herodotean criticism) than the reason given for the fact, the motivation. The statement here made that, if only Amompharetos had carried his obstinate insubordination a little further, Pausanias would have yielded and returned to support him, is very little short of absurd. The obvious hypothesis is that Amompharetos, like every other good Spartan, was strictly obeying orders; that his λόχος was the last to move because such was his commander's will; that it was really told off to cover the movement backwards. The words ἐν τῷ ἐτετάχατο ὁ Ἀμ. τε καὶ ὁ λόχος unconsciously support that view, but Hdt. unfortunately does not further define this χώρος (unless ἱδρυμένον above be taken to agree with λόχον).

12. οἱ τε ἀμφὶ . . . καὶ ἡ ἵππος: a parataxis. Amompharetos and his men joined them just as the whole Persian cavalry attacked them. This statement is somewhat puzzling. The Spartans have retired from their previous position 10 stades backwards, to avoid the cavalry (φοβέμενοι τὴν ἵππον) and on to ἵππος ἢ τῶν βαρβάρων προσέκειτο πᾶσα. οἱ γὰρ ἱππῶται ἐποίουν οἶον καὶ ἐώθεσαν ποιεῖν αἰεὶ, ἰδόντες δὲ τὸν χῶρον κεινὸν ἐν τῷ ἐτετάχατο οἱ Ἕλληνες τῇσι προτέρησι ἡμέρησι, 15 ἤλαννον τοὺς ἵππους αἰεὶ τὸ πρόσω καὶ ἄμα καταλαβόντες προσεκέατό σφι.

Μαρδόνιος δὲ ὡς ἐπύθετο τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἀποικομένους ὑπὸ 58 νύκτα εἰδὲ τε τὸν χῶρον ἔρημον, καλέσας τὸν Ληρισαῖον Θώρηκα καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφεοὺς αὐτοῦ Εὐρύπυλον καὶ Θρασύδηιον ἔλεγε "ὦ παῖδες Ἀλεύεω, ἔτι τί λέξετε τάδε ὀρώντες ἔρημα; ὑμεῖς γὰρ οἱ πλησιόχωροι ἐλέγετε Λακεδαιμονίους οὐ φεύγειν 5

14 ἐώθεσαν S || αἰεὶ α, Holder || δὲ del. Krueger 15 ἐκείνον
Marc. z || ψ CPMarc. z 16 αἰεὶ α, Holder 58. 2 τε om. B || ληρισαῖον B 3 θρασύδειον B: θρασύδηιον Marc.: θρασύδιον z 4
ἀλεύετω B || ἔτι τι Krueger: τί ἐτι van H.: τί om. CMarc. || ὀρόντες
Marc. z, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ὀρέωντες C || ἐρήμα CPMarc. z 5 λέγετε CPz

higher ground. How can the whole cavalry be attacking them? The vagueness of the statement is further exhibited by what immediately follows. Hdt. says that in thus attacking them the cavalry was only doing what it had been doing all along on the previous days. In c. 40 supra a similar generalization occurs; but, if we look for details in confirmation, none is forthcoming. On the contrary, it appears that for upwards of a week the Greeks had enjoyed immunity from the cavalry (c. 39 supra). The vague generalities in c. 40 and here look like a priori or inferential saving clauses, while in fact the Greeks in Position I<sup>a</sup> had enjoyed immunity from the cavalry, and it was very much that position which the Spartans were now attempting to regain.

15. κεινόν: vacant, vacated.

58. 1. ἀποικομένους, 'to be gone away,' to have departed; this fact he learnt by report, from his scouts, etc. (ἐπύθετο), and then satisfied himself by his own eyes (εἶδε) that the position previously occupied by the Greeks had been vacated. ἔρημον = κεινόν previous c. That Mardonios then proceeded to waste time in summoning (καλέσας) the Aleudai to his side, in order to crow over them and Artabazos, is a story of another colour.

ὑπὸ νύκτα, 'under cover of night,' is not usually retrospective, cp. 8. 71, c. 51 supra; c. 60 infra makes the case here plain.

2. τὸν Ληρισαῖον Θώρηκα. Thorax of Larisa has appeared, c. 1 supra, but without his brothers. He was, doubtless, the most important of the three.

3. Εὐρύπυλον καὶ Θρασύδηιον. Eurypylos is an eminently heroic and Homeric name, little used, apparently, in historic times, Il. 2. 677 (of Kos); ib. 736, cp. Plato, Rep. 405n, 408a (of Thessaly); Od. 11. 520 (of Mysia), etc. Of this particular one nothing more is narrated. Thrasydaios, on the contrary, is a name not found in legend or saga, but associated with several historic characters: (1) The Theban, in whose honour Pindar composed the obscure Epinikion, Pyth. 11 (the theories which date this ode to Pyth. 28=478 B.C. overlook the improbability of the appearance of a Theban at that celebration). (2) The son and successor of Theron of Akragas, cp. 7. 165 f., Diodor. 11. 48. 6, 53. 1. These two would both have been contemporaries of the Thessalian. (3) Xenoph. Hell. 3. 2. 27 ff. mentions an Eleian προστάτης τοῦ δήμου of the name (anno 400 B.C.). Of the Thessalian in the text nothing more is known.

4. παῖδες Ἀλεύεω: cp. 7. 130 = Ἀλεῖναι 7. 6, 172. The name Aleuas is very rare in the historic period, but is found in two Boiotian inscrip., C.I.G. 1564, 1580, referring to an Orchomenian.

5. πλησιόχωροι: that the speaker should regard the Thessalians and Spartans as 'neighbours' would suggest to a Greek hearer, or reader, the large scale upon which the Persian was wont to think and operate; cp. 3. 89. No

ἐκ μάχης, ἀλλὰ ἄνδρας εἶναι τὰ πολέμια πρῶτους· τοὺς πρότερόν τε μετισταμένους ἐκ τῆς τάξης εἶδετε, νῦν τε ὑπὸ τὴν παροιχομένην νύκτα καὶ οἱ πάντες ὁρῶμεν διαδράντας· διέδεξάν τε, ἐπεὶ σφεας ἔδεε πρὸς τοὺς ἀψευδέως ἀρίστους 10 ἀνθρώπων μάχῃ διακριθῆναι, ὅτι οὐδένας ἄρα ἔόντες ἐν οὐδαμοῖσι ἐοῦσι Ἑλλήσι . . ἐναπεδεικνύατο. καὶ ὑμῖν μὲν ἐοῦσι Περσέων ἀπείροισι πολλὴ ἐκ γε ἐμεῦ ἐγένετο συγγνώμη,

6 ἀλλ' ὅΡ

διαδράντες C

12 γε: τε B

8 ὁρῶμεν Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ὁρέωμεν CMarc. ||

11 Ἑλλήσι del. Naber, Holder: lacunam ind. Stein<sup>2</sup> statement in regard to Spartan heroism has been recorded of the Aleanads; Mardonios ought to have addressed his remarks to Demaratos (cp. 7. 102, 209, 234); that he does not do so is some evidence that the Spartan exile was not with him. To believe that Mardonios represented the Spartan retirement as a φυγή would at once lower our opinion of him as a general.

6. τὰ πολέμια: the accusative 'of reference'; cp. Index.

πρῶτους: not in time but in rank, quality, etc. Cp. c. 53 supra.

7. μετισταμένους: the story in cc. 46, 47 supra. That movement is nowhere said to have been fully carried out. It was not in fact what Hdt. and his sources supposed; cp. notes ad ll.

8. οἱ πάντες ὁρῶμεν, 'we all see'; there is a contrast with εἶδτε just above; Mardonios himself had not perceived the μετάταξις, it had been reported to him, not indeed by the Aleanadai (as might seem to be here implied) but by the Boiotians; cp. c. 47 supra. καὶ διαδράντας, 'that they have scattered and fled'; cp. 8. 60.

9. διέδεξαν: cp. 7. 172; the third τε is a climax.

ἔδεε, without any suggestion of the supernatural; cp. 7. 9, 144; contr. 8. 53, and c. 109 infra.

10. ἀνθρώπων: perhaps without prejudice.

μάχῃ διακριθῆναι: cp. 7. 206. Differently, 7. 219, 8. 18.

οὐδένας ἄρα ἔόντες ἐν οὐδαμοῖσι ἐοῦσι Ἑλλήσι . . ἐναπεδεικνύατο: durius sane dictum ab Herodoto, Baehr; see below. οὐδένας as a normal plural 3. 26 οὐδένας ἄλλοι οὐδὲν ἔχονσι εἰπεῖν. For the obvious meaning here Blakesley compares Soph. At. 1135 τοὺς μηδένas.

It is even frequent in Euripides, Androm. 700, Ion 594, Iph. Aut. 371 βαρβάρους τοὺς οὐδένας. The neuter τι μηδέν with even more effect for less force, 8. 106.

ἄρα suggests surprise, here arising from an expectation at last overcome. Cp. Index.

11. οὐδαμοῖσι: after οὐδένας perhaps οὐδέσι might have been expected, but οὐδαμοῖσι is the more usual pl. The chief difficulty in the passage lurks in ἐναπεδεικνύσθαι, to which three different renderings have been given: (a) ostentari, 'to show off,' 'to cut a fine figure,' etc., merely because the Greeks at large, like themselves, were nobodies. Portus (b) supplying ἔργα, ἀπεράς, or τι, cp. c. 67 infra; so Stein. If merely τι is supplied (and the τι can be supplied from the immediate context below), this works out very nearly as = (a); if ἔργα, it makes too much of a concession: in either case the omission of the object is obscure. (c) Taking the verb as meaning simply monstrare, demonstrare; so Baehr: commonstrarunt illi satis uel inter eos, qui nihili sunt, Graeca, nullo loco esse censendos. This sentiment, as one degree less insulting to his Greek allies, whom Mardonios is addressing, might be preferable, but there is nothing in the Greek corresponding to vel which is essential to the rendering. On the whole, then, (a) seems preferable.

12. ἐοῦσι Περσέων ἀπείροισι: nearly as absurd and refutable, in application to the Thessalians, as to the Spartans themselves, c. 46 supra, each story ignoring any previous fighting by land. The Thessalians, indeed, had not fought against the Persians, but they had seen the Persians fight—with the Spartans.

ἐπαινεόντων τούτους τοῖσί τι καὶ συνηδέατε· Ἄρταβάζου δὲ θῶμα καὶ μᾶλλον ἐποιεύμην τὸ καὶ καταρρωδῆσαι Λακεδαιμονίους καταρρωδῆσαντά τε ἀποδέξασθαι γνώμην δειλοτάτην, 15 ὥς χρεὼν εἴη ἀναζεύξαντας τὸ στρατόπεδον ἰέναι ἐς τὸ Θηβαίων ἄστν πολιορκησομένους· τὴν ἔτι πρὸς ἐμεῦ βασιλεὺς πεύσεται. καὶ τούτων μὲν ἐτέρωθι ἔσται λόγος· νῦν δὲ ἐκείνοισι ταῦτα ποιεῦσι οὐκ ἐπιτρεπτέα ἐστί, ἀλλὰ διωκτέοι εἰσὶ ἐς ὃ καταλαμφθέντες δώσουσι ἡμῖν τῶν δὴ ἐποίησαν Πέρσας πάντων 20 δίκας." ταῦτα εἶπας ἤγε τοὺς Πέρσας δρόμῳ διαβάοντας τὸν 59

13 συνηδέατε A<sup>2</sup>P ante corr.: συνηδέαται αCPcorr.: συνηδέαται Bz: συνηδέατε Marc.: συνηδέετε Schaefer: συνηδέετε van H. (συνήδείτε typ. errore) 14 θῶμα αCMarc., Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: θῶμα B: θῶμα || καὶ post. loc. om. B, van H. || καταρρωδῆσαι P 15 καταρρωδῆσαντά P || τε: δὲ Krueger 16 χρεὼν αB, Stein, Holder: χρεὼν 18 τουτέων z 20 ἐποιούσαντο z 59. 1 τὸν om. z

13. ἐπαινεόντων τούτους: the sequence after ἡμῖν is not strictly correct; cp. c. 51 supra, 8. 69. The occasion is not recorded; cp. l. 5 above. τοῖσί τι καὶ συνηδέατε, sc. 'just among yourselves.' The reference is not to Thermopylai, cp. l. 20.

Ἄρταβάζου δέ: the genitive may be explained as after τὸ καταρρωδῆσαι, θῶμα being in apposition to the subst. infin.; but in any case the accus. καταρρωδῆσαντα comes in as a grammatical non sequitur. The full report of the opinion of Artabazos, already given c. 41 supra, makes its repetition here in extenso the more remarkable, especially as there is here a direct reference back (ἐποιεύμην imperf.) to that passage. πολιορκησομένους here is more explicit than the former report, and the substitution of ἄστν for πόλιν discredits the project all the more.

17. τὴν ἔτι πρὸς ἐμεῦ βασιλεὺς πεύσεται: the irony of this promise, or prediction, in the story is keen; what actually happened was that Artabazos reported to the king the folly and the fate of Mardonios. The same tone is maintained in the next sentence: καὶ τούτων μὲν ἐτέρωθι ἔσται λόγος, i.e. of all that, account shall be taken when I go home. λόγος, ratio rather than oratio.

There is a slight logical confusion in the use of μὲν καὶ δέ in this connexion. The contrast is between ἐτέρωθι and νῦν, not between τούτων and νῦν or even ἐκείνοισι. If that natural antithesis had been observed, it would have been more logical to contrast νῦν μὲν with ἐτέρωθι δέ . . .

19. ποιεῦσι is strictly present, or imperf., 'engaged in performing . . .'

ἐπιτρεπτέα does not agree with ταῦτα (acc.), and the singular might be clearer. Is the plural used to emphasize the divisions of the Hellenes (διαδράντας supra)?

καταλαμφθέντες: the normal Herodotean form; cp. 5. 21.

20. δώσουσι . . . δίκας is hardly consistent with their having done nothing! And δέ emphasizes their malefactions! The reference is certainly not to 7. 134 ff. but rather to Thermopylai, and ironically to the story 8. 114, and is thus altogether inconsistent with the contempt for the Spartans expressed just above.

59. 1. ἤγε τοὺς Πέρσας. Here, if anywhere, the battle begins; but the cavalry have, according to c. 57 supra, already opened the ball. Mardonios himself is mounted, cp. c. 63 infra, but he is evidently leading infantry. 'Persians' here used specifically, as distinguished from the rest of the barbarians; cp. just below, and cc. 31, 47 supra.

δρόμῳ, 'at the double'; cp. c. 57 supra βάδην, and especially 6. 112.

διαβάοντας τὸν Ἀσωπὸν, 'after they (had) crossed the Asopos'—words which show clearly (if anything in a narrative by Hdt. can be really conclusive), that the Persians had been beyond the Asopos, the river between them and the Greeks, so far as the

Ἄσσωπὸν κατὰ στίβον τῶν Ἑλλήνων ὡς δὴ ἀποδιδρυσκόντων, ἐπεὶχέ τε ἐπὶ Λακεδαιμονίους τε καὶ Τεγεήτας μούρους. Ἀθηναίους γὰρ τραπομένους ἐς τὸ πεδῖον ὑπὸ τῶν ὄχθων οὐ

2 τῶν: τὸν? Kallenberg

main positions, and the στρατόπεδα, the armies at rest, were concerned.

How the Persians got across the Asopos Hdt. does not specify; it cannot have been all boarded over; there may have been some bridges, or planks, in use; but for all that appears they scrambled across as best they could. The passage of the Asopos, which they had steadily declined, so long as the Greeks were in battle-array on the other side, is now undertaken apparently under the idea that the Greeks are in full retreat, perhaps for their several homes; the extreme left wing is invisible to Mardonios. He may even believe that it has made good its escape; at least he may safely leave it to the tender mercies of the Thebans and his own right. He sights easily enough the glint of Greek weapons at the Heraion, and up beyond, in the gap of the road to Megara, in the gap of the road to Athens; while in the nearer foreground are the Spartans, with their commander, apparently in full retreat, and isolated from the other Greek divisions. His cavalry is riding unopposed up the road to Erythrai, as it has been free to do ever since the Greek deployed from that position.

2. κατὰ στίβον: cp. 4. 122, 140, 5. 102. Not to be taken here as implying that the Lakedaimonians were invisible to their pursuers; the whole context implies the reverse.

ὡς δὴ ἀποδιδρυσκόντων: such was the idea in the minds of the Persians, but it has no justification in fact.

The motivation is here to be accepted not so much on the ground that Greeks in the Persian ranks, or Persian sources themselves, might afterwards have reported Mardonios' motives to that effect; but rather on the ground that to obtain a satisfactory theory of the battle, we must suppose that the object, or a part of the object of the Greeks, in retiring, was to entice Mardonios across the river, in effecting which object the Greek commanders will have given their movement as much as possible the appearance of a 'flight.'

3. ἐπεὶχέ τε: cp. διέδεξαν τε c. 58.

The verb projected with this copula appears to be emphatic. ἐπείχε is variously taken (a) as psychical, animus attendit, sese direxit, cp. 6. 96, Baehr; (b) as physical, sc. τοῦς Πέρσας, i.e. duxit Stein; (c) intrans. (Sitzler), which is really=Baehr's sese direxit. In any case Mardonios with his Persians, followed by the whole mass of the barbarian infantry, made after the Greek right wing, which was apparently in complete isolation.

Ἀθηναίους γάρ: the particle explains the μούρους just before. The movement of the Athenians appears here less fully developed than in c. 56 supra (τραπομένους as against τραφέντες . . . ἐς τὸ πεδῖον); but the last three words there may rather be taken with the verb ἦσαν repeated, or understood from the context. We are there, however, on the Greek side, here with the Persians; and it by no means follows that the action of the Persians, as here recorded, was not antecedent to the position above reached in the description of the manoeuvres of the Greeks.

4. ὑπὸ τῶν ὄχθων οὐ κατῴρα: he could not see the Athenians on their way down on to the plain by reason of the ridges (ὄχθοι). There is the same ambiguity here as in c. 56 supra. Are the ὄχθοι in each case the same? Are not the ὄχθοι here the ridges close to the river (almost in fact ὄχθαι)? To adduce (with Ross and Baehr) this statement, perhaps in itself true enough, as evidence that Hdt. had with his own eyes inspected the battle-field, is a fine instance of half-methods. The statement is a clear example of the dialectical production or evolution of tradition. Why did not Mardonios attend to the Athenians? Because he could not see them. Why could he not see them? By reason of the ὄχθοι—and so forth. The statement may, of course, have come to Hdt. ready made in his source. Though perhaps true, it is not as adequate explanation of the Persian general's action, for he was bound to acquaint himself at once with the proceedings of the Greek left wing; and what were the Alenadaï about to receive κατόρα. Πέρσας δὲ ὀρώντες ὀρμημένους διώκειν τοὺς "Ελληνας 5

οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν βαρβαρικῶν τελέων ἄρχοντες αὐτίκα πάντες ῥῆιραν τὰ σημήια, καὶ ἐδίωκον ὡς ποδῶν ἕκαστοι εἶχον, οὔτε κόσμῳ οὐδενὶ κοσμηθέντες οὔτε τάξι. καὶ οὗτοι μὲν βοῇ 60
τε καὶ ὁμίλῳ ἐπήσαν ὡς ἀναρπασόμενοι τοὺς "Ελληνας.
Παυσανίης δέ, ὡς προσέκειτο ἡ ἵππος, πέμψας πρὸς τοὺς

5 ὀρέοντες Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. || ὀρμημένους α: ὠρμημένους 6 ἅπαντες B
(sic Holder: sed αὐτίκα πάντες om. S) 7 ῥῆιραν Stein, van H.: ῥῆιραν α: ῥῆιραν reliqui, Holder || ἕκαστος BMarc. z, Holder, van H. || ἵκον B 8
τάξει B 60. 2 ἐπήσαν BMarc. || ἀρπασόμενοι RS(V)

his rebuke so meekly in c. 58 supra, or where were the Thebans, the Macedonians? had he issued no orders to his own right wing?

5. ὀρμημένους διώκειν, 'in full pursuit of.' διώκειν is treated as a 'telic' infinitive; but the 'purpose' is really fully contained, or supplied by the verb ὀρμᾶσθαι as in 7. 4 ὀρμᾶτο στρατεύεσθαι, or c. 61 infra ὀρμᾶτο βοηθεῖν, and the infinitive might be regarded not as having in itself telic, i.e. purposive force, but as being an ordinary limiting or definitive idea; in other words, as belonging not to the 'subjective' but to the 'objective' order. This view may equally prevail, even if ὀρμημένους be taken in a physical sense, of the actual motion.

6. οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν βαρβαρικῶν τελέων ἄρχοντες. If the army of Mardonios had really numbered 300,000 non-Hellenes, the officers here designated would have been the thirty myriarchs named in the army-list in 7. 61 ff., with allowance for deaths, promotions, etc. In fact they are the myriarchs of the Medes, Bactrians, Indians, Sakai, the four remaining τέλη which, with his own 'Persians,' were comprised in the corps d'armée; cp. c. 31 supra. The whole of the other corps d'armée under Artabazos is already on its way to Thrace! cp. c. 66 infra.

7. ῥῆιραν τὰ σημήια, 'raised the signals' (for battle, pursuit, or what not). In a Roman army the first sign of battle was the scarlet flag raised at headquarters; the trumpet-sound followed. Cp. Caesar, B.G. 2. 20. 1. Greek armies had apparently a very similar procedure; cp. Thuc. 1. 49, 63, 4. 42, 111, 7. 34, 8. 95 (Baehr). Something of the kind must have been in vogue in all armies, with any organization to speak of; cp. 7. 128 (on the fleet).

Xenophon, Kyrop. 8. 5. 13, may be describing rather Greek than Persian organization, but the differences in this respect were probably not great.

ὡς ποδῶν ἕκαστοι εἶχον: ποδῶν εἶχειν, 'to be off for feet,' i.e. to be furnished with; εἶχειν τινος εὖ, κακῶς, or absolutely; cp. 8. 107, and almost this very phrase 6. 116. ἕκαστοι, i.e. each set, Medes, Bactrians, Indians, Sakai—it was a race among them to overtake the Greeks.

οὔτε κόσμῳ . . οὔτε τάξι: κόσμος is the general expression or the whole results of νοῦς: τάξι is the particular position in the battle-array; cp. 8. 86. The statement here of the chaos and the disorder of the Persian pursuit is perhaps exaggerated: the crossing of the river and river-banks would tend to bring about a certain amount of confusion.

60. 1. βοῇ τε καὶ ὁμίλῳ: cum clamore ac tumultu, Baehr. βοή is the 'battle-cry.' ὁμίλος in Homer is the 'ruck' as compared with the leaders. In Thuc. 4. 125. 2 τὸν ψιλὸν ὁμίλον as compared with τοὺς ὀπλίτας, cp. 4. 112. 3. But Thucydides (e.g. 2. 65. 4 contemptuously), Hdt. 5. 23, and 3. 81 (contemptuously) use it without reference to fighting (cp. 1. 88); and so too Homer, etc.

2. ἀναρπασόμενοι: cp. 8. 78.

3. Παυσανίης δέ. The narrative, the scene, changes to the Greek side; the time, or at least the situation, also goes back to a point reached, or anticipated, in c. 57 supra ad f., ὡς προσέκειτο ἡ ἵππος. This point was there put early in the morning. If the Persian cavalry was really attacking the Lakedaimonians in any position accessible to cavalry, Pausanias and his men were likely to be having a bad time; but the Spartans

Ἀθηναίους ἱππέα λέγει τάδε. “ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, ἀγῶνος
5 μεγίστου προκειμένου ἐλευθέρην εἶναι ἢ δεδουλωμένην τὴν
Ἑλλάδα, προεδόμεθα ὑπὸ τῶν συμμάχων ἡμεῖς τε οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι καὶ ὑμεῖς οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι ὑπὸ τὴν παροιχομένην νύκτα διαδράντων. νῦν ὧν δέδοκται τὸ ἐνθεῦτεν τόδε ποιητέον ἡμῖν, ἀμυνομένους [γὰρ] τῇ δυνάμεθα ἄριστα περιστέλλειν

4 ἱππέα: ἄνδρα Marc. 5 ἐλευθέρην id. 6, 7 οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι et οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι abesse malit van H. 8 δέδοκται (palam est) Cobet, van H. || τοενθεῦτεν Pz || τόδε Stein<sup>3</sup>: τὸ α etc. Stein<sup>1 2</sup>: om. B, Holder, van H. 9 ἡμῖν B<sup>2</sup>corr. z: ὑμῖν || γὰρ secl. Stein<sup>3</sup>

were now 10 stades up the ὑπωρή, above the Moloeis, on the Argiopion: how could the cavalry come by them? Is the cavalry attack on the Lakedaimonians in this place anything more than a transfer of the sufferings of the previous day, c. 49 supra? If more, did any Lochos suffer except perhaps that of Amompharetos? Was not the bulk of the Persian cavalry engaged elsewhere?

4. ἱππέα. It is doubtful, at best, whether the Spartans had any mounted men or aides-de-camp; he is perhaps only the double of the ἱππεύς in c. 54 supra. This man might have been one of τῶν καλουμένων ἱππέων, cp. 8. 124, but he would have had a good deal of ground to cover a-foot, if he had really been despatched in the circumstances here supposed.

ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι. Is this the proper formula from Pausanias to Aristeides, or has the story-teller (or source) the fear of the Demos before his eyes? Cp. c. 45 supra. This is not the only or the greatest improbability in the message.

ἀγῶνος μεγίστου προκειμένου. Pausanias knows that the supreme hour is come.

5. ἡ δεδουλωμένην (the permanent state, rather than the single act?) seems to add the less likely alternative; cp. 7. 104 ἐπικρατεῖν ἢ ἀπόλλυσθαι. A perfectly open question has co-ordinate ἡ . . ἡ, cp. 7. 11.

6. προεδόμεθα . . διαδράντων: Pausanias (a) wastes time by telling the Athenians what they know only too well already—if the story in c. 55 supra (cc. 52–57) had been true, as there related; (b) repeats the very words of Mardonios above, addressed to the Aleuadai, ὑπὸ τὴν παροιχομένην νύκτα (καὶ οἱ πάντες ὁρώμεν) διαδράντας. There is, however, some virtue in the word διαδράντων here; for it supports the hypothesis that the Greek centre had not all retired on precisely the same point, but that at this moment the Greek forces are at four distinct positions: the Lakedaimonians on the Argiopion, the right centre at the Island, or thereabouts, the left centre at the Heraion, and the Athenians apparently ‘on the plain.’

8. νῦν ὧν comes to the point; cp. c. 48 supra.

δέδοκται perhaps only means ‘it is perfectly clear,’ without reference to any antecedent agreement, or formal resolution; yet none of the passages quoted by Stein, in support of a simple constat, is quite convincing; 4. 68 δέδοκται τοῖσι πρώτοις τῶν μαντιῶν αὐτοῖσι ἀπόλλυσθαι points to law or enactment, 6. 109 δέδοκται τὰ πείσονταί παραδεδομένοις to a decree or resolution, 8. 110 πρότερον δεδομένος εἶναι σόφος is perhaps merely anachronistic, cp. 8. 124; c. 87 ἔπειτα δέδοκται τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι is a decision, an actual resolution taken. Cp. also c. 45 supra. Even in this case there seems no adequate reason for weakening the force of the term and the tense, c. 55 supra. Pausanias has actually summoned the Athenians to his side: that arrangement was probably part of the ἀγῶμα imperfectly recorded c. 51 supra βουλευμένοις δὲ τοῖσι στρατηγοῖσι ἔδοξε κτλ. The eventuality of the Lakedaimonians and the Athenians finding themselves isolated by the retirement of the centre had been foreseen and provided for; dimly and unconsciously this fact is here involved in the formula. The γὰρ in the next sentence is superfluous.

9. περιστέλλειν: 2. 90 περιστρίβεται ὡς κάλλιστα θάψαι (αὐτόν), cp. 6. 30, passages exhibiting a more primary use of the verb than the present one, ἀλλήλους. εἰ μὲν νυν ἐς ὑμέας ὄρμησε ἀρχὴν ἢ ἵππος, χρῆν 10

δὴ ἡμέας τε καὶ τοὺς μετ' ἡμέων τὴν Ἑλλάδα οὐ προδιδόντας Τεγεάτας βοηθεῖν ὑμῖν· νῦν δέ, ἐς ἡμέας γὰρ ἅπαντα κεχώρηκε, δίκαιοι ἐστὲ ὑμεῖς πρὸς τὴν πιεζομένην μάλιστα τῶν μοιρέων ἀμυνέοντες ἵεναι. εἰ δ' ἄρα αὐτοὺς ὑμέας καταλελάβηκε ἀδύνατόν τι βοηθεῖν, ὑμεῖς δ' ἡμῖν τοὺς τοξότας 15

10 ἡμέας Marc. || ὄρμησε (CP), Stein<sup>1</sup> || χρῆν AB 11 μετ' ἡμέας z
15 βοθεῖν van H. || τοὺς <γε> Naber, van H.

especially with accus. of the person. With neuter or inanimate objects it is common: τοὺς νόμους 2. 147, cp. τὸν νόμον 3. 31, τὸ τοιοῦτο περιστέλλειν 3. 82, πόλισμα 1. 98. Theokritos 15. 75 ἀμμε περιστέλλων (ἐν καλῷ εἰς) seems to be the nearest parallel to the present case.

10. εἰ μὲν νυν . . ἢ ἵππος. This argument, or appeal, admits that the Athenians, though apparently 'on the plain,' were not attacked by the cavalry—while the Lakedaimonians, who were on the ὑπωρεή, φοβεύμενοι τὴν ἵππον c. 56, were being attacked, ex hypothesi, by the cavalry. This hypothesis seems absurd. It is no use saying that Pausanias is merely speaking of the 'Persian' cavalry; he makes no distinction, and cavalry is cavalry. What was the Theban, the Thessalian, the Makedonian cavalry about all this time, even if there were no Persians, Medes, Baktrians, Indians, or Scythians on 'the plain'? Either the Athenians were in a position where they could not be attacked by cavalry, or the cavalry on the right wing had arranged not to attack them.

ὄρμησε: the active, intransitive, of actual or physical motion.

The exception made in favour of the Tegeatai is probably more Attic than Laconic, cp. c. 26. All the rest of the Greeks are 'traitors,' have betrayed the cause of Hellas (τὴν Ἑλλάδα, sc. γῆν, συμμαχίην). The Athenians recognize only themselves, the Spartans and Tegeatai, as having had any hand in this victory, and they depreciate the services even of the Spartans and Tegeatai as much as possible. Just here, they are on the defensive.

ἀρχὴν: cp. 8. 128.

χρῆν δῆ: far more emphatic is the apodosis without ἀν, denoting a duty unconditionally; cp. Madvig, § 118.

12. ἅπαντα κεχώρηκε: again an admission that the Athenians were free from cavalry assaults. (Strictly speaking, 'the whole cavalry' would include that of the medizing Greeks.)

13. δίκαιοι ἐστὲ: the personal and idiomatic construction; cp. c. 27 (Athenian speech).

τὴν πιεζομένην μάλιστα τῶν μοιρέων seems to suggest that the Lakedaimonians were, at this moment, the division of the Greek forces that was being most hard pressed. The plural genitive μοιρέων emphasizes the fact of this division, a tactical not an accidental result. The word μοῖρα, however, cannot be pressed as a technical term in the mouth of a Spartan; even if the word μόρα was already in use at Sparta (which is doubtful; cp. notes c. 53 supra), this story is not a Spartan story, and the word is of frequent occurrence in Hdt. For a parallel to the present case cp. 4. 120. With πίεζειν cp. 8. 142.

14. εἰ δ' ἄρα αὐτ. ὑμ. καταλελάβηκε ἀδύνατόν τι βοηθεῖν, 'if (as we hardly suppose) anything has occurred to you making it impossible to assist us.' ἀδύνατον τι idem valet ac ἀδυνασία τις, Schweighauser; so too Stein (who well cps. 1. 61, 6. 138 δεινόν τι = δέος; 7. 101 ἡδύ τι = ἡδονή). ἄρα, c. 58 supra.

15. ὑμεῖς δ': the resumed subject (virtually) with the δέ in apodosis, cp. 7. 51, etc.

τοὺς τοξότας ἀποπέψαντες χάριν θέσθε: a polite request, not to say command; the archers had not been sent yet: 'oblige us by the despatch of your Archers.' The Athenian corps of Archers has just been mentioned incidentally in c. 22, but not included in the army-list, or numbering of the forces, cp. notes to c. 29 supra; it was apparently 800 strong. The request for the loan of them ill sorts with the supposition that the Spartans had 40,000 φιλοὶ μάχιστοι, πᾶς τις παρηρηγμένος ὡς ἐς πόλεμον i.e.; it also implies or assumes that the Athenians themselves were not ἀποπέμψαντες χάριν θέσθε. συνοίδαμεν δὲ ὑμῖν ὑπὸ τὸν παρέοντα τόνδε πόλεμον εἶναι πολλὸν προθυμοτάτοις, ὥστε 61 καὶ ταῦτα ἐσακοῦναι." ταῦτα οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι ὡς ἐπύθοντο, ὁρμέατο βοηθεῖν καὶ τὰ μάλιστα ἐπαμύνειν· καὶ σφί ἤδη στείχουσι ἐπιτίθενται οἱ ἀντιταχθέντες Ἑλλήνων τῶν μετὰ βασιλέος γενομένων, ὥστε μηκέτι δύνασθαι βοηθῆσαι· τὸ γὰρ

 5 προσκείμενον σφέας ἐλύπεε. οὕτω δὲ μουνωθέντες Λακεδαι-μόνιοι καὶ Τεγεῆται, εἶντες σὺν ψιλοῖσι ἀριθμὸν οἱ μὲν πεντακισμύριοι Τεγεῆται δὲ τρισχίλιοι (οὔτοι γὰρ οὐδαμὰ

16 ὑμῶν χάριν Paris. 1634 || θέσθαι B (C cum e supersc.) || σίνιδμεν
 Mehler, Cobet, van H. || ὑμῖν χάριν Marc. 61. 2 ὁρμέατο α:
 ὁρμέατο || βοηθεῖν C: βωθεῖν van H. 3 στείχουσι αCR 4
 βασιλῆος z || ὥστε καὶ B 5 προσκείμενον Rz || προσκείμενόν σφέας
 (CP), Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H. 7 τρισχίλιοι van H.

in want of the Archers at this crisis, or should not have been. χάριν θέσθαι, cp. c. 107 infra.

16. συνοίδαμεν δὲ ὑμῖν κτλ. This interesting testimonial to the unparalleled zeal of Athens was hardly 'made in Sparta,' though it is put into the mouth of a Spartan. The phraseology again reproduces the speech of Mardonios: ἐπαινεῶντων τούτους τοῖσι τι καὶ συνηδέεσσι c. 58.

ὑπὸ τὸν π. τ. πόλεμον: cp. ὑπὸ τὴν παροχομένην νύκτα above.

17. ὥστε . . . ἐσακοῦναι, 'so as to give heed to this our petition,' i.e. οὕτω πολλὸν προθυμότεροι ἐστὲ ὥστε expressing a result, not an intention or purpose. For the present infinitive we might have expected the aorist infinitive, or (with a different sense) the future indicative! The construction preferred suggests perhaps a more continuous and immediate sequence (though not, of course, the actual fact, as present indicative might do; the sequence remains an ideal one). ἐσακοῦναι c. 9 supra; Baehr here supplies ἡμῖν, Sitzler ἡμῶν. The dat. pers. is expressed l. 214 (or might be taken elegantly as 'ethical'); the gen. is found, e.g., Soph. Αἰ. 789 τοῦδ' εἰσάκουε τὰνδρός.

61. 1. οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι: they act en masse as above addressed, ἄνδρες Ἀθ.

2. ὁρμέατο βοηθεῖν: cp. ὁρμημένους διώκειν c. 59. The plp. ὁρμέατο marks the depth, or intensity, of their emotion, or the instantaneous rapidity of their action. The position of ταῦτα is emphatic. τὰ μάλιστα, 8. 97. ἤδη στείχουσι: the

Athenians are actually on the way to the support of the Lakedaimonians, or to effect a juncture with them, but fail to carry out their intention, or this manoeuvre, in consequence of being attacked, or intercepted, by the mediating Greeks, or some of them. στείχουσι, cp. c. 56 supra.

3. οἱ ἀντιταχθέντες = οἱ ἀντιταταγμένοι c. 31 supra. The description of οἱ ἀντιταχθέντες as a part of (the) Greeks τῶν μετὰ βασιλέος γενομένων is rather curious at this point; in c. 31 they are described as τοῦ μετ' αὐτοῦ (i.e. Μαρδονίου) ἐόντας Ἑλλήνων.

4. τὸ προσκείμενον: collective for α. προσκείμενοι, cp. τὸ ἀσθενέστερον c. 31.

5. οὕτω δὲ, not of time so much as of causation. μουνωθέντες, 'without support': the Athenians could still fall back on Marathon, where, μούνοι Ἕλληες δὲ <προ>μαχήσαντες τῷ Πέρσῃ, they had defeated forty-six nations, c. 27 supra; whereas at Plataea there was but one, the Persian, opposed to the Spartans and Tegeans, c. 31 supra.

7. πεντακισμύριοι: i.e. 5000 Spartiate hoplites, 5000 Lakedaimonian hoplites, 35,000 helots in attendance on the Spartiates, 5000 in attendance on the Lakedaimonians, in accordance with the calculations in cc. 29, 30 supra. But the calculation for the ψιλοὶ at least has been disallowed; cp. notes to II. c.; and perhaps the total number of hoplites ought to be reduced by a quarter, if not by a half.

τρισχίλιοι: i.e. 1500 hoplites, 1500 ψιλοὶ, ibid. The reassertion of ἀπεσχίζοντο ἀπὸ Λακεδαιμονίων), ἐσφαγιάζοντο ὡς συμβαλέοντες Μαρδονίῳ καὶ τῇ στρατιῇ τῇ παρούσῃ. καὶ οὐ γάρ σφι ἐγένετο τὰ σφάγια χρηστά, ἐπιπτόν τε αὐτῶν ἐν 10 τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ πολλοὶ καὶ πολλῶ πλευνες ἐτρωματίζοντο· φράξαντες γὰρ τὰ γέρρα οἱ Πέρσαι ἀπίεσαν τῶν τοξευμάτων

10 ἐπιπτόν τε Schaefer, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἐπιπτον δὲ (δ' α: δι' C)
12 γέρα Apr.B || τῶν om. z

these numbers at this point is remarkable: no allowance is made for losses previous. There was little or no excuse for the request to the Athenians for the τοξέται. And what a host the right wing was, compared with the Athenians, here, or at Marathon!

8. ἀπεσχίζοντο, middle, 'separated from': if the Athenians owed anything to the Plataians, e.g. at Marathon, the Spartans owed still more to the Tegeatai at Plataia!

ἐσφαγιάζοντο ὡς συμβαλέοντες Μαρδονίῳ. This statement comes abruptly and with a shock: it proves that the Spartans were contemplating not merely battle, and self-defence, but the assumption of the offensive (συμβαλλεν=μάχης ἀρχεῖν, cp. cc. 41, 45 supra). It suggests that the retirement of the Lakedaimonians was purely a reculer pour mieux sauter; it shows that everything was proceeding en règle in the Spartan position, Teisamenos (cc. 33, 36 supra) inspecting the sacrifices in order to determine by their aid, and possibly on a sign from Euryanax, or Pausanias, the right moment for the charge. On the verb σφαγιάζεσθαι cp. c. 72 infra.

9. καὶ τῇ στρατιῇ τῇ παρούσῃ. These words refer presumably to the Persian forces with Mardonios, and imply that only a portion of his army was in action. (a) The corps of Artabazos was not there, c. 66 infra. (b) The Medes, Baktrian, Indian, Sakan corps were apparently coming on pêle-mêle, anyhow, c. 59 supra. (c) The medizing Greeks, so far as they were taking any part in the action at all (cp. c. 67 infra), were fully engaged with the Athenians (just above) and perhaps with other Greek corps. (d) The Persian cavalry, which has been reported above, c. 60, as engaged with the Lakedaimonians, but which now seems to be doing nothing against them, was perhaps engaged elsewhere (possibly against the Greek centre, or right centre, upon the Plataia-Athens road, cp. note to c. 52. 7). The army of Mardonios appears to be far less in being than the Greek forces themselves, each division of which, at least, is still a compact unit.

οὐ γάρ σφι ἐγένετο τὰ σφάγια χρηστά: sc. μάχης ἀρχουσι, συμβολὴν ποιουμένοις, or such like. χρηστά is perhaps superfluous; cp. c. 36 supra.

10. ἐπιπτόν, 'were being killed,' as distinguished from those who were merely wounded: they were all alike sitting on the ground (cp. c. 72 infra) and probably crouching under their shields (cp. c. 48 supra), as they had, no doubt, been doing the greater part of the previous day.

ἐν τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ here at least covers some time in duration; cp. c. 56 supra. The proportion of wounded to killed is unfortunately not stated: in an ordinary conflict between two heavy-armed Greek forces it was probably not great; but in the present case no doubt it was unusually large (πολλῶ πλευνες): only 91 Spartiates at most were killed, cp. c. 70 infra.

12. φράξαντες γὰρ τὰ γέρρα οἱ Πέρσαι. The use of the γέρρον (cp. 7. 61) proves that the Persians here in action are infantry. The exact nature of the contrivance here described is in some doubt. Rüstow supposed that each Persian fixed his long light wicker shield in the ground by means of a point below: such 'a wall of shields' would, of course, offer but a slight protection against the push of the hoplites. Others (cp. Baehr ad l., and esp. Stein ad l.) suppose that the Persians had devised a new plan against the Greeks: συνεφόρησαν τὰ γέρρα ἕκκος εἶναι σφίσι c. 99 infra. Yes, no doubt at Mykale, where the Persians were acting throughout on the defensive; but not here at Plataia (or rather, in front of Hysiai!) where they were advancing to the attack. In this case, at most, the individual

[πολλά] ἀφειδέως, οὕτω ὥστε πιεζομένων τῶν Σπαρτιητέων καὶ τῶν σφαγίων οὐ γινομένων ἀποβλέψαντα τὸν Πανσανίην πρὸς
 15 τὸ "Ηραιον τὸ Πλαταιέων ἐπικαλέσασθαι τὴν θεόν, χρήζοντα
 62 μηδαμῶς σφέας ψευσθῆναι τῆς ἐλπίδος. ταῦτα δ' ἔτι τούτου

13 πολλά 'interpolatum videtur' van H.: seclusi 15 ἡραίον R, Gaisford, Palm || χρήζοντα A: χρήζοντα CMarc.: χρήζοντα = 16
 σφέας =

soldier fixed his shield in the ground, in line with his neighbours, so that there was a front, a screen, a fence of shields (φράγμα 8. 52, φραγμός 7. 36, 142), hence φράζαντες here. (The helots may have been throwing stones.)

13. ἀφειδέως: cp. c. 39 supra; here in a somewhat different sense, largiter, copiose, cp. l. 163, 207 (Schweighaeuser).

πιεζομένων: cp. πιεζομένην c. 60 supra; the Spartans are acting still strictly on the defensive—they are, in fact, apparently doing nothing, still unable χρῆσασθαι τῇ χειρὶ (c. 72 infra).

14. τῶν σφαγίων οὐ γινομένων: Baehr says, χρηστῶν hic optime carebit oratio. Why, then, not everywhere? Cp. 7. 134, and cc. 41 supra, 62 infra. The sign they are awaiting is the sign in favour of their rising up and going for the Persians.

ἀποβλέψαντα τὸν Πανσανίην. Did Pausanias 'raise his eyes' (Rawlinson)? Did he look 'up' to the Heraion? Was he on lower ground? Or did he do more than 'look away to,' 'fix his eyes upon' the Heraion? The upward look is not essential to ἀποβλέπειν 7. 135 (cp. ἀναβλέπειν, though not as in 2. 111). For what reason did Pausanias fix his gaze on the Heraion? Ex hypothesi in order the better to invoke the goddess. What did he see? Could he see the Greek left, or left centre, in front of the temple, c. 52 supra? Could he see any signal? If there was such a signal given, what intimation did it convey? Or was he directing a signal to that quarter? (Cp. c. 69. 6 infra.)

15. τὸ "Ηραιον τὸ Πλαταιέων. Was it really the Heraion he looked to? Was there more than one Heraion in the neighbourhood? There were at least three temples of Eleusinian Demeter, though Hdt. only mentions one of them (cp. c. 57 supra); there was (so far as known) only one temple of Hera, though Hdt. so carefully specifies its Plataian possessive. It was doubtless the principal temple of the district; but strategically more may have been going on at the temple of Demeter, the Plataian one, at this moment, just as later at the Hysian; cp. c. 57 supra. (There was an Heraion at Koroneia, Pausan. 9. 34. 3, apparently the only other one in Boiotia.)

ἐπικαλέσασθαι, to invoke, summon to his aid; cp. 8. 64; here, probably, in audible tones.

16. μηδαμῶς σφέας ψευσθῆναι τῆς ἐλπίδος. This is the very εὐχή of Pausanias. What was the ἐλπίς, for the fulfilment of which he prayed? Was it merely victory as such? Or not rather such a 'sign' as would justify his assuming the offensive? In either case the commander is fully in favour of doing battle; for he is surely not hoping simply to make good his retreat! But the intimate connexion between the εὐχή and the ἐλπίς, between the εὐχή and the σφάλγια χρηστά, and the coincidence of these with the transition from 'passive resistance' to active and offensive tactics, compel us to believe that at this point the situation on the field of battle was such that gods and men, on the Greek side, believed the hour was come to deliver the attack, to charge home upon the foe, behind his fence of shields.

Perhaps two or three things had happened, e.g. (a) the Persian infantry had been drawn across the Asopos in disorder, and were now massed, at short range, behind the feeble barrier of the γέφυρα, like sheep for the slaughter, before the Argiopian, and the Plataian temple of Demeter; (b) the Persian cavalry was, perhaps, far off, or quite out of fighting range, and held in check, so far as the road in the rear was concerned, by the right centre in the Plataia-Athens Pass, or thereabouts; (c) from the left came word, or sign, that there was nothing to fear in that quarter; the Thebans alone, of the king's Greek allies, showing fight.

(Blakesley long ago (1854) boldly said that the hope of Pausanias was to bring ἐπικαλεομένου προεξαναστάντες πρότεροι οἱ Τεγεῆται ἐχώρεον ἐς τοὺς βαρβάρους, καὶ τοῖσι Λακεδαιμονίοισι αὐτίκα μετὰ τὴν εὐχὴν τὴν Πausανίῳ ἐγένετο θυομένοισι τὰ σφάγια χρηστά· ὥς δὲ χρόνῳ κοτὲ ἐγένετο, ἐχώρεον καὶ οὗτοι ἐπὶ τοὺς Πέρσας, καὶ οἱ Πέρσαι ἀντίοι τὰ τόξα μετέντες. ἐγένετο δὲ πρῶτον περὶ τὰ γέρρα μάχη. ὥς δὲ ταῦτα ἐπεπτώκεε, ἤδη ἐγένετο ἡ μάχη ἰσχυρὴ παρ' αὐτὸ τὸ Δημήτριον καὶ χρόνον ἐπὶ πολλόν, ἐς ὃ ἀπίκοντο ἐς ὠθισμόν . . . τὰ γὰρ

62. 2 ἐπικαλεομένου  $\pi$  || πρότερον  $\beta$  4 ἐγένετο  $\alpha$  (Holder), AB, Stein<sup>(1)</sup>, (van H.): minus recte, ut videtur 5 ἐγένετο Schaefer, Gaisford, Stein<sup>2</sup> (AB, Stein<sup>(2)</sup>): ἐγένετο Stein<sup>1</sup> (S ap. Gaisf.) 6 ἀντίοι ἐστάσαν? Stein 7 γέρα S 8 ἡ om.  $\beta$ , Holder 9 ἐσθ' AB || ὠθησμόν Cpr.P || lacunam indic. Stein<sup>3</sup>

the whole army of the enemy to action at close quarters: "the problem for Pausanias was to keep his troops perfectly in hand . . . until the onset of the enemy became so general that they would no longer have it in their power to avoid a pitched battle," i.e. upon Pausanias' own terms.)

62. 2. προεξαναστάντες πρότεροι οἱ Τεγεῆται. The source, or sources, followed by Hdt. for the battle itself are not too favourable to the Spartans, and apparently prefer to give the Tegeatai what credit is going; cp. c. 70 infra. It may, of course, be that the men of Tegea were first on the move; if so, it was by order of Pausanias, for some tactical reason of the moment; but it is more probable that Spartans and Tegeatai advanced together.

πρότεροι is redundant, cp. 4. 145. προεξαναστήναι, cp. 8. 59, indicates that they were sitting or lying down; cp. c. 72 infra.

ἐχώρεον ἐς τοὺς βαρβάρους: like the Athenians at Marathon; but the ὁρμήνεντο of 6. 112 quite surpasses this advance! The ἐχώρεον ἐς and the ἐχώρεον ἐπὶ just below mark a distinction without much difference. χρόνῳ κοτὲ marks, perhaps, the impatience of the waiters rather than the actual length of time; contr. χρ. ἐπὶ πολλόν just below.

6. οἱ Πέρσαι ἀντίοι τὰ τόξα μετέντες, 'the Persians put away their bows and stood their ground to meet them,' having recourse to their other weapons, short spears, daggers (7. 61). What exactly they did with the bows is not clear; perhaps they actually flung them away: μετέναι πολλά τῶν δακρύων, c. 16 supra, is to let them drop. Cp. 3. 128

μετῆκάν οἱ τὰς αἰχμὰς, after which the δορυφόροι had recourse to their ἀκινάκας. The μάχη περὶ τὰ γέρρα which now ensues is really πρῶτον in relation to what follows; but the preceding episode, while the Persians are showering shots on the Spartans from behind the fence of shields, is an essential part of the battle-piece. ἤδη just below practically = δεύτερον.

7. ἐπεπτώκεε more literally than ἐπιπτον above, but still a mild way of putting it: Stein renders niedergeworfen waren.

8. ἰσχυρὴ is of course predicative. παρ' αὐτὸ τὸ Δημήτριον. Hdt. knows only of one Demetrium in the region, cp. c. 57 supra; there were two, if not three, that might come into the account. It is here a problem not merely which Demetrium is in question, but what space, what change of place, if any, here intervenes between the μάχη περὶ τὰ γέρρα and the μάχη ἰσχυρὴ παρ' αὐτὸ τὸ Δημήτριον. The shields had been overthrown; their owners probably perished or fled. There may be a considerable amount of ground traversed between the γέρρα and the Δημήτριον here in question, and the bulk of the men who struggled with the Spartans, under the temple walls, may not be the same men who had stood their ground, higher up the hills, behind the γέρρα. The Demetrium here in question may be the 'Hysiatan,' and its site may still be marked by the church of St. Demetrium, though the Spartan position up by the Moloeis may have been about, or in front of, the Plataian Demetrium.

9. ὠθισμόν. One might have thought that there would have been 'pushing'

- 10 δόρατα ἐπιλαμβανόμενοι κατέκλων οἱ Βάρβαροι. λήματι μὲν
 νυν καὶ ῥώμῃ οὐκ ἦσσαντες ἦσαν οἱ Πέρσαι· ἀνοπλοὶ δὲ ἐόντες καὶ πρὸς ἀνεπιστήμονες [ἦσαν] καὶ οὐκ ὅμοιοι τοῖσι ἐναντίοις σοφίην, προεξαίσσοντες [δὲ] κατ' ἓνα καὶ δέκα καὶ πλευνέτε καὶ ἐλάσσονες συστρεφόμενοι, ἐσέπιπτον ἐς τοὺς Σπαρτιῆτας 63 καὶ διεφθείροντο. τῇ δὲ ἐτύγχανε αὐτὸς ἐὼν Μαρδόνιος, ἀπ' ἵππου τε μαχόμενος λευκοῦ ἔχων τε περὶ ἐωντὸν λογάδας

10 λήματι PMarc.: λήμματι 11 ἔσσαντες ἔσαν = || οἱ Πέρσαι B,
 om. α (Holder) 12 πρὸς secl. Krueger || ἦσαν secl. van H., Kallenberg,
 Holder, Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἦσαν οἱ Πέρσαι R (Stein<sup>1</sup>) || ὅμοιοι CPMarc. = || ἀντίοι B,
 Schaefer ('male' van H.) 12, 13 καὶ et σοφίην del. Sitzler || δὲ secl.
 Stein<sup>3</sup> (virgula pro puncto post σοφίην posita) || καὶ ante πλευνέ om. B
 14 ἐλάττονες CMarc. 63. 1 μαρδόνιος ἐὼν Marc.

before the γέρρα were overthrown. So no doubt there had been: Hdt. seems to use ὠθισμός for fighting at the closest quarters (without special reference to its etymological sense), cp. 7. 225, 8. 78.

In this particular case, if the battle has shifted down the ridge, and is now going forward beside the Demetrian (as above located), the fugitive Persians would probably be met by swarms advancing to the assault, or support, none too regularly, and escape would be doubly difficult. But we cannot be sure that the words which follow do not describe the scene immediately on the overthrow of the γέρρα. Stein<sup>3</sup>, indeed, marks a lacuna after ὠθισμόν on the ground that the next sentence is not in logical or natural sequence of the argument or narrative: the now-exposed barbarians seized on and tried to break the large heavy spears of the Spartans—no doubt in vain.

10. λήματι μὲν νυν κτλ. This generous tribute to the valour or spirit (λήμα 7. 99) and bodily strength (ῥώμῃ 1. 31) of the Persians is rather out of place in the very midst of a description of the actual engagement; at any rate it interrupts a narrative which has already become involved in some obscurity, and when resumed, just below, grows still more unintelligible.

11. ἀνοπλοὶ, without δπλα, i.e. the shields (and other heavy arms associated therewith). There was a great inferiority of armature on the Persian side for fighting at close quarters: nothing could have compensated for that (other things, strength and courage, being equal) but superior tactics, skill, address; but ἐπιστήμη, but σοφίη were also on the side of the Greeks; cp. 7. 211.

13. προεξαίσσοντες: the προ- is here local, not temporal. The tactics described are almost unintelligible of a retreating force. Single combatants, or small groups, separate themselves from the main body and rush forward, out of the ranks, form or rally in bands (ευστρεφόμενοι, cp. c. 18 supra), some larger some smaller, charge the Spartans, and are annihilated.

Perhaps the obscurity arises from Hdt. not distinguishing clearly between those Persians who were in retreat and the various forces hurrying up to their support.

63. 1. τῇ δὲ ἐτύγχανε αὐτὸς ἐὼν Μαρδόνιος: a more explicit local definition of the exact position of Mardonios in the battle would be worth a good deal for the reconstruction of the piece. Was he παρ' αὐτῷ τῷ Δημητρίῳ, and, if so, which Demetrian? Was he really at the head of his troops, and himself leading the assault (cp. c. 59 supra)? Or was he, where he should have been, in a position to co-ordinate and direct his whole forces?

ἀπ' ἵππου τε μαχόμενος λευκοῦ: the specific mention, and memory, of the fact that Mardonios was mounted on a white horse might seem to imply that those about him were unmounted, or at least not mounted on white horses. (His mount was perhaps a Nesaian; cp. 8. 40.)

2. λογάδας Περσίων τοὺς ἀρίστοις χιλιούς: the reference to 8. 113 is not quite direct or obvious, but is generally

Περσέων τοὺς ἀρίστους χιλίους, ταύτη δὲ καὶ μάλιστα τοὺς ἐναντίους ἐπίεσαν. ὅσον μὲν νυν χρόνον Μαρδόνιος περιῆν, οἱ δὲ ἀντεῖχον καὶ ἀμυνόμενοι κατέβαλλον πολλοὺς τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων· ὡς δὲ Μαρδόνιος ἀπέθανε καὶ τὸ περὶ ἐκείνον τεταγμένον ἐὼν ἰσχυρότατον ἔπεσε, οὕτω δὴ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι ἐτράποντο καὶ εἶξαν τοῖσι Λακεδαιμονίοισι. πλεῖστον γὰρ σφέας ἐδηλέετο ἢ ἐσθῆς ἔρημος εἴουσα ὄπλων· πρὸς γὰρ ὀπλίτας ἐόντες γυμνήτες ἀγῶνα ἐποιεῦντο. ἐνθαῦτα ἦ τε δίκη 64

3 δὴ ζ 5 οἱ δὲ C, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder: οἱ δὲ α, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: οἷδεν R(V) || κατεβάλλοντο edd. vett. (Gaisf.) || τῶν: τοὺς R 7 ἐὼν Apr.B: om. Marc. || οἱ ἄλλοι om. C 9 ἐρήμος CPMarc. ζ 10 εἴοντας B (Gaisf.) || γυμνῆται Ask.: γυμνήτας B || ἀγῶνας B: τὸν ἀγῶνα Iacobitz

taken to signify τὴν ἵππον τὴν χιλίην there specified, though not described as λογάδας. In 7. 40 ἱππῶται χιλιοὶ ἐκ Περσέων πάντων ἀπολελεγμένοι form the head of the marching column; and a second chiliad of cavalry, similarly described, precedes the Immortals (apparently); besides these two chiliads of select cavalry there are two chiliads of select infantry, αἰχμοφόροι. The chiliad here mentioned might be any one of these four chiliads, and the mere fact that Mardonios himself is mounted hardly decides the question.

3. ταύτη δὲ καὶ μάλιστα τοὺς ἐναντίους ἐπίεσαν: sc. οἱ Πέρσαι. The statement is astonishing for two reasons: (a) the aorist ἐπίεσαν instead of the imp. ἐπίεζον, especially after the number of antecedent imperfecis, is a puzzle; (b) the statement describes the action of an advancing, an attacking party, not the action of a retreating party, and the Persians were already in retreat in the previous chapter. But the sequence of events in the narrative may be inaccurately chronologized. This sentence (τῇ δὲ ἐτίγχανε... ἐπίεσαν) emphasizes the rôle of Mardonios in the battle, and may hark back to a point already passed by the general narrative in the previous chapter. This suggestion might account, perhaps, for the occurrence of the anomalous aorist: it is virtually equivalent to a pluperfect in time.

4. ὅσον μὲν νυν χρόνον M. περιῆν: the actual time may be synchronous with the χρόνον ἐπὶ πολλόν of c. 62, during which ἐγένετο ἡ μάχη ἰσχυρὴ παρ' αὐτὸ τὸ Δημήτριον. The corresponding sentence begins ὡς δὲ Μαρδόνιος ἀπέθανε (when Mardonios had been killed).

οἱ δὲ ἀντεῖχον is the apodosis with δέ; the action described is that of men subject themselves to assault rather than attacking. The difficulty may be solved by the supposition above, that there was a temporary rally of the Persians παρ' αὐτὸ τὸ Δημήτριον, where Mardonios himself sat on horseback, surrounded doubtless by his staff and bodyguard, which is here distinctly acting on the defensive (ἀντεῖχον, ἀμυνόμενοι).

6. τὸ περὶ ἐκείνον τεταγμένον: neut. abst. for concrete = οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν τεταγμένοι, cp. c. 61 supra. There is nothing to suggest that this body is cavalry, rather the reverse. ἔπεσε, was cut to pieces, or fell mortally wounded each in his place; cp. ἐπιπτον c. 61 supra.

7. οὕτω δὴ: the narrative, having started afresh with Mardonios, now arrives again at the point previously reached, in general terms, in c. 62 ad f. The τροπή here (ἐτράποντο) must be in immediate sequence to the ὀπισμός there, and the observation on the Persians' ἐσθῆς here is exactly parallel to the reflexion there upon their inferiority in arms and skill.

9. ἐδηλέετο, 'contributed to their destruction'; the effect is, however, not positive, but negative, privative. γυμνήτες, 'light-armed foot-soldiers,' a word not elsewhere used by Hdt., but cp. Tyrtaios, 11. 35, quoted c. 48 supra.

64. 1. ἦ τε δίκη τοῦ Λεωνίδου. At this point Hdt. treats the battle as over, the victory as won, and goes off on a number of side issues, oracular, portentous, biographic, anecdotal, to wit, the fulfilment of a Delphic utterance; the providential preservation of the Demetrios from defilement; the fate of Mardonios, τοῦ φόνου τοῦ Λεωνίδεω κατὰ τὸ χρηστήριον τοῖσι Σπαρτιτησι ἐκ Μαρδονίου ἐπετελέετο, καὶ νίκην ἀναιρέεται καλλίστην ἀπασέων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν Πausanίης ὁ Κλεομβρότου τοῦ

5 Ἀναξανδρίδεω· τῶν δὲ κατύπερθε οἱ προγόνων τὰ οὐνόματα εἴρηται ἐς Λεωνίδην· ὧντοί γάρ σφι τυγχάνουσι ἐόντες.
ἀποθνήσκει δὲ Μαρδόνιος ὑπὸ Ἀειμνήστου ἀνδρὸς ἐν Σπάρτῃ
λογίμου, ὃς χρόνῳ ὕστερον μετὰ τὰ Μηδικὰ ἔχων ἄνδρας

64. 2 τὸ τοῖσι B 3 γενόμενον excidisse susp. Kallenberg || ἐπιτελέετο B, Schaefer, Gaisford 5 τῶν . . . ἐόντες suspecta habeo 6 οἱτοι αC Marc. 7 ἀειμνήστου α: ἀρμινήστου B, Plutarch. Aristid. 19, Holder, van H. : cf. c. 72 infra || ἀνδρὸς ἐόντος ἐν Marc. 8 χρόνον id.

and that of the man who slew him; the glory of Pausanias.

2. κατὰ τὸ χρηστήριον: the reference is clear, though not explicit, to the anecdote 8. 114 supra, which of course was an anachronism; given the death of Mardonios at Plataia by the hands of a Spartan (!), and the 'prediction' was inevitable. This whole chapter (with the possible exception of a couple of sentences) reads like an insertion by Hdt. into the first draft of his history, and may perhaps be put down to his 'second hand'; cp. Introduction, § 9.

3. νίκην ἀναιρέεται κτλ. Hdt. treats the victory as a fait accompli, as though the whole battle had been simply between Mardonios with his Persians on the one side and Pausanias with his Spartans or Lakedaimonians on the other; the centre, the left wing, are treated here as negligible quantities: this treatment can hardly be Attic, or phil-Attic tradition, or theory, but it might very well be 'Delphic,' cp. Thucyd. 1. 132. 2, or picked up at Delphi by Hdt. himself, or his authorities. On the formula καλλίστην . . . τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν cp. 8. 105. 3. Is it not a metrical tag? (τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν).

νίκην ἀναιρέσθαι reportare victoriam 6. 103, cp. c. 33 supra (ἀγῶνας), Ὀλυμπιάδα 6. 70 etc. The express recognition of the personal merits or service of Pausanias (to the exclusion of Eurynax) in this passage is remarkable: Plataia is his victory, the most ideal (καλλίστην) victory on record—Marathon, Salamis not excepted! The use of the patronymic, here raised to the third power, ἐκ τριγονίας, is also remarkable: plainly and purely for rhetorical effect.

5. τῶν δὲ . . . ἐόντες is, however, an addition with somewhat an unfortunate effect; if genuine, it is a very clear reference back to 7. 186: such a batheos can hardly belong to the first draft of the description of the great battle; the language reads, however, like authentic Hdt. κατύπερθε, cp. 5. 28. οἱ, possessive, or perhaps 'ethical' dat. ἐς Λεωνίδην, either 'down to Leonidas,' or 'with reference to Leonidas,' à propos of Leonidas. (As Leonidas could not be included, the latter seems the preferable rendering.)

6. ὧντοί . . . ἐόντες, not ταῦτά . . . ἐόντα. Rawlinson, doubtless feeling the literary and stylistic flaw of this passage, translates it very loosely: 'I omit to recount his other ancestors, since they are the same with those of Leonidas.'

7. ἀποθνήσκει . . . ὑπό: cp. c. 37 supra.

Ἀειμνήστου ἀνδρὸς ἐν Σπάρτῃ λογίμου. It is unfortunate that there is any uncertainty in the exact form of the proper name, though 'Aeimnestos' and 'Arimnestos' come to much the same sense; cp. c. 72 infra. (Some persons with an inability to give value to the rho would pronounce the two forms indistinguishably.) Blakesley very acutely suggested that this ἀνὴρ ἐν Σπάρτῃ λόγιμος was not himself a Spartiate; for (i.) Plutarch (de or. def. 5, Mor. 412) says Mardonios was killed by a stone, and a Spartiate would not be throwing stones (but cp. c. 55 supra!); (ii.) Thucydides (3. 52. 5) has a Plataian, one 'Lakon, son of Aeimnestos,' and an ἀνὴρ ἐν Σπάρτῃ λόγιμος would be very likely to have a son named Ἀδάκων. (But what, then, of his service in the Messenian war? see below.)

8. ὃς χρόνῳ ὕστερον κτλ. is certainly a reference to events in the Pentekontaetis, and appears to be a reference to the τριηκοσίους συνέβαλε ἐν Στενυκλήρῳ πολέμου ἐόντος Μεσσηνίοισι πᾶσι, καὶ αὐτός τε ἀπέθανε καὶ οἱ τριηκόσιοι. ἐν δὲ 65 Πλαταιῆσι οἱ Πέρσαι ὡς ἐτράποντο ὑπὸ τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, ἔφευγον οὐδένα κόσμον ἔς <τε> τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ ἐωυτῶν

9 συνέβαλλε C || μεσσηνίοισι BC: Μεσσηνίοισι τε z 10 πᾶσι; ἀποστᾶσι Naber 65. 2 πλαταιῆσι α: πλαταιῆσι(ν V) β || ἐτράπηναν z 3 <τε> coni. Stein<sup>1</sup>, adm. van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἐωυτῶν β

'third' Messenian war (464-454 B.C.). The reference is obscure. Hdt. does not clearly indicate that the war is between the Lakedaimonians and Messenians; he does not describe the character or nature of the corps of 300 men under Aeimnestos; he does not say on which side Aeimnestos was fighting; he gives no details or circumstances in regard to the engagement. This is, in short, one of the obscurest references to contemporary events in the whole work. Hdt., however, does not say that Aeimnestos was a Spartan, nor that the men under his command were Spartans. Blakesley says: "no doubt Aeimnestos commanded the garrison which was intended to maintain military possession of the country." But that seems to me very doubtful: how came a Plataian by such an appointment? Rather we might suppose that the Plataian, with a contingent of his fellow-citizens, 300 strong, was (pace idē in the following) with the Athenian contingent in the Messenian war; cp. Thuc. 3. 54. 5 καὶ ὅμιν, ὧ Λακεδαιμόνιοι, idē, ὅτεπερ δὴ μέγιστος φόβος περίσθη τὴν Σπάρτην μετὰ τὸν σεισμόν τῶν ἐς Ἰθώμην Εἰλωτῶν ἀποστάντων τὸ τρίτον μέρος ἡμῶν αὐτῶν ἐξεπέμψαμεν ἐς ἐπικουρίαν. ὧν οὐκ εἰκὸς ἀμνημονεῖν (Δάκων son of Αἰεμνηστος is speaking, 427 B.C.).

ἔχων, 'commanding.'

9. τριηκοσίους: if this was τὸ τρίτον μέρος the full number of Plataians at that time would be 900. In c. 28 supra there are 600 with the Athenians on the left; that may be  $\frac{2}{3}$  (and  $\frac{1}{3}$  may be with the Spartans, cp. c. 72 infra), or the number of Plataians in 464 B.C. may somewhat have risen. In 429 B.C. it had fallen again, cp. l.c.) συνέβαλε: i.e. συμβολὴν ἐποίησε, cp. c. 41 supra.

Στενυκλήρῳ: the old Dorian, or quasi-Dorian, capital of Messenia (cp. Strabo 361), where Kresphontes had built his palace, and established a residence (cp. Pausan. 4. 3. 7), situate on a plain (Pausan. 4. 33. 4) in the midst of the land, a natural meeting-place for the Messenians (Paus. 4. 6. 6)—in fact, the centre of the upper of the two plains into which hollow Messenia naturally divides; cp. Curtius, Peloponnesos ii. 125 f. It was an unwallled place, however, and has left no remains in situ, ib. 136.

65. 1. ἐν δὲ Πλαταιῆσι, 'to return to Plataia,' the name of the city for the land; cp. c. 16 supra. Even so, there may be an inaccuracy. The actual scene of the Persian repulse was perhaps rather in the confines of Hysiai than in the land of Plataia proper; though the position occupied at the Androkrateion and Gargaphia had no doubt been ἐν τῇ Πλαταίδι, cp. c. 25 supra.

2. ἐτράποντο Baehr takes as imperf. passive, but renders in fugam conversi sunt; Stein (more accurately) in fugam vertebantur.

3. οὐδένα κόσμον: cp. 8. 117. The Persians may have advanced originally in good order; not so, however, the rest of the βαρβαρικά τέλη, cp. c. 59 supra.

τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ ἐωυτῶν appears to be distinguishable from τὸ τεῖχος τὸ ξύλινον to this extent, that the στρατόπεδον was considerably larger than the τεῖχος, cp. c. 15 supra. But Stein's theory that the τεῖχος was on the south side of the Asopos and the στρατόπεδον on the north side of the Asopos, and (apparently) quite distinct and separate, is hardly satisfactory. The distinction between the στρατόπεδον and the τεῖχος is perfectly sound and intelligible, even if both were on the same side of the river and locally continuous with each other; it is a distinction analogous to that between ἡ πόλις and τὸ ἄστυ. Again, the addition of the words τὸ ἐπὶ σέλιον ἐν μόρῃ τῇ Θηβαίδι cannot possibly mean that the τεῖχος was on Theban territory while the στρατόπεδον was not! And if that were the meaning, then the στρατόπεδον would have to be placed

καὶ ἐς τὸ τεῖχος τὸ ξύλινον τὸ ἐποίησαντο ἐν μοίρῃ τῇ
5 Θηβαίδι. θῶμα δέ μοι ὅκως παρὰ τῆς Δήμητρος τὸ ἄλσος μαχομένων οὐδὲ εἰς ἐφάνη τῶν Περσέων οὔτε ἐσελθὼν ἐς τὸ τέμενος οὔτε ἐναποθανόν, περί τε τὸ ἶρόν οἱ πλείστοι ἐν τῷ βεβήλῳ ἔπεσον. δοκέω δέ, εἴ τι περὶ τῶν θείων πρηγμάτων

5 θῶμα Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup> || περὶ τῆς z 7 περὶ τὸ ἶρόν· οἱ δὲ πλείστοι BP:
(‘fortasse rectius si π. τ. i. ut glossema deleveris’ van H.) || τῷ fortasse delend. cens. Kallenberg

south of the river, and the τεῖχος north, whereas Stein places the τεῖχος south, and the στρατόπεδον north.

In my opinion the camp (στρατόπεδον) and the fort (τείχος) were continuous; the camp was on the left (north) bank of the Asopos, along the road from Erythrai to Thebes; the fortified portion of the camp may have been projected across the river on to the south bank, so that a part of the river flowed right through the fortification, or at least a tête de pont may have been fortified to the south of the river on the said road. This τεῖχος was an ἔρυμα to the στρατός in any case, and a κρησφύγετον in case of disaster; cp. c. 15 supra. It probably contained the quarters of all the combatants, and assuredly of the Persians and picked troops.

4. ἐν μοίρῃ τῇ Θηβαίδι: μοῖρα here is as strictly topical as it ever can be; cp. 8. 23 τῆς Ἑλλοπίης μοίρης γῆς δὲ τῆς Ἰσθμίου τοῦ παραθαλάσσιος χώρας πάσας ἐπέδραμον, 5. 57 οἴκεον δὲ τῆς χώρας ταύτης (sc. τῆς γῆς τῆς νῦν Βοιωτίας καλουμένης) ἀπολαχόντες τὴν Ταναγκρικὴν μοῖραν. There is nothing to restrict the word here to one side of the Asopos, least of all the south side. ἡ Θηβαὶς μοῖρα is all the portion of Boiotia in the dominion of Thebes; it cannot be distinguished from ἡ Θηβαὶς γῆ nor from οἱ τῶν Θηβαίων χώροι (cp. c. 15 supra). But, at least as against Plataia and Hysiai, the Asopos was its boundary, 8. 108.

5. θῶμα δέ μοι: the cause of this marvel Hdt. explains just below as a direct divine interposition to bring about the given result. On the supposition that the Demetrian in question is marked by the church of St. Demetrian Dr. Grundy explains the fact by the lie of the ground: the Persians in rushing back to their laager and camp would naturally avoid the delay of climbing up the hill, on the top of which the Demetrian was situate, and would naturally rush along the lower slopes and stream valleys (A<sup>1</sup>, A<sup>2</sup>) either side the ‘Long Ridge.’ This plausible suggestion remains equally valid whether the routed fugitives were mounted or on foot. But it is possible that Mardonios himself had occupied this hill during the battle, in order to survey the action; and Hdt. (or his source) would have had small excuse for wonder if the area had not been within the field of battle. At an earlier stage in the proceedings the Demetrian may have been held by the Spartans (Amompharetos? cp. c. 53 supra). Hdt. does not say that no Greeks fought or fell within the enclosure. See also next note.

τῆς Δήμητρος τὸ ἄλσος: this grove (cp. 7. 197) is a new feature in the Herodotean landscape and may very suitably be imagined growing round the church of St. Demetrian, upon the hill-top, which is of decidedly conical formation. Hdt. apparently conceives this point as the very centre and stress of the fight, as οἱ πλείστοι, sc. τῶν Περσέων, fell in the immediate vicinity of the Holy Place, though upon unconsecrated ground (ἐν τῷ βεβήλῳ, cp. Thuc. 4. 97. 3). As the Persians are here in flight the slaughter among them may well have been great, but we can scarcely feel quite sure that the case of the Persians was quite as Hdt. reports, no doubt bona fide; the statement is so exactly what would afterwards have been believed and said ad maiorem Deae gloriam.

8. δοκέω δέ: an expression of uncertainty; cp. οὐ δοκέω 7. 186, and δόκησιν δὲ δεῖ λέγειν 7. 185—a proceeding unobjectionable in purely human matters, such as the number of the Persian forces, but perhaps not advisable περὶ τῶν θείων πρηγμάτων. This reserve is not an expression of incredulity on Hdt.’s part, but seems to arise rather from a belief in the vindictive nature of the gods, and δοκέειν δεῖ, ἡ θεὸς αὐτὴ σφεας οὐκ ἐδέκετο ἐμπρήσαντας τὸ ἱρὸν τὸ ἐν Ἐλευσίνι ἀνάκτορον.

Αὕτη μὲν νυν ἡ μάχη ἐπὶ τοσοῦτο ἐγένετο, Ἀρτάβαζος 66
δὲ ὁ Φαρνάκος αὐτίκα τε οὐκ ἠρέσκετο κατ' ἀρχὰς λειπο-μένου Μαρδονίου ἀπὸ βασιλέως, καὶ τότε πολλὰ ἀπαγορεύων

9 δοκεῖν A, van H. || ἐδέξατο CPMarc. z || τὸ ἱρὸν del. Valckenaer,
Holder, van H. 10 ἐλευσῖνοι R || ἀνακτόριον BPCorrig. z: del. Bredow
66. 1 τοσοῦτον Bz 2 ἠρέσκετο z || καταρχὰς ABRz || λιπομένους z
3 ὑπὸ van H. || βασιλῆος z

an apprehension that such speculations might be visited with a nemesis: οὐ γὰρ εἴα φρονέειν μέγα ὁ θεὸς ἄλλον ἢ ἐωυτὸν 7. 10.

9. σφεας οὐκ ἐδέκετο, 'rejected them,' refused them entrance. δέκεσθαι, sc. as ικέτας, or ἐπὶ ξενίῃ. Would the Greeks have spared the lives of any Persians found in the Holy Place, or simply have taken them out and slain them ἐν τῷ βεβήλῳ? Hdt. does not go so far as to say that Demeter interfered directly to procure the victory of the Greeks, any more than Hera, c. 61 supra. The story of the war is comparatively free from the miracle manifest, apart from the Delphic apology (8. 35 ff.). Cp. Introduction, § 11.

ἐμπρήσαντας . . τὸ ἐν Ἐλευσίνι: this outrage has not been expressly recorded before; cp. cc. 13, 14 supra. Mardonios has put the saddle on the wrong horse, c. 42 supra. It is not clear whether the destruction at Eleusis was in 480 B.C. (8. 50), or in the present year (c. 14 supra). Baehr defends both ἱρὸν and ἀνάκτορον in this passage. Valckenaer had condemned τὸ ἱρὸν, Bredow ἀνάκτορον. Hdt. nowhere else uses the word. Euripides applies it to (1) Delphic temple of Apollo, Andr. 1157; (2) Tauric temple of Artemis, Iph. T. 41, 66; (3) Trojan temples, Troad. 15; Pausanias, 2. 14. 4, of a part of the Demetrium at Keleai, near Phleis. In Athenaeus first, apparently, we get the word used with a special or restricted reference to Eleusis: 213 τὸ σεμνὸν ἀνάκτορον τοῖν θεῶν, cp. 167. Dr. Frazer has suggested that it designated the Great Hall of Initiation (τὸ τελεστήριον), cp. n. to Pausan. l.c. But Pollux, 1. 9, still has ἀνάκτορον (seemingly as an adj.) for the εἶδον or any χωρίον ἔβατον τοῦ ἱεροῦ, i.e. of any temple. ἀνάκτορον is, of course, the house of the ἀναξ (or ἀνασσα).

66. 1. αὕτη . . ἐπὶ τοσοῦτο ἐγένετο, 'in this battle nothing further took place,' i.e. the battle between the Spartans and the Persians, which is here treated as though it were whole and complete in itself. To the Persian combatants must be added the other non-Hellenic divisions, which have also been represented as taking part in 'this battle,' cp. c. 59 supra. Hdt.'s method of treating the conflict between the Persians and Spartans as one battle, and the conflict between the Athenians and Thebans as another, corresponds probably more or less to differences in his sources; while some failure in his sources may help to account for his inadequate treatment of the fortunes of the centre. Moreover, Hdt. here makes an effort to mark the exact point in the struggle at which Artabazos took his departure (when the battle had reached this point, Artabazos—ἐποίησε τοιαύδε). With him, perhaps, departed the Makedonians and others in the Persian right wing, which he probably commanded.

Ἀρτάβαζος . . ὁ Φαρνάκος: the patronymic is so little called for by the occasion, that it may better be supposed a repetition from the source of the eccentric story which ensues.

2. αὐτίκα . . κατ' ἀρχάς, 'from the very first'; cp. for the expression 7. 88, and for the situation referred to 8. 115, 126. The use of ἀπό instead of ὑπό is remarkable; cp. 7. 102, 5. 2, etc.

3. καὶ τότε: not the point reached in the narrative, in the immediate context, but a much earlier one, viz. in c. 41 supra (a backward reference).

πολλὰ ἀπαγορεύων οὐδὲν ἦνευ recalls the formula put into the mouth of a Persian in the story of Thersander, c. 16 supra: πολλὰ φρονέοντα μηδὲν κρατεῖν.

οὐδὲν ἦννε, συμβάλλειν οὐκ ἔδω· ἐποίησέ τε αὐτὸς τοιαύδε ὡς
 5 οὐκ ἀρεσκόμενος τοῖσι πρήγμασι τοῖσι ἐκ Μαρδονίου ποιου-μένοισι. τῶν ἐστρατήγεε ὁ Ἀρτάβαζος (εἶχε δὲ δύναμιν οὐκ ὀλίγην ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐς τέσσαρας μυριάδας ἀνθρώπων περὶ ἑωυτόν), τούτους, ὅπως ἢ συμβολὴ ἐγίνετο, εὖ ἐξεπιστάμενος τὰ ἔμелле ἀποβήσεσθαι ἀπὸ τῆς μάχης, ἦγε κατηρημένως, παραγγείλας

6 ὁ om. aC, Holder 7 τέσσαρας ACR(V) || αὐτὸν B 8
 ἐγένετο B 9 συμβήσεσθαι S || ἀπὸ τῆς μάχης delenda suspic. Kallen-
 berg || ἦγε BP: ἦτε || κατηρημένως a, Stein, Holder: κατηρητισμένως B, van H.: κατηρητισμένος CPMarc.: κατηρητισμένος z, Krueger, Baehr: κατηρημένους? Blakesley: κατηρητισμένους? van H.

4. συμβάλλειν οὐκ ἔδω, prohibiting, arguing against, 'trying to prevent a general engagement,' cp. c. 41 supra; μηδὲ ἀνακινουμένους συμβάλλοντας.

ἐποίησέ τε: the τε marks the climax (after the two items marked by the previous τε and καί, cp. c. 58 supra).

5. ἀρεσκόμενος: passive (not middle, as in 6. 128). The active is used with accus. of the person, as well as with the dative (3. 142), so 3. 34, 4. 78, and 7. 160.

ἐκ, instead of ὑπό, cp. 7. 175; cp. c. 64 supra.

The asyndeton which follows may help to mark the laboured character of the apology for Artabazos, which is far from coherent or close in its argument. As Stein points out, Hdt. (or rather, perhaps, his source) is anxious to explain and justify the treacherous conduct of Artabazos; while Blakesley regards the difficulty as arising from an "Hellenic interpretation" of a proceeding which the Greeks did not understand: he even accepts the suggestion of 8. 126 that the reputation of Artabazos was raised by his conduct at Plataia, that is, the skill with which he brought off his division. It is quite possible that the action, position, and proceedings of Artabazos have not been correctly envisaged by Greek tradition, and that, imperfect information having created a problem, apologetics were called in to reconcile the facts of the subsequent career of Artabazos with his supposed conduct at Plataia. But if Artabazos was really at Plataia with 40,000 men, no amount of insight or foresight, of wit or wisdom, could conceal or excuse his shameful treachery to Mardonios, and thereby to the Persian cause. However, the Greek idea that he was in Boiotia, or within reach of Mardonios at the time of the battle, may be erroneous. It is this idea which creates the problem.

6. εἶχε, 'was in command of . . . δύναμιν, cp. 4. 155. The 40,000 men of this passage may be reconciled with the 60,000 of 8. 126 by the supposition that Artabazos had lost 20,000 in the siege of Potidaea and his other operations; but the harmony is our own doing. We are in the presence of more or less independent stories, and, it may be, of independent estimates of the numbers under Artabazos' command. Each figure represents a division of 50,000, or one-sixth of the Grand Army; but, perhaps, in the one case a myriad of cavalry has been added, and in the other case subtracted, or not included. The position assigned to Artabazos in tradition makes him only a little inferior to Mardonios, and discounts the larger estimate for the latter's army. Moreover, 40,000 is just about the figure for the Makedonian and Hellenic contingent, minus the Thebans (cp. next c.), a coincidence which suggests that, if present at the battle of Plataia, he was in command of the right wing, including the Makedonians, medizing Greeks, etc. Their attitude and conduct may help to explain his.

7. ἀνθρώπων, as frequently; cp. Index.

8. εὖ ἐξεπιστάμενος: the verb is doubly reinforced, and denotes real knowledge. Artabazos was one προειδὼς πλεὺν τι, c. 41 supra, and his conduct itself (according to the story) secures the fulfilment of his previsions and predictions. ἀπὸ here = ἐκ, ὅπως = ὡς.

9. κατηρημένως. Stein prefers the participial adverb, and understands it as meaning wohl vorbereitet, in wohl überlegter Weise, i.e. with all due prepara-

κατὰ τῶντὸ ἵεναι πάντας τῇ ἂν αὐτὸς ἐξηγήται <καὶ> ὅπως 10
 ἂν αὐτὸν ὁρῶσι σπουδῆς ἔχοντα. ταῦτα παραγγέλλας ὥς ἐς μάχην ἦγε δῆθεν τὸν στρατόν. προτερέων δὲ τῆς ὁδοῦ ὁρᾶ καὶ δὴ φεύγοντας τοὺς Πέρσας· οὕτω δὴ οὐκέτι τὸν αὐτὸν κόσμον κατηγέετο, ἀλλὰ τὴν ταχίστην ἐτρόχαζε φεύγων οὔτε ἐς τὸ ξύλινον οὔτε ἐς τὸ Θηβαίων τεῖχος ἀλλ' ἐς Φωκέας, 15 ἐθέλων ὥς τάχιστα ἐπὶ τὸν Ἑλλήσποντον ἀπικέσθαι. καὶ 67
 δὴ οὗτοι μὲν ταύτῃ ἐτράποντο· τῶν δὲ ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων τῶν

10 κατὰ τοῦτο B: κατ' αὐτὸ Pz || ἐξηγήται Bz: ἐξηγῆται reliqui,
 Holder, van H. || <καὶ> Stein<sup>3</sup> 11 ἂν om. B || ὁρέωσι z, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H. 12 προτερέως C: προτερέων z || ὁρᾶ Stein<sup>3</sup>: ὁραὶ αC: ὄρα B,
 Stein<sup>1 2</sup>, Holder, van H. 15 εἰς R || ξύλινον τεῖχος S, Bekker, Palm et τείχος post Θηβαίων retinentes || ἀλλὰ α 67. 2 ἄλλων secl.
 van H.

tion and reflexion on his part, deliberately, of set purpose. But the words οὕτω δὴ οὐκέτι τὸν αὐτὸν κόσμον κατηγέετο below point to the meaning of the word here, whatever its form, as having a more material reference to the order and appearance of the men being led: 'well-hung, well-adjusted, well-ordered.' The verb κατηγέω as virtually = καταρτίζω is curious, and in any case rare; cp. 3. 80 and App. Crit. Krüger has κατηγισμένοι with active or transitive force; nachdem er sie geordnet hatte, 'after putting them in battle-array' (or marching array); κατηγισμένους (Kampf-bereit, Sitzler) is of course to be taken as passive.

10. κατὰ τῶντὸ ἵεναι . . . τῇ ἂν αὐτὸς ἐξηγήται κτλ. Such directions might be given by the leader of a company, but are absurd as the general orders of the commander of a corps d'armée. κατὰ τῶντὸ may mean 'in the same way' (merely anticipating ὅπως . . . σπουδῆς), or 'in the same direction' (merely anticipating τῇ . . . ἐξηγήται), or it might be taken to cover both, or possibly it might have the sense of keeping together, not breaking ranks (cp. πάντας). They are to march all together, they are to follow him, and not to exceed or fall short of his pace or speed (σπουδή, cp. c. 89 infra. Mardonios had led his men δρόμῳ, c. 59 supra; Artabazos probably was leading his βάδην); and they can do all that by keeping their eyes on him (ὁρῶσι). Hdt. treats the march of 50,000 men as though it were the excursion of a small mountaineering party. The apologist may say that the general's orders were issued to his officers, myriarchs, chiliarchs; even so, they are irrational.

11. ὥς ἐς μάχην . . . δῆθεν: apparently he led them at first in battle-array, and presumably in the direction of Plataia; but what was his starting-point? Was he on the Asopos, in command of the right? Or was he at Thebes, in command of reserves? Or was he even further away? He had been marching some time before the rout of the Persians came to his knowledge (ὁρᾶ).

12. προτερέων, cp. c. 57 supra. καὶ δὴ = ἤδη, c. 48 supra.

13. οὐκέτι τὸν αὐτὸν κόσμον κατηγέετο. He apparently changed from battle-array into marching order, substituting the agmen for the acies, and (ἐτρόχαζε) 'wheeled' round (or perhaps only 'wheeled along,' i.e. ran, cp. Xenoph. Anab. 7. 3. 46), fled to Phokis, with a view to reaching the 'Hellespont.' He had previously advocated their falling back on τὸ τεῖχος τὸ Θηβαίων, c. 41. Hellespont may here be used in the largest sense; he made for Byzantion c. 89.

67. 2. τῶν δὲ ἄλλων . . . ἐτελοκακόντων. 'The other Greeks' are in contrast to the Boiotians, and must be taken to cover the Makedonians, and to number, on Hdt.'s own showing, at least 40,000! cp. c. 32 supra.

τῶν μετὰ βασιλέος: cp. c. 61 supra. The action, or inaction, of these 'Hellenes' is most remarkable, and Hdt. seems to make curiously little of

μετὰ βασιλέος ἐθελοκακέοντων, Βοιωτοὶ Ἀθηναίοισι ἐμαχέσαντο χρόνον ἐπὶ συγχρόνῃ· οἱ γὰρ μηδίζοντες τῶν Θηβαίων, οὗτοι 5 εἶχον προθυμίην οὐκ ὀλίγην μαχόμενοι τε καὶ οὐκ ἐθελοκακέοντες, οὕτω ὥστε τριηκόσιοι αὐτῶν οἱ πρῶτοι καὶ ἄριστοι ἐνθαῦτα ἔπεσον ὑπὸ Ἀθηναίων. ὥς δὲ ἐτράποντο καὶ οὗτοι, ἔφευγον ἐς τὰς Θήβας, οὐ τῇ περ οἱ Πέρσαι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων συμμάχων ὁ πᾶς ὄμιλος, οὔτε διαμαχεσάμενος οὐδενὶ οὔτε τι 68 ἀποδεξάμενος, ἔφευγον. δηλοῖ τέ μοι ὅτι πάντα τὰ πρήγματα

3 βασιλέως R: βασιλῆος z 4 ἐπὶ συγχρόν om. R 5 ἔχον z ||
μαχόμενοι BP: μαχέμενοι 6 αὐτέων z 8 οὐ τῇ περ Stein, Holder: οὐ τῇ περ Bekker, van H.: οὐκ ἤ || post Πέρσαι interpunx. Holder, van H., plerique 9 διαμαχεσάμενοι Krueger || οὐδὲν R 10 ἀποδεξάμενός τι Pz: ἀποδεξάμενοι Krueger 68. 1 τε ἐμοὶ B it. On his own showing some 40,000 of Mardonios' allies are useless, or worse than useless, in the supreme hour. None of the Greeks on the Persian side, with the exception of the Thebans, showed any fight; the whole right wing, with that one exception, was hors de combat. This arrangement left a fairly easy field for the Athenians. Was there not already an understanding to this effect? The omission of any explicit notice of the Makedonians at this point is remarkable. The action of Artabazos and his section of the army can hardly be divorced from the action, or inaction, of these medizing Greeks.

3. Βοιωτοὶ Ἀθηναίοισι ἐμαχέσαντο. This situation is apparently treated almost as a separate μάχη. Βοιωτοὶ might cover more than Θηβαῖοι. The golden shields dedicated by the Athenians at Delphi ἀπὸ Μήδων καὶ Θηβαίων (Aischines in Ctesiph. 116), if genuine, may represent the political position of the Thebans as heads of Boiotia at the time, but perhaps rather expresses the intensity of anti-Theban feeling at Athens. The very next words here show that even in Thebes the Thebans were divided.

4. οἱ μηδίζοντες τῶν Θηβαίων implies the presence of others; so too Thucyd. 3. 63. 3 f. (in a Theban speech).

6. τριηκόσιοι αὐτῶν: a favourite, perhaps a conventional figure. οἱ πρῶτοι καὶ ἄριστοι has a strong political flavour about it, though the immediate question is one of pure fighting.

7. ἔπεσον ὑπὸ: cp. c. 37 supra. καὶ οὗτοι, 'as well as the Persians.' Can we be quite sure that the fight between the Athenians and the Thebans out-last the fight between the Spartans and the Persians? The tardy arrival of the Athenians at the ἐύλιον τεῖχος (c. 70 infra) might be easily accounted for otherwise, by a greater distance to cover, by an initial doubt how far to pursue, and so on. Yet it is possible that the retreat, or flight, of the Thebans on the Persian right wing was determined not so much by the valour of the Athenians, as by the victory of the Spartans over the other wing. That consideration is obscured by the way in which Hdt. has isolated the operations upon the right from those upon the left, to say nothing of the retreat of Artabazos and his myriads!

8. οὐ τῇ περ οἱ Πέρσαι: by a different road to that taken by the Persians. No doubt the Thebans retreated along the direct road from Plataia to Thebes, while the Persians recrossed the Asopos (as far as possible) by the bridge on the other road, from Erythrai to Thebes.

τῶν ἄλλων συμμάχων can hardly reinclude the medizing Greeks, who have been already accounted for, nor yet the men under the command of Artabazos, but rather refers to the nations, other than the Persians proper, included in the forces of Mardonios, cp. c. 31 supra; the βαρβαρικά τέλη of c. 59 supra. ἄλλων is idiomatic; neither the Persians nor the Thebans are here referred to as σύμμαχοι.

9. ὄμιλος: cp. c. 60 supra. διαμάχεσθαι ought to mean 'to fight to a finish,' cp. c. 48 supra. ἀποδέξασθαι (N.B. middle) τι, cp. c. 27 supra.

68. 1. δηλοῖ Schweighaeuser, followed

τῶν βαρβάρων ἤρτητο ἐκ Περσέων, εἰ καὶ τότε οὗτοι πρὶν ἢ καὶ συμμείξαι τοῖσι πολεμίοισι ἔφευγον, ὅτι καὶ τοὺς Πέρσας ὤρων. οὕτω τε πάντες ἔφευγον πλὴν τῆς ἵππου τῆς τε ἄλλης καὶ τῆς Βοιωτῆς· αὕτη δὲ τοσαῦτα προσωφέλεε τοὺς 5 φεύγοντας, αἰεὶ τε πρὸς τῶν πολεμίων ἀγχίστα ἐοῦσα ἀπέργουσα τε τοὺς φίλους φεύγοντας ἀπὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων.

Οἱ μὲν δὴ νικῶντες εἶποντο τοὺς Ξέρξῃ διώκοντές τε καὶ 69 φονεύοντες, ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τῷ γινομένῳ φόβῳ ἀγγέλλεται τοῖσι

2 ἤρτητο B 3 συμμείξαι van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || ὅτε conī. Stein<sup>12</sup>
4 ὤρων B: ἐώρων 6 ἀπείργουσα libri: corr. Stein 69. 1 τε
om. Pz 2 φόνῳ A<sup>2</sup>: πόνῳ Wesseling, 'fortasse recte' van H.

by Stein, takes as impersonal, cp. 2. 117. Blakesley objects to its impersonality and translates, 'it proves to me that . . .', a translation not incompatible with impersonality. In fact ἔηλοι should be more significant than δῆλόν ἐστι, but there is no expressed subject for it. τε seems to have a cumulative force, cp. c. 66 supra.

2. ἤρτητο ἐκ, 'depended on.' The pluperfect can hardly be pressed into meaning that all that is now a thing of the past, cp. 6. 109 ταῦτα ὧν πάντα ἐστὶ νῦν τείνει καὶ ἐκ σέο ἤρτηται, 1. 125, 3. 19. τὰ πρήγματα, 7. 10. 34 f. supra.

οὗτοι cannot refer to the same body of men as the οὗτοι just above; but whether it refers to οἱ ἄλλοι "Ἕλληνες οἱ μετὰ βασιλέος or to τῶν ἄλλων συμμάχων ὁ πᾶς ὄμιλος, or more vaguely includes both, is not quite clear. The first reference is rather remote, the second rather pointless, inasmuch as Hdt. is here dealing with the action on the right wing of Mardonios' army. The clearest point would be made by the omission of c. 67, in which case οὗτοι would refer to Artabazos and the men under his command, as do the words καὶ δὴ οὗτοι μὲν ταύτην ἐτράποντο. Possibly c. 67 is an insertion by the author, and was not in the original draft of the battle-piece; it is intended to recall the Athenians to mind. If that is the case, the next sentence too is probably an addition (οὕτω τε . . . τῶν Ἑλλήνων). Cp. Introduction, § 9.

3. συμμείξαι, of hostile congress, c. 48 supra.

4. ὤρων: sc. φεύγοντας.

πάντες ἔφευγον. In c. 63 supra

the Persians have been routed, and in c. 65 have fled ἐς τὸ τεῖχος τὸ ξόλανον. In c. 66 Artabazos and his men have fled ἐς Φωκέας. In c. 67 the Thebans have fled ἐς τὰς Θήβας, and ὁ πᾶς ὄμιλος have followed the Persians.

πλὴν τῆς ἵππου: the cavalry generally, on both wings, may have covered the retreat, or 'flight,' to some extent; but the Persian left wing does not appear to profit much by its cavalry, while the Boiotian cavalry does appear as actively and efficiently engaged. The Persian camp is reached and captured, while the Thebans make good their retreat to Thebes. τῆς τε ἄλλης καὶ here may be rather perfunctory. The disappearance of the Persian cavalry on the left wing is something of a problem: did it ride off with Artabazos?

5. τοσαῦτα refers to what follows (=τοσάδε), viz. the cavalry kept close to the enemy and screened the men who were in flight. ἀπείργουσα τοὺς φίλους ἀπὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων might rather have been ἀπείργουσα τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἀπὸ τῶν φίλων. With πρὸς τῶν π. cp. 8. 87.

69. 1. οἱ . . . νικῶντες, 'the victors'—primarily the Lakedaimonians; cp. the message reported just below.

τοὺς Ξέρξῃ: i.e. the barbarians (the term hardly includes τοὺς μετὰ βασιλέος "Ἕλληνας). Mardonios is no more; but the phrase is perhaps merely conventional, and hardly chosen expressly with that reference.

2. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ . . . φόβῳ, 'at the beginning of this rout.' ἐν, temporal, cp. c. 60 supra.

φόβος=φυγή, "the only sense in Homer" (L. & S.).

ἄλλοισι "Ελλησι τοῖσι τεταγμένοισι περὶ τὸ "Ηραι ἀπογενομένοισι τῆς μάχης, ὅτι μάχη τε γέγονε καὶ νι
5 μετὰ Πανσανίω· οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες ταῦτα, οὐδένα ταχθέντες, οἱ μὲν ἀμφὶ Κορινθίους ἐτράποντο διὰ τῆς

3 ἄλλοισι om. R || περὶ τὸ ἡραῖον (ἱραῖον R) τεταγμένοισι τε om. Marc. 5 πανσανίω B 6 ὑπωρεῖς B

3. τοῖσι . . περὶ τὸ "Ηραιον: cp. c. 52 supra; it is admitted here too that they were τεταγμένοι. The whole centre, both right and left, is here apparently involved; see below.

4. ἀπογενομένοισι τῆς μάχης: qui pugnae non interfuerunt (Baehr). In 2. 85, 136, 3. 111, 5. 4 ἀπογίνεσθαι means 'to die.'

μάχη τε γέγονε καὶ νικῶν οἱ μετὰ Πανσανίω, 'a battle has taken place, Pausanias and his men being victorious.' The combination of moods and tenses in this message is remarkable; the indicative and optative in somewhat similar fashion 8. 100 δώσει δίκην . . καὶ οἱ κρέσσον εἶη, 8. 111 ἦσαν ἄρα αἱ Ἀθηναὶ μεγάλαι τε καὶ εὐδαίμονες, αἱ καὶ θεῶν χρηστῶν ἦκοιεν εὖ. The present optative here is remarkable: even in this context, with the antecedent perfect, it could hardly be imperfect (γέγονε can hardly mean merely 'has begun'). Just about the same moment, or a little later in the day, ex hypothesi, substantially the same news was spread through the army on the strand at Mykale, c. 100 infra; but here οἱ μετὰ Π. is emphatic, and does not include the Athenians.

5. οὐδένα κόσμον ταχθέντες: a suspicious assertion, reducing them almost to the level of the barbarians in c. 59 supra.

6. οἱ μὲν ἀμφὶ Κορινθίους: Schweighaeuser, Krueger, Baehr, and others, have interpreted this merely of the Corinthians, and so the corresponding phrase below merely of the Megarians and Phleisians. This interpretation is neither grammatically nor materially tenable. The phrase means 'the Corinthians and those with them,' and plainly covers 'the right centre' as enumerated in c. 28 supra, comprising some 11,300 hoplites, in six (or eight) divisions, from the Corinthians on the extreme left (next the Lakedaimonians and Tegeatai) to the Mykenians and Tirythians on the right, i.e. just at the very middle of the Greek line.

This body, the right centre, is dimly reported as betaking itself to the Heraion, where it had been disposed and drawn up in battle, through, or over, the mountain and the ridge the way leading up to the Demeter.

This notice at first sight suggests they are going to the help of the position of the Lakedaimonians as described in cc. 56, 57 supra. Pausanias is ex hypothesi victorious, and does not need assistance; and in fact nothing is heard of this body of men, or of their ill-starred movement, οὐδένα ταχθέντες, started without any orders.

There is the same ambiguity elsewhere in regard to the exact position of the ὑπωρεῖς, in regard to the position of the κολωνοί, in regard to the position of the Demetria which had been involved in the movement, also as to the exact point at which this movement of the right centre took place. It is curious, too, that the message reaches this body of men summoning them (like the message in c. 60 supra) to the aid of the Persians (But cp. note to c. 61. 14 supra). The precise sequence and chronological order of the movements, orders, messages, movements, and positions of the parts of the field of battle are entirely presented by Hdt. The right division of the Greek army for the right centre had been detached and deployed on to the road from Athens (Dryoskephalai) for the purpose of holding it against the Persians and was actually so engaged. The Lakedaimonians were resisting the Persian infantry, lower down the slope, or had even already driven the Persians to flight. In any case, the line of march here indicated for the right centre is uphill from Plataea. The objective cannot be marked on the present church of St. Demetrius, the site of which is far below the

καὶ τῶν κολωνῶν τὴν φέρουσιν ἄνω ἰθὺ τοῦ ἱροῦ τῆς Δήμητρος, οἱ δὲ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας τε καὶ Φλειασίους διὰ τοῦ πεδίου τὴν λειοτάτην τῶν ὁδῶν. ἐπεῖτε δὲ ἀγχοῦ τῶν πολεμίων ἐγίνοντο οἱ Μεγαρεῖς καὶ Φλειάσιοι, ἀπιδόντες σφέας οἱ τῶν 10 Θηβαίων ἱππῶται ἐπειγομένους οὐδένα κόσμον ἤλανον ἐπ' αὐτοὺς τοὺς ἵππους, τῶν ἱππάρχει Ἀσωπόδωρος ὁ Τιμάνδρου, ἐσπεσόντες δὲ κατεστόρεσαν αὐτῶν ἑξακοσίους, τοὺς δὲ λοιποὺς κατήραξαν διώκοντες ἐς τὸν Κιθαιρῶνα.

Οὗτοι μὲν δὴ ἐν οὐδενὶ λόγῳ ἀπώλοντο· οἱ δὲ Πέρσαι 70
 καὶ ὁ ἄλλος ὄμιλος, ὡς κατέφυγον ἐς τὸ ξύλινον τεῖχος,

7 τὸν κολωνὸν Marc. || ἄνω om. B 10 ἀποδιδόντες || τῶν om. B,
 Holder 11 ἐπειγομένους Marc. 12 τοὺς ἵππους secl. van H.
 13 κατεστόρεσαν B || αὐτῶν || 14 κατήραξαν Marc. || 70. 1
 post λόγῳ excidisse ὄντες vel γενόμενοι suspic. van H.

8. οἱ δὲ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας τε καὶ Φλειασίους. The left centre, comprising the Megarians, Phleasians, and those in their division, a force of 7300 hoplites, cp. c. 78 supra. Of them it might have been said that they ἦσαν τὰ ἔμπροσθεν ἢ οἱ ἀμφὶ Κορινθίους (cp. c. 56 supra). As the right centre has moved, apparently E., or SE., to support, or cover, the right wing, so the left centre moves N., or NW., to support the left wing: διὰ τοῦ πεδίου τὴν λειοτάτην τῶν ὁδῶν, words which seem to carry a disparaging reflexion with them! Of course for the left centre to advance down hill, on to the plain, over which the road from Plataia to Thebes ran, to the support of the Athenians, who were evidently in difficulties (cp. c. 61 supra), was a gallant enough proceeding; but the Athenians do not appear to have been very grateful therefor.

10. ἀπιδόντες: cp. 8. 37.

12. τῶν ἱππάρχει: cp. c. 20 supra;
 the τῶν should be referred to ἱππῶται.

Ἀσωπόδωρος ὁ Τιμάνδρου. Of Timandros the father nothing more is known, but this Asopodoros may well be the father of that Herodotos, of Thebes, in whose honour Pindar composed an Epinikion, Isth. 1. The family, which was, of course, aristocratic and medizing, had some connexion with Orchomenos (cp. c. 35); cp. c. 16 supra.
 To these circumstances may be due the remembrance of the exploit here recorded.

13. κατεστόρεσαν αὐτῶν ἑξακοσίους.
 This heavy loss, and the consequent flight of the left centre ἐς τὸν Κιθαιρῶνα, can hardly have taken place after the victory of the Athenians over the Boiotians already recounted in c. 67

supra; it was more probably its antecedent, or concomitant, at least in part;
 in other words, the support afforded to the Athenians, on the extreme left, by the left centre, enabled them to claim a success over the Thebans.

70. 1. ἐν οὐδενὶ λόγῳ, (as) 'of no account,' cp. 7. 14, 57 (ἐν οὐδενὶ λόγῳ ποιέσθαι). Hdt. cannot have seen the monument at Megara, erected in honour of those who had fallen in the Persian war, with an epigram, in whole or part ascribable to Simonides (though of doubtful authenticity), containing a distich especially referable to the courage of the Megarians in facing the cavalry at Plataia; cp. c. 21 supra; Hauvette,
de l'authenticité etc. pp. 7-8, 92-94;
C.I.G. 1. 1051. The silence, or rather this explicit statement, of Hdt. might be added to the raisonnements against the authenticity of the epigram, or even against its existence in the time of Hdt.
 But such an argument ascribes too
 scientific a standard to Hdt.'s methods, and though the inscription is certainly late, the verses are certainly early.

οἱ δὲ Πέρσαι καὶ ὁ ἄλλος ὄμιλος.
 The narrative returns to the fortunes of the Persian left, the Greek right, cp.
 c. 65 supra. The ἄλλος is idiomatic ('besides,' 'as well'); even in their flight the Persians proper are not to be classed with ὁ ὄμιλος, ὁ πᾶς ὄμιλος of
 c. 67 supra.

ἔφθησαν ἐπὶ τοὺς πύργους ἀναβάντες πρὶν ἢ τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους ἀπικέσθαι, ἀναβάντες δὲ ἐφράξαντο ὡς ἡδυνέατο ἄριστα 5 τὸ τεῖχος· προσελθόντων δὲ τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων κατεστήκεε σφι τειχομαχίῃ ἔρρωμενестέρῃ. ἕως μὲν γὰρ ἀπῆσαν οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι, οἱ δ' ἡμύνοντο καὶ πολλῶ πλεον εἶχον τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων ὥστε οὐκ ἐπισταμένων τειχομαχεῖν· ὡς δὲ σφι Ἀθηναῖοι

4 ἐφράζοντο B 5 Ἀθηναίων Stein<sup>(2)3</sup>, van H.: cp. comment.
6 ἐπῆσαν B 7 οἷδε B || ἔχον z || τῶν Ἀθηναίων Stein<sup>(2)</sup> (prel. err.)
8 οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι Marc. z

3. ἔφθησαν ἐπὶ τοὺς πύργους ἀναβάντες: for the gramm. construction cp. 7. 142, c. 113 infra. This is the first (and last) appearance of the πύργοι on the ξύλινον τεῖχος. The defenders, at least the combatants among them, took their stand apparently not upon or below the wall, but above on these towers, from which they hurled weapons, stones, etc., against the assailants, no doubt.

4. ἐφράξαντο: φράζειν, φράσσειν means properly 'to fence,' fortify, cp. 8. 51 and 7. 142 ἡ γὰρ ἀκρόπολις τὸ πάλαι τῶν Ἀθηναίων ῥηχὺ ἐπέφρακτο. (φράξαντες, 8. 7, 'blocked'.) But the exact nature of the operation here recorded is obscure. The time was past for 'strengthening' their wall by additional fortifications, nor would the ascent of the towers be the natural preliminary to such work. φράσσειν can hardly be watered down so as merely to = φυλάσσειν, but might perhaps be translated, 'put into a posture of defence.'

5. προσελθόντων δὲ τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων. There is a certain clumsiness and obscurity in the way the τειχομαχίη is described. First, the Persians and the rest of the barbarian rout made good their escape into τὸ ξύλινον τεῖχος, and before the arrival of the 'Lakedaimonians' ascended the towers, and put the fort into a posture of defence. (It is not a case where pursuers and pursued entered together: either their lighter equipment or the intervention of the cavalry, c. 63 supra, enables the barbarian infantry to outstrip its pursuers. But were not a good many of the barbarians shut out of the fortification? And the pursuers were also retarded by the slaughter, c. 69 supra.) Next, the Lakedaimonians arrived at the fortification, and for a while were unable to effect an entrance; and there took place a τειχομαχίη. But cp. App. Crit. and next note.

6. ἔρρωμενестέρῃ. If the vulgate reading above is maintained the comparative can only be a rhetorical elegance, unless indeed it means that the fighting was too much for the Lakedaimonians, 'more than they could cope with.' Stein takes σφι to refer not to the Persians only, but to both sides, Persians and Greeks. He also has substituted Ἀθηναίων for Λακεδαιμονίων. This emendation is not convincing. If adopted, the next sentence will have back to explain the situation antecedent to the arrival of the 'Athenians' already recorded (cp. c. 61 supra φράξαντες γὰρ κτλ., following ἐπιπτον κτλ.). κατεστήκεε is, of course, not simply =  $\frac{\pi}{\pi}$  or ἐγένετο, but ἔρρωμενестέρῃ may be part of the predicate.

7. οἱ δέ: i.e. δὲ in apodosis (cp. 7. 51), the ἕως μὲν just before being answered by ὡς δὲ below. αἱ = οἱ Πέρσαι. πολλῶ πλεον εἶχον, 'were getting the better of'; cp. πλέον ἔχουν 4. 3, and οὐδὲν ἔλασσαν εἶχον c. 102 infra.

8. ὥστε = ἄτε, cp. c. 37 supra. Rawlinson instances the failures of the Spartans to subdue Eira, Ithome, Pylos: the story of the siege of Plataea (429-7 B.C.) is no less eminent a case. But the Athenians were not so very much better: the siege of Poteidaia lasted two years (432-30 B.C.); no assault on Syracuse occurred during the Athenian siege (414-13 B.C.). The defence of stone walls had always the advantage, in the absence of heavy machines and engines: fire or starvation were the chief hopes of the besiegers (cp. Thucydides, his essay in Poliorketics 2. 75-78). The Athenian reputation was more or less established at the time of the third Messenian war (Thuc. 1. 102. 2), and may have been enhanced in the assaults on Samos (440-39 B.C.) where some engines were perhaps employed, without much success (Plutarch, προσῆλθον, οὕτω δὲ ἰσχυρὴ ἐγίνετο <ή> τειχομαχίη καὶ χρόνον ἐπὶ πολλόν. τέλος δὲ ἀρετῇ τε καὶ λιπαρίῃ ἐπέβησαν 10 Ἀθηναῖοι τοῦ τείχεος καὶ ἤριπον· τῇ δὲ ἐσεχέοντο οἱ Ἕλληνες. πρῶτοι δὲ ἐσῆλθον Τεγεῆται ἐς τὸ τεῖχος, καὶ τὴν σκηνὴν τὴν Μαρδονίου οὗτοι ἦσαν οἱ διαρπάσαντες, τὰ τε ἄλλα ἐξ αὐτῆς καὶ τὴν φάτνην τῶν ἵππων ἐοῦσαν χαλκῆν πᾶσαν καὶ θέης ἄξιον. τὴν μὲν νυν φάτνην ταύτην τὴν Μαρδονίου 15 ἀνέθεσαν ἐς τὸν νηὸν τῆς Ἀλέης Ἀθηναίης Τεγεῆται, τὰ δὲ

9 <ή> Stein<sup>3</sup>
13 τὴν: τοῦ B:

11 ἤριπον Marc. z

12 εἰσῆλθον Marc.

Pericles 27, cp. Diodor. 12. 28. 3; the authority was merely Ephoros, and it is clear that the city was not captured by force; but it looks as if their reputation was based rather on the defensive aptitude of their own city, long walls, and fortified harbour than on the brilliance of their record in assaulting others. The Lakedaimonians not having any walls of their own of course could not τειχομαχεῖν. Cp. Thucyd. 1. 90. 2. The case of 'wooden walls' was vastly different; cp. 8. 52 supra.

ὥς δὲ σφί. Ἀθηναῖοι προσῆλθον. A fresh stage is reached on the arrival of the Athenians; the ἰσχυρὴ τειχομαχίη now set up hardly enforces the τειχομαχίη ἐρρωμενεστέρη recorded just above. The sequel shows that the claim made for the Athenians is untenable: it is the Tegeatai who effected a breach (perhaps even before the arrival of the Athenians).

10. ἀρετῇ τε καὶ λιπαρίῃ: cp. c. 21 supra, where the Megarians claim credit for this combination in a defensive position, a case to which the first term would more naturally apply. The question here is of scaling the wall (ἐπέβησαν τοῦ τείχεος) and effecting a breach.

11. ἤριπον: sc. αὐτό, or even αὐτοῦ. In either case the use of the 2nd aorist with transitive sense is remarkable; cp. App. Crit. Hdt. has the 1st aor. ἐρείψαι in l. 164, but cp. L. & S. sub v.

12. πρῶτοι δὲ ἐσῆλθον Τεγεῆται: this statement is hardly reconcilable with the immediately preceding context; those who first scaled the wall and effected a breach must also have been the first to enter the fort, and vice versa; if the Tegeatai were the first to enter, the Tegeatai doubtless effected a breach for themselves. The latter is the more probable alternative; the former is discounted by the Attic bias in Hdt.'s source or sources for the story of Plataea, and by the obvious anomaly in this record.

τὴν σκηνὴν τὴν Μαρδονίου: the tent, or pavilion, of Mardonios was probably in or near the centre of the fortified camp, and the fact that the Tegeatai pillaged it would not seem to throw any light upon their place of entrance. The tent was, perhaps, the same tent as Xerxes had used; cp. c. 82 infra.

15. θέης ἄξιον: that Hdt. had himself seen this bronze manger (φάτνη) cannot be inferred from this description or phrase; cp. c. 25 supra; but he might have added this sentence or two upon the manger and its destination after his visit to the Peloponnesos. It has a somewhat parenthetical air, and might very well be 'second-hand.' Cp. Introduction, § 9.

16. τῆς Ἀλέης Ἀθηναίης. This goddess and her temple at Tegea are mentioned elsewhere, l. 86, and in such a way as rather to suggest autopsy (more directly than anything in the present passage). The temple as it existed in Hdt.'s day was burnt down in the year 395-4 B.C., and the splendid temple described by Pausanias 8. 45 ff. was a later edifice; but, though it still contained the fetters of the Spartans (8. 47. 2), Pausanias makes no mention of the manger of Mardonios. If the Tegeatai really found the φάτνη τῶν ἵππων in the σκηνῇ of Mardonios, the white charger (c. 63 supra) must have been stabled in rather close proximity to his rider's quarters. On the further contents of the pavilion cp. c. 82 infra.

Alcia as a title of Athene is perhaps to be connected with the Arkadian town of the same name mentioned by Pausanias

ἄλλα ἐς τὸντό, ὅσα περ ἔλαβον, ἐσήνεικαν τοῖσι Ἑλλησι. οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι οὐδὲν ἔτι στῖφος ἐποίησαντο πεσόντος τοῦ τείχεος, οὐδέ τις αὐτῶν ἀλκῆς ἐμέμνητο, ἀλύκταζόν τε οἶα ἐν ὀλίγῳ
 20 χώρῳ πεφοβημένοι τε καὶ πολλὰι μυριάδες κατειλημένοι ἀνθρώπων. παρὴν τε τοῖσι Ἑλλησι φονεύειν οὕτω ὥστε

17 ἐσηνείκαντο B 18 στῖφος R Marc. 19 οὐδέ Stein: οὔτε ||
 τις: τῆς B || αὐτέων z 20 χώρῳ: χρόνῳ BCpr. z, del. Krueger, van H.
 || κατειλημένοι P, Schweighaeuser: κατειλλημένοι R: κατειλλημένοι V:
 κατειλημμένοι α etc.

(8. 23. 1), containing a sanctuary of Athene Alea, a goddess worshipped also in Mantinea (ib. 8. 9. 6). The cult was not confined actually to historic Arcadia; Pausanias saw a wooden image of Athene Alea on the road from Sparta to Therapne (3. 19. 7), and Xenophon (Hell. 6. 5. 27) mentions a ιερόν τῆς Ἀλέας apparently in the same place at the time of the first Theban invasion of Lakonia (369 B.C.). Tegea was undoubtedly the most important centre of the cult in historic times; 'Aleus' was reckoned the city's founder (Pausan. 8. 45. 1), but Pausanias seems to distinguish clearly between the sanctuary of Athene Poliatis at Tegea and that of Athene Alea (ib. 8. 47. 5).

17. ἐς τὸντό . . ἐσήνεικαν τοῖσι Ἑλλησι: i.e. they brought into the common stock; it is not quite clear whether τοῖσι Ἑλλησι is an ethical dative (pro bono publico) or loosely constructed with τὸντό, into the same place, or the common heap, to which all the rest of the Greeks brought their spoils. There seems to be some little feeling of jealousy over the possession by the Tegeatai of the bronze manger, and a hint that they had secreted it. The probability is that they were allowed to retain it as a special reward for having been first into the Persian camp.

18. στῖφος: cp. c. 57 supra.

πεσόντος τοῦ τείχεος: the fortification 'fell' as soon as a breach had been made in the wall.

19. ἀλκῆς ἐμέμνητο: an Homeric reminiscence, e.g. Il. 5. 112. Cp. Baehr.

ἀλύκταζον: an hapaxlegomenon, apparently connected with ἀλῶν (poetic), 'to be distraught,' frantic. Cp. ἀλαλκτῆμαι Il. 10. 94 (as if from ἀλυκτέω).

20. κατειλημένοι: a conj. of Schweighaeuser, "undoubtedly a true one,"

Blakesley; it is in fact the reading of P! cp. App. Crit.

21. ἀνθρώπων: cp. c. 44 supra.

παρὴν τε: the climactic τε, cp. c. 66. 4 supra. παρὴν, cp. 8. 20, like παρὲν 6. 137, 7. 24, etc., 'it was in their power . . .'. The 'many myriads' are immediately precised as 30-4 = 260,000 units, of whom less than 3000 survive! Such butchery is practically inconceivable. If we accept 3000 as about the number of the survivors, the figures for Mardonios' forces would have to be indefinitely reduced; but the one extreme is hardly more to be trusted than the other. It is observable that the corps d'armée under Artabazos is here again included strictly in the original total of Mardonios' army, consistently with 8. 126; but this involves Hdt. in an inconsistency, for he here seems to take no account of the fact that Artabazos had started with 60,000. He also seems to allow nothing for the losses in previous skirmishes. Hdt.'s statement is tantamount to saying that 99 per cent were slain, for of (300,000-40,000) only (3000-x) escaped. The estimate might be rationalized down to meaning that of the 300,000 men, taken by Hdt. as the estimate of the forces left with Mardonios, and still acceptable as an estimate for the total land-forces of Xerxes (τοὺς Ξέρξεω c. 69 supra), only 43,000 returned to Asia from the campaign of 479 B.C. If that was less than half the forces entrusted to Mardonios and Artabazos the losses would still have been enormous, and might justify Aischylos and his 'heaps of corpses' (θῶναι δὲ νεκρῶν Pers. 821 ff.). Diodoros 11. 32 puts the Persian losses in the battle of Plataia at upwards of 100,000 (probably only Ephoros' rationalism); Ktesias 26 the Persian losses from Salamis to Plataia at 120,000.

τρίηκοντα μυριάδων στρατοῦ, καταδευσέων τεσσέρων τὰς ἔχων Ἀρτάβαζος ἔφυγε, τῶν λοιπέων μὴδὲ τρεῖς χιλιάδας περιγενέσθαι. Λακεδαιμονίων δὲ τῶν ἐκ Σπάρτης ἀπέθανον οἱ πάντες ἐν τῇ συμβολῇ εἰς καὶ ἐνενήκοντα, Τεγεατέων δὲ 25 ἑκκαίδεκα, Ἀθηναίων δὲ δύο καὶ πενήκοντα.

Ἡρίστευσε δὲ τῶν βαρβάρων πεζὸς μὲν ὁ Περσέων, ἵππος 71

22 μυριάδων C Marc.
|| καὶ om. B

23 ἔφυγε Marc.

25 συμβουλῇ C

The one tolerably certain fact in the whole story is the escape of Artabazos with not less than 40,000 men.

24. Λακεδαιμονίων δὲ τῶν ἐκ Σπάρτης: a remarkable periphrasis for Σπαρτιητέων. No account is taken apparently of the Perioikoi, much less of mere Helots; cp. c. 85 infra. The figures which follow have a precise and an authentic air, but apparently refer merely to those who fell in the final and decisive engagement (ἐν τῇ συμβολῇ) of the thirteenth day. In c. 61 supra πολλοὶ have been killed, and in c. 63 the Persians κατέβαλλον πολλοὺς τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων—here only 91 'Spartiates' are accounted for 'in all' (οἱ πάντες). The proportionate losses are interesting: the Spartans lose not quite 2 per cent (91 out of 5000); the Tegeatai just over 1 per cent (16 out of 1500); the Athenians considerably under 1 per cent (52 out of 8000); the totals, however, are only nominal, especially for the last engagement. No account at all is taken of the right and left centre, to say nothing of the ψιλοί, such as they were. Plutarch (Aristeid. 19) gives the sum total (οἱ πάντες) of those who fell upon this occasion as 1360, whereas the figures here amount to 159 only. Plutarch adds, on the authority of Kleidemos, the curious statement that the 52 Athenians were all of one tribe, the Aiantis. If 52 Athenians of one tribe had been slain, we might have to multiply roughly by ten to reach the sum total, though one or other tribe of course might have been specially hard hit on the occasion. At Marathon 192 Athenians were admitted to have fallen (6. 117), considerably more than the total loss here reported for Plataia. There is something radically wrong in these figures, though doubtless they repose on some monuments, or inscriptions, carelessly copied, or misunderstood.

71. 1. ἡρίστευσε δὲ κτλ. There should follow here the record of the formal ἀριστήρια, or awards of valour; as in 8. 11, 17 for Artemision, in 8. 93, 123 for Salamis etc., and in c. 105 infra for Mykale. But the record here is not of any formal and express award, for (a) the merits of the barbarians are included (cp. however 8. 17); (b) Hdt. himself expressly indicates that he has no official authority for his awards. There is in fact here a casus omissus, which generates a problem, for assuredly Greeks failed not in the case of Plataia to discuss and award the Aristeia, as for the other battles of the war; nor is it credible that Hdt. should unwittingly have passed over the record, or tradition, of the formal award: he must have omitted it deliberately. Plutarch (Aristeid. 20 and de malign. Hdti 42, 10 = Mor. 873) makes good the omission. The Athenians and Spartans nearly came to blows over the question of the award (τὸ ἀριστεῖον): the question was referred to the confederates. Theogeiton of Megara suggested the award of the prize to some third city, Kleokritos of Korinth proposed that Plataia should be that city, Aristides at once accepted the suggestion on behalf of Athens, and Pausanias on behalf of Lakedaimon. Eighty talents were assigned to the Plataians, out of which they built the temple of Athene, which was still up-standing in the days of Plutarch (cp. note to c. 70 supra): the Lakedaimonians, however, erected a trophy on their own account, and the Athenians one likewise separately. This story has intrinsic probability, and the chief argument against it is the silence of Hdt. here, and the silence of Thucydides in the Plataian Apology, 3. 53-59. But the argumentum e silentio seldom is conclusive. The story in question was little to the credit either of Sparta or of Athens, and was probably a sore subject at both places. The Athenian Thucydides may have ignored it from patriotism, or δὲ ἡ Σακέων, ἀνὴρ δὲ λέγεται Μαρδόνιος· Ἑλλήνων δέ, ἀγαθῶν γενομένων καὶ Τεγεατέων καὶ Ἀθηναίων, ὑπερεβάλλοντο ἀρετῇ Λακεδαιμόνιοι. ἄλλω μὲν οὐδενὶ ἔχω ἀποσημήνασθαι

5 (ἅπαντες γὰρ οὗτοι τοὺς κατ' ἐωυτοὺς ἐνίκων), ὅτι δὲ κατὰ τὸ ἰσχυρότερον προσηνείχθησαν καὶ τούτων ἐκράτησαν. καὶ ἄριστος ἐγένετο μακρῷ Ἀριστόδημος κατὰ γνώμας τὰς ἡμετέρας, ὃς ἐκ Θερμοπυλέων μῦθος τῶν τριηκοσίων σωθεὶς εἶχε ὄνειδος <τε> καὶ ἀτιμίην. μετὰ δὲ τοῦτον ἡρίστευσαν Ποσειδώνιος

71. 2 ἡ: ὁ B || λέγεται del. Cobet, van H. 3 ὑπερέβαλον Mac.
4 <τὸ> ἄλλω? van H. 5 πάντες B 6 ἰσχυρότατον BPr.
Holder || προσηνείχθησαν B || τούτων = 8 ἔχε = 9 <τε> καὶ
coni. Stein<sup>1</sup>, recep. van H., Stein<sup>2</sup> || τούτων α

made his dramatic mouthpiece ignore it from fact. It is harder to explain the silence or the ignorance of Hdt.: he takes part definitely with the Lakedaimonians; has he deliberately suppressed the story in the Lakedaimonian interest? It does not help us in this connexion to infer (with Grote and Rawlinson) that no formal decision was made; their inference eases the Thucydidean problem, but not the Herodotean: our author was bound to have told the story of the dispute, even if there was no formal award. He prefers to divide the honours of the day between the Koryphaioi (6. 98), for Plataia to Lakedaimon, for Mykale to Athens. Pindar, Pyth. 1. 77, hints that Plataia was a Spartan victory; Aischylos, Pers. 816 f., might seem to recognize the claims of the Δωρὶς λόγχῃ, and Diodoros 11. 33. 1 records a definite award to Sparta and to Pausanias (cp. c. 64 supra); but Attic prejudice is most fully represented in the Menezenos 240 f. where τὰ ἀριστεία τῷ λόγῳ are awarded to the Μαραθωνομάχαι, τὰ δευτερεία τοῖς περὶ Σαλαμίνα καὶ ἐπ' Ἀρτεμισίῳ ναυμαχήσασιν, while τὸ ἐν Πλαταιαῖς ἔργον, κοινὸν ἤδη τοῦτο Λακεδαιμονίων τε καὶ Ἀθηναίων, holds but the third place, and of the respective credit of the two states the speaker is discreetly silent. This may represent an early, the earliest, Attic tendency. Nothing other states might do should ever be admitted to have eclipsed 'the trophies of Miltiades'! The legend of Marathon had ten years' start of the story of Plataia, and doubtless received a strong stimulus from the idealized 'victory of Pausanias' (cp. c. 27 supra).

ὁ Περσέων: i.e. the Persian infantry, as distinguished from Medes, Baktrians, Indians, Sakans, which was directly opposed to the Spartans; cc. 31, 47, 59 supra.

2. ἡ Σακέων: the Sakai or Scythae (cp. 7. 64) oddly enough are not enumerated among the nations furnishing cavalry to the army of Xerxes, 7. 84-86, unless they are masquerading there as Κάσπιοι.

ἀνὴρ δέ: the word here in pregnant sense. λέγεται looks a little superfluous, but perhaps is intended to insinuate a doubt; in any case the λόγος must be a Greek one.

3. ὑπερέβαλλοντο ἀρετῇ Λακεδαιμόνιοι. This is a very definite award by the historian himself, as against the Athenians and Tegeatai, and a fortiori against all the rest. ὑπερβάλλεσθαι, cp. 8. 123. The award further stultifies the story told c. 46 supra, and the reason given for the award confirms the importance of the ἐθελοκακία on the part of the medizing Greeks admitted in c. 67 supra. The asyndeton in giving the reason makes it look almost like an argument inserted to answer a challenge or criticism: the ὅτι δέ (sc. πλὴν ὅτι, or τῷδε δέ, ὅτι) in apposition to ἄλλω μὲν is observable.

6. προσφέρεισθαι is primarily of attacking, cp. c. 49 supra.

τούτων: sc. τοῦ ἰσχυροτέρου, i.e. τῶν Περσέων.

7. ἐγένετο, 'proved himself': this is the historian's own private judgement (κατὰ γνώμας τὰς ἡμετέρας, cp. 4. 53) in opposition to Spartan opinion. The absence of a cross reference back to 7. 232, and the full and sufficient description of Aristodemos here, are observable: ὃς ἐκ . . . ἀτιμίην is rather gloss-like; cp. 1.2.

9. Ποσειδώνιος τε καὶ Φιλοκίων:

τε καὶ Φιλοκύνων καὶ Ἀμομφάρετος ὁ Σπαρτιήτης. καίτοι 10
γενομένης λέσχης ὃς γένοιτο αὐτῶν ἄριστος, ἐγνώσαν οἱ παραγενόμενοι Σπαρτιητέων Ἀριστόδημον μὲν βουλόμενον φανερῶς ἀποθανεῖν ἐκ τῆς παρεούσης οἱ αἰτίας, λυσσῶντά τε καὶ ἐκλείποντα τὴν τάξιν ἔργα ἀποδέξασθαι μεγάλα, Ποσειδώνιον δὲ οὐ βουλόμενον ἀποθνήσκειν ἄνδρα γενέσθαι ἀγαθόν· 15
τοσοῦτον τοῦτον εἶναι ἀμείνω. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν καὶ φθόνῳ ἂν

10 ὁ σπαρτιήτης αC: σπαρτιήτης ceteri: Σπαρτιῆται Krueger, Holder:
' an fuit ὁ Πιτανήτης? ' Stein: seclussit van H. 11 αὐτέων z 12
μὲν: δὲ Marc. 13 αἰτίας: ἀτιμίας Cobet, van H. (tacite) 14 ἐκλιπόντα B, Holder, van H. || μεγάλα ἀποδέξασθαι B 16 ἀμείνω R

there was not much to choose apparently between this pair; they are mentioned again c. 85 infra. The men to whom the ἀριστεία are awarded had all fallen in the fight. The addition of ὁ Σπαρτιήτης to the name of Amompharetos might suggest that Poseidonios and Philokyon were not 'Spartiatas,' but Perioikoi: did Hdt. himself, indeed, write ὁ Σπαρτιήτης? It seems unlikely that the Spartans, even in a Lesche, would put Perioikoi above citizens in honour: the burial arrangements, rightly understood, point the same conclusion; cp. c. 85 infra. This Poseidonios is not elsewhere mentioned: Poseidon was worshipped in Sparta and throughout Lakonia; cp. S. Wide, Lakonische Kulte, 1893, pp. 31-47. Philokyon also as an historical person is otherwise unknown; the name is significant of sporting tendencies, in favour at Sparta.

10. Ἀμομφάρετος ὁ Σπαρτιήτης. On Amompharetos cp. cc. 53 supra, 85 infra. Hdt. can hardly have written ὁ Σπαρτιήτης here; cp. App. Crit.

11. γενομένης λέσχης, 'on the occurrence of a discussion.' λέσχη is hardly official, or authoritative, but rather informal discussion; cp. 2. 32, and ἑλλεσχος 1. 153, περιλεσχήμενος 2. 135. Blakeley's note ad l. is worth consulting, but he seems guilty of an hysteronproteron in deriving the idea of the conversation or the meeting from the place of resort, the 'seat in a warm situation,' which was no doubt the scene of many a λέσχη. Od. 18. 329 has the word in the locative sense, and the local or material sense is predominant in Attic and Delphic usage (Pausan. 10. 25), but it is hardly possible that location is the primary sense of a derivative of λέγω, and that 'assembly,' 'conversation,' 'talk,' are only secondary, and a function of the place.

ὃς appears to be used for τίς or ὅστις, cp. τὸ χρεὼν εἶη c. 55 supra, and 6. 37 τὸ θέλει τὸ ἐπος εἶναι, 6. 124 ὃς μέντοι ἦν ὁ ἀναδέξας κτλ.

αὐτῶν may refer to the three men above named.

οἱ παραγενόμενοι: those present, i.e. (who had been) present (at the battle)! Or, (who were) present (at the discussion)? The former meaning is compatible with the latter fact. Was Hdt. himself present? And where did the discussion take place?

13. ἐκ τῆς παρεούσης οἱ αἰτίας, 'in consequence of the blame attaching to him.' ὁ τρέσας apparently had been allowed to resume his place in the ranks; or was Aristodemos at Plataia extra ordinem? Had he any choice but ἐκλείπειν τὴν τάξιν? λυσσῶν is rare; cp. Plato, Rep. 329 c, 586 c, of ἔρως: here used in its earlier Homeric sense of battle-rage (only in Iliad). With his desperate courage may be compared that of his fellows at Thermopylai 7. 223 παραχρῆμαί τε καὶ ἀτόντες. Philokyon and Amompharetos are apparently nowhere beside him.

16. ταῦτα μὲν καὶ φθόνῳ ἂν εἴποιεν. Was Aristodemos Hdt.'s own hero? Was it the Halikarnassian himself who put in a plea at the discussion for the due recognition of his heroism, was worsted in the argument, and now explains away his own defeat by ascribing φθόνος (inter alia) to the other speakers? φθόνος is no doubt a vera causa in Greek life and literature (cp. 7. 237), but it is not always rightly invoked, nor does it appear self-evident why Spartiates should be more jealous of Aristodemos than of the others.

εἵποιεν· οὗτοι δὲ τοὺς κατέλεξα πάντες, πλὴν Ἀριστοδήμου, τῶν ἀποθανόντων ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ μάχῃ τίμιοι ἐγένοντο· Ἀριστόδημος δὲ βουλόμενος ἀποθανεῖν διὰ τὴν προειρημένην 20 αἰτίην οὐκ ἐτιμήθη.

72 Οὗτοι μὲν τῶν ἐν Πλαταιῇσι ὀνομαστότατοι ἐγένοντο. Καλλικράτης γὰρ ἔξω τῆς μάχης ἀπέθανε, ἔλθων ἀνὴρ κάλλιστος ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον τῶν τότε Ἑλλήνων, οὐ μόνον αὐτῶν Λακεδαιμονίων ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων· ὅς,
5 ἐπειδὴ ἐσφαγιάζετο Πανσανίης, κατήμενος ἐν τῇ τάξιν ἐτρω-

17 εἵποιμεν αC Marc. || πάντες B: πάντας 18 τῶν ἀποθανόντων . . ἐν Πλαταιῇσι ut glossema tollenda suad. Krueger: mihi quidem verba βουλόμενος ἀποθανεῖν vix genuina videntur 72. 1 πλαταιῇσι α: πλαταιῇσιν B 3 τότε om. Marc. || οὐ . . Ἑλλήνων om. B || μόνον RSVcorr.: μόνον Vpr. z 4 αὐτέων z || Ἑλλήνων del. Gomperz, van H. 5 τάξιν Pz: τάξει

Probably the Spartiates put aside the case of Aristodemus altogether; with them the only candidates for honours were the others: Poseidonios, Philokyon, Amompharetos. Hdt. has not made this quite clear, his own γνώμαι running counter.

17. τοὺς κατέλεξα: a reference back to the immediate context, cp. 7. 99.

18. Krueger suspected the words τῶν ἀποθανόντων ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ μάχῃ as a gloss on the words τῶν ἐν Πλαταιῇσι below: cp. App. Crit.

τίμιοι ἐγένοντο were made 'honourables,' were 'ennobled' or given titles: a strictly official act, or process of glorification, canonization, but only perhaps performed for the departed, and involving (1) a public funeral, (2) a monument, (3) offerings at the tomb ὥσπερ ἦρωι. (So too Stein, who cps. 3. 55, which is hardly to the point, and 5. 67.) A lower form of the same act, or process, was the ἐπαίνεσις, which was conferred upon the living; cp. Thuc. 2. 25. 2 πρῶτος τῶν κατὰ τὸν πόλεμον ἐπηνέθη ἐν Σπάρτῃ (sc. ὁ Βρασίδας).

19. διὰ τὴν προειρημένην αἰτίην: i.e. for the aforesaid reason, for the reason I have given; αἰτίην being used in a somewhat different sense to that above, ἐκ τῆς παρούσης αἰτίας. βουλόμενος ἀποθανεῖν is like a gloss, and would be on Hdt.'s part an admission weakening his own verdict.

72. 1. ὀνομαστότατοι: in the positive 8. 89, 6. 114; in the comparative 6. 126. τῶν ἐν Πλαταιῇσι seems=τῶν ἐν τῇ μάχῃ ἀποθανόντων: cp. note above.

2. Καλλικράτης γάρ gives the reason for his not being one of the ὀνομαστότατοι—he died, perforce, a passive death, ἔξω τῆς μάχης, without having been able to strike a blow. It seems a restricted idea of the μάχη which regards Kallistratos as hors du combat; yet he was not actually slain in the ranks but apparently carried to the rear, and he was unable to strike a blow cominus: the passive virtues, and even the passive states of active virtues (e.g. courage) were less highly esteemed in Sparta than with us. The name Kallikrates is not an uncommon one. Plutarch, Agesilaos 35, mentions a Spartan of his own time so named, a descendant of the man, Antikrates, who had dealt Epameinondas his death-blow. Who would not fain believe that Kallikratidas, the typical Spartan of the old school (Xenophon, Hell. 1. 6. 1-36) towards the end of the fifth century, was a relative of the Plataean hero, who was remembered for his good looks and his last bon mot!

3. κάλλιστος . . τῶν τότε Ἑλλήνων: like Nireus to Ilion, Il. 2. 673; like Philippos of Kroton to Segesta, 5. 47. Size was an element in the Hellenic conception of κάλλος, whether male or female (cp. 3. 1 κάρα μεγάλη τε καὶ εὐεδής, 5. 12 μεγάλῃ τε καὶ εὐεδῇ, 1. 60 Φύε); cp. the description of Xerxes 7. 187, κάλλος τε εἵνεκα καὶ μεγάλους. Plutarch, Aristeid. 17, specifies the size as well as the beauty of Kallikrates.

5. ἐπειδὴ ἐσφαγιάζετο Πανσανίης: cp. c. 61 supra; ἐπεὶ is used with the ματίσθη τοξεύματι τὰ πλευρά. καὶ δὴ οἱ μὲν ἐμάχοντο, ὁ δ' ἐξενηνευγμένος ἐδυσθανάτεε τε καὶ ἔλεγε πρὸς Ἀείμνηστον ἄνδρα Πλαταιέα οὐ μέλειν οἱ ὅτι πρὸ τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἀποθνήσκει, ἀλλ' ὅτι οὐκ ἐχρήσατο τῇ χειρὶ καὶ ὅτι οὐδὲν ἐστὶ οἱ ἀποδεδεγμένον ἔργον ἐκείνου ἀξιον προθυμειμένου ἀποδέξασθαι. 10 Ἀθηναίων δὲ λέγεται εὐδοκίμησαι Σωφάνης ὁ Εὐτυχίδεω, 73

6 ὁ δὲ B 7 ἐξενηνευγμένος = || τε om. B || αείμνηστον SV: ἀρίμνηστον ceteri, Stein, Holder, van H., cf. c. 64 supra 8 μέλλειν BB Marc. || ἀποθνήσκει van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἀποθνήσκει (ἀποθνήσκων C) 9 χερὶ =

imperf. c. 56 supra. The verb is a 'deponent' (L. & S.), but why not 'middle,' as σφαγιάω is found in Aristophanes (bis) Birds 569 f. (σφαγιαζομένῳ passive) and in later writers (cp. σφαγιασθέντι 7. 180 supra)?

κατήμενος ἐν τῇ τάξει. The hoplites sat on the ground in the battle-array, crouching under their shields, to avoid the arrows and other missiles, cp. cc. 61, 62 (especially προεξαστάνας). Wesseling refers to Plutarch Aristeid. 17 ὡς δὲ θυόμενος οὐκ ἐκαλλιέρι προσέταξε τοῖς Λακεδαιμονίοις τὰς ἀσπίδας πρὸ τῶν ποδῶν θεμένους ἀτρέμα καθέζεσθαι. The idea that the shields were put out of use for the time is hardly to be entertained. The passages quoted from Euripides, Suppl. 357, 664, 674 (παρ' ὅπλοις ἦσθαι, ἐφ' ὅπλοις ἦσθαι, or ἦσθαι simpliciter), are not really to the point, as they do not describe a tactical position. More to the point were Tyrtaeus, 11. 35 (ὅτ' ἀσπίδος ἄλλοθεν ἄλλος πτόσσοντες), but that it applies only to γυμνήτες, cp. c. 48 supra.

6. τὰ πλευρά: cp. c. 22 supra, an accusative 'of reference' or limitation; a plural of extent or abstraction (it takes a plurality of ribs to make one side). On which side he was wounded Hdt. does not say; probably the right.

ἐμάχοντο: the μάχη is in progress, though Kallikrates dies ἐξω τῆς μάχης, having been carried to the rear; or perhaps the imperfect is used to denote their ability and mind for battle, as compared with his disqualification. καὶ δέ, concessive, cp. cc. 6, 8, 48 supra.

7. ἐξενηνευγμένος: he was carried out of the ranks by his helot, with or without assistance; cp. the narrative of the destruction of the Spartan mora in 390 B.C., Xenoph. Hell. 4. 5. 14 οἱ δὲ Λακεδαιμόνιοι ἐπεὶ ἠκοντίζοντο καὶ ὁ μὲν

τις ἐτέτρωτο ὁ δὲ καὶ ἐπεπτώκει, τούτους μὲν ἐκέλευον τοὺς ὑπασπιστὰς ἀραμένους ἀποφέρειν εἰς Λέχαιον· καὶ οὗτοι μόνον τῆς μόρας τῇ ἀληθείᾳ ἐσώθησαν (ὑπασπισταί, i.e. γυμνήτες, i.e. helots).

ἐδυσθανάτεε, 'was dying hard,' i.e. kept death at bay for some time; cp. Plato Rep. 406 B δυσθανάτων δὲ ὑπὸ σοφίας εἰς γῆρας ἀφίκετο (anticipated just before in μακρὸν τὸν θάνατον αὐτῷ ποιήσας). How long the struggle lasted in the case of Kallikrates is not stated.

Ἀείμνηστον ἄνδρα Πλαταιέα. This can hardly be any other than the ἀνὴρ ἐν Σπάρτῃ λόγιμος who had the credit of dealing Mardonios his death-wound, cp. c. 64 supra, perhaps one with ὁ στρατηγὸς τῶν Πλαταιέων of Plutarch Aristeid. 11. How the dying Kallikrates comes to be conversing with him ἐξω τῆς μάχης is not very clear. Were there Plataians attached to the staff of Pausanias, or working with the Spartans (as well as those with the Athenians); or had the Plataians been shifted wholesale to the right wing; or did the interview between Aeimnestos and the dying man take place after the battle?

8. πρό, 'on behalf of . . .' = ἐνεκα, ὑπέρ. Cp. c. 22 supra.

9. οὐκ ἐχρήσατο τῇ χειρὶ: cp. 3. 78 ὁρέων δὲ μιν ἀργὸν ἐπεστέωτα ὁ Γοβρύης εἶπετο ὁ τι οὐ χράται τῇ χειρὶ.

73. 1. Ἀθηναίων δέ. The interest is shifted to the left wing, of which very little has been recorded in the actual battle, cp. cc. (60), 61, 67, (70). A different source is doubtless here in evidence, though the introduction of the verb λέγεται is not reassuring as to its reliability. εὐδοκίμησαι is, of course, less than ἀριστεύσαι, which is used of the same man in the next chapter.

Σωφάνης ὁ Εὐτυχίδεω: an old

ἐκ δήμου Δεκελεῖθεν, Δεκελέων δὲ τῶν κοτε ἐργασαμένων ἔργον χρήσιμον ἐς τὸν πάντα χρόνον, ὡς αὐτοὶ Ἀθηναῖοι λέγουσι. ὥς γὰρ δὴ τὸ πάλαι κατὰ Ἑλένης κομιδὴν Τυνδαρίδαι

73. 2 ἐκ: ἐὼν Koen, Holder, van H. || δεκελῆθεν BP Marc. z: δὲ κεκλῆθεν C || κοτε Bekker: ποτε libri 4 τοπάλοι Pz

acquaintance, as the work of Hdt. now stands; cp. 6. 92, where his deme but not his patronymic is given; cp. further c. 75 infra, where his biography is enlarged. The father's name, Eutychides, is commoner at Athens and elsewhere than the son's (cp. Pape-Benseler, sub vv.), but nothing more appears to be recorded of this particular man. Greek onomatology rang a score of changes on the significant compounds εὐ-τυχ-. The wish was father to the name.

2. ἐκ δήμου Δεκελῆθεν. The first two words were superfluous in official Attic. The demotikon is given as Δεκελεύς here and in 6. 92. Δεκελεύς ap. Steph. B. sub v., also Δεκελειᾶθεν and Δεκελειῶθεν. On the position of Dekeleia cp. c. 15 supra. It belonged to the (VIII) Hippothontis (cp. l.c.) and was perhaps the chief deme in the Mesogaian or Land-Tritty of that tribe, though this point does not appear to have been as yet established epigraphically (cp. Judeich ap. Pauly-Wissowa ii. 2229 f.; Milchhöfer, ib. iv. 2425).

Δεκελέων δὲ τῶν κοτε κτλ. The genitive may be in rough apposition to Δεκελεῖθεν or to δήμου, or constructed with Σωφάνης, or even regarded as a correction or limitation of Ἀθηναίων, or, in fine, of no very strict construction at all! The digression or excursus into the mythical history of Attica is rather forced, and looks like an insertion, but how far the insertion extends is not obvious. Insertions may even have been made here at more than one time; thus the last sentence of the chapter (οὕτω ὥστε . . . ἀπέχεσθαι) is manifestly to be dated after the outbreak of the Peloponnesian war, but may be a separate addition. There are, in fact, traces in this passage of all three drafts, or stages, in the composition of Hdt.'s work, viz. the original basis, which would naturally record the ἀριστήα on the Athenian side; the addition of a note on the mythical antecedents of Dekeleia; thirdly, the little appendix upon the sparing of Dekeleia by the Spartans.

The first would belong to the earliest draft; the second might have resulted from Hdt.'s first visit to Athens; the third is plainly an addition to be dated after 431 B.C. Cp. Introduction, § 9.

3. ἐς τὸν πάντα χρόνον, 'for ever,' 'to all time'; contrast c. 13. 6 supra.

ὡς αὐτοὶ Ἀθηναῖοι λέγουσι, 'as even Athenian (writers) themselves admit.' The mythic origins of the privileges enjoyed by the Dekeleians at Sparta had doubtless been made the subject of research and investigation by native writers before Hdt. penned this passage; cp. Introduction, § 10.

4. τὸ πάλαι here goes back to a time before the Trojan war.

κατὰ Ἑλένης κομιδὴν: ad recuperandam Helenam, Baehr. Helene is, of course, Homeric Helen, Ἀργεῖη Ἑλένη II. 2. 161, sister of Kastor and Polydeukes, II. 3. 237 f., daughter of Tyndareus and Leda, Od. 11. 299 ff., unless indeed Zeus himself was her sire, Od. 4. 219, 227, cp. 569. The adventure here involved is not recorded in Homer, but it was perhaps represented on the Chest of Kypselos (Pausan. 5. 19. 3, Dio Chrysost. Or. 11. 325 R, Dindorf-Teubner i. 179), and was familiar to the Lyric poets; cp. Alkman, Fr. 13 = Pausan. 1. 41. 4, Stesichoros 27 = Pausan. 2. 22. 6, Pindar, Fr. 258 = Pausan. 1. 41. 5; and the story is told by Diodor. 4. 63, Plutarch, Thes. 31-34, Pausan. 1. 17. 5 (in part). Theseus and Peirithous stole Helena, a lovely girl of ten years, as she danced before the altar of Artemis Orthia in Sparta; they drew lots for her, Theseus won, and put her for safety in Aphidna with his mother Aithra. During his absence (to help Peirithous to carry off Persephone!) the sons of Tyndareus invaded Attica, and recovered their sister. Aithra was carried off by them into captivity, which may account for her figuring as attendant on Helena in the Iliad.

Τυνδαρίδαι. This patronymic does not occur in Iliad or Odyssey, but makes its appearance (like Διὸς κούροι) in the Hymns, e.g. 17, 33. (Does the name

ἐσέβαλον ἐς γῆν τὴν Ἀττικὴν σὺν στρατοῦ πλήθει καὶ ἀν-5 ἴστασαν τοὺς δῆμους, οὐκ εἰδότες ἵνα ὑπεξέκειτο ἡ Ἑλένη, τότε λέγουσι τοὺς Δεκελέας, οἱ δὲ αὐτὸν Δέκελον ἀχθόμενον τε τῇ Θησέος ὕβρι καὶ δειμαίνοντα περὶ πάσῃ τῇ Ἀθηναίων χώρῃ, ἐξηγησάμενόν σφι τὸ πᾶν πρῆγμα κατηγγήσασθαι ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀφίδνας, τὰς δὲ Τιτακὸς ἐὼν αὐτόχθων καταπροδίδοι 10

5 πλήθει AB 6 ἡ om. C 7 καὶ τοὺς ε || δεκελεδὼν B 8 ὕβρει contain that conjunction of -νδ-, the supposed minor-Asiatic equivalent for -ντ-, -νθ-, Kretschmer, 293 ff. (L. & S. appear to connect it with (Lat.) tund-o etc.).
 C Marc. || δειμαίνοντα C 10 ἀφνίδας B || τὰς δὲ τοι κακὸς Marc.

5. ἀνίστασαν τοὺς δῆμους, 'were upsetting, depopulating, ravaging, the demes.' There is no material anachronism in the assumption that the Demoi were in existence in the days of Theseus, for the Demoi are the oldest institutions in historic Attica; yet the phraseology here, as elsewhere in Hdt. (cp. 1. 60 bis), is rather post-Kleisthenean (cp. 5. 69) than 'Theseian.' Theseus, indeed, was already accounted the author of the Attic synoikismos (cp. Thuc. 2. 15), but Thucydides is careful to represent the Thesean synoikism as a purely political centralization, the units in which had been themselves πόλεις. Diodoros l.c. has τῶν δὲ Ἀθηναίων ἀναγκασθέντων ἐπὶ τῷ γεγονότι φοβηθεὶς ὁ Θησεύς ὑπεξέθετο τὴν Ἑλένην εἰς Ἀφιδναν, μίαν τῶν Ἀττικῶν πόλεων. (That the description may not square with the hypothetical synoikism need not distress us.)

6. ἵνα, ubi: cp. Index.

7. τότε is, of course, 'at the date of Theseus.'

λέγουσι . . . οἱ δὲ shows that there were already conflicting variants on the tradition; an extreme illustration is supplied by Plutarch (Thes. 32) who substitutes Ἀκάδημος and the Ἀκαδήμεια for Δέκελος and Δεκέλεια. Δέκελος is, of course, the eponymous hero of the deme. Stein connects his name with δεικνύναι indicare, index, and sees in this etymology the origin of the rôle played by Δέκελος or the Δεκελεῖς.

8. τῇ Θησέος ὕβρι: primarily the adventure with Peirithous itself; cp. the passage cited from Diodoros above; in the second place, perhaps more generally the high-handed tyranny of Theseus, his attack on local liberties, and so on. The phrase is hardly of Attic origin, and perhaps betrays Hdt.'s Anti-Ionism (cp. Hdt. IV.-VI. ii. 214). In the version followed by Plutarch the Tyndaridai are working in the interests of Menestheus, the earliest demagogue on record (c. 32). So too in Pausanias 1. 17. 5 στρατεύουσιν ἐς Ἀφιδναν οἱ Τυνδάρεω παῖδες, καὶ τὴν τε Ἀφιδναν αἰροῦσι καὶ Μενεσθέα ἐπὶ βασιλείᾳ κατήγαγον.

δειμαίνοντα περὶ πάσῃ τῇ Ἀθηναίων χώρῃ: this solicitude on the part of the local leader, or hero, for 'the whole Athenian land' presupposes the unification of Attica, or at least a synoikism on a large scale, and a solidarity of interests; but the variant cited above from Pausanias might suggest that what Dekelos really wished to avoid was being subjected to Menestheus and the central power! In reality Dekelos here plays the chief rôle, and the political turn given to the legend there is probably afterthought. περὶ with dat. causal, especially common with verbs denoting fear, courage, hope, etc.

9. ἐξηγησάμενόν σφι . . . κατηγγήσασθαι. Hdt. is not over-careful to avoid such stylistic incongruities; cp. Index s.v. Iterations.

10. τὰς Ἀφίδνας. Strabo 397 gives Ἀφιδνα (λέγουσι δὲ καὶ πλεονητικῶς Ἀφίδνας) as one of the twelve original city-states of Attica, on the authority of Philochoros. Steph. Byz. makes Aphidna a deme of the Leontis, apparently a slip for Aiantis (cp. Milchhoefer ap. Pauly-Wissowa i. 2719), and mentions the suggestive fact that there was an Aphidna in Lakonia. The position of the Attic deme is identified on and round Kotroni, in the neighbourhood of Marathon; but Aphidna probably belonged to the Mesogaian Trittyς of the Aiantis, and may have given its name thereto; it was one of the largest and most important demes in Attica (cp. Milchhoefer, Demennordnung, 1892, p. 8) and was fortified in the time of

Τυνδαρίδῃσι. τοῖσι δὲ Δεκελεύσι ἐν Σπάρτῃ ἀπὸ τούτου τοῦ ἔργου ἀτελείῃ τε καὶ προεδρίῃ διατελέει ἐς τὸδε αἰὲ ἐπὶ εὐστα, οὕτω ὥστε καὶ ἐς τὸν πόλεμον τὸν ὑστερον πολλοῖσι ἔτεσι τούτων γενόμενον Ἀθηναίοισι τε καὶ Πελοποννησίοισι, <sup>15</sup> σινομένων τὴν ἄλλην Ἀττικὴν Λακεδαιμονίων, Δεκελὲς ἀπ-
 <sup>74</sup> ἔχεσθαι. τούτου τοῦ δήμου ἐὼν ὁ Σωφάνης καὶ ἀριστεύσας τότε Ἀθηναίων διξοὺς λόγους λεγομένους ἔχει, τὸν μὲν ὡς ἐκ

11 ἐν Σπάρτῃ post ἔργου = 12 προεδρίῃ B: προεδρίῃ Marc.
15 σινομένων B 74. 1 τοῦ om. A<sup>1</sup>

Demosthenes (de Cor. 38), and probably from time immemorial. It appears again in Hdt. as the deme of Kallimachos the polemarch at Marathon, 6. 109, and of the insignificant Timodemos, 8. 125.

Τιτακός is unmistakably the eponymous hero of the neighbouring deme Τιτακίδα, and in this story of his betrayal of Aphidnai Milchhoefer (De-menordnung p. 34) sees indications (1) of local jealousies, (2) of the former inclusion of Titakidai in Aphidnai. The little deme, together with Thyrgonidai and Perhidai (all members of the Aphidna-Trityss), may have occupied the modern villages of Kapandriti, Masi and Tsiurka.

11. τοῖσι δὲ Δεκελεύσι ἐν Σπάρτῃ: doubtless the Dekeleians really held privileges in Sparta, which had originated in legendary days, before the coming of the Dorians, and were continuously maintained, though perhaps not very often exercised, in historic Sparta. ἀπὸ, 'from the date of . . .', rather temporal than causal.

12. ἀτελείῃ τε καὶ προεδρίῃ: two privileges frequently combined (cp. 1. 54); the former term denotes financial, economic, freedom from taxation, dues, etc., which might be complete or partial (cp. 3. 67); the latter term denotes precedence (front seat) at public festivals, games, etc.; cp. L. & S. sub vv. (The latter could only be a personal privilege, conferred upon individuals or communities; the former might be attached to property, irrespective of the particular owner; cp. the ἀτελὲς χωρίον on Hymettos, Ἀθην. πολ. 16. 6.) Demosthenes, Lept. 105, says that the Lakedaemonians (and Thebans) οὐδενὶ τῶν παρ' ἐαυτοῖς διδῶσιν τοιαύτην οὐδεμίαν τιμὴν (sc. ἀτελείαν). That is an obvious exaggeration: ἔστι γὰρ αὐτοῖς νόμος τὸν μὲν γεννήσαντα τρεῖς υἱοὺς ἀφφουρον εἶναι

τὸν δὲ τέτταρας ἀτελῇ πάντων, Aristot. Pol. 2. 9, 18=1270 B.

ἐς τὸδε αἰὲ ἐπὶ εὐστα. As the text now stands the date here indicated comes down to the out-break of the war noted in the next following sentence; but, if the latter is an addition, these words may have stood originally as denoting a date fifteen to twenty years earlier. We have here also traces of the stratification in Hdt.'s composition, which explains the appearance of the later, or latest references in the portion earliest drafted; cp. Introduction, § 9, and next note.

13. οὕτω ὥστε κτλ. As the privileges of the Dekeleians in Sparta must have been suspended by war, this passage (Stein too observes) would have the air of an addition, while grammatically the οὕτω has no proper reference to what precedes. The war here mentioned is plainly the 'ten years' war' which broke out in 431 B.C., and the special favour shown to Dekeleia is hardly less plainly to be dated to the first invasion, in which Archidamos laid waste the Thriasian plain, and all the parts of Attica north of the city, and retired eis (Dekeleia) Oropos and Boiotia, Thuc. 2. 18-23. ἐς τὸν πόλεμον is hardly so clear as ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ, or κατὰ τὸν πόλεμον (cp. 7. 137) would have been, and is perhaps only a carelessness produced by the proximity of ἐς τὸδε just before (cp. c. 64 supra).

15. τὴν ἄλλην Ἀττικὴν looks like an exaggeration; the whole of the south of Attica was ravaged in the second invasion, 430 B.C., Thuc. 2. 55, 57.

74. 1. ἀριστεύσας: cp. c. 73 ad init.

2. διξοὺς λόγους λεγομένους ἔχει: sc. ὁ Σωφάνης: for λόγους ἔχειν (to be reported) cp. 5. 66. Stein suggests as the source of these 'Märchen' Skolia in honour of the popular Marathon-

τοῦ ζωστήρος τοῦ θώρηκος ἐφόρει χαλκὴν ἀλύσι δεδεμένην ἄγκυραν σιδηρὴν, τὴν ὅπως πελάσειε ἀπικνεόμενος τοῖσι πολεμίοισι βαλλέσκετο, ἵνα δὴ μιν οἱ πολέμοι ἐκπίπτουτες 5 ἐκ τῆς τάξις μετακινήσῃ μὴ δυναίατο· γινομένης δὲ φυγῆς τῶν ἐναντίων δέδοκτο τὴν ἄγκυραν ἀναλαβόντα οὕτω διώκειν. οὗτος μὲν οὕτω λέγεται, ὁ δ' ἕτερος τῶν λόγων τῷ πρότερον λεχθέντι ἀμφισβητῶν λέγεται, ὡς ἐπ' ἀσπίδος αἰεὶ περι- θεούσης καὶ οὐδαμὰ ἀτρεμιζούσης ἐφόρει ἄγκυραν, καὶ οὐκ ἐκ 10 τοῦ θώρηκος δεδεμένην σιδηρὴν. ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἕτερον Σωφάνει 75 λαμπρὸν ἔργον ἐξεργασμένον, ὅτι περικατημένων Ἀθηναίων Αἰγιναν Εὐρυβάτην τὸν Ἀργεῖον ἄνδρα πεντάεθλον ἐκ προ-

3 ἀλύσει αCSV 4 ἀπικνεόμενοι τοῖσι V: ἀπικνεομένοι τοῖσι R: ἀπικνεόμενοι <ἐς μάχην> τοῖσι? Stein<sup>2</sup> 5 βαλλέσκετο Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: βαλλέσκετο 6 κινήσῃ Marc. 7 ἐδέδοκτο B, Holder: ἐδέδοκτο <οἱ> van H. 8 οὗτος: οὕτω B || ὁ δ' . . λέγεται om. B 9 ἀμφισβητῶν BPz 10 οὐδαμὰ Rz || ἐπίσημον ἄγκυραν B, Holder, van H.: ἄγκυραν εἰκασμένην sive μεμνημένην (ἐπίσημον omisso) conl. Stein<sup>2</sup> 75. 1 σωφάνει AB 2 ἐξεργασμένον Marc. || ὅτε B, Krueger, Holder, van H. 3 εὐρυβάτην Marc.: εὐρυβιάδην B || ἀρεῖον C || προβλήσιος B

maches. (It is not expressly recorded that Sophanes was at Marathon, but he may certainly be credited therewith.) Such Skolia may have contained expressions or allusions, of which the διστοὶ λόγοι here reported are prosaic interpretations.

(a) According to the one, Sophanes used to carry, slung (δεδεμένην ἐκ) from the belt of his cuirass on a bronze chain, an iron anchor; this he would throw, when he approached the enemy (and it would, no doubt, stick in the ground), in such a way that the enemy could not make him budge, though they might charge him; then, when the adversaries were put to flight, his plan was to pick up his anchor and so be after them.

This is not a very credible story, and it is contradicted by the other.

(b) He had upon his shield an anchor as a device, or emblem; and his shield was in perpetual motion, never at rest. In which case there was a contrast between the man's emblem and his action.

It is possible that the latter and simpler story was at the root of the other, or that some jest on the anchor and its bearer generated the more prosaic and less credible interpretation.

7. δέδοκτο: sc. αὐτῷ.

VOL. I PT. II

οὕτω: i.e. to take up his anchor before attempting to pursue.

9. ἀμφισβητῶν: cp. the subst. 8. 81.

10. ἀτρεμιζούσης: the form ἀτρεμίζω 7. 8, 8. 68 supra; but ἀτρεμίζω 7. 18. It must have been the man, not his shield, that was so restless. The Karians had the credit of such inventions; cp. 1. 171.

75. 1. ἔστι δὲ . . ἐξεργασμένον. The position of ἔστι shows that it is not a mere auxiliary, nor is the form of construction merely equivalent to a perfect passive. The λαμπρὸν ἔργον, though wrought, and wrought out, in the past, is conceived of as existing in the present: it is for ever.

2. περικατημένων, 'blockading': perfect in form, but present, or imperfect, in sense. The verb is used here as in 8. 111 of an island-city, but the operations are in part at least on land.

3. Εὐρυβάτην τὸν Ἀργεῖον. The story is told, and that more fully, in 6. 92, though without cross-reference either here or there; the present is probably the elder passage. Had the other been composed first, the further notes on Sophanes would have been there added (unless it were supposed that the passage was composed before his death! Even so, a reference to his anchor might κλήσιος ἐφόνευσε. αὐτὸν δὲ Σωφάνεα χρόνῳ ὕστερον τούτων

 5 κατέλαβε ἄνδρα γενόμενον ἀγαθόν, Ἀθηναίων στρατηγέοντα ἄμα Λεάγρῳ τῷ Γλαύκωνος, ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὸ Ἡδωνῶν ἐν Δάτῳ περὶ τῶν μετάλλων τῶν χρυσέων μαχόμενον.

4 τούτων z

7 μαχεόμενον z: om. B have been expected). Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

πεντάθλον: cp. c. 33 supra.

ἐκ προκλήσιος ἐφόνευσε: cp. 5. 1; i.e. 'he challenged (or answered a challenge) to single combat and slew . . .'. The fuller story in 6. 92, from the Aeginetan war (487-483 B.C.), reports that Eurybates was Strategos of the 1000 Argive volunteers who fought for Aigina, and that he slew three Athenians in single combat before succumbing to Sophanes, a record which on the one hand enhances, on the other diminishes, the achievement of Sophanes; the Argive pentathlete may have been pretty well done-up before he reached his round with Sophanes.

4. χρόνῳ ὕστερον τούτων: i.e. subsequent to the Persian war; cp. c. 73 supra; the exact date is not so certain.

5. κατέλαβε is impersonal; cp. cc. 93, 104 infra.

Ἀθηναίων στρατηγέοντα ἄμα Λεάγρῳ τῷ Γλαύκωνος, 'Leagros son of Glaukon' was no doubt the father of 'Glaukon son of Leagros' (Thuc. 1. 51. 4; cp. C.I.A. i. 179, Hicks<sup>2</sup> No. 53), who commanded at Sybota in 432 B.C., as he had previously done in the Samian war, Androtion Fr. 44 a. Nearly half a score Athenians of the name of Glaukon can be identified (cp. Pape-Benseler sub v.), but nothing more is known of the eldest one here named.

6. ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὸ Ἡδωνῶν ἐν Δάτῳ. Stein identifies this disaster with the defeat recorded by Thucydides 1. 100. 3 (cp. 4. 102. 2) synchronously with the revolt and blockade of Thasos, and dated by Busolt, III. i. 202, very precisely to the late summer of 465 B.C. Thucydides, however, without mentioning Daton makes Drabeskos the scene of the disaster. Stein suggests that Hdt. has confounded the objective, or goal, of the expedition, viz. Daton, with the scene of the Athenian defeat, viz. Drabeskos, which is to be placed on the road to Datos, or Daton. Drabeskos is, indeed, the less problematic spot geographically; its position is ascertained 'on the road from Herakleia Sintica to Philippi" (Forbiger, Alt. Geogr. iii. 1070), or at any rate to the north, and inland from Philippi (cp. mod. Drama). If the Athenians were defeated at Drabeskos on their way to Datos, or Daton, they were fetching a considerable compass from Amphipolis and the Strymon. Busolt (l.c., following Hense) regards Daton, at least in Hdt.'s time, as the name not of a town but of a district (that too seems to be Stein's first idea); the reconciliation between Hdt. and Thuc. in this case being effected by the supposition that Hdt. names the region and Thuc. the exact scene, or the township nearest to the scene, of the disaster. Cp. Strabo 331 (7. fr. 36) παρὰ δὲ τὴν παραλίαν τοῦ Στρυμόνος καὶ Δατηνῶν πόλις Νεάπολις καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ Δάτον, εὐκάρπια πεδία καὶ λίμνην καὶ ποταμούς καὶ ναυπήγια καὶ χρυσεῖα λυσιστελῆ ἔχον, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ παραμύζονται Δάτον ἀγαθῶν ὥς καὶ ἀγαθὴ ἀγαθίδας. This passage places the town of Daton on the coast, hard by Neapolis; but though this Neapolis appears on the Attic tribute-lists of the fifth century (Νεάπολις ἐν Θράκῃ, Ν. περὶ Ἀντισσάραν, Νεοπολίται οἱ παρὰ Θάκῃ) Daton is never mentioned. Neapolis was, in fact, at that period the port for the district of Datos; the town of Daton was only founded c. 360 B.C. by the Thasians, when they took possession of Krenides, under the leadership of the exiled Athenian Kallistratos (Busolt, op. c. 197 note 5). The identification of Daton with Krenides, the later Philippi (Appian B. C. 4. 105 οἱ δὲ Φίλιπποι πόλις ἐστὶν ἢ Δάτος ὠνομάζετο πάλαι, καὶ Κρηνίδες ἔτι πρὸ Δάτου, so too Harpokration s.v. Δατός (sic) on the authority of Ephoros and Philochoros; cp. Diodor. 16. 3. 7), is hardly reconcilable with Strabo's statement above quoted; but Strabo must give way to Harpokration's authorities; least of all should Datos have been identified with Neapolis (as by Leake, N.G. iii. 224). On the Edonians cp. 7. 110.

ἀποθανεῖν ὑπό: cp. c. 37.

7. περὶ τῶν μετάλλων τῶν χρυσέων. The whole region was argentiferous

Ὦς δὲ τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι ἐν Πλαταιῇσι κατέστρωντο οἱ 76
 βάρβαροι, ἐνθαυτὰ σφι ἐπῆλθε γυνὴ αὐτόμολος· ἥ ἐπειδὴ ἔμαθε ἀπολωλὸτας τοὺς Πέρσας καὶ νικῶντας τοὺς Ἕλληνας, εὐῶσα παλλακὴ Φαρανδάτεος τοῦ Τεάσπιος ἀνδρὸς Πέρσεω, κοσμησαμένη χρυσῷ <τε> πολλῷ καὶ αὐτὴ καὶ <αἱ> ἀμφίπολοι 5
 καὶ ἐσθῆτι τῇ καλλίστῃ τῶν παρεουσέων, καταβάσα ἐκ τῆς ἄρμαμάξης ἐχώρεε ἐς τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους ἔτι ἐν τῇσι φονῇσι ἑόντας, ὁρῶσα δὲ πάντα ἐκεῖνα διέποντα Πανσανίην, πρότερόν τε τὸ οὖνομα ἐξεπισταμένη καὶ τὴν πᾶτριν ὥστε πολλάκις ἀκούσασα, ἔγνω τε τὸν Πανσανίην καὶ λαβομένη τῶν γυνά- 10

76. 1 πλαταιῇσι α: πλαταιῇσι β 4 φαρναδάτεος β 5 <τε>
 Stein<sup>(2)</sup>, van H. || <αἱ> Reiske, Holder, van H., quod mihi quoque placitum inserui 6 ἐκ τῶν z 7 ἄρμαμάξης β || φωνῇσι Marc.
 8 ἑόντας om. αC Marc. || ὁρέουσα Stein<sup>1</sup>

and auriferous; cp. 7. 112. The mines at Krenides-Philippi were only fully exploited by Philip; cp. Diodor. 16. 8. 6 τὰ δὲ κατὰ τὴν χώραν χρύσεια μέταλλα παντελῶς ὄντα λιτὰ καὶ ἀδοξα ταῖς κατασκευαῖς ἐπὶ τοσούτον ἤρξεν ὥστε δύνασθαι φέρειν αὐτῷ πρόσδοον πλεον ἢ ταλάντων χιλίων.

76. 1. ἐν Πλαταιῇσι: probably the actual conflict between the Lakedaemonians and Persians took place on the soil of Hysiai (cp. c. 62 supra); but (a) the Athenians were doubtless fighting on Plataian ground, (b) the island position was Plataian ground, (c) the 'second position' of the Greeks was on Plataian ground (c. 25 supra), (d) Plataia was a much more important place than Hysiai or Erythrai, the former of which at least was accounted Attic ground, cp. 5. 74, and perhaps subordinate to Plataia, cp. 6. 108 (but cp. also Plutarch Aristeid. 11). Thus, all things considered, the battle and the operations generally seem naturally associated with the name of Plataia, albeit, in the reconstruction of the battle-piece as a whole, Erythrai, Hysiai, Plataia, and their respective territories, have to be carefully distinguished; cp. cc. 15, 19, 25 supra.

κατέστρωντο, as in 8. 53; cp. c. 69 supra.

3. νικῶντας, 'victors'; cp. c. 69 supra.

4. παλλακὴ: opposed to κουριδίη γυνή 1. 84.

Φαρανδάτεος τοῦ Τεάσπιος. Pharandates had been ἀρχων, i.e. myri-arch, of the Mares and Kolehoi in the army of Xerxes, 7. 79. He was evidently an Achaimenid (Teaspes), though Hdt. does not expressly say so; and his mother, too, was perhaps a sister of Dareios; cp. 4. 43.

6. τῶν παρεουσέων: not to disparage her travelling wardrobe, or to suggest that she had still better at home, but rather to emphasize its splendour.

7. ἄρμαμάξα: cp. 7. 41, 8. 83.

ἐχώρεε: on foot.

ἔτι ἐν τῇσι φονῇσι ἑόντας, 'still engaged on the work of slaughter' φοναί is Homeric and poetical; the singular is not in use.

8. διέπειν: as in 6. 107, 5. 22.

πρότερόν τε . . ἀκούσασα, 'as she was previously well acquainted with his name and country (father-land), having heard them again and again'—her father having been on terms of ξενίῃ with Pausanias; see just below.

9. πᾶτριν, cp. 6. 126, 'land,' not 'lineage' (as in Il. 13. 354, cp. the use in Pindar=gens, Rumpel, Lex. Pind. sub v.). Hdt. has the more usual form πατρίς, 8. 61, for fatherland; he uses πατριή for lineage, cp. 3. 75, 2. 143, and the lady addresses Pausanias not as 'son of Kleombrotos' (c. 78. 4), but as king of 'Sparta.' ὥστε=āre: cp. c. 70 supra.

10. ἔγνω, without ever having seen him before, from now seeing him in authority. He was probably young; cp. c. 10 supra.

λαβομένη τῶν γυνάτων: as a λέκτις, cp. Od. 6. 310 μητρὸς ποτὶ γούνασι χεῖρας | βάλλειν ἡμετέρης ἵνα νόστιμον

των ἔλεγε τάδε· “ὦ βασιλεῦ Σπάρτης, ῥῦσαί με τὴν ἰκέτιν αἰχμαλώτου δουλосύνης. σὺ γὰρ καὶ ἐς τόδε ὦνησας, τούσδε ἀπολέσας τοὺς οὔτε δαιμόνων οὔτε θεῶν ὅπιν ἔχοντας. εἰμὶ δὲ γένος μὲν Κῶν, θυγάτηρ δὲ Ἡγητορίδω τοῦ Ἀνταγόρου. 15 βίη δέ με λαβὼν ἐν Κῷ εἶχε ὁ Πέρσης.” ὁ δὲ ἀμείβεται

11 βασιλεὺς C || ῥῦσαί B, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: λῦσαί 12
δουλωσύνης R: δουλωσύνην C || ἐς del. Krueger, van H. 15 βίη B
|| ἐν Κῷ z: ἐκ Κῷ B: ἐν Κῷ ceteri: del. Kallenberg

ἡμᾶρ ἴσθαι, 7. 142 ἀμφὶ δ' ἄρ' Ἀρήτης βάλε γούνασι χεῖρας Ὀδυσσεύς. C. Sittl, Die Gebärden der Gr. u. Röm. 1890, 163. In order to perform such a gesture the suppliant would have to kneel or prostrate himself.

11. ὦ βασιλεῦ Σπάρτης. Thus this lady of Kos inaugurates the error which dies so hard; cp. c. 5 supra. She doubtless knew better, but thought there was nothing to lose by a little exaggeration: was the fatal ambition of Pausanias born in this moment? But after all βασιλεὺς was not the technical term at Sparta, but βαγός or ἀρχαγέτης, cp. Gilbert, Gr. Staatsalt. i.<sup>2</sup> 47.

ῥῦσαί με τὴν ἰκέτιν: the article is idiomatic, with the appositive, “as regularly with personal pronouns” (Sitzler), cp. ύμέας . . . τοὺς Ἀθηναίους c. 46 supra.

12. αἰχμαλώτου δ., a very strong genitive: from, out of, ‘slavery as a prisoner of war.’ In c. 90 infra ἐκ is expressed. The lady was not a prisoner of war to the Persians; but she is asking not to be treated as a prisoner of war by the Greeks.

ἐς τόδε, ‘so far,’ of time; cp. c. 73 supra; or perhaps of action, as explained in the next sentence.

13. τοὺς οὔτε δαιμόνων οὔτε θεῶν ὅπιν ἔχοντας: ὅπιν 8. 143 in a similar connexion (on the lips of Aristides?). The charge is, of course, unjust, even as respects ‘the gods of Greece’; cp. l.c. supra; but allowance in this case may be made for a lady whose situation is not free from ambiguity.

δαίμονες, as distinct from θεοί, are not merely deities of lower rank, but perhaps distinctly ‘deified dead’; so the departed Dareios, Aischyl. Pers. 620, the departed Alkestis, Eurip. Alk. 1003. Cp. Hesiod, Wks. 121 αὐτὰρ ἐπειδὴ τοῦτο γένος <sc. τὸ χρύσεον> κατὰ γὰρ κάλυψεν, τοὶ μὲν δαίμονες εἰσι διὰ μέγαλον διὰ βουλὰς ἐσθλοί, ἐπιχθόνια, φύλακες θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων.

14. γένος μὲν Κῶν: the γένος here is locative rather than genetic. Kos was at this time under the government of Artemisia, cp. 7. 99, in succession to the righteous Kadmos, 7. 164. She ought to have given her own name.

Ἡγητορίδω τοῦ Ἀνταγόρου. Of these Koans, Hegetoridas (a truly aristocratic name) and his father Antagoras, nothing more appears to be known. Plutarch, Aristeid. 23, mentions as Antagoras of Chios as one of the leaders in the movement for the transfer of the hegemony from Sparta to Athens, and actually heading an attack on Pausanias. Polyainos 2. 33 has an anecdote of a Hegetoridas of Thasos, who was instrumental in bringing about the surrender of the island to Athens.

15. βίη δέ με . . . εἶχε ὁ Πέρσης. ‘The Persian’ might have a more extended sense than Pharandates. Perhaps the lady had been kidnapped in her youth or infancy. It is not easy to see what Pharandates or the Persians generally would be doing in Kos; it is not even certain that Kos had joined in the ‘Ionic’ revolt, or we might suppose that the daughter of Pharandates had been carried off then; but cp. 7. 164 supra. The βίη might qualify both the participle and the verb (ἐχειν, cp. 8. 136. 4, and 8. 63. 12), but the lady of course may be overstating the case.

ὁ δὲ ἀμείβεται. The reply and the conduct of Pausanias proves him a cavalier sans reproche. This anecdote of the Koan Anonyma is the first of a series, in which the moral contrast between Hellenism and Barbarism is enforced and illustrated by incidents from the battle-field of Plataea.

τοισίδε, "γύναι, θάρσее καὶ ὡς ἰκέτις καὶ εἰ δὴ πρὸς τούτῳ τυγχάνεις ἀληθέα λέγουσα καὶ εἰς θυγάτηρ Ἥγητορίδω τοῦ Κφου, ὃς ἐμοὶ ξείνος μάλιστα τυγχάνει ἐὼν τῶν περὶ ἐκείνους τοὺς χώρους οἰκημένων." ταῦτα δὲ εἰπας τότε μὲν ἐπέτρεψε τῶν ἐφόρων τοῖσι παρεούσι, ὕστερον δὲ ἀπέπεμψε ἐς Αἴγινα, 20 ἐς τὴν αὐτὴν ἤθελε ἀπικέσθαι.

Μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἀπικίν τῆς γυναικός, αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα 77 ἀπίκοντο Μαντινέες ἐπ' ἐξεργασμένοισι· μαθόντες δὲ ὅτι ὕστεροι ἤκουσι τῆς συμβολῆς, συμφορὴν ἐποιεῦντο μεγάλην, ἄξιοι τε ἔφασαν εἶναι σφέας ζημιῶσαι. πυνθανόμενοι δὲ τοὺς

16 τοῖσιδε Stein: ὅδε B: τοῖσδε ceteri || θάρσει libri, Holder, van H. || τοῦτο B 17 εἰς B: εἰ A: εἰ ceteri 18 κείνους B 19 οἰκομένων z || μὲν <μιν> Bekker, van H. 21 ἠθέλησεν Marc. || ἀπικέσθαι om. B, Holder, van H. 77. 1 μετὰ ταῦτα del. Krueger, van H. 3 ὕστεροι Marc. z, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: ὕστερον || συμβουλῆς BC 4 aut ἄξιους aut σφέας requirit van H. || εἶναι ἔφασαν B

18. ξείνος μάλιστα. On ξενία cp. 7. 116 supra.

τῶν περὶ ἐκ. τ. χ. οἰκημένων: cp. 7. 102 for the same phrase.

20. τῶν ἐφόρων τοῖσι παρεούσι, perhaps two in number; cp. Xenoph. Respub. Lac. 13. 5 πάρεσι δὲ καὶ τῶν ἐφόρων δύο, οἱ πολυπραγμονοῦσι μὲν οὐδέν, ἦν μὴ ὁ βασιλεὺς προσκαλῇ· ὁρῶντες δὲ ὅτι ποιεῖ ἕκαστος πάντας σωφρονίζουσιν, ὡς τὸ εἰκός. The fact that we do not find the presence of Ephors noted in the narratives of the fifth century does not prove that they were not present, but there are occasions upon which they are rather conspicuous by their absence, e.g. with Leotychidas at Mykale, with Pausanias at Byzantion, with Agis at Dekeleia (cp. Thuc. 8. 5. 3). Rawlinson, indeed, would date the regular practice described by Xenophon only to the year 403 B.C., cp. Hell. 2. 4. 36. But the present instance makes the practice look older, though it may not have affected the Navarchy.

ἐς Αἴγινα. Hdt. does not say that there was any special facility for crossing from Aigina to Kos, but we may charitably suppose that the lady wished to return to her father's house, as, from the way Pausanias speaks, Hegetoridas must be still alive.

77. 1. μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἀπικίν: for ἀπικίν (arrival, advent) cp. c. 17 supra. Hdt. is very exact in dating the next episode, so as to emphasize the advent of the Mantineians as too late, ἐπ' ἐξεργασμένοισι, cp. 8. 94, 4. 164. The Koan lady had reached the Lakedaemonians while they were still ἐν τῇσι φορῇσι.

αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα, a standing formula, cp. Index.

2. ἀπίκοντο Μαντινέες: this is their first appearance since Thermopylai, to which they sent a force equal to the Tegeatan, cp. 7. 202. They are not included in the army-list above, c. 28; the force here in question will have numbered probably 1000—1500 hoplites.

3. ὕστεροι τῆς συμβολῆς, 'too late for the engagement'; s., cp. c. 70 supra. If the Mantineians (and Eleians) arrive too late to take part in the great encounter, were they on other service—for example, guarding the convoy from the Peloponnesos, cp. c. 51 supra, or perhaps engaged, and retarded, by the Persian cavalry? The name of the Mantineians is not on the τρικάρηνος δφης (cp. 8. 82, and c. 81 infra), though that of the Eleians is.

συμφορὴν ποιέσθαι: cp. 8. 10, 69. 2 supra, l. 9 infra.

4. ἄξιοι τε ἔφασαν εἶναι σφέας ζημιῶσαι: ἄξιοι is the idiomatic personal construction; cp. 8. 65. 11 (αὐτός). The sentence would be clearer perhaps without σφέας, leaving ζημιῶσαι as an epexegetical infinitive: as the object is expressed in σφέας, a subject must be understood, sc. τοὺς Ἕλληνας, τὸν στρατηγόν, or what not.

τοὺς Μήδους: here used generally

5 Μήδους τοὺς μετὰ Ἀρταβάζου φεύγοντας, τούτους ἐδίωκον μέχρι Θεσσαλίας· Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ οὐκ ἔων φεύγοντας διώκειν.
οἱ δὲ ἀναχωρήσαντες εἰς τὴν ἑαυτῶν τοὺς ἡγεμόνας τῆς
στρατιῆς ἐδίωξαν ἐκ τῆς γῆς. μετὰ δὲ Μαντινέας ἦκον 10 Ἡλεῖοι, καὶ ὡσαύτως οἱ Ἡλεῖοι τοῖσι Μαντινεῦσι συμφορὴν ποιησάμενοι ἀπαλλάσσοντο· ἀπελθόντες δὲ καὶ οὗτοι τοὺς ἡγεμόνας ἐδίωξαν. τὰ κατὰ Μαντινέας μὲν καὶ Ἡλείους τοσαῦτα,

9 ἡλεῖοι PR || ἡλεῖοι BR || μαντινεῦσι C 11 τὰ om. B || ἡλείους PR as=τοὺς βαρβάρους, and not in the specific sense of c. 31 supra.

5. ἐδίωκον, 'they were for pursuing,' they offered to pursue—a truly laughable offer on the part of these Mantineaian hoplites. The indefinite or even the distant pursuit of a fugitive enemy was against Spartan custom, cp. 8. 108, and Blakesley understands the next sentence as a parenthesis intended to record not a particular prohibition on this occasion, but that general rule: the imperfect οὐκ ἔων hardly supports that view.

On the return of the Mantineians to their home τοὺς ἡγεμόνας τῆς στρατιῆς ἐδίωξαν ἐκ τῆς γῆς. The verb ἐδίωξαν (exiled) after the ἐδίωκον (pursued, or were for pursuing) just before makes a very unfortunate pun, albeit the contrast of the tenses is grammatically effective; perhaps it is only an "unconscious iteration." τοὺς ἡγ. τῆς στ. as a periphrasis for τοὺς στρατηγοὺς—if that be its significance—is remarkable. Perhaps the ἡγεμονία is emphasized as the offence was one of omission, incurred by the way. Possibly, however, there was a political background to the prosecution. Arkadia, or single states in Arkadia, may have been divided on the question of 'Medism,' cp. 8. 26. In the immediate sequel Mantinea sides with Sparta, or at least preserves a benevolent neutrality, when all the rest of Arkadia rises against her; cp. c. 35 infra. Mantinea was early and normally democratic; cp. 4. 161; but the discredit, which the ἡγεμόνες incurred in the Persian war, and the penalties meted out to them, may have brought about a temporary modification of the government of Mantinea (not without Lakonian approval). It does not follow that the leaders were really to blame. The injustice of the Athenian democracy (probably humaner than the Arkadian) towards unfortunate commanders is notorious; and the comic story in Thuc. 5. 60 of the treatment of Thrasyllos, Strategos of Argos, by the Argive democracy in 418 B.C., has much the same moral.

8. μετὰ δὲ Μαντινέας ἦκον Ἡλεῖοι: naturally, as they had further to come. The Eleians had not even sent a contingent to Thermopylai. Yet their name appears upon the Delphian tripod; I.G.A. 70; Hill's Sources, i. 1; Hicks<sup>2</sup>, No. 19 (5th Coll., No. 27). As the Eleians are not represented in the navy-lists of Artemision and Salamis, nor in the army-list c. 28 supra, the occurrence of their name on the monument is problematic (but they at least sent a contingent to the army under Kleombrotos in 480 B.C.; cp. 8. 72). Stein ascribes it to their influence with Sparta; but why then did not Sparta reward the Mantineians also? cp. also notes in Hicks l.c. and note to Παλές in c. 28 supra. ὡσαύτως: 7. 86, etc.

9. συμφορὴν ποιησάμενοι: one of the chief grounds of this woe would be that they could have no lot in the Plataian booty, but there was also the loss of honour. The Eleians had a way of being rather behindhand; cp. Thuc. 5. 75. 5. The subsequent exile of their ἡγεμόνες may have a political significance, as in the case of the Mantineians above.

11. τὰ κατὰ Μαντινέας μὲν καὶ Ἡλείους: this story, or rather the brief note to the discredit of the two Peloponnesian democracies, might provoke the suspicion that there was some kind of understanding between them and Argos, not favourable to Sparta, and the recognition of the Spartan ἡγεμονία. But the service of the Mantineians at Thermopylai, the service of the Eleians at the Isthmos, and the arrival of both, even if belated, on the field of Plataia, have to be put in the other scale.

Ἐν δὲ Πλαταιῇσι ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ τῶν Αἰγινητέων ἦν 78
 Λάμπων Πυθέω, Αἰγινητέων <ἐὼν> τὰ πρῶτα· ὃς ἀνοσιώτaton ἔχων λόγον ἵετο πρὸς Πανσανίην, ἀπικόμενος δὲ σπουδῇ ἔλεγε τάδε, “ὦ παῖ Κλεομβρότου, ἔργον ἔργασταί τοι ὑπερφυῖς μέγαθός τε καὶ κάλλος, καὶ τοι θεὸς παρέδωκε ῥυσάμενον τὴν Ἑλλάδα κλέος καταθέσθαι μέγιστον Ἑλλήνων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν. σὺ δὲ καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ τὰ ἐπὶ τούτοις ποιήσον, ὅπως λόγος τέ σε ἔχη ἔτι μέζων καὶ τις ὕστερον φυλάσσηται τῶν βαρβάρων μὴ ὑπάρχειν ἔργα ἀτάσθαλα ποιέων ἐς τοὺς Ἕλληνας. Λεωνίδεω γὰρ ἀποθανόντος ἐν 10

78. 1 πλαταιῇσι α: πλαταιῇσιν β 2 ὁ πυθέω β: ὁ Πύθεω z ||
 ἐὼν add. Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. || τὰ πρῶτα φέρων z 3 λόγον ἔχων z
 || ἵετο A: ἵετο ceteri (ap. Stein): ἵκετο SV 7 τὰ λοιπὰ del. Cobet, van H. 8 μείζων α 10 ποιέειν β

Plutarch, in the de malign. Hdri, takes no exception to this record; but has the whole truth been told in the case? The story does not come from Mantinean and Eleian sources, or we should have had more particulars, and perhaps something to the good credit of the States. What is related—καὶ φθόνῳ ἂν εἴποιεν.

78. 1. ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ τῶν Αἰγινητέων: there were but 500 Aiginetan hoplites, all told, cp. c. 28 supra; as they were posted next to the Megarians, they may have been literally ἐν Πλαταιῇσι at this time; but cp. c. 76 supra. They should have been ἐν τῷ Κιθαιρῶνι, cp. c. 69 ad f.

2. Λάμπων Πυθέω: to be distinguished from the Athenian, c. 21 supra, and the Samian, c. 90 infra, of the same name; but this Aiginetan Lampon, son of Pytheas, may be identified (as by K. O. Müller, Aeginetica 126) with Lampon, father of Pytheas and Phylakides, whose victories Pindar celebrates in Nem. 5, Isth. 4 and 5. The Pytheas, son of Ischenoos, captured off Skiathos, 7. 181 supra, and liberated at Salamis, 8. 92, can hardly be identical with the father of Lampon, but he may be of the same house, the Ψαλινχιάδαι, or Ψαλινχίδαι, Pindar, Isth. 5 (6). 63.

τὰ πρῶτα: as in 6. 100. On this occasion Lampon may have been Strategos of the Aiginetans.

ἀνοσιώτατον ἔχων λόγον, 'with a most impious (shocking) proposal.'

3. ἵετο, 'came full speed'; repeated in ἀπικόμενος σπουδῇ.

σπουδῇ: cp. cc. 1, 66 supra, etc.

4. ὦ παῖ Κλεομβρότου: cp. c. 76 l. 9.

5. ὑπερφυῖς, 'supernatural,' 'colossal,' in a bad sense 8. 116; here in a good.

μέγαθός τε καὶ κάλλος: generally of corporeal beauty; cp. c. 72 supra. Pausanias' work was a καλλίστη νίκη, c. 64 supra. The accusative is "of reference." Cp. Index.

τοὶ . . ῥυσάμενον is not strict grammar; cp. c. 58, 13, 15 supra.

θεὸς παρέδωκε: cp. 7. 18, 5. 67. The god would probably be Zeus.

6. κλέος καταθέσθαι: 7. 220.

μέγιστον . . τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν: the formula (cp. 8. 105 supra) is here especially interesting, as used, not by the historian propria persona, but by one of his puppets. The use is hardly quite accurate: the τῶν is presumably masculine, referring to Ἕλληνων, though the reference to κλέος might be eased by the use of that word in the plural (κλέα ἀνδρῶν Il. 9. 189, Od. 8. 73); but πάντων is here desiderated in either case. The fame of Leonidas (who is named just below) is here given a distinct set-back; but with posterity the failure of Thermopylai has ever outshone the success at Plataia; cp. Leopardi's All' Italia.

7. ἐπὶ here nearly = πρὸς; cp. 7. 236 (or 'after').

8. λόγος . . σε ἔχη: λόγος here comes near to κλέος, δόξα; cp. λ. ἀγαθός 7. 5. 11. τις = πᾶς τις.

9. φυλάσσηται . . μὴ ὑπάρχειν: an idiomatic negative; we should say, 'be-ware of beginning . . .' In point of form this sentence is identical with the phraseology in 7. 5 ἵνα λόγος τε κτλ., but the idiomatic μὴ is there dropped.

ἀτάσθαλα: cp. c. 116 infra.

Θερμοπύλῃσι Μαρδονίος τε καὶ Ξέρξης ἀποταμόντες τὴν κεφαλὴν ἀνεσταύρωσαν· τῷ σὺ τὴν ὁμοίην ἀποδιδούς ἔπαινον ἔξεις πρῶτα μὲν ὑπὸ πάντων Σπαρτιητέων, αὐτὶς δὲ καὶ πρὸς τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων· Μαρδόνιον γὰρ ἀνασκολοπίσας 79 ρήσεται ἐς πατρῶν τὸν σὸν Λεωνίδην.” ὁ μὲν δοκέων χαρίζεσθαι ἔλεγε τάδε, ὃ δ' ἀνταμείβετο τοισίδε, “ὦ ξεῖνε Αἰγινῆτα, τὸ μὲν εὐνοέειν τε καὶ προορᾶν ἄγαμαί σευ, γνώμης μέντοι ἡμάρτηκας χρηστῆς· ἐξαείρας γάρ με ὑψοῦ καὶ τὴν πᾶτρην 5 καὶ τὸ ἔργον, ἐς τὸ μηδὲν κατέβαλες παραινέων νεκρῷ λυμαί-

12 ἐσταύρωσαν B 13 ὑπὸ τῶν Σπαρτιητέων πάντων :: 14 ἀνασκολοπίσας B || τετιμωρήσεται Suevern, Stein, Holder: τετιμωρήσαι (cp. Cobet Mnemos. XII. 388: post τετιμωρήσαι (quod servat) lacunam indicat van H. cp. Mnemos. XIII. 166) 79. 2 δὲ B || τοισίδε Holder, van H.: τοῖσιδε Marc., Stein: τοῖσι δὲ C: τοῖσδε 3 εὐνοεῖν BP, Holder, van H. || πρώραν B || σὸν α 4 ἐξαείρας α: ἐξάρας :: ἐξάρας 5 κατέβαλλες? Stein<sup>1</sup>

11. Μαρδονίος τε καὶ Ξέρξης: there is nothing in the story as told 7. 238 to implicate the living Mardonios in the outrage; but there is, of course, no direct inconsistency in Hdt.'s allowing Lampon to discredit the dead Mardonios, though we are hardly justified in arguing, as we might do in the case of a more careful writer, that he himself acquits Mardonios. More probably he has followed his source in each case, without noting the potential inconsistency; perhaps the anecdote in 8. 114 suggested that Mardonios was concerned in the case.

12. τῷ is ambiguous: grammatically it might seem to belong to Λεωνίδῃ, but naturally it seems to refer to Μαρδονίος. Taking τὴν ὁμοίην as = δικήν, or τὴν ὁμ. χάριν, or τίσιν, it would, however, make good sense to refer the relative to Λεωνίδῃ. The introduction of the name Μαρδόνιον γάρ just below also favours this interpretation, and especially the expression in c. 79 below, Λεωνίδῃ δὲ τῷ με κελεύεις τιμωρῆσαι κτλ.

ἀποδιδούς is strictly conditional: perhaps the tense, as compared with ἀνασκολοπίσας just below, also favours the reference of τῷ to Leonidas, not to Mardonios.

ἔπαινον ἔξεις . . ὑπό. On the ἐπαινετοί cp. c. 71 supra; the phrase here is hardly used in the technical sense. ὑπό as ἐπ. ἔξ. = ἐπαινεθήσεται (Stein); cp. c. 75. 6 supra.

14. ἀνασκολοπίζειν, 'to impale': cp.

for the subst. c. 97; for the verb, and the barbarous practice, 1. 128, 3. 159, 4. 43, 202.

τετιμωρήσεται: cp. App. Crit., the future perfect, passive; doubly remarkable in respect both of the voice and of the tense; though passive in form, it must here be middle in sense, "thou wilt have taken vengeance in respect to Leonidas" (so too τετιμωρήμαι in some cases; cp. L. & S.). The active and passive of the verb are used in the next chapter. The normal construction of the verb is τινί (pers.), or ἐπὲρ τινός (pers.), τινός (rei), or τί. With the use of ἐς here cp. ἐς Λεωνίδην c. 64 supra.

15. πατρῶν: Kleombrotos, the father of Pausanias, being brother of Leonidas; cp. c. 10 supra.

79. 1. χαρίζεσθαι: gratificari, 6. 130.

3. προορᾶν: in regard to the future fame of Pausanias.

ἀγαμαί: perhaps not without a slight touch of irony or persiflage; cp. 4. 46, 157, 6. 76, 8. 144.

4. καὶ τὴν πᾶτρην καὶ τὸ ἔργον. On the strong co-ordination cp. c. 26 supra. On πᾶτρη cp. c. 76 supra. In the speech of Lampon reference has been made to Kleombrotos and to Leonidas, but hardly to Sparta, as a state or fatherland (except in the words ἐπαινον ἔξεις πρώτον μὲν ὑπὸ πάντων Σπαρτιητέων). The accusatives are "of reference"; cp. c. 72 supra.

5. ἐς τὸ μηδὲν κατέβαλες: sc. ἐπλ. With τὸ μηδὲν cp. 8. 106.

νεσθαι, καὶ ἦν ταῦτα ποίεω, φὰς ἄμεινόν με ἀκούσεσθαι· τὰ πρέπει μᾶλλον βαρβάροισι ποιεῖν ἢ περ Ἑλλήσι, καὶ ἐκείνοισι δὲ ἐπιφθονόμεν. ἐγὼ δ' ὦν τούτου εἵνεκα μήτε Αἰγινήτησι ἄδοιμι μήτε τοῖσι ταῦτα ἀρέσκειται, ἀποχρᾶ τέ μοι Σπαρτιήτησι ἀρεσκόμενον ὅσια μὲν ποιεῖν, ὅσια δὲ καὶ λέγειν. Λεωνίδῃ 10 δέ, τῷ με κελεύεις τιμωρῆσαι, φημὶ μεγάλως <τε> τετιμωρῆσθαι, ψυχῇσί τε τῇσι τῶνδε ἀναριθμήτοισι τετίμηται αὐτός τε καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι οἱ ἐν Θερμοπύλῃσι τελευτήσαντες. σὺ μέντοι

6 ποίεω B: ποίεω z 7 βαρβάροισι μᾶλλον B || κἀκείνοισι B, Holder, van H: κἀκείνοισι z 9 ἄδοιμι A: ἄδοιμι B || ταῦτα Bekker, Holder, van H. || ἀποχρᾶ S || τέ V (ap. Holder), Stein<sup>3</sup>: τε S (ap. Gaisford): δέ α etc., Stein<sup>12</sup>, Holder, van H.: δέ τέ R: (δ' ἐμοὶ Gaisford) 11 <τε> Stein<sup>3</sup> 12 τε: γε Gomperz, van H. || τῇσι om. Marc. z

6. ἄμεινον . . ἀκούσεσθαι: cp. 8. 93, also c. 107 infra (the active is usual).

τὰ πρέπει μᾶλλον βαρβάροισι ποιεῖν ἢ περ Ἑλλήσι: this sentence gives the two-edged moral of the anecdote, cutting the barbarians and the Aeginetan to boot; while Pausanias again emerges as the chevalier sans reproche; cp. c. 76 supra. πρέπει is strictly relative; cp. 8. 68, 114. In the latter passage may be found an undesigned commentary or complement to the present anecdote: the recompense made by Mardonios, as prophesied, was in a double sense ὅσας ἐκείνοισι (sc. Ἑλλήσι) πρέπει.

8. ἐπιφθονόμεν: non tam invidiae quam odii significatione, Baehr: 'we grudge it them even,' we think none the better of them therefor. With καὶ ἐκείνοισι δέ cp. 2. 44 καὶ δοκέουσι δέ μοι, 4. 105 καὶ ὁμῶσι δὲ λέγοντες. The καὶ is emphatic.

8' ὦν, 'however that may be.' Cp. Index.

τούτου εἵνεκα, 'as far as that is concerned'; or, if it depends on that.

μήτε Αἰγινήτησι ἄδοιμι: the animus of the anecdote is very plainly revealed in this pious wish; the Aeginetans one and all were to be damned, otherwise there seems no very obvious reason for making them responsible for the unholy propositions of their fellow-citizen. The animus here evinced is presumably Attic, and of long standing (cp. 7. 145); and such stories would have been greedily swallowed in Athens about the time of the first Peloponnesian war and the reduction of Aigina (462-457 B.C.). It seems, then, unnecessary to bring this passage down to the final expulsion of the Aeginetans in 431 B.C. (cp. 6. 91), much less with H. B. Wright, Campaign of Plataea (1904) p. 79 (following Knapp), to see in it a justification of the massacre of 424 B.C. See further, Introduction, § 9.

ἀνδάνω with personal subject is unusual.

9. ἀποχρᾶ: cp. 8. 130, also 7. 148; with an expressed subject c. 94 infra.

11. τῷ . . τιμωρῆσαι, 'to avenge whom,' in the normal construction. The perf. pass. neut. construction which follows implies the government of an accusative τεῖ by the active. Cp. previous chapter, note to l. 14.

12. ψυχῇσί τε . . τετίμηται: as by a sacrifice, hecatomb on hecatomb. The animistic idea underlying this magnificent utterance is not perfectly clear. What has become of 'the countless souls of these men here,' and where now are 'those who met their end at Thermopylai' (οἱ ἐν Θερμοπύλῃσι τελευτήσαντες)? The antithesis between αἱ ψυχαὶ and τῶνδε might recall the Homeric antithesis between the πολλὰς ἰφθίμους ψυχὰς ἡρώων sent to Hades and the ἡρώας αὐτοῖς left lying on the earth, a prey for dogs and vultures (Il. ad init.). The souls of Leonidas and his men must surely be down there too: the barbarians' souls are sent to bear them company, and to wait upon them, in strict conformity with animistic beliefs. Such a sacrifice upon a smaller scale Achilles performed at the tomb of Patroklos (cp. Il. 23. 19 ff.); and the battle of Plataea, from this point of view, was a superb ἀγὼν ἐπιδάφιος in honour of Leonidas and his fellows.

ἔτι ἔχων λόγον τοιόνδε μήτε προσέλθῃς ἔμοιγε μήτε συμβου-15 λεύσης, χάριν τε ἴσθι ἐὼν ἀπαθής.”
 80 Ὁ μὲν ταῦτα ἀκούσας ἀπαλλάσσετο, Πausανίης δὲ κήρυγμα ποιησάμενος μηδὲνα ἄπτεσθαι τῆς λήϊης, συγκομίζειν ἐκέλευε τοὺς εἴλωτας τὰ χρήματα. οἱ δὲ ἀνὰ τὸ στρατόπεδον σκιδνά-5 μνοι εὗρισκον σκηναὶς κατεσκευασμένας χρυσῷ καὶ ἀργύρῳ, κλίνας τε ἐπιχρυσούς καὶ ἐπαργύρους, κρητῆρας τε χρυσεούς καὶ φιάλας τε καὶ ἄλλα ἐκπώματα· σάκκους τε ἐπ’ ἀμαξίων εὗρισκον, ἐν τοῖσι λέβητες ἐφαίνοντο ἐνεόντες χρύσειοι τε καὶ ἀργύρειοι· ἀπὸ τε τῶν κειμένων νεκρῶν ἐσκύλευον ψέλια τε 10 καὶ στρεπτοὺς καὶ τοὺς ἀκινάκας ἐόντας χρυσεούς, ἐπεὶ ἐσθῆτός γε ποικίλης λόγος ἐγένετο οὐδεὶς. ἐνθαῦτα πολλὰ μὲν κλέπτοντες ἐπώλεον πρὸς τοὺς Αἰγινήτας οἱ εἴλωτες, πολλὰ δὲ καὶ ἀπε-δείκνυσαν, ὅσα αὐτῶν οὐκ οἶα τε ἦν κρύψαι· ὥστε Αἰγινήτησι

14 ἔτι om. Marc. || ἔμοιγε: ἐμέ R || συμβουλευῆς PMarc. z 15 τε ἴσθι z: ἴσθι τε 80. 2 ἐκέλευσε B 4 χρυσῷ <τε> van H.
 6 καὶ φιάλας Bz, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: φιάλας || ἄλλα: ἄλλα καὶ C || σάκκους: θάκους C: ‘Ἄν σάκους?’ van H. 7 ἐόντες B 8 ψέλλια
 Marc. z 9 ἀκινάκας S, Wesseling, Gaisford 10 ἐγένετο SV ||
 οὐδὲ εἰς B, Holder, van H. 11 οἱ om. R 12 αὐτῶν Bz

15. χάριν τε ἴσθι: the τε is cumulative, ‘and indeed’; cp. c. 70. χάριν εἶδέναι 3. 21. Cp. χάριν ἔχειν 7. 120. With the ‘sentiment’ cp. the Athenian remark to Alexander, 8. 143 ad f.

80. 2. μηδὲνα ἄπτεσθαι τῆς λήϊης: no one was to touch the spoil, in order that it might be duly collected and divided. As implied above, c. 70, the Tegeatai disregarded this order, unless indeed its issue was subsequent to their plunder of the tent of Mardonios, or unless the implication in that passage is unjust.

5. τοὺς εἴλωτας: but surely not to the number of 40,000, c. 29 supra.

ἀνά: passim per . .

τὸ στρατόπεδον: sc. Περσέων.

σκιδνάμενοι: cp. 8. 23.

5. ἐπιχρυσούς: i.e. ‘gilt,’ cp. 1. 50. In the following inventory of treasure κρητῆρας are large mixing bowls; φιάλας smaller vessels, primarily for pouring, cp. 8. 54 (χρῆ, FUD, cp. Curt. Gr. Etym. p. 186); ἐκπώματα drinking vessels; ἄλλα being idiomatic, ‘as well,’ cp. 3. 55. 5 supra. The Persians were hard drinkers, cp. 1. 133.

7. λέβητες: cauldrons, or pots, not primarily connected with drinking; why these were already packed in baize or bags (σάκκους) ready for departure, and the others not so, is obscure.

8. ψέλια, στρεπτοί: cp. 8. 113. Possibly only the ‘Persians’ were so decorated. τοὺς ἀκινάκας, ‘their swords,’ referring, as the article shows, especially to the notorious ‘Persian’ weapon; cp. 7. 54. The hilt and sheath might have been of gold, or covered therewith: or were the blades damascened?

9. ἐπεὶ, in an adversative sense, implying a suppressed sentence (‘οἱ μὲν ἐπὶ τῷ ἔργῳ ἴσθι, ἢ ὅτι μὴ εἴπω, ἢ ὅτι μὴ εἴπω, ἢ ὅτι μὴ εἴπω,’ or sim.) cp. L. & S. sub v. B. 4.

10. λόγος ἐγένετο οὐδεὶς, ‘no account was (being) taken’—embroidered robes etc., were at a discount. λόγος, cp. 4. 135.

11. πρὸς τοὺς Αἰγινήτας: not necessarily the 500 hoplites, or the survivor of them (cp. cc. 28, 69 supra); but the animus of the story is obvious; so previous chapter.

ἀπεδείκνυσαν, duly reported or ‘accounted for’; cp. 8. 35.

12. ὥστε . . ἐγένοντο: a transparent scandal, perhaps of Attic origin, which Hdt. could hardly have thus accepted or endorsed, had he known as much

οἱ μεγάλοι πλοῦτοι ἀρχὴν ἐνθεῦτεν ἐγένοντο, οἱ τὸν χρυσὸν ἄτε ὄντα χαλκὸν δῆθεν παρὰ τῶν εἰλώτων ᾠέοντο. συμφορῇ- 81
σαντες δὲ τὰ χρήματα καὶ δεκάτην ἐξελόντες τῷ ἐν Δελφοῖσι

14 εἰλώτων R: εἰλωτέων z

about the Aiginetans when he first penned this passage as he afterwards came to know; cp. 2. 178 etc. It is very unlikely that this scandal is to be dated (as Stein suggests) after the expulsion of the Aiginetans from their island in 431 B.C. Aiginetan wealth and greatness was a thing of the past after 457 B.C., but the scandal in regard to their origin does not necessitate even the inference that they were no more when it circulated; rather indeed the reverse: φθόνος dealt with the living present; cp. 7. 236 and note to previous chapter, l. 8.

13. ἀρχήν, 'originally,' cp. Index. The plural πλοῦτοι, perhaps because the wealth was not ἐν τῷ κοινῷ, but distributed in several holdings (not like the Latin divitiae, fortunae, bona, opes, etc.); cp. Plato Rep. 618 B. The article, as with δαυδάς above.

ἐνθεῦτεν: neither temporal nor local, but causal; cp. Thuc. 1. 5. 1 τὸν πλείστον τοῦ βίου ἐνθεῦθεν ἐποιούντο, Aristot. Eth. N. 5. 3. 6=1131a 23 ἐνθεῦθεν αἱ μάχαι καὶ τὰ ἐγκλήματα θύαν κτλ.

οἱ, 'for they . . .' exchanged on the χρύσεια χαλκίων principle: ἄτε ὄντα χαλκὸν δῆθεν. With the innocence of the helots (who, however, in this case were only robbers robbed) Wesseling and many commentators since have compared what Philippe de Comines, 5. 2, has to say of the Helvetians and their treatment of the spoil after the defeat of Charles the Bold at Granson, A.D. 1476. The anecdote in Hdt. may be intended not merely to discredit the Aiginetans but to raise a laugh at the expense of Sparta, with its iron money and so on. As a matter of fact the glint of gold was as recognizable in Sparta as anywhere in the Greek world (cp. 1. 69, 3. 148, 5. 51); if there was any pilfering on the field, and selling of stolen goods, no doubt the thieves sold cheap, not so much because they did not know the difference between gold and brass, as because they had to get rid of stolen goods as quickly as possible.

81. 2. δεκάτην ἐξελόντες. Stein conceives the tithe (or the tithes) as composed not of actual spoils, but of values. That being so, the spoils must have been valued, and even sold, before the tithe was actually handed over; unless we suppose that a rough estimate and division of spoil was made, and the tithes then converted into money. In either case, however, some time will have elapsed before this operation was complete, and it was hardly completed on the field of Plataia. Three gods are mentioned, three sacred places, as recipients and receptacles; but it is not clear whether one-tenth of all the spoil was divided among the three gods (in which case each would have received in reality a thirtieth of the whole: Larcher's view), or whether, as seems more probable, each of the three divinities received a full tithe (Baehr and others). Here again, however, there is an unresolved obscurity; it might be argued that only Delphi obtained the full tithe (the Amphiktyonic shrine being of greatest pan-Hellenic importance); that a tithe of what remained (i.e.  $\frac{1}{10}$  of  $\frac{9}{10}$ ) was given to Olympia, the Peloponnesian centre, while to the Isthmos went a tithe of the remainder ( $\frac{10:9:8}{100}$  being thus the proportionate shares). But that arrangement looks rather complicated!

τῷ ἐν Δελφοῖσι θεῷ. If a tithe of the spoil of Plataia was on the battlefield set apart and consecrated to the god in Delphi, the victors can scarcely have held the god, or his ministers, guilty of medism.

Plutarch, Aristeid. 11, shows the lengths to which the Rettung of Delphi could be carried: according to that story the god in Delphi had dictated the very spot for the Greek victory, and that in response to an Athenian inquiry!

Of the material reality and historic authenticity of the Anathema at Delphi there cannot be a shadow of doubt; but the precise date at which it was made, or provided for, the exact method by which the expenses were defrayed, are doubtful points. The list of states upon

θεῶ, ἀπ' ἧς ὁ τρίπους ὁ χρύσεος ἀνετίθη ὁ ἐπὶ τοῦ τρικάρηνου ὄφις τοῦ χαλκέου ἐπεστεῶς ἄγχιστα τοῦ βωμοῦ, καὶ τῷ ἐν
 5 Ὀλυμπίῃ θεῶ ἐξελόντες, ἀπ' ἧς δεκάπηχυν χάλκεον Δία ἀνέθηκαν, καὶ τῷ ἐν Ἴσθμῳ θεῶ, ἀπ' ἧς ἐπτάπηχυν χάλκεος

81. 4 ὄφεος :: ἐπεστεῶς B

6 ἀνέθηκε B

the τρικάρηνος ὄφις still legible proves that the monument was not merely a memorial of Plataia (even if offered from the spoil of that battle exclusively), for names occur upon it which were not represented at Plataia.

The monument consisted of two parts, as here described: (a) the golden λέβης or κρατήρ, elevated upon (b) a pillar, having the appearance of a three-headed serpent wound round a column. Thucydides, 1. 132. 2, does not accurately distinguish the two parts, but speaks of the whole offering as ὁ τρίπους. The golden bowl was melted down by the Phokians in the Sacred War, Pausan. 10. 13. 5. The (gilt) bronze pillar upon which it stood was carried off to Constantinople by the founder, where it was discovered in the Atmeidan by C. T. Newton in 1855 and the inscribed names deciphered, as frequently since. Cp. Otto Frick, Das plataeische Weihgeschenk, Leipzig, 1859; Fabricius D.A.I. 1. 176 ff.; Hicks, Manual,<sup>2</sup> No. 19, etc. But especially Frazer, Pausanias v. 299-307, where the modern literature is fully given; cp. also 8. 82 supra, Introduction § 10, Appendix I.

This monument has perhaps the longest and most continuous literary history in antiquity of any objet d'art, having been noticed by Hdt. (bis), Thucydides (1. 132. 2, 3. 57. 2), ps.-Demosth. (c. Neaer. § 97), C. Nepos (Pausan. 1), Diodoros (11. 33. 2), Plutarch (de malig. Hdti 42 = Mor. 873), Pausanias (10. 13. 5), Ael. Aristeides (iii. 290 B ed. Cantero, 1604), Suidas (sub v. Πανσωνίας).

4. ἄγχιστα τοῦ βωμοῦ. The altar here mentioned is identical with the altar 'dedicated by the Chians' mentioned in 2. 135, and stood in front of the temple, where its remains have been found; cp. Pausanias 10. 14. 7 (Frazer, v. 309).

The base of the 'Plataian' monument has also been found (cp. Frazer, v. 299). The particularity of the description here is not quite conclusive evidence that Hdt. had visited Delphi, and seen the

'Tripod' before writing the passage, for the immediate context contains evidence of his having consulted written authorities in regard to the allocation of the spoils, and he does not here specify the connexion of the Chians with the altar, as in 2. 135, a passage in which "autopsy" is much more evident than here. But it need not therefore be denied for the present chapter, which might very well be an addition to the original draft of the work, to be dated after his (first) visit to Greece; cp. Introduction, § 9.

τῷ ἐν Ὀλυμπίῃ θεῶ: i.e. Zeus. Pausanias, 5. 23. 1-2, describes the bronze figure, adds that it was dedicated by the Greeks who fought at Plataia, and gives the list of cities which took part 'in the battle,' from an inscription on the right side of the base. The names of the islanders from Keos, Melos, Tenos again throw some doubt on the question whether the list was rigidly limited to the combatants at Plataia. This inscription has not been recovered; and we are therefore dependent for its contents on the report of Pausanias, not in all respects above suspicion. Cp. Introduction, § 10. For the size of the statue (15 feet) upon the testimony of Hdt. cp. further Frazer, Pausanias iii. 630 f.

6. τῷ ἐν Ἴσθμῳ θεῶ: i.e. Poseidon. A dedication to Poseidon from the spoils of Plataia seems hardly called for, and supports the view that these offerings and monuments had reference to the whole war; the suggestion is fortified by the observation that no special dedications are recorded for Artemision and Mykale, the latter of which at least must have been reckoned a victory. (Was this offering connected with it?) Hdt. however (8. 121) has recorded a dedication at Delphi after Salamis, which may have been identical with the Apollo, 'from the spoils of Artemision and Salamis,' mentioned by Pausanias 10. 14. 5. The dedication at the Isthmos is quite lost sight of subsequently; cp. 8. 121 supra. The substitution of ἐξεγένετο for ἀνετίθη may be merely a Ποσειδέων ἐξεγένετο, ταῦτα ἐξελόντες, τὰ λοιπὰ διαιρέοντο, καὶ ἔλαβον ἕκαστοι τῶν ἄξιοι ἦσαν, καὶ τὰς παλλακὰς τῶν Περσέων καὶ τὸν χρυσὸν καὶ τὸν ἄργυρον καὶ τὰλλα χρήματά τε καὶ ὑποζύγια. ὅσα μὲν νυν ἐξαίρετα τοῖσι ἀριστεύουσι 10 αὐτῶν ἐν Πλαταιῇσι ἐδόθη, οὐ λέγεται πρὸς οὐδαμῶν, δοκέω δ' ἔγωγε καὶ τούτοις δοθῆναι. Πausanίη δὲ πάντα δέκα ἐξαιρέθη τε καὶ ἐδόθη, γυναῖκες ἵπποι τάλαντα κάμηλοι, ὥς δὲ αὐτως καὶ τὰλλα χρήματα.

7 ἐγένετο B 8 ἦσαν om. Marc.: ἔσαν z || παλακὰς C 9 τὸν ἄργυρον BPz: ἄργυρον || τὰλλα coni. Stein<sup>1</sup>, rec. van H., Stein<sup>2</sup>: ἄλλα 11 αὐτέων BCz || πλαταιῇσι α: πλαταιῇσιν B 12 δ': δὲ B 13 τε καὶ ἐδόθη om. B, Holder, van H. || τάλαντα: ἄρματα? Stein || ὥς PRz 14 τὰ ἄλλα B stylistic variation, but in fact Hdt. does not expressly say that the bronze Poseidon was ever actually erected: Pausanias in describing the Isthmos (2. 1. 7 etc.), though he mentions several images of Poseidon, does not attempt to identify any of them with the one here in question.

7. τὰ λοιπὰ διαιρέοντο: it appears just below that another δεκάτη (possibly of what was left) was reserved for the commander-in-chief, Pausanias, and if we allow the Helots 10 per cent for their pilferings, above recorded, it appears that of all the spoil only one-half would remain for division among all the various states concerned, and their commanders, or to furnish the rewards of valour.

8. ἔλαβον ἕκαστοι τῶν ἄξιοι ἦσαν. On what principle the distribution was effected is not indicated: was it the relative size of the contingents (κατὰ τὸν στρατιωτῶν ἀριθμὸν Diodor. 11. 33. 1)? Or this simple principle may have been combined with a consideration of services rendered, the proportion of dead, and so forth. Nor is it clear who made the awards, whether the whole council of war, or the Hegemonic state (cp. c. 27 supra), or the commander-in-chief. It is unlikely that the awards gave complete satisfaction to every one, cp. c. 70 supra. On the plural ἕκαστοι cp. 7. 1. 7 etc.

9. τὰλλα: the ἄλλα is idiomatic, 'besides'; cp. c. 80 supra.

10. τοῖσι ἀριστεύουσι: according to Hdt. there had been, and was, no award to any state collectively, cp. c. 71 supra, or at least he could not discover any; he might seem here, therefore, to be referring to individuals, but it is likely that individuals, ἀριστεύοντες, would have been rewarded out of the share of their state and not out of the common or undivided booty: the case of the commander-in-chief would stand on a different footing.

11. οὐ λέγεται πρὸς οὐδαμῶν. As Rawlinson points out, this phrase indicates that Hdt. consulted authors, i.e. written authorities; cp. Introduction, § 10. Their silence was perhaps a part of the conspiracy of silence on the whole question of the ἀριστεία, cp. c. 71 supra.

12. καὶ τούτοις as well as to the gods and the commander-in-chief. These would have been the Plataians if the story in Plutarch, Aristeíd. 20, be true. Plutarch, indeed, not only records the extra allowances to the Plataians, but names the temple (dedicated to Athene) which was built therefrom.

πάντα δέκα. Rawlinson renders "ten specimens of each kind of thing," which gives a rather curious and hardly adequate result when you come to details. Stein has (cp. 4. 88) "alles zehnfach," i.e. ten times as much of each and everything as he would have had on an ordinary occasion, 'a tenfold portion': the case was evidently an extraordinary one. How much exactly his portion amounted to does not appear, but it will probably have been not less than another tithe of the spoil—though that exact meaning can hardly be got out of the expression here.

13. γυναῖκες, as though the men had all been slain: this was not, however, the case, as the next anecdote shows. For τάλαντα Stein suggests ἄρματα.

- 82 Λέγεται δὲ καὶ τάδε γενέσθαι, ὡς Ξέρξης φεύγων ἐκ τῆς Ἑλλάδος Μαρδονίῳ τὴν κατασκευὴν καταλίπει τὴν ἐωυτοῦ. Πausanίην ὦν ὁρῶντα τὴν Μαρδονίου σκηνὴν χρυσῷ τε καὶ ἀργύρῳ καὶ παραπετάσμασι ποικίλοισι κατεσκευασμένην, κε-
5 λεύσαι τοὺς τε ἀρτοκόπους καὶ τοὺς ὀψοποιούς κατὰ ταῦτα καθὼς Μαρδονίῳ δειπνον παρασκευάζειν. ὡς δὲ κελεύόμενοι οὗτοι ἐποίουν ταῦτα, ἐνθαῦτα τὸν Πausanίην ἰδόντα κλίνας τε χρυσέας καὶ ἀργυρέας εὖ ἐστρωμένας καὶ τραπέζας τε χρυσέας καὶ ἀργυρέας καὶ παρασκευὴν μεγαλοπρεπέα τοῦ δειπνου,
10 ἐκπλαγέντα τὰ προκείμενα ἀγαθὰ κελεύσαι ἐπὶ γέλῳτι τοὺς

82. 2 παρασκευὴν Athenaeus p. 138 || καταλίπει C 3 ὁρέοντα P Marc. 2, Stein<sup>1</sup>: ὁρέοντα C || σκηνὴν Schweighaeuser, Stein<sup>2</sup>: κατασκευὴν 4 ποικίλοισι C || κατεσκευασμένην ASV, Schaefer, Gaisford: παρασκευασμένην C 5 ἀρτοκόπους Cobet: 'volgatum tuetur inser.' van H. 6 καθὼς: καὶ Schaefer: ὡς καὶ? Stein: del. Abicht, Gomperz, van H. || κατασκευάζειν B 8 εὖ . . ἀργυρέας om. B'Sz || τε post χρυσέας B 10 γέλῳτα S

κάμηλοι have not been mentioned since 7. 125 (except for 7. 184. 20), and have played no part in the campaign. They cannot have been much used in Greece, and no doubt quickly died out, for camels were evidently a curiosity there early in the fourth century B.C., cp. Xenoph. Hell. 3. 4. 24 (though they are to be seen there to-day: Itea, 17.4.05). The horses may have been used to improve the Hellenic breeds, perhaps helped to mount the first Athenian cavalry, and reappear on the frieze of Pheidias in their descendants.

ὡς δ' αὖτως = ὡσαύτως δέ, i.e. πάντα δέκα, tenfold (8. 21. 5).

82. 1. λέγεται δέ κτλ.: probably by some author, or λογογράφος; cp. c. 81 supra, οὐ λέγεται πρὸς οὐδαμῶν. The specification indicates a doubt of the truth of the following story, which is indeed not prima facie very probable, and carries too obvious a tendency and moral.

Ξέρξης φεύγων. Xerxes is seldom allowed to leave Hellas except 'in flight.' Here the exaggeration serves to make the bequest of his κατασκευὴ to Mardonios more probable. The κατασκευὴ might certainly include the σκηνή (above described, c. 70, as of Mardonios); the παραπετάσματα, hangings, curtains, tapestries, as well as παρασκευὴ lower down, support that view; but if the Tegeatai had sacked it on entering the camp, how could Pausanias have seen it in the good order implied by the present story? According to Plutarch, Pericles 13 (cp. Pausanias 1. 20. 4), the Oideion was said to have been a copy of the king's tent (εἰκὼν καὶ μίμημα τῆς βασιλέως σκηνῆς). Vitruvius 5. 9 represents the roof as constructed from the masts and spars of the Persian ships, and names Themistokles as the (first?) erector. (On the subsequent fate of the building, cp. Frazer, Pausan. l.c.; E. Gardner Ancient Athens, pp. 394-5.) That look as though the king's pavilion had fallen into the hands of the Athenians, a conclusion hardly compatible with c. 7 above. Or did the adoption of the pattern cover a protest or claim?

5. ἀρτοκόπους . . ὀψοποιούς: cp. Xenoph. Hell. 7. 1. 38 (report of the Arkadian Antiochos to the Myriad, 36 B.C.) ὅτι βασιλεὺς ἀρτοκόπους μὲν καὶ ὀψοποιούς καὶ οἰνοχόους καὶ θυρωροὺς παμπληθεῖς ἔχει, ἀνδρας δὲ οἱ μάχονται δ' Ἕλλησι, πάντι ζητῶν οὐκ ἐφ' ἑαυτῷ ἰδεῖν. Hdt. makes ἀρτοκόπος feminine in 1. 51. The males had not all been put to the sword at Plataea; cp. c. 8 supra (γυναῖκες). ὀψοποιός is not a pastry cook (μάγειρος, at least originally) but a cook for ὀψα, q.v.

6. καθὼς is anomalous; cp. App. Crit. It occurs ap. Athenaeum 138 c, in quoting this very passage.

10. ἐκπλαγέντα, whether of fear, of

ἑωυτοῦ διηκόνους παρασκευάσαι Λακωνικὸν δεῖπνον. ὥς δὲ τῆς θοίνης ποιηθείσης ἦν πολλὸν τὸ μέσον, τὸν Πausanίην γελάσαντα μεταπέμψασθαι τῶν Ἑλλήνων τοὺς στρατηγούς, συνελθόντων δὲ τούτων εἰπεῖν τὸν Πausanίην, δεικνύντα ἐς ἑκατέρην τοῦ δείπνου παρασκευήν, "ἄνδρες Ἕλληνες, τῶνδε 15 εἵνεκα ἐγὼ ὑμέας συνήγαγον, βουλόμενος ὑμῖν τοῦδε τοῦ Μῆδων ἡγεμόνος τὴν ἀφροσύνην δέξαι, ὃς τοιήνδε δίαίταν ἔχων ἦλθε ἐς ἡμέας οὕτω διζυρὴν ἔχοντας ἀπαιρησόμενος." ταῦτα μὲν Πausanίην λέγεται εἰπεῖν πρὸς τοὺς στρατηγούς τῶν Ἑλλήνων, ὕστερ' ὧν μέντοι χρόνῳ μετὰ ταῦτα καὶ τῶν 83 Πλαταιέων εὖρον συχνοὶ θήκας χρυσοῦ καὶ ἀργύρου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων χρημάτων. ἐφάνη δὲ καὶ τάδε ὕστερον ἔτι τούτων astonishment, as here, is more usually constructed with the dative; cp. 7. 226, 4. 4, etc.

14 τούτων BCz || εἶπαι z, van H. || τὸν Πausanίην secl. van H. || ἐς om. B 15 τὴν παρασκευήν B, Holder, van H. 16 ὑμέας ἐγὼ Marc. || ἡμῖν B || τοῦδε τοῦ: τοῦ τοῦ V: τοῦ RS, Holder, van H. 17 Μῆδων S: (ἡγεμόνος delete) Schaefer, Palm: βασιλῆος z || δέξαι libri 18 οὕτως B 19 Πausanίης RS || εἶπαι z, van H. 83. 3 ἐφάνη. . ἐτάφη (c. 84) ut spuria secl. Krueger || τάδε ὕστερον ἔτι τούτων <ἐπὶ> Stein<sup>2</sup>: τότε ὕστερον τούτων ἐπὶ Stein<sup>2</sup>: τότε ὕστερον ἐπὶ τούτων libri (τούτων z), Stein<sup>1</sup>: τότε ὕστερον ἔτι τούτων. Abresch, Wesseling, Holder, van H.

ἐπὶ γέλῳ, of the end or object in view; cp. 6. 67. Pausanias should be credited with a more serious purpose; but the anecdote is a contribution to "the comic Nemesis"; cp. 8. 24. 4 supra.

τοὺς ἑωυτοῦ διηκόνους, including the hereditary cooks (6. 60), whose productions were not likely to be triumphs of the culinary art. Athenaeus (4. 16 ff.) 139 follows up his citation of this passage by numerous quotations on various forms of Lakonian banquets, the κοπίς, the αἰκλον, the φειδίτια (e.g. ἐστὶ δ' ἡ κοπίς εἶπνον, μάζα, ἄρτος, κρέας, λάχανον ὠμόν, ζωμός, σῦκον, τράχημα, θέρμος).

12. θοίνη: food, banquet, 1. 119.

τὸ μέσον, 'the interval,' 'the difference'; cp. Index, and 1. 126.

13. τῶν Ἑλλήνων τοὺς στρατηγούς: he might have been going to entertain them, and perhaps he was, to a banquet à la Perse. The subsequent career of Pausanias seems to suggest that the Persian cooks made a speedy convert; but here Pride—the Pride of Poverty—prevents his fall. No wonder Hdt. doubts the story (λέγεται again), but it was too good a one to throw over. It is apparently an addition, at second or third hand, for it interrupts the natural sequence of cc. 81, 83. Cp. Introduction, § 9.

18. διζυρός (only here in Hdt.) is a common Homeric epithet of πόλεμος, γόος, νόξ, and βροτοί (human beings, most frequently): 'miserable,' 'woeful,' 'pitiable.' A harder epithet could scarcely have been used of the poverty-stricken Laconic fare.

83. 1. ὕστερ' ὧν μέντοι. . χρημάτων. This sentence has nothing to say to the immediately preceding sentence, or chapter; nor does it fit on very well to c. 81. It would follow most naturally immediately on c. 80 supra; that is to say, in view of the previous notes, c. 81 looks like an addition 'of the second hand,' and c. 82 like an addition of the second, or third hand. μέντοι after μὲν instead of δέ: cp. 6. 86 ποιεῖτε μὲν . . ὁκοῖον μέντοι κτλ.

2. θήκας, 'deposits'; the Helots not having been able to dispose of all their thefts to the Aiginetans, had buried many of them in the ground. (The Helots may not have been the only thieves and depositors.)

3. ἐφάνη δὲ κτλ. Krüger damned the

<ἐπὶ> τῶν νεκρῶν περιψιλωθέντων τὰς σάρκας<sup>1</sup>, συνεφόρεον
 5 γὰρ τὰ ὅστέα οἱ Πλαταιέες ἐς ἓνα χῶρον· εὐρέθη κεφαλὴ οὐκ ἔχουσα ῥαφήν οὐδεμίαν ἀλλ' ἐξ ἑνὸς ἐοῦσα ὅστέου, ἐφάνη δὲ καὶ γνάθος κατὰ τὸ ἄνω [τῆς γνάθου] ἔχουσα ὀδόντας μουν-φυέας ἐξ ἑνὸς ὀστέου πάντας τοὺς τε προσθίους καὶ γομφίους, 84 καὶ πενταπήχεος ἀνδρὸς ὅστέα ἐφάνη. ἐπεῖτε δὲ Μαρδονίου δευτέρῃ ἡμέρῃ ὁ νεκρὸς ἠφάνιστο, ὑπὸ ὅτε μὲν ἀνθρώπων τὸ ἀτρεκέες οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν, πολλοὺς δὲ τινὰς ἤδη καὶ

5 ὅστ' C 6 οὐδεμίαν z || ἀλλὰ Marc. z 7 κατὰ Stein<sup>(1)</sup> z, van H.: καὶ || ἐπάνω BPz || τῆς γνάθου del. Stein<sup>(1)</sup> z, Holder, van H. ||
 ὀδόντας secl. van H. || μουνφυέας . . ὀδόντας (vel προσθίους) om. B<sup>1</sup>:
 μονοφυέας B 8 προσθίους Stein<sup>(1)</sup> z<sup>3</sup>: ὀδόντας || τοὺς γομφίους z
 9 πεντεπήχεος α 84. 1 ἐπεῖ δὲ B: ἐπεὶ γε δὲ malebat Stein<sup>1</sup> z:
 'locus et lacunosus et corruptus' Stein<sup>2</sup> 2 ἠφάνισται Paria 1635 z:
 ὑπ' C Marc.: ὑπὸ RSV || τευ B: ὅτεω z || ἀνθρώπου S 3 ἀτρεκέως B
 εἶπαι z, van H. || ἤδη om. S

rest of this and the next chapter. The matter is quite to Hdt.'s mind on such occasions, cp. 3. 12, but these curiosities of the battle-field may be additions of his own; on the other hand, the fate of Mardonios' corpse must have been a primary problem.

ὕστερον τούτων: not strictly after the discovery of the hidden treasures by Plataians, but simply 'after the war'; cp. c. 75 supra.

4. <ἐπὶ> τῶν νεκρῶν περιψιλωθέντων τὰς σάρκας: the plural σάρκας perhaps with reference to the numbers of different dead, but Homer habitually uses the plural, even as ὅστέα. The accusative is "of reference"; cp. c. 72 supra. ἐπὶ with the genitive here, 'upon the corpses,' can hardly be temporal, though that would give one of the quaintest dates on record ('at, or by, the time the dead bodies were cleaned bare of flesh'); nor even local (the dead bodies having been gathered into one place), but perhaps more generally 'in the case of' (cp. App. Crit.). Hdt. does not say that he had himself seen these curiosities. 1. The skull without a single suture (ῥαφή). 2. The jaw (upper) with all the teeth of a piece. γομφίος (sc. ὀδοὺς), regular word for 'molars' (πρόσθιος 'front'). (Plutarch Pyrrh. 3 makes a similar statement of Pyrrhus; Pliny 7. 69 of the son of Prusias of Bithynia.) 3. The bones of a man five cubits high (the tallest of the Persians wanted four fingers of that height, 7. 117 supra).

84. 1. ἐπεῖτε δέ: there is no apodosis to this protasis, whether formal or material. Stein suggested ἐπεὶ γε δὲ on the assumption that the giant corpse, just mentioned, had been mistaken for that of Mardonios; but Hdt. would scarcely have left so much to be understood, and the grammatical confusion of the passage may arise from the amount of 'retraction,' not fully carried through, in the whole of this context. This little c. is altogether significant for the sources and composition problems of Hdt.'s work. Cp. Introduction, § 10.

2. δευτέρῃ ἡμέρῃ: i.e. the day after the battle, or the 14th; the night of the day of battle has not been indicated: the nearest thing thereto is the evening meal ordered in c. 82, if indeed that anecdote belongs to the same day. The dawn of the day of battle has been recorded in c. 56 supra.

ὁ νεκρὸς ἠφάνιστο, 'the corpse of Mardonios was nowhere to be found.' The scandal against Lampon of Aigina, cc. 78 f. supra, assumed the recovery of the body as a matter of course. The pl.p. may be taken as strictly temporal.

3. τὸ ἀτρεκέες οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν. Hdt. can hardly have seen the monument to Mardonios on the road from Eleuthera to Plataia mentioned by Pausanias 9. 2. 2, evidently with some hesitation and doubt, due to this very passage in Hdt.

ἤδη . . ἤκουσα: as in 7. 53. Though Hdt. uses ὁράω of perceptions not strictly visual (cp. c. 53 supra, and παντοδαπούς ἤκουσα θάψαι Μαρδόνιον, καὶ δῶρα μεγάλα οἶδα λαβόντας πολλοὺς παρὰ Ἀρτόντew τοῦ Μαρδονίου παιδὸς 5 διὰ τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον· ὅστις μέντοι ἦν αὐτῶν ὁ ὑπελόμενός τε καὶ θάψας τὸν νεκρὸν τὸν Μαρδονίου, οὐ δύναμαι ἀτρεκέως πυθέσθαι, ἔχει δὲ τινὰ φάτιν καὶ Διονυσοφάνης ἀνὴρ Ἐφέσιος θάψαι Μαρδόνιον. ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν τρόπῳ τοιούτῳ ἐτάφη·

Οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες ὥς ἐν Πλαταιῇσι τὴν λήην διείλοντο, 85 ἔθαπτον τοὺς ἐκείνων χωρὶς ἕκαστοι. Λακεδαιμόνιοι μὲν

6 αὐτέων C Marc. s || ἱπποοούμενος B 7 τοῦ μαρδονίου Marc.
8 φάτις S || διονυσοφάνης B Marc.: διονυσοφάνης 9 τρόπῳ τοιούτῳ:
πρὸς ὀτευδήποτε van H. 85. 1 πλαταιῇσι α; πλαταιῇσι B ||
διείλαντο B

6. 69 ὁρῶν δὲ με κατομνημένην κτλ.), he probably uses ἀκούω with definite reference to audible, oral information (not as we, who speak of 'hearing' by letter, etc. The curious passage 1. 124, 125 comes dangerously near our colloquial usage: τὸ βυβλίον . . λαβὼν ἐπελέγετο, τὰ δὲ γράμματα ἔλεγε τάδε . . ἀκούσας ταῦτα ὁ Κύρος κτλ.). The use of οἶδα just below contrasts not with the uncertainty of hearsay, as though the οἶδα (εἰδέναι) had necessarily some other source, but merely assures us of Hdt.'s personal conviction (cp. 7. 214 οἶδαμεν, 1. 5, 20 etc.), not but what he might have seen the δῶρα, or some of them, or some of the persons who received them, or even Artontes himself, though he never saw the corpse, or even the tomb, of Mardonios.

5. Ἀρτόντew: to be distinguished from the father of Bagoas 3. 124, though possibly of the same house, and named after him. Nothing more is known of Artontes the son of Mardonios; but as in 492 B.C. Mardonios was young and lately married to Artostostra, the daughter of Dareios (cp. 6. 43), Stein ingeniously conjectures that Artontes may have had an official post in Asia Minor about 460 B.C. or later, when these applications were made to him, and his piety so cruelly exploited. Pausanias (9. 2. 2) makes all the successful applicants 'Ionians,' but he may have nothing more to draw on than this story in Hdt. This passage may obviously quite well belong to the earliest draft of Hdt.'s work. Cp. de Mardonii morte Nipperdey ad Nep. Arist. 2. 1; Müller ad Aristod. 2. 5 (F.H.G. v. p. 5); Enmann, die Quellen des Trogus, Dorpat, 1880, p. 23; Krumbholz, p. 26.

6. ὅστις μέντοι ἦν: that none of the applications was really genuine or honest, that the body was never identified and buried, are alternatives which Hdt. does not even consider. He assumes that some one secretly got the body away (ὑπελόμενος) and buried it. Another and more discreditable alternative has, indeed, been disposed of cc. 78 f. above. The problem evidently exercised Hdt. a good deal (οὐ δύναμαι ἀτρεκέως πυθέσθαι). That 'burial' was not perhaps quite the proper rule for Persians Hdt. half knows, cp. 1. 140, but the 'Magian' use may not have been as yet universal among 'Persians.' Cp. also 7. 10 ad f.

8. ἔχει δὲ τινὰ φάτιν: cp. διζούς λόγους λεγομένους ἔχει c. 74 supra, the reverse construction to λόγος ἔχει (cp. c. 78 supra) or φάτις μιν ἔχει 7. 3. φάτις perhaps comes nearer than any single word in Hdt. to 'oral report,' mere hearsay, written down by him for the first time; cp. 7. 3, 189, 8. 94; Introduction, § 10.

Διονυσοφάνης: of this Ephesian nothing is known but what Hdt. tells us. How an Ephesian, how other 'Ionians' came to be on the battle-field of Plataia is anything but obvious: on which side were they supposed to be fighting? Were they prisoners, or slaves? or merchants? or diviners?

85. 1. διείλοντο, ἔθαπτον: the sequence of tenses seems to warrant the conclusion, strange as it may appear that the Greeks postponed the burial of their own dead to the division of the spoil.

2. χωρὶς ἕκαστοι: each set, each state, its own apart from those of the others.

τριξὰς ἐποιήσαντο θήκας· ἔνθα μὲν τοὺς ἱρένας ἔθαψαν, τῶν
καὶ Ποσειδώνιος καὶ Ἀμομφάρετος ἦσαν καὶ Φιλοκύνων τε

3 ἔνθα . . Καλλικράτης secl. Sitzler || ἱρένας Valckenaer, Stein, van H.: εἰρένας de Pauw, ΑΕΞΕΙΣ: ἱρέας AB: ἱρέας Holder: ἱερέας Marc.: ἱρέας reliqui || τῶν καὶ: τῶν B Marc. 4 ποσειδώνιος R || ἦσαν post Ποσει-δώνιος S: ἔσαν z

Pausanias 9. 2. 5 locates the tombs on the road, after the junction of the routes from Eleutherai and from Megara, and just at the entrance to the city: κατὰ δὲ τὴν ἑσόδον μάλιστα τὴν ἐς Ἰλῳταίαν τάφοι τῶν πρὸς Μήδους μαχασαμένων εἰσὶ. Such is the precision of the actual Periegete; but even he has not quite accurately described the tombs themselves: τοῖς μὲν οὖν λοιποῖς ἐστὶν Ἑλλήσι μῆμα κοινόν. If this is correct, the statement of Hdt. below in regard to the tombs of the Tegeatai, of the Megarians and Phleisians, to say nothing of the alleged kenotaphs, must be incorrect. Blakesley suggests that Pausanias mistook the barrow of the Helots for 'the common sepulture of all the Greeks.' Or was it the Megaro-Phleisian? Pausanias proceeds: Λακεδαιμονίων δὲ καὶ Ἀθηναίων τοῖς πεσοῦσιν ἰδίᾳ τέ εἰσιν οἱ τάφοι, καὶ ἐλεγείᾳ ἐστὶ Σιμωνίδου γεγραμμένα ἐπ' αὐτοῖς. Pausanias unfortunately does not quote the epigrams; for possible texts cp. Hauvette, sur l'authenticité etc., Nos. 28, 29. Dr. Frazer is doubtless right in declining to see in the rock-cut graves, a little SE. of the plateau of the city, any remains of the θήκαι, χώματα, or πολυάνδρια which contained the bodies of the slain in 479 B.C., Pausanias, v. p. 15.

Λακεδαιμόνιοι μὲν. The Lakedaimonians made them three graves, or tombs, τριξὰς θήκας, or as Dr. Frazer l.c., harmonizing Pausanias with Hdt., suggests, a triple grave, a common receptacle for three groups of dead men. That is, indeed, very probably what they did; but Hdt. speaks of three τάφοι for the Lakedaimonians, in each of which a separate group is deposited, and, though the τάφοι may not be χωρίαι, they appear to be quite distinct. If Hdt. is mistaken on this point, it is not the only mistake he makes in this passage. τριξός, as in 4. 192.

3. τοὺς ἱρένας: a conjecture by Valckenaer for ἱρέας, but a certain one. The Δέξεις contains the word εἰρήν (cp.

Stein ed. maj. ii. 465), but this is the only place in the text where it can occur; the burial of ἱρέας by themselves is inadmissible, and who were the ἱρέας? So great an error in Greek or Spartan institutions Hdt. could not incur. The ἱρήν (ἱρήν, εἰρήν, ἱραν, Φίραν) was the Spartiate warrior from twenty to thirty years of age, Plutarch, Lyk. 17; cp. G. Gilbert, Gr. Staatsalt. i.<sup>2</sup> 70; but it is not credible that Spartan citizens of that age occupied high military or civil posts, nor is it credible that Poseidonios, Amompharetos, Philokyon (cp. c. 71 supra), and Kallikrates (cp. c. 72 supra) were merely ἱρέας, least of all Amompharetos. Neither is it to be admitted (with L. & S. sub v.) that the word in this passage denotes 'officers of all ranks'; the glosses in Hesychios (ἱρέας οἱ ἀρχοντες ἡλικιωτῶν, and εἰρητῆρες κρατεῖ) do not go beyond Plutarch (οὗτος οὖν ὁ εἰρήν εἰκόσι ἔτη γεγονώς ἀρχαυτε τῶν ὑποτεταγμένων ἐν ταῖς μάχαις κατ' οἶκον ὑπηρεταῖς χρῆται πρὸς τὸ δειπνόν). (Plutarch may be following 'Aristotle' Λακ. πολιτεία.) Rawlinson's assertion that 'at the age of twenty the Spartiate acquired the right to speak in the Assembly and to have a command' is a bit of constitutional law due to combining the pseudo-etymology (εἰρήν from εἶρω) in Etym. Mag. with the misunderstanding of the gloss of Hesychios above cited. It appears that Hdt., though he employs the technical term ἱρέας, has not understood it when he puts the ἱρέας in one grave, 'the rest of the Spartiates' in another, and the Helots in a third. That arrangement, indeed, takes no account of the 'Lakedaimonians,' or Perioikoi. Probably the three trenches, or mounds, covered (i.) Spartiates—a majority of whom would be ἱρέας, (ii.) Lakedaimonians, (iii.) Helots. Of the first, ninety-one had fallen, c. 70 supra; the figures for the others are not given. The error shown in the passage makes it unlikely that Hdt. derived this passage from a Spartan source, least of all one in Sparta itself.

καὶ Καλλικράτης. ἐν μὲν δὲ ἐνὶ τῶν τάφων ἦσαν οἱ ἱρένες, 5
ἐν δὲ τῷ ἐτέρῳ οἱ ἄλλοι Σπαρτιῆται, ἐν δὲ τῷ τρίτῳ οἱ εἰλωτες. οὗτοι μὲν οὕτω ἔθαπτον, Τεγεῆται δὲ χωρὶς πάντας ἀλέας, καὶ Ἀθηναῖοι τοὺς ἐωυτῶν ὁμοῦ, καὶ Μεγαρέες τε καὶ Φλειάσιοι τοὺς ὑπὸ τῆς ἵππου διαφθαρέντας. τούτων μὲν δὴ πάντων πλήρεις ἐγένοντο οἱ τάφοι· τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ὅσοι καὶ 10 φαίνονται ἐν Πλαταιῇσι ἐόντες τάφοι, τούτους δέ, ὡς ἐγὼ πυνθάνομαι, ἐπαισχυνομένους τῇ ἀπεστοῖ τῆς μάχης ἐκάστος χώματα χῶσαι κεινὰ τῶν ἐπιγυνομένων εἵνεκεν ἀνθρώπων,

5 ἦσαν: ἐτάφησαν? Stein<sup>(2)</sup> || ἱρένες Valckenaer etc.: εἰρένες ut supra:
ιρέες AB: ιρέες Holder: ιερέες Marc.: ιρέες ceteri 7 οὕτω μὲν οὗτοι ἔθαφθεν B || πάντας ἔθαψαν Bz 8 ἀλέας AB: ἀλέας Marc. || τοὺς ἐωυτῶν ὁμοῦ om. B 9 τούτων C Marc. z 10 τῶν . . τάφοι om. B:
citat Plutarch. Mor. 872 || ὅσοι Krueger, Stein<sup>3</sup>: ὅσοι 11 πλαταιῇσι
AB || δὴ z 12 ἀπαισχυνομένους aC: ἀπεσχοινομένους Marc. || ἀπεστοῖ R (B ap. Holder: ἀποστοῖ τῆς μάχης ἐγένοντο S ap. Gaisford):
ἀπεστύῃ coni. Valckenaer || ἐκάστη Marc. 13 κοινὰ Paris. 1635 z ||
ἐπιγυνομένων aC || εἵνεκα z

7. Τεγεῆται. The Tegeatai buried their sixteen (c. 70 supra) all together, in a separate place, and grave, probably next the Lakedaimonians (cp. c. 28 supra). Pausanias does not notice the Tegean grave.

8. Ἀθηναῖοι had fifty-two slain (c. 70 supra). One might have expected them to have buried their dead down on the plain, where, presumably, they had fallen (c. 67 supra), but Pausanias l.c. appears to put the grave in the neighbourhood of the Spartan. (Could he have made a mistake?) Stein sees in Thucydides 2. 34. 5 an intentional contradiction of this passage in Hdt. Krüger proposed to reconcile the two by supposing that the Athenian tomb at Plataia was a kenotaph; Baehr boldly regards Thucydides as in the wrong.

Μεγαρέες τε καὶ Φλειάσιοι. This formula denotes the left centre of the Greek army (cp. c. 69 supra), and probably only one grave or Polyandria is here indicated, in which those of the right centre, who fell in conflict with the Thebans, were interred, to the number of 600; cp. c. 69 supra. That figure is not, indeed, convincing. It should perhaps be taken to represent the total losses of the Greeks other than the figures for the Lakedaimonians, Tegeatai, and Athenians, in fact to cover also the losses of the right centre of the Greek army (which Hdt. appears to think was not engaged at all). If so, then this tumulus is the first of the τάφοι described by Pausanias, the μῆμα κοινόν for all the Greeks (i.e. the whole centre), distinguished from the separate τάφοι for the Lakedaimonians and for the Athenians.

10. τῶν δὲ ἄλλων: sc. Ἑλλήνων.

11. φαίνονται ἐν Πλαταιῇσι ἐόντες, 'are to be seen at Plataia,' i.e. in the land of Plataia (cp. c. 16 etc.). It does not follow that Hdt. had seen them before writing; indeed, what ensues is based on hearsay, or correspondence (πυνθάνομαι, ἀκούω); and, if Hdt. had been writing from his own personal inspection and remembrance, the imperfect tense would have been more naturally employed (ἐφαίνοντο).

τούτους δέ: a true δέ in apodosis; τούτους is better referred to τάφοι than to τῶν ἄλλων, and taken as in virtual opposition to χώματα, ἐκάστος (the several states) being subject of the verb. There is still a slight confusion in the construction, which is in oratio obliqua, the ὡς in ὡς ἐγὼ πυνθάνομαι notwithstanding.

12. ἀπεστοῖ = ἀποσειά. Hesychios gives the form ἀπεστός as well as ἀπεστώ, Ionic forms. Cp. εὐεστώ l. 85. τῆς μάχης, on the 13th.

13. τῶν ἐπιγυνομένων εἵνεκεν, 'for the sake of (deceiving) posterity'!

ἐπεὶ καὶ Αἰγινητέων ἐστὶ αὐτόθι καλεόμενος τάφος, τὸν ἐγὼ
 15 ἀκούω καὶ δέκα ἔτεσι ὕστερον μετὰ ταῦτα δεηθέντων τῶν Αἰγινητέων χῶσαι Κλεάδην τὸν Αὐτοδίκου ἄνδρα Πλαταιέα, πρόξεινον ἑόντα αὐτῶν.

86 Ὡς δ' ἄρα ἔθαψαν τοὺς νεκροὺς ἐν Πλαταιῇσι οἱ
 "Ἕλληνες, αὐτίκα βουλευομένοι σφί ἐδόκεε στρατεῦσθαι ἐπὶ

14 τὸν: τῶν R(V) 15 τῶν om. BPz, Holder 16 ἀλεάδην
 αC Marc. 17 πρόξινον B || ὄντα C || ἐωπτόων z 86. 1 δὲ R(V)
 || πλαταιήσιν α: πλαταιήσιν R(V) 2 βουλευομένοι σφιν C || στρατεύειν αC

14. καὶ Αἰγινητέων: a particular case but an unfortunate one to have selected, as upon Hdt.'s own showing the Aiginetans, being included in the left centre, οἱ ἀμφὶ Μεγαρέας τε καὶ Φλειασίους, were at least engaged with the Theban cavalry on the 13th. Cp. cc. 69, 28 supra. If they erected subsequently a kenotaph (χῶμα κενόν or τάφος κενός), it might be because their actual dead had been interred in the common grave, the 'Megaro-Phleiasian' grave, or κοινὸν μνήμα, and they wished, as time went on, to commemorate their own separately. A similar consideration would account for any other kenotaphs on the field.

ἐγὼ ἀκούω: not very convincing evidence, nor very critically received by Hdt. The use of the present is perhaps rhetorical, or is he writing in Athens, where he would be hearing such things said? Cp. Introduction, § 10.

15. καὶ δέκα ἔτεσι ὕστερον μετὰ ταῦτα, 'as much as ten years subsequently after the war' (καὶ etiam); i.e. in 469 B.C. For μετὰ ταῦτα cp. c. 83 supra. (Plutarch de malig. Hdti 42 = Mor. 873 paraphrases ἔτεσι δέκα ὕστερον τῶν Μηδικῶν.) As the dative of time marks a point, the date here given must be meant to be exact.

16. Κλεάδην τὸν Αὐτοδίκου: only mentioned again in Plutarch l.c. quoting this passage. The name Kleades is known at Sparta and Argos; the name Autodikos only elsewhere at Athens (cp. Pape-Benseler sub vv.). As πρόξινος of the Aiginetans this Plataian might not be a very popular person in Athens, whence Hdt. directly or indirectly 'heard' this scandal. Plutarch l.c. makes one of his bitter points against Hdt. à propos of these kenotaphs; yet, like most of his arguments, it is wide of the mark. The 'trophies and colossi' on which the names were inscribed were commemorative of the war rather than of the particular battle of Plataia (on the 13th); moreover, as above shown, there might be kenotaphs on the field of battle in honour of warriors buried elsewhere. On the προξενία cp. 8. 136, 143.

86. 1. ἄρα: if the word is to suggest an element of the unexpected, the note of admiration may in this case arise the place of sepulture, to most even of the Greek dead a foreign land; cp. l. 30. But what became of the 237,000 corpses, more or less, of the enemies, with which Hdt. has bestrown the field in c. 70 supra: are they covered by this notice? In which case the surprise might extend to the numbers.

2. αὐτίκα βουλευομένοι σφί ἔδωκε: here is the record, or the hint, of a deliberation, a council, which issues in a resolution to 'visit' Thebes. Ought the record in Plutarch Aristeid. 21 of the treaty of Plataia, or the revision of the confederate articles and the institution of the Eleutheria, to be inserted here? Grote (iv. 282) seems to date it to "a general and solemn meeting, held at Plataia after the victory," but also apparently dates that meeting after the surrender of Thebes. Plutarch omits the Theban incident altogether, and there is no room below for any other congress or meeting at Plataia after the surrender of Thebes. If, then, the meeting which carried the psephism of Aristides was held at Plataia, it would be the meeting here imperfectly reported; but perhaps the psephism of Aristides, if ever carried at all, was carried at a congress at the Isthmos, for which room may be found in c. 88 infra. Grote defends the authenticity of the psephism of Aristides, but the story, as told by τὰς Θήβας καὶ ἐξαιτέειν αὐτῶν τοὺς μηδίσαντας, ἐν πρώτοις δὲ αὐτῶν Τιμηγενίδην καὶ Ἀτταγίνον, οἱ ἀρχηγέται ἀνὰ πρώτους ἦσαν· ἣν δὲ μὴ ἐκδιδώσι, μὴ ἀπανίστασθαι ἀπὸ τῆς 5 πόλιος πρότερον ἢ ἐξέλωσι. ὥς δὲ σφί ταῦτα ἔδοξε, οὕτω δὴ ἐνδεκάτῃ ἡμέρῃ ἀπὸ τῆς συμβολῆς ἀπικόμενοι ἐπολιόρκειον Θηβαίους, κελεύοντες ἐκδιδόναι τοὺς ἄνδρας· οὐ βουλομένων δὲ τῶν Θηβαίων ἐκδιδόναι, τὴν τε γῆν αὐτῶν ἔταμνον καὶ προσέβαλλον πρὸς τὸ τεῖχος. καὶ οὐ γὰρ ἐπαύοντο σινόμενοι, 87

εἰκοστῇ ἡμέρῃ ἔλεξε τοῖσι Θηβαίοις Τιμηγενίδης τάδε·

3, 4 αὐτέων = (bis): ἀστέων prior. l. Koen 4 αὐτῶν abesse malit van H. || ἀτταγίνον P 5 ἔσαν = || ἀπὸ . . ἐξέλωσι om. B 7
ἐνδεκάτῃ C 9 τῶν Θηβαίων 'abesse poterat' van H. || αὐτέων =
10 προσέβαλον S Marc. 87. 1 σινόμενοι B

Plutarch, is not confirmed by Thucydides 2. 71, for (a) nothing is there said of the renewal or extension of the military confederacy; (b) the privileges accorded the Plataians are granted by Pausanias at a meeting of the allies in the Agora of Plataia. This grant might very well have been made at the meeting here recorded. Grote hardly showed his normal sagacity in accepting the story of the psephism of Aristides and at the same time rejecting the story of the quarrel over the Aristeia (which certainly ill squares with it!).

3. ἐξαιτέειν αὐτῶν τοὺς μηδίσαντας. If the story told in 7. 132 of the vow in the previous year against the medizers were true, the resolution now formally taken, to demand the extradition of the traitors among the Thebans, would appear both mild and superfluous: a reason the more for doubting the truth of that story. But again, this resolution recognizes very clearly the existence of two parties in Thebes, the medizing party being evidently the Equestrians, not the Hoplites; cp. c. 69 supra and 7. 223.

The reading ἀστέων out of αὐτέων for αὐτῶν is attractive: a second αὐτῶν (sc. τῶν μηδισάντων) comes immediately, and there is no proper personal antecedent for αὐτῶν here. Cp. App. Crit.

4. Τιμηγενίδην: cp. c. 38 supra.
5. Ἀτταγίνον: cp. c. 16 supra. The absence of the patronymics in this place seems to show that the previous descriptions of the men are present to the author's mind, though there is no express reference back to the earlier passages. Hdt. writes for a reading public; and all three passages apparently belong to the first draft of his work.

ἀρχηγέται ἀνὰ πρώτους. The use of ἀνὰ is not easy to parallel, and πρώτους is awkward after ἐν πρώτοις just before, and slightly tautologous with ἀρχ-ηγέται, i.e. ἡγέται ἀνὰ πρώτους, or ἐν πρώτοις. The term ἀρχηγέται is a word of exceptional dignity applicable to gods (Thuc. 6. 3), heroes (Aθ. πολ. 21. 6), kings (Plutarch, Lyk. 6), and founders (Pind. Ol. 7. 143); so too Inscr. How comes Hdt. to apply it to these Theban traitors? Did he get it of Thersander? cp. c. 16 supra. It is an hapaxlegomenon in Hdt., though the verb is used 2. 123.

6. πρότερον ἢ ἐξέλωσι: sc. αὐτήν. The subjunctive without ἄν is observable; cp. c. 117 infra, also 7. 8 οὐ πρότερον παύσομαι πρὶν ἢ ἔλω τε καὶ πυρώσω τὰς Ἀθήνας, c. 93 infra οὐ πρότερον τε παύσεσθαι τιμωρόντες ἐκείνῳ πρὶν ἢ δίκας δῶσι. Cp. also c. 87 just below.

7. ἐνδεκάτῃ ἡμέρῃ. Is this the 23rd or the 24th reckoning continuously? The answer depends on whether ἀπὸ is exclusive or inclusive. It might naturally be the former; but the δεντέρῃ ἡμέρῃ in c. 84 supra is the day after the battle. In any case we have here merely another of Hdt.'s weeks, or 'ten-days'; cp. c. 8 supra and the next chapter here. The 11th day begins a fresh week.

συμβολῆς, c. 77 supra, etc.

ἐπολιόρκειον Θηβαίους: the tense is strictly imperfect, 'they made as though to besiege—they were for besieging . . .'. Θηβαίους = τὰς Θήβας.

87. 2. εἰκοστῇ ἡμέρῃ: probably not of the siege, but ἀπὸ τῆς συμβολῆς as just “ἄνδρες Θηβαῖοι, ἐπειδὴ οὕτω δέδοκται τοῖσι Ἕλλησι, μὴ πρότερον ἀπαναστῆναι πολιορκέοντας ἢ ἐξέλωσι Θήβας ἢ

 5 ἡμέας αὐτοῖσι παραδῶτε, νῦν ὧν ἡμέων εἵνεκα γῇ ἢ Βοιωτίῃ πλέω μὴ ἀναπλήσῃ, ἀλλ’ εἰ μὲν χρημάτων χρήζοντες πρό-σχημα ἡμέας ἐξαιτέονται, χρήματά σφι δώμεν ἐκ τοῦ κοινοῦ (σὺν γὰρ τῷ κοινῷ καὶ ἐμῇδίσσαμεν οὐδὲ μόνον ἡμεῖς), εἰ δὲ
 10 ἡμέων ἀληθέως δεόμενοι πολιορκέουσι, ἡμεῖς ἡμέας αὐτοὺς ἐς ἀντιλογίην παρέξομεν.” κάρτα τε ἔδοξε εὐ λέγειν καὶ ἐς καιρὸν, αὐτίκα τε ἐπεκηρυκύνοντο πρὸς Πανσανίην οἱ Θηβαῖοι

3 οὕτω: οὕτε S      4 πρὶν ἢ z      5 ἡμέας παραδότε B ||
 βοιωτίῃ B      6 πλέω om. S || ἀναπλήσῃ z || εἰ: ἢ B: ἢν B || χρῆζοντες P: χρήζοντες R(V): χρήζοντες z      7 ἐξαιτέονται B      8 οὐ δὴ μόνον ἡμεῖς z      9 ἀληθῶς Marc. || ἡμεῖς <δὲ> Krueger, van H. ||
 ἑωυτοὺς z || εἰς R(V), Holder      10 εὐ om. Marc.

above; it would then be the 10th day of the siege, the last day of the ‘week,’ which begins with the 11th day just above. (It would be the 33rd day of the whole journal—if the figures were to be treated as quite exact; cp. cc. 84, 56, 52, 47, 44, 41, supra.)

3. οὕτω refers here to what follows and = ὥδε. Cp. Index.

δέδοκται τοῖσι Ἕλλησι: a formal δόγμα, repeated from c. 86 above.

5. νῦν ὧν in apodosi is unusual.

ἡμέων εἵνεκα, ‘for our sakes,’ or ‘so far as we are concerned . . .’

γῇ ἢ Βοιωτίῃ: treated as equivalent to τὴν γῆν αὐτῶν just above.

6. πλέω μὴ ἀναπλήσῃ, “dehortative conjunctive in 3rd person” (Stein); cp.

7. 107 μὴ νῦν οὕτω γένηται.

πρόσχημα (cp. 4. 167) might be appositive to ἡμέας but is better understood as an adverbial accusative, contrasted with ἀληθέως just below; cp. πρόφασιν 5. 33, also ἀρχήν, τέλος, etc.

7. ἐκ τοῦ κοινοῦ . . . σὺν τῷ κοινῷ are used in different senses, which might be preserved by using our word ‘commonwealth.’ For the first sense cp. 7. 144; for the second 8. 135. The juristic principle here asserted by this oligarchic traitor is of considerable interest, viz. that the individual citizen cannot be held responsible for the common fault, the crime or error of the community, even though he himself be its author or proposer. It is a plausible maxim, which easily lends itself to sophistry; its employment shows a considerable development of political reflexion. In the present case we are not informed whether there had been a formal vote of ἄνδρες Θηβαῖοι in favour of medism, or whether the public medism is treated de facto; there was at any rate an opposition, and an opposition, which, if the Theban speaker ap. Thuc. 3. 62. 3 is to be trusted, was numerically a majority, though impotent. On this ground Pausanias 9. 6. 2 acquits the Commons: τῆς δὲ αἰτίας ταύτης δημοσίᾳ σφίσιν εἰ μέτεστιν, ὅτι ἐν ταῖς Θήβαις διγαρχία καὶ οὐχὶ ἡ πατριος πολιτεία τηρεῖται ἰσχυρῶς. He adds that if the Persians had invaded Hellas in the days of Peisistratos, the Athenians would have incurred the reproach of medism. The rider is disputable; but in any case the Athenians, among whom the convenient principle of the political scapegoat was only too well understood, would have made short work of the arguments of a Timagenidas.

9. ἡμέων ἀληθέως δεόμενοι, ‘because they really want to get hold of us’—or perhaps, ‘if the demand for us is the true cause of the siege.’

ἐς ἀντιλογίην παρέξομεν, ‘we will give ourselves up to be tried’ (Blakesley); or rather, to reply to the charge. No doubt a juristic trial is contemplated; ἀντιλογία in itself only means ‘contradiction,’ cp. 8. 77, but it comes to be used for reply, defence to objections or charges, controversy, discussion; cp. Thuc. 1. 31. 4, 1. 73. 1, 2. 87. 3. On the showing of this passage the surrender of the men should have been conditional. Cp. next chapter ad f.

θέλοντες ἐκδιδόναι τοὺς ἄνδρας. ὥς δὲ ὠμολόγησαν ἐπὶ 88
 τούτοις, Ἀτταγίνος μὲν ἐκδιδρῆσκει ἐκ τοῦ ἄστεος, παῖδας δὲ αὐτοῦ ἀπαχθέντας Πανσανίης ἀπέλυσε τῆς αἰτίας, φὰς τοῦ μηδισμοῦ παῖδας οὐδὲν εἶναι μεταίτιους. τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἄνδρας τοὺς ἐξέδοσαν οἱ Θηβαῖοι, οἳ μὲν ἐδόκεον ἀντιλογίης 5
 τε κυρήσειν καὶ δὴ χρήμασι ἐπεποίθεσαν διωθέεσθαι. ὃ δὲ ὥς

88. 2 ἀτταγίνος Apr.P || ἐκ: ἐπὶ C 3 αὐτοῦ om. B 5 τοὺς:
 οὓς AC Marc. 6 κηρήσιν R: κηρύσειν Marc. || ἐπεπύθεον α: ἐπεπόθεον
 C Marc.: ἐπεπείθεσαν Paris. 1635 z || διώσασθαι B: σωθήσεσθαι Cobet, van H. ('nisi forte mavis διώσεσθαι τὴν αἰτίην simileve quid' idem): δια-
 δύσεσθαι? Stein<sup>5</sup> || ὃ δὲ ὥς BPz, Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: ὥς δὲ

88. 1. ὠμολόγησαν ἐπὶ τούτοις. The terms upon which (ἐπὶ) Thebes surrendered cannot have been confined to the extradition of Timagenidas, Attaginos, and a few others; the depression of Thebes for the next twenty years could hardly be accounted for on that hypothesis. The ὁμολογία must have included further terms: the break-up of the Boiotian confederacy, the 'autonomy' of the Boiotian cities, the overthrow of Theban hegemony, possibly some revision of the Theban constitution itself, possibly a fine. Nothing exhibits the position of affairs during the period so well as the coinage of Boiotia; cp. B. Head, Coins of Boiotia (1881) pp. 20 ff., Hist. Num. (1887) pp. 291 ff., while the occasion and rationale of the Spartan expedition of 457 B.C. (cp. c. 35 supra) supplies an argument e contrario.

3. Πανσανίης ἀπέλυσε: another tribute to the magnanimity of the Spartan general, unqualified by any insinuation of bribery or corruption. In thus distinguishing between the guilt of various members of one family, and refusing to hold the children responsible for the father's crimes, Pausanias exhibits an advance upon the good old morality of the fable ex hypothesi related by his contemporary Leotychidas at Athens some ten years earlier; cp. 6. 86. Baehr extols Pausanias animum vere sublimem et a . . . superbia . . . alienum. Blakesley remarks that Attaginos was at large, and therefore formidable, and suspects Pausanias of medism already! We may be content to note the hint of a growing consciousness of individual responsibility, proper to an age of reflexion and liberty.

4. τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἄνδρας: the omission of their number and names, the anomaly of the grammatical construction, the violence of the proceeding itself, all point to an unresolved problem behind this passage. The anacoluthon may be softened by referring οἱ μὲν to οἱ Θηβαῖοι, but the historical situation is not thereby lightened.

5. ἐδόκεον ἀντιλογίης τε κυρήσειν, 'were expecting to be put on trial,' or, to be called upon for a defence; Blakesley renders ἀντ. "pleadings on each side." The τε should naturally follow the verb, and relates to καὶ δὴ . . . ἐπεποίθεσαν. The 2nd perf. πέποιθα serves as "present middle" (Veitch, Gk. Verbs sub v. II. 4. 325 etc. "rare in Attic prose," Thuc. 2. 42. 4 ἐλπίδι μὲν τὸ ἀφανὲς τοῦ κατορθώσιν ἐπιτρέψαντες, ἔργῳ δὲ περὶ τοῦ ἡδὲ ὁρωμένου σφίσιν αὐτοῖς ἀξιούντες πεποιθέναι), and the pl.p. as an imperfect.

6. διωθέεσθαι: the word has caused the commentators trouble; the use of the present is anomalous, and there is no clear object expressed. For suggested emendations cp. App. Crit. Baehr supplies τὴν αἰτίην out of the preceding, i.e. crimen pecuniis amoliri.

The verb διωθέεσθαι is used 4. 102 (τὸν Δαρείου στρατὸν ἰδυμαχίῃ διώσασθαι) simply as a strengthened form of ὠθέεσθαι (cp. c. 25 supra), and so in Demosthenes 21. 124 (διωσάμεν . . . ψευδῇ λόγον καὶ σκοφαντίαν), but also 'to push through,' to push apart, to break one's way through, as in c. 102 infra διωσάμενοι γὰρ τὰ γέρρα. Might it not here be used, without an object, in an absolute way: 'to push their way through,' 'to pull through' (as we say), i.e. to get off? (The anomaly of the present is eased a little by referring οἱ μὲν to οἱ Θηβαῖοι, who then believed the men were making their escape by means of bribery.)

παρέλαβε, αὐτὰ ταῦτα ὑπονοέων τὴν στρατιὴν τὴν τῶν συμμάχων ἅπασαν ἀπῆκε καὶ ἐκείνους ἀγαγὼν εἰς Κόρινθον διέφθειρε. ταῦτα μὲν τὰ ἐν Πλαταιῇσι καὶ Θήβησι γενόμενα,

89 Ἀρτάβαζος δὲ ὁ Φαρνάκος φεύγων ἐκ Πλαταίων καὶ δὴ

7 τὴν τῶν: τῶν Marc.
ταίησιν V || γινόμενα z

9 πλαταίησι α: πλαταίησι R: πλα-
89. 1 καὶ δὴ: καὶ δὴ καὶ Marc., Gaisford

ὡς παρέλαβε: sc. αὐτοῦς, i.e. τοὺς ἀνδρας παραλαβών.

7. αὐτὰ ταῦτα ὑπονοέων, 'suspecting (cp. ὑπονόησαντες c. 99 infra) their intentions,' or 'just that very course.'

τὴν στρατιὴν . . ἅπασαν ἀπῆκε. Pausanias may have disbanded, or dismissed to their homes, from Thebes, the Athenians, and perhaps the Aiginetans, and one or two other contingents; but it is very unlikely that the rest of the allied forces will have been disbanded at Thebes, or before reaching the Isthmos. There appears to be a tendency in this passage, i.e. in the source followed by Hdt. for the story, to make Pausanias himself wholly and solely responsible for the execution of (Timagenidas and) the anonymous Theban déonous (was Asopodoros, c. 69 supra, among them? was Leontiades, 7. 233?). They are not tried by a Spartan court (like the Plataians for 'atticism' in 427 B.C., Thuc. 3. 52-68), nor brought before a jury of the allies; Pausanias puts them to death out of hand. This appears to be a very arbitrary proceeding, just such as might be ascribed to him after his fall, at a time when various parties might be glad to wash their hands, at his expense, of anti-Theban conduct. Blakesley goes a long step further in damning the memory of Pausanias: he accepts this story just as it stands, for the facts, and suggests, as the explanation, that Pausanias had been already intriguing with the Persians, and "put the Theban oligarchs to death in order to conceal the evidence which they might have given against him, had they been brought to trial." But then Blakesley (with Ktesias) also believed that the battle of Plataia took place before the battle of Salamis, and was quite a small and trifling affair (virtually, indeed, a defeat for the Greeks). It is at least possible that the Theban prisoners were duly, or at least pro forma, put upon their trial at the Isthmos, and that this was indeed one of the conditions of their surrender (ἡμεῖς ἡμέας αὐτοὺς εἰς ἀντιλογίην παρέξομεν): Pausanias merely executed the sentence of the court.

8. εἰς Κόρινθον = εἰς τὴν Κορινθίαν, cp. c. 17 supra, probably an inaccuracy for εἰς τὸν Κορινθίων Ἰσθμόν, cp. 7. 195. There was probably a meeting, perhaps a final meeting, of the allies, at which the awards were made, offerings voted, immunities conferred, and the alliance perhaps reconstituted; cp. 8. 123 and c. 85 supra.

89. 1. Ἀρτάβαζος δὲ ὁ Φαρνάκος. This narrative is resumed from c. 66 supra. Hdt.'s partiality for the patronymic in the case of 'Artabazos son of Pharnakes' is remarkable; he gives it in 7. 66, 8. 126, 9. 41, 66, and here, five times in all; in fact there are only three places, and those all in this Book, viz. cc. 58, 70, 77, where the name is introduced in anything like a fresh connexion without it: the first place is in a speech by Mardonios; in the other two, where the historian writes propria persona, the reference to the immediate context is so slight and so obvious (τὰς sc. μυριάδας τὰς ἔχων Ἀρτάβαζος ἐφείγε, τοὺς μετὰ Ἀρταβάζου φεύγοντας) that the introduction of the patronymic would have been a stylistic absurdity. There may be a polemical purpose in this curious iteration: was there another Artabazos with whom 'the son of Pharnakes' was liable to be confounded? For example, the Artabazos who figures in Diodoros as successful against the Athenians in the Egyptian war (11. 74. 6, 77. 4), and again as admiral in the Kyprian war (12. 3. 2) and negotiating the 'Peace of Kallias' (12. 4. 5); cp. 7. 151 supra. Or is not that indeed the very same man? Otherwise who or what was his father, and his father's father? The name Φαρνάκης has been regarded as a variant for Φαρναόχης (or vice versa); cp. Rawlinson, iii.<sup>3</sup> p. 549. Was the father of Artabazos the high-placed hipparch who died by a fall from his horse at Sardes? cp. 7. 88. The names Pharnakes and Pharnabazos afterwards recur in the satrapy of Daskyleion; cp. 8. 126

πρόσω ἐγένετο. ἀπικόμενον δέ μιν οἱ Θεσσαλοὶ παρὰ σφέας ἐπὶ τε ξείνια ἐκάλεον καὶ ἀνειρώτων περὶ τῆς στρατιῆς τῆς ἄλλης, οὐδὲν ἐπιστάμενοι τῶν ἐν Πλαταιῇσι γενομένων. ὁ δὲ Ἀρτάβαζος γνοὺς ὅτι, εἰ ἐθέλει σφι πᾶσαν τὴν ἀληθείην τῶν 5

2 ἐγένετο B || παρὰ σφέας B 3 ἐπεὶ R(V) || ξένια α || ἀνειρώτευν Marc., Stein<sup>1</sup> (Ask. V, Gaisford): ἀνιρώτευν CPz 4 πλαταιῇσι α: πλαταιῇσι R(S)V || γινομένων α Marc. 5 ἐθέλει ABCSV: ἐθέλοι || ἀληθείην z || τῶν ἀγώνων del. van H.

supra. Pharnabazos 'son of Pharnakes,' 413-388 B.C. (Thuc. 8. 6. 1), was succeeded by Ariobarzanes (Xenoph. Hell. 5. 1. 28, cp. 1. 4. 7), and he in turn by an Artabazos; Krumbholz, op. c. p. 73. Another Ariobarzanes 'son of Artabazos' appears with his father among the most loyal followers of the last Dareios (cp. Arrian, 3. 21. 4, 23. 7, etc.). The names Pharnakes, Pharnabazos, Artabazos, Ariobarzanes all belong, U.c., apparently to one house, or clan, and that, one highly placed and esteemed in the Persian Empire (cp. Judeich ap. Pauly-Wissowa, sub v.). There is a gap in the succession at Daskyleion between 470 B.C. or thereabouts and 430 B.C. Was it filled by 'Pharnabazos' the father of Pharnakes II? The name Pharnabazos does not occur in Hdt.

φεύγων ἐκ Πλαταιῶν. Hdt. has been suspected of special relations with the family of Artabazos, cp. 8. 126 supra, but he never represents his retreat as anything but a φυγή. In that respect, unless it be in the softer verb at the close of this very chapter, ἀπενόστησε, he may have done his supposed patron less than justice. The 'flight' of Artabazos from 'Plataia' may be little more historical than the 'flight' of Xerxes from Athens. The story, as told in this chapter, is full of intrinsic improbabilities. The rôle assigned to Artabazos helped to explain two awkward facts, awkward especially to medizing Greeks afterwards: (a) the defeat of Mardonios, and their own; (b) the escape of 40,000 men, who might have been stopped, and offered as an atonement to the patriotic league. The historical element in the quarrels of Mardonios and Artabazos is problematic, and in view of the licence of Greek historiography a critic may be pardoned if he suspect at times that Artabazos never was on the field of Plataia at all. Cp. Appendix VIII. § 5 (19). ἐκ Πλαταιῶν could not mean at most more than ἐκ τῆς Πλαταιίδος: cp. c. 16 supra.

καὶ δὴ here = ἤδη: cp. Index.

2. πρόσω, 'far on his way' by the time the Thebans surrendered, or Pausanias had put an end to them at 'Korinth.'

οἱ Θεσσαλοί: the first absurdity, for 'the sons of Aleuas' had been in the camp of Mardonios, cp. c. 58 supra, and had probably supported the view of Artabazos and the Thebans against Mardonios; cp. c. 41 supra. In any case it is not likely that Artabazos, with some 40,000 Persians, regained Thessaly ahead of the Aleuads and the Thessalian cavalry; or that on his arrival no news of τῶν ἐν Πλαταιῇσι had reached Thessaly. It does not really help to interpret of Θεσσαλοὶ here as representing a different party, an opposing faction or element, the bulk of the population, and so on, as compared with the Aleuads and aristocracy; there were doubtless in Thessaly, as in Phokis, as in Boiotia, as in the Peloponnese, as possibly in Athens itself (cp. Plutarch, Aristeid. 13), two parties, two rival interests on the Persian question, but it remains an absurdity to attribute to either the ignorance here predicated of οἱ Θεσσαλοί.

3. ἐπὶ ξείνια ἐκάλεον, 'invited to a banquet,' cp. c. 16 supra.

καί, 'at which they . . '

τῆς στρατιῆς τῆς ἄλλης: i.e. the army of Mardonios (not their own men); cp. ὁ μετ' αὐτοῦ στρατός, and αὐτοὶ Μαρδόνιος καὶ ὁ στρατὸς αὐτοῦ just below.

5. εἰ ἐθέλει: cp. εἰ ἐθέλησει 1. 32.

πᾶσαν τὴν ἀληθείην τῶν ἀγώνων εἰπεῖν: that is unfortunately what no one has done, not even Hdt. himself. Artabazos least of all could afford to do so, if Hdt.'s record of him is true. The plural recognizes a number of ἀγῶνες at Plataia; or are they inquiring about the previous campaign too?

ἀγώνων εἰπεῖν, αὐτὸς τε κινδυνεύσει ἀπολέσθαι καὶ ὁ μετ' αὐτοῦ στρατός, ἐπιθήσεσθαι γάρ οἱ πάντα τινὰ οἴετο πυμβανόμενον τὰ γεγονότα· ταῦτα ἐκλογιζόμενος οὔτε πρὸς τοὺς Φωκίας ἐξηγόρευε οὐδὲν πρὸς τε τοὺς Θεσσαλοὺς ἔλεγε τάδε, 10 "ἐγὼ μὲν, ὦ ἄνδρες Θεσσαλοί, ὥς ὁράτε, ἐπείγομαι τε κατὰ τάχος ἐλὼν ἐς Θρηίκην καὶ σπουδὴν ἔχω, πεμφθεὶς κατὰ τι πρήγμα ἐκ τοῦ στρατοπέδου μετὰ τῶνδε· αὐτὸς δὲ ὑμῖν
Μαρδόνιος καὶ ὁ στρατὸς αὐτοῦ, οὗτος κατὰ πόδας ἐμεῦ

6 εἶπαι z, van H. 7 αὐτὸν Marc. || οἴετο Bz: ὠίετο α: ὠίετο C:
ὠίετο P: ὠέτο Marc.: secl. Cobet, van H. 8 τοὺς om. S Marc. 9
ἐξαγόρευε C Marc., Gaisford || οὐδεὶς C 10 κατὰ τάχος Stein<sup>(1)</sup>;
Holder: τὴν ταχίστην Stein<sup>1</sup>, van H.: κατὰ τὴν ταχίστην Marc. z: κατὰ ταχίστην A(RV ?): κατὰ ταχίστην B: καταταχίστην CP: κατατάχιστα S (Gaisf.) 11 ἐλθὼν Ask.: ἐλθεῖν z || θρήικην R(S)V 13 αὐτοῦ
om. Marc. || ἐμεῦ om. B: μου z: μεν Krueger

8. οὔτε πρὸς τοὺς Φωκίας ἐξηγόρευε οὐδέν: i.e. while marching through Phokis, as he must have done to get to Thessaly. This statement is evidently an afterthought (but that hardly converts ἐξηγόρευε into a pluperfect!). It is also an absurdity. There were 1000 Phokians in the camp of Mardonios, c. 17 supra; they would not have allowed Artabazos to get such a start of them. Had they done so, the remainder of the nation at home, on Parnassos, who ἐνθεύτην ὁρμώμενοι ἔφερόν τε καὶ ἦγον τὴν τε Μαρδονίου στρατὸν καὶ τοὺς μετ' αὐτοῦ ἐόντας Ἑλλήνων c. 31 supra, would hardly have allowed Artabazos free passage, much less entertained him, or invited his reports! However, to them he held his peace; to the Thessalians he told a lie. It is, however, also perhaps an absurdity to suppose, or imply, that there was any force at the disposal of the Phokians which could have barred the retreat of Artabazos.

10. ὦ ἄνδρες Θεσσαλοί: he talks as though he were addressing a public meeting. His speech incidentally furnishes three curious examples of the use of κατὰ (κατὰ τάχος—κατὰ τι πρήγμα—κατὰ πόδας). His haste is expressed thrice over: ἐπείγομαι· κατὰ τάχος ἐλὼν· σπουδὴν ἔχω: he makes little of his 40,000 companions (μετὰ τῶνδε).

11. ἐς Θρηίκην: why to Thrace? Why not to Makedonia? Why does he advertise the Thessalians that his bourne is Thrace, instead of specifying his nearer objective, unless it be that Artabazos had really a special mission in Thrace, was, in fact, governor of the province! The vague reference to his mission, the suppression of his object (κατὰ τι πρήγμα), is not the least of the absurdities in the story; Artabazos would have had the sense to lie with more circumstance, if lying had been necessary, or the Thessalians would have asked for details. But this story presents one of those monologues which are all alike suspicious, cp. c. 58 supra.

πεμφθεὶς seems to imply the subordination of Artabazos to Mardonios, cp. c. 42 supra, and is in so far unfavourable to the son of Pharnakes, who indeed, on his own showing, is 'a slight unmeritable man, meet to be sent on errands!'

12. ὑμῖν: a pretty 'ethical' dative; the announcement that Mardonios with his army is close at hand (or at heel) is a fresh absurdity: the said commander and army after spending the previous winter in Thessaly had gone south with a manifest object; the Thessalians would have known, or asked, how far that object had been accomplished. The more, however, the actual numbers of the force of Mardonios are reduced, the less absurd this item becomes. Per contra, this whole anecdote is hardly consistent with the view that the army numbered about 300,000—except, indeed, so far as Hdt. throughout operates with myriads and millions as though they were emancipated from the conditions of space and time; cp. 7. 60.

ἐλαύνων προσδόκιμος ἐστί. τοῦτον καὶ ξεινίζετε καὶ εὖ ποιεῦντες φαίνεσθε· οὐ γὰρ ὑμῖν ἐς χρόνον ταῦτα ποιεῦσι 15 μεταμελήσει." ταῦτα δὲ εἰπας ἀπήλαυε σπουδῇ τὴν στρατιὴν διὰ Θεσσαλίας τε καὶ Μακεδονίης ἰθὺ τῆς Θρηκίης, ὡς ἀληθῶς ἐπειγόμενος, καὶ τὴν μεσόγαιαν τάμνων τῆς ὁδοῦ. καὶ ἀπικνέεται ἐς Βυζάντιον, καταλιπὼν τοῦ στρατοῦ τοῦ ἑωυτοῦ

14 καὶ om. Paris. 1635 = || καὶ om. C ἀπέλαυε Bz 17 θρηκίης R(S)V καὶ om. Marc.

15 ποιοῦντες Marc. 16
18 μεσόγειαν R || τέμνων S ||

14. ξεινίζετε (7. 27) (as ye are entertaining me).

15. ἐς χρόνον = ὅσπερ: cp. 3. 72 ἀμεινον ἐς χρόνον ἔσται.

ταῦτα ποιεῦσι, conditional: ἢν τοῦτον καὶ ξεινίζετε καὶ εὖ ποιεῦντες φαίνεσθε. ταῦτα ποιεῦσι καὶ εὖ ποιεῦντες (just before) of course are not identical. σπουδῇ: cp. 1. 11 supra.

17. Μακεδονίης here appears en route, and signalizes another absurdity, for absurdity may lie in an assumption, and an assumption be made by omission. What then of Alexander and the Makedonians at this crisis? (Was he not, like the Aleuadai so far, in Artabazos' company?) Demosthenes, 23. 200, says that 'Perdikkas' king of Makedonia destroyed τοὺς ἀναχωροῦντας ἐκ Πλαταιῶν τῶν βαρβάρων and completed 'the king's' disaster τέλειον τάτιχημα (ποίησας) τῷ βασιλεῖ, and was given πολιτεία by the Athenians in consequence (ps.-Dem. 13. 24). Perhaps the only serious mistake Demosthenes here makes is in calling the Makedonian 'Perdikkas'; but the passage says nothing of Artabazos, and might be true even if Alexander saw Artabazos and his 40,000 safely through Makedonia, and no less true if Artabazos had never taken his 40,000 southwards across the Axios at all!

ἰθὺ τῆς Θρηκίης, 'straight for Thrace,' genitive of the direction off which the movement is estimated. The construction is frequent in Homer and Hdt., e.g. 4. 89 ἰθὺ τοῦ Ἰστροῦ, 6. 95 ἰθὺ τοῦ τε Ἑλλησπόντου καὶ τῆς Θρηκίης. But ἰθὺς ἐπὶ Θεσσαλίας 5. 64, ἰθὺς ἐπὶ τὸν Ἑλλησπόντον 8. 108 (where the adverb may perhaps be taken in a temporal signification).

ὡς ἀληθῶς ἐπειγόμενος re-emphasizes the point humorously: 'that he was in a hurry was true enough.'

18. τὴν μεσόγαιαν τάμνων τῆς ὁδοῦ: i.e. marching not by the coast, but by a shorter or more direct route, further inland; cp. 7. 124. It is not clear for what portion of the route of Artabazos the remark holds good; doubtless from Therme to Akanthos, cp. 7. c.; but further east likewise an inland course may have been followed, from Akanthos to Doriskos for example; cp. 7. 121. At Doriskos (cp. 7. 106) Artabazos would learn that the bridges on the Hellespont were threatened, or were in fact destroyed, cp. c. 114 infra (if he did not know it already), and that Sestos was being blockaded, if not actually in the hands of the Hellenes. To get to Byzantion he would therefore give the Hellespont and Thracian Chersonese a wide berth, though he might have made for Perinthos in the first instance (cp. 7. 25).

19. ἀπικνέεται ἐς Βυζάντιον. Hdt. unfortunately does not date the arrival of Artabazos at Byzantion, but it must have been before the capture of Byzantion by Pausanias in 478-7 B.C. (Thuc. 1. 94. 2), and he had again evacuated it, or we should have heard more definitely of his having been among those, βασιλέως προσήκοντες τινες καὶ ξυγγενεῖς οἱ ἐάλωσαν ἐν αὐτῷ (Thuc. 1. 128. 5). Besides, he reappears very soon as satrap of Daskyleion (Thuc. 1. 129). This is, oddly enough, the first and only mention of Byzantion by Hdt. in these Books; it figures more largely in his 'second volume,' cp. 4. 87, 144, 5. 26, 103, 6. 5, 26, 33 (probably after he had seen the city, cp. Hdt. IV.-VI. i. p. xciv.); it is not mentioned in Bks. 1, 2, 3, an accident arising, perhaps, from the nature of their contents, or from the circumstances of their composition.

τοῦ στρατοῦ τοῦ ἑωυτοῦ: this force had originally consisted of 60,000 men, 8. 126; it is reported at 40,000

20 συχνοὺς ὑπὸ Θρηίκων κατακοπέντας κατ' ὁδὸν καὶ λιμῶ συστάντας καὶ καμάτῳ· ἐκ Βυζαντίου δὲ διέβη πλοίοισι.
 οὗτος μὲν οὕτω ἀπενόστησε ἐς τὴν Ἀσίην·

90 Τῆς δὲ αὐτῆς ἡμέρης τῆς περ ἐν Πλαταιῇσι τὸ τρῶμα ἐγένετο, συνεκύρησε γενέσθαι καὶ ἐν Μυκάλῃ τῆς Ἰωνίης . . . ἐπεὶ

20 θρηίκων R(S)V || τε κατακοπέντας Bz, Holder, van H. 21
 βυζαντίου R 22 οὗτος S, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: οὕτως RV: αὐτὸς
 90. 1 πλαταιῇσι α: πλαταιῇσι R(S)V 2 συνεκύρησε z || <τὸ> ἐν
 Krueger, van H. || μυκάλῃ S || lacunam indic. Stein<sup>3</sup> || ἐπειδὴ γὰρ BPz, Holder

before the battle of Plataia (δύναμιν οὐκ ὀλίγην c. 66 supra) without any attempt to explain the discrepancy. It is presumably still further reduced in this passage, unless, indeed, the 20,000 very inadequately accounted for by the operations at Olynthos and Poteidaia (8 l.c.) cover the total losses of Artabazos during his command in Europe.

20. ὑπὸ Θρηίκων κατακοπέντας κατ' ὁδόν. Hdt. does not charge or honour the Makedonians or their king with inflicting any losses on Artabazos: that was reserved for Attic tradition; cp. l.c. supra. If Artabazos lost no men in Phokis, Thessaly or Makedonia, it argues that he had few if any men with him while passing through those regions, or else that the populations of those regions were friendly. Losses in Thrace, from actual hostilities of a guerrilla kind, from failure of supplies, and from exhaustion, his forces may have experienced; but the moderation of this record, in contrast with the story of the flight of Xerxes in the previous year (8. 115-117), is observable, and tends to discredit the accounts of the annihilation of la Grande Armée. Probably the experiences of the various forces, in various years, during the retreats through Thrace, have not been very carefully distinguished by Greek tradition.

λιμῶ συστάντας καὶ καμάτῳ: same conflictualis (Baehr; cp. 7. 170 (more naturally of a garrison besieged)), et laboribus. κάματος (κάμνω), an Homeric and poetical word for labour, and its resultant fatigue.

21. διέβη πλοίοισι: he would only want one boat for his own crossing; the plural refers to his army; cp. πλοῖα διαβαίνειν 1. 186. The Persians with Xerxes in the previous year, according to 8. 117 τῇσι νηυσὶ διέβησαν ἐς Ἀβύδον, that of course was on the Hellespont in the narrower sense (cp. c. 66 supra), which was now closed to Artabazos by the Greeks at Sestos. The warships were no longer in those waters; but it is perhaps curious that Artabazos, with 40,000 men, more or less, makes no attempt to raise the siege of Sestos; c. 118 infra. Hdt. does not specify the point opposite Byzantion at which Artabazos and his men landed: did he not as yet know the geography of the Bosphoros (4. 85), or is the omission simply taken over inadvertently from his source? Byzantion must have been a notorious place and position at any and every date possible for Hdt.'s composition. Captured by Pausanias in 478-7 B.C. from the Persians (Thuc. 1. 94. 2), and from Pausanias by the Athenians (ib. 1. 131. 1) a year or two later (cp. Busolt, III. i. 96), when the city became a contributing member of the Athenian Alliance, with the high assessment of fifteen talents (normal quota 1500 Dr. or upwards; cp. Hill's Sources c. ii., C.I.A. i. passim), Hdt. may have visited the city after the thirty years' truce (cp. Hdt. IV.-VI. i. pp. xciii., xcv.), and probably long after the composition of this passage: the fruits of that visit are to be seen at large in The Scythian Logoi (4. 1-144).

90. 1. τῆς δὲ αὐτῆς ἡμέρης. On this synchronism cp. cc. 100, 101 infra.

τὸ τρῶμα: just as in 5. 121, 6. 132. The relative τῆς may be in the same construction as ἡμέρης: the genitive of time is a partitive genitive; 'in the course of the same day' (Madvig, § 66). Cp. c. 94. 12 infra, and Index.

2. συνεκύρησε γενέσθαι: the verb is used with an expressed subject, 8. 87. The construction is obviously incomplete; cp. App. Crit.

γὰρ δὴ ἐν τῇ Δήλῳ κατέατο οἱ Ἕλληνες οἱ ἐν τῇσι νηυσὶ ἅμα Λευτυχίδῃ τῷ Λακεδαιμονίῳ ἀπικόμενοι, ἦλθόν σφι ἄγγελοι ἀπὸ Σάμου Λάμπων τε Θρασυκλέος καὶ Ἀθηναγόρης Ἀρχε-<sup>5</sup> στρατίδew καὶ Ἡγησίστρατος Ἀρισταγόρew, πεμφθέντες ὑπὸ Σαμίων λάβρῃ τῶν τε Περσέων καὶ τοῦ τυράννου Θεομήστορος τοῦ Ἀνδροδάμαντος, τὸν κατέστησαν Σάμου τύραννον οἱ Πέρσαι. ἐπελθόντων δὲ σφέων ἐπὶ τοὺς στρατηγοὺς ἔλεγε

3 κατέατο B: ἐκατέατο z 5 τε ὁ B || θρασυκλέους a Marc.: θρασικλέους C: Θρασυκλήος z || ἀρχιστρατίδew B 7 θεομήτορος A, Ask.:
θεομνήτορος B (v supersc. V) 8 τύραννον σάμου B || οἱ Πέρσαι om.
Ask.

3. ἐν τῇ Δήλῳ κτλ. The record of the naval operations, treated throughout as absolutely independent of the land-campaign in central Greece, is resumed from 8. 132. κατέατο here can hardly refer to winter-quarters (pace Stein), for the advance to Delos is expressly dated after the advent of spring, 8. 131, 132. No doubt the expression ἐν τῇ Σάμῳ κατημένοι 8. 130 is used of a portion of the Persian fleet wintering in Samos; but the winter there does not turn on the word κατῆμαι but on the context. The word suggests (relative) inactivity, as in a siege, or blockade; cp. Thuc. 4. 124. 4 ὁ Περδίκκας ἐβούλετο προίεναι ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀρραβαίων κώμας καὶ μὴ καθῆσθαι (cp. ἀντεκαθέζοντο ib. 2); id. 2. 20. 3 πείραν ἐποίειτο περὶ τὰς Ἀχαρνὰς καθήμενος εἰ ἐπεξίσαιεν (of Archidamos in summer!); 2. 101. 2 κατημένων δ' αὐτοῦ περὶ τοὺς χώρους τούτους (of Sitalkes, in winter, certainly, but not in winter-quarters!).

4. Λευτυχίδῃ τῷ Λακεδαιμονίῳ: the addition appears both superfluous and bald after the full pedigree, 8. 131. Leotychidas' father's name was probably not familiar to foreigners; Hdt. may have taken over the title from his source.

ἄγγελοι ἀπὸ Σάμου: this embassy contrasts with the Chian embassy described 8. 132. It consists of only three men (instead of six), but they have an indubitable commission (πεμφθέντες ὑπὸ Σαμίων), and they not merely invoke the navarch to liberate Ionia but bring assurances of an Ionian revolt from the Persians. In both cases there is the same connexion between the tyrannis and the Persian supremacy; Strattis of Chios, Theomestor of Samos, are alike immersed in mediocrity.

5. Λάμπων . . Θρασυκλέος. Of this Samian Lampon nothing more is recorded. The name is a common one; Hdt. mentions an Athenian c. 21 supra, an Aeginetan c. 78 supra—three in this Book! Cp. notes ad II. c. Thrasykles of Samos only figures here. The best known bearer of the name is an Athenian; cp. Thuc. 5. 19. 2, 24. 1, 8. 15. 1, 17. 3, 19. 2.

Ἀθηναγόρης Ἀρχεστρατίδew. The Samian Athenagoras is merely a name. Thucydides mentions two others, namesakes—a prominent Syracusan, 6. 35; a Rhodian, 8. 6. 'Archestratides' is less common a name than Archestratos (which it implies), but appears at Athens (e.g. the Archon 577-6 B.C.).

6. Ἡγησίστρατος Ἀρισταγόρew. Hegesistratos proves the ring-leader and bird of good omen. He is one of three men of the name mentioned by Hdt.; cp. cc. 37-41 supra (the Telliad) and 5. 94 (a son of Peisistratos). This name comes very near the preceding (Arche-stratides), and the patronym 'Aristagoras' is not very different in sense from Athenagoras (perhaps the two pairs were related?) but of more frequent occurrence. Hdt. alone mentions four men of the name: (1) the tyrant of Kyme 4. 138, 5. 37; (2) the tyrant of Kyzikos 4. 138; (3) the tyrant of Miletos 5. 30, etc. etc.; (4) the Samian here, of whom nothing more is known.

7. Θεομήτορος τοῦ Ἀνδροδάμαντος: cp. 8. 85 supra; he had not enjoyed the tyranny very long! The absence of any express reference back to the previous passage is observable; the sources are probably different here and there. (The article is hardly referential.)

9. ἐπελθόντων . . ἐπὶ τοὺς στρατηγούς. ἐπέρχεσθαι, 'to come forward for

- 10 Ἡγησίστρατος πολλὰ καὶ παντοῖα, ὥς ἦν μόνον ἴδωνται αὐτοὺς οἱ Ἴωνες ἀποστήσονται ἀπὸ Περσέων, καὶ ὥς οἱ βάρβαροι οὐκ ὑπομένουσι· ἦν δὲ καὶ ἄρα ὑπομείνωσι, οὐκ ἐτέρην ἄγρην τοιαύτην εὔρεῖν ἂν αὐτοὺς· θεοὺς τε κοινούς ἀνακαλέων προέτραπε αὐτοὺς ῥύσασθαι ἄνδρας Ἑλλήνας ἐκ
15 δουλοσύνης καὶ ἀπαμῦναι τὸν βάρβαρον. εὐπετές τε αὐτοῖσι ἔφη ταῦτα γίνεσθαι· τὰς τε γὰρ νέας αὐτῶν κακῶς πλέειν

12 ὑπομένουσιν C || ἄρα AB || οὐκ ὑπομένουσι C 13 ἂν om. B
14 προέτρεπε(ν) libri 16 νῆας αὐτέων z || πλώειν van H.

the purpose of speaking,' 'to address'; cp. c. 7 supra. The scene here is laid in the Synedrion of Strategoi, over which Leotychidas is presiding at Delos, as Eurybiades at Salamis in the previous year; cp. 8. 49 supra.

10. παντοῖα does not seem to be very complimentary to the speech of Hegesistratos; cp. 7. 10 supra. The report imitates the 'variousness,' for it is made up of (1) a double conditional assertion, (a) positive and (b) negative, each limb constructed with ὥς and indicative (fut.) but nevertheless in the oblique (αὐτοὺς not ὑμέας); (2) a conditional, in strict oratio obliqua, i.e. accus. and infinitive; (3) a narrative report (ἀνακαλέων προέτραπε κτλ.) which again indirectly reproduces the speaker; (4) a resumption of the oratio obliqua with ἔφη (the recta might well have been introduced here!) in (a) a simple assertion of fact, or opinion, (b) a rather complex conditional sentence, with the idiomatic subject of the apodosis in the nominative (αὐτοὶ τε κτλ.).

11. οἱ Ἴωνες ἀποστήσονται: if they will merely show themselves at Samos 'the Ionians will revolt'—the speaker could hardly, perhaps, answer for more than his own island. Was this promise kept? Cp. c. 99 infra.

οἱ βάρβαροι οὐκ ὑπομένουσι: the Persian fleet is at Samos 8. 130 supra. This prediction proved correct, c. 96 infra. The alternative proposed is the seizure of the king's fleet in the Samian harbour; that would be a 'haul,' the like of which they could never make again.

12. ἄρα: a particle suggesting surprise, improbability, etc.; cp. 8. 135 supra, and Index.

13. ἄγρην is generally the chase, the hunting, e.g. 1. 73, absolutely, 3. 129 θηρῶν, 2. 70 ἄγραι πολλὰ καὶ παντοῖα, 'many various ways of catching' (τῶν κροκοδεῖων). Here, not the hunting but the 'quarry,' not the chase but the 'catch,' a usage originally perhaps poetic (e.g. Aischyl. Eumen. 148, Sophokl. Al. 64, Eurip. Fr. 521), literally of a draught of fishes, Ev. Luc. 5. 9.

θεοὺς τε κοινούς ἀνακαλέων. On the κοῖνοι θ. cp. 8. 144 supra. ἀνακαλεῖν in Aischyl. Pers. 621 is to call up the dead; here rather, to call up to, 'to invoke,' the immortals; cp. Soph. O.K. ἀνακαλοῦμαι ξυμμάχους ἐλθεῖν θεούς. Cp. 5. 93 τοὺς αὐτοὺς ἐπικαλέσας θεούς. Or, perhaps, 'recalling' (to the minds of the hearers), appealing to . . . (Cp. the description of Chryses imploring Apollo, Plat. Rep. 394 A τὰς τε ἐπιωνυμίας τοῦ θεοῦ ἀνακαλῶν.)

14. προέτραπε αὐτούς: sc. τοὺς Ἑλληνας. The verb is used more curiously in 1. 31. In Aristot. Eth. N. 3. 5. 7=1113 B it is used in contrast to καλῶναι. With this passage cp. Thuc. 8. 63. 3 αὐτῶν τῶν Σαμίων προτρέψαντο τοὺς δυνατωτάτους ὥστε πειρᾶσθαι μετὰ σφῶν ὀλιγαρχηθῆναι, 5. 16. 3 χρώνῃ δὲ προτρέψαι τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους φεύγοντα αὐτὸν . . . καταγαγεῖν. Thuc., as it happens, like Hdt., uses the word twice only, once in the act, once in the mid. voice.

ῥύσασθαι ἄνδρας Ἑλ. ἐκ δουλοσύνης: the speech of Hegesistratos has a curious resemblance to the speech of Aristagoras at Sparta in 498 B.C., 5. 49, given in oratio recta. Did Hegesistratos consciously reproduce Aristagoras? Or does the similarity of the two situations explain the coincidence? Or did Hdt. mould the one passage on the other, that one, perhaps, on this?

15. εὐπετές. Is this word used adverbially, or must εἶναι be supplied? The proper adverb is found 8. 68. 18 supra, et al., the substantive construction 5. 97.

16. αὐτῶν: sc. τῶν βαρβάρων. κακῶς πλέειν, 'were ill-found for καὶ οὐκ ἀξιομάχους κείνοισι εἶναι. αὐτοὶ τε, εἴ τι ὑποπτεύουσι μὴ δόλῳ αὐτοὺς προάγοιεν, ἔτοιμοι εἶναι ἐν τῇσι νηυσὶ τῇσι ἐκείνων ἀγόμενοι ὄμηροι εἶναι. ὥς δὲ πολλὸς ἦν 91 λισσόμενος [ὁ ξεῖνος] ὁ Σάμιος, εἶρετο Λευτυχίδης, εἶτε κληδόνος εἵνεκεν θέλων πυθέσθαι εἶτε καὶ κατὰ συντυχίην θεοῦ ποιούντος, "ὦ ξεῖνε Σάμιε, τί τοι τὸ οὖνομα;" ὁ δὲ εἶπε "Ἡγησίστρατος." ὁ δὲ ὑπαρπάσας τὸν ἐπίλοιπον λόγον, 5 εἴ τινα ὄρητο λέγειν ὁ Ἡγησίστρατος, εἶπε "δέκομαι τὸν οἰωνὸν τὸν Ἡγησιστράτου, ὦ ξεῖνε Σάμιε. σὺ δὲ ἡμῖν ποίεε ὅπως αὐτὸς τε δοὺς πίστιν ἀποπλεύσεται καὶ οἱ σὺν σοὶ ὄντες οἶδε, ἣ μὲν Σαμίους ἡμῖν προθύμους ἔσσεσθαι συμ-

18 προάγοιεν B || ἔτοιμοι CP Marc. 2 || ἐν τῇσι νηυσὶ ante ἔτοιμοι z
19 κείνων α 91. 2 ὁ ξεῖνος ὁ Σάμιος del. Gomperz, Holder : ὁ ξεῖνος tantum Stein<sup>3</sup> : ὁ ante Σάμιος om. CP || ἦρετο C || ὁ λευ(λεω R)τυχίδης B
3 κληδόνος z : κληδόνος Merzdorf || εἵνεκα RS || καὶ om. B 4 θεοῦ ποιούντος del. Gomperz, Holder || τὸ om. B, Holder || ὄνομα van H. 5 ὑπαρπάσας α 6 ὄρητο SV, Gaisford, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. : ὄρητο 7 τὸν Ἡγησίστρατον B : del. Valckenaer, Holder, van H. : non male 8 ἀποπλεύσεται van H. 9 μὴν Bz || προθύμως z sea'; cp. 8. 42 supra, referring as much to the crews as to the hulls.

17. κείνοισι: sc. τοῖς Ἑλλήσι.

αὐτοὶ τε: in oratio recta the sentence would run: αὐτοὶ τε, εἴ τι ὑποπτεύετε μὴ δόλῳ ὑμᾶς προάγωμεν, ἔτοιμοι ἐσμέν ἐν τῇσι νηυσὶ τῇσι ὑμετέρῃσι ἀγόμενοι ὄμηροι εἶναι.

18. δόλῳ: cp. 8. 140 supra.

91. 1. πολλός: cp. 7. 158 supra.

3. κληδόνος εἵνεκεν: i.e. for the sake of getting an omen from it; cp. c. 101 infra, and 5. 72. κληδών is no ordinary sound, or rumour, but a significant, a portentous voice. The king was surely acquainted with the name of the orator addressing the Council, before the speaking began.

κατὰ συντυχίην θεοῦ ποιούντος: τύχη, συντυχία, are beyond direct human control or agency, but not independent of the divine agency, cp. θεῇ τύχῃ 4. 8, not substantially different from θ. πόμπῃ 4. 152; cp. also 5. 92, where the τύχη is clearly providential.

5. ὁ δὲ ὑπαρπάσας τὸν ἐπίλοιπον λόγον τὸν ὁ Ἀρισταγόρης ὄρητο (sic) λέγειν: one or other passage is a copy—probably that of this! cp. c. 90 supra.

6. δέκομαι τὸν οἰωνόν. If δέκεσθαι in itself meant to accept as ominous, then τὸν οἰωνόν here would be de trop; cp. 8. 115 supra. οἰωνός is also once used in Thucydides, 6. 27. 3 τοῦ τε γὰρ ἐκπλου οἰωνὸς ἐδόκει εἶναι κτλ. Cp. Π. 12. 243 εἰς οἰωνὸς ἀριστος ἀμύνεσθαι περὶ πάτρης. Blakesley well cites the parallel anecdote of L. Paullus, quum ei, bellum ut cum rege Perse gereret, obtigisset. He came home that evening to find his little daughter in the depths. "Quid est," inquit, "mea Tertia? quid tristis es?" "Mi pater (inquit), Persa perit." Tum ille arctius puellam complexus "Accipio," inquit, "mea filia, omen": erat autem mortuus catellus eo nomine. Cicero de Divin. 1. 46.

7. σὺ δὲ ἡμῖν κτλ., 'but do thou, prithee, contrive, before you sail away, to pledge yourselves . . .' The apparent is not the real predicate; the position of αὐτός τε . . . πίστιν secures the phrase predicative force; the words καὶ οἱ σὺν σοὶ ὄντες οἶδε is hardly in construction.

9. ἣ μὲν Σαμίους . . . συμμάχους: the formula ἣ μὲν (ἣ μὴν, ἣ μάν, all three Homeric), of oath-taking, occurs generally in oratio recta, but also, as here, in obliqua, after verbs of swearing, etc. (πίστιν δοῦς), cp. 4. 154, 5. 93. The Samians alone are here nominated: what of the 'Ionians' c. 90 supra?

92 μάχους." ταῦτά τε ἅμα ἡγόρευε καὶ τὸ ἔργον προσήγε· αὐτίκα γὰρ οἱ Σάμιοι πίστιν τε καὶ ὄρκια ἐποιεῦντο συμμαχίης πέρι πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνας. ταῦτα δὲ ποιήσαντες οἱ μὲν ἀπέπλεον· [μετὰ σφέων γὰρ ἐκέλευε πλέειν τὸν Ἡγησί-
5 στρατον, οἰωνὸν τὸ οὖνομα ποιούμενος·] οἱ δὲ Ἑλληνες ἐπισχόντες ταύτην τὴν ἡμέρην τῇ ὑστεραίῃ ἐκαλλιέρεοντο, μαντευόμενοι σφί Δηϊφόνου τοῦ Εὐηνίου ἀνδρὸς Ἀπολλωνιήτεω,
93 Ἀπολλωνίης δὲ τῆς ἐν τῷ Ἰονίῳ κόλπῳ. τούτου τὸν πατέρα

92. 1 προσήγεν β 3 τοὺς om. C Marc. || οἱ μὲν: an 'οἱ μὲν δύο?' Bekker, van H.: (οἱ μὲν Stein<sup>13</sup>: οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι coni. Stein<sup>2</sup>) 4 ἀπέπλων van H. || μετὰ . . ποιούμενος secl. Stein<sup>3</sup> || μετὰ σφέων PRs || ποιεῖν z: πλώειν van H. || τὸν Ἡγησίστρατον om. β 7 μαντευόμενος R(S)V || δηϊφόνου C 8 ἰωνικῶ β 93. 1 incipit verbis οἱ δὲ Ἑλληνες supra, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. || τούτου: τοῦ β, Holder

92. 1. ταῦτά τε ἅμα κτλ.: for the parataxis cp. 8. 5, c. 98 supra, and 3. 135 ταῦτα εἶπε καὶ ἅμα ἔπος τε καὶ ἔργον ἐποίησε—a still more forcible parataxis. προσήγε, sc. τούτοις, or τῷ ἔπει.

2. αὐτίκα γὰρ οἱ Σάμιοι κτλ. If authentic, and true, this statement is of high historical importance as (a) dating the admission of the Samians, and of the Samians alone, into the Hellenic Symmarchy before the battle of Mykale; (b) representing the matriculation into the Symmarchy as effected by the king-navarch, without reference to any further authority (except perhaps the Synedrion of admirals). The exact scope of the Symmarchy is not here defined, but it could hardly be one restricted in its object to the liberation of Samos from the Persians and the tyrant; it appears to be the general alliance, πρὸς τὸν Πέρσην (7. 145) or ἐπὶ τῷ Μήδῳ Thuc. 1. 102. 4. Or did they only bind themselves, συμμαχίης πέρι, to become full members of the Symmarchy as soon as they were free? Cp. c. 106 infra.

3. οἱ μὲν . . ποιούμενος. The end of this chapter at least looks very unsatisfactory. οἱ μὲν as it stands covers all the Samians, and if Hegesistratos is to be detained, and the last sentence is to be retained, οἱ μὲν must be amended, or supplemented, but the detention of Hegesistratos is inconsistent with the permission or command above πολεῖ ὅκως ἀπολευσέαι. If τὸν οἰωνὸν is retained in c. 91, οἰωνὸν τὸ οὖνομα ποιούμενος here is intolerable. Cp. App. Crit.

6. ἐπισχόντες. Why this pause?

(8. 23, 66, 113, c. 49 supra, et al.). Mardonios had doubtless evacuated Attica by this time; the fleet was presumably in communication with the army in Attica, or in Boiotia. They obtained favourable omens for proceeding no doubt at the right strategic point.

ταύτην τὴν ἡμέρην: the acc. of duration of time; Madvig, § 30. τῇ ὑστεραίῃ, the dat. of point of time, ib. § 45. Cp. c. 90 ad init. and Index.

ἐκαλλιέρεοντο: a strong imperfect; for the word cp. 7. 134 supra. μαντευόμενου, as in c. 36 supra.

7. Δηϊφόνου τοῦ Εὐηνίου. The name 'Deiphonos' apparently occurs only in this passage; like other and commoner compounds of δῆμος (δαίος, δάος) it has a distinctly archaic ring (well suited to a seer). Εὐήνιος—also unique as a personal name—is apparently the adj. of Εὐήνος, a river, or river-god, of Aitolia: Hesiod, Theog. 345; Thucyd. 2. 83. 3, etc. Its other (and earlier) name was Λυκόρμας, cp. ps.-Plutarch Mor. 1011 (ed. Didot, v. 86). It is the central river of 'old' Aitolia, and Kalydon was on its bank; Strabo 45 describes its course; its modern name is Phidari (Baedeker, Greece, p. 29), and it debouches east of Mesolonghi.

8. Ἀπολλωνίης δὲ τῆς ἐν τῷ Ἰονίῳ κόλπῳ. Steph. Byz. enumerates 25 cities of this name, some of them duplicate (Rawlinson). Hülsen ap. Pauly-Wissowa ii. 112 ff. enumerates 32 cities, islands, castles or places, which bore the name at one time or other. This observation concerns rather the popularity of Apollo than the matter in hand. The tw

κατέλαβε Εὐήνιον πρήγμα τοιόνδε. ἔστι ἐν τῇ Ἀπολλωνίῃ ταύτῃ ἱρὰ ἡλίου πρόβατα, τὰ τὰς μὲν ἡμέρας βόσκεται παρὰ

2 Εὐήνιον: 'nonne melius abest?' Kallenberg: secl. Holder: Εὐήνιον κατέλαβε transp. Stein<sup>2</sup> 3 τὰ: α̅ Β

chief foundations were undoubtedly Apollonia on the Euxine (4. 90, 93 supra), and the one here in question. It was south of Epidamnos (cp. Thuc. 1. 26. 2), in proximity to the river Aous (see below). Strabo 316 ἐφ' ᾧ Ἀπολλωνία πόλις εὐνοματώτα κτίσμα Κορινθίων καὶ Κορκυραίων (Κορκυραίων τε καὶ Κορινθίων κτίσις Skymnos, 440), τοῦ ποταμοῦ μὲν ἀπέχονσα σταδίων δέκα τῆς θαλάττης δὲ ἐξήκοντα. Thuc. l.c. makes it simply a Corinthian foundation (cp. Plutarch Mor. 552 v, who puts the foundation in the reign of Periander, i.e. before 585 B.C. The Olympian dedication (Pausan. 5. 22. 3) made Phoibos himself the founder. The coinage (silver, of five periods, but not going back before the fourth century B.C., cp. B. Head, Hist. Num. p. 265) well illustrates the importance of Apollonia, especially in the Roman period, when the city was one of the W. termini of the Egnatian way, Dyrrachium (Epidamnos) being the other, Strabo 322. It played a considerable part in the civil war (cp. Caesar, B. C. 3. 1, Cicero, Phil. 11. 26); at Apollonia in 44 B.C. Octavius received the news of his uncle's death, and started to recover his inheritance and to refound the Empire.

ἐν τῷ Ἰονίῳ κόλπῳ: the usual designation of this Apollonia, e.g. Pausanias 5. 22. 3 Ἀπολλωνιάται οἱ ἐν τῷ Ἰονίῳ: cp. Aelian, V. H. 13. 16. Strabo 424 has ἡ πρὸς Ἐπιδάμνῳ, Steph. B. ἡ κατ' Ἐπιδάμνον. Cp. Thuc. 1. 24. 1 Ἐπιδάμνος ἐστὶ πόλις ἐν δεξιᾷ ἐσπλόντι ἐς τὸν Ἰόνιον κόλπον· προσοικοῦσι δ' αὐτὴν Ταυλάντιοι βάρβαροι, Ἰλλυρικὸν ἔθνος. On the Ionian gulf cp. 7. 20 supra (ὁ Ἰ. πόντος). Strabo 316 ad f. places ἡ ἀρχὴ τοῦ στόματος τοῦ Ἰονίου κόλπου καὶ τοῦ Ἀδρίου at the Keraunian mountains south of Apollonia and of Panormos, the port of Orikon; the 'mouth' is common to the 'Ionian' and 'Adrian,' the difference being that, properly speaking, the inner part of the sea is the 'Adrian,' and the outer, or lower, the 'Ionian' (cp. 4. 33, 5. 9, 1. 163).

93. 2. κατέλαβε: cp. cc. 60 supra, 104 infra, τὰ καταλαβόντα c. 49 supra.

3. ἱρὰ ἡλίου πρόβατα. 'Phoibos' himself was their founder (cp. Pausan.

5. 22. 3), the city bore the Apolline name, the fusion of Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων with Ἥλιος is therefore a fait accompli in Apollonia; and this perhaps is the oldest evidence of the amalgamation, in cult and myth. The πρόβατα here are apparently sheep, or goats (cp. τὰ λεπτὰ τῶν προβάτων 8. 137 supra), as they are raided by wolves. The animals associated with Helios are chariot-horses (ὕπὸ δ' ἄρσενες ἵπποι, Hom. Hymn. 31. 14), and, still earlier, oxen and sheep (Od. 12. 127 ff. Ἡελίοιο βόες καὶ ἱφία μῆλα, ἐπὶ τὰ βοῶν ἀγέλαι, τόσα δ' οἶων πάσα καλά, 50 in each herd, or flock, 350 in all, tended by the nymphs, Phaethusa and Lampetie, day and night!). Apollon is almost certainly in origin a truly pastoral deity (and, especially as Λύκιος, Λύκειος, Λυκέργος, the guardian of the sheep; as also Κάρνειος, Νόμιος, Ἀρισταῖος, etc.).

βόσκεται: middle, pascuntur (the active 6. 39, also 1. 44, in quasi-metaphorical sense). Cp. Hom. Hymn. ad Apoll. 412 f. Τάλναρον ἔνθα τε μῆλα βαθύτριχα βόσκεται αἰεὶ Ἡελίοιο ἀνακτος.

παρὰ [<Χῳνα>] ποταμόν. "There can be no doubt that the river intended is the Aous, or Viossa, which flows from the central part of Pindus, called Lacmon by the ancients (Hecat. Fr. 72, Soph. ap. Strab. vi. 391), and empties itself into the Adriatic a little south of the site of Apollonia" (Rawlinson). Χῳνα is restored by Stein from the Canons of Theognostos 794 (cp. Cramer, Anecd. Oxon. ii. (135) p. 131 Χῳν, Χωνός, θνομα ποταμοῦ ἐξ οὗ καὶ ἡ Ἠπειρος Χωνία παρὰ Ἡροδότῳ). But it is Χωνία, not Χῳν, which this passage records for Hdt. The Epeirote 'Chonia' no doubt represents 'Chaonia,' which got its name from the Χάονες (cp. Thuc. 2. 68. 9, 80. 1, 5, 81. 3-6), and not from a river Χῳν, for whose real existence the Canons of Theognostos are not evidence. If such a river anywhere existed, it would perhaps be in South Italy, where the 'Chaones' reappear as 'Chones,' cp. note to 7. 170. 13 supra. The grammarian is wrong in citing Hdt. as authority for 'Chonia'; and he has apparently invented 'Chon' to account for Chonia.

[<Χῶνα>] ποταμόν, δς ἐκ Λάκμωνος ὄρεος ῥέει διὰ τῆς
 5 Ἀπολλωνίης [χώρης] ἐς θάλασσαν παρ' Ὀρικον λιμένα, τὰς δὲ νύκτας ἀραιρημένοι ἄνδρες οἱ πλούτῳ τε καὶ γένει δοκιμώται τοῖν τῶν ἀστῶν, οὔτοι φυλάσσουσι ἐνιαυτὸν ἕκαστος, περὶ πολλοῦ γὰρ δὴ ποιεῦνται Ἀπολλωνιῆται τὰ πρόβατα ταῦτα
 ἐκ θεοπροπίου τινός· ἐν δὲ ἄνθρωποι αὐλίζονται ἀπὸ τῆς πόλιος 10 ἐκάς. ἔνθα δὴ τότε ὁ Εὐήνιος οὗτος ἀραιρημένος ἐφύλασσε.
 καὶ κοτε αὐτοῦ κατακοιμήσαντος φυλακὴν, παρελθόντες λύκοι ὡς τὸ ἄνθρωπον διέφθειραν τῶν προβάτων ὡς ἐξήκοντα. ὁ δὲ
 ἔως ἐπήϊσε, εἶχε σιγῇ καὶ ἔφραζε οὐδενί, ἐν νόφ' ἔχων

4 Χῶνα e Theognosti canon. 794 inser. Stein, Holder, van H.: cancellus posui || λακμόνος B: Λάκμωνος z, van H. || οὔρεος OPMarc. z, van H.
 5 Ἀπολλωνιῆτιδος Valla (per apolloniatem agrum) || χώρης om. Marc.: sed.
 Stein<sup>2</sup> || ὄρικον Marc.: ὄρηκον R 6 ἀναιρημένοι C 7 ἕκαστον
 Apr.: ἕκαστοι C 8 γὰρ: τε B || δὴ om. C Marc. 9 ἀπὸ del.
 Cobet, van H. 10 ἀφαιρημένος R(S)V 11 κατακοιμίσαντος primo scr. sed statim correct. S(Gaisford)V, Reiske, Holder, van H. || τῇ φυλακῇν BPz, Holder, van H. 13 ἐπήϊσε ABC: ἐπήσαν Marc.:
 ἐποίησεν S || ἔφραξε(v) B || ἐνίφ S

4. Λάκμωνος ὄρεος: Steph. B. sub
 v. Λάκμων, ἄκρα τοῦ Πίνδου ὄρους, ἐξ
 ἧς ὁ Ἰναχος καὶ Ἄλας ῥέει ποταμός· ὡς Ἐκαταῖος ἐν πρώτῳ. Strabo 271, 316
 (quoting Hekataios) gives the form
 Λάκμος: τὸν δ' Ἄωον Ἀλάντα καλεῖ Ἐκαταῖος καὶ φησιν ἀπὸ τοῦ αὐτοῦ τόπου τοῦ περὶ Λάκμον, μᾶλλον δὲ τοῦ αὐτοῦ μυθοῦ, τὸν τε Ἰναχον ῥέειν εἰς Ἄργος πρὸς νότον καὶ τὸν Ἀλάντα πρὸς ἐσπέραν καὶ πρὸς τὸν Ἀδρίαν.

διὰ τῆς Ἀπολλωνίης: the name of the city for the country; cp. ἐς
 Ἀθήνας=ἐς Ἀττικὴν c. 17 supra, ἐς
 Θήβας, ibid. etc.

5. παρ' Ὀρικον λιμένα. Steph. Byz.
 sub v. Ἐκαταῖος λιμένα καλεῖ τῆς Ἠπείρου τῆς (sic) Ὀρικόν, ἐν τῇ Εὐρώπῃ· μετὰ δὲ Βουθρωτὸς πόλις, μετὰ δὲ Ὀρικὸς λιμὴν. Orikos, or Oricum (so with the Latins, e.g. Caesar B. C. 3 passim), now is Ericho; no stream rising on Lakmon flows out anywhere near it. The geography of Hdt. is at fault, and probably at second hand; this passage, though it deals with the West, is probably not a result of his own western voyage, but belongs to the first draft of the Book.

6. ἀραιρημένοι ἄνδρες: cp. 7. 118
supra.

οἱ πλούτῳ τε καὶ γένει δοκιμώτατοι: cp. Aristot. Pol. 6 (4). 4. 5=

1290 b ἐν Ἀπολλωνίᾳ τῇ ἐν τῷ Ἰονίῳ

. . ἐν ταῖς τιμαῖς ἦσαν οἱ διαφέροντες
 κατ' εὐγένειαν καὶ πρώτοι κατασχύοντες <τὴν ἀποικίαν> ὀλίγοι δυντες πολλῶν.

7. περὶ πολλοῦ . . ποιεῦνται: cp.
 6. 104, 7. 181, 8. 40 supra.

9. ἐκ θεοπροπίου τινός, 'in consequence of a certain prophetic (or divine) utterance'—ἐκ is here rather causal than temporal. θεοπρόπιον is an Homeric word, much used by Hdt. for an oracular response; so θεοπρόπος is with him always used for 'consultants' of an oracle. Just below the Apolloniatas are found consulting both at Dodona and at Delphi.

ἀπὸ . . ἐκάς: cp. 3. 41 ὡς δὲ ἀπὸ
 τῆς νήσου ἐκάς ἐγένετο . .

10. τότε: the time above referred to in κατέλαβε πρῆγμα τοιοῦτον.

11. κατακοιμήσαντος φυλακῇν: the accusative may be of temporal duration, or, more generally, of limitation; the verb is used in a transitive sense 8. 134
supra.

παρελθόντες λύκοι ἐς τὸ ἄντρον.
 Evenios was asleep outside, and the wolves got past him into the cave; cp.
 3. 72 ὑμεῖς δὲ ἴστε φυλακὰς τὰς κατεστεώσας εἰούσας οὐδὲν χαλεπὰς παρελθεῖν:
 cp. 3. 77. Here one might have expected παρεσελθόντες.

13. ὡς ἐπήϊσε, 'when he perceived
 (it).' The verb occurs in a still more ἀντικαταστήσειν ἄλλα πριάμενος. καὶ οὐ γὰρ ἔλαθε τοὺς Ἀπολλωνιήτας ταῦτα γενόμενα, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐπίθοντο, ὑπαγαγόντες 15 μιν ὑπὸ δικαστήριον κατέκριναν, ὡς τὴν φυλακὴν κατακοιμήσαντα, τῆς ὄψιος στερηθῆναι. ἐπεῖτε δὲ τὸν Εὐήριον ἐξετύφλωσαν, αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα οὔτε πρόβατά σφι ἔτικτε οὔτε γῇ ἔφερε ὁμοίως καρπὸν. πρόφанта δέ σφι ἔν τε Δωδώνῃ καὶ ἐν Δελφοῖσι ἐγίνετο, ἐπεῖτε ἐπειρώτων [τοὺς 20

15 γινόμενα B || ἀλλ' ὡς : ὡς δὲ S : ἀλλὰ πως? Stein<sup>12</sup> || ὑπάγοντες B
 16 ὑπὸ : εἰς τὸ Paris. 1635 : ἐς τὸ || κατέκριναν om. B || κατακοιμίσαντα R, Reiske, Holder, van H. : sed verba ὡς . . κατακοιμίσαντα susp. habet van H.
 18 τὰ πρόβατα S 19 καρπὸν om. B, Holder || πρόφанта : πρόβατα B
 20 ἐγένετο B || ἐπεῖτε Reiske : ἔπειτα || ἔπειτα . . ἔφραζον del. Krueger :
 τοὺς προφήτας et οἱ δὲ αὐτοῖσι ἔφραζον del. Stein, Holder, van H. || ἐπειρώτευν Marc., Gaisford, Stein<sup>1</sup> : ἐπηρώτευν CP : ἐπερώτευν ||

generalized sense in 3. 29 ἐπαλόντες σιδηρίων, 'sensible of steel.'

εἶχε σιγῇ, 'kept quiet,' silent,
 rather than rem clam tenebat or tacuit (the normal construction of εἶχε with adverb, cp. Index). σιγῇ, as 8. 66, 74, still more 7. 237 (cp. also 2. 140).
 σιγῇ εἶχε 1. 86, literally.

ἐν νόμῳ ἔχων, 'intending . .'
 15. ταῦτα γενόμενα, 'what had happened.'

ὑπαγαγόντες μιν ὑπὸ δικαστήριον :
 cp. 6. 104 ὑπὸ δ. αὐτὸν ἀγαγόντες, 6.
 136 θανάτου ὑπαγαγὼν ὑπὸ τὸν δῆμον
 Μιλτιάδεα, 6. 72 ὑπὸ δικαστήριον ὑπαχθεῖς.

17. τῆς ὄψιος στερηθῆναι : on the principle that the punishment should fit
 the crime. ὄψιος = ὄμματα, as in Aristot.
Hist. An. 8. 19. 7 λευκὴν ἔχοντες τὴν ὄψιν. Polybius goes further : 3. 79. 12 ἐστερήθη τῆς μᾶς ὄψεως. ὄψιος is also used for the chose vue (as we say, a 'sight'), cp. 7. 15, 8. 54 supra, 3. 65.
 The two extremely concrete meanings correspond to the two primary and more abstract meanings of ὄψιος, viz. the faculty of seeing, 4. 81, and the aspect or appearance, 7. 47.

18. ἐξετύφλωσαν is logically a plu-riperfect of time.

αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα, 'immediately
 thereupon.'

οὔτε πρόβατα κτλ. : cp. 6. 139
 οὔτε γῇ καρπὸν ἔφερε οὔτε γυναῖκες τε
 καὶ ποῖμναι ὁμοίως ἔτικτον καὶ πρὸ τοῦ.
 This was, of course, the result of a curse (cp. 3. 65, the blessing and the curse of Cambyses on the Persians). Here the γυναῖκες are not included. (Economically this might only make things worse

 —though the Greek god, or historian, was hardly thinking of that.)

19. πρόφанта δέ σφι ἐν τε Δωδώνῃ καὶ ἐν Δελφοῖσι ἐγίνετο, 'it was foreshown to them at Dodona and at Delphi.' πρόφانتος occurs also 5. 63 (and twice in Sophokl. Trach. 1159, 1163).
 The city had doubtless been founded under Delphic auspices, cp. c. 93 supra.
 Dodona fills a larger place in the earliest Books of Herodotos, esp. 2. 52, a passage which proves a personal visit by the historian to the place. It is here mentioned purely en passant, and no doubt taken over from the source, whatever it was, of the story of Evenios; and there is nothing in the notice to suggest that this passage was penned after Hdt.'s visit—rather the reverse; nothing in fact to lead us to date the composition of this passage other than early in the genesis of the work.

Strabo 327-8 treats at length of Dodona; Steph. Byz. devotes his longest article thereto. The Dodona in question here is, of course, the Thesprotian (cp. 4.
 33), or oldest Greek oracle, which had seemingly been eclipsed by Delphi, though the tribes and cities of the neighbourhood naturally resorted thereto. It was destined to something like a revival at a later time, when Delphi was in difficulties, and during the Roman period, when all this district rose in importance. The method, or methods, of divination practised at Dodona are obscure; upon the whole subject cp.
 Carapanos, Dodone et ses ruines, Paris, 1878.

προφήτας] τὸ αἷτιον τοῦ παρεόντος κακοῦ, [οἱ δὲ αὐτοῖσι ἔφραζον] ὅτι ἀδίκως τὸν φύλακον τῶν ἱρῶν προβάτων Εὐήνιον τῆς ὄψιος ἐστέρησαν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἐπορμήσαι τοὺς λύκους, οὐ πρότερόν τε παύσεσθαι τιμωρέοντες ἐκείνῳ πρὶν ἢ δίκας δώσει 25 τῶν ἐποίησαν ταύτας τὰς ἂν αὐτὸς ἔλῃται [καὶ δίκαιοι].
τούτων δὲ ἐπιτελεσμένων αὐτοὶ δώσειν Εὐηνίῳ δόσιν τοιαύτην 94 τὴν πολλοὺς μιν μακαριεῖν ἀνθρώπων ἔχοντα. τὰ μὲν χρηστήρια ταῦτά σφι ἐχρήσθη, οἱ δὲ Ἀπολλωνιῇται ἀπόρρητα ποιησάμενοι προσέθεσαν τῶν ἀστῶν ἀνδράσι διαπρήξαι. οἱ δὲ σφι διέπρηξαν ὥδε· κατημένου Εὐηνίου ἐν θώκῳ ἐλθόντες

22 ἱρῶν om. C || Εὐήνιον susp. habet Kallenberg 23 ἐς τοὺς C
24 παύσασθαι B || τιμωρέοντας R(S)V || ἐκείνῳ om. S || δώσειν ABCSV
25 ἔλοιτο Marc. || ἔλῃται καὶ secl. Cobet, Holder, van H. || καὶ δίκαιοι
secl. Blakesley, Stein<sup>2</sup> 26 τούτων z || ἐπιτελεσμένων Stein<sup>(2)</sup> z: τελεο-
μένων Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H.: τελεονμένων Marc. || δόσιν εὐηνίῳ δώσειν R:
δώσειν εὐηνίῳ δίκην Marc. 94. 3 προσέθεσαν Cobet, van H., Stein<sup>2</sup>:
προέθεσαν || ἀστῶν z || ἀνδράσι <τριῶ> Gomperz 4 ὦιδε P

21. τὸ αἷτιον, 'the cause'; this use of the word is observable. Cp. 7. 125. τοὺς προφήτας is inconsistent with 2. 55 and with 8. 36. Stein suggests that the corrector misunderstood αὐτοὶ and followed the lead of πρόφανα. But see below.

22. φύλακον: the form is constant in Hdt. (φύλαξ is found 1. 41, in a somewhat different sense.)

23. αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἐπορμήσαι τοὺς λύκους: the plural (αὐτοὶ) is remarkable, as associating Zeus and Apollon in the joint action, Dodona and Delphi in a common utterance; a curious collaboration, an improbable coincidence, is suggested by these Responses, which is not much eased by remembering that there was a Ζεὺς Δωδαῖος as well as an Ἀπόλλων Λύκειος in the Greek Pantheon. Even Kroisos was not favoured to this extent (1. 46-49) unless indeed we are to infer that Apollon and Amphiaraos exactly coincided on that occasion. Are we to suppose collusion, genuine inspiration, or false report, as the source of this coincidence? Or is the record an inexact one; did the one oracle merely confirm the other, as if, for example, the Apollonians might have inquired first at Dodona, and then, dissatisfied with the reply, have gone to Delphi only to get it reaffirmed there? (Cp. the action of Agesipolis at Olympia and Delphi in 388 B.C. (390 ?) Xenoph. Hell. 4. 7. 2.)

αὐτοὶ must, of course, refer to the gods,

whether we keep τοὺς προφήτας above or not. The proposal to cut out τοὺς προφήτας on the ground that it is inconsistent with 2. 55 (of Dodona) and with 8. 36 (of Delphi) is vitiated by the assumption that Hdt. is a careful and self-consistent writer. But further, a προφήτης is mentioned for Delphi in 8. 37, and in 2. 55 we have to reckon not merely with the three female προμάντιες or ἱερίαι, but with οἱ ἄλλοι Δωδωναῖαι (cp. 4. 33); while Homer shows that originally men (the Σελλοί) were the prophets, or priests, of the god in Dodona, and Strabo 402 declares that to the end Βοιωτοῖς μόνοις ἄνδρας προθεσπίσειν ἐν Δωδώνῃ. The ἱερίαι anyway had not everything their own way. Possibly if Hdt. had been in Dodona before writing this passage he would have expressed himself differently: the failure to specify the Πυθίῃ for Delphi might in any case be merely a bit of careless composition.

24. τιμωρέοντες ἐκείνῳ. The verb is used of bringing aid to the living 7. 169 or vengeance to the dead 7. 144, etc. This long prose Response badly wants reducing to verse!

25. ταύτας: the pronoun seems to refer to the future, the compensation still to be specified.

26. δώσειν δόσιν, cognate accus.

94. 2. ταῦτα is virtually predicative.

ἐχρήσθη, 7. 144 supra.

ἀπόρρητα ποιησάμενοι, c. 45 supra

4. ἐν θώκῳ: no doubt in a publ

οἱ παρίζοντο καὶ λόγους ἄλλους ἐποιοῦντο, ἐς ὃ κατέβαινον 5 συλλυπούμενοι τῷ πάθει· ταύτῃ δὲ ὑπάγοντες εἰρώτων τίνα δίκην ἂν ἔλοιτο, εἰ ἐθέλοιεν Ἀπολλωνιῆται δίκας ὑποστήναι [δῶσειν] τῶν ἐποίησαν. ὃ δὲ οὐκ ἀκηκῶς τὸ θεοπρόπιον εἶλετο εἶπας εἴ τίς οἱ δοίῃ ἀγρούς, τῶν ἀστῶν ὀνομάσας τοῖσι 10 ἡπίστατο εἶναι καλλίστους δύο κλήρους τῶν ἐν τῇ Ἀπολ-λωνίῃ, καὶ οἴκησιν πρὸς τούτοις τὴν ἥδεε καλλίστην ἐοῦσαν τῶν ἐν πόλει· τούτων δὲ ἔφη ἐπήβολος γενόμενος τοῦ λοιποῦ ἀμύνειν εἶναι, καὶ δίκην οἱ ταύτην ἀποχρᾶν γενομένην. καὶ ὃ μὲν ταῦτα ἔλεγε, οἱ δὲ πάρεδροι εἶπαν ὑπολαβόντες “Εὐνίη, 15
 ταύτην δίκην Ἀπολλωνιῆται τῆς ἐκτυφλώσιος ἐκτίνουσί τοι κατὰ θεοπρόπια τὰ γενόμενα.” ὃ μὲν δὴ πρὸς ταῦτα δεινὰ ἐποίεε, τὸ ἐνθεῦτεν πυθόμενος τὸν πάντα λόγον, ὥς ἔξαπατη-

6 συλλυπούμενοι S || εἰρώτεον Marc., Stein<sup>1</sup>: ἡρώτων C: ἡρώτεον Pz
 8 δῶσειν secl. Stein<sup>2</sup> 12 πόλει αC: τῇ πόλει Marc.: τῇ πόλει z
 || τουτέων z || ἔφη abesse malit van H. || ἐπήβολος BS 13 <ἀν>
 ἀμύνειτος van H., Holder 15 τοι: τε CS 16 κατὰ τὰ z, van H. || γινόμενα B 17 ἐποίεε, τὸ: Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H. (ἐποίει, τὸ): ἐποιέετο place, an exedra, or what not; cp. 1. 181, 6. 63.

5. λόγους ἄλλους ἐποιοῦντο, 'conversed (were conversing) about other (indifferent) matters . . .'

ἐς 8: donec.

κατεβαίνουν συλλυπούμενοι τῷ πάθει, 'they came round (down) to expressing sympathy with his case'; cp. 1. 90 λέγων δὲ ταῦτα κατέβαινε αὐτὸς παραιτέμενος κτλ.: cp. 1. 116, 118 ὡς οἱ ἐπαλλόγητο κατέβαινε λέγων ὡς κτλ. πάθος, of course, the loss of his eyes.

6. ὑπάγοντες: in a different sense to ὑπαγαγόντες c. 93 supra; here, 'drawing him on' furtively, or little by little; cp. ἔξαπατηθεὶς infra. ὑποστήναι, to undertake; cp. c. 34 supra.

8. τὸ θεοπρόπιον = τὰ χρηστήρια supra.

10. καλλίστους δύο κλήρους τῶν ἐν τῇ Ἀπολλωνίῃ: these two allotments must have been ἐν τῇ χώρῃ. The 'dwelling' (οἴκησις) was no doubt ἐν (τῇ) πόλει.

12. ἐπήβολος: cp. 8. 111 supra.

τοῦ λοιποῦ: sc. χρόνου, cp. 8. 143. 11 and c. 90. 1 supra.

13. ἀμύνειτος: μῆρις, generally of supernatural wrath, is here applied by the diviner to his own feeling, which, no doubt, is conceived as having a touch of the uncanny about it. (The ι is long.)

ἀποχρᾶν: satisfacere, cp. c. 48 supra.

14. πάρεδροι = παρίζοντες: cp. 5. 18

γυναῖκας ἐσάγεσθαι παρέδρους (i.e. παρακατεδυμένας), or 6. 65 πάρεδροι ἔοντες = παρίζοντες.

ὑπολαβόντες, took him up, or took up the conversation, as frequently; 7. 101, etc. (λόγον).

15. τῆς ἐκτυφλώσιος: with gen. cp. δίκας τῶν l. 8 supra. ἐκτύφλωσις is a hapaxlegomenon.

16. τὰ θεοπρόπια = τὰ χρηστήρια supra. δεινὰ ἐποίεε: cp. App. Crit., but he very probably 'made a great ado,' a great fuss, not merely took it sorely to heart. The active is good here; cp. 2. 121, δεινὰ ποιεῖν 7. 1 supra.

17. τὸν πάντα λόγον, 'the whole story,' i.e. the real facts. He had been tricked (ἔξαπατηθεὶς). The trick is indicative of a relatively low standard of morality, which keeps the pledge in the letter, and breaks it in the spirit, and is characteristic of a certain type of culture, or education, which unites a scrupulous conscience with a good deal of essential dishonesty; cp. 4. 154, 201, etc. etc. In this case, however, there was a difficulty: had Evenios known the whole story, he might have been sorely tempted into extravagant demands. The gods plainly condoned the trick, and consoled the diviner with a gift which brought him honour, and doubtless proved extremely profitable to him and his descendants.

θείς· οὐ δὲ πριάμενοι παρὰ τῶν ἐκτεμένων διδοῦσί οἱ τὰ εἴλετο. καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα αὐτίκα ἔμφυτον μαντικὴν εἶχε, ὥστε
 95 καὶ ὀνομαστὸς γενέσθαι. τούτου δὴ ὁ Δηίφονος ἐὼν παῖς τοῦ Εὐηνίου ἀγόντων Κορινθίων ἐμαντεύετο τῇ στρατιῇ. ἤδη δὲ καὶ τότε ἤκουσα, ὡς ὁ Δηίφονος ἐπιβατεύων τοῦ Εὐηνίου οὐνόματος ἐξελάμβανε ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα ἔργα, οὐκ ἐὼν Εὐηνίου 5 παῖς.

96 Τοῖσι δὲ Ἑλλησι ὡς ἐκαλλιέρησε, ἀνήγον τὰς νέας ἐκ τῆς Δήλου πρὸς τὴν Σάμον. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐγένοντο τῆς Σαμῆς πρὸς

18 κερτημένων C 20 καὶ om. Marc. || οὐνομαστὸν S: οὐνομαστὸς z
 95. 1 δὴ ὁ om. B 2 τοῦ Εὐηνίου suspect. hab. van H. || ἀγαγόντων B, van H. 3 ὁ om. B || ἐπιβατεύων post Εὐηνίου Marc.: ἐπιβατέων B<sup>1</sup>R(S)V || ὀνόματος R(S)VP Marc., van H. 4 ἐπὶ: ἐπιὼν Reiske || ἔργῳ Ask. 96. 1 νῆας z

18. οἱ δέ: sc. οἱ Ἀπολλωνιῆται.

19. μετὰ ταῦτα αὐτ.: cp. c. 77.1 supra. ἔμφυτον μαντικὴν: this was the δόσις promised by Zeus and Apollon, c. 93 ad f. This talent of divination as ἔμφυτος was (a) not acquired from a human master, (b) hereditary, transmissible. Cp. Demosth. de Cor. 203 οὐκ ἦν ταῦθ' ὡς εἴκε τοῖς τότε Ἀθηναίοις πατέρα . . οὐδ' ἔμφυτον.

εἶχε, 'became possessed of.' Wesseling well cps. Od. 22. 347 αὐτοδίδακτος δ' εἰμὶ, θεὸς δέ μοι ἐν φρεσὶν οἶμας παντοίας ἐνέφυσεν.

95. 1. ἐὼν παῖς. Hdt. appears to prefer the view that Deiphonos was true son to Evenios; but there was a doubt on the subject: why? Was Deiphonos too old to be the son of Evenios, or to have been born after the date of Evenios' acquisition of μαντική? The date of the events just related is not indicated by Hdt., but the sceptical doubt as to his paternity may have been based upon chronological grounds. The doubt may have been started by rivals, diviners, Athenian or other.

2. ἀγόντων Κορινθίων, Apollonia being a Corinthian colony; cp. c. 93 supra.

ἤδη δὲ . . ἤκουσα: the same formula 7. 55 supra, introducing an alternative not credited by the historian himself. The passage here looks like an addition, perhaps of later date.

3. ἐπιβατεύων τοῦ Εὐηνίου οὐνόματος. Cf. 3. 63 ἐπιβατέων τοῦ Σμέρδιος οὐνόματος, with a slight difference, the Mage calling himself Smerdis, Deiphonos calling his father Evenios, or Evenios his father. In either case, however, there is the usurpation of a name, the usurper taking advantage of a name to get (or give himself) 'a lift'; cp. also 6. 65 ἐπιβατέων τοῦ ῥήματος.

4. ἐξελάμβανε: as Blakesley (after Schweighauser) observes, ἐκλαμβάνειν elocare may be the correlative of ἐκδοῦναι locare; he 'undertook,' was undertaking, to perform works (ἔργα), sc. of divination.

ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα: the preposition is curious, suggesting 'against,' which would here be senseless; Schweighauser (Lexicon) defends it, and explains passim per Graeciam: ἀνά would be more usual, but Stein cites Homer, Od. 16. 63 πολλὰ βροτῶν ἐπὶ ἄστεα δυηθήναι, etc. etc. (cp. 4. 417 ὅσσ' ἐπὶ γαίαν ἐρπετὰ γίγνονται); cp. ἐπὶ πολλόν 8. 107 supra.

96. 1. ὡς ἐκαλλιέρησε: sc. τὰ ἱρά, cp. c. 19 supra. Doubtless in the fleet also the victims had been slow to reveal the favourable sign until the moment for advance was come, not earlier than the evacuation of Attica by Mardonios surely; cp. c. 13 supra.

ἀνήγον τὰς νέας: cp. 8. 76 supra; the move from Delos to Samos marks the assumption of the offensive by the Greeks at sea, even more decisively than the move into Boiotia the assumption of the offensive by land; c. 19 supra.

2. πρὸς τὴν Σ., of motion, but not hostile motion, to . .

ἐγένοντο τῆς Σαμῆς πρὸς ἸΚαλαμίσοι: they reached (came to rest at) Kalamisa in Samian territory; Athenaeus 572 f. Ἀλεξίς δ' ὁ Σάμος ἐν δευτέρῳ Ὀρίων

Καλαμίσοις, οὐ μὲν αὐτοῦ ὀρμισάμενοι κατὰ τὸ "Ηραιον τὸ ταύτη παρεσκευάζοντο ἐς ναυμαχίην, οἱ δὲ Πέρσαι πυθόμενοι σφέας προσπλέειν ἀνήγον καὶ αὐτοὶ πρὸς τὴν ἡπειρον τὰς νέας τὰς ἄλλας, τὰς δὲ Φοινίκων ἀπῆκαν ἀποπλέειν. βουλευο-

3 λαμίουσιν B: Καλάμοις Larcher, Gaisford, Holder, van H., ex Athenaeo p. 572 F || ὀρμισάμενοι z: ὀρμισάμενοι Marc.: ὀρμισάμενοι ceteri || ἡραίων R 4 ὡς ἐς z || πυθόμενοι σφέας B, Stein<sup>2</sup>: πυθόμενοι σφέας Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder, van H. 6 νῆας z || ἀποπλῶειν van H.

<"Ἦρων> Σαμακῶν τὴν ἐν Σάμῳ 'Αφροδίτην, ἣν οἱ μὲν ἐν Καλάμοις καλοῦσιν, οἱ δὲ ἐν 'Ἐλει, 'Αττικαὶ φησὶν ἐταῖραι ιδρύσαντο αἱ συνακολυθήσασαι Περικλεῖ ὅτε ἐπολιόρκει τὴν Σάμον. This is the only passage where a name resembling what is here in evidence occurs associated with Samos. It suggests three conclusions: (a) that the name of the place was Καλάμοι, 'the Reeds' (cp. the variant ἔλος); (b) that it was a natural place for an enemy's fleet to attempt a landing at; (c) that the temple here referred to was not an Heraion but an Aphrodision, though not, of course, one founded as late as 440-39 B.C. The origin and foundation of the temple, described by Alexis, is not convincing, though dedications, anathemata, there may have been from the occasion and the persons described.

3. τὸ "Ηραιον τὸ ταύτη: the expression seems to suggest that 'the Heraion in this place' is distinguished from an Heraion in some other. There may, of course, have been more than one Heraion in Samos; but there appears to be no independent evidence to prove the existence of more than one. If the great Heraion (3. 60) be here intended, the addition of the words τὸ ταύτη is rather perplexing. (Could they signify not the Heraion of Kalamoi in contrast with another Heraion also in Samos, but simply the Samian Heraion as distinguished from the Argive, the Olympian, or any other?) The position of the Heraion would seem suitable to the story in this chapter. The temple was on the sea-coast, at some distance from the city, and on a flat plain; cp. H. F. Tozer, Islands of the Aegean (1890) p. 175.

5. ἀνήγον . . πρὸς τὴν ἡπειρον: the ἀνάπλους is reckoned as from Samos; in relation to the mainland it was a κατάπλους. It appears presently that the Persians went SE. as for Miletos, not NE. as for Ephesos. They were well served by their intelligence department, and had timely notice of the advance of the Greek fleet from Delos.

6. τὰς δὲ Φοινίκων ἀπῆκαν ἀποπλέειν. Hdt. apparently means that while the rest of the Persian fleet retired on the mainland, close by, the Phoenician squadron or contingent was sent to sail right away—exactly whither he does not indicate. Others supply the omission—home. This statement in any form is a major crux. That the Phoenician fleet was clean dismissed to save it from a battle, and in the presence of the enemy, is scarce credible. If it was at Samos in the spring of 480 B.C. it would have retired on the mainland and helped to defend the fortified camp on Mykale; or, if detached from the rest of the fleet, it would have been employed on some special service—an advance on the Kyklades, left exposed by the Greeks, or more probably to operate upon the rear of the Greek force, or to attack the ships, after the greater part of the Greek forces had been drawn on to the mainland, and induced to debark.

Hdt. can hardly be understood as meaning that the Phoenician ships had been dismissed (ἀπῆκαν aorist pluperfect!) in the winter ("schon im Winter," Stein) home. That may have been the case; but if so, Hdt. does not know it.

Domaszewski has suggested that the Phoenician (and Egyptian) fleets were really all the time on service off Thrace, Makedon, Thessaly, protecting the coasts, and attending to the commissariat of Mardonios. But Hdt. does account for the 'Egyptians' (c. 32 supra); and if the Phoenicians were in the Thracian sea, why did they not support or cover Sestos? Or how did they get away? If the Phoenicians are withdrawn from the Persian fleet at Samos, and the Egyptians likewise, what remains? Very little except Greek vessels, or quasi-Greek (Kypriotē), whose loyalty

μένοισι γάρ σφι ἐδόκεε ναυμαχίην μὴ ποιέεσθαι· οὐ γὰρ ὧν ἐδόκεον ὅμοιοι εἶναι. ἐς δὲ τὴν ἡπειρον <ἀνήγον>, ὅκως ἔωσι ὑπὸ τὸν πεζὸν στρατὸν τὸν σφέτερον ἔοντα ἐν τῇ Μυκάλῃ, 10 ὃς κελεύσαντος Ξέρξεω καταλειμμένος τοῦ ἄλλου στρατοῦ

8 ὁμοίοι CP Marc. =: valde suspect. habet van H. || <ἀνήγον> Stein<sup>2</sup>:
ἀπέπλεον B, Stein<sup>1 2</sup>, Holder: ἀπέπλων van H.: om. αC Marc. 9
στρατὸν σφέτερον Marc. || μυκάλλῃ S

to Persia certainly could not be trusted at this juncture. Had the Phoenicians been present, yet the Persian admirals would hardly have risked a sea-battle in Greek waters, even with the memory of Lade to back them. Cp. Appendix VII. § 1. Hdt.'s rationale or motivation for the retirement upon the mainland, and the dismissal of the Phoenician contingent, is presumably an inference from the facts, but a not unreasonable inference; the Persian admirals felt they were not equal to fighting a battle at sea with the Greeks (δμοιοι=ἀξιόμαχοι); and they desired to obtain the cover (ὑπό, cp. 8. 92 supra) and coöperation of the large land-army, which was holding Ionia. But Hdt. fails to explain why the Persians were not ἀξιόμαχοι at sea (absence of the Phoenicians, etc., suspect loyalty of the Ionians, etc.); and he certainly credits them with no ulterior intention or hope of luring the Greeks on to the mainland, into the clutches of the corps d'armée.

9. ἐν τῇ Μυκάλῃ. Mykale has been described c. 90 supra simply as τῆς Ἰωνίης (assuming the text to be there complete, at least so far as this point is concerned). The mention of Mykale in 7. 80 is merely en passant, and does not prejudice the problem of composition in any way. It is more significant that no geographical description of Mykale occurs in this Book, whereas such a description is given in Bk. 1. 148 (ἣ δὲ Μυκάλῃ ἐστὶ τῆς ἡπείρου ἄκρῃ πρὸς ζέφυρον ἀνεμον κατήκουσα Σάμω καταντίον): how is such a sequence to be reconciled with the hypothesis that these Books (7-9) are the earliest portion of Hdt.'s work drafted by him, and in particular that Bk. 9 is of older composition than Bk. 1? The answer is not really difficult. (a) Mykale was a locality famous in this story, and Hdt. has not paused to describe it expressly; at the same time incidentally the topography of the place is here in evidence. (b) The passage in

Bk. 1 occurs in an eminently descriptive passage, where a topographical note was obviously in order. (c) Hdt. had probably in writing the early Books of his history a western, or at least a larger, audience more distinctly in view than when he first sat down to write the annals of the great invasion; it is to this wider public that the large amount of geography in Bks. 1-4 is addressed. (d) The whole context in 1. 148 forbids the supposition that in describing Mykale there he has the battle of 479 B.C. in view; and equally in this place the total absence of any back reference to 1. 148 is noticeable. As far as this story was concerned he was content originally with the simple indication τῆς Ἰωνίης c. 90 supra; that, indeed, would have been superfluous if he had had 1. 148 in view. (e) It is also observable that in 6. 16 Mykale is mentioned as requiring no description whatever. The explanation there is probably not that he has the description in 1. 148 in view, but that he is following an Ionian source in the account of the Ionian revolt, and that the source took Mykale for granted. Mykale is, however, here both expressly and incidentally more fully described than there; though that passage now precedes this in the opus.

10. κελεύσαντος Ξέρξεω, 'by order of Xerxes'; the particularity of this statement is remarkable. It exhibits, of course, the king as commander-in-chief, but does not specify the precise point of time at which this order had been issued. Was it part of a general plan, devised or sanctioned by the king, during his first residence at Sardes, in 481-80 B.C.? Or was it an afterthought, dictated (possibly by personal apprehension) during his second residence in Sardes, after his return, his 'flight' from Europe? Ionia cannot have been denuded of troops when Xerxes advanced into Europe; and the

Ἰωνίην ἐφύλασσε· τοῦ πλήθους μὲν ἦν ἑξ μυριάδες, ἐστρατήγεε δὲ αὐτοῦ Τιγράνης κάλλει καὶ μεγάθει ὑπερφέρων Περσέων. ὑπὸ τοῦτον μὲν δὴ τὸν στρατὸν ἐβουλευσάντο καταφυγόντες οἱ τοῦ ναυτικοῦ στρατηγοὶ ἀνειρῦσαι τὰς νέας καὶ περιβαλέσθαι ἔρκος ἔρυμά <τε> τῶν νεῶν καὶ σφέων αὐτῶν κρησφύ-15 γετον. ταῦτα βουλευσάμενοι ἀνήγοντο. ἀπικόμενοι δὲ παρὰ 97
τὸ τῶν Ποτινέων ἱρὸν τῆς Μυκάλης ἐς Γαίσωνά τε <ποταμὸν>

11 ἰωνίην τε R || πλήθους B 12 κάλλει AB: κάλλει τε z, van H.
|| μεγέθει α 13 ὑπὸ: ἐπὶ z 14 οἱ τοῦ ναυτικοῦ στρατηγοὶ
om. S || νῆας z 15 ἔρημα S || τε add. Stein, van H. || καὶ σφέων AB:
κέρφρων R || αὐτέων z 97. 1 παρὰ τῶν Ποτινέων τὸ ἱρὸν? Kallen-
berg 2 μυκάλης S || γέσωνά R: γέσονά Marc. || τε: τε ποταμὸν?
Stein<sup>2</sup>: verbum inserui, cf. comment. infra words καταλειμμένος τοῦ ἄλλου στρα-τοῦ are more than compatible with the view that this force had been left behind the main force, when the latter passed over the bridge in 480 B.C., though the words are generally interpreted (as Hdt.

perhaps understood them) as meaning
'retained after the rest of the forces, which had returned from Europe, were dismissed (like the Phoenicians!) to their own homes.'

11. ἑξ μυριάδες: 60,000 as the (nominal) strength of the corps d'armée in Ionia is an eminently luciferous item, and confirms other suggestions in regard to the organization of the Persian forces. This army, or corps d'armée, presumably comprises six Myriads, under six Myriarchs, perhaps five of infantry, and one of cavalry; and it exactly tallies, in number, with the army of Artabazos 8.
126 supra. Cp. Appendix II. § 5.

12. Τιγράνης. This Tigranes is the ἀνὴρ Ἀχαιμενίδης who one year before, if 7. 62 is to be trusted, was ἀρχὼν of the Medes. (Cp. also 8. 26.) He had still perhaps his Medes with him (but cp. 8. 113, and c. 31 supra). He is now ὁ τοῦ πεζοῦ στρατηγός, i.e. in supreme command of a corps d'armée, by promotion; he is killed in the ensuing action c. 102 supra. Hdt. himself takes no account of the previous mention, or mentions, of him (so independent is story of story, and source of source). In describing Tigranes as <ἀνὴρ> κάλλει καὶ μεγάθει ὑπερφέρων Περσέων Hdt. has also perhaps forgotten his own previous eulogy of Xerxes 7. 187 supra. ὑπερφέρειν: cp. 8. 138 supra.

15. ἔρυμα· κρησφύγετον: cp. c. 15
supra.

97. 1. ἀνήγοντο: middle, and so without τὰς νέας: cp. c. 96 ad iní.

2. τὸ τῶν Ποτινέων ἱρὸν. The term πότνια is found applied to many a goddess together with the name proper, cp. 8. 77
supra, but as here, absolutely, to Demeter and Kore only, Sophokl. O. K. 1050.
(The πότνια δεινώπες ib. 84 are plainly the Eumenides; but πότνια there is not absolute.) Perhaps, then, the temple here mentioned was dedicated to the Mother and Child; though it cannot be identical with the Δήμητρος Ἐλευσινή ἱρὸν, presently to be mentioned. There was an old Boiotian town named Ποτινία, Pausan. 9. 8. 1, between the Asopos and Thebes, where the Mother and the Maid were worshipped (with remarkable rites).
The passage in Pausanias is unfortunately corrupt, but the town-name may naturally be connected with this title of the goddesses in question. There would be nothing curious in finding a Boiotian title (i.e. a prae-Boiotian or old Ionian title from Boiotia) reproduced on Mykale; Mykale was the centre of the worship of Helikonian 'Potidan' (cp. 1. 148).

Γαίσωνά τε <ποταμὸν> καὶ Σκο-λοπόεντα. The Gaison was the stream on which Priene was situate, Ephoros Fr. 91 (= Athenaeus 311 E), apparently forming, or emptying into a lake, ἡ Γαίσωνις λίμνη,
between Priene and Miletos (Athen. l.c., Pliny 5. 31. 3 Gessus amnis). Rawlin-son, remarking that Hdt. "never introduces the name of a river without either calling it a river or prefixing the article," wants to make Gaison a town.

Σκολοπέεις does not occur elsewhere.
Many commentators (Schweighauser, Larcher, et al.) have taken it (as well as Gaison) for a river-name. Stein points καὶ Σκολοπόεντα, τῇ Δήμητρος Ἐλευσινίης ἱρόν, τὸ Φίλιστος

ὁ Πασικλέος ἰδρύσατο Νεῖλεω τῷ Κόδρου ἐπισπόμενος ἐπὶ 5 Μιλήτου κτιστύν, ἐνθαῦτα τὰς τε νέας ἀνείρυσαν καὶ περιεβάλλοντο ἔρκος καὶ λίθων καὶ ξύλων, δένδρεα ἐκκόψαντες ἡμερα, καὶ σκόλοπας περὶ τὸ ἔρκος κατέπηξαν, καὶ παρε-

3 ἐστὶ(ν) ἱρόν B 4 Πασικλῆος ≈ || νειλέω R(S)V || ἐπισπόμενον
α Marc. 5 κτιστύν R Marc. ≈ || τε om. Marc. || νῆας ≈ || περιεβάλλοντο S
6 καὶ ante λίθων om. S 7 παρὰ Marc. || κατέκοψαν R<sup>1</sup>

out that the name was derived from the σκόλοπες mentioned below; it is no doubt a place-name, marking the position of the Persian fortification. If so, the name must be later than 479 B.C., though Hdt. gives no hint thereof, and seems to imply that the name was as old as the foundation of Miletos.

3. Δήμητρος Ἐλευσινίης ἱρόν: an indirect omen, had the Greeks but known it, of the coming victory; cp. c. 101 infra.

τὸ Φίλιστος ὁ Πασικλέος ἰδρύσατο. Pasikles recurs at Athens (and elsewhere) as a personal name, in the fourth century B.C. and after. The father of Philistos is not otherwise celebrated. The name Φίλιστος recurs before the end of the fifth century B.C. as that of the Syracusan historian, who witnessed the siege of Syracuse (414–13 B.C.), Plutarch, Nik. 19.

4. Νεῖλεω τῷ Κόδρου: 5. 65 and 1. 147 incidentally confirm this founder, without actually mentioning his name; Νήλεος is, however, the form of the name apparently implied in 5. 65 (for the father of Nestor; it is not likely that the son of Kodros should have spelt his name differently). Marm. Par. 27 has Νε[λ]εὺς φέκ[ε] Μίλητον καὶ τῆν[ε] δ[α]λ[λ]η[ν] δ[ε]π[α]σ[α]ν Ἰωνίαν (anno 1087 B.C.). (F. Jacoby, ed. 1904, reads Νη[λ]εὺς.) Both forms obtain indifferently in mss. The grave of Neileus was to be seen on the road to Didymi, Pausan. 7. 2. 6. Kodros was the son of Melanthos (1. 147), of Pylian and 'Neleid' extraction (5. 65), king of Athens (5. 76), in which capacity he resisted the Dorian invasion successfully; the legend of Kodros and his 'devotion' is fully developed in Lykurgos, c. Leocrat. 84–87, and was probably, although Hdt. does not expressly mention it, at least as old as the age of Peisistratos, who claimed kinship with the Neleids and Melanthids; cp. 5. 65.

ἐπὶ Μιλήτου κτιστύν. This notice of the foundation of Miletos, and of the temple of Eleusinian Demeter, the former by Neileus, or Neleus, son of Kodros, the latter by his companion Philistos, son of Pasikles, is presumably taken from the work of some logographer on κτίσεις, κτίσεις, or κτιστύνες. Such a work was ascribed afterwards to one Kadmos of Miletos: ὅς πρῶτος κατὰ τινὰς ἐν-γραφὴν ἔγραψε καταλογάδην, μικρὸν νεώτερος Ὀρφῆως. συνέταξε δὲ κτίσιν Μιλήτου καὶ τῆς ὅλης Ἰωνίας ἐν βιβλίοις δ' (Suidas sub v.). To Charon of Lampasakos was also ascribed a work κτίσεις πόλεων ἐν βιβλίοις β'. (The reference to 'Books' shows that these works had been at least 'edited' much later than the dates of their ostensible authors; but then so were the ΛΟΓΟΙ of Hdt.) A sample of this kind of work, or of work founded thereon, may be seen in the accounts of the Ionian settlements, that of Neileus, or Neileus, at Miletos included, in Strabo 632–33 (citing 'Pherekydes') and Pausanias 7. 2.

The form κτιστύν belongs to a class of nouns common in Ionic prose, but confined in Attic to poetry; cp. Weir Smyth, Gk. Dialects (Ionic) § 497. 1, viz. nouns terminating in -ρύς. The list given by Smyth may be supplemented from Baezel's note in l. (after Valckenaer). Hdt. 5. 6 has ληιστύν, 4. 75 καταπλαστύν.

6. ἔρκος καὶ λίθων καὶ ξύλων: some emphasis is lent to λίθων by the form of conjunction καί—καί. The τεύχος of Mardonios on the Asopos (c. 15 supra) had probably no stones; here they would be easily procurable from Mykale and the seashore. ἔρκος, as in 6. 134, or c. 99 infra; differently 7. 85 supra.

δένδρεα ἐκκόψαντες ἡμερα: this was distinctly 'an unfriendly act' (cp. c. 15 supra), the rather in this case as Mykale was well-wooded (δρος εὐθῆρον καὶ εὐδενδρὸν Strabo 636).

7. σκόλοπας, 'stakes,' 'pales'; very common for this purpose in Homer, Il.

σκευάδατο ὡς πολιορκησόμενοι καὶ ὡς νικήσοντες· [ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα ἐπιλεγόμενοι γὰρ παρεσκευάζοντο.]

Οἱ δὲ Ἕλληνες ὡς ἐπύθοντο οἰχωκότας τοὺς βαρβάρους 98 ἐς τὴν ἡπειρον, ἤχθοντο ὡς ἐκπεφυγόντων ἀπορίῃ τε εἶχοντο ὅ τι ποιέωσι, εἴτε ἀπαλλάσσονται ὀπίσω εἴτε καταπλέωσι ἐπ' Ἑλλησπόντου. τέλος δ' ἔδοξε τούτων μὲν μηδέτερα ποιέειν, ἐπιπλέειν δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν ἡπειρον. παρασκευασάμενοι ὦν ἐς 5 ναυμαχίην καὶ ἀποβάθρας καὶ ἄλλα ὅσων ἔδεε, ἔπλεον ἐπὶ -ῆς Μυκάλης. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀγχοῦ τε ἐγίνοντο τοῦ στρατοπέδου

8 glossema delebam: amplius emendavit Stein<sup>5</sup>, hoc scilicet modo: ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα γὰρ ἐπιλεγόμενοι παρεσκευάζοντο καὶ ὡς πολιορκησόμενοι καὶ ὡς νικήσοντες: καὶ ὡς . . παρεσκευάζοντο del. Krueger; γὰρ παρεσκευάζοντο del. Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα ἐπιλεγόμενα AC: ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα ἐπιλεγόμενοι ceteri 9 παρεσκευάδατο z 98. 2 ἐν (ἀπορίῃ) B, Holder, van H. || ἤχοντο R 3 ὅ om. B: τι om. Marc. || ἀπαλλάσσονται Marc. 4 δὲ R(S)V, Holder || τουτέων z || μὲν: δὲ R || μηδ' ἕτερα R 6 τὰ ἄλλα B, Holder || ὅσον R || ἔπλεον R Marc.: ἔπλεον van H. || ἐπὶ τὴν Μυκάλην vel ἐπὶ Μυκάλης malit Kallenberg 7 μυκάλλης S || ἐπέιτε δὲ vel ἐπεὶ δὲ δὴ? van H.

8. 343, 15. 1 (διὰ τε σκόλοπας καὶ τάφρον ἐβησαν), Oid. 7. 44 τείχεα μακρὰ ὑψηλά, σκολόπεσσιν ἀρηρότα. Cp. l. 3 supra.

παρεσκευάδατο: the temporal force can hardly be insisted on in this pluperfect. The passage is, however, corrupt, and Stein's later emendation would eliminate this word and leave παρεσκευάζοντο (less forcible). Cp. App. Crit. I prefer to regard ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα . . παρεσκευάζοντο as the gloss: the Persians were not prepared for an alternative (ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα), nor is a true alternative presented; they wish to stand a siege, and to issue therefrom victorious. The glossator has misunderstood the situation. The resolution of the Persian admirals to stand a siege can hardly be explained except by their distrust of the (Ionian) forces under their command, and also by the absence of the corps d'armée, and their expectation that it would come to their relief. They had, of course, under their command, the Medo-Persian Epibatai, 8. 130 supra.

9. ἐπιλεγόμενοι, if it stands, may be interpreted by ἐπιλεξάμενος, not in 8. 136 but in 5. 30.

98. 2. ἤχθοντο ὡς ἐκπεφυγόντων: sc. τῶν βαρβάρων. The construction is not quite regular; cp. 8. 109 ἐκπεφυγόντων περιημέτεον.

ἀπορίῃ τε εἶχοντο ὅ τι ποιέωσι, 'were in doubt (at a loss) what to do'; the agendum is conceived of as future, the antecedent imperfect notwithstanding, hence the subjunctives. Three courses were open to them: (i.) to return to Delos, (ii.) to steer for the Hellespont, (iii.) to follow the Persians to the mainland at Mykale. The first is merely a logical alternative; the second might have drawn the Persian fleet after them, but was obviously rather speculative. The third course was under the circumstances the obvious one to take, and hardly required very much deliberation, especially if, as appears, they were still counting upon a sea-engagement. The ἐπίπλοος is distinctly militant and hostile: ἐπὶ τὴν ἡπειρον. The actual πλοος is merely geographical, ἐπὶ τῆς Μυκάλης.

6. ἀποβάθραι reappear in Thuc. 4. 12. 1 as 'landing-gangways'; here they must have been intended in the first instance for boarding the Persian ships.

7. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀγχοῦ τε . . καὶ οὐδαίς . . : a common form of parataxis; cp. 8. 37. ἐπαναγόμενος, 'putting out to sea against them,' παρακεκρίμενος, cp. 8. 70. 2: in acie stantem, Baehr. ἐγχορέψας, a not uncommon word with Hdt. and elsewhere transitive; cp. 2. 60 τὴν βάρην τῇ γῇ, also 2. 93, 3. 85, 4. 113.

καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐφαίνετό σφι ἐπαναγόμενος, ἀλλ' ὄρων νέας ἀνελκυσμένας ἔσω τοῦ τείχεος, πολλὸν δὲ πεζὸν παρακεκρυμένον 10 παρὰ τὸν αἰγιαλόν, ἐνθαῦτα πρῶτον μὲν ἐν τῇ νῇ παραπλέων, ἐγχερίμψας τῷ αἰγιαλῷ τὰ μάλιστα, Λευτυχίδης ὑπὸ κήρυκος προηγόρευε τοῖσι Ἴωσι λέγων "ἄνδρες Ἴωνες, ὅσοι ὑμῶν τυγχάνουσι ἐπακούοντες, μάθετε τὰ λέγω· πάντως γὰρ οὐδὲν 15 συνήσουσι Πέρσαι τῶν ἐγὼ ὑμῖν ἐντέλλομαι. ἐπεὰν συμμίμετὰ δὲ τοῦ συνθήματος Ἡβης. καὶ τὰδε ἴστω καὶ ὁ μὴ ἀκούσας ὑμῶν πρὸς τοῦ ἀκούσαντος." [ὧτος δὲ οὗτος ἐὼν τυγχάνει νόος τοῦ πρήγματος καὶ ὁ Θεμιστοκλέος ὁ ἐπ']

8 σφιν ἐφαίνετο B: ἐγένετό σφι Marc. || νῆας z 9 παρακεκρυ-
 μένον S 11 ἐγχερίμψας Cz || ταμάλιστα Pz 12 ὅσοι B, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: οἱ 13 μάθε R || πάντες Marc. 14 συμμιμῶμεν RSV 15 πάντων om. Ask. 16 Ἡρης Roscher, Holder 17
 ἐσακούσας αC: ἐπακούσας Bekker, Holder, van H. || ἐπακούσαντος B,
 Holder, van H. || ὧτος . . Ἑλλησι secl. Krueger, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || οὗτος: τούτου coni. Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 18 τυγχάνει: ἐτύγχανε requir. Krueger, van H.
 || πρήγματος: ῥήματος aut κηρύγματος? Stein || ὁ om. R || Θεμιστοκλῆος z

11. ὑπὸ κήρυκος, 'by the voice of a herald,' instrumental; but not quite parallel with ὑπὸ μαστίγων 7. 22, 56.

12. τοῖσι Ἴωσι, who probably furnished and manned the major part, if not the whole, of the Persian fleet on this occasion, the Epibatai excepted; cp. c. 97 supra.

14. ἐπεὰν συμμίμωμεν: Hdt. characteristically makes nothing of the determination of the Greeks to effect a landing. They had advanced against the mainland only in the expectation of fighting a ναυμαχίη. The resolution to force a landing in the actual presence of a hostile force, in possession of the shore, is far more remarkable. This was more than the Persians themselves had attempted at Marathon, and certainly more than they could have effected. The Persians at Mykale were in a position to dispute the attempted landing of the Greeks (cp. the situation at Pylos in 425 B.C., Thucyd. 4. 11 ff.), and their failure to do so is best explained by their distrust of the Ionians. συμμιμῶμεν, as in 8. 22. 12, 4. 127, 6. 14, etc., of hostile encounter.

15. τινὰ χρῆ: cp. 8. 109. 19 καὶ τις οἰκίην κτλ.

16. τοῦ συνθήματος Ἡβης: σύνθημα is any preconceived signal (cp. 8. 7. 10), or even the mere prearrangement itself (cp.

5. 75 ἀπὸ συνθήματος, 6. 121 ἐκ σ.). Here it is the 'password' ('Ἡβης in apposition). Why Ἡβη should have been the mot d'ordre is not self-evident: there was no apparent local association to suggest it, but it need not be changed into Ἡρης, out of compliment to the Samians. Hebe is, indeed, in attendance upon Here, Iliad 5. 721 f., and on Ares, ib. 905, and in Hesiod, Theog. 922, 952, is daughter of Zeus and Here (and sister of Ares). Moreover, she is the bride of Herakles in heaven, Od. 11. 603, and so might well have charms for a Herakleid on earth. μετὰ δέ is, of course, adverbial: the genitives are regular, with μεμνήσθαι, cp. 8. 62. 9 (but the accus. is found 7. 18. 9, 10).

τὰδε ἴστω καὶ ὁ μὴ ἀκούσας ὑμῶν: there is something of the nature of an Irish 'bull' in this imperative; but Leotyichidas means ὁ ἀκούσας, not ὁ μὴ ἀκούσας, to act on the suggestion, and to pass the word.

17. ὧτος δὲ . . τοῖσι Ἑλλησι. The passage is clumsy in expression, and particular words are scarcely correct. Stein<sup>3</sup> now brackets the whole as a gloss, or imitation of 8. 22 supra; presumably after Krueger.

18. νόος: cp. 7. 162 and c. 120 infra, notwithstanding which, the co-ordina-

Ἄρτεμισίῳ· ἥ γὰρ δὴ λαθόντα τὰ ῥήματα τοὺς βαρβάρους ἔμελλε τοὺς Ἴωνας πείσειν, ἥ ἔπειτα ἀνενειχθέντα ἐς τοὺς 20 βαρβάρους ποιήσειν ἀπίστους τοῖσι Ἕλλησι.]

Λευτυχίδεω δὲ ταῦτα ὑποθεμένου δεύτερα δὴ τάδε ἐποίουν 99 οἱ Ἕλληνες· προσσχόντες τὰς νέας ἀπέβησαν ἐς τὸν αἰγιαλόν. καὶ οὗτοι μὲν ἐτάσσοντο, οἱ δὲ Πέρσαι ὥς εἶδον τοὺς Ἕλληνας παρασκευαζομένους ἐς μάχην καὶ τοῖσι Ἴωσι παραινέσαντας, τοῦτο μὲν ὑπονοήσαντες τοὺς Σαμίους τὰ Ἑλλήνων φρονέειν 5 ἀπαιρέονται τὰ ὄπλα. οἱ γὰρ ὦν Σάμιοι ἀπικομένων Ἀθηναίων αἰχμαλώτων ἐν τῇσι νηυσὶ τῶν βαρβάρων, τοὺς ἔλαβον ἀνὰ

20 ἐπέτε Β, Koen: del. Krueger: ἐκείθεν? Stein<sup>12</sup> || ἀνενειχθέντα: ἀνενειχθῆ Koen 21 τοῖσι Ἕλλησι secl. Abicht, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder 99. 1 λεωτυχίδεω α || δὴ om. z 2 προσσχόντες RP Marc. z || τὰς νῆας z: del. van H. 6 ὦν: ἂν R

tion here of νόος τοῦ πρήγματος or κηρύγματος and ὁ Θεμιστοκλέος (νόος) is a little maignie. So, too, ἔπειτα ἀνενειχθέντα as a reproduction of ἐπέτε ἀνενειχθῆ 8. 22 is poor, and ἀπίστους active, for the passive there, very suspicious. τυγχάνει should be ἐτύχανε (Krueger). οὗτος might better be τούτου. Cp. App. Crit.; prodit interpolatorem sermonis imperitia, van H.

99. 1. ταῦτα ὑποθεμένου: cum hocce consilium dedisset, Bachr.

Δεύτερα δὴ seems de trop, but serves to separate the action of the Hellenes from the suggestions of Leotychidas.

2. προσσχόντες τὰς νέας ἀπέβησαν ἐς τ. αἴγ. Hdt. records this remarkable operation without apparently the slightest apprehension of its military magnitude or significance. To debark on the shore in the presence of an army numerically superior (even if the ἐξ μυριάδων of c. 96 were not within hail), and in possession of a fortified camp, was surely a very brilliant achievement. Hdt. seems to regard it as something quite en règle, and keeps the Persians quietly looking on, as if they could never think of attempting to interfere. The inactivity of the Persians at this point is inexplicable except on the supposition that they despaired of the Ionians.

3. ὥς εἶδον . . παρασκευαζομένους . . παραινέσαντας: there is a double awkwardness in the sentence, the zeugma in εἶδον, and the hystero-proteron in the order of the participles, only partially corrected by the difference of tense. 'On seeing the Hellenes making them ready to battle (after landing), and that they had addressed an appeal to the Ionians (before landing), the Persians took two precautions.'

5. τοῦτο μὲν. 'In the first place' they disarm the Samians on a suspicion of Hellenic leanings. The suspicion is indeed an old one, for it is based upon an act of the previous winter, or autumn: and does the ὅπλων ἀπαίσεις only take place now, at this point, after the landing of the Greeks at Mykale? ὑπονοέειν: c. 88 supra. τὰ Ἑλ. φρονέειν: cp. 7. 102 supra.

6. οἱ γὰρ ὦν Σάμιοι κτλ. This memorable little digression records a service of the Samians to Athens, which must have taken place months before. The king's ships had reached Samos in the previous autumn, 8. 130 supra; the Samians had redeemed 500 Attic prisoners, and had sent them home to Athens (ex hypothesi reoccupied) after duly providing them for the journey, or voyage (ἐποδιάσαντες).

This note is somewhat startling. It presupposes an open sea between Samos and Athens. Had the 500 Athenians accompanied the Samian ambassadors in c. 90 supra, or preceded them? Such a pledge of good-will comes in for scant appreciation! There is doubtless some truth in the anecdote; but is it correctly chronologized? Were these Athenian prisoners liberated before the arrival of the Hellenes in Samos, c. 96 supra? Were they really redeemed, or had they been sold into slavery, in Samos, and liberated on the approach, or arrival of the Greek fleet?

τὴν Ἀττικὴν λελειμμένους οἱ Ξέρξεω, τούτους λυσάμενοι
 πάντας ἀποπέμπουσι ἐποδιάσαντες ἐς Ἀθήνας· τῶν εἵνεκεν 10 οὐκ ἦκιστα ὑποψίην εἶχον, πεντακοσίας κεφαλὰς τῶν Ξέρξεω πολεμίων λυσάμενοι. τοῦτο δὲ τὰς διόδους τὰς ἐς τὰς κορυφὰς τῆς Μυκάλης φερούσας προστάσσουσι τοῖσι Μιλησίοισι φυ-λάσσειν ὥς ἐπισταμένοισι δῆθεν μάλιστα τὴν χώραν· ἐποίουν δὲ τοῦτο <τοῦδε> εἵνεκεν, ἵνα ἐκτὸς τοῦ στρατοπέδου ἔωσι.
 15 τούτους μὲν Ἰώνων, τοῖσι καὶ κατεδόκεον νεοχμὸν ἄν τι ποιέειν δυνάμιος ἐπιλαβομένοισι, τρόποισι τοιούτοις προεφυλάσσοντο οἱ Πέρσαι, αὐτοὶ δὲ συνεφόρησαν τὰ γέρρα ἔρκος εἶναι σφίσι.

8 οἱ: ὑπὸ B      9 ἐς τὰς Sz      10 ἔχον z      11 ἐς κορυφὰς z
 12 μυκάλλης S      13 ἐποίουν . . ἔωσι del. Gomperz      14 τοῦτο τοῦδε Krueger, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: τούτου      15 καὶ om. R ||
 νεοχμὸν C      17 γέρα S || σφίσι Stein, Holder, van H.: σφί(ν)

10. ὑποψίην εἶχον, 'were suspected. . .'
 objects of suspicion; cp. αἰτίην εἶχον
 5. 70, etc.

11. τοῦτο δέ. The second precaution taken by the Persians is the removal of the Milesians from the camp, on the plea that they are best qualified to guard the passes on Mykale. Precaution and plea are perplexing. The charge of the passes over Mykale interposes a suspected force between the Persians and Sardes, and the camp between that force and Miletos. Are the facts or the motives here rightly reported? If there were no Milesians in the Persian camp at Mykale, was it because the Persians had dismissed them? Or were there 'Milesians' and 'Milesians'? If the Persians entrusted to Milesians the guard of the passes, that would rather point to a confidence in their loyalty!
 And who are these Milesians? According to 6. 19 f. the Milesians had been annihilated and the remnant expatriated in 494 B.C., i.e. fifteen years previously;
 their places had been taken by Persians
 and Karians, the former as landlords, the latter as labourers. Was there already a new agrarian question in Miletos (cp. 5. 29)? Or is the situation of 494 B.C. grossly exaggerated? In any case it is significant of Hdt.'s methods that he betrays no misgiving on this point. Possibly when he first composed this passage he was unacquainted with the story told in 6. 19, or at least had not incorporated it in his own work—the last three Books being of earlier composition.

τὰς διόδους τὰς ἐς τὰς κορυφὰς . .
 φερούσας: the occupation of these passes might be for the purpose of preventing the Greeks from attacking the camp in the rear, or to obtain touch with Ephesos and the road to Sardes, in case a retreat became necessary.

Mykale (as seen from the south on a fine April morning) is a grand mountain range, culminating in twin κορυφαί, east and west (4130 ft. and 3966 ft. in height respectively), with a gentle slope down to the western point, where the promontory becomes involved in the outline of Samos.

15. τοῖσι καὶ κατεδόκεον. This dative is puzzling. The normal construction is with accus. and infinitive. Valckenaer wished to insert ἐνέον. Baehr takes δοκέειν = existimare, κατὰ in comp. contra aliquem, the dative being constructed with verbs compounded with κατὰ (though never anywhere else with κατα-δοκέειν). Stein explains the dative as used by analogy with συνειδέναι (and compares κατακρίνειν τινί τι 2. 133, 17.
 146. 6). Kuehner, Gr. Gr. § 568. 1, ap.
 Baehr renders: sic gläubten bei ihnen,
dass sie Neuerungen machten. νεοχμὸν:
 cp. c. 104. 7 infra, νεοχμῶν 4. 201, 5. 19.

16. δυνάμιος ἐπιλαβομένοισι. "if occasion offered," Rawlinson; "if they found the occasion," Macaulay. δυνάμιος as 'potentiality,' possibility, is remarkable in Hdt. The participle is here conditional. With the phrase cp. προ-φάσιος ἐπιλαβέσθαι 3. 36, 6. 49; also Plato Rep. 360 D εἰ τις τοιαύτης ἐξουσίας
ἐπιλαβόμενος κτλ.

᾽Ως δὲ ἄρα παρεσκεύαστο τοῖσι Ἑλλήσι, προσήισαν πρὸς 100
τοὺς βαρβάρους· ἰοῦσι δὲ σφι φήμη τε ἐσέπτато ἐς τὸ στρατόπεδον πᾶν καὶ κηρυκῆιον ἐφάνη ἐπὶ τῆς κυματώγης

100. 1 παρεσκεύαστο Reiske, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: παρεσκενάδατο || προσή-ισαν BParis. 1635 z: προσείσαν S: προσείσαν Marc. 3 κηρύκιον CP

προεφυλάσσοντο, 'took precautions against beforehand,' cp. 7. 176 supra; in the active more naturally of place, (νέα) τὴν προφυλάσσουσιν ἐπὶ Σκιάθῳ 8. 92 supra.

17. αὐτοὶ δὲ . . σφίσι. The exact relation of this ἔρκος of γέρρα to the ἔρκος καὶ λίθων καὶ ξύλων in c. 97 supra is problematical. The former is the fortified camp, from which all suspicious characters have been removed (or rendered innocuous); the 'rampart of shields' actually reappears in c. 102 infra; and we may suppose that here the Persians are drawn up, outside their camp, and have fixed their shields in the ground to act as a screen; but if they have advanced out beyond their fortified camp, all the more inexplicable does it appear that they should have allowed the Greeks to effect a landing without dispute, while the Greeks at their leisure landed, and drew up in battle-array, and then advanced to the attack.

On the γέρρα cp. c. 61 supra.

100. 2. φήμη τε ἐσέπτατο . . καὶ κηρυκῆιον ἐφάνη. The Fama is plainly in Hdt.'s belief supernatural, as he explains; of the κηρυκῆιον, a more material τεκμήριον, he takes no further account. What became of this κηρυκῆιον? How many persons saw it? Was it the supernatural bearer of the supernatural message? Alas! that so much should be made of the impalpable φήμη and nothing said of the subsequent history of the ocular sign! This omission is a weak spot in the story, in the argument; and nowadays, in a world of telepathy, crystal-gazing, subliminal selves, and other scientific enchantments, which explain the φήμη to perfection, one is bound to take cognisance of the total disappearance of the material evidence.

A φήμη which Hdt. treats as in no way supernatural had run right through the medizing Greek army in Boiotia a few weeks before, cp. c. 17 supra; it had proved a fraud; had it turned out to be true, it might have been regarded as divine.

Diodoros 11. 35 (Ephoros), cp. Polyain. 1. 33, completely rationalizes the story of this φήμη, regarding it as a ruse by Leotychidas; Larcher and Thirlwall approve. A somewhat similar case was the fraud of Agesilaos in 394 B.C., which no doubt helped him to win the battle of Koroneia (Xenoph. Hell. 4. 3. 10-14), when he announced the defeat of the Lakedaimonian fleet off Knidos to his army as a victory; but he had received actual despatches, and had no need to pretend a synchronism. If a few days' interval occurred between the victory in Boiotia and the victory in Ionia the φήμη is simple enough. If there was a real synchronism between the battles of Platais and Mykale, then one of three or four alternatives can alone be true: either (a) the φήμη was a fraud, a ruse, a γενναῖον ψεῦδος at the moment, which afterwards proved to be true to fact; or (b) it was in truth supernatural, supernormal, whether you explain it by direct divine interposition or by abnormally heightened human feeling; or (c) thirdly, it is an element of afterthought, a product of tradition, an embellishment of the facts, possibly traceable to excited hopes and feelings of the actual day, but without the adequate or full basis of fact asserted by the pious tradition. There is so much of this kind of thing in the story of the war that it does not appear unreasonable to ascribe the φήμη motif, though it rings out more precisely and positively than any other, to the same creative faculty. There was some Homeric precedent for it, though the word φήμη does not occur in the Iliad at all (pace Aischines § 141, cp. D. B. Monro, Odyssey XIII.-XXIV. p. 427), for the δοσσα ἐκ Διὸς (Od. 1. 282) is its precursor. The word εἰσέπτατο occurs Il. 21. 494 of the flight of a bird, to which is likened the motion of a goddess (Artemis).

κείμενον· ἡ δὲ φήμη διήλθε σφι ὧδε, ὡς οἱ Ἕλληνες τὴν
 5 Μαρδονίου στρατιὴν νικῶεν ἐν Βοιωτοῖσι μαχόμενοι. δῆλα δὲ πολλοῖσι τεκμηρίοις ἐστὶ τὰ θεῖα τῶν πρηγμάτων, εἰ καὶ τότε, τῆς αὐτῆς ἡμέρης συμπιπτούσης τοῦ τε ἐν Πλαταίῃσι
 καὶ τοῦ ἐν Μυκάλῃ μέλλοντος ἔσεσθαι τρώματος, φήμη τοῖσι
 10 Ἕλλησι τοῖσι ταύτῃ ἐσαπρίκετο, ὥστε θαρσῆσαι τε τὴν 101 καὶ τότε ἕτερον συνέπεσε γενόμενον, Δήμητρος τεμένεα Ἐλευσινίης παρὰ ἀμφοτέρας τὰς συμβολὰς εἶναι· καὶ γὰρ δὴ ἐν

4 διδε CP: ἦδε? Krueger 5 δὲ B 7 αὐτῆς del. Krueger
 || συμπίπτοντος Reiske, van H., Stein<sup>3</sup> || τε: τ' R(S)V || πλαταίῃσι α:
 πλαταίῃσι R(S)V 8 μυκάλῃ S || φήμη δὲ B 9 τοῖσι om.
 Marc. 101. 2 παρὰ: 'expectes παρὰ Δήμητρος κτέ?' van H.: πάρα
 Dobree

4. ἡ δὲ φ. διήλθε σφι ὧδε: sc. τὸ στρατόπεδον. The exact terms of the φήμη are very nearly identical with the message (ἀγγελίῃ) which had reached the Greeks at the Heraion in front of Plataia that same day, ὅτι μάχῃ τε
γέγονε καὶ νικῶεν οἱ μετὰ Πανσανίω c.
 69 supra. The imperf. pres. νικῶεν here of the facti accompli (cp. γεγονέναι νικῆν
 c. 101 infra) is remarkable; Xenoph.
Hell. 4. 3. 1 has νικῶεν (but 4. 3. 10 ὅτι ἡττημένοι εἰεν); Stein compares νικᾶν in
 c. 48 supra, and interprets 'are victors' (Sieger seien). The use of νικᾶν there absolutely is easier than νικῶεν here with a direct object. Might it be one of Hdt.'s imperfects, of an action the result of which is abiding, or continuous?
 The passage in Xenophon shows that we need not read νενικῶεν here. ἐν Βοιωτοῖσι is purely geographical.

5. δῆλα δὲ . . τὰ θεῖα τῶν πρηγμάτων:
 "many things prove to me that the gods
 take part in the affairs of men," Rawlin-son; "now by many signs is the divine power seen in earthly things," Macaulay.
 But the passage involves a classification of 'things,' into τὰ θεῖα and τὰ μὴ θεῖα, rather than the general assertion of the existence of "a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we will." Cp.
 c. 65 supra. Hdt. is here a 'dualist':
 far from the formula of Thales, πάντα πλήρη θεῶν, but close to 'common sense,'
 or 'popular philosophy,' as we know it.
 Hdt.'s argument is not very closely expressed; the particular instance (εἰ καὶ τότε) cannot prove the general (πολλοῖσι τεκμηρίοις). But the formal statement here is not the real statement.

The true predicate lies in τὰ θεῖα: what is plain, by many infallible proofs, among them par exemple the particular case quoted, is the fact that some things are θεῖα, that 'miracles do happen'— though, of course, most happenings are quite ordinary and natural. (There are even degrees in the class, cp. 7. 137
 τοῦτό μοι ἐν τοῖσι θεῖοτατον φαίνεται γενέσθαι, 8. 65 θεῖον τὸ φθεγγόμενον, 8. 94 θεῖον τὸ πρήγμα.) Cp. Introduction, § 11.

7. τῆς αὐτῆς ἡμέρης συμπιπτούσης:
 the expression is somewhat clumsy—a day cannot coincide with itself—but the meaning is plain: the day, or date, of the action at Plataia and the date of the action just about to take place at Mykale was identically the same; but it was 'the actions,' not 'the day,' which coincided. συμπίπτοντος or συμπιπτόντων would certainly be clearer (cp. App. Crit.): but is Hdt. always quite clear in thought or expression? τρώμα:
 cp. c. 90 supra. ταύτῃ: sc. ἐν Μυκάλῃ.

101. 1. τότε ἕτερον συνέπεσε γενό-μενον, 'a second coincidence occurred as follows.' The expression again is not quite accurate: it takes two items to make a coincidence, and only one item is here expressed. Again, the coincident 'occurrences' are the 'existence' of two shrines of Demeter, one at Plataia and one at Mykale; but, strictly speaking, the existence of the shrines is not the occurrence, but rather the battles by the shrines.

2. συμβολάς, of 'hostile meeting,' as in 4. 159, 6. 120, 7. 210, etc.

τῇ Πλαταιίδι παρ' αὐτὸ τὸ Δημήτριον ἐγίνετο, ὡς καὶ πρότερόν μοι εἴρηται, ἡ μάχη, καὶ ἐν Μυκάλῃ ἔμελλε ὡσαύτως ἔσεσθαι. γεγονέναι δὲ νίκην τῶν μετὰ Πausanίῳ Ἑλλήνων 5
ὁρθῶς σφι ἡ φήμη συνέβαινε ἐλθοῦσα· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἐν Πλαταιῇσι <τρώμα> πρῶτ' ἔτι τῆς ἡμέρης ἐγίνετο, τὸ δὲ ἐν Μυκάλῃ περὶ δελίν. ὅτι δὲ τῆς αὐτῆς ἡμέρης συνέβαινε γίνεσθαι μὴνός τε τοῦ αὐτοῦ, χρόνῳ οὐ πολλῷ σφι ὕστερον δῆλα ἀναμανθάνουσι ἐγίνετο. ἦν δὲ ἀρρωδὴ σφι, πρὶν τὴν 10
φήμην ἐσαπικέσθαι, οὐτὶ περὶ σφέων αὐτῶν οὕτω ὡς τῶν

3 ἐγένετο P Marc.: οὐδ' ἐγένετο z 4 εἴρητο P || μυκάλῃ S ||
ἔσεσθαι ὡσαύτως B 7 πλαταίῃ B || <τρώμα> Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 3, van H.
8 μυκάλῃ S 9 μὴνός τε τοῦ αὐτοῦ suspecta habeo 10 πρηνή
R(S)V: πρὶν ἢ Holder, van H. 11 αὐτέων z || τῶν Ἑλλήνων: τῶν
ἐκεῖ Ἑλλήνων conī. Stein<sup>1</sup>: τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων Krueger, Stein<sup>(2)</sup>, van H.

3. ὡς καὶ πρότερόν μοι εἴρηται: a definite cross-reference back to cc. 57, 62, 65 supra.

5. γεγονέναι δὲ νίκην: this appears as equivalent to νικῶν c. 100 supra; cp. also c. 69 supra.

6. ὁρθῶς σφι ἡ φήμη συνέβαινε ἐλθοῦσα, 'the rumour which (had) reached them turned out to be true,' or 'they discovered the truth of the rumour which had reached them.' The exact force of συνέβαινε here is disputable: its repetition just below, and in a slightly different sense, is by no means un-Herodotean.

7. πρῶτ' ἔτι τῆς ἡμέρης. The adv. πρῶτ' is not found elsewhere in Hdt. Homer (Il. 8. 530 etc.), Xenophon (Hell. 1. 1. 30 ἐκάστης ἡμέρας πρῶ καὶ πρὸς ἐσπέραν) and other good writers use it = mane, explained by Theophrastus Fr. 6. 1. 9 as the forenoon, from ἀνατολή to μεσημβρία. But it is also used more generally, cp. Thuc. 4. 6. 1, etc. ἔτι is not = hδῃ but used with comparative force.

8. περὶ δελίν, 'about evening,' cp. 8. 6, 9, a passage which proves that the term admits of degrees. Here, in opposition to πρῶτ', it may mean merely p.m.

8. ὅτι δὲ τῆς αὐτῆς ἡμέρης συνέβαινε γίνεσθαι. Hdt.'s predication again is not quite clear. The grammatical subject of συνέβαινε may be τὸ ἐν Μυκάλῃ (sc. τρώμα), or the two (sc. ἀμφότερα, or τὰ τρώματα), δῆλα perhaps favouring this view: συνέβαινε γίνεσθαι is, however, a simple and constant form for an occurrence, or event, taking place.

9. μὴνός τε τοῦ αὐτοῦ is a very frigid addition. Or would Hdt., then, have regarded it as possible for two events to take place on the same day in different months? But it is a thousand pities that he did not happen to give us the Attic date, by month, and day of the month, for the victory. If it had taken place in Boëdromion, and about the time of the Eleusinia, would not tradition have more clearly emphasized the festive date?

The actual and precise day is given by Plutarch Aristeid. 19 as Boëdromion 4 = Panemos 27, but in Camillus 19 and Mor. 349 F as Boëdromion 3 < = Panemos 26 >, a curious discrepancy. In any case the date may be that of the Charisteria, not of the battle. Hdt.'s data do not enable us to fix the date of the final battle at Plataia with precision. Busolt, Gr. Gesch. ii.<sup>2</sup> (1895) 726, 742, places Plataia 'at the beginning of August,' and Mykale 'about the middle of August,' denying the synchronism. I should be inclined to admit the synchronism, or an approximate synchronism, and to place the battles somewhat later, early in September; cp. Appendix VII. § 6, VIII. § 2 (i.). The fact that other striking synchronisms are less trustworthy, cp. 7. 166 supra, does not entirely discredit this one. What is damaging to Hdt.'s credit as historian is the insistence on the synchronism, as a mere wonder, to the complete exclusion of its significance from a strategic point of view.

11. οὐτὶ περὶ σφέων αὐτῶν: this generous self-oblivion might at least attest the sense that strategically the

Ἑλλήνων, μὴ περὶ Μαρδονίῳ πταίσῃ ἢ Ἑλλάς. ὥς μέντοι ἢ κληδὼν αὐτῇ σφί ἐσέπτατο, μᾶλλον τι καὶ ταχύτερον τὴν πρόσσodon ἐποיעύντο. οἱ μὲν δὴ Ἑλληνες καὶ οἱ βάρβαροι 15 ἔσπευδον ἐς τὴν μάχην, ὥς σφί καὶ αἱ νῆσοι καὶ ὁ Ἑλλησποντος ἀέθλα προέκειτο.

102 Τοῖσι μὲν νυν Ἀθηναίοισι καὶ τοῖσι προσεχέσι τούτοις τεταγμένοις, μέχρι κου τῶν ἡμίσεων, ἢ ὁδὸς ἐγίνετο κατ' αἰγιαλὸν τε καὶ ἀπέδον χώρον, τοῖσι δὲ Λακεδαιμονίοισι καὶ τοῖσι ἐπεξῆς τούτοις τεταγμένοις κατὰ τε χαράδραν καὶ 5 ὄρεα. ἐν ᾧ δὲ οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι περιήσαν, οὗτοι οἱ ἐπὶ τῷ

13 κληδὼν z: κληδὼν Merzdorf || σφί: τοι Marc. || τι: τοι Marc.
14 Cf. comment. infra 102. 2 κου: κατὰ Paris. 1635 z || ἡμίσεων Cz: ἡμίσεων || ἢ om. CS 3 δὲ om. C 4 χαράδραν C: χαράδρην Pz 5 ὄρεα CP Marc. z, van H.

decisive blow in this campaign could not be struck by the fleet, nor could a check, or even a disaster to the fleet, matter so much. περὶ is used with the genitive similarly 8. 86 σφέων αὐτῶν περὶ ἐφρόντιζον. For ἀρρεσθῆ cp. ibid.

τῶν Ἑλλήνων, 'the Greeks at home'—ἢ Ἑλλάς includes themselves.

12. μὴ περὶ Μαρδονίῳ πταίσῃ ἢ Ἑλλάς: with the dative περὶ has primarily a locative force, and does not lose it even when locality ceases to be the prominent interest; the metaphor here (πταίσῃ) may be of shipwreck, but πρός is the preposition more generally in use. Cp. Plato, Rep. 553 B ἔπειτα αὐτὸν ἰδὼν ἐξαίφνης πταίσαντα ὥσπερ πρὸς ἔρματι πρὸς τῇ πόλει. The wrecking of Hellas on Mardonios might have been accomplished by battle, or by bribery, cp. c. 2 supra.

13. ἢ κληδὼν: cp. c. 91 supra; here the word = ἡ φήμη, cp. c. 100 supra.

ταχύτερον: θάσσον is not found in Hdt., nor ταχύτατα.

τὴν πρόσσodon, of a hostile advance, advance to the attack, as in 7. 223 (differently 6. 46). There is predicative force in the position of αὐτῇ.

14. καὶ οἱ βάρβαροι ἔσπευδον: this assertion is of something quite new; hitherto the barbarians have not been anxious to fight. Now, however, they have drawn the Greeks to land, they have a fortified camp behind them, they have a corps d'armée somewhere about, if c. 96 supra is to be trusted, and they have apparently advanced and fixed their γέφυρα as a ἐρκος before them (c. 99 supra); they still remained on the defensive though eager for the fray. Is the text here correct? Nothing corresponds to οἱ μὲν δὴ Ἑλληνες—οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι with a contrasted verb to ἔσπευδον might originally have concluded the chapter.

15. ὥς σφί καὶ αἱ νῆσοι καὶ ὁ Ἑλλησποντος ἀέθλα προέκειτο, 'inasmuch as (seeing that) the islands and the Hellespont were the prizes at stake for them.' ὥς . . προέκειτο is remarkable: ὥς = ἐπει (one might have expected ὥς with participle, gen. abs.).

The Greeks and Persians at Mykale could hardly have taken this view of the case unless they had been already acquainted with the defeat of Mardonios. Were the Persians equally informed, by the φήμη, or by an ἀγγελία from Leotychidas, which, of course, they would not have believed; or, in fact, had sufficient time elapsed for the news to have reached Sardes as well as Samos? The islands would be those in proximity to Asia: the Kyklades were already free.

102. 1. προσεχέσι: for the word cp. c. 28 supra. The construction here with τεταγμένοις is quasi-adverbial; cp. ἐπεξῆς τεταγμένοι infra; the Corinthians Sikyonians and Troezenians are intended but the names are here withheld; they with the Athenians, formed the left half or flank, of the army. As they wall over the lower ground it seems that the Greeks have landed east of the Persian encampment.

5. ἐν ᾧ: sc. χρόνῳ. ἔτι is perhaps corruption, or remainder of a lost word

ἐτέρῳ κέρεϊ [ἔτι] καὶ δὴ ἐμάχοντο. ἕως μὲν νυν τοῖσι Πέρσῃσι ὀρθὰ ἦν τὰ γέρρα, ἡμύνοντο τε καὶ οὐδὲν ἔλασσον εἶχον τῇ μάχῃ· ἐπεὶ δὲ τῶν Ἀθηναίων καὶ τῶν προσεχέων ὁ στρατός, ὅπως ἐωυτῶν γένηται τὸ ἔργον καὶ μὴ Λακεδαιμονίων, παρακελευσάμενοι ἔργου εἶχοντο προθυμότερον, ἐνθεύτεν ἤδη 10 ἑτεροιοῦτο τὸ πρῆγμα. διωσάμενοι γὰρ τὰ γέρρα οὕτω φερόμενοι ἐσέπεσον ἁλῆες ἐς τοὺς Πέρσας, οἱ δὲ δεξάμενοι καὶ χρόνον συχνὸν ἀμυνόμενοι τέλος ἔφευγον ἐς τὸ τεῖχος. Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ καὶ Κορίνθιοι καὶ Σικυώνιοι καὶ Τροιζήνιοι (οὗτοι γὰρ ἦσαν ἐπεξῆς τεταγμένοι) συνεπισπόμενοι συνεσέ- 15

6 κέραϊ B: || ἔτι del. Schaefer, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder: ante περιήσαν retrax. Steger, van H.: an ἔτυχον προτερόντες καὶ δὴ? 7 ὀρθὰ Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ὀρθῖα S: ὀρθία || γέρα S || οἱ δ' ἡμύνοντο? Krueger 8 ἐπεὶ τε δὲ S || τῶν ante προσεχέων om. S 9 γένοιτο z 11 γὰρ: δὲ B || γέρα S || οὕτω Naber, Gomperz, Holder, Stein<sup>3</sup>: οὗτοι 12 ἐπέπεσον Marc. || αλῆες A: ἁλῆες B || καὶ om. C 13 ἀμυνάμενοι van H. 15 οὗτοι B, Holder, Stein<sup>3</sup>: οὕτω || ἔσαν z || οἱ ἐπεξῆς B || ἐπισπόμενοι Cobet, van H. || συνέπιπτον B

(ἐτιμωρόντο, or ἔτυχον προτερόντες). Stein takes καὶ δὴ as it stands to be = ἤδη.

6. ἕως . . . τὰ γέρρα: the shields have been erected in c. 99 ad f.

7. οὐδὲν ἔλασσον εἶχον: cp. c. 70 supra (πλέον εἶχον). Only Persians appear engaged.

8. τῶν Ἀθηναίων καὶ τῶν προσεχέων ὁ στρατός: treated as quite a distinct and separate unit, or rather army, or corps d'armée; the names are still withheld.

9. ὅπως ἐωυτῶν . . . καὶ μὴ Λακεδαιμονίων: the negative μὴ shows that this is given as in the minds of the Athenians; it is, indeed, a genuine motif of Athenian legend and oratory, and in the hands of Isokrates (cp. Hdt. IV.-VI. ii. 194 f.) became a guide to the reconstruction of the past. It betrays, or suggests, the character of the source from which Hdt. has drawn the story of Mykale: Athenian, or phil-Athenian.

10. παρακελευσάμενοι, 'encouraging each other with shouts,' cp. 8. 15. ἔργου εἶχοντο, cp. 8. 11 supra. ἤδη, 'at once.'

11. ἑτεροιοῦτο τὸ πρῆγμα, 'the affair took a fresh turn, aspect'; cp. 7. 225 supra.

διωσάμενοι γὰρ τὰ γέρρα: this phrase marks the second stage in the struggle; they pushed their way through the rampart of Persian shields—or pushed the shields apart, so as to open a way for themselves—and then charged (φερόμενοι) en masse (ἁλῆες) on the Persians behind the shields, who had doubtless been plying them with arrows. διωθέσθαι in a more general sense, c. 88 supra.

12. οἱ δέ: the δέ is demonstrative, or emphatic; the sentence might otherwise have been relative.

13. χρόνον συχνὸν ἀμυνόμενοι τέλος ἔφευγον = χρ. σ. ἡμύνοντο τέλος δὲ ἔφευγον. A rather lax use of the present, or imperfect, participle.

14. Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ καὶ Κορίνθιοι καὶ Σικυώνιοι καὶ Τροιζήνιοι: at last, when the victory is won, the other contingents on the left wing are expressly named, besides the Athenians.

15. ἦσαν . . . τεταγμένοι: how little this construction is a mere temporal pluperfect appears from this passage; they were, what they had been all along, ranged ἐπεξῆς Ἀθηναίοισι, in the given order (οὕτω).

συνεπισπόμενοι συνεσέπιπτον: they entered the fortified camp en masse (i.e. without breaking from one another), and at the same time as the Persians, whom they were pursuing, i.e. pursuers and pursued all entered together. συνεσέπιπτον, by the way, throws some light πιπτον ἐς τὸ τεῖχος. ὥς δὲ καὶ τὸ τεῖχος ἀραίρητο, οὗτ' ἔτι πρὸς ἀλκὴν ἐτράποντο οἱ βάρβαροι πρὸς φυγὴν τε ὀρμέατο οἱ ἄλλοι πλὴν Περσέων· οὗτοι δὲ κατ' ὀλίγους γινόμενοι ἐμάχοντο τοῖσι αἰεὶ ἐς τὸ τεῖχος ἐσπίπτονται Ἕλληνων. καὶ 20 τῶν στρατηγῶν τῶν Περσικῶν δύο μὲν ἀποφεύγουσι, δύο δὲ τελευτῶσι· Ἀρταύτης μὲν καὶ Ἰθαμίτρης τοῦ ναυτικοῦ στρατηγέοντες ἀποφεύγουσι, Μαρδόντης δὲ καὶ ὁ τοῦ πεζοῦ 103 στρατηγὸς Τιγράνης μαχόμενοι τελευτῶσι. ἔτι δὲ μαχομένων τῶν Περσέων ἀπίκοντο Λακεδαιμόνιοι καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτῶν, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ συνδιεχίριζον. ἔπεσον δὲ καὶ αὐτῶν τῶν Ἑλλήνων συχνοὶ ἐνθαῦτα ἄλλοι τε καὶ Σικυνῶνιοι καὶ στρατηγὸς Περίλεως.

16 καὶ om. Paris. 1635 z || οὐτέ τι P Marc.: οὔτε τι z 17 καὶ πρὸς ante ἀλκὴν R (ap. Stein<sup>1</sup>) || καὶ πρὸς ante φυγὴν B (ap. Holder) || ὀρμέατο P Marc. 18 κατ' ὀλίγους S: κατὰ λόγους B 21 Ἰθαμίτρης z 103. 2, 3 αὐτέων (bis) z 3 τῶν om. RSV 4 Σικυνῶνιοι καὶ: Σικυνωνίων coni. Stein, adsc. van H. || περίλεως Bc upon its correlate συνεπέκπιτον as in 5. 22.

16. ὥς δὲ καὶ τὸ τεῖχος ἀραίρητο marks the third stage in the combat, or rather its culmination. The pluperfect is hardly temporal, for the fighting is not yet all over. πρὸς ἀλκὴν τρέπεσθαι (cp. ἀλκῆς μεμνήσθαι c. 70 supra) is just the opposite of ἐς φυγὴν τρέπεσθαι, cp. c. 63 supra, 8. 91, etc.

17. οἱ βάρβαροι: did no Greeks strike a blow on this occasion upon the Persian side? Cp. c. 103. 8 infra.

πρὸς φυγὴν τε ὀρμέατο: so in Thuc. 4. 14. 1 τῶν ἀνδρῶν ἐς φυγὴν ὀρμημένων, of actual or literal physical movement.

18. κατ' ὀλίγους γινόμενοι, "forming into small knots," Blakesley; the preposition has distributive force, cp. 8. 113 supra ἐξελέγετο κατ' ὀλίγους.

19. τοῖσι αἰεὶ . . ἐσπίπτονται might seem hardly consistent with συνεπέκπιτον above (the imperfect notwithstanding); but that phrase was obviously rhetorical, this is both more accurate and more 'elegant.'

21. Ἀρταύτης: cp. 8. 130 supra, c. 107 infra.

Ἰθαμίτρης: cp. 8. 130 supra.

22. Μαρδόντης: cp. 8. 130 supra; his fate suggests that he was especially in command of the Persian Epibatai.

23. Τιγράνης: cp. c. 96 supra. His death is really the first clear intimation in the story of the actual presence at Mykale of any of the six myriads, of which he is there put in command: is it sufficient to convince us that any part of the corps d'armée was present, or engaged in the battle, or that the battle was more than an engagement between the Greek forces, from the fleet, and the Medo-Persian Epibatai from the king's fleet—the only portion of the navy, probably, which could be trusted to show fight, especially on land? Athenian or phil-Attic tradition has exaggerated the battle of Mykale into a grand piece to match the synchronous battle in Boiotia; cp. c. 106 infra. Tigranes, if killed on this occasion, was perhaps in command of the Persian Epibatai; cp. c. 96 supra.

103. 1. ἔτι δὲ. It is only at the fourth stage of the fight that the Lak-daimonians and their half of the army arrive on the scene, and help to finish the remnant (τὰ λοιπὰ συνδιεχίριζον). Hdt. does not employ the simpler forms χειρίζειν or διαχειρίζειν, nor any one else the double compound.

4. συχνοί = πολλοί, πολυί: cp. c. 102 supra, ei passim.

Περίλεως: the name Perilaos was common and widespread; i.e. there is nothing specially Sikyonian, or even Peloponnesian about it. (Cp. Pape-Benseler, sub v.) Nothing more is recorded of this man: the absence of a patronymic suggests that Hdt. did not get this item from an inscription, least τῶν τε Σαμίων οἱ στρατευόμενοι ἔδυντες τε ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ 5 τῷ Μηδικῷ καὶ ἀπαραιρημένοι τὰ ὄπλα, ὥς εἶδον αὐτίκα κατ' ἀρχὰς γινομένην ἑτεραλκέα τὴν μάχην, ἔρδον ὅσον ἐδυνέατο προσωφελεῖν ἐθέλοντες τοῖσι Ἑλλησι. Σαμίους δὲ ἰδόντες οἱ ἄλλοι Ἴωνες ἄρξαντας οὕτω δὴ καὶ αὐτοὶ ἀποστάντες ἀπὸ Περσέων ἐπέθεντο τοῖσι βαρβάροισι. Μιλησίοισι δὲ προσε- 104

τέτακτο μὲν <ἐκ> τῶν Περσέων τὰς διόδους τηρεῖν σωτηρίας

5 τε: δὲ B, Holder, van H. || συνστρατευόμενοι Cobet, van H. || ἐνέοντες
Ask. || τε om. R<sup>2</sup> 6 καταρχὰς ABP<sup>2</sup> 7 ὑπεραλκέα B || ἔρδον P,
Stein, Holder: ἔρδον AB; ἔρδον || ἡδυνέατο SV(Gaisf.) 104. 1
μῆλίσιοι SR: μῆλίσιοι V 2 μὲν om. B || ἐκ suppl. Valckenaer, Stein<sup>2</sup>, van H.: πρὸς Cobet, Holder || τηρεῖν libri, Holder, van H.: corr. Stein of all in Sikyon. Samian or Athenian tradition may have preserved the bare name of the only general who fell on this occasion.

5. τῶν τε Σαμίων: this great, though somewhat vague, service of the Samians is very lightly and easily introduced; in fact Hdt. has nothing concrete or definite to report on their behalf. οἱ στρατευόμενοι, cp. 7. 61 supra. ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ, not necessarily ἐν τῷ τείχει, cp. c. 15 supra. But what of the Samians on the Greek side, of whom there should now have been some? Or were there as yet no Samians serving? Cp. c. 92 supra.

6. ἀπαραιρημένοι τὰ ὄπλα, 'deprived of their heavy arms,' cp. c. 99 supra. ἀπαιρεῖν takes double acc., cp. 8. 3 supra.

αὐτίκα κατ' ἀρχάς: cp. 7. 88 supra; it would go better here with ἔρδον.

7. ἑτεραλκέα: cp. 8. 11 supra.

ἔρδον ὅσον ἐδυνέατο: the first verb is rather epic (cp. 7. 33 supra). What did they 'do'? They might have set fire to the camp? or they might have pulled it partially to pieces; or they might have 'done sacrifice': but this testimonial lacks precision.

8. προσωφελεῖν with the dative Stein regards as 'poetical'; it is used with the acc. c. 68 supra in a more precise or definite context.

οἱ ἄλλοι Ἴωνες: not including the Milesians, as the next c. shows. There were thus Ionians besides the Samians and the Milesians serving with the Persians; they would be the crews of the ships.

9. ἄρξαντας: i.e. αὐτίκα κατ' ἀρχὰς ἔρδοντας ὅσον ἐδυνέατο.

ἀποστάντες ἀπὸ Περσέων: this phrase is hardly to be taken in the physical sense, suggested by the immediate context, viz. stood off, separated from the Persians there and then, but rather in the political sense: threw off their allegiance to Persia. The absence of the article and the last sentence of the next c. support this view. Cp. c. 90 supra.

10. ἐπέθεντο τοῖσι βαρβάροισι. This attack on the barbarians goes beyond anything explicitly recorded of the Samians in the context, but it still leaves something to be desired, in the way of concrete definiteness. Rawlinson ad l. remarks that "Hdt. is never very favourable to the Ionian Greeks and may have given them on this occasion less credit than they deserved." Euge! Diodoros (Ephoros) is kinder; cp. Appendix VII. § 7 (c), 2. Had Hdt. written the story of Mykale before his visit to Samos, where the fame of that island grew dearer to him (cp. 3. 60)? And did he leave what he had written unrevised?

104. 1. Μιλησίοισι δὲ προσετέτακτο: the pluperfect is in strict time; cp. c. 99 supra; but the two reasons already given, and here more explicitly repeated, are inconsistent with each other. If the Persians removed the Milesians to prevent their creating a disturbance, a mutiny, or at least some trouble in the camp, they distrusted their loyalty. If they distrusted their loyalty, they did not entrust to them the custody of the passes, or expect them to act as their

- εἵνεκά σφι, ὥς, ἣν ἄρα σφέας καταλαμβάνη οἷά περ κατέλαβε, ἔχοντες ἡγεμόνας σφίζονται ἐς τὰς κορυφὰς τῆς Μυκάλῃς. 5 ἐτάχθησαν μὲν νυν ἐπὶ τοῦτο τὸ πρῆγμα οἱ Μιλήσιοι τούτου τε εἵνεκεν καὶ ἵνα μὴ παρέοντες τῷ στρατοπέδῳ τι νεοχμὸν ποίοιεν· οἱ δὲ πᾶν τὸυναντίον τοῦ προστεταγμένου ἐποίουν, ἄλλας τε κατηγεόμενοι σφι ὁδοὺς φεύγουσι, αἱ δὲ ἔφερον ἐς τοὺς πολεμίους, καὶ τέλος αὐτοὶ σφι ἐγίνοντο [κτείνοντες] 10 πολεμιώτατοι. οὕτω δὲ τὸ δεύτερον Ἴωνίη ἀπὸ Περσέων ἀπέστη.
- 105 Ἐν δὲ ταύτῃ τῇ μάχῃ Ἑλλήνων ἡρίστευσαν Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ Ἀθηναίων Ἑρμόλυκος ὁ Εὐθόινου ἀνὴρ παγκράτιον

3 ἄρα AB 4 σφίζονται van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: σώζονται C: σώζονται α, Stein<sup>12</sup>, Holder: σώζονται BPr. Marc. z || (μυκάλῃς S ?) 6 τε: γε α: om. B || εἵνεκα Marc. z || ἐν τῷ B, Holder, van H. 7 τὸ ἐναντίον B 8 δὲ ἔφερον z: διέφερον 9 αὐτοῖς R || κτείνοντες del. Gomperz, Holder, van H., Stein<sup>8</sup> 10 Ἴωνίη τὸ δεύτερον B (τοδεύτερον S) 105. 1 ἡρίστευσαν Marc. 2 εὐθόινου CPz: εὐθόινου α: εὐθύνου B, Valla, Gaisford guides to safe places of retreat, in case of a disaster occurring, such as actually occurred.

3. ἄρα here, as frequently, may be taken to suggest the unexpected. The historian speaks propria persona in οἷά περ κατέλαβε: ἣν καταλαμβάνη being of course future in force. νεοχμὸν (l. 6) is repeated from c. 99.

7. of δέ: the demonstrative (article), with δέ, resumes the subject of the sentence, and so lends it additional emphasis. Cp. note to 7. 51. 3, etc.

8. αὖ δὲ: the relative, emphasized.

ἔφερον ἐς, 'led into,' among; φέρειν ἐς in metaph. sense c. 33 supra. But cp. App. Crit.

10. τὸ δεύτερον Ἴωνίη ἀπὸ Περσέων ἀπέστη, 'Ionia threw off the Persian yoke for the second time.' (Cp. cc. 103, 90 supra.) This statement involves an implicit reference to the first or former revolt, and so might seem to take the record given in Bk. 5 for granted. But the fact of that revolt was no doubt notorious; Hdt. might even have found the revolt of 479 B.C. already noted as the δευτέρῃ ἀπόστασις, and it is not even necessary to suppose this little sentence (or the words τὸ δεύτερον) a gloss, or an insertion of the second draft by the author, in order to reconcile it with the theory of the prior composition of Bks. 7-9. Cp. Introduction, §§ 7, 8.

105. 1. ἡρίστευσαν Ἀθηναῖοι, 'the Athenians obtained the meed of valour.' Cp. 8. 17 supra for the formula.

2. Ἑρμόλυκος ὁ Εὐθόινου. The father's name is corrupt in the best mss.; cp. App. Crit. εὐθύνου looks like a correction of εὐθόινου. Euthynos is a commoner name at Athens than 'Euthoinos,' which is, however, found on Inscrip. 'Hermolykos' is mentioned again as pankratiast with a statue on the Akropolis (Pausan. 1. 23. 10). Whether this Hermolykos son of Euthoinos was any relation to Hermolykos son of Diitrephes, who dedicated a statue of his father (cp. Pausanias 1. 23. 3), apparently the general Diitrephes well known from Thucydides (7. 29. 1, 8. 64. 1), is a much debated question; cp. Frazer, Pausanias ii. 275 f., 289; Hitzig-Bluemner, Pausanias (1896), notes ad II. c.

παγκράτιον ἐπασκήσας, 'who (had) practised (successfully? ἐπι-) as a pankratiast.' The pankrátiōn, a combination of boxing (πυγμή) and wrestling (πάλη), was first introduced at Olympia in 648 B.C., Ol. 33, Pausan. 5. 8. 8; cp. Clinton, Fasti i. p. 198; and victories in the pankration are celebrated in several of Pindar's Epinikia: e.g. Nem. 2, 3, 5, Isth. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

ἐπασκήσας. τοῦτον δὲ τὸν Ἑρμόλυκον κατέλαβε ὕστερον τούτων, πολέμου ἐόντος Ἀθηναίοισι τε καὶ Καρυστίοισι, ἐν Κύρῳ τῆς Καρυστίνης χώρας ἀποθανόντα ἐν μάχῃ κείσθαι 5 ἐπὶ Γεραιστῷ. μετὰ δὲ Ἀθηναίους Κορίνθιοι καὶ Τροιζήνιοι καὶ Σικυνῶνιοι ἥριστευσαν.

Ἐπεῖτε δὲ κατεργάσαντο οἱ Ἕλληνες τοὺς πολλοὺς τοὺς 106 μὲν μαχομένους τοὺς δὲ καὶ φεύγοντας τῶν βαρβάρων, τὰς <τε> νέας ἐνέπρησαν καὶ τὸ τεῖχος ἄπαν, τὴν ληΐην προεξαγαγόντες ἐς τὸν αἰγιαλόν, καὶ θησαυροὺς τινας χρημάτων εὗρον· ἐμπρήσαντες δὲ τὸ τεῖχος καὶ τὰς νέας ἀπέπλεον. 5 ἀπικόμενοι δὲ ἐς Σάμον οἱ Ἕλληνες ἐβουλεύοντο περὶ ἀνα-

4 τούτων 2 6 γεραίστω R(S)V 106. 2, 3 τὰς <τε> van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: τὰς 3, 5 νῆας (bis) 2 4 καὶ <γὰρ> van H.
5 τό <τε> van H. || ἀπέπλεον idem 6 περὶ τῆς Marc. || ἀναστάσεις 2

3. κατέλαβε ὕστερον τούτων: for the verb cp. cc. 93, 104 supra, 'overtook.' The general date places the event in the Pentekontaëteris, but unfortunately without a precise year. The war between 'the Athenians' and the Karystians is, however, presumably that one commemorated by Thuc. 1. 98. 3 about 472 B.C.; cp. Busolt, Gr. G. iii. (1897) 140.

4. ἐν Κύρῳ: this Kynos in Euboia, in the territory of Karystos, is not elsewhere mentioned. The nominal coincidence with the island Corsica (cp. 7. 165 supra) was not perhaps accidental. On Karystos cp. 8. 121 supra. On Geraistos, 8. 7 supra.

6. Κορίνθιοι . . Τροιζήνιοι . . Σικυνῶνιοι: the order of merit differs slightly from their order in battle-array c. 102 supra, but all contingents on the left wing obtained prizes. The right (Lakedaimonians, etc.) was quite left in the shade. This story is hardly of Spartan origin.

106. 1. ἐπεῖτε . . κατεργάσαντο, cum interfecissent (Baehr). They seem to have taken no prisoners on this occasion.

3. τὴν ληΐην προεξαγαγόντες, 'though not until they (had) brought (led) out the spoil.' It was apparently alive, at least some of it. Thuc. 2. 94. 3 ἀνθρώπους καὶ λεῖαν λαβόντες.

4. καὶ θησαυροὺς . . εὗρον is not in strict construction. Stein regards it as an addition from the author's hand; cp. Introduction, § 9. χρήματα apparently = money, but might cover plate.

5. ἀπέπλεον. Obviously the Greek forces at Mykale had not defeated, had not even encountered, the corps d'armée accredited to Tigranes c. 96 supra; had they done so, the road to Sardes was once more open to them. The battle of Mykale was evidently a πρόσκρουσμα βραχὺ τοῖς βαρβάροις, a raid, a brilliant raid no doubt, but not a great victory, and the Greeks at once retired, before the Persian land-forces came up, and abandoned the mainland to its fate.

6. περὶ ἀναστάσεως τῆς Ἰωνίας. At Samos, after their return from Mykale, the Hellenes, i.e. the naval Synedrion, cp. c. 90 supra, discussed the question of 'the evacuation of Ionia.' This was an old idea, started by Bias of Priene, if 1. 170 may be trusted; some of the Ionians (in 546 B.C.) τὴν δουλοσύνην οὐκ ἀνεχόμενοι ἐξέλιπον τὰς πατρίδας (1. 169). Again in 494 B.C. a few voluntarily (6. 17) and still more against their will (6. 20) had left their homes for ever. A migration en masse had recently been recommended to Athens by the Delphic oracle (7. 140 supra), and brought within the range of practical politics by Themistokles (8. 62 supra). There was thus a good deal in the recent experience of the Greeks, not to speak of the migrations and colonizations of earlier days, to make a wholesale flitting no absurd or unpractical idea. For the use of ἀνάστασις cp. Thuc. 2. 14. 2 (of the flitting of the Athenians from the country into the city 431 B.C.), 7. 75. 1 τοῦ στρατεύματος (of the break-up and departure before Syracuse in 413 B.C.), 1. 133 ad f. ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ (of the retirement from the temple by a suppliant). Cp. 4. 115

στάσιος τῆς Ἰωνίης, καὶ ὅκη χρεὼν εἶη τῆς Ἑλλάδος κατοικίσαι τῆς αὐτοὶ ἐγκρατέες ἦσαν, τὴν δὲ Ἰωνίην ἀπείναι τοῖσι βαρβάροισι· ἀδύνατον γὰρ ἐφαίνεται σφί εἶναι ἐωντούς τε 10 Ἰώνων προκατῆσθαι φρουρέοντας τὸν πάντα χρόνον, καὶ ἐωντῶν μὴ προκατημένων Ἴωνας οὐδεμίαν ἐλπίδα εἶχον χαίροντας πρὸς τῶν Περσέων ἀπαλλάξειν. πρὸς ταῦτα Πελοποννησίων μὲν τοῖσι ἐν τέλει ἐοῦσι ἐδόκεε τῶν μηδισάντων ἐθνέων τῶν
Ἑλληνικῶν τὰ ἐμπολαῖα ἐξαναστήσαντας δοῦναι τὴν χώραν
15 Ἴωσι ἐνοικῆσαι, Ἀθηναίοισι δὲ οὐκ ἐδόκεε ἀρχὴν Ἰωνίην

7 ὅπη α: ὅπη BC: ὅποι PMarc. z || χρεὼν CPz, van H. || κατοικῆσαι B
8 ἔσαν z: εἶσαν? Stein<sup>(2)</sup> || ἀπείναι B: ἀφείναι 9 ἐωντούς τε secl.
van H. 10 φρουρέων R(S)V 11 οὐδὲ μίαν AB: οὐδεμίαν z ||
ἔχον z 13 τέλει AB: τέλεσι z 14 ἐμπολαῖα Stein<sup>2</sup>: 'num forte ἐπίπλοα?' van H.: ἐμπόλια αC Marc.: ἐμπόρια || ἐπαναστήσαντας B

supra φέρετε ἐξασπόμεν ἐκ τῆς γῆς τῆσδε.

7. ὅκη . . τῆς Ἑλλάδος . . τῆς αὐτοῦ ἐγκρατέες ἦσαν. If Ionia was to be evacuated and abandoned to the 'barbarians,' some place for the Ionians would have to be found on Hellenic soil. This problem appears to take the control or possession of Hellas proper (or the greater part of it) for granted;
it assumes the truth of the φήμη of the day before (a night will presumably have intervened); or has the φήμη (of c. 100)
by this time been officially confirmed by despatches to Samos? Or may this deliberation be taken as an undesigned confession that the victory in Boiotia had been fully reported to the Greeks at Samos or ever they advanced on Mýkale? 'Ἑλλάς here comes very nearly to 'Greece' in our sense of the word.
ἐγκρατής is used similarly 8. 49 supra.
The imp. indic. ἦσαν is remarkable;
= eloi l.c.

10. προκατῆσθαι: as in 8. 36 supra,
and cp. also 7. 172.

τὸν πάντα χρόνον, 'for ever,' c.
73. 3.

11. μή as in a conditional sentence (participial).

χαίροντας πρὸς τῶν Περσέων ἀπα-λλάξειν, 'will get off with impunity (go unpunished) at the hands of Persia.'
Cp. 3. 69 οὔτοι μιν . . δεῖ χαίροντα ἀπαλλάσσειν. The negative is more usually combined with χαίρων, e.g. 3. 29
ἀτὰρ τοι ὑμεῖς γε οὐ χαίροντες γέλωτα ἐμὲ θῆσεσθε, Xenoph. Anab. 5. 6. 32 διασπασθέντες δ' ἂν . . οὐτε χαίροντες ἂν ἀπαλλάξαιτε.

12. Πελοποννησίων μὲν τοῖσι ἐν τέλει ἐοῦσι: primarily Leotychidas, the Spartan king and navarch, and in the second line the captains of the Korin-thians, Sikyonians, Troizenians. Two points raise suspicion: (i.) Could the king or the Synedrion have decided off-hand so immense and far-reaching a question? (ii.) Would the Dorian states at least have desired to reinforce the 'Ionian' element in Central Hellas, and in Peloponnese itself, by supporting such a proposal? οἱ ἐν τέλει as in 3. 18, Thuc. 1. 10. 4 ἐξω τῶν βασιλέων καὶ τῶν
μάλιστα ἐν τέλει, 5. 47. 9 οἱ τὰ τέλη ἔχοντες (official term at Elis), 1. 58. 1 τὰ
τέλη τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, cp. 4. 15. 1, etc.
13. ἐδόκεε: a strict imperfect; the δοκέον did not become a δόγμα.

τῶν μηδισάντων ἐθνέων τῶν Ἑλ.:
a preliminary list of them has been given 7. 132 supra, but the list is not complete, omitting the Argives (cp. 8.
73) and some islanders (Andros, the Karystians, etc.).

14. τὰ τέμπολαῖα ἐξαναστήσαντας.
The ἐξανάστασις in this case was hardly to be accomplished without violence.
ἐμπολαῖα is a conjectural emendation;
cp. App. Crit. = ἐμπόρια. But the adj.
ἐμπολαῖος is not common, and would mean (in the neuter) not 'marketa,' but rather 'commodities.'

δοῦναι . . ἐνοικῆσαι: exactly as in Thuc. 2. 27. 2 ἐκπεσοῦσι δὲ τοῖς Αἰγινήταις οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι ἐδοσαν Θυρέαν οἰκεῖν. (Exegetical and telic, or gerundive.)

15. ἀρχήν, 'at all'—in the first instance; they moved in fact the γενέσθαι ἀνάστατον οὐδὲ Πελοποννησίοισι περὶ τῶν σφετερέων ἀποικιέων βουλευέιν· ἀντιτεινόντων δὲ τούτων προθύμως, εἶξαν οἱ Πελοποννήσιοι. καὶ οὕτω δὴ Σαμίους τε καὶ Χίους καὶ Λεσβίους καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους νησιώτας, οἳ ἔτυχον συστρατευόμενοι τοῖσι Ἕλλησι, ἐς τὸ συμμαχικὸν ἐποιήσαντο, πίστι τε 20

16 Πελοποννησίους Schweighaeuser, Holder, van H.: 'An deest προσήκειν?' Stein<sup>2</sup> || σφετέρων libri, Holder, van H. 17 ἀποικίων B ||
τουτέων z 19 <καὶ ἡπειρώτας καὶ> νησιώτας Schwartz: νησιώτας
<καὶ τοὺς ἡπειρώτας> Steup: sed cf. Busolt III i. 39 || στρατευόμενοι B
20 ἐσεποιήσαντο Krueger, Stein<sup>3</sup> || πίστει C. Marc. || τε om. aC

previous question, and had also a formal or constitutional objection to urge, viz. against interference between a metropolis and its colonies. The metropolitan claim of Athens had been recognized and urged from the other side as early as 498 B.C., cp. 5. 97—and probably dated back at least to the days of Peisistratos (cp. c. 97 supra), but perhaps only referred to Miletos, and some of the mainland towns at first. It was, of course, a part of the basis of the Delian symmarchy just afterwards, and was then perhaps more widely extended; cp. next note.

18. καὶ οὕτω δὴ: there might perhaps seem to be a non sequitur in these words, which throws doubt, not upon the fact here stated so much as upon the previous report of the debate in the Synedrion at Samos (cc. 90, 91). If Peloponnesians were not to be allowed βουλευέιν περὶ τῶν (Ἀττικῶν) ἀποικιέων—and yielded the point—the matriculation of the 'Samians' and 'Chians' (which appear on the Marmor Par. 27 as colonies from Athens) might seem to be inconsistent therewith. But was the Ionian settlement in Samos rightly ascribed to Athens? The Ionians of Samos were ultimately traced back to Epidauros; cp. Pausan. 7. 4. 2 (cp. Δωριεῖς (sic) Ἐπιδαύριοι Hdt. 1. 146). The case of Chios is even more obscure; according to the native historian, Ion, a contemporary of Hdt.'s, the island was peopled by Abantes from Euboea (cp. Hdt. 1. 146), and by immigrants from Histiaia; their 'Ionization' they owed to a king Hektor, in the third generation after; but Ion failed to account for the Chians being reckoned Ionians (οὐ μέντοι ἐκείνῳ γε εἶρκεε καὶ ἥτινα αἰτίαν Χίοι τελοῦσιν ἐς Ἴωνας, Pausan. 7. 4. 10). Possibly Samos and Chios, at least in 479 B.C.,

were not yet accounted 'Athenian' colonies; and even the passage in Hdt. 1. 146-7 distinguishes among the Ionians between οἱ . . . ἀπὸ τοῦ πρωταρχίου τοῦ Ἀθηναίων ὀρμηθέντες καὶ νομίζοντες γενναῖότατοι εἶναι Ἴωνων and the rest. (The passage in c. 147 making the Apaturia the test of Ionism admits that the Ephesians and Kolophonians did not observe it; but the passage is very like a gloss.) The Athenians might protest against any intervention between themselves and their settlements abroad, and yet allow the enrolment of Samos and Chios in the Hellenic alliance without a murmur, having (at this time at least) no metropolitan claim over these islands any more than over the Aiolian Lesbos. But the whole story of the deliberations is, of course, highly suspicious; the proposed ἀνάστασις would have meant a civil war, and the admirals could hardly have settled such a question.

19. καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους νησιώτας cannot refer to the islands enumerated in 8. 46 supra, for they already belonged to the Symmarchy; the Greeks at Mykale, at Samos, at the Hellespont (cp. c. 114 infra) had Samians, Chians, Lesbians, and a good many other 'nesiotes' with them, συστρατευόμενοι τοῖσι Ἕλλησι (sic), who are completely ignored in the narrative of the actual operations, and only come into account in this highly suspicious passage on diplomatic and constitutional points. 'The Islands' were understood to be half the prize of Mykale, c. 101 supra.

20. ἐς τὸ συμμαχικὸν ἐποιήσαντο, 'admitted them as members of the alliance': τὸ σ. = τοὺς συμμάχους. Hdt. has συμμαχίην . . . ἐποίησαντο 1. 77, πόλει . . . ὅπ' ἐωντοῖσι ἐποίησαντο 5. 103. Cp. Thuc. 3. 3. 4 τοὺς ἄνδρας . .

καταλαβόντες καὶ ὀρκίοισι <ἢ μὲν> ἐμμενέειν τε καὶ μὴ ἀποστήσασθαι. τούτους δὲ καταλαβόντες ὀρκίοισι ἔπλεον τὰς γεφύρας λύσοντες· ἔτι γὰρ ἐδόκεον ἐντεταμένους εὐρήσειν. οὗτοι μὲν δὴ ἐπ' Ἑλλησπόντου ἔπλεον,

- 107 Τῶν δὲ ἀποφυγόντων βαρβάρων ἐς τὰ ἄκρα τῆς Μυκάλης κατειληθέντων, ἐόντων οὐ πολλῶν, ἐγένετο κομιδὴ ἐς Σάρδεις. πορευομένων δὲ κατ' ὁδὸν Μασίστης ὁ Δαρεῖον παρατυχὼν τῷ πάθει τῷ γεγονότι τὸν στρατηγὸν Ἀρταύντην ἔλεγε πολλά
5 τε καὶ κακὰ, ἄλλα τε καὶ γυναικὸς κακίῳ· φὰς αὐτὸν εἶναι τοιαῦτα στρατηγήσαντα, καὶ ἄξιον εἶναι παντὸς κακοῦ τὸν βασιλεὺς οἶκον κακώσαντα. παρὰ δὲ τοῖσι Πέρσῃσι γυναικὸς κακίῳ ἀκοῦσαι δέννος μέγιστος ἐστί. ὃ δὲ ἐπεὶ πολλά

21 ἢ μὲν add. Krueger, van H., Stein<sup>8</sup> || ἐμμενέειν Stein, Holder: ἐμμένειν vel ἐμμενέειν 22 ἀπονοστήσασθαι SVz 24 ἐλλήσποντον S || ἔπλεον van H. 107. 1 ἄκρα τε B, Holder, Kallenberg || μυκάλλης S 2 ἐγένετο R || σάρδεις R 5 τε καὶ om. Marc. || εἶναι om. Marc. 7 βασιλῆος z 8 πολλά <τε καὶ κακὰ> ? Krueger, van H.

ἐς φυλακὴν ἐποιήσαντο, 8. 1. 3 τὰ τῶν ξυμμάχων ἐς ἀσφάλειαν ποιῆσθαι. But cp. App. Crit. The statement here may be reconciled with the statement in c. 92 supra by supposing that at Delos Hegesistratos and his two companions only bound themselves to do their best to bring the Samians into the alliance; but the harmony is a little strained—especially considering that the allies have been to Samos once already (c. 96) in the interval.

πῶστι τε . . . καὶ ὀρκίοισι, as in c. 92 supra.

21. ἐμμενέειν τε καὶ μὴ ἀποστήσασθαι: this formula seems to presuppose a ξυμμαχία ἐς αἰεί, ἐς τὸν πάντα χρόνον. The right of ἀπόστασις is surrendered. The formula and the story may have been useful 'precedents' for the Delian alliance, which no doubt was equally unlimited in time (cp. 'Αθ. πολ. 23. 5).

22. ἔπλεον τὰς γεφύρας λύσοντες. Rawlinson (ad l.) suggests that the destruction of the bridges (8. 117) must have been already known (by Lesbians, for example) and that Hdt. has misconceived the motive of the move to the Hellespont, which was "only to reconnoitre." The Greeks will have aimed at more than that—promoting revolt, cutting off remnants, and so on. But is it so certain that they knew the bridges were no more, or might not be restored?

107. 1. ἀποφυγόντων· κατειληθέντων· ἐόντων: this string of participles is not elegant, but ἀποφ. is little more than an adjective; it might very well be dispensed with. κατειληθέντων here seems to mean 'crowded,' 'confined,' 'cooped up'; cp. 5. 119, 8. 27, cc. 31, 70 supra (κατειλημένοι). If there were so few of them, one would have thought Mykale roomy enough for them.

τὰ ἄκρα τ. Μ.=τὰς κορυφὰς τ. Μ. cc. 104, 99 supra.

2. κομιδὴ: cp. 8. 108 supra.

3. Μασίστης ὁ Δαρεῖον: he was full brother to Xerxes, cp. 7. 82 supra, and had been one of the six generals, or field-marshal, of the army in 480 B.C. It is odd to find him here a casual attaché of the naval forces, or of the corps d'armée in Ionia: nor is he! For he has a bodyguard, οἱ δορυφόροι οἱ Μασίστειν ἑπ' αὐτῷ; was he, not Tigranes, the real commander of the six myriads, c. 96 supra? If so, he was not present at the disaster which had just taken place (τῷ πάθει τ. γ.) but was probably coming to the support of the encampment at Mykale, and naturally fell foul of Artayntes (c. 102 supra).

5. γυναικὸς κακίῳ: cp. c. 20 supra.

6. τὸν βασιλῆος οἶκον: cp. 8. 102 supra, 5. 31.

8. ἀκοῦσαι, 'to be called . . .'

δέννος: the verb δεινάζειν occurs twice in Sophokles, Antig. 759, Aias

ἤκουσε, δεινὰ ποιούμενος σπάται ἐπὶ τὸν Μασίστην τὸν ἀκινάκην, ἀποκτείνει θέλων, καὶ μιν ἐπιθέοντα φρασθεὶς 10 Ξειναγόρης ὁ Πρηξίλειω ἀνὴρ Ἀλικαρνησσεὺς ὅπισθε ἐστεῶς αὐτοῦ [Ἀρταῦντεω], ἀρπάζει μέσον καὶ ἐξαίρας παίει ἐς τὴν γῆν· καὶ ἐν τούτῳ οἱ δορυφόροι οἱ Μασίστεω προέστησαν.
 ὁ δὲ Ξειναγόρης ταῦτα ἐργάσατο χάριτα αὐτῷ τε Μασίστη τιθέμενος καὶ Ξέρξῃ, ἐκσφάζων τὸν ἀδελφεὸν τὸν ἐκείνου· καὶ 15
 διὰ τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον Ξειναγόρης Κιλικίης πάσης ἤρξε δόντος Κιλικίεος. τῶν δὲ κατ' ὁδὸν πορευομένων οὐδὲν ἐπὶ πλεόν τούτων ἐγένετο, ἀλλ' ἀπικνέονται ἐς Σάρδεις.

9 ποιησάμενος z 10 ἀκινάκα z || ἀποκτείνει θέλων del. van H.:
 θέλων om. S || φθὰς z 11 ὁ Πρηξίλειω om. R: πρηστίλειω Aek. ||
 ἀλικαρνησεὺς BC || ὅπισθεν R(S)VP Marc., Holder 12 Ἀρταῦντεω
 del. Stein<sup>2</sup> || ἐξαίρας Bredow, Stein, Holder, van H.: ἐξαίρας α: ἐξάρας z: ἐξάρας 13 οἱ poster. loc. om. B Marc. z, Holder 14 χάριτας Marc.:
 χάριν van H. 15 θέμενος Marc. || ἐκσφάζων van H., Stein<sup>3</sup>: ἐκσφάζων
 16 Κιλικίης: Λυκίης Krueger || ἤρξε Κιλικίης πάσης P: πάσης ἤρξε
 Κιλικίης z 17 βασιλῆος z || πορευομένων βαρβάρων Bz || ἐπὶ Werfer, Schweighaeuser, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἐτι 18 ἐγένετο τούτων
 CP Marc. z (τουτέων z) || ἀλλὰ Marc. || σάρδεις Marc.

243, and in Euripides, Rhes. 925. It is found previously also in Theognis 1211. The substantive (reproach, taunt) is rare. ἐπεὶ πολλὰ ἤκουσε, 'when he had heard more than enough . . .'

9. δεινὰ ποιούμενος, 'in a rage . . . σπάται ἐπὶ . . . τὸν ἀκινάκην, 'draws his native sword upon Masistes,' as we say. On ἀκινάκης cp. 7. 54 supra.

10. φρασθεὶς (ubi animadvertit) seems less forcible than the Aldine φθὰς (praevertens), but both would be de trop.

11. Ξειναγόρης ὁ Πρηξίλειω. Prexileos, or Praxilas, is a very uncommon name, and nothing more is known of this Halikarnassian (Praxilla of Sikyon, Pausan. 3. 13. 5, is also unrivalled). Xeina-goras, or Xenagoras, is less rare. Of this man nothing more is known than is here by Hdt. recorded, but the record is significant: (a) There were Greeks with the Persian forces after Mykale: this man, to be sure, would be a subject of Artemisia (less probably an exile, or adventurer). (b) His appointment as 'syennesis' of Kilikia is remarkable, and probably the first instance of the investiture of a Greek subject with a Persian governorship. (c) This fact (which belongs to the history of the Pentekontaetia) may be regarded as more certain than the cause or occasion alleged by Hdt. for it. (d) Nevertheless as himself a Halikarnassian Hdt. will have had special interest and information in regard to this fellow-citizen.

The predecessor of Xeina-goras in Kilikia was Syennesis, or the syennesis, son of Oromedon, mentioned 7. 98 supra, who according to Aischyl. Pers. 326 lost his life at the battle of Salamis, leaving presumably no son to succeed him. This Halikarnassian may have founded a dynasty in Kilikia: the next governor of Kilikia known to history is the 'syennesis' of the Anabasis; cp. l.c. supra. (Rawlinson ventures to say that "Xeina-goras can only have occupied a subordinate position": thus indirectly charging Hdt. in this case with a serious and apparently wilful exaggeration of his fellow-citizen's greatness. Krueger's emendation shifts the venue to Lykia.)

12. ἀρπάζει μέσον: cp. Terent. Ad. 3. 2. 18 sublimem medium arriperem et capite primum in terram statuerem.

ἐξαίρας is here quite literally intended; cp. Xenoph. Aggr. 2. 4. 14 συναρπάσας ἐξῆρε, Aristoph. Knights 1359 ἄρας μετέωρον εἰς τὸ βάραθρον ἐμβαλῶ (Valckenaer).

14. ταῦτα ἐργάσατο χάριτα . . . τιθέμενος: χάριν τίθεσθαι, cp. c. 60 supra: an inverted predication (= ταῦτα ἐργάζομενος χάριν ἐτίθετο).

17. οὐδὲν ἐπὶ πλεόν τούτων: a mere

108 'Εν δὲ τῇσι Σάρδισι ἐτύγχανε ἑὼν βασιλεὺς ἐξ ἐκείνου

108. 1 'Εν: ἐπὶ B || σάρδισιν R Marc.

confession of ignorance! For the formula cp. c. 41 supra. One would like to know what happened to Artayntes.

108. There follows here, by way of digression (cc. 108-113), a story of the King's Amour, or the Death of Masistes, which exhibits Hdt. at his best. A story could hardly be better told, or present more artfully the elements of a domestic tragedy, of a palace intrigue, started in passion and jealousy, culminating in torture, rebellion, death. One great defect the story, indeed, has from the moral point of view: it is the innocent who suffer, or who suffer most; the guilty king, the jealous and cruel queen, come off scot free. Two considerations may slightly relieve this objection from an aesthetic standpoint: Artaynta, the daughter of Masistes, has a good deal to answer for: she is the root of the mischief. Again, 'rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft,' and Masistes and his sons die with arms in their hands against the king. But it cannot be said that Hdt. makes anything of these motifs. As a historian he might plead (though it is not his way!) that the facts were as he stated them, painfully immoral, and aesthetically distressing. As a moralist he might plead that the true moral lay outside the story, in the suggestion of all that Hellas had been spared by the successful resistance to the Oriental despot, which had made such tragedies, possible in tyrants' houses, for ever impossible in Hellas! And, again, that he thus dismisses Xerxes, to go to his own place, the scorn and derision of all good men, with his lawless passions and his slavish submission to 'the law of the Medes and Persians,' his childish vanities (ἡσθεὶς περιβάλλεται) and his prodigal pleasures (ἡσθεὶς δὲ καὶ ταύτῃ), his humorous caprices (speeches to Masistes) and his capricious wrath (θυμωθεὶς). The dramatic narrative falls into five acts.

(i.) The scene in Sardes: Xerxes' passion for his brother Masistes' wife: her faithfulness and virtue! and the king's ruse to win her, by wedding his son Dareios to her daughter.

(ii.) The scene shifts to Susa: the king's still fouler transfer of his affections from his brother's wife to his son's wife, Artaynta.

(iii.) The fatal gift: the robe of Amestris the queen: her jealousy and error: destruction to the wife of Masistes, the mother of Artaynta!

(iv.) The king's birthday feast: the queen's request: the despot's involuntary humiliation.

(v.) The catastrophe: wreck of the house of Masistes. (Masistes rejects the king's overtures: the mutilation of his wife: the rebellion, and its defeat.)

It is an omission that Artaynta does not expressly share the fate of her family.

This story might almost rank with the Hebrew story of Esther as an illustration of life at the Persian court. But, except for the external reference above indicated, it lacks the national and popular setting, the political purpose, and therewith the ethical contents, which ennoble the Jewish tale. The Greek interest in this tale is purely reflexive. No Greek, whether man or woman, figures in this drama: the virtues of the wife of Masistes are purely domestic; her husband as the ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός, good man, husband, father, and yet rebel withal, prepared to work 'no end of ill' to the king, his brother, unites to some extent the rôles of Mordecai and Haman; the king himself cuts no great figure in either tale, but here he is less of a puppet and more of a curse, while behind and over all rises the terrible figure of Amestris, 'a fury slinging flame,' a barbarian fiend incarnate. (If Ahasuerus=Xerxes, Esther would=Amestris. But that cannot be, "if we accept the stories which Hdt. tells of Amestris," and which the Jews tell of Esther.)

1. ἐν δὲ τῇσι Σάρδισι: cp. 8. 117 supra; it is, however, a question whether Xerxes was in Sardes at this time, and not rather engaged, in upper Asia, in the reduction of the revolted satrapy of Babylon; cp. C. F. Lehmann, 'Xerxes und die Babylonier,' Wochenschr. f. Klass. Philologie, 1900, 959-965, Ed. Meyer, G.d.A. iii. p. xiv.; Appendix VII. § 2.

ἐτύγχανε ἑὼν marks a coincidence, which is not causally related to the antecedents, or rather concomitants. Xerxes, as we are here given to understand, spent the winter of 480-79 B.C., and at least the whole of the ensuing

τοῦ χρόνου, ἐπεῖτε ἐξ Ἀθηνέων προσπταίσας τῇ ναυμαχίῃ φυγὼν ἀπῖκετο. τότε δὴ ἐν τῇσι Σάρδισι ἐὼν ἄρα ἦρα τῆς Μασίστew γυναικὸς εὐρύσης καὶ ταύτης ἐνθαῦτα. ὥς δέ οἱ προσπέμποντι οὐκ ἐδύνατο κατεργασθῆναι, οὐδὲ βίῃ προσεφέρετο 5 προμηθεόμενος τὸν ἀδελφεὸν Μασίστην· τὸ αὐτὸ δὲ τοῦτο εἶχε καὶ τὴν γυναῖκα· εὖ γὰρ ἐπίστατο βίης οὐ τευξομένη· ἐνθαῦτα δὴ Ξέρξης ἐργόμενος τῶν ἄλλων πρήσσει τὸν γάμον τοῦτον τῷ παιδὶ τῷ ἐωυτοῦ Δαρείῳ, θυγατέρα τῆς γυναικὸς ταύτης καὶ Μασίστew, δοκέων αὐτὴν μᾶλλον λάμψεσθαι ἢ 10
ταῦτα ποιήσῃ· ἀρμόσας δὲ καὶ τὰ νομιζόμενα ποιήσας ἀπήλανε ἐς Σοῦσα· ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐκεῖ τε ἀπῖκετο καὶ ἡγάγετο ἐς

2 ἀθηναίων BCRSVz 3 δὴ RS(V): δὲ || ἄρα del. Cobet, Holder, van H. || ἔρα B: 'an ἡράσθη?' Stein 5 βίῃ Stein<sup>3</sup>: βίην || προσέφερε B, Holder, van H. 6 προμυθεόμενος Marc. || ἀδελφὸν Marc.
Priscian 18. 283: τοῦ ἀδελφεοῦ van H. || Μασίστην del. van H. || ταυτὸ C
|| ἔχε z: 'an ἔσχε?' Stein<sup>1</sup> 7 εὖ γὰρ B, Holder || ἡπίστατο Marc. || τευξομένη B<sup>1</sup> 8 πρήσει C 10 λάμψασθαι C 12 ἐκεῖ τε αC:
ἐκείσε B etc.: ἐκείσε τε van H., Holder summer, in Sardes, presumably awaiting the issue of the campaign in Greece.

Aischylos (Persai) makes Xerxes return direct from Athens to Susa.

3. φυγὼν accepts the representation of the king's return as a φυγή.

τότε δὴ: at the time of the battle of Mykale; or perhaps more generally throughout the period from his return to the battle of Mykale.

ἄρα: cp. c. 104. 3 supra. ἄρα ἦρα looks unfortunate. Stein compares the position of ἄρα here and in c. 9 supra
and in 4. 134 (i.e. construes it with ἐν τῇσι Σάρδισι ἐὼν?).

τῆς Μασίστew γυναικὸς: that this lady is anonymous in the story does not make for its credit. Was she possibly, like her daughter, an Ἀρταύτη, and possibly again a relative, a sister, of the Artayntes who has figured above?
Masistes apparently throughout has only one wife. She had not accompanied her lord on the march to Greece (cp. 7. 187), but had probably come down to meet him on his return to Sardes with Xerxes.

5. προσπέμποντι: sc. ἀγγέλους. The subject of ἐδύνατο may be ἡ γυνή (van H.
takes it to be τὸ ἐπεθύμει).

6. προμηθεόμενος, 'out of respect for . . .'; a genitive might be expected.

εἶχε, 'supported,' 'upheld.'

7. εὖ γὰρ κτλ., 'for she well knew that violence would not be employed against her.'

8. ἐργόμενος is middle; cp. 7. 197. 21
supra.

τὸν γάμον τοῦτον refers to the following θυγατέρα. The verb πρήσσει has, perhaps, a suggestion of intrigue:
he indeed was hoping still to get hold of the mother (λάμψεσθαι = λήψεσθαι: cp.
Smyth, Ionic § 130, p. 136).

9. Δαρείῳ: this Dareios was the eldest son, and on the assassination of his father in 465 B.C. was falsely accused of the crime, and executed by his youngest brother Artaxerxes; Ktesias, Pers. 29; Gilmore, p. 158 f. Had all this happened when this story was first contrived?

12. ἐς Σοῦσα: the scene shifts to the capital; cp. 8. 99, 7. 151 supra, and 5.
54.

ἡγάγετο: the middle is generally used of the bridegroom, here of the father-in-law. This word marks the actual marriage; the practices (πρήσσει)
and the performances of the usual rites (τὰ νομιζόμενα ποιήσας), at Sardes previously,
only amounted to a betrothal (ἀρμόσας).
The crown-prince lives apparently in his father's palace, even after his marriage;
is this improbable?

ἔωντοῦ Δαρεῖω τὴν γυναῖκα, οὕτω δὲ τῆς Μασίστew μὲν γυναικὸς ἐπέπαντο, δὲ δὲ διαμειψάμενος ἦρα τε καὶ ἐτύγχανε
 15 τῆς Δαρείου μὲν γυναικὸς Μασίστew δὲ θυγατρός· οὐνομα δὲ 109 τῇ γυναικὶ ταύτῃ ἦν Ἀρταῦντη. χρόνου δὲ προϊόντος ἀνάπυστα γίνεται τρόπῳ τοιῷδε. ἐξυφήνασα Ἀμυστρὶς ἡ Ξέρξew γυνὴ φάρος μέγα τε καὶ ποικίλον καὶ θέης ἄξιον διδοῖ Ξέρξῃ. δὲ δὲ ἡσθεὶς περιβάλλεται τε καὶ ἔρχεται παρὰ
 5 τὴν Ἀρταῦντην. ἡσθεὶς δὲ καὶ ταύτῃ ἐκέλευσε αὐτὴν αἰτῆσαι
 ὅ τι βούλεται οἱ γενέσθαι ἀντὶ τῶν αὐτῷ ὑπουργημένων· πάντα γὰρ τεύξεσθαι αἰτήσασαν· τῇ δὲ κακῶς γὰρ ἔδεε πανοικίῃ γενέσθαι, πρὸς ταῦτα εἶπε Ξέρξῃ “δώσεις μοι τὸ ἄν σε αἰτήσω;” δὲ δὲ πᾶν μᾶλλον δοκέων κείνην αἰτῆσαι ὑπισχνέτο

14 <ἔρων> ἐπέπαντο? van H. 15 μὲν om. Marc. || μασίστew B
 109. 2 ἐξυφήνασα Gaisford 3 φάρος BR Marc. z || ποικίλw Marc.
 4 πρὸς Ask. 5 ταύτῃ: αὐτῇ B || ἐκέλευε Iacobitz 6 ὁ βούλεται R || οἱ om. αC Marc. (S) || οἱ . . ὑπουργημένων om. S(Gaisf.) || ὑποργη-
 μένων RV 7 αἰτήσασα Marc. 8 εἶπαι z || εἰάν B 9 πάντα
 B: πᾶν <ἀν> Madvig || ἐκείνην Sz || αἰτήσεσθαι B: αἰτήσιν Cobet, van H.
 || ὑπισχνέται B: ὑπωσχνέτο van H.

13. οὕτω δὲ . . ἐπέπαντο: this pluperfect is plainly rhetorical, and not used of strict temporal sequence. δ δὲ:
 the subject is re-expressed, and the δὲ attached, for the sake of emphasis; cp.
 c. 106. 7 supra.

14. διαμειψάμενος ἦρα, ‘transferred his affections’: perhaps the δια- (in comp.) marks the completeness of the change, ἦρα τε καὶ ἐτύγχανε the rapidity of his success. For τυγχάνειν
 op. 5. 23 (ἐτυχ), and τευξομένη supra, τεύξεσθαι c. 109 infra.

16. Ἀρταῦντη: the mere identity of name with Artayntes, c. 107 supra, is not, of course, sufficient to prove any connexion between the house of Masistes and that of his colleague and foe; but the name is of ill-omen for the house anyway—and perhaps for that reason the daughter of Masistes bears it.

109. 1. χρόνου δὲ προϊόντος: an interval occurs. ἀνάπυστα γίνεται: cp.
 6. 64 ἔδεε δὲ ὡς εἴκοι ἀνάπυστα γενόμενα ταῦτα καταπαύσαι Δημάργον τῆς βασι-λείας. The moment of ‘discovery’ is fateful.

2. Ἀμυστρὶς ἡ Ξέρξew γυνή: she hardly requires the description after 7.
 61, 114 supra; but this passage is, of course, independent of those, the second,
 indeed, of which is of later composition than this (and the former, perhaps, a gloss).

3. φάρος . . θέης ἄξιον: the hardest advocate of the extension of Hdt.’s autopsy, and first-hand authority in general, will hardly venture to argue from this phrase that Hdt. had actually seen this plaid or pall: why then press the phrase elsewhere? Cp. cc. 25, 70
supra.

4. ἡσθεὶς . . ἡσθεὶς: such are a despot’s ‘pleasures’! Cp. note to c.
 108 supra. There is some humour, perhaps, in the repetition.

6. ἀντὶ τῶν αὐτῷ ὑπουργημένων, ‘in return for her services to him’; cp.
 ὑπουργεῖν 8. 110, χρηστὰ ὑπουργεῖν 8.
 143, ὑπουργήσιν 7. 38 (of the despot himself).

7. τεύξεσθαι is absolute (‘shall obtain her request’). πάντα with αἰτήσασαν, ‘whatever she asked,’ even if she asked everything.

τῇ δὲ κακῶς γὰρ ἔδεε πανοικίῃ
 γενέσθαι: the δὲ is of course misplaced
 (unless we were to read ἡ δέ). πανοικίῃ,
 7. 39. ἔδεε κακῶς γενέσθαι is the coldest of fatalistic formulae; cp. 5. 33. It does not clearly appear what the fate of this woman was.

9. πᾶν μᾶλλον δοκέων κτλ.: cp. 7.
 38 supra.

καὶ ὥμοσε. ἡ δὲ ὡς ὥμοσε ἀδεῶς αἰτέει τὸ φᾶρος. Ξέρξης<sup>10</sup>
 δὲ παντοίως ἐγένετο οὐ βουλόμενος δοῦναι, κατ' ἄλλο μὲν οὐδέν, φοβεόμενος δὲ Ἀμυστριν, μὴ καὶ πρὶν κατεικαζούσῃ τὰ γινόμενα οὕτω ἐπευρεθῇ πρήσσω· ἀλλὰ πόλις τε ἐδίδου καὶ χρυσὸν ἄπλετον καὶ στρατόν, τοῦ ἐμελλε οὐδεὶς ἄρξειν ἀλλ' ἢ ἐκείνη, Περσικὸν δὲ κάρτα ὁ στρατὸς δῶρον. ἀλλ'<sup>15</sup> οὐ γὰρ ἔπειθε, διδοῖ τὸ φᾶρος, ἡ δὲ περιχαρὴς εὐῶσα τῷ δώρῳ ἐφόρεε τε καὶ ἀγάλλετο. καὶ ἡ Ἀμυστρίς πυνθάνεται<sup>110</sup> μιν ἔχουσαν· μαθοῦσα δὲ τὸ ποιούμενον τῇ μὲν γυναικὶ ταύτῃ οὐκ εἶχε ἔγκοτον, ἡ δὲ ἐλπίζουσα τὴν μητέρα αὐτῆς εἶναι αἰτίην καὶ ταῦτα ἐκείνην πρήσσειν, τῇ Μασίστew γυναικὶ ἐβούλεε ὀλεθρον. φυλάξασα δὲ τὸν ἄνδρα τὸν ἐωυτῆς<sup>5</sup>

10 ὥμοσε α (bis ?) || φᾶρος BR Marc. z 11 ἐγένετο CPz 12
 φοβούμενος B || δὲ om. C || ἄμυστριν C || καὶ om. B || κατεικαζούσῃ z, Stein, van H. : κατεικαζούσῃς Schweighauser : κατεικάουσα 13 γινόμενα
 Marc. || ἐπορεύθη BC || πόλεις Cd 15 ὁ στρατὸς κάρτα B : ὁ στρατὸς (ante κάρτα) del. van H. 16 φᾶρος R Marc. z 17 ἐγάλλετο R :
 ἠγάλλετο P Marc. z 110. 2 ἔχουσα C || ταύτῃ : αὐτῇ B 3 ἔχε z

10. ἀδεῶς, 'confidently,' sure of the result.

11. παντοίως ἐγένετο : cp. 7. 10. 30.

13. ἐπευρεθῇ : his detection would follow upon (ἐπ-) her previous (πρὶν) suspicions, strong (κατ-) suspicions : the dative participle κατεικαζούσῃ is observable : a dat. of the agent, instead of ὑπὸ with genitive ; cp. Madvig § 38 g (p. 37) —where the instances leave much to be desired.

πρήσσω refers here to decided malpractices ! Cp. c. 108.

πόλις : cp. the assignment of the city of Anthylla to the wife of the Satrap of Egypt for 'shoe-money,' 2. 98 ; the assignments to Themistokles, Thuc. 1. 133. 5, etc.

ἐδίδου, 'offered,' kept offering, a strong imperf. ; cp. 8. 114 supra.

14. ἄπλετον : a standing epithet of χρυσός ; cp. 1. 14, 50, 215, 3. 106 (also with οἰμωγῇ 6. 58, 8. 99, c. 24 supra, ὕδωρ 3. 12, ἀλες 4. 53) — 'gold beyond the dreams of avarice,' gold galore.

στρατόν seems the least likely to appeal to a lady : what would she do with it ? Perhaps it is only introduced for the sake of the next learned remark. Or were Persian princesses too titular colonels at times ?

16. διδοῖ, 'is giving,' 'gives,' seems a little weak after the ἐδίδου just above :

a perfect or pluperfect here would do nicely.

110. 1. πυνθάνεται : by hearsay.

2. μαθοῦσα : by native wit ; she did not, however, quite get at the facts.

τὸ ποιούμενον : cp. c. 22 supra.
 τῇ μὲν . . . οὐκ εἶχε ἔγκοτον : she did not (presumably) suspect the intrigue between Xerxes and Artaynta (the younger), their son's bride, but thought perhaps that his visits to the daughter covered an intrigue with the mother, and that the mother had bestowed the φᾶρος on the daughter. She therefore planned the destruction of the wife of Masistes. The curtain descends upon the third act of this tragedy.

3. ἔγκοτον : 8. 29 supra.

ἡ δέ, 'but she . . . ;' the resumed subject annexes the particle, cp. c. 109. 13 supra.

ἐλπίζουσα : rather 'believing' than 'hoping,' cp. Index, sub v.

4. ταῦτα ἐκείνην πρήσσειν, 'that she was at the bottom of the whole business' — 'intrigue.' The ἐκείνην is no more, strictly speaking, necessary than the ἡ just before, but its introduction makes for emphasis and lucidity. πρήσσειν as above.

5. φυλάξασα δι . . . προτιθέμενον, 'she waited her own husband's holding a royal feast,' i.e. a royal feast held by her own husband Xerxes. φυλάσσειν, cp.

Ξέρξην βασιλῆιον δειπνον προτιθέμενον· τοῦτο δὲ τὸ δειπνον παρασκευάζεται ἀπαξ τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἡμέρῃ τῇ ἐγένετο <ὁ> βασιλεὺς· οὐνομα δὲ τῷ δειπνῷ τούτῳ περσιστὶ μὲν τυκτά, κατὰ δὲ τὴν Ἑλλήνων γλῶσσαν τέλειον· τότε καὶ τὴν
 10 κεφαλὴν σμᾶται μῶνον βασιλεὺς καὶ Πέρσας δωρέεται. ταύτην δὴ τὴν ἡμέρην φυλάξασα ἡ Ἀμυστρίς χρηρίζει τοῦ Ξέρξεω δοθῆναι οἱ τὴν Μασίστew γυναῖκα. ὃ δὲ δεινὸν τε καὶ ἀνάρσιον ἐποιέετο, τοῦτο μὲν ἀδελφεοῦ γυναῖκα παραδύναι, τοῦτο δὲ ἀναιτίην εἶσαν τοῦ πρήγματος τούτου.
 111 συνῆκε γὰρ τοῦ εἵνεκεν ἐδέετο. τέλος μέντοι ἐκείνης τε λιπαρεούσης καὶ ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμου ἐξεργόμενος, ὅτι ἀτυχήσαι τὸν χρηρίζοντα οὐ σφί δυνατόν ἐστι βασιλῆιου δειπνου προ-

7 ἐν ἡμέρῃ B, Holder, van H. || ἐγένετο A || ὁ βασιλεὺς B: articulum om. Stein, Holder, van H. 8 τυκτά S 9 τὴν om. B || τέλειον: τέλεον Holder, van H. || ('τὴν om. R' Stein<sup>1</sup>?) 10 τοὺς πέρσας S: Πέρσαις z 11 χρηρίζει P: χρηζει Marc.: χρηζει B (ap. Holder: δέεται S ap. Gaisf.): χρῆζει z 15 ἔνεκεν Marc. 111. 1 μέντοι γε B, Holder || κείνης C || τε om. C 3 χρηρίζοντα P: χρηζοντα R(B?) Marc.: χρῆζοντα z, Gaisford

1. 48 φυλάξας τὴν κυρίην τῶν ἡμερῶν. δειπνον προτίθεσθαι, of the king; cp. ξείνια προθεῖναι 7. 29.

7. τῇ ἐγένετο <ὁ> βασιλεὺς, 'on the king's birthday': a strong ἐγένετο, cp. 1. 133 τῇ ἑκάστος ἐγένετο. (Not a mere Accession celebration, on the day when he became king!) <ὁ> βασιλεὺς, sc. ὁ αἰὲς B. 1. 133 illustrates the importance of birthday feasts among the Persians, who were no pessimists (like Thrakians, cp. 5. 4).

8. τυκτά: tachí; not from tyktós. The interesting philological note, even if from Hdt.'s own pen, will not convince any one that Hdt. was deeply versed in Persian; cp. 8. 85 supra.

9. τὴν κεφαλὴν σμᾶται: cp. 4. 73 σμησάμενοι τὰς κεφαλὰς (ésmân 3. 148). The meaning here must be that on his birthday and on his birthday alone (τότε μῶνον) the king appears without his tiara, or crown (Stein), his hair glistening with the oil of gladness.

12. δεινὸν τε καὶ ἀνάρσιον ἐποιέετο, 'thought it shocking and monstrous' (ánárσιος c. 37 supra), for two reasons: τοῦτο μὲν, to hand over his brother's wife to certain torture and death (he knew what was in store for her); τοῦτο δέ, she being innocent in the whole affair.

15. συνῆκε γὰρ τοῦ εἵνεκεν ἔδετο, 'he knew with what object she was making the request of him.' There had probably been previous words on the subject between Amestris and Xerxes. συνῆκα is the Attic form (Ep. ξυνέγκα). ἔδετο, cp. 8. 3.

111. 2. λιπαρεούσης: c. 45 supra.

ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμου ἐξεργόμενος: cp. ἀναγκαίῃ ἐξέργομαι 7. 96, 139 supra. As to the νόμος, Xerxes was not equal to the occasion, or his sages and councillors would have come to the rescue; cp. the Response of the Royal Justices 3. 31, τὰ βασιλεύοντι Περσέων ἐξείναι ποιεῖν τὸ ἀν βούληται. The two cases are not, indeed, precisely the same; but the moral is that the king was not bound by any law. Besides, τὸν χρηρίζοντα (masc.) might have given them a loophole!

ἀτυχήσαι, 'to fail'; the opposite of τυχεῖν, cp. c. 108 supra.

8. σφί: sc. τοῖσι Πέρσῃσι.

δυνατόν: fas, 7. 149 supra. 'Ο Kate, nice customs curtsy to great kings' (Henry V. v. ii. 293). But Custom still was king o' the king of kings! Cp 3. 38.

κειμένου, κάρτα δὴ ἀέκων κατανεύει, καὶ παραδούς ποιέει ὧδε· τὴν μὲν κελεύει ποιέειν τὰ βούλεται, ὃ δὲ μεταπεμφά- 5
 μενος τὸν ἀδελφεὸν λέγει τάδε, “Μασίστα, σὺ εἰς Δαρείου τε παῖς καὶ ἐμὸς ἀδελφεός, πρὸς δ’ ἔτι τούτοις καὶ εἰς ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός· γυναικὶ δὴ ταύτῃ τῇ νῦν συνοικέεις μὴ συνοίκες, ἀλλὰ τοι αὐτ’ αὐτῆς ἐγὼ δίδωμι θυγατέρα τὴν ἐμήν. ταύτῃ συνοίκες· τὴν δὲ νῦν ἔχεις, οὐ γὰρ δοκέει ἐμοί, μὴ ἔχε 10
 γυναικα.” ὁ δὲ Μασίστης ἀποθωμάσας τὰ λεγόμενα λέγει
 τάδε, “ὦ δέσποτα, τίνα μοι λόγον λέγεις ἄχρηστον, κελεύων [μοι] γυναῖκα, ἐκ τῆς μοι παῖδες τε νεηνίαι εἰσὶ καὶ θυγατέρες, τῶν καὶ σὺ μίαν τῷ παιδὶ τῷ σεωντοῦ ἡγάγεο γυναῖκα, αὐτῇ τέ μοι κατὰ νόον τυχάνει κάρτα ἐοῦσα· ταύτην με κελεύεις 15
 μετέντα θυγατέρα τὴν σὴν γῆμαι; ἐγὼ δὲ βασιλεῦ μεγάλη
 μὲν ποιεῖμαι ἀξιεύμενος θυγατρὸς τῆς σῆς, ποιήσω μέντοι

5 ὦδε P || μεταπεμφόμενος Marc. 6 σὺ <γὰρ> conl. Stein<sup>(2)</sup>, recep. van H. 8 δὲ B Marc. z || νυν AB 9 ἀλλά . . συνοίκες
 om. R || θυγατέρα δίδωμι S 10 δοκέεις R || μοι B || μήκετι? van H.
 11 ἀποθωμάσας Pz, Stein<sup>1</sup> 12 λόγον μοι A 13 μοι αCPz etc.
 Stein<sup>1</sup>: με B, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: secl. Stein<sup>3</sup> || τε post νεηνίαι BPz,
 Stein<sup>1</sup>, Holder || εἰσὶ τρεῖς z 14 καὶ om. B || μία R(B?): μίην z ||
 τῷ poster. l. om. C Marc. || ἡγάγετο R(B?): ἡγάγετο Marc. || αὕτη CPz
 15 τυχάνει κατὰ νόον C || με om. CP: μὲν R(B?) 16 μετέντα B: μεθέντα || τὴν om. B || σὴν: σεωντοῦ z, van H. || μέγα B, Holder, van H.
 17 ἀξιόμενος Marc.

4. κατανεύει, frequent in Homer, but rare in prose (Plato, Rep. 350 E, seems to use the word literally. Here it may be used metaphorically, ‘assents’).

ποιέει ὧδε . . ὃ δέ: the curtain rises upon the last act of the tragedy; the desperate effort of Xerxes to make things right with his brother, the barbarities of Amestris in her revenge, the splendid crime of Masistes, and the doom that just anticipates his treasonable success. ὃ δέ, cp. c. 108. 13 supra.

5. ποιέειν after ποιεῖ is rather thin.

6. Δαρείου: i.e. the son of Hystaspes. (Atossa is not mentioned, but cp. 7. 82.)

7. εἰς ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός: more, perhaps, than he could say for all his brothers. Masistes could scarcely have returned the compliment with truth.

9. δίδωμι θυγατέρα τὴν ἐμήν, ‘I offer you my daughter,’ in marriage; she is, therefore, niece to Masistes. Such near marriages were not illegal even in Sparta (cp. 7. 239 supra), much less in polygamous Persia.

10. ἔχεις· ἔχε, ‘have to wife’; cp. 7. 61. 13.

δοκέει, ‘seems good.’

11. ἀποθωμάσας, ‘when he had recovered from his astonishment’; cp. 8. 65 supra.

12. ἄχρηστον: a meiosis, ‘injurious,’ inexpedient.

14. αὕτῃ τέ μοι κατὰ νόον . . ἐοῦσα: cp. the story of Anaxandrides 5. 39, who was allowed to retain his first wife. Masistes might be puzzled in Persia to know why marrying the king’s daughter should involve putting away his first wife (and might have suspected Xerxes of too personal an interest in the matter); but even in the Harem there is a chief wife or sultana, and this fact is perhaps taken for granted in the story.

16. γῆμαι, of the bridegroom (γῆμασθαι, of the bride; e.g. 4. 117).

μεγάλα μὲν ποιεῖμαι, ‘account it greatness,’ ‘am highly honoured’; the plural is observable, cp. 1. 119 μεγάλα ποιησάμενος.

τούτων οὐδέτερα. σὺ δὲ μηδαμῶς βιώ πρήγματος τοιοῦδε δέόμενος· ἀλλὰ τῇ τε σῇ θυγατρὶ ἀνὴρ ἄλλος φανήσεται 20 ἐμεῦ οὐδὲν ἥσσω, ἐμέ τε ἕα γυναικὶ τῇ ἐμῇ συνοικεῖν.” ὁ μὲν δὴ τοιοῦτοισι ἀμείβεται, Ξέρξης δὲ θυμωθεὶς λέγει τάδε· “οὕτω τοι, Μασίστα, πέπρηκται· οὔτε γὰρ ἂν τοι δοίην θυγατέρα τὴν ἐμὴν γῆμαι, οὔτε ἐκείνη πλεῖνα χρόνον συνοικήσεις, ὥς μάθης τὰ διδόμενα δέκεσθαι.” ὁ δὲ ὡς ταῦτα 25 ἤκουσε, εἶπας τοσόνδε ἐχώρει ἔξω “δέσποτα, οὐ δὴ κού με 112 ἀπώλεσας;” ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τῷ διὰ μέσου χρόνῳ, ἐν τῷ Ξέρξης τῷ ἀδελφεῷ διελέγετο, ἡ Ἀμυστρὶς μεταπεμφαμένη τοὺς δορυφόρους τοῦ Ξέρξεω διαλυμαίνεται τὴν γυναῖκα τοῦ
 Μασίστεω· τοὺς τε μαζοὺς ἀποταμοῦσα κυσὶ προέβαλε καὶ

18 τούτων z || οὐδέτερον B || τοιούτου R(S) V 20 ἥσσω z: ἔσσω
 Schaefer, van H. || συνοικεῖν R(S) V, van H. 21 τοῦτοισιν ἀμείβετο B
 22 οὕτω τοι: οὕτω δὴ τοι z || δοίην ἔτι R(S) V, Holder, van H.: δώην α:
 δώην CP Marc. 23 γῆμαι: γυναῖκα B, Holder, van H. || ἔτι πλεῖνα B
 24 ὡς pr. l. om. Marc. || ἤκουσε ταῦτα B 25 κού Schaefer, van H.
 26 ἀπώλεσας; Stein: volgo punctum ponitur 112. 1 ἐν δ B 2
 ἀδελφῷ Marc. || ἀμυστρὶς Ask. hic et alibi 3 τοῦ: τοὺς Krueger || τοῦ:
 τὴν B, Holder, van H. 4 μασίστει B || μαστοὺς B

18. μηδαμῶς βιώ . . δέόμενος, ‘do not press (insist on) thy request.’

22. πέπρηκται: ita sane (οὕτω) actum est de te (Baehr); igitur hoc profecisti (Schweighauser); deine Sache steht jetzt so (Stein, taking οὕτω to refer to what follows).

24. ὡς μάθης τὰ διδόμενα δέκεσθαι, ‘that you may learn to accept what is offered to you.’ This must be almost a proverbial expression; cp. 8. 26, 137 supra.

25. εἶπας τοσόνδε ἐχώρει ἔξω, ‘all he said before going out was . . .’

οὐ δὴ κού με ἀπώλεσας; ‘can it be thou hast undone me!’ The v.l. κω gives a good sense: nondum sane me perdidisti (Baehr); ‘thou hast not yet taken my life’ (Rawlinson), i.e. there is still fight left in me; I am not at the end of my resources (of course with a period, not an interrogative); this well accords with the sequel.

112. 1. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ κτλ.: the second pitiless scene in this act of the tragedy: non tamen intus | digna geri promes in scaenam, multaque tolles | ex oculis, quae mox narret facundia praesens (Hor. de A. p. 182 ff.). What a meeting between the faithful wife and her fond husband! What vows of vengeance by the stalwart sons, what tears and lamentation of the daughters, over the mother’s dying bed! What self-reproaches of the guilty one before her self-inflicted end! It is in a way strange that no Greek playwright ever utilized the material lying to his hand in the pages of Hdt.

3. διαλυμαίνεται: the simple verb λυμαίνεσθαι is common, cp. 8. 28 supra; the prep., of course, strengthens it. The perfect part. ἐντὶ is passive.

4. τοὺς τε μαζοὺς: cp. 4. 202. If the ἀποταμοῦσα is taken to extend down as far as χεῖλα, and the ἐκταμοῦσα as applying only to γλώσσας, there is grammatically an asyndeton; probably the καὶ after προέβαλε connects that verb with ἀποπέμπει and ἐκταμοῦσα ‘governs’ ῥίνα, ὄτα, χεῖλα as well as γλώσσας. But the sentence is unsightly from every point of view. It sounds barbarous, savage, unhellenic enough; but it curiously resembles the threat of Antinoos to Iros, Od. 18. 84 ff. πέμψω σ’ ἡπειρόνδε, βαλὼν ἐν νηὶ μελαίνῃ, | εἰς Ἐχέτω βασιλῆα, βροτῶν δηλήμονα πάντων, ὅς κ’ ἀπὸ ῥίνα τάρησι καὶ οὖατα νηλεῖ χαλκῷ, | μήδεα τ’ ἐξέρσας δάη κυσὶ ὠμὰ δάσασθαι.

ρίνα καὶ ὧτα καὶ χεῖλεα καὶ γλῶσσαν ἐκταμούσα ἐς οἶκόν 5
 μιν ἀποπέμπει διαλελυμασμένην. ὁ δὲ Μασίστης οὐδέν κω 113
 ἀκηκοὺς τούτων, ἐλπόμενος δέ τί οἱ κακὸν εἶναι, ἐσπίπτει δρόμῳ ἐς τὰ οἰκία. ἰδὼν δὲ διεφθαρμένην τὴν γυναῖκα, αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα συμβουλευσάμενος τοῖσι παισὶ ἐπορεύετο ἐς Βάκτρα σὺν τε τοῖσι ἑωυτοῦ υἱοῖσι καὶ δὴ κου τισὶ καὶ 5
 ἄλλοισι ὡς ἀποστήσων νομὸν τὸν Βάκτριον καὶ ποιήσων τὰ
 μέγιστα κακῶν βασιλέα· τὰ περ ἂν καὶ ἐγένετο, ὡς ἐμοὶ

6 μιν om. Marc. 113. 1 κω om. Marc. 2 δέ τί: δ' ἔτι
 R(B) || οἱ R 5 Βάκτραν C || πον Marc. 6 νόμον CR Marc.
 7 κακὸν Marc. || βασιλῆα =

113. 2. ἀκηκοὺς . . ἐλπόμενος: the former participle is clearly stronger than ἀκούσας, the latter is clearly not 'hoping.'

3. διεφθαρμένην, 'utterly ruined' (but not necessarily 'dead'); cp. 1. 34 οὐτερος μὲν διεφθαρτο, ἦν γὰρ δὴ κωφός, 38 τὸν γὰρ δὴ ἕτερον διεφθαρμένον τὴν ἀκοὴν οὐκ εἶναι μοι λογίζομαι. But obviously the miserable woman could not long survive such treatment.

αὐτίκα μετὰ ταῦτα introduces the last scene (shifted to Bactria), where, after conspiring with his sons, Masistes raises the flag of revolt in his satrapy, and falls, his brave boys fighting round him, at the head of an army of devoted adherents, in battle against the all too loyal subjects of the feeble tyrant.

5. Βάκτρα, the city of Bakh, capital of the Βάκτριος νομός, or Baktrian satrapy (3. 93), of which he was governor (ὑπαρχος τῶν Βακτρῶν = Βακτριανῶν l.c.). The city is mentioned 6. 9 (as a sort of ultima Thule of the Persian Empire from the Greek point of view; but cp. 4. 204). On the Baktrians cp. 7. 64 supra, where the Σάκαι are associated with them, as here.

7. τὰ περ ἂν καὶ ἐγένετο, but did not, for Xerxes took measures to crush him. Hdt. implies that Masistes did not reach Baktia, or the Baktrian land, but was overtaken on the way thither, and came to an end. The mention of his army, however (καὶ τὴν στρατὴν τὴν ἐκείνου), seems hardly consistent with that view, which is also not in itself probable; Masistes and his sons would have reached Baktia long before the army collected and sent against them by Xerxes. Hdt. is led into the inconsistency and error apparently by his own notion (ὡς ἐμοὶ δοκεῖν) that, if Masistes had once succeeded in raising a revolt in Baktia, he would have wrought the king no end of woe; in other words, the ease with which Masistes was suppressed convinced Hdt. that he had not actually raised a rebellion in Baktia, and as the Baktrians were devoted to Masistes, he cannot have reached Bakh, or he would have raised a rebellion.

Probably Masistes, as satrap of Baktia, did raise the province, and fell fighting at the head of the eastern levies of the empire. The gruesome story just related was an attempt to explain the cause of the revolt in terms acceptable to Hellenic romance. There may have been a set of more political factors at work. There was a constant possibility in the Achaemenid Empire of a rupture between the eastern and western halves, the Iranian highland, and the older centres and areas of secular civilization. The weakness of Xerxes, and the ignominious failure of the European expedition, were calculated to provoke disloyalty. Masistes, his brother, was but re-enacting the rôle of Bardiya, the son of Kyros the Great; Xerxes, or his servants, succeeded, as Kambyses, or again as Dareios had succeeded, in reasserting the unity of the empire. Masistes, who like Xerxes himself united both strains in the Achaemenid pedigree (cp. 7. 11 supra), was a very formidable Pretender, and a far better man evidently than his brother. Rawlinson (ad l.) seems to underestimate the possibilities of a Baktrian secession, or Home-rule movement, though he is justified in correcting the excesses of Blakesley in the other direction. The loyalty of the Baktrians to Dareios and their general loyalty to the Achaemenid δοκέειν, εἴ περ ἔφθη ἀναβάς ἐς τοὺς Βακτρίους καὶ τοὺς Σάκας· καὶ γὰρ ἔστεργόν μιν καὶ ἦν ὑπαρχὸς τῶν Βακτρίων.

 10 ἀλλὰ γὰρ Ξέρξης πυθόμενος ταῦτα ἐκείνους πρήσσοντα, πέμψας ἐπ' αὐτὸν στρατιήν, ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ κατέκτεινε αὐτὸν τε ἐκείνους καὶ τοὺς παῖδας αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν στρατιήν τὴν ἐκείνου. κατὰ μὲν τὸν ἔρωτα τὸν Ξέρξεω καὶ τὸν Μασίστew θάνατον τοσαῦτα ἐγένετο·

114 Οἱ δὲ ἐκ Μυκάλης ὀρμηθέντες Ἕλληνες ἐπ' Ἑλλησπόντου πρῶτον μὲν περὶ Λεκτὸν ὄρμεον, ὑπὸ ἀνέμων ἀπολαμφθέντες, ἐνθεύτεν δὲ ἀπίκοντο ἐς Ἀβυδὸν καὶ τὰς γεφύρας εὖρον διαλελυμένας, τὰς ἐδόκεον εὐρήσειν ἔτι ἐντεταμένας, καὶ τουτέων
 5 οὐκ ἤκιστα εἵνεκεν ἐς τὸν Ἑλλησπόντον ἀπίκοντο. τοῖσι μὲν νυν ἀμφὶ Λευτυχίδην Πελοποννησίοισι ἔδοξε ἀποπλέειν ἐς τὴν

8 δοκέει z: δοκεῖ van H. 9 τέ μιν B Marc. z, Holder, van H. 11
 κτείνει B: κατέκτειναν z 12 πέδας z || ωύτου z 114. 1 ἐπὶ Marc.
 2 ὄρμεον αSV: ὄρμεον || ὑπὸ ἀνέμων om. Marc. 4 τουτέων z, Stein:
 τούτων 5 ἔνεκα z 6 λευτυχίδα B Marc. z

House (based upon the argumentum a silentio) might not prevent their preferring a Masistes to a Xerxes. The failure of Masistes in the end may have been due to the fact that the flower of the Baktrians had been culled by Mardonios (cp. 8. 113 supra), and their bones were now enriching the plain of Boiotia. The exact date of Masistes' attempt is problematic; but it falls, no doubt, into the Pentekontaetëris.

114. 1. ἐκ Μυκάλης: in c. 106 supra the Greeks have been conveyed from Mykale back to Samos, and have started from Samos for the Hellespont. Moreover, it was only at Samos (according to that passage) that they had decided on their policy.

ὀρμηθέντες, of physical motion (cp. 7. 37. 6, 7).

2. Λεκτόν: the position of Lekton is more nearly indicated by Thucydides 8. 101. 3. It is the SW. corner of the Troad, the extreme projection of Mount Ida (as is implied even in Homer, I. 14. 283-4), now Cape Baba, or Sta. Maria—the most westerly point of the continent of Asia.

ὄρμεον, though from another verb, is not very happy in juxtaposition. Cp. ὄρμεον . . ὀρμώμενοι 7. 22. 3, 4.

ἀπολαμφθέντες, intercepti (Valla); cp. 2. 115. Wesseling compares Livy 37. 37 Eumenes rex, conatus primo ab Hellesponto reducere classem in hiberna Elaeam, adversis deinde ventis quum aliquot diebus superare Lecton promontorium non potuisset, in terram egressus . . in castra Romana (ad caput Caici amnis) cum parva manu contendit. But Eumenes (in 190 B.C.) was going from the Hellespont to the Caicus; the Greeks in 479 B.C. from Samos to the Hellespont. Violent north, or west, winds would have held them up: would wind from any quarter but the south have hindered Eumenes? (Perhaps the west? ζεφύρου τε καὶ νότου εἵνεκα 7. 36 supra.)

3. Ἀβυδὸν: cp. 8. 130, etc. As to the bridges, and the policy of going to the Hellespont, cp. c. 106 supra.

6. ἔδοξε, 'Leotychidas and his Peloponnesian following decided . . . ἀμφί, cp. c. 69 supra; with ἔδοξε contr. ἔδοκε c. 106 supra. Stein (ad l.) understands Thuc. 1. 90 to represent Leotychidas and the Peloponnesians as going straight home from Samos; but the case is not quite clear. Thucydides does not, indeed, expressly record the removal to the Hellespont; but neither does he expressly say that it was Samos wherefrom the Peloponnesians returned; he merely says, the Peloponnesians returned, the Athenians remained. On this point there is no contradiction between Hdt. and Thuc.

Ἑλλάδα, Ἀθηναίοισι δὲ καὶ Ξανθίππῳ τῷ στρατηγῷ αὐτοῦ ὑπομείναντας πειρᾶσθαι τῆς Χερσονήσου. οἱ μὲν δὲ ἀπέπλεον, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἐκ τῆς Ἀβύδου διαβάντες ἐς τὴν Χερσόνησον Σηστὸν ἐπολιόρκεον. ἐς δὲ τὴν Σηστὸν ταύτην, ὡς ἐόντος 115 ἰσχυροτάτου τείχεος τῶν ταύτη, συνήλθον, ὡς ἤκουσαν παρεῖναι τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἐς τὸν Ἑλλησπόντον, ἔκ τε τῶν ἀλλέων τῶν περιοικίδων, καὶ δὴ καὶ ἐκ Καρδίας πόλιος Οἰόβαζος ἀνὴρ Πέρσης, ὃς τὰ ἐκ τῶν γεφυρέων ὄπλα ἐνθαῦτα ἦν κεκομικώς. 5 εἶχον δὲ ταύτην ἐπιχώριοι Αἰολεές, συνήσαν δὲ Πέρσαι τε καὶ

8 χερρονήσου CP 9 διαβαλόντες B, Holder || χερρόνησον CP
115. 3 ἀλλέων Stein: ἄλλων || τῶν om. S, Ask. 4 δὴ καὶ: δὴ B ||
οἰόβαζος B 6 εἶχον z

7. Ἀθηναίοισι δὲ καὶ Ξανθίππῳ, 'the Athenians and their strategos, Xanthippos,' decided to remain and attempt the recovery of the Chersonese. Hdt. does not make clear, what Thuc. l.c. expressly records, that the new allies—οἱ ἀπ' Ἰωνίας καὶ Ἑλλησπόντου ξύμμαχοι, ἡδὴ ἀφεστηκότες ἀπὸ βασιλείας—remained with the Athenians and assisted them. Xanthippos is here named for the first time since 8. 131 (but without his patronymic); not much credit is given him for the victory of Mykale.

αὐτοῦ: not quite strictly 'on the spot,' for they move across to Sestos; it refers perhaps rather to 'the Hellespont' than to 'Abydos.'

8. ὑπομείναι has four meanings or uses in Hdt. (a) 'To remain behind,' as here; cp. τὸ ὑπομένον ἐν Σπάρτῃ 7. 209. (b) 'To await, sustain, an attack,' a defensive attitude; cp. 4. 3 οὐκ ὑπομένουσι (as enemies, cp. 7. 101, 120, and c. 23 supra). (c) Simply 'to await' (as a friend), 3. 9 ὑπέμενε ἐνθαῦτα τὸν Καμβύσῳ στρατὸν (as friends). (d) Absolutely, 'to abide,' to survive; 4. 149 οὐ γὰρ ὑπέμειναν τὰ τέκνα.

9. τὴν Χερσόνησον: the Chersonese 'on the Hellespont' last mentioned 7. 58 (cp. 7. 33. 3, where it should have been noted that the name had occurred previously c. 22. 3 without further specification, a fact pointing to the independence of the two passages). Thucydides speaks of it always, like Hdt. here, simply as 'the Chersonese.' Our oldest authority for the designation ἡ Θερραία Χερρόνησος appears to be Strabo 92, etc. Cp. 6. 33 supra.

10. Σηστὸν: last mentioned in 7. 78; cp. 7. 33. It was an old possession of the Athenians; cp. 4. 143, and 6. 34, etc. Sestos was, or was to be made, φρούριον καὶ φυλακὴ τοῦ παντὸς Ἑλλησπόντου (cp. Thuc. 8. 62. 3).

115. 1. ταύτην: there was only one Sestos; the demonstrative is purely stylistic, referring to the previous nomination.

ὡς ἐόντος, 'it being . . .' as a matter of fact (cp. ὡς οὐ παρόντος αὐτοῦ 8. 69 supra); the gender is determined by τείχεος.

2. συνήλθον: sc. οἱ περίοικοι (cp. τῶν περιοικίδων), or, more probably, ἄνδρες Πέρσαι, out of ἀνὴρ Πέρσης below, just as ἀλλέων sc. πολλῶν out of πόλιος. But has a word or two dropped out before καὶ δὴ καὶ? (Cp. cc. 101. 14, 102. 6 supra.)

4. Καρδίας: cp. 7. 58 supra.

Οἰόβαζος: on this name cp. 7. 68 supra.

5. ἐνθαῦτα ἦν κεκομικώς: is this expression merely equivalent to ἐνθαῦτα ἐκεκομικέ? If so, why not ἐκεῖσε instead of ἐνθαῦτα? The substantive or auxiliary verb has at least affected the adverb! But ἐνθαῦτα ἦν is a complete statement in itself, save that τὰ [ἐκ] τῶν γεφυρέων ὄπλα demands a governing verb. Moreover, ἐνθαῦτα might=ἐν Καρδίῃ if ἦν κ. simply=ἐκεκομικέ. In fine ἦν κεκομικώς is not a mere temporal pluperfect, used indifferently with the thematic form, or the aorist; it records an action, past indeed, but of still abiding effect. In this case perhaps even something more: 'he was in Sestos whither he had conveyed the ropes.'

6. ταύτην: sc. τὴν Σηστὸν ταύτην supra. 'Aiolians of the locality' were in actual possession of the town, but

116 τῶν ἄλλων συμμάχων συχνὸς ὄμιλος. ἐτυράννευε δὲ τούτου τοῦ νομοῦ Ξέρξῳ ὑπαρχος Ἀρταύκτης, ἀνὴρ μὲν Πέρσης, δεινὸς δὲ καὶ ἀτάσθαλος, ὃς καὶ βασιλέα ἐλαύνοντα ἐπ' Ἀθήνας ἐξηπάτησε, τὰ Πρωτεσίλειω τοῦ Ἰφίκλου χρήματα

116. 1 τοῦ νομοῦ τούτου B
Kallenberg, van H. || βασιλῆα z

3 δεινὸς τε BC: 'an δεινὸς δέ τε!'

the garrison included Persians and a good crowd of allies 'as well' (ἄλλων, cp. 8. 55. 5).

ἐπιχέριοι Αἰολῆες: i.e. Aiolians on the European side, in distinction to those of Aiolis proper (cp. 7. 95 supra). Ainos (7. 58) was an 'Aiolian' town, like Sestos (also Alopekonneseos, Skymn. 705).

116. 1. ἐτυράννευε δὲ τούτου τοῦ νομοῦ. This νομός, a European, a Thracian province, is not reckoned in the list of satrapies 3. 89-94 (which is ex hypothesi valid for the year 520 B.C.), but it must have been constituted by Dareios about 512 B.C. (cp. 4. 143 and 7. 105 supra), though it may have been temporarily lost during the Ionic Revolt (498-493 B.C.) and only recovered shortly before Marathon (cp. 6. 40, 41, 104). The verb looks as though it might carry a 'dyslogistic' intention here ("richtiger ἐπετρόκεινε," Stein, as in 7. 78). The satrap was specifically Ξέρξῳ ὑπαρχος, having been actually appointed by him; he is described in 7. 35 as Σητοῦ ὑπαρχος, Sestos being no doubt the residence of the governor. This variation is one of several observations in this case, which prove once more with how much insouciance Hdt. works from various sources in different contexts.

2. Ἀρταύκτης might never have been mentioned before! In 7. 33 supra his fate has already been related—and this passage consequently discounted. In 7. 78 he has figured as one of the ἀρχοντες in the army-list, and his patronymic is there supplied (ὁ Χερδάμωτος). The first passage is probably a late insertion. The army-list is, of course, sui generis. The present passage may well be of the original draft of the Book, i.e. of older composition than 7. 33.

3. δεινὸς δὲ καὶ ἀτάσθαλος: not what might have been expected of a Persian! ἀτάσθαλος 7. 35, 8. 109 supra. He was also something of a humourist, to judge by the sequel. ὃς καὶ oddly enough reappears 7. 33.

βασιλέα ἐλαύνοντα ἐπ' Ἀθήνας: not much reliance is to be placed on this chronological index, nor indeed upon the anecdote which it introduces; but the phrase clearly betrays the Attic or Atticizing source of the story, making Athens the goal of the king's march.

4. ἐξηπάτησε . . ἐπιδόμηνος: an inverted predication; in reality, and by deceiving the king he filched away the objects of value. It is not necessarily implied that otherwise Xerxes would have taken them himself: rather, (that) the king was the natural patron and protector of the shrine. There is a comical contradiction between Blakeley and Rawlinson at this point:

B. II. 492.

"The contrast between the reckless proceedings of Artayctes and the tenderness of Xerxes for religious institutions of exactly the same character as the Protesilaos-worship (see 7. 49) is not to be overlooked."

R. IV. 3 462.

"It harmonised with the general designs of Xerxes, who had no real tenderness for the Greek religion, but sought to depress and disgrace it in every possible way (vide supra 8. 33, 35, 53 etc.)."

In fact both observations are somewhat beside the mark, and ascribe too conscious and politic an attitude to Xerxes in the question of Religion and Greek Religion. A good deal of the apparent evidence on the subject is afterthought and reflexion, which glorified the war by lending it a religious or quasi-religious halo; cp. note to 8. 109. 15.

Πρωτεσίλειω τοῦ Ἰφίκλου. Protesilaos led to Troy the men of Phylake, Pyrasos, Iton, Autron, Ptelion, leaving a wife and half-built house behind him in Phylake. First of all Achaeans he leaped ashore, and was felled in the very act by a Dardan, Iliad (2. 695-702). At home in Phylake he was worshipped (as a hero): Πρωτεσίλεια, τὸ τεὸν δ' ἀνδρῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐν Φυλάκῃ τέμενος συμβάλλομαι, Pindar, Isth. 1. 58. And in the Thracian Chersonese his tomb (τάφος) was to be seen, close to Elaiids; cp. Thuc. 8. 102. 3 τὸ ἱερὸν τοῦ Πρωτεσίλειου, Strabo 596 τὸ Πρωτεσίλειον. Pausanias (1. 34. 2) appears to class him with Trophonios

<τὰ> ἐξ Ἐλαιούντος ὑπελόμενος. ἐν γὰρ Ἐλαιούντι τῆς 5 Χερσονήσου ἐστὶ Προτεσίλειω τάφος τε καὶ τέμενος περὶ αὐτόν, ἔνθα ἦν χρήματα πολλὰ καὶ φιάλαι χρύσειαι καὶ ἀργύρεαι καὶ χαλκὸς καὶ ἐσθῆς καὶ ἄλλα ἀναθήματα, τὰ Ἀρταύκτης ἐσύλησε, βασιλέος δόντος, λέγων δὲ τοιάδε Ξέρξην 10
 διεβάλετο, “δέσποτα, ἔστι οἶκος ἀνδρὸς Ἑλληνος ἐνθαῦτα, ὅς 10
 ἐπὶ γῆν σὴν στρατεύσάμενος δίκης κυρήσας ἀπέθανε· τούτου μοι δὸς τὸν οἶκον, ἵνα καὶ τις μάθῃ ἐπὶ γῆν τὴν σὴν
 μὴ στρατεύεσθαι.” ταῦτα λέγων εὐπετέως ἔμελλε ἀναπείσειν Ξέρξην δοῦναι ἀνδρὸς οἶκον, οὐδὲν ὑποτοπηθέντα τῶν ἐκείνους 15
 ἐφρόνεε. ἐπὶ γῆν δὲ τὴν βασιλέος στρατεύεσθαι [Πρωτεσίλειον]

5 <τὰ> Stein<sup>(1)(2)3</sup> || ἔλεούντος αβ || ὑφελόμενος: corr. Wesseling,
 Koen: αἰτήσας β, Holder || ἔλεούντι αβ || 6 χερρονήσου CP Marc.
 7 ἦν z 9 βασιλῆος z || Ξέρξεια z 10 διεβάλλετο β Marc.:
 διέβαλε coni. Stein<sup>(2)</sup>, prob. van H. || οἶκος ἐστὶν β 11 γῆν τὴν σὴν β, Holder, van H. || στρατεύόμενος PRz || <τῆς> δίκης coni. Stein<sup>(2)</sup>, recep. van H. 12 τις καὶ β 14 λέγων om. Marc. 15
 Ξέρξεια z || δοῦναι <οἱ τοῦ>? Stein<sup>1</sup>: δοῦναι ἀνδρὸς οἶκον secl. van H.
 16 ἐφρόνει van H. || βασιλῆος z || στρατεύσασθαι? Stein<sup>2</sup>: adsc. van H. ||
 Πρωτεσίλειον secl. Stein<sup>3</sup>

(cp. 8. 138 supra) and Amphiarao (ibid.), as all three heroes who have been apotheosized (that is of the very essence of Polytheism, cp. A. Lyall, Asiatic Studies, pp. 20 ff.). Stein (note ad l.) asserts that he was (ohne Zweifel) a pre-Hellenic deity, in the Chersonese, identified, for some reason or other, with the Greek hero. Our own Wordsworth has made his ghost the subject of a pseudo-antique conversation in one of his best-known poems (Laodamia), the motifs of which he may have taken from Hyginus' Fabulae 103, 104. Those fables, especially the second, point to an orgiastic, or mysterious cult, proper to women, and perhaps at home in Thrace, which might in part at least explain the worst charges against Artayktes; cp. infra. Iphiklos is the father of Protesilaos and Podarkes (Iliad l.c.) and himself the son of Phylakos (ibid. 13. 698), the founder of Phylake. According to the myth in Od. 11. 281-297 he was the owner of beeves, that Neleus was bent on getting stolen, and the would-be cattle-lifter was caught and kept a year in bonds by the might of Iphiklos. These things may be in part an allegory; cp. note to c. 93. 3 supra.

5. Ἐλαιούντος: cp. 7. 22 supra.

The shrine was evidently a wealthy one (τὰ χρήματα, objects of value, cp. 8. 35. 8).

6. ἐστὶ . . ἦν: a designed contrast, the 'tomb' and 'temenos' existing in Hdt.'s own day (as in Thucydides', 8. 102. 3), the objects of value having been carried off by Artayktes. Below, a ἱερόν and an ἄδινον are further implied.

10. διεβάλετο = ἐξηπάτησε just above; the active is used generally in this sense; cp. 8. 110 supra, 5. 50, 97.

11. δίκης κυρήσας does not imply actual judicial proceedings.

12. τις, as in 8. 109.

15. ἀνδρός is of course emphatic; Artayktes, δεινὸς καὶ ἀτάσθαλος, had implicitly denied the divinity and the heroism of Protesilaos. Xerxes would not have granted him his request had he known that the tomb of a hero, the temple of a god, was in question. ὑποτοπηθέντα is from the deponent ὑποτοπίζομαι, cp. 6. 70.

16. ἐπὶ γῆν δὲ τὴν βασιλῆος στρατεύεσθαι. Hdt. considers it in no way necessary to explain further or account for Protesilaos: his name and story were familiar to all Hellenes. The Persian assumption of an immemorial sovereignty over Asia is well illustrated supra 7. 11

ἀποδράντες οἳ τε Πέρσαι καὶ ὁ Ἀρταύκης καὶ ὁ Οἰόβαζος, <τὸ> ὅπισθε τοῦ τείχεος καταβάντες, τῇ ἦν ἐρημότατον τῶν 5 πολεμίων. ὥς δὲ ἡμέρη ἐγένετο, οἱ Χερσονησίται ἀπὸ τῶν πύργων ἐσήμηναν τοῖσι Ἀθηναίοισι τὸ γεγονός καὶ τὰς πύλας ἄνοιξαν. τῶν δὲ οἱ μὲν πλεῖνες ἐδίωκον, οἱ δὲ τὴν πόλιν εἶχον. Οἰόβαζον μὲν νυν ἐκφεύγοντα ἐς τὴν Θρηίκην Θρήικες 119 Ἀψίνθιοι λαβόντες ἔθυσαν Πλειστόρῳ ἐπιχωρίῳ θεῷ τρόπῳ τῷ σφετέρῳ, τοὺς δὲ μετ' ἐκείνου ἄλλῳ τρόπῳ ἐφόνευσαν.
 οἱ δὲ ἀμφὶ τὸν Ἀρταύκτην ὕστεροι ὀρμηθέντες φεύγειν, καὶ
 ὥς κατελαμβάνοντο ὀλίγον ἐόντες ὑπὲρ Αἰγὸς ποταμῶν, ἀλεξό- 5

4 ὁ ante Οἰόβαζος om. αP Marc. 5 <τὸ> Stein<sup>(2)</sup> 3 || ὅπισθεν
 R(S) V || τοῦ ἦν ἐρημότατος R || τῶν om. z 7 ἐρημύναντο R 8 πλεῖνες om. P<sup>t</sup> Marc. 9 ἔχον z: ἔσχον? Krueger 119. 1 ἐκφυ-γόντα B, Holder, van H. || θρήικην θρήικες R(S)V 3 ἄλλῳ τρόπῳ del.
 Gomperz 4 ἀρταύκτην C || ὕστερον BC || καὶ om. z, van H.: secl.
 Holder 5 ὀλίγοι S || ποταμοῦ Sz || ἀλεξάμενοι S doubt of leather=ἰμάντας (5. 25). Cp. Aristoph. Lys. 923, Ekk. 533 (cp. 7. 36).

5. ὅπισθε τοῦ τείχεος: on the side of the wall away from the Athenian lines, which did not surround the city. τῶν πολεμίων, sc. τῶν Ἀθηναίων. Could this turn occur in an Attic source?

6. οἱ Χερσονησίται: the inhabitants of the Chersonese ἀπὸ πασῶν τῶν πόλεων, cp. 4. 137, 6. 38, 39. (The names of upwards of forty places are recoverable, cp. Pauly-Wissowa iii. 2247 f. Of these about nine are found in Hdt., viz. Ἀγορή 7. 58, Αἰγὸς ποταμοὶ c. 119 infra, Ἑλαιοὺς c. 116 supra, etc., Ἑλλης τάφος 7. 58, Καρδίη c. 115 supra, etc., Λευκὴ ἀκτὴ 7. 25, Μάδντος 7. 33, c. 120 infra, Πακτύη 6. 36, Σηστός c. 114 supra, etc.)

9. εἶχον, 'mounted guard on . . .,' a very strong ἔχειν.

119. 1. Θρήικες Ἀψίνθιοι: these were old enemies of the Δόλογοι Θρήικες, the occupants of the Chersonese (cp. 6. 34), and the wall from Kardias to Paktye was built by Miltiades I. to keep them out (ib. 36). Steph. B. sub v. Αἰγὸς gives Ἀψυνθος as another name; cp. 7. 58 supra. Blakesley well describes them as the Perioikoi of Ainos; cp. Strabo, 331 fr. 58, ἡ μὲν γὰρ Αἰγὸς κεῖται κατὰ τὴν πρότερον Ἀψυνθίδα νῦν δὲ Κορινθίαν λεγομένην, ἡ δὲ τῶν Κικόνων ἐφεξῆς πρὸς δόσον. The word Apsinthos, or Apsinthioi, belongs to the group of proper names in -nth- of which Korinthos, Zakynthos, Perinthos (in Thrace) are only the best known examples; cp. Oberhammer, Akarnanien (1887), p. 58. The termination appears on the Asianic side in names formed with -nd- (cp. Kretschmer, op. c. 293 ff.). Whatever be the positive significance of this observation, it confirms the opinion that the whole group of names belongs to a non-Greek, a prae-Hellenic population.

2. ἔθυσαν Πλειστόρῳ ἐπιχωρίῳ θεῷ: this Thracian deity is perhaps the Thracian Ares of 5. 7. Their method of human sacrifice (τρόπῳ τῷ σφετέρῳ) will have differed from the rite as practised by the Tauroi (4. 103), and perhaps resembled that of the Getai, in the cult of Salmoxis (4. 94). Cp. further 7. 114. The companions of Oiobazos were put to death in another fashion, and also not as a religious sacrifice.

4. οἱ δὲ ἀμφὶ τὸν Ἀ., 'Artayktes and his followers,' cp. c. 114 supra.

ὀρμηθέντες, of physical motion; cp. ibid.

5. κατελαμβάνοντο ὀλίγον ἐόντες ὑπὲρ Αἰγὸς ποταμῶν, 'were overtaken while they were a little way beyond Aigos-potamoi.' The participle is not strictly necessary, and suggests itself therefore as predicative. 'They were not far beyond Aigospotamoi when they were overtaken.' Xenophon Hell. 2. 1. 21 describes the place as 'opposite Lampsakos.' Rawlinson will not allow that Aigospotamoi was more than an open

μενοι χρόνον ἐπὶ συγχρὸν οἱ μὲν ἀπέθανον οἱ δὲ ζῶντες ἐλάμφθησαν. καὶ συνδήσαντες σφέας οἱ Ἕλληνες ἦγον ἐς Σηστόν, μετ' αὐτῶν δὲ καὶ Ἀρταύκτην δεδεμένον αὐτὸν τε καὶ 120 τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ. καὶ τεφ τῶν φυλασσόντων λέγεται ὑπὸ Χερσονησιτέων ταρίχους ὀπτῶντι τέρας γενέσθαι τοιόνδε· οἱ τάριχοι ἐπὶ τῷ πυρὶ κείμενοι ἐπάλλοντό τε καὶ ἥσπαιρον ὅκως περ ἰχθύες νεοάλωτοι. καὶ οἱ μὲν περιχυθέντες ἐθώμαζον, 5 ὁ δὲ Ἀρταύκτης ὡς εἶδε τὸ τέρας, καλέσας τὸν ὀπτῶντα τοὺς ταρίχους ἔφη “ξεῖνε Ἀθηναῖε, μηδὲν φοβέο τὸ τέρας τοῦτο· οὐ γὰρ σοὶ πέφηνε, ἀλλ' ἐμοὶ σημαίνει ὁ ἐν Ἐλαιούντι Πρωτεσίλειος ὅτι καὶ τεθνεὺς καὶ τάριχος ἐὼν δύναμιν πρὸς θεῶν ἔχει τὸν ἀδικέοντα τίνεσθαι. νῦν ὦν ἄποινά μοι τάδε

7 ἐλάμφθησαν S || ἦγαγον B, Holder, van H. || ἐς: ἐπὶ Marc. 8 αὐτέων z || δεδεμένον secl. van H. 120. 1 τῶν τεφ malit van H. 2 χερσονησιτέων C: χερσονησιωτέων z: (χερσονητέων R?) || ταρίχου R || τέρας τε B 3 ἥσπαιρον (SV) Marc. z: ἥσπερον R 4 οἱ ἰχθύες B || νεάλωτοι Bz, Holder, van H. || ἐθώμαζον B, Stein<sup>1</sup> 6 φοβέετο τὸ R: τὸ om. S 7 ἐλεούντι Bz 8 πρωτεσίλειος AB 9 σινέεσθαι B || μοι de Pauw, Stein, van H.: οἱ

roadstead even in 405 B.C. But the coinage appears to prove the contrary; cp. Head, Hist. Num. p. 222; and perhaps the plural form of the word might support the correction. Xen. Lc., Diodor. 18. 105, Strabo 287, Plutarch. Lys. 9.

7. ἐλάμφθησαν, 'were captured'; cp. c. 114. 2 supra. (The aorist of the simple verb has a fuller sense than the imperfect of the verb in composition just above.)

συνδήσαντες, 'after binding, or chaining them together,' one to another. οἱ Ἕλληνες perhaps covers οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ οἱ σύμμαχοι whose presence has not been expressly recognized.

120. 1. λέγεται ὑπὸ Χερσονησιτέων: the express notice of the source is perhaps a disclaimer of responsibility for the story of the τέρας (ter).

2. ταρίχους (7): cp. 4. 53 etc. The neuter form of this word (cp. L. & S.) predominates in Attic: Hdt. uses it only as masculine.

3. ἐπάλλοντό τε καὶ ἥσπαιρον: for πάλ्लεσθαι cp. 7. 140 supra; ἀσπαιρεῖν, cp. 8. 5 supra (an Ionic word).

4. ὅκως, 'as'—comparative. Contr. the uses of ὅκως above, c. 116 ὅκως ἀπικοῦ, c. 117 ὅκως ἀπάγοντες (ἐδέοντο).

νεοάλωτοι appears to be an hapaxlegomenon. Everything turns on this. That kippers should dance when laid on the fire is not in itself miraculous.

περιχυθέντες: probably guards or soldiers lying round the fire; cp. 3. 12. 7. σοί, 'for thy benefit'; dat. eth.

ὁ ἐν Ἐλαιούντι: it was indeed wonderful that Protesilaos in Elaiūs should reveal a sign in Sestos. He here appears as not a god himself, but a hero, dead and kippered, but with power, by help of the gods, to avenge his wrongs! (δύναμιν πρὸς θεῶν ἔχει, but cp. τῷ θεῷ just below). τίνεσθαι, a τίσις clearly in order. The speech of Artayktes so far might read as a fresh evidence of his δεινότης and ἀτασθαλίη—even though the verb ταρχεύειν is used by Hdt. himself (2. 86 ff.), apparently without the least comic reference, for mummification. It will hardly follow from this passage that the τάφος at Elaiūs actually contained a mummy: Artayktes speaks metaphorically.

9. ἄποινα: cp. 6. 79. ἐπιθεῖναι: Artayktes acts as judge and jury in his own case (cp. δίκην ταύτην ἐπέθηκε 1. 120, ταύτην τὴν ζημίην ἐπέθηκεν 1. 145). He offers a fine, 100 talents, instead of the objects of value robbed from the temple (what of them? had they been ἐθέλω ἐπιθεῖναι, ἀντὶ μὲν [χρημάτων] τῶν ἔλαβον ἐκ τοῦ ἱροῦ 10

ἐκατὸν τάλαντα καταθεῖναι τῷ θεῷ, ἀντὶ δ' ἐμεωντοῦ καὶ τοῦ παιδὸς ἀποδώσω τάλαντα διηκόσια Ἀθηναίοισι περιγενόμενος."
ταῦτα ὑπισχόμενος τὸν στρατηγὸν Ξάνθιππον οὐκ ἔπειθε· οἱ γὰρ Ἐλαιούσιοι τῷ Πρωτεσίλῳ τιμωρόντες ἐδέοντό μιν καταχρησθῆναι, καὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ στρατηγοῦ ταύτη νόος ἔφερε. 15 ἀπαγαγόντες δὲ αὐτὸν ἐς τὴν ἀκτὴν ἐς τὴν Ξέρξης ἔξευξε τὸν πόρον, οἱ δὲ λέγουσι ἐπὶ τὸν κολωνὸν τὸν ὑπὲρ Μαδύτου πόλιος, <πρὸς> σανίδας προσπασσαλεύσαντες ἀνεκρέμασαν·
τὸν δὲ παῖδα ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖσι τοῦ Ἀρταύκτεω κατέλευσαν.
ταῦτα δὲ ποιήσαντες ἀπέπλεον ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα, τά τε ἄλλα 121
χρήματα ἄγοντες καὶ δὴ καὶ τὰ ὄπλα τῶν γεφυρέων ὥς ἀναθήσαντες ἐς τὰ ἱρά. [καὶ κατὰ τὸ ἔτος τοῦτο οὐδὲν ἐπὶ πλέον τούτων ἐγένετο.]

10 ἐπιχθῆναι αC: ἐπαχθῆναι Marc. (οἱ . . καταθεῖναι? van H.) ||
μὲν γὰρ Marc. || χρημάτων secl. Stein<sup>3</sup>: τῶν ἔλαβον χρημάτων? Stein<sup>(2)</sup>
11 ἀντὶ δ' om. R 12 ἀποδώσω τάλαντα abesse malit van H. ||
Ἀθηναίοισι om. S 13 ὑπισχόμενος Marc. z: ὑπισχνόμενος S 14
ἐλαιούσιοι B: Ελεούντιοι z || Πρωτεσίλαφ z 15 ὁ νόος z, van H.
18 πόλεος z || πρὸς Dobree, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H. || σανίδα z, Dobree, van H.: σανίδι Reiske 19 τοῦ: αὐτοῦ an τοῖσι? Kallenberg
121. 3, 4 glossema notavi || ἐπὶ Werfer, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἔτι
|| πλέον om. C || τούτων z recovered and restored?), and 200 talents to be paid (ἀποδώσω) to the Athenians as ransom for son and self.

13. τὸν στρατηγὸν Ξάνθιππον: the offer must have been conveyed to Xanthippos by the guard. Artayktes apparently could speak Greek. The men of Elaiús, τῷ Π. τιμωρόντες, cp. 8. 144. 11, demanded his execution (καταχρησθῆναι pass., cp. καταχρήσασθαι mid. 1. 82 etc.), and the general himself inclined to the same view (νόος ἔφερε, cp. 8. 100 ἔφερε οἱ ἡ γνώμη).

17. οἱ δὲ λέγουσι: no variant is recognized in 7. 33 supra. The absence of a cross reference is significant. It is remarkable that the exact scene of the crucifixion was in dispute; but that doubt did not extend to the crucifixion itself. On the ἀκτὴ cp. l.c. Artayktes was crucified, 7. 33 adds ζῶντα, which is plainly the sense of this passage. The fate of his son (cp. c. 4 supra) is comparatively merciful; but these executions do not exhibit the εὐσθία πραότης of the Demos. The victims were perhaps handed over to the Ἐλαιούσιοι, or the Χερσωνησίται, though Hdt. writes as though the Athenians present were the executioners.

121. 1. ἐς τὴν Ἑλλάδα: the term here seems used with a very definite and concrete geographical reference; cp. c. 101 supra.

2. χρήματα: the spoils, chiefly from Mykale—where they had found θησαυροὺς τινος χρημάτων c. 106 supra.

καὶ δὴ καί: cp. 8. 132. 10 supra.

τὰ ὄπλα τῶν γεφυρέων: presumably the great cables described in 7. 36 supra. They must have been fetched from Kardias, where they had been deposited by Oibazos c. 115 supra. Their fresh destination is not quite clear; the temples of Athens were in ruins, but the city was being rebuilt, Thuc. 1. 89. 3.

3. κατὰ τὸ ἔτος τοῦτο: the year here indicated could only be either the Attic civil year, or the campaigning year, from spring to spring, such as Thucydides employs after its introduction by Hdt. in the history of this very war; cp. 7.

- 122 Τούτου δὲ τοῦ Ἀρταΰκτεω τοῦ ἀνακρεμασθέντος προπάτωρ Ἀρτεμβάρης ἐστὶ ὁ Πέρσῃσι ἐξηγησάμενος λόγον τὸν ἐκείνοι ὑπολαβόντες Κύρῳ προσήνεικαν, λέγοντα τάδε: "ἐπεὶ Ζεὺς Πέρσῃσι ἡγεμονίην διδοί, ἀνδρῶν δὲ σοὶ Κύρε, κατελὼν

122. 2 ἐστὶν ἀρτεβάρης S || τὸν λόγον R 3 λέγον R 4
 <ἐθνέων μὲν> Πέρσῃσι van H. || σὺ S cod. Pal. 152 || κατελὼν Ἀστυάγην
 del. Gomperz

37, 8. 131 (cp. also the history of the Triennium, Bk. 6). This consideration makes it plain that Hdt. has here in view the campaigning year 479-78 B.C. But there are nevertheless two questions which remain: (a) the date of the return of the Fleet from the Hellespont to Athens; (b) the date of the next expedition, under Pausanias, to Kypros, Thuc. 1. 94. Is there not a reference thereto in this passage?

(a) According to Rawlinson ἐπιχειμάσαντες in Thuc. 1. 89. 2 means not that they passed the winter before Sestos (διαχειμάζον), but that they just reached winter before taking it; cp. ἐπιπολιοῦσθαι, ἐπιπερκάζειν (inceptives), and ἐπι- as dimin. in composition with adj. (ἐπιπικρος, etc.). It is possible that the Athenian fleet reached home before our New Year (though that cannot be Hdt.'s new ἔτος); and the remark here would be in that case correct, though rather otiose.

(b) The expedition under Pausanias certainly did not start before the spring of 478 B.C., i.e. after Hdt.'s 'New Year.' The interpretation of ἐπιχειμάσαντες in Thuc. l.c. as involving the whole winter dated the return of the Athenians to the spring, and led to the start of Pausanias being pushed on into the summer, possibly even over the Athenian New Year. The revision of the meaning of ἐπιχειμάσαντες allows an earlier and normal date for the expedition of 478 B.C., and leaves of course this chronological note of Hdt.'s, if it be indeed his, correct, but again otiose.

I doubt the authenticity of this sentence. It has all the air of being inserted by some one with the history of the Pentekontaëteris before him. It could not, indeed, prove the work of Hdt. to be unfinished, or incomplete; but it lends perhaps some colour to that misconception. Remove it and the story of the war as told by Hdt. attains a finer climax, apart from the colophon, or concluding anecdote, in c. 122. The last item in the annals of the war, that great Biennium (or Τριετηρίς), is the dedication of the cables which had bound Europe to Asia, and paved the way for the barbarous invader of Hellas. The sentence has all the air of a gloss, and it not merely spoils the splendid climax ἐς τὰ ἱρά, but separates unduly the closing anecdote from the peg upon which it depends, the name and fate of Artayktes.

122. 2. Ἀρτεμβάρης must have been father of Cherasmis; and he might just perhaps have been the Artembares whose son (Cherasmis?) Kyros had bullied 1. 114, somewhere about 570 B.C., though the exigencies of that anecdote require Artembares to have been a 'Mede.' Artayktes, the governor of Sestos, is not a young man in 479 B.C. His father might have been a boy with Kyros nearly a century before (two generations will sometimes exceed a century). The whole anecdote here is, however, full of inconsequence. The scene is placed just after the overthrow of Astyages (κατελὼν Ἀστυάγην); but the Kyros of this anecdote is plainly le bon père, and the ἔπος εἰς εἰρημὸν ascribed to him ought plainly to be thought of as his legacy and testament to the 'Persians.'

ἐστὶ ὁ . . . ἐξηγησάμενος, 'is (was) the real author of a proposal . . .'; cp. 5. 31 σὺ ἐς οἶκον τὸν βασιλεὺς ἐξηγητὴς γίνεαι πρηγμάτων ἀγαθῶν. The construction ἐστὶ (ὁ) ἐξ. of course gives no colour to the construction of the substantive verb with aorist participle. ὑπολαβόντες here 'took up and . . . as we might say'; cp. 3. 146, and contr. 7. 101.

3. Κύρῳ προσήνεικαν. Blakesley too ingeniously interprets 'attributed to Cyrus,' and his remarks upon the barbarism of Artembares are directed to the wrong address. The words obviously mean 'reported to Kyros.'

Ζεὺς: cp. 7. 40 supra.

4. ἡγεμονίην: sc. ἐθνέων, cp. 1. 95.

κατελὼν Ἀστυάγην (N.B. not κατε-

Ἀστυάγην, φέρε, γῆν γὰρ ἐκτίμεθα ὀλίγην καὶ ταύτην 5 τρηχέαν, μεταναστάντες ἐκ ταύτης ἄλλην σχῶμεν ἀμείνω.
 εἰσὶ δὲ πολλοὶ μὲν ἀστυγείτονες πολλοὶ δὲ καὶ ἐκαστέρω,
 τῶν μίαν σχόντες πλείοσι ἐσόμεθα θωμαστότεροι. οἶκος δὲ ἄνδρας ἄρχοντας τοιαῦτα ποιέειν· κότε γὰρ δὴ καὶ παρέξει κάλλιον ἢ ὅτε γε ἀνθρώπων τε πολλῶν ἄρχομεν πάσης τε 10
 τῆς Ἀσίας;” Κύρος δὲ ταῦτα ἀκούσας, καὶ οὐ θωμάσας τὸν λόγον, ἐκέλευε ποιέειν ταῦτα, οὕτω δὲ αὐτοῖσι παραίνεε κελεύων παρασκευάζεσθαι ὥς οὐκέτι ἄρξοντας ἀλλ’ ἄρξομένους·
 φιλέειν γὰρ ἐκ τῶν μαλακῶν χώρων μαλακοὺς γίνεσθαι

5 Ἀστυάγεα = || γὰρ om. S 6 τρηχέαν B: τρηχέην ceteri || σχῶμεν
 B, Krueger, Stein<sup>2</sup>, Holder, van H.: ἔχωμεν 7 καὶ om. B || ἐκαστέρω
 αP: ἐκατέρω CSV 8 μίην = || ἔχοντες B, Holder: σχῶντες C || πλείοσι
 αC Marc. || θωμαστότεροι SV, Stein<sup>1</sup>: θωμαυστότεροι R || οἶκος BP: εἶκος
 9 ἄνδρας ἔχοντας R(B?) || κότερα B 10 ὅτε: οὔτε B 11 θωμάσας
 R(V): Stein<sup>1</sup> 12 παραίνεε S: παρήνεε 13 κελεύων del. Cobet, van H. || ἀρξαμένους C 14 μαλακοὺς ἄνδρας γίνεσθαι B, Holder, van H.: μαλακοὺς γίνεσθαι α etc., Stein<sup>12</sup>

λόγῳ). As Astyages had been the representative of the Median ἀρχή the Persians and Artembares regard themselves now as masters of all Asia; cp. 7. 8 supra. That position was not really attained until Lydia and Babylon at any rate had been conquered too. In Bk. 1 the conquest of Lydia, the overthrow of Kroisos, make Kyros master of all Asia (cp. 1. 130, also 1. 71). This anecdote is from a different (and less philo-Lyidian) source.

5. φέρε: an adverbial imperative, 'come!' L. & S. sub v. ix. 2.

γῆν . . ὀλίγην καὶ ταύτην τρηχέαν: cp. χώρην ἔχοντες τρηχέαν 1. 71. Hdt. himself nowhere (not even in 3. 97) describes Persis proper in any detail. As a general description of the land this phrase here is sufficiently accurate, and the later Greek writers endorse it; cp. Plato, Laws 695, Arrian, Anab. 5. 4. 5. For modern descriptions cp. Curzon, Persia 2 vv. (1892); Sykes, Ten Thousand Miles in Persia (1902); Rawlinson, Ancient Monarchies iv. (1867); Duncker, Hist. of Antiq. Bk. vii. c. i. (E.T. vol. v. pp. 3 ff., 1881); Perrot and Chipiez, Art in Persia, E.T. (1892) pp. 2-8; Reclus, Universal Geogr. E.T. vol. ix. c. iv.; Ency. Brit. xviii. 561, etc. etc. Cp. note 1. 18 infra.

6. μεταναστάντες . . σχῶμεν, 'let us emigrate . . and seize . . .' So σχόντες just below, cp. 7. 164. 5, and Index for the strong ἔχειν.

7. ἀστυγείτονες, adjectivally, and without stress on the first word in composition; cp. 6. 99.

8. πλείοσι, pluribus hominibus (Baehr); in mehr Stücken (Stein). This idea for a wholesale and voluntary migration expresses, no doubt, (a) a current notion, cp. 8. 140, 62, etc., (b) a genuine vera causa at the back of many movements of populations and peoples, cp. 7. 20, etc. But the position here is slightly different. The Persians are supposed already to have dominion over all Asia; they can take tribute and gifts from all their subjects without evacuating their own land. Cp. note 1. 18 infra.

11. Κύρος δὲ . . ἐκέλευε ποιέειν ταῦτα: Kyros is, of course, conceived as speaking ironically: 'do as you propose and become subjects instead of rulers.' αὐτοῖσι παραίνεε κελεύων is a resumptive parenthesis. οὕτω δὲ as part of his speech = ταῦτα δὲ ποιήσαντας.

13. οὐκέτι ἄρξοντας ἀλλ’ ἄρξομένους: the same antithesis (in a more restricted sense) 7. 162 supra.

14. φιλέειν γὰρ . . τὰ πολέμια. The relation between 'Physics and Politics' occupied a large space in the minds of Greek thinkers. Hdt.'s own work is

15 <ἄνδρας>· οὐ γάρ τι τῆς αὐτῆς γῆς εἶναι καρπὸν τε θωμαστὸν φύνει καὶ ἄνδρας ἀγαθοὺς τὰ πολέμα. ὥστε συγγρόντες Πέρσαι οἴχοντο ἀποστάντες, ἐσσωθέντες τῇ γνώμῃ

15 <ἄνδρας> Stein<sup>3</sup> || τι: τοι V Marc. z, Holder 16 θωμαστὸν Be 17 οἱ πέρσαι S

saturated with the assumption of a connexion between race and place, between climate and institutions. His interest in the varieties of humankind makes him the father of Anthropology, as his sense of the unity and continuity of human adventure and experience makes him the 'father of history.' Hence his descriptions of the land and river of Egypt as a prelude to his account of the people, their manners and institutions; and so too with Skythia and the Skythians, Libya and the Libyans, the ends of the earth, and the more familiar coasts of the Aigaian. Hdt. has in a remarkable degree the sense of the relativity of human institutions; it is a part of the sophistical illumination of the age, just begun. It had done something to correct the exaggerated notion of the omnipotence of the Nomothetes. It attains formal expression in the work of his great contemporary Hippokrates of Kos, de aëre aquis et locis (Hippocr. opera, vol. i. ed. Krehlewein, 1895), and the philosophy of the reaction, with its practical concern for the ideal city-state, does not fail to realise that for the πόλις κατ' εὐχὴν a site, a climate, a race κατ' εὐχὴν must also be posited. Thucydides (more clearly than Hdt.) mediates the action of physics on politics through the economic conditions (as in his Archaiologia): this profounder analysis was not lost in the sequel; Aristotle, for example, not only generalizes (or preserves the generalization) on the relation between τροφή and βίος (Politics 1. 8 = 1256 a), but traces in a fashion the merits of the Greek nation to its happy position between the barbarous extremes of cold and heat, of Europe and Asia (Pol. 4 (7). 7 = 1327 b). It stands to reason that the lesser differences between one Greek folk and another might be in part traceable to differences in the physico-geographical environment; and as a matter of fact the popular philosophy of Greece early ascribed the superiority of the Attic race to the advantages of its climate, traced the genesis of political parties to features in the Attic landscape—

the shore, the plain, the mountain—or ascribed the development of the democracy (somewhat superficially) to the growing importance of the sea, and sea-power, in the life of the city. Livy (38. 17) puts a speech into the mouth of Cn. Manlius (A.U.C. 565) on the Gallograeci, which might be taken as a commentary on this text; but in general the Roman conqueror believed in race (fortes creantur fortibus), and under the cosmopolitan rule of Rome, whether imperial or pontifical, much of the sense of the relativity of human institutions passed out of consciousness, to be rediscovered and reintroduced with the revival of Greek letters and the return to nature. The idea is now a commonplace of every history of civilisation, or philosophy of history; but an initial place in the bibliography of the subject must always be reserved for Montesquieu's Esprit des Lois, 1748 (Livres xiv.-xviii.), as also for Buckle's Hist. of Civilization in England (1857), c. ii. The regnum hominis, much as it has advanced in our own day, has not yet succeeded in completely emancipating Man from the physico-geographical conditions of polity; climate, soil, structure, position, and even physical aspect, are permanent though modifiable factors in the life and character of the race.

17. συγγρόντες . . ἀποστάντες, ἐσσωθέντες: the piling of these participles is a little clumsy. With the first cp. συγγροῦς abs. 7. 13 supra (melius edocui, Stein); or συγγνωσκῶν (οἱ) λέγειν ἀληθεῖα 4. 43 (Baehr). The ἀπόστασις here is merely a retirement from the Presence. The defeat (ἥσσαν) is purely dialectical, and precedes or coincides with the σύγγροια.

18. ἀρχεν τε ἐλόντο λυπρὴν οἰκόντες. As history, this statement is hardly correct; the 'Persian folk' may have remained in Persis proper, but the nobles certainly came down into the richer and civilized portions of the empire to a considerable extent; and the dynasty resided as a rule less in Pasargadai (Persia proper) than in Susa (Elam)

πρὸς Κύρου, ἄρχειν τε εἴλοντο λυπρὴν οἰκέοντες μᾶλλον ἢ πεδιάδα σπείροντες ἄλλοισι δουλεύειν.

ΗΡΟΔΟΤΟΥ ΙΣΤΟΡΙΩΝ Θ' | ΧΧΗΗΠΙ ΑΒ: ἡροδότου ἱστοριῶν ἐνάτη C: ἡροδότου ἱστοριῶν Θ' R: τέλος ἡροδότου ἱστοριῶν θ.' Marc.:
ἡροδότου βίβλος κλεινοῦ πέρασ λάβεν ὡδί S

or Ekbatana (Media), or Babylon. As geography, the description of Persia proper is unduly severe; though Fars might compare ill with Babylonia, or even Susiana (cp. E. Meyer, G. d. Alterth. iii. (1901) p. 18). As argument, the conclusion looks, at first sight, oddly infelicitous for the last word of a record, which has exhibited in unsparing colours the attempt of the Persians to extend their empire over Hellas, an attempt ending in failure and flight, the prelude to further loss and forfeiture. But something else is in Hdt.'s mind. Mutato nomine fabula narratur. He is too delicate to dictate to the Greeks, or it may be to the Athenians; but the lesson is there for those who have ears to hear. It is at once the rationale of the Greek success, and a call to future expansion. The men λυπρὴν οἰκέοντες, the nurslings of poverty (7. 102) and hard fare (8. 82)—theirs is the victory, and theirs the empire, if they will: what the Persians had done in the days of Kyros, why should not the Greeks do in the days of Kimon, or of Perikles?

Such a moral belongs to a period long before the Peloponnesian war, and fits in well with the many other evidences that the story of the Great Invasion of 480-79 B.C. was composed early in the period of Hdt.'s literary labours. This anecdote, which conveys, in dramatic form, the rationale and the moral of the war, no doubt in the first instance was designed as the conclusion of Bks. 7, 8, 9, though it now serves as the hardly less appropriate colophon to the whole work. It is an anecdote which is hardly consistent with the representation of Kyros in Bk. 1, and especially of his end: it seems to belong to one of those other cycles of stories on the later years of Kyros which Hdt. rejected when he came to deal with the passing of Kyros as itself an integral portion of his work (cp. 1. 214 ad f.).

It might even have been this finale to his work, as originally conceived and drafted, which led Hdt. back to the investigations, τὸν τε Κύρον ὅστις ἐὼν τὴν Κροίσου ἀρχὴν κατεῖλε, καὶ τοὺς Πέρσας ὅπως τρόπῳ ἡγήσαντο τῆς Ἀσίης, which now bulk so large in Bk. 1. And thus, indeed, to use Rawlinson's simile, 'the tail of the snake is curved round into his mouth' in the completed work of Hdt., which forms a whole now, with a clear Beginning, Middle, and End. Historically and artistically the work is complete and concluded, though not, indeed, equally or evenly finished throughout: a phenomenon which the prior genesis of the latest portion, and the subsequent addition of the earlier, introductory, and discursive parts, go some way to explain. Blakesley, who, while recognizing the earlier composition of the last three Books, nevertheless holds the work to be incomplete, questions the authenticity of this chapter.

END OF VOL. I PART II

11

11

11

11

11

Stanford University Libraries

3 6105 004 726 795

STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES
CECIL H. GREEN LIBRARY
STANFORD, CALIFORNIA 94305-6004
(415) 723-1493

All books may be recalled after 7 days

DATE DUE

280 MAR 23 1994

JUN 3 07 2005

DEC 1 2005

Stanford University Library
Stanford, California

To avoid fines, please return books by the date due.

